YOUR HOLIDAY PURCHASES

should claim your attention now, while stocks are unbroken. No city in the State affords better opportunities for gift buyers than does Los Angeles, with its magnificent retail shopping district, in which are to be found every novelty of the season.

The Los Angeles firms here mentioned solicit your holiday trade, knowing that you will be so well pleased with your dealings with them, that you will become a regular patron. Stocks are the largest and best, prices the very lowest, and service unequalled.

Country readers of The Grizzly Bear, especially, who find it necessary to shop by mail, will find it to their advantage to scan this list and send to these Los Angeles firms for their needs. Don't patronize Eastern mail-order houses; keep your money at home and help develop California. You make your living in California, so why not spend your money here? Los Angeles leads all other California cities in buyers' opportunities, and these firms are the leaders in that city.

NOVEMBER, 1913

No. 1; Whole No. 79

VOLUME BEGINS WITH THIS (NOVEMBER) NUMBER, ENDS WITH APRIL NUMBER.

HE WRITER HAS READ SEVERAL accounts of the meteoric and murderous career of the notorious gun fighter and desperado, Sam Brown, garbled and sensational, from the pen of those who knew him by reputation, rather than from acquaintance.

Sam's personal appearance was anything but that of a desperado, when he came over and seated himself on a rock-pile on my claim in the Agua Fria in March, 1850, and genially chatted with me about the diggings, and the laborious and uncertain results in mining.

He told me he had "Just come through from Texas, and allowed he'd rather play keards than run a rocker." He impressed me,—with his long red hair that hung in a half curl in the back of his neck, and his bushy brick colored beard that covered his face,—with the idea that he had swallowed a cinnamon-cub and left the hind end sticking out. In fact, that he was a big, good-natured lout, who, if he took to "keards" would be easy picking for the professional.

I suggested that if a man gambled at all, he ought to make a business of it, and his little brown eyes sparkled and he grinned with delight as he told how he "Run a few chips up to ninety dollars last night," and now he "Reckoned he'd go and buy him a biled shirt and plug hat." For a month or two I met Sam occasionally. He was rather slouchily togged, but wore his usually good-natured smile and happy-go-lucky demeanor, and was accepted as a "sport"—a sort of half-cast among the gamblers who sat behind the roulette and banking games in the saloons.

We were packing our traps one day, to move down to the river, when we were startled with the report of a killing over in the dance-hall by Sam Brown. The victim was a tall, fine-appearing man, with handsome, clear-cut features. He also was a Texan, but was known to be a dangerous man by his fellow gamblers. Perhaps there was a lurking feeling of contempt on the part of Hall for Sam, judging him from his personal appearance, and Sam, realizing this and knowing the dangerous character of his opponent, determined to have the drop on him.

They had met in the dance hall, but neither cared to participate, so they seated themselves at a table in the back part of the room and called for a deck of cards. They were playing when the dance broke up, the Mexican proprietor leaving them at their game. Later, he was aroused by noisy and angry words. Peeking through the crack of the door, he saw the two men standing on opposite sides of the table, with six-shooters in their hands. Presently they sat down to continue the game.

Hall laid his pistol on the table, and Sam laid his on his lap. Thus they continued the game, and the Mexican retired to his bed. A half-hour later he was awakened by the report of a shot, and jumping up, saw Hall lying on the floor and Sam walking leisurely toward the door. The bullet from Sam's pistol had struck Hall over the eye, tearing loose a portion of his skull and exposing the brain. He was taken to Mariposa and provided for by his gambling friends,—given a room over the gambling hall,—and there seemed a possibility of his recovery.

Soon he was able to appear on the street. One evening he went into the lower hall among the tables and the crowd of miners and players, stepped up to one of the monte banks and picked up a few dollars, with the smiling approval of the banker, walked away to another table and began betting. Suddenly, uttering a wild shriek, he fell to the floor in spasms and died in the greatest agony. Brown justified himself for shooting Hall on the ground that Hall already had a notch on his pistol, and quickness was all that saved his life. On the other hand, Hall's friends claimed it was cold-blooded murder and that Sam had brought with him from Texas the record of a killing he had done in that state. Honors seemed to be easy—it was "dog eat dog"—and the public did not care and Sam left for other diggings.

THE PASSING OF SAM BROWN

He was next heard from in Calaveritas, where he was dealing monte for a lot of Mexican miners, and probably regularly robbing them. At least there was bad blood engendered, and threats made. So, when they gathered around Sam's table, one evening, with the intention of "doing him up," Sam did not wait for them to assassinate him, but being in an ugly mood and a powerful fellow, he jerked out his ever-ready knife and commenced slashing away. When the row was over, there were two dead Mexicans and several badly wounded. Sam was sent to San Quentin for eighteen months for this little escapade.

I did not see nor hear of Sam Brown again until the fall of 1859. I was stopping temporarily at Clarksville, in El Dorado County, enroute for Carson Valley with a band of horses. Tying my horse to the hitching-post in front of the single saloon in that roadside burg, I intended to get a drink. Imagine my surprise to see Sam Brown sitting there, engaged in a game of cards with a quarrelsome old Mexican war veteran, familiarly known as Hippy Bates. Bates was just drunk enough to talk mean, and to manifest a bullying bravado spirit. Sam was duly sober.

Hippy had sized Sam up wrong; he had taken him for a big red-headed duffer, and being nettled by his losses, did not hesitate to say aggravating and mean things to him. Sam grinned and quietly answered that "He wasn't pretty, neither was he a born monkey." "Well, I aint no monkey, either, nor a bastard," retorted Hippy. "Well, well," said Sam, his face suddenly assuming a more colorless hue, "don't let's get soar, but play cards." A brief silence followed as the play continued, and as usual, Hippy lost.

It was the last straw. Viciously slamming his fist on the table, Hippy shouted: "You're a great big red-headed coward and I—" but the rest of the sentence was unspoken. Instantly Sam sprang to his feet, reached across the table and, seizing Hippy by the top of his head with his left hand, drew his scabbard-covered bowie-knife with his right, and struck Hippy a tremendous slap on the side of his face, then on the other—whack, whack, back and forth, roaring like an infuriated bull. "Say it again, say it again, you old ———, and I'll cut your throat. Say it, say it," roared Sam, but Hippy made no sound. Sam shoved him violently to the floor, turned, and left the saloon. Satisfied that Sam had gone, Hippy raised his scared and pitiable face to the bystanders and whined, "I'm alive, boys. But I wonder who that fellow is!" I told him, and congratulated him on his escape.

The next time I met Sam was in Genoa, Nevada. It was then the county seat of Carson County, Utah, and there were gathered many celebrities and legal lights in attendance upon Judge Cradlebaugh's court—Judge Bryant, Dave Terry, Lieutenant-Governor Gardner and others of lesser note who had business or were following the will o' the wisp of fortune in the Comstock mines. Sam had joined the rush after a sojourn in Placerville, remaining in Genoa only long enough to get acquainted and to renew old friendships. There was not enough doing in the gambling line at the then county seat. The professionals, with their banking games, had gathered in Carson City or Virginia—these were the Meccas for the loose and the wide-open saloons. Speculation ran wild, fortunes were made and lost in the rise and fall of stocks, thousands went in over the green cloth or at poker, and the spirit of gambling was rampant and seemingly pervaded all classes.

Sam had evidently shared in the general prosperity, for he had provided himself with a fine white saddle-horse and often rode up from Virginia City to Carson, and occasionally extended his trips up into Carson Valley. His reputation as a gun-fighter and desperado followed him. He was feared, and he knew that guns were carried especially for him, but so long as he kept sober he had nothing to fear. He went fully armed, with a six-shooter and bowie-knife at his belt, a sheathed knife in his boot eap, and one in the back of his neck. In almost any position, he could reach a knife, at least. In one of his trips to Carson Valley he stopped at Van Sickle's hotel, and a little trouble over a game of poker, not sufficient, perhaps, to warrant a killing, had occurred between himself and Van Sickle, and endangered bad blood. He had it in for Van, and, reciprocally, Van remembered the tiff.

While on a visit to Carson City he stepped into a brilliantly lighted billiard hall where two men were playing for a stake and the game was very close. Sam was an interested spectator, and just drunk enough to indulge in remarks about the play. Finally one of the players turned to him and remonstrated. "Do you want to fight?" said Sam. "Yes, damn yon, and I can whip you, too," responded the nettled player. "Well, come outside," said Sam, and he turned and walked out of the door, that was just behind him. The player threw down his cue and followed. He was met with a pistol bullet that struck him in the groin, and in the morning he was dead. Sam mounted his horse and rode away to Virginia City and was not arrested. There he spent the last moments of his life, and committed his last murder.

Killing events and shooting serapes were quite common in those days. When they occurred between gamblers or notorious gun-fighters, there was little heed paid to them, save to furnish a little idle gossip or the headlines for the daily papers. "Another Man For Breakfast," "Died With His Boots On," or "Another Notch On a Bad Man's Pistol," occasioned very little comment, violent deaths were of such common occurrence. Sam's last victim was a gambler by the same name—Brown. He was a faro dealer—a quiet, gentlemanly fellow, addicted to periodical sprees, but usually unobtrusive and retiring, except when in his cups.

HANKSGIVING DAY, 1863, WAS appropriately observed on Thursday, November 26th. Turkeys were plentiful and cheap, and mainly sold from ranchers' wagons on the streets.

On Thanksgiving Day a fond mother, desiring to send her little son, about seven years of age, to Sacramento to visit his grandparents, came to the train at Folsom and placed him in charge of the conductor. While giving explicit instructions concerning the care of her son, the little fellow, unobserved, boarded the train and sat looking out of an open window at his mother, when she glanced up and, in surprised tones, said: "Why, Willie, you have forgotten to kiss your mother good-bye!" Willie, considering the conductor the whole thing, nonchalantly replied: "Let the conductor do it."

It was known that a great battle was being fought at Chattanooga, Tennessee, between the armies of General Grant and General Bragg, also that the Army of the Potomac was advancing against General Lee in Virginia; therefore, those devoutly inclined, in a state of apprehension and suspense, attended church services with a more serious feeling than they ever had before.

Late in the day came the news, by telegraph, of another victory for General Grant, which greatly elated the Union side. The only other important event in the East connected with the Civil War, during the month, was the dedication of the Gettysburg cemetery, where President Lincoln, on November 19th, delivered his most famous address, closing with the words: "And that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

On November 10th the ship "Aquila" arrived in San Francisco Bay, 163 days from New York, with the monitor "Comanche" loaded in sections as its cargo. It was to be put together by Donahue & Ryan and become an aid to the fortifications in defending San Francisco from an attack by an enemy from the sea. On November 15th a severe storm with a terrific gale hit the Coast and the "Aquila" listed, leaked, and sank at its wharf in thirty-two feet of water. The Government engineers and officials spent the balance of the month with divers, pumps and cofferdam, devising methods for raising the submerged ship.

Another heavy wind storm broke loose on November 21st and played havoc with the high flumes carrying water for mining purposes in the mining counties from Tuolumne to Tehama. The losses from this cause, to the ditch companies, were immense.

"Young America" Captures Dedication.

The locomotive "Governor Stanford" of the Central Pacific railroad, the first set up at Sacramento, was announced ready to make its initial trip on November 9th. The track had been laid from Front and K streets in Sacramento to opposite agricultural park, a distance of about two miles. The locomotive stood upon a temporary piece of track a short distance from the main line at front and K streets and the directors issued invitations to about twenty-five prominent citizens to ride on the engine to the "front" at Twenty-first and B streets and there christen it.

The locomotive moved at 2:30 p.m., but the directors had not figured on "Young America" being present, but nearly every schoolboy, as well as others of schoolboy age, was on hand. The invited guests were lined along each side of the main track ready to get on the tender of the locomotive when it reached them, but the boys, like a swarm of bees, covered every available place, so there was not an inch of room for an invited guest to place the sole of his foot on. After a parley, Governor Stanford, who was present in person as president of the road, capitulated to superior numbers and the engineer started to give the lads the first ride.

After moving a few blocks, the locomotive was returned, when a valve went out of order and it was not until 8 p.m. that the difficulty was removed. The basket of champagne, for christening purposes at the "front," was taken away with the invited guests and "Young America" held possession of the tender. The lads were given a ride between 8 p.m. and midnight, as with the tooting of the whistle, the ringing of the bell and the enthusiastic yelling of the boys the engine was kept moving up and down the main line. The "Union Boy" fired its initial salute in a rouser of thirty-five guns in honor of the event.

On November 10th, the small boys being absent, the christening party, consisting of Governor Stanford, General George A. Wright, Father Gallagher, several State officials, City Trustees and prominent business men to the number of thirty, got upon the tender and rode out to the front. There the basket of champagne was opened, and for an hour the corks popped and toasts were drunk to everything connected with the enterprise, from the President of the United States down to the engine bell.

Santa Clara Has a Prize Apple.

On November 11th track laying passed beyond the city limits of Sacramento at Thirty-first and B streets, crossed the American River bridge November 20th, and was well on its way eastward by the end of the month. The railroad building south from San Francisco reached a point within ten miles of San Jose this month.

A telegraph cable was laid across San Francisco Bay from Fort Point to Lime Point, to connect with the line being built to Petaluma and other Sonoma County towns. In sounding the bay for laying the cable, the deepest place was found to be 69 fathoms, or 552 feet, deep.

A new steamer, called the "Governor Dana," was launched in San Francisco and placed on the line between Sacramento and Marysville, in command of Captain Sommers. This was the third steamboat built to bear that name.

The new steamer "Golden City," from New York around the Horn, arrived in San Francisco on November 26th, to go on the Panama route.

The California Stage Company built six sleighs at Marysville to be put on the Washoe route when snow fell on the Sierras too deep for stages to run. They were made large enough to carry fifteen passengers.

The turpentine and resin industry was of some importance, one hundred barrels of resin, made in California, being shipped by vessel from San Francisco to New York.

Santa Clara County claimed to have produced the largest apple in the world. It was grown on a tree of the Gloria Mundi variety in Mason's orchard at Soquel. It weighed two pounds and two ounces and was seventeen inches in circumference.

Owing to the great increase of rats on the Comstock Lode keeping pace with the increase of population, the cats were unable to keep up with them and a merchant of Virginia City ordered a shipment of cats by express from Sacramento. Twelve were forwarded and arrived in good shape, except one old Tom, who lost an eye in a caterwauling scrapping match en route.

Fire Demon Still Active.

On November 2nd a fire in Grass Valley destroyed J. Marks' clothing store and eight other buildings on Main street, causing a $20,000 loss.

On November 8th, Nevada City had its second great fire. It broke out near the business center of the town about noon and burned until 5 p.m., destroying over 300 buildings and causing a loss of $600,000, with only $50,000 insurance. The Court House, every hotel, every business house except a few fireproof buildings, and every church except the Baptist, were reduced to ashes. Fortunately, very few residences were burned and these, with the relief offered by Grass Valley to her sister town in distress, sheltered the houseless residents until they could build temporary abodes. Mrs. John A. Lancaster, wife of a merchant there, was given great praise for the able manner in which she took command of a squad of men and women with teams and saved a large amount of movable property that otherwise would have been burned. She brought order out of chaos and gave directions in a systematic manner that made her a popular fire queen.

Brandy City, in Sierra County, was the next mining town to go up in smoke, Tom Jones' hotel and a dozen other business buildings being burned, with a $50,000 loss.

The Pioneer flour mill at Sacramento, with several other buildings, was burned November 9th, and a $20,000 loss ensued.

Omega, a mining town in Nevada County, had, on November 11th, its two hotels and several business houses burned, with a $20,000 loss.

A big fire on November 21st destroyed the Mendocino lumber mills in San Francisco, owned by Godfrey, Sellers & Co., causing a loss in mill and lumber of over $150,000.

Sutro's quartz mill at Dayton, one of the best constructed to date, burned November 6th, with a $60,000 loss.

A wave of crime appears to have swept over the State during this month. Highway robbing of teamsters and travelers in lonely spots on the roads in the mining counties, burglarizing of country stores in the dark hours of the night and horse stealing in the valley counties, were of daily occurrence, while saloon affrays seemed to be enormously increased.

Suspend Criminals—Suspend Crime.

The stage running between Georgetown and Folsom, on its down trip November 10th, was stopped by two highwaymen near Greenwood. They were prepared with necessary tools to open the express box, but none was sent out that morning. The driver, James Orr, when covered by a gun, was ordered to keep his foot on the brake, and one of the highwaymen held the leaders by the bridles. The passengers consisted of a Dutchman, a Portuguese and a Chinaman who were, in turn, robbed of their money, about $100 being obtained. The Chinaman resisted and was beaten over the head with a pistol and severely injured. The highwaymen told the driver that, being gentlemen, they would not rob a stage driver. As usual, one was described as a tall and the other as a short man.

Evidently these same two men stopped the Fiddletown stage a short distance from Drytown on November 17th. Wells, Fargo & Co.'s treasure box was made of iron and fastened to the bed of the stage and therefore not portable. They compelled the driver to unhitch his team and move a safe distance away while they hastened the box open. They obtained $2000 for their work and had not been apprehended at last accounts.

On November 4th Hill Beachey, from Idaho, with requisition papers, had four men, named Wm. Page, Samuel Howard, C. Lowery and Jos. Romine, taken in custody in San Francisco, charged with murder. In September, '63, Lloyd Magruder, formerly editor of the Marysville "Express," and a prominent citizen of Northern California, was making a campaign in Idaho Territory for Delegate to Congress. His party met these four men at a public speaking and they proposed to accompany Magruder's party from Lewiston on the speaking tour. They killed Magruder and others of his party in a forest the next day and robbed them of $20,000 in coin and gold dust. They were charged with having killed and robbed eight men in Idaho before departing for California. About $10,000 and a certificate of deposit of $8000 worth of gold dust in the United States Mint for coinage was found upon them. Two of the men had criminal records previous to 1860, made in California. They employed the best of legal talent and had a strenuous battle in the courts on habeas corpus proceedings, made to prevent extradition. Alex. Campbell pleaded their case before the Supreme Court at Sacramento, claiming a territory could not take a citizen from a state by requisition. He was opposed by J. W. Coffroth, and they were formally ordered returned to Idaho. The contest attracted the earnest attention of the public and press and both were aroused to a high tension over the difficulties raised by the attorneys on technicalities to prevent the punishment of known criminals. One newspaper claimed that too many privileges were being conceded to known criminals, and the way to cause a suspension of these privileges was to suspend some of the criminals.

Lynch Five in Los Angeles.

Probably due to the spirit breathed in these editorials and the increase of crime, on November 21st a mass meeting of citizens in Los Angeles organized into a vigilance committee of 300 armed men, who marched to the county jail and took possession. Sheriff Sanchez and his deputy, King, expostulated with the committee, but to no purpose, and were shoved aside. Unable to obtain the keys to open the cell doors, with sledgehammers and other tools they worked two hours to get out the prisoners they were after. Jose Olnas, Eli Case, Bos Diamond, Andrew Hood and Jose Yerba, known horse thieves, highwaymen and accused murderers, were hung in the corridor of the jail. When they were known to be dead, the committee went home and again became peaceable and law-abiding citizens.

At Alvarado, on November 20th, a number of Mexican desperadoes came into town and shot up the place, wounded a couple of citizens, smashed the window-glass of the Catholic church and then departed. A posse of citizens quickly organized, pursued them and captured one of the number. He was brought back to Alvarado and while a preliminary examination was being held, a committee of citizens appeared, took him away from the authorities and hung him from the stringers of a bridge.

A number of amusing matrimonial incidents occurred during the month. At Placerville, a fine looking couple, in their teens, arrived from Amador County during the early part of the month, enroute for Carson City to get married. The parents of the young woman, on account of the immature age of the couple, had strenuously objected to the proposed marriage, and as the laws of Nevada

TO CALIFORNIA, VIA THE HORN, IN 1849

THROUGH THE COURTESY OF WILLIAM C. LATHAM of Berkeley, a life member of the Society of California Pioneers and affiliated with Berkeley Parlor, No. 210, N.S.G.W., The Grizzly Bear presents the following diary, found among the papers of his father, William B. Latham, Jr., who came around the Horn to California in the bark "Strafford," arriving in San Francisco, August 30, 1849. The elder Latham was the agent of Freeman & Company's Express, and was a great friend of John Freeman. This company, together with Adams & Company's Express, was finally merged with the Wells-Fargo Express Company.

While the diary is not complete as to the trip around the Horn, it is an important historical document as far as it goes, and William C. Latham hopes to unearth the remaining pages from among the many interesting early-day papers found in his father's effects:

Saturday, 10th. Cry of "land ho!" off leeward bow at 9 o'clock a.m. We endeavored to get to the windward of the land in order to put in at St. Vincent, but were not able. The land proved to be the island of San Antonio, one of the Cape De Verdes. We arrived at the land about sun down and soon after becalmed within about two miles of the island. It appeared to consist of a huge pile of broken rocks, destitute of vegetation, only one fertile spot appearing. Upon this spot, which was upon the shore, is a small village. The rocks rise to the height of 7400 feet above the sea. We floated here all night, and in the morning, catching a breeze, we steered S.W. for the coast of South America, intending to put in at St. Catherine.

Sunday, 11th. This day saw St. Vincent. Left the island for St. Catherine, S. A. Winds fair. Lat. 16° 13'; Long. 25° 40'.

Whaleboat launched; the captain had a row around the vessel several times, and many of us amused ourselves doing the same thing, while others were busy taking a swim, etc. Sail in view the whole day, both of us being becalmed. Lat. 10° 57' S.; Long. 36° 33' W.

Friday, 30th. This morning the sail still in view, having gained upon us a little. At 4 o'clock a light breeze sprung up, which carried us away from the sail, which was a bark. Another sail in view, a brig. About 8 o'clock p.m. another in view off the starboard bow.

New York for California. Lat. 27° 28' S.; Long. 47° 38' W.

Sunday, 8th. Sailed into port and came to anchor off the fort about 10 o'clock a.m. We found several American vessels here bound for California, among them the "George Washington," from New York in February, and the "Sabina," from Long Island. A Brazilian brig was also in port.

Monday, 9th. Went ashore and rambled off about five miles, stopping in most of the houses as we went. The people were very hospitable and appeared to be pleased to receive calls from us. Upon coming into port a boat from the fort came under our bows and inquired from what port we came, and ordered us to lay at quarantine six days. The same night, however, a few of our company went up to the city, about twelve miles off, where they remained some days.

Tuesday, 10th. Last evening an altercation took place between the mate and one of the sailors by the name of Wilson, from New York. It arose from the man refusing to do duty and calling upon another sailor to assist him in resisting the mate. He was brought aft, however, still continuing to mutter and grumble; finally he and the mate clinched, when he bit the mate and endeavored to get overboard. He was then taken aft of the Captain's cabin and ordered to be tied by the Captain. This he resisted and drew his knife upon the Captain, made a thrust at his breast, which was ward off by the Captain's bare hand, cutting his hand severely. The man started forward, when the Captain sung out to kill him; he jumped overboard and raised the cry of murder, a pistol being fired after him by somebody.

Soon he stopped his cries and sank. A boat was lowered immediately and after making a circuit picked him up. His intention was to swim ashore and let us think he had drowned. He was brought on board and put in irons, after a little difficulty, he continuing to talk the whole time, saying he was sorry for what he had done, and that he intended to kill the mate and not Captain Coffin. This day I went ashore and continued some two or three bours. The weather very warm. Fruit in abundance, such as oranges, lemons, limes, etc.

Wednesday, 11th. Rainy. Remained on board the whole day.

Thursday, 12th. Went on shore and took a walk alone to San Uagualde, about ten miles. Visited a school and became acquainted with the "Profressor de Primera." He invited me to take coffee with him, after which we returned to the schoolhouse. Here we had some conversation, he talking in Portuguese and I, English. Presently an individual called and invited us to supper. Here I remained during the night, having a good night's sleep in a foreign land and among strangers.

Friday, 13th. Rainy the whole day. I remained the whole day at the professor's and had an opportunity of observing his order, etc. The people where I remained appeared to be pleased with the idea of having an American with them and were very attentive to my wants, and hospitable.

Saturday, 14th. The morning being pleasant, I took leave of my friends and concluded to walk to St. Catherine, which I did. I arrived in this new and strange place, to me, about 5 o'clock p.m. Here, also, I found myself alone, all of the "Strafford" boys having returned to the vessel during the day. I put up with a German lady who could talk a little English. Here I had a good supper, hard bed and no sleep.

Sunday, 16th. I arose this morning, not feeling well by any means. I concluded to take a short walk about the place before eating, when I fell in with some of the boys that had just arrived from the "Strafford". The churches being open, we took the opportunity to visit them. Here I first saw mass. There are three churches, the insides being highly decorated with waxen figures of the Virgin Mary, our Savior, the cross, angels, and the like. While in one of them a woman entered and after dipping her finger in holy water and crossing herself, as is usual, walked to the back of the church and, fixing her eyes upon some figure and keeping it there for a short time, would courtesy to it, looking very wistfully at the same time; in this manner she passed around the room and finally retired. There is one thing here that Protestants could take a lesson from, and that is, there are no "black seats," all appearing to feel themselves upon holy ground and, no distinction between persons of different color.

Sunday evening at St. Catherine.—Three or four individuals from the "George Washington" having drunk somewhat too freely and feeling just right for a "spree," raised a row in the streets, causing the boys to run in all directions. They soon got into a regular fight and had a collection of one or two hundred of the inhabitants around their door (Hotel des Napor); also a body of soldiers were called out to stop the fighting. Captain Coffin and eleven of the "Strafford" folks, including myself, were at the Plaza de ——. A guard of eight men were placed before our house, where they remained until morning.

Monday, 16th. Under guard at the Plaza des — until about 12 o'clock, when some of the civil officers entered and inquired about us of the landlord and then of us. Being fully satisfied that we were not lookers on the evening before, we were requested to prepare to embark immediately and return to our ship. We were escorted to the boats by soldiers. There appeared to be considerable excitement among the people. At 12 m. we embarked for the ship, twelve or fourteen miles down the bay, being escorted by soldiers. Arrived, all safe, toward evening.

AN OLD-TIME LETTER.

Following is an exact copy of a letter delivered to W. B. Latham by Wells, Fargo & Co. in 1855, and found among his effects. The letter shows the company's method of doing business more than a half-century ago:

EXPRESS AND BANKING CO.,
No. 82 Broadway and 3 New St.

New York, April 27, 1855.

W. B. Latham, Esq.,

W. F. Co.'s Messenger per "Northern Sight."

Dear Sir:

You will have charge of our Express matter this day, for San Franco, by Nicaragua route.

Our goods will be under Bill of Lading from N.Y. to San Franco. You will have no direct charge of them, further than to urge them on when you consider it necessary to do so, but at the same time, be careful not to interfere with the Company's officers.

You are furnished by us, on leaving here, with a list of all our Express goods going with you and also of all the Trunks and Bags in your immediate charge—of which Trunks and Bags you will take especial care until you arrive at San Francisco and deliver the same only to persons connected with our office there.

You are furnished with Custom House Manifests of our express goods, which you will be sure to get properly endorsed by the United States Consular Agent both at San Juan del Norte and San Juan del Sur.

Take no package from others either here or on the route unless for Consuls or officers of the Steamship Company.

In no case nor under any consideration whatever, let any package, or letter or letters which we have put under your immediate charge go out of your care until you deliver the same to persons connected with our San Franco, office as after herein directed.

While on way up on Pacific side, prepare a careful Alphabetical list of all San F. (City) Letters in your Bag, make it on the headed sheets we give you (dating each sheet.) Get the Purser's Report and put it in your letter list in Letter Bag, and when nearing San Franco, our News Boat (with Flag and Capt. Martin on board) will come off—then throw Bag Letters and Bag Newspapers to him; be ready for him so as not to miss fire.

Report yourself with Trunks as soon as possible to our folks in S. F. Look for our wagon on the dock and go up in it, losing no time.

During any affrays on board ship, remain neutral as far as possible.

Distribute newspapers to Steamer's Officers, Consuls and respectable passengers you may meet coming this way on Isthmus.

Wishing you a pleasant trip and good health,

We remain

CROSS MARKS HISTORIC SPOT IN SAN DIEGO.

San Diego—A massive cross of steel, concrete and fragments of tile from the old presidio, was unveiled here, September 27th, to mark the spot where Junipero Serra, the founder of the California chain of missions, planted the first cross in this State. The marking of this historic spot was brought about through the efforts of the Order of Panama, an organization that came into existence through the Panama-California Exposition to be held here in 1915.

The unveiling was attended by due ceremonies, in which many dignitaries of church and state participated. The base of the cross carries a bronze tablet, on which is inscribed: "In this ancient Indian village of Cosov, discovered and named San Miguel by Cabrillo in 1542, visited and christened San Diego de Alcalá by Vizeaino in 1602, here the first citizen, Fray Junipero Serra, planted civilization in California; here he first raised the cross; here began the first mission; here founded the first town, San Diego, July 16, 1769. In memory of him and his works, The Order of Panama, 1913."

SAN FRANCISCO'S FIRST CENSUS.

Sacramento—Under a pile of musty, dusty papers in the Secretary of State's office in the State Capitol, there has been unearthed a census of San Francisco and the Bay region, taken on December 31, 1798. The report is signed by Jose Arguello, then governor of California.

Celebrate Great Undertaking's Completion

LOS ANGELES—THE PRACTICAL completion of the Los Angeles aqueduct, one of the greatest engineering feats of the world, and of State-wide importance, will be celebrated on November 5th and 6th with appropriate ceremonies. In the San Fernando Valley, on the 5th, there will be a concert and salute, and Ellen Beach Yaw will greet the on-rushing waters by a rendition of "The Living Waters," specially written for the occasion. At 1 o'clock Mayor Rose, on behalf of the city, will accept the aqueduct. Preparations are being made to accommodate an immense throng of visitors along the aqueduct in the valley.

The aqueduct will convey to Los Angeles an unlimited supply of pure mountain water, both for domestic and industrial purposes, from Inyo County. William Mulholland, the engineer in charge of the project, has received world recognition for successfully carrying on the immense project.

Of so great importance to Los Angeles is the aqueduct, that November 6th will be a general holiday and the populace will fittingly celebrate its completion. On that morning there will be an industrial parade, featuring the many and varied industries of the Angel City, which will terminate at Exposition Park.

There, at 1 o'clock, the Masonic Grand Lodge will lay the cornerstone of the State Armory, and Governor Hiram W. Johnson will deliver an address. Following this, the cornerstone of the imposing aqueduct memorial fountain will be laid with due ceremonies, after which the Los Angeles County Historical Museum and Art Palace—in which Ramona Parlor, N.S.G.W., has a valuable collection of California relics—will be formally opened.

Hundreds of invitations to the celebration have been issued, and many officials of State and Nation will be in attendance. The history of the aqueduct, and its importance to Los Angeles and the surrounding country, is briefly set forth in the following pronouncement accompanying the invitations:

"The celebration to which we have the honor of extending to you this invitation marks the completion of an institution without peer in this or any other country. Not since the days of the Roman aqueduct has the world recorded engineering accomplishment, aqueductorial, equal to this great gathering of the waters from the snow-capped peaks of the Sierras and their conduit o'er mountain and plain, 260 miles, to the salvation of the half-million souls which now are, and the added half-million soon to be, in that incomparable city of the Golden West—Los Angeles.

"Eight years of ceaseless application of brain and brawn and $24,500,000, constitute this heroic monument to the ability of man and the devotion of a people. The Los Angeles aqueduct will bring pure mountain water from the main range of the Sierra Nevada, a distance of 260 miles, across deserts and through mountains, in sufficient quantity to supply a city of 2,000,000 inhabitants. It is a gravity system throughout, no pumping plants being required. It will deliver 258,000,000 gallons, net, every twenty-four hours into reservoirs nearly 1000 feet above the city. The Los Angeles aqueduct consists of ninety-eight miles of covered cement conduit, forty miles uncovered, twenty-one miles of open canal, twelve miles of tunnels through mountains, ten to thirteen feet in diameter, and four reservoirs along the line, each capable of containing three months' supply. This entire work was conceived and carried out by Chief Engineer William Mulholland, assisted by Assistant Chief Engineer J. B. Lippincott and an able staff.

"The water power will be utilized in its descent of several thousand feet from its source in eventually producing 120,000 horse power peak load of electrical energy, which will be used for the city's light and power, and the sale of which will eventually liquidate the bonds and interest of both the aqueduct and electrical plants. The Los Angeles aqueduct, when completed, will constitute one of the largest engineering and water transmission undertakings in the world."

WHO'S RESPONSIBLE?

California has been much wrought up the past couple of months over "social-evil" matters, and both men and women have expressed their views on the subject in the public press. It is many a day since a criminal case on trial in the courts of this State attracted such attention as did the Diggs-Caminetti white-slave trials at San Francisco and the Bixby contributing to the delinquency of a minor trial at Los Angeles.

The former were tried in a Federal court, and the defendants found guilty, while the latter was tried in the Superior Court, and the defendant was declared not guilty. The nature of the offenses charged was so thoroughly exploited in the daily press as to need no comment here. Whether any bad effects will accrue from the publication of the testimony in these cases, is an open question, and one which has been decided in both the affirmative and negative by students of social evils.

It is our opinion, that one of the chief reasons for present-day conditions is lack of sex-knowledge, not only among children, but also among men and women. Consequently, we are in favor of teaching sex hygiene in the public schools, so that the coming men and women will be familiar with the questions that are bound to confront them. There can be no doubt that many young women and men are, through lack of proper knowledge on sexual questions, the victims of indiscretions which could have been avoided had they, in the schoolroom, had those "secrets" which arouse a natural curiosity in every human being, unfolded to them.

As has been stated heretofore in these columns, however, the thing most responsible for the increasing social evils is that damnable custom which has established in society two codes of morals, one for the guidance of women and the other for the guidance of men. There is absolutely no just reason why a man should not be as sexually pure as a woman; nor why, when a woman sins against the moral law, she should be an outcast in society while a man, for a similar offense, is readily forgiven and taken back with open arms. God Almighty did not lay down one rule of right living for man and another for woman; He established but one code of morals for the guidance of both, and for sins against which both will, we are promised, be equally punished.

Everyone deplors conditions which make possible the alarming increase in social evils, and many suggestions for improving conditions and lessening the evils have been advanced. But when we look the question squarely in the face and seek the root of the evils, can we fail to charge ourselves with being indirectly responsible? Does not that responsibility come, largely, from failure to

CALIFORNIA, THE CHOSEN.

Too few extol her in her warm, sweet grace;
Smiling, she binds her leagues of orchards white;
Too few have seen the love-light of her face,
And felt the healing of her summer night.

Imperial so,—the Bright one of the West!
Her emerald forest cloak men's hands have rent,
Man's needs have changed the wild charm of her breast,
Yet still she smiles, more beauteous and content.

The Poet, thinking on the planted Heights,
Sent moving lines unto the old world seas,
And voices murmured in the fetid nights,

The salutation of the wilding flowers;
Green vales to shrine "sweet home" forever more,
The Day King's dawning o'er the eastern towers.

The song birds and the children, free as fair,
With all the year the flaming of the rose, properly instruct our school children? Together, in the classroom, boys and girls should be made thoroughly acquainted with their physical differences; the part they are to perform in the world's work should be clearly pointed out to them; and, above all else, it should be impressed upon them that it is absolutely necessary for both, not merely the female of the species, to keep themselves morally pure. * * *

Here's a sentiment, taken from an exchange, which has the right ring. It would be well for all Native Sons, Native Daughters and loyal Californians to put it into practice when spending their California-made money:
Every time you go down town
And start to throw your money around,
Say, home-made goods are the stuff for me,
Because they spell P-R-O-S-P-E-R-I-T-Y.
The dollar you send to the Eastern shore
Says, good-bye, Bill, for evermore;
But the home-spent dollar don't act that way—
It keeps a-comin', and a-comin', and a-comin', your way. * * *

A German has asked a permit from the State Board of Health to operate a plant for the preparation of horse-meat to be used in sausage and other delicacies. No doubt, appreciating how the gas-wagon is lessening the commercial value of the horse and how we are suffering from the high cost of living, our German friend wants to show his concern for both horse-kind and human-kind. But what on earth will become of the dogs, if sausages are to be made from horses? * * *

If you have a sufficiently large income to be subject to the provisions of the income-tax law recently enacted by Congress, you had better leave bachelorhood and join the benedicts. By so doing, you can save paying a tax on an additional thousand a year. But, of course, if you haven't a $3000-a-year income, you needn't worry, for Uncle Sam don't want any of it to keep the wheels of government going. * * *

A man named Bundy has been lecturing on "Hell's Inside Secrets." There is no information as to where he came from, but as there is no reason to suppose he ever visited that district, we wonder if it is possible that his satanic majesty's domain has been connected with California by wireless. * * *

Most of us are only interested in the much-talked-about currency reform measures before Congress to the extent that we would like to see the course of the river of wealth so changed that more coin of the realm will flow our way. * * *

This is the month that the President of the United States issues that annual proclamation which sounds the death knell of turkey-land. Thanks-giving approaches, and the great American bird is quoted at fifty cents per pound! * * *

BAD TACTICS

Several rulings, on the part of the management, as to the conduct of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, to be held in San Francisco in 1915, have brought forth many protests, and the enforcement of these rulings is not going to benefit either the stockholders of the enterprise or the State at large.

The proposed tax to be placed upon all kodaks and cameras taken into the exposition grounds by visitors thereto, is ill advised, as it will not only cause many justifiable "knocks," but will lose to California the benefit of having thousands of pictures, that would be taken by these visitors for their own use, circulated throughout the world.

The decision of the directors to charge the counties of the State for space in the California building, is an outrage and should not be tolerated. This structure is to be erected by funds created by a bond issue, and every taxpayer contributed his share. While not familiar with the provision governing the erection of this building, it is presumed that, as the State and not the exposition management, bears the expense, the State Exposition Commission should have full charge of that structure which their tax-money is building, is building. To charge the counties for the use of a indeed galling. Either the counties should be given free space in what belongs to them, or the California building should not be erected at the State's expense.

Why the exposition management made such arbitrary rules, and would not change their decision, even in the face of strenuous protest, was inexplicable for some time, but the underlying motive appears to be the intention to commercialize the exposition. This is assumed from the following, which has just recently appeared in the State press, and which is a sample of the fine (i) publicity the exposition is, and has been receiving, because of the rulings of the management:

"Director of Exhibits J. A. Filcher of the Sacramento Valley Exposition Commission, following a visit to San Francisco declared directors of the exposition are obdurate in their determination to place concessions in the aisles of the main exhibit halls and that in spite of his arguments against such a procedure the directors stated they needed the money so badly they were willing to run the risk of commercializing the exposition. 'The directors granted every request I made concerning the Sacramento Valley exhibit provisions save the most important one,' said Filcher on his return to Sacramento. I told them we would not stand for concessions being placed in the aisles near our exhibit, and they said that they had agreed to put the concessions there and would not change. Filcher declared the commercializing of the exposition at Buffalo had ruined the exposition. 'Where they took in one dollar at the concessions they lost two at the gate,' he said."

HIGHEST AND LOWEST WORLD POINTS, IN CALIFORNIA.

The maximum difference in elevation of land in the United States is 14,777 feet, according to the United States Geological Survey. Mount Whitney, the highest point, is 14,501 feet above sea level, and a point in Death Valley is 276 feet below sea level. These two points, which are both in California, are less than 90 miles apart. This difference is small, however, as compared with the figures for Asia. Mount Everest rises 29,202 feet above sea level whereas the shores of the Dead Sea are 1,290 feet below sea level, a total difference in land heights of 30,292 feet. Mount Everest has never been climbed.

The greatest ocean depth yet found is 32,088 feet, at a point about 40 miles north of the island of Mindanao, in the Philippine Islands. The ocean bottom at this point is therefore more than 11½ miles below the summit of Mount Everest.

The difference in the land heights in Europe is about 15,868 feet.

"WELCOME."

The following lines by John Steven McGrouarty, dedicated to the Los Angeles Realty Board, and sung at the recent Land Show to the air of "Wearin' o' the Green," are reproduced by request:

A thousand miles it stretches,
Beneath its skies of blue,
From the Bay of San Diego
To the hills of Siskiyou.
From the snow-crowns of the mountains,
To the sunny tides at play,
'Tis the golden land of glory—
California all the way.

From the forests of old Humboldt
To the desert's rim of flame,
It is ours the way God made it,
And we love it all the same.
With its fields, its mines and orchards,
'Tis the land we love the best—
Olden, golden California,
The Empire of the West.

From far and near we gather,
Up and down the Golden State,
And the rosy wreaths of welcome
Deck the Angel City's gate.
And this shall be our slogan,
As we answer to the call:
"We are all for California—California for all!"

Club Motto: "Strength United Is Stronger."

WOMEN'S CLUB DEPARTMENT

Conducted by MRS. AMY CLARKE AUBURY

THE FIRST MEETING OF THE Monday Club of Oroville, Mrs. A. F. Jones, president of the Northern District, gave a glimpse of the work taken up by the Federated Clubs in the state and district. She said:

"In this district there are forty-three federated clubs, with a membership of about 3000, and there are twenty-one departments of work. These departments are reaching out in as many directions, in response to the call for service.

"Our State president, Mrs. J. W. Orr, has requested that we emphasize civics and education this year. The civics department is the most popular department of the Federation. Civics marked the first departure from the purely cultured or social idea in the club movement.

"True it is, today, the woman's improvement club is a blessing among woman's organizations, and they are invariably respected and supported by the masculine gender.

"Political science is included in this department; the purpose will be to prepare women to take an intelligent part in the political and sociological questions of the day."

Mrs. Jones said that men alone do not always decide political questions in favor of the home and the child; that sometimes they are biased for business reasons, but that women invariably stand for the home and the child, and that, now that we have the privilege of the ballot, it will be well worth our while to study political science, so that we may be able to discuss the affairs of our city, State and Nation intelligently with our husbands in the home, as all questions that concern these are of vital importance to the home.

She stated that twenty-four state federations and their clubs are eager for vocational training for the child, thus making it possible for the boy and girl to make practical application of their education in earning their living after leaving school.

She touched upon the new department, peace. The American Peace Congress convenes every two years in the United States. In this way we are preparing for "World's Peace."

To sum up the work briefly, these are some of the questions we are helping to solve—child labor, better laws for women and children, civil service reform leading to improved conditions in our public institutions, conservation of our natural resources (including water, soil, forests), wild animal life (including birds and animals). There are three so-called culture departments, literature, music and art. Our art chairman, Mrs. Hughes, has prepared and sent out a suggestive plan of outlines, as to the best method of taking up art study in clubs.

These and other subjects are being considered by the women of the Federation with successful results, each doing her part, along some particular line, earnestly and intelligently, forgetting self and all personal interests, and the central thought, in all her research and labor, is the home and the child.

NOTES OF THE STATE CLUBS.

We have just received the Year Book of the Monday Club of Oroville and have read with pleasure the interesting programs prepared for the coming season. The work has been divided into four departments—"Current Topics," with Miss Vesta Vail as leader; "Literary," Miss Pauline Warner, leader; "Art," Mrs. J. B. Hughes, leader, and "Music," with Mrs. E. W. Ehmann, leader. The Current Topics Department has chosen for the season's work talks on peace, literature, waterways, forestry, industrial and social conditions, and expect to have the chairmen of these departments of the Northern District present to take part in the discussions. The Literary Department will branch out this year, having prepared much work for the study of the twentieth century English drama. This program is too lengthy for the present issue, but will appear next month. The Art Department will take up the English school of painting, and that, with the work of the Music Department, will appear in another issue, believing they may prove an incentive for some of the other clubs to do likewise. The Year Book also contains a directory of the members, with the constitution and by-laws. It is very neat in appearance, and if sent to every club in the State might prove an excellent example of what the clubs can do with the proper material.

MRS. L. E. AUBURY, Easton.

The Santa Rosa Saturday Afternoon Club, which will be the principal hostess club during the District Convention, is one of the largest study clubs in the State. It has been federated since 1907. Mrs. James S. Sweet is the president, with Mrs. F. H. Kellogg as corresponding secretary. At the present time, the club has nearly 200 members. Among the subjects for the coming season (these are taken from the Year Book at random) are "Universal Peace," "A Jack London Program," "My Travels in Denmark," "A Magazine Article," debate on "Shall we Punish Our Children?," "The funniest Story I Ever Heard," "Childhood Poems and Cradle Songs," "Superstitions in Modern Times," "The Cubist and Futurist," and "The Comic Supplement." This club endeavors to live up to the plea made in "Mary Stuart's Collection for Clubwomen": "Keep us, O Lord, from pettiness; let us be large in word and deed; and may we strive to touch and to know the great common woman's heart of us all, and, O Lord God, let us not forget to be kind." With this in mind, it is surprising that all club members in the district wish to be delegates to the Santa Rosa convention?

A "Clean-up Day" was held in Los Angeles, October 9th. The plan for cleaning up was inaugurated by the Civics Betterment Department of the Los Angeles District, the work being placed in the hands of Mrs. C. M. Gordon. Her first efforts were directed towards securing the co-operation of the Mayor and the Realty Board, who entered into all the plans made by the district chairman. Mrs. J. J. Connaty was appointed sub-chairman, and was given the work of securing aid in cleaning and planting vacant lots about the city. Through her efforts, the city has promised to clear all city property of rubbish and weeds, and the aid of the police force of the city will be called in to enforce the clearing off of private property as well. Mrs. Gordon, chairman, sent out the following message, from which we quote: "Have you ever stopped to think that the cleaner, healthier and more attractive you make Los Angeles, the more people will wish to make this their home, the more valuable your property will become, and in every way the city's highest standards will be sustained? No one desires a clean city more than mothers and housekeepers."

The opening of the permanent Art Gallery for San Francisco women artists was celebrated with a three days' reception during the past month by Cap and Bells Club at their rooms on Octavia street. The president, Mrs. Frederick Colburn, assisted by prominent clubwomen from the clubs of San Francisco and the Bay cities, acted as reception committees on the different days, greeting the many artists and their guests who called to inspect the various paintings, which numbered close to one hundred, furnished by local artists.

The entertainment committee of the "Better Babies" show of San Joaquin County has extended an invitation to Dr. Bertola, chairman of Health in the San Francisco District, and Past Grand President of the Native Daughters of the Golden West, to address the mothers of the county during the show. Dr. Bertola has named Friday, November 14th, as the day on which she will appear at the meeting of the mothers, and as she is a specialist on diseases common to children, it is a foregone conclusion that the mothers will assemble in numbers, for no one is better qualified to inform them on the subject, nor could anyone be selected who is more clever nor better beloved by the women, than she. The doctor has made a study of "The Exceptional Child," and her talks on this subject are of such value that many of the San Francisco clubs have been making demands upon this very busy woman's time. She is equally as popular in Native Daughter circles as she is in "clubdom," and a large delegation of San Joaquin County Daughters will be on hand in Stockton to welcome her. The committee feel that they are very fortunate in securing such an excellent speaker and eminent physician to address the mothers.

Vittoria Collona Club, San Francisco, of which Dr. Mariana Bertola is president, will give a ball November 8th, for the purpose of helping to build up an almost depleted treasury. The Philanthropic Department of this club are still at work endeavoring to secure funds with which to carry out the pet project of the club—the San Francisco Maternity Home. As this charity appeals to all of the clubwomen of that city, it is a foregone conclusion that the ball will be well attended. The Aid Section of the club has been holding weekly meetings at the home of the chairman of the department, Mrs. M. J. Fontana (herself a great philanthropist), who is working very strenuously in the interest of the Maternity Home. All of the prominent members of the club will assist Mrs. Fontana in her preparations, and also at the ball.

The Pacific Coast Woman's Press Association, San Francisco, was the hostess at a reception tendered to Winston Churchill and his charming wife. The association manifested its appreciation of Mr. Churchill's presence by presenting him with a laurel wreath and a very beautiful cup. Mrs. I. Lowenberg, the president (also an author of note) presented the tokens of their regard to Mr. Churchill, after which the members and guests were presented to him. A musical program followed.

The Southern California Press Club's program for the past month was as follows: First meeting, executive session; second meeting, "The Spirit of the Drama," Mrs. Samuel Clover; third meeting, reception and musicale; fourth meeting (evening), regular monthly dinner.

At a recent meeting of the Philomath Club of San Francisco all of the women representatives of the San Francisco daily papers were invited to be present and give their views on journalism. Miss Annie Wilde of the "Chronicle," Miss Hazel Pedlar of the "Examiner," Miss Mary Ashe Miller of the "Call," Miss Frances Jolliffe of the "Bulletin" and Mrs. Hortense Russell of the "Post" explained journalism as seen from the inside, and a very pleasant afternoon was spent by both guests and members, after which tea was served by the refreshment committee of Philomath.

The Arbor Club of Stockton met during the month, electing their new officers. Mrs. Edward Z. Hughes is president, and Miss Rose Gnekow, secretary. A campaign has been started by this club to secure the planting of trees on the different streets, and to commence with, Cherokee Lane will be planted with palms as far as the river. An endeavor will be made to secure the co-operation of the Lodi people, with the idea of finishing the rest of the street in palms. An active campaign will also be started at once to secure 1000 members, this club believing so much more can be accomplished with a large membership. They report the resignation of J. M. Eddy, the founder of the club, and the members feel the loss of their advisor and friend very keenly.

Corona Club of San Francisco, during the month, gave one of the most enjoyable affairs of October. It was termed "The Gentlemen's Supper," meaning that the members' husbands were invited to be present. It was distinctly "Portola" in flavor, color and program. By flavor, in this case, I mean that all of the dishes were prepared, not according to the Corona cookbook, but from the recipes taken from some Mexican or Spanish chef, all spelling Chili and peppers and nothing escaping excepting the ice cream. Even the cigars would have been Mexican, had they had any, which appears to be a joke on Corona—they forgot the cigars at "The Gentlemen's Supper." Other clubs, take warning! Well, anyway, the affair was a splendid success, and the husbands want it repeated at an early date.

Once a year the Association of Pioneer Women of San Francisco meet at a log cabin in Golden Gate Park, the other meetings being held in the Pioneer building on Fourth street. This year, the meeting day was a clear October and typically San Francisco day, and to say the clubwomen enjoyed their day in the park and their cabin would be putting it mildly. They have collected a number of curiosities for the building, which is a separate collection from that in the Park Museum, and this little cabin houses many very interesting relics. (By the way, the Pioneer women will be glad to receive any additions to their little collection, having lost the major portion of the one stored in the Pioneer Hall at the time of the 1906 fire). Recently, this organization of women was honored by the presentation of a gavel made from a tie of the old French railroad in Panama. Don't forget them if you have any interesting California relics.

Miss Mae Wilkin, representative of the Home Industry League and a Past Grand President of the N.D.G.W., has been doing good work during the month among the women's clubs of San Francisco and vicinity. She has appeared and addressed the Corona Club of San Francisco, giving freely of her samples of California-made goods to demonstrate their value. A day devoted to California-made products was held in San Mateo lately, the San Mateo Woman's Club arranging a distinctly California program with Miss Wilkin addressing the members. On October 3rd, the Tamalpais Center Woman's Club planned a day of unusual interest, inviting the clubwomen of the bay clubs to participate in their "Home Industry Day," and with Miss Wilkin and Mrs. Bernard as speakers. A display of California goods was also a part of their program, with the distribution of these goods to the guests afterwards.

The Burlingame Woman's Club is preparing a very novel and unusual program for some night in November, and their contribution towards "Home Industry" will be in the shape of a supper consisting entirely of California products. The program is a secret at this time, but I hope to publish it for the edification of other clubs. The Burlingame club always presents something entirely out of the ordinary at all of their affairs.

The Housewives' League of San Francisco are deep in their preparations to secure the adoption of ordinances providing for municipal markets. These markets are believed to be one solution of the problem of reducing the high cost of living. Dr. Caroline Cook Coffin, the president of the league, is working very hard in the matter of launching this great scheme, and at the last meeting of the league secured a speaker in the person of Charles H. Johnson, formerly sealer of weights and measures, who was well qualified to inform the women of the various benefits to be derived from a law regulating weights and measures, and how the municipal markets would come in for careful observation from these inspectors; another thing, it was thought the municipal markets would bring about reduced rates in prices of meats now brought from Australia, for which the retailers at this time are charging equal rates with domestic meats, while the retailers are securing the foreign meats at greatly reduced prices. With the Housewives' League "on the job," we can soon look for the answer to "How to reduce the high cost of living," or, at least, "How to reduce the cost of high living."

The Burlingame Club's new section, Current Topics, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Charles Godfrey, was launched very successfully during the past month, and is proving a very great attraction to the members. A recent meeting was devoted to "California Laws Relating to Women," and contained many surprises, and brought forth many questions which will require the services of an attorney to "untwist." Many of the hitherto "timid" members forgot to be timid when they learned that they needed information concerning their "rights," and were on their feet clamoring to be heard for information on their especial needs. They learned, like "Mandy," that "Man is got the best on yit," and it is a foregone conclusion that many bank accounts in Burlingame have been changed to "joint accounts," and that nearly all the homes have been "homesteaded," or deeds passed to the wives. We "sholy" did learn a thing or two at that meetin'.

The first meeting of the Home Club of Oakland took place during the month, with Mrs. David Easterbrook, the new president, directing the meeting. A meeting of the board of directors took place preceding the regular meeting, to map out the club's activities for the year. A number of attractive programs, with clever speakers, have been outlined to make the meetings of more than usual interest during the year.

During the month, the Sunday Assembly of the California Club presented a program of much interest, under the direction of Mrs. J. S. Sanborn. Some time since, Mrs. Sanborn stated that it was her intention to prepare programs of "old songs"—those forgotten and buried under the stress of modern melodies (?). For the first assembly, a rare musical treat was presented as follows: "A Psalm of Love," "The Rosary," and "Where the Lindens Bloom." Readings from Kipling followed, by Anstin Lewis. The program was greatly enjoyed by the members and the many guests who had been invited to participate in the very novel affair.

The Monrovia Woman's Club, Los Angeles District, opened its twenty-third year's work during the past month. The opening program partook of the nature of a reception, the clubhouse being opened to the public without invitation, which no doubt accounted for the very large attendance, upwards of five hundred women availing themselves of the opportunity to participate in the affair. A program of unusual merit was presented, with the reception following, Mrs. George Monroe, the new president, heading the receiving line. It is felt this "spreading" of the club fellowship will mean a very great increase in club membership for the Monrovia Club during the present year.

Mrs. J. N. Porter, who attended the biennial in San Francisco with Mrs. Percy Pennypacker, National President of Woman's Clubs, and who is a close personal friend of the latter, is again in California, at the present time spending a few weeks in Los Angeles. Mrs. Porter is the founder of the Texas Congress of Mothers, which was organized only four years ago, and which now numbers over 8000 women. It was through her efforts that the bill establishing a child welfare commission was introduced in the Texas Legislature, and she also prepared an exhibit known as the child welfare exhibit, maintained for three different years at the Texas State Fair. This exhibit demonstrates the need for better conditions for children. Mrs. Porter also organized a council for mothers in her home city, composed of a member from each mothers' club in the city.

The Hypatia Club of San Francisco—a study club—prepared a program on California forestry for their first meeting in October, with Miss Nell Cole, district chairman, as the principal speaker. Mrs. Maurice Higgins introduced the speakers, all dealing at length with the subject. Later, refreshments were served. The affair took place at the home of Mrs. F. H. Thomas, past president of the club.

CLUB PERSONALS.

Mrs. A. F. Jones of Oroville, president Northern District, visited San Francisco during the month, also attending the meeting of Mrs. Orr's executive board.

Mrs. Brandford Woodbridge was also in attendance at the executive board meeting from Roseville.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT

DEVOTED TO FARM, ORCHARD, GARDEN, POULTRY, DAIRYING, BEES, ETC.

Edited by GEORGE H. BANCROFT.

INTENSIVE VEGETABLE GARDENING. (The French System.)

CALIFORNIA IS DESTINED TO BE the greatest country in the world in practicing irrigation farming. In close connection, a modification of diversified farming will be followed to the extent of a few special crops covering the year, and thus distributing labor. The keynote of our future prosperity, however, will be small areas well tilled. In other words, intensive cultivation of the soil. In this matter of intensive cultivation of the soil, a valuable lesson is taught by the French gardener.

The French vegetable garden usually consists of two acres, this being as much as the ordinary French family can attend to. When the children are too small to assist, it is necessary for the farmer to hire at least two helpers. The wife does her share, perhaps more than her share. The women have complete charge of preparing and packing the product for market, as well as carting it to the market place and selling it. In California, we have a big advantage over the French gardener on account of our mild climate, which saves us the expense of equipment in lights and bell glasses.

Some experts among us claim that, for many purposes, cloth-covered framework is more desirable than glass. Here we only require a little assistance during our coldest time of year in order to succeed in raising all the common vegetables. A slight raising of the temperature, such as is possible by using cloth in place of glass, does the trick. Cloth houses also help by keeping out noxious flying insects which deposit eggs producing destructive grubs, etc. The necessary pollination of blooms can be managed through the use of bees.

French gardeners have raised vegetables on the intensive plan for centuries. Crops succeed each other every six weeks or so. Inter-cropping is one of the essential features, and is reduced to a science. Two crops in different stages of maturity are grown in the same space, the intercrop being harvested before the main crop needs the room. These people use manure—lots of manure, and then more manure. Commercial fertilizers are also used to advantage. Manure, water and labor—hand labor mostly, using hand tools,—is the rule.

Special strains of seeds of the various vegetables are used, and in many cases some of these are raised on the farm where they are to be planted. These seeds perform their functions of germination and maturing crops almost within a day of the gardener's calculation. Uniformity is another great feature of French gardening. The lights are all of the same size, as is all the other equipment, and this simplifies operations, as the equipment is interchangeable. Paths and beds are also the same size. Methods are uniform, and methods of assisting nature are also uniform with all gardeners.

The buildings used, and methods of storing products, are generally uniform. The products are bunched and packed the same, so that the buyer can depend upon having the same treatment each time and from all. What we call the every-day ordinary vegetables are raised; among them lettuce, radishes, onions, cauliflowers, etc., also strawberries.

Growing mushrooms is practiced, and is almost as common as growing radishes is with us. The mushrooms are grown under glass in hotbeds, but require careful treatment in covering, ventilation, etc. Mushrooms are also grown in cellars and caves. The open-air culture of mushrooms is only practiced as supplementary to other crops during the dull season. The French gardener utilizes every foot of soil and keeps it busy almost all the time. Thousands of dollars' worth of products are harvested each year from every acre. The French gardener is happy and contented, as well as prosperous.

Anyone observant of present movements of "Back to the Land" can see that land dealers are catering to those who wish to till a small area and at least help to reduce the present high cost of living. One of the educational features of such movements consists of instruction at each individual farm by practical men who have and are succeeding in raising vegetables, hees, Belgian hares, etc. We believe these movements toward intensive farming will result in caring for our constantly increasing population, reducing living expenses, and promoting health, happiness and content.

WINTER IRRIGATION.

The writer recollects that before artificial irrigation came into general use in California, the question of greatest concern to the farmer was whether rains would be sufficient and timely for producing a paying crop. The chances for producing profitable crops in regions of light rainfall, with artificial irrigation, have been greatly increased through the adoption of scientific tillage methods, thus inducing the conservation of soil moisture. The discoveries of such soil experts as Prof. Hardy W. Campbell of Lincoln, Nebraska, along these lines, their practice and success, have a value to the farmer which cannot be overestimated.

In California, however, we require a further insurance against crop failure, or rather, methods that will allow the production of crops that yield larger returns in money per acre than such crops as hay or grain. Land is becoming too high in price to permit the handling of large areas, yielding nominal returns per acre. Our State is essentially a land of irrigation projects. We have vast areas of good soil, plenty of water, and climatic and other conditions that will cause our grand old State to greatly exceed any country on earth, either of ancient or modern times, in the variety, quantity and quality of soil productions. Our incomparable climate, geographical location, picturesque scenery, and the variety and extent of our national resources, have attracted the attention of the civilized world. The result is that our population is rapidly increasing through the addition of home and health seekers, generally of the better class. Many of these wish to engage in agricultural pursuits, and the rule of small areas, well tilled, is going to be firmly established.

Irrigation works are being installed about as rapidly as possible, with abundance of available capital to work with. The land so supplied with water is sold as fast as ready for use. This situation tends towards and influences the practice of the most intensive agricultural methods known to the world. Another matter: while it is generally admitted that subdividers of land are making good profits on their projects, yet the present prices, even the very highest asked, are nominal, when compared to the value of products derived. It has been no uncommon occurrence for a single crop to pay for land and water in full the first year, and for three annual crops to pay total cost of land, improvements and equipment.

It occurs to us that many farmers who are not so situated as to secure the full benefits of irrigation, could improve their crop values at comparatively slight expense, through the practice of winter irrigation. The sources of water for winter irrigation are from direct rainfall, winter streams, dams, lakes, reservoirs and submerged dams. The water is used as it falls, flows or accumulates, in the same manner as practiced in summer irrigation, excepting in the case of direct rainfall. Flowing or accumulated water may be pumped or run over the ground by gravity flow.

Some years ago the prune orchards of the Santa Clara Valley were irrigated with creek water to a depth of from 1.58 to 1.75 feet, while the trees were in a dormant state, and until late in April. The orchards were not subject to further irrigation during the summer. Both growth and fruitage were satisfactory.

Extensive experiments have been made in Arizona, where the winter irrigation of peaches and apricots induced a growth of from three to six feet and good crops of excellent fruit. The period of irrigation was from January 9th to March 31st. The regular furrow method was employed, and water derived from streams that afforded an abundance of water during the rainy or winter months, but which were dry in summer. These orchards were plowed after the irrigating was over, and then cultivated through the summer months with no further application of water. The results were better than from the regularly summer irrigated orchards. Winter irrigation in Montana, with a climate somewhat the opposite that of Arizona, also resulted favorably.

Trees will stand in soil supersaturated with water during their dormant state, and not suffer as they will during the growing season. In California, grapes, almonds and such fruit crops should succeed without summer irrigation, where conditions allow soil to be well soaked with winter water. Shallow soils, especially those underlaid with stratas impervious to water, can be greatly improved by using dynamite where each tree is to be planted. This will loosen up the hard stratas to a good depth and allow better penetration of water and roots. Land on the South Atlantic coast has been loosened up by shooting off dynamite charges placed about three feet below the surface and six feet apart. The result has been very satisfactory indeed, increasing corn crops to an astonishing degree.

In the practice of winter irrigation, rolling land may be furrowed by following contour lines. It may be necessary to watch the furrows during a rainstorm to keep them from allowing the water to run crosswise down hill, and thus cause washing of the soil. Rubber clothing, and the use of a shovel, is desirable. The writer has produced a growth of an inch per day for eight days on young prune trees in the growing season, after first soaking the soil during the rainy period. The process included deep fall plowing, harrowing crosswise, and, after the soil was dry enough in the spring, a constant cultivation was kept up, especially after each rain.

FARM MANURES.

If manure is kept moist by applying water, fermentation is less rapid, thus preventing loss of nitrogen, ammonia, etc. Firefanging is the result of manure becoming too dry, water fills spaces in the manure and stops the air from circulating too freely. Air is necessary for quick and harmful fermentation, and water prevents this and by reducing temperature also, encourages action of slow ferments (Anaerobes). The liquid part of manure may be used to reduce fermentation, adding enough water to moisten the whole mass.

Gypsum is useful as a preservative of manure, by acting as an absorbent of the liquid part, thus preventing its loss by draining off. Gypsum has the power, to some extent, of fixing ammonia and other elements that would otherwise escape into the air. This point is not considered of much consequence, there being a question as to how much gypsum prevents waste through the air.

Kainit, when used as an absorbent, has the following disadvantages: It is difficult to keep dry, and it may injure hoofs of animals. Gypsum is more useful in absorbing and holding liquid manure. Kainit benefits leguminous plants probably more than gypsum on account of the fertilizer it contains. As the value of gypsum is about the same, considering everything, it would be wise to use whichever could be most easily and cheaply obtained. Everything being equal as to cost and handling, the writer would prefer gypsum, because it is dryer, hence a better absorbent, and danger of injuring hoofs is less. It is thought that both gypsum and kainit are useful in preventing the decomposition of nitrogenous organic matter in manures. Gypsum is probably more useful for preserving and retaining liquid voidings than kainit.

Sometime muck is used as an absorbent, and when obtainable at slight expense is desirable. Compost is useful on the farm, and is produced by placing in piles such material as farm manure, straw, leaves, cornstalks, potato and other vines and garden and farm refuse, as well as bodies of dead animals. The material is then subject to rotting, when it is very useful for adding fertilizer and humus to the soil. When properly made, compost is an ideal fertilizer. It is specially valuable in potting plants, and in mixtures with soil it is almost indispensable in propagating certain plants where cuttings are used, such as roses, etc. Composting makes valuable many otherwise waste materials on the farm. The cleaning up of material suitable for compost helps give the farm premises a neat and well-kept appearance that is well worth while.

For ordinary fertilizing and adding humus to the soil, it is questionable whether it is wise to undertake the expense of composting. We have commercial fertilizers, or the chemicals entering into their mixing, also the modern practice of green manuring, and the rotation of crops, the stubble, clover roots, corn stalks, leguminous crops produced by rotation, and this in connection with using all farmyard manures available, will discourage composting in most cases.

Composts and well-rotted manures are very useful to gardeners and florists in propagating beds; and also, as fertilizers for certain plants, it is hard to secure substitutes at any cost. We may conclude that composting will pay where intensive gardening is carried on or for florists' use.

Piles of manure dumped in the field with the idea of spreading later is objectionable, inasmuch as a great deal of the richness of the manure leaches into the soil directly beneath the pile, which leaves the poorest part of the manure to be spread over the remaining ground. A rank growth is forced where the piles were made, which is not liked by stock, and, being of forced growth, soon dies out as the heat of the summer increases. Manure should be spread as it accumulates, using a manure spreader, and usually a light application is as of much benefit as a heavy one. After the manure is spread, it should be plowed under shallow as soon as possible. At times when soil is too wet for hauling, the manure should be stored beneath the barn and removed later. Coarse rank manure is better adapted to clay soils as it improves the texture, makes the soil more porous, loose and mellow. It promotes conditions whereby sunshine, air and moisture will penetrate the soil, rendering plant growth more healthy and productive.

PROGRESS THROUGHOUT THE STATE.

(September Bulletin California Development Board.)

There is undiminished activity in all lines of industry, including development in large and small tracts, looking to their early marketing and improvement. There is renewed activity in mining, constructive development work, manufacturing and transportation. Though the year started out rather inauspiciously, there will be a good showing made on the whole throughout the State, as there has been, with few exceptions, no general failure of any one crop.

A new map of Butte County shows that twelve years ago there were fifteen subdivisions of land in that county, where there are now 147. The subdivision of large estates accounts for this growth in number. Twenty-five varieties of rice are being harvested in the county, and two new rice mills are to be erected, as well as another olive mill.

The general manager of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange gives a summary of the citrus crop for 1912-13, which he states represents 53 per cent of the shipment of the year before. The f.o.b. returns to California on account of shortage created by the frost equals 79 per cent of the returns for 1911-12 and 50 2-10 per cent higher than the average f.o.b. price during the preceding eight years.

The shipments of fresh deciduous fruits to September 10th were 8478 1/4 carloads, against 8142 3/4 carloads in 1912.

A new irrigation project in Contra Costa County will take water from the San Joaquin River for irrigating 10,000 acres of the Rancho Los Medaneos.

A well in the western part of Fresno County has been completed and gives a flow of 1500 gallons per minute.

The sugar-beet crop promises well in all sections of the State. In San Bernardino County, one large crop is reported as having sugar content of 22%.

The cotton crop of Imperial County, as far as gathered, is making a good showing, and it is estimated will be about 20,000 bales.

The lima bean crop, lately estimated at 96,000,000 pounds from the southern counties, will now, it is thought, exceed that amount.

SOIL FERTILITY SNAPSHOTS.

It has come to be known that a good mechanical condition of the soil, and constant cultivation, contributes as much to its fertility as manures and chemicals.

In order to determine the plant food requirements of the soil, observe the growth of the hay or grain crop in the following particulars: If the crop is slow in maturing or ripening, phosphoric acid is lacking. Short and fine straw denotes the absence of nitrogen. Rank stalk growth and shrunken kernels show that potash and phosphoric acid are required.

The cow-peas and soy bean add plant food to the soil with a fertilizing value of $15 per acre, where the crop is fed on the farm, and the manure applied to the soil.

Fertility is simply the power of the earth to yield the necessary plant food. A state of fertility means a combination of good soil, good seed, with moisture, light and plant food available.

Fertility represents what soil will produce with every condition favorable to maintain the productiveness of the land, not so much by replacing ingredients as keeping up a good mechanical condition. The soil contains plenty of plant food, but only just so much as can be rendered soluble in the soil moisture is available for the growing plant.

NOVEMBER PLANTING CALENDAR.

VEGETABLE GARDEN—Sow beets, early cabbage, cauliflower, carrot, corn salad, cress, dandelion, endive, kale, kohlrabi, leek, lettuce, mustard, onion, parsley, parsnip, peas, potatoes, radish, spinach and turnip.

FLOWER GARDEN—Sow hardy annuals in the open ground, such as aconitum, alysium, bartonia, calendula, candytuft, annual chrysanthemum, clarkia, collinsia, cosmos, eschscholtzia, godetia, larkspur, liliu, lupinus, mignonette, uenophila, poppies, sweet peas, pansy and stocks; also California wild flowers. Continue to plant hyacinths, tulips, narcissus and other Dutch bulbs.

In suitable locations, green peas should be planted at once, and the more the better, as this crop pays big returns.

Beans and egg plant also may be planted in frostless locations.

TULARE ESTABLISHES NEW RECORD.

The orange picking season in Tulare County has begun. Ten carloads of oranges are being picked at the Merryman orchard for shipment to Australia. The picking began on September 29th, the earliest date for the gathering of oranges in the history of California.

These ten carloads of oranges will leave Exeter on October 8th, and on October 11th will be shipped from San Francisco for the antipodes. The shipment will cross the Pacific by slow freight and require about six weeks for the passage.—Selma Irrigator.

A PHENOMENAL VINE.

A Mammoth blackberry vine is growing in the back yard of a Los Angeles city resident which has a new growth of twenty-three feet this season. The shoots started during the fruiting time of the parent vine, which was pruned off at surface of ground after the crop was all harvested. The vine is still growing and will hold its present leaves throughout the coming winter and fruiting season next year.

POULTRY

(By MRS. A. BASLEY.)

THE CITY OF LOS ANGELES ALONE consumes about six million dollars' worth of poultry per annum. Where does it come from? Who gets this money? Does poultry pay? These are salient questions propounded to the editor of the poultry department. Not more than half of the amount required has been produced on the poultry and egg plants or by the farmers' wives in California.

The remainder, or about three million dollars' worth, has been shipped from the middle west states in cold storage and it still continues to come although both the Federal Government and the State of California have made such stringent pure-food laws debaring poultry that has been in cold storage from commerce except where the conditions have been plainly stated to the purchaser. This is greatly to the advantage of the poultry men as well as a protection to the consumer. The question confronting us now is, why should all this money go to the middle west when we can raise all the poultry and eggs that

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

AMONG THE ATTRACTIVE NOVELTIES of the season, launched and exhibited at the recent fashion show for fall opening, was the wonderful coloring. Material for evening gowns is of a richness unparalleled at any time or period. Gold and silver brocade hand embroidered into greater richness, silver lined tulle, white and colored heads, semi-precious stones, real lace, white and colored hand-run tulle, and fur, are all called into service for adornment. Fur, the most popular of all trimmings this season, is used lavishly on evening gowns and blouses.

Charming effects in fur trimmings are gained by the use of colored furs. We see many dyed to the color of a costume. One idea was shown in a street costume of dull heliotrope velvet, trimmed with caracul fur of the exact shade. Brighter colors, such as orange, scarlet, French blue and canary color, are effective in neck pieces and muffs worn with gowns of all black or all white. In short neck pieces, which fasten closely about the bare throat under ornamental rihhon or velvet bows and long ends, the bright-colored fur is usually mingled with black fur.

Short Coats; Narrow Skirts.

Varying in degree at different houses, it is nevertheless true that skirts for all occasions continue to be made excessively narrow at the hem. Barely the length of a moderate step at the best is true, while the most extreme make a moderate step impossible. The slit continues popular but now it is confined to the back, in a straight-edged opening which reaches to the bend of the knee. This is provided with buttons or strong hooks and eyes, and may be closed at will. Generally, it is found necessary to leave it open, and in that case women of refinement will wear under it at least an apology for a petticoat of plaited lace or tulle.

The majority of costume coats are short indeed, many merely e-ton or bolero jackets. Straight cut and loose, they are extremely youthful in effect from a back view, and the trimming scheme is mostly expressed in the back. In front, the coat is open or cut away from a waist coat as startling in color and design as personal taste demands. In form and cut, the style of these first autumn coats wavers between the Russian effect and the Japanese. The latter, with its seamless effects and sleeves cut in one with the shoulders, is generally confined to afternoon gowning, while the swagger military cut of the Russian coats, with their fur-trimmed collars and cuffs, will be realized in tailored costumes.

Mantelets Indispensable.

Silk is the predominating material now, more than ever before. All afternoon dresses are made of silk, and we are glad to say that we have a pronounced decollete mode for the afternoon. Whether cut square or heart-shape, the decollete shows the neck and bust quite freely, very tender weaves of transparent tulle moderating the transition from the dainty tone of the flesh to the sharp edge of the material. Plain but costly strings of beads or artistic pendants gliding from the neck into the soft and curly meshes of tulle or laces, soft laces from the sleeves, all afford a picture of true womanly charm and tenderness.

That mantelets are the very thing just now, will surprise no one, because they are simply indispensable. The dresses are matched with cloaks of silk—taffetas or softly flowing tissues—every one of them to represent a different style. If the edge be smooth, the thick neck ruche of the sainted Pierrot will do. A little pink rose is stuck somewhere into the dense and curly arrangement, as if in a little nest. With it is worn a hat surrounded by an aureole of tulle, the whole producing a really poetic effect.

Blouses Popular.

The tailored dress now, only in very rare instances, is combined with a blouse of an assorted color. The latter is generally made of white batiste, tulle laces or silk muslin. The white satin blouse is gradually disappearing. Sometimes we still see white satin used for a rounded-off bolero, or as a loose Greek waistlet, or as an open Japanese jacket whose front parts disappear in the girdle, after having been turned up loosely with crossed interior fimbriae of white tulle, or with a little shirt of white silk muslin finely embroidered. The English shirt-waist, broadly plaited of figured crepe de chine matched with the respective tailored dress by means of colored eravats, is very practical. Also the white woolen or silk crepe blouse, with color embroidered round turn-down collar of Bulgarian style, whose color combinations and fashion names are also Bulgarian.

These little turn-down collars are cut simply with long-slit buttonholes, through which colored satin rihbons are drawn to them and smartly tied. Still prettier are those with two or three inserted muslin plaits, that give them a jolly appearance. The greatly appreciated plain crepe de ebine blouses frequently have collars of brown satin or taffeta. White tulle blouses, with a broad black sailor collar of silk muslin, are exceedingly chic, and they can be worn with anything else. The white blouses of some of the leading houses are often underlaid with black, lined with black, or provided with black satin corsage belts reaching up to the breast. Underlaid belt and sash motifs are worn almost everywhere.

Black Velvet Reigns.

The tendency of the fashion is toward effectively supplementing the silhouette, and with it the entire costume, with various pleasing trifles. Tulle is the general watchword today. We need not mention ruffled collars, nor plain ones, as they are not merely things of yesterday, but are constantly being composed of ever so many indistinct and increasing clever arrangements.

Black velvet represents a reign of its own. An entrancing suit is composed of a satin jacket and velvet skirt, richly ornamented. However, although many prefer gorgeous costumes, another tendency asserts its serene existence with as much success. Everything seems to glitter and huzz about an elegant woman, as if she were a flying machine. Yet only the fluttering volants and scarfs produce a really dazzling impression.

Queen Fashion has commenced to flirt with roundities which formerly were frowned upon. Small, and large, and short plaited and drawn volants are falling over one another once and twice, a broad scarf giving the whole a pleasing finish.

Two Sensational Sleeve Styles.

The fondness for veiling one's figure still prevails, but we are far away from the first primitive attempt in this direction, as it no longer involves the long tunic covering the entire lower part of skirt, but drapings in which the principal part is played by imagination. Aside from tulle and silk muslins, these draped veillings are also made of dainty laces, the ground material being silk of brilliant colors, unless the black and white, or the brown and white combination, be preferred.

A few models of sensational wits, for the afternoon or evening, show two different styles of sleeves—the one plain and slightly draped to the elbow, and the other resulting from the draping of a genuine lace over-garment. This latter slightly touches the arm, then loses itself backwards in a febu-like arrangement which again falls upon the little train of the undersuit, forming a succession of delicate folds.

Among the very latest creations of art in hats which have the approval of the fashionable public, are black velvet, trimmed with prodigious clouds of tulle and bows. Some women are wearing larger hats, as the minute forms are not becoming to every face. For afternoon, transparent hats are fashionable everywhere, while for shopping in the forenoon, are hats of velvet in any of the season's colorings. There are also those little bonnets formerly bound under the chin with a broad ribbon and decorated with small bunches of flowers, reviving, in a new beauty, the maiden picture of olden days.

Transforming the Foot.

The fashion in stockings is undergoing a revolution. The white silk stocking is still worn with dresses and shoes of every description. While this seems strange to us, still it is nicer than the shoes with white uppers. Dull shoes continue to be popular, although the dull velvet and deer-skin of the same kind convey a rather clumsy impression. Contrasted with these, satin produces a very pleasing effect. The brocade shoes, now appearing in the shops, are a novelty which is quite unsightly.

There is still some talk about transforming the foot, it being intended to wear broad-toed shoes, with low heels and plain huckles. Evening slippers are very elaborate. They have high heels, are shown in satins in all colors, and are beautifully augmented with eut-steel buckles and semi-precious stones.

TO HONOR PIONEER OF PIONEERS.

Sacramento—November 24th, the two hundredth birthday anniversary of Junipero Serra, has been designated a legal holiday by Governor Hiram Johnson. In celebration of the day, a state-wide pilgrimage to Serra's grave at Mission Carmelo, near Monterey, is planned.

An important celebration of the early California missionary's birthday anniversary will be held on the island of Mellorea, off the coast of Spain, which will be world-wide in its importance. Charles E. Chapman, holder of the Traveling Fellowship in Pacific Coast History, maintained by the Native Sons of the Golden West, through the University of California, Berkeley, will be present at this celebration in the interest of the historical data he is gathering regarding the early settlement of California.—(Editor.)

UNWINDING THE YARN

(By AUNT MIRANDA.)

The president of the Ladies' Fire Arm Association doesn't "seem" right, nor in her head. Nowadays you don't know which people are.

Uncle Jacob says to me yesterday, "Miranda, nobody cares how old you are, but don't be a mean old thing."

There ain't many people round here in Millersville been sick since Dr. Pompers come. His charges is so terrible high it keeps the pain down.

The Ladies' Fire Arm Association met to discuss a new style of gun case. The ones now in use are too much like dress skirts. The President put one on by mistake.

I keep a telling Jim that Pegasus wasn't a horse; he was a flying machine. But most of them things nowadays are old horse.

Aviation is easy but risky. Rose always flies to meet Bob when he comes.

Jim is just out of the high school. He says that a girl named Hebe was the first aviatrix because she flew between earth and heaven. Jim's book says she took Diomedes in her car. That's all I want to know about her. Girls are free enough, goodness knows.

And Jim argues that Icarus and Darius Green were the first martyrs to aviation. Icarus fell from the sun, and Darius Green fell out of the barn. Jim thinks Icarus ought to be disinterred, and him and Darius Green have a common monument.

The Children's League met last Wednesday. A resolution was adopted excusing parents from all responsibility.

A committee of three were appointed to find out if there were ten commandments, and what they were for.

It was unanimously voted to use the funny pages in school for drawing lessons, and that all boys over eight years of age should be paid for going to school.

Sunday-schools were abolished.

The session was forced to adjourn on account of a fight between Mickey and Ike. The girls went home crying.

Los Angeles—A public defender, to represent those unable to employ counsel, has been provided by the Board of Supervisors.

RITUAL CONTEST AT OAKLAND.

Oakland—The ritualistic contest which has been occupying the time and attention of the Parlor of San Francisco has borne fruit in the endeavor to unify the work throughout the State, and the desire to render perfect initiatory work has reached Oakland at last. Six of the seven Parlor have entered on a five weeks' schedule, one of which has passed, and included Athens and Brooklyn Parlor on October 14th, Bay View and Oakland Parlor on the 15th, and Piedmont and Claremont Parlor on the 17th. At the start, the members of the Order did not show much interest, but it is now on the increase, and no doubt the teams will play to crowded halls before the contest is over. It will prove one of the very best things for the Order, if these contests become general, stimulating interest and also giving a good impression to the candidate when he enters.

Claremont Parlor, No. 240, N.S.G.W., is now preparing for its fourth annual masquerade ball on Thanksgiving Eve, and is already assured of success. Argonaut Parlor, No. 166, N.D.G.W., held a whist party on October 21st, for the benefit of the Native Daughters' Home. It was a very successful affair and reflected credit on the committee. The girls are sure some goers.

Claremont Parlor is still adding to its roll of membership, and is more than sanguine of future success.

In an increase in timber sales this year and in a decrease in receipts from timber trespass as compared with last year, national forest officers see a growing use of the forests and respect for the Federal forest policy.

HEIMWEH.

When the snow is on the mountain and the almonds are in bloom,
Then take me back beside the western sea,
Where the air is full of perfume and the sky is bright and clear,
For the Golden West is where I long to be.

When the orange groves are laden with their wealth of shining gold,
And the mocking-bird is singing in the tree,
Then I hear the call of freedom and I cannot help but go,
For the Golden West is "Home, Sweet Home" to me.

I am longing, longing ever for the sunny southern days
And the peaceful nights of sweetly-scented gloom.
For the voice of Home is calling and I'm going back again,
When the snow is on the mountain and the almonds are in bloom.

Mining Department

Conducted by CALVERT WILSON

PETROLEUM HAS ACHIEVED ITS present leading position among the industries of California with great rapidity during recent years, and descriptive literature upon the many phases of the subject has by no means kept pace with its growth. Along with other activities of the State Mining Bureau, Mineralogist F. McH. Hamilton has begun the preparation of a special report which will cover the industry from every angle, giving particular attention to its geology, occurrence, production, transportation, refining and uses. The completed work will give full information upon every known occurrence of oil in the State; data concerning methods, costs and results of drilling, pumping, cementing and storage; transportation costs by rail, ships and pipe lines; capacity of pipe lines; future possibilities in regard to the refining of crude oil, including the manufacturing of gasoline from natural gas, and the conservation and economical use of waste gas.

A study of the water situation will also be made in the various fields, with a view to assist in remedying the prevailing unsatisfactory conditions, the desire being to make the scope of this report so wide and the information contained therein so complete and thorough that it will serve as a guide to all in any way concerned, from the driller in the field to capital seeking investment. R. P. McLaughlin, the well-known petroleum geologist and engineer, has been assigned to this branch and his work will be augmented by various field assistants.

Needless to say, the successful completion of these plans lies largely in the hands of owners and operators now actively engaged in the petroleum industry in the State. Assistance will be solicited, during the course of preparation of this report, from engineers, geologists, managers, superintendents and skilled workmen connected with various branches of the industry. It is very greatly to be desired that their co-operation will be given in every possible way when called upon. The work will be hurried to completion as fast as necessary data can be assembled, and the resulting report will undoubtedly fill a long-felt want, assisting, in no small degree, in the greater development of California's greatest single industry.

PETROLEUM DISPLACES COAL.

On account of the large production of petroleum in California and its use for fuel, coal mining has practically ceased in that State, the production in the last two years being only 10,747 tons in 1911 and 10,978 tons in 1912, according to Edward W. Parker, of the United States Geological Survey. The production of petroleum in California in 1912 was 86,450,767 barrels, of which not less than 50,000,000 barrels was used directly for fuel.

Large quantities of oil are also used in place of coal for gas making, and on the estimate that $3\frac{1}{2}$ barrels of petroleum is equivalent to 1 ton of ordinary bituminous coal, it is probable that from 1,400,000 to 1,500,000 tons of coal would be required to perform in California the service now rendered by petroleum in the production of heat, light and power.

There are, however, in California a number of small, widely separated coal fields, chief among which are the Mount Diablo field of Contra Costa County, the Corral Hollow field of Alameda County, the Priest Valley and Trafton fields of San Benito County, and the Stone Canyon field of Monterey County. The first two, which are on the eastern border of San Francisco Bay and consequently in the west-central part of the State, produce black lignite or subbituminous coal. The coals in Monterey County are of the same geologic age as those farther north, but they have been altered into true bituminous coals. The alteration in the San Benito County areas has not progressed so far as in Monterey County, but the coals closely approach the bituminous grade. None of them possess cooking qualities.

EFFECTIVE CO-OPERATION.

Every encouragement is given to legitimate mining in the National Forests, and the miners' needs are given every consideration by the Forest Service, according to a recent bulletin of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Timber and water are absolutely essential to mining operations. Water is equally as important as timber, and in placer workings an adequate and constant supply is necessary, while for plant and domestic purposes it is needed in all operations. The prospector and miner can use the timber from his claim for the development and improvement of his claim, and where no timber exists on the claim or when that which existed has been used and more is needed, it may be obtained from the National Forests under free-use permit. The free-use policy of the Forest Service is most liberal. In the fiscal year 1912, 38,749 free-use permits for a total of 123,233,000 board-feet were issued; this timber being granted free of charge to miners and prospectors in need of timber for the development of their claims.

The attitude of the Forest Service toward the mining industry, and its efforts to make the relationship beneficial, has supplemented the legislation passed by Congress in the interest of the mining industry with a very liberal policy in supplying prospectors and miners with free timber from the National Forests for the development and improvement of their claims; it has given every encouragement in its power to legitimate mining; it has, in the administration and protection of the National Forests, prevented the illegal acquisition of public lands for purposes other than mining attempted under the mining laws; it has considered the present and future need for timber by the mining industry in formulating plans for the management of the National Forests; it is furnishing valuable information concerning the preservation of mining timbers; and, in common with other users of National Forest resources, the miner is directly benefited by National Forest administration in protection from fires and in the insurance of a constant supply of water through the protection of watersheds within the National Forests by the regulations of the cutting of timber from them.

National Forest administration can be strengthened through co-operation from the mining industry in giving its support to the position taken by the Forest Service of encouraging legitimate projects and discouraging illegitimate projects and speculation; in conserving the timber supply by economical use; and in the protection of the forests from fire. Such intelligent and earnest co-operation is so highly desirable that it is gratifying to observe that its spirit and material accomplishment are coming to be more and more clearly realized and appreciated.

MILLIONS IN QUICKSILVER.

According to H. D. McCaskey of the United States Geological Survey, the total 1912 production of quicksilver was 25,064 flasks of 75 pounds each, valued at $1,057,180. Of this output, California contributed 20,524 flasks.

The total value of the quicksilver production of California, in the period of sixty-three years, from the earliest output to date, is stated at $95,275,695. The highest annual value of the production was $4,288,538, in 1875, when the output was 50,250 flasks of 76½ pounds each. There were seventeen producing quicksilver mines in California in 1912. The total quantity of ore mined was 138,198 short tons.

CALAVERAS WINS PRIZES.

Practically all the prizes offered for minerals at the recent State Fair held in Sacramento were carried off by Calaveras County, which had an excellent exhibit of gold, copper, manganese, silicon, asbestos, gypsum, pottery clay, ochre, talcum, marble and granite. Specimens of gold ore assaying as high as $3000 a ton were on display, with hundreds of others running from $1300 to $1500.

Exhibits of copper ore, manganese, iron and gypsum, ninety per cent pure, told of the county's wonderful mineral wealth, and all sorts and varieties of marble demonstrated that Calaveras can supply this much-sought building material in unlimited quantities and of a quality that equals the imported product.

MINING WORLD NOTES.

Ten thousand acres of land near Redbank, Tehama County, have been bonded by Eastern capitalists, to exploit the oil fields.

Platinum and nickel claims near Alder Springs, Glenn County, are to be developed.

Near Grass Valley, Nevada County, what is said to have been the richest gold strike in twenty-five years was recently made in a quartz mill.

Chrome and asbestos deposits in Sbasuta County are being inspected by Government experts.

Along the American River in Sacramento County 1300 acres have been bonded for dredging.

According to the United States Geological Survey, California lead the Nation during 1912 with a gold production of $20,000,000; Colorado was second with $18,741,200, and Alaska third, with over $17,000,000.

A large part of the country's 1912 platinum production was obtained as a by-product in gold dredging in Butte, Yuba, Sacramento and Calaveras Counties, this State.

The Bully Hill Copper company expects to soon have its Shasta County smelters equipped with a fume-destroying device that will permit operation without objection from the farmers.

What is considered one of the richest strikes yet made in the mine was recently reported from the Tightner, at Alleghany, Sierra County.

According to advance data from the 1912 annual statistical report of the State Mining Bureau, the total value of raw mineral products the past year was the greatest in the history of California, namely, $91,472,385. Petroleum lead, with a value of $41,868,344, while gold came second, with a value of $19,713,478.

are needed? Why should not our own farmers and the homeseekers that are coming here by the thousand supply the market and keep that three million dollars here? It can all be raised here if the farmers only know how. To supply this knowledge, the experiment stations all over the country are issuing bulletins and the agricultural colleges are giving regular courses of instruction in poultry-husbandry, and the theory and practice are joining hands, poultry plants are being operated in California upon scientific and up-to-date plans and are proving most profitable and far ahead of many a gold mine.

Of all the states in the Union, California holds the promise of being in the near future the best of any for poultry raisers. We have the climate ideal. We have the soil. We have the markets. Even at this date it has been repeatedly proved that California-bred fowls can win the laurels from their Eastern competitors in the show-room. The California-bred and raised birds are healthier, more vigorous and better layers than the Eastern birds. This may seem like a strong statement, but it has been verified many times by some of our prominent breeders who, having visited celebrated poultry plants in the Eastern states, have returned more than satisfied with our ideal climate, our beautiful poultry, and our market conditions.

Poultry husbandry goes back many years, but it is only of recent years that the idea has been evolved that there is "money in poultry." Breeding poultry is a business that can be made to pay on any scale here, from a small flock in the back yard of a city lot to the thousand or more on a regular poultry farm—the small producers making more per hen, as a rule, than the large farmers. The bulk of the country's enormous crop of poultry products comes from the many hundreds of small producers. The thousands of homeseekers arriving in California can keep poultry profitably, whether for family use only or as a business and commercial proposition, if they know how. The successful breeders will be those that study the requirements of their location and practice the modern and up-to-date methods in use on the Pacific Coast.

KNOWING HOW BRINGS SUCCESS.

There are here many scores of bright and intelligent men and women who, starting out in a small way, have gradually built up an immense business with profits more than gratifying, and who, when asked to tell the story of their success, scarcely know where to begin. However, when closely questioned, it will usually be found that they possess a well-developed faculty for detail and thoroughness almost amounting to a talent. Nothing is overlooked; all the bulletins distributed by the State and Government, relative to the poultry industry, are carefully perused, and the effects of the different kinds of feed upon their flocks are observed with keen appreciation and after trying out all and retaining that which is good they gradually enlarge their plants and become known as successful poultry raisers.

The poultry business is not a "get-rich-quick" game, but an honest, legitimate business, and there are hundreds of prosperous men and women here that are making a good living by it. According to statistics on poultry raising, the hen on most ranches in California produces an average of two dollars a year clear gain for her owner. And there are men, and women, too, who, knowing how to handle the fowls, how to feed to best advantage, how to keep the fowls vigorous,—in other words, how to make the business pay,—are getting over four dollars a year per hen for commercial eggs.

The cost of keeping a hen is from $1.20 to $1.50 a year, if everything she eats is bought; it will not cost this, if the owner can raise part of the food on the ranch, and it will not cost so much if he knows how and what to buy. If he learns the nutritive value of the different foodstuffs, he can so arrange or balance the ration as to avail himself of the cheaper foods. In this matter, our University of California has a valuable bulletin by Professor Jaffa on "Feeding Poultry." Also, the "Western Poultry Book," advertised in these columns, is the ideal book, containing many of the recipes for mixing cheaply foods which are being used by successful poultry and egg raisers on the Pacific Coast. It also contains illustrated chapters on care, feeding, housing, incubating, etc., as well as formulas for the destruction of all vermin, with the symptoms, cause and treatment of all ailments.

Poultry for the market is greatly in demand, and the broiler business has for a great many years been a most profitable one. Well-fattened hens, soft roasters and eapons sell at a premium in Los Angeles. Stepping into a commission merchant's and seeing a barrel full of fine fowls nicely dressed, I asked where they came from. "From Kansas City," said the proprietor, and on my remonstrating with him for sending away for market poultry, he informed me that he finds it utterly impossible to supply the market here without getting several carloads from the middle west every week during the winter to meet the demand.

TURKEYS.

In the past year, quite a large number of turkey farms have been started with most excellent prospects. Turkeys have been called the farmer's friend, and there is no doubt that turkey raising is, in places where the climate is favorable, more profitable than any other branch of the poultry industry, and they will bring larger cash returns than any other stock on the farm. They cost very little to raise, as they eat the waste grain and the weed seeds which would otherwise be lost or injurious to the farm, besides consuming grasshoppers and other insects which would damage the crops.

There are many beautiful valleys where grain crops are being raised and where turkeys could be reared without a cent of expense on the grain now lost by the reapers. This is especially the case in the great valleys that are shaded with magnificent oaks, for the turkeys do exceedingly well where they can be fattened on acorns or any other nuts. In the canyons of the San Joaquin Valley there are some fine flocks, also in Antelope Valley; and in the new and wonderful Imperial Valley country turkeys in flocks of several thousands are being herded on the alfalfa fields like cattle. There is plenty of room for many more, and when one considers how much profit may be made, and the excellent opening there is for the business, the wonder is that so few are raised. At Thanksgiving and Christmas times turkeys usually sell at from 40 to 45 cents a pound, and every year they are shipped from Kansas and Nebraska by the carload.

The climate in California is excellent for turkeys and so far there has been very little disease among them. In sections of the East we learn that a disease called "black head" has almost wiped out the turkeys and ruined the turkey industry, but in this lovely climate there is none of that trouble, and eventually, when advantage is taken of the prospects here, California will supply the Eastern states with their Thanksgiving and Christmas turkeys.

DUCKS AND GEESE.

Ducks do not seem as popular in California as they are in the East. We do not have as large ranches as there are on Long Island, but there is a good opening for the duck industry here, and doubtless some energetic business man who understands the care of ducks will recognize the opportunity and we shall see large duck ranches spring up in the vicinity of Los Angeles, as they have near New York and San Francisco. Ducks do well in this climate, have no diseases, grow much quicker than chickens, and their food costs less. Mosquitoes, which are very troublesome in some places to chickens, never trouble ducks, neither do fleas nor ticks. The reason for their immunity from vermin is that their feathers being very oily and thick, with a down next the skin, insects cannot penetrate.

There is a good market for ducks in season, and they are used extensively by the Chinese who, if they cannot get the fresh duck, import smoked ducks and geese from China. Ducks bring from eleven to fourteen cents a pound, and a higher price for what is called "green ducks." These are the young ducks that have been fed, fattened and dressed for the market, at eight or ten weeks of age, weighing from three to four pounds. All the different varieties of ducks do well in California and in the Hawaiian Islands.

Goose growing in California is not carried on as an exclusive business, but flocks are kept on many ranches for home consumption. Their feathers bring a good price, and there is a ready market for geese in season. They bring from fifteen to twenty cents a pound. The present supply does not equal the demand, and any one situated favorably for raising geese, not far from Los Angeles, could make money by it.

WILL PROMOTE EARLY STATE HISTORY STUDY

Stockton—In order to create more interest in the early history of California, Stockton Parlor, No. 7, N.S.G.W., has decided to arrange for a series of monthly talks on special phases of pioneer history. The suggestion comes from George E. Catts of Stockton Parlor, a member of the Grand Parlor committee on Good and Welfare of the Order. President Martin O. Schneider has appointed a committee consisting of George E. Catts (chairman), John W. Kerick, James Fitzgerald, W. C. Neumiller and W. E. O'Connor to take this new and important feature in charge and to arrange a program of lectures. One meeting night each month will be set aside for these talks.

W. C. Neumiller, financial secretary of Stockton Parlor, returned recently from a camping trip to Silver Lake, Alpine County, in company with Past Grand President Clarence E. Jarvis of Sutter Creek. They spent a month in the Alpine wilds communing with nature and becoming better acquainted with the old immigrant trail blazed through the Sierras in 1846 by Kit Carson and Colonel John C. Fremont. Neumiller gave the members of Stockton Parlor a most interesting talk on his trip.

Sunday, November 9th, the crack ritualistic team from National Parlor, No. 118, N.S.G.W., of San Francisco, winners of the Bay Cities championship trophy, will be brought to Stockton by the officers of the Grand Parlor to exemplify the degree work. Stockton Parlor is expecting many visitors from outside points on that occasion. Diamond Parlor, No. 246, N.S.G.W., of Pittsburg, will come here to contest with National Parlor.

October 8th, a large delegation from Stockton Parlor went to Lodi on a specially chartered traction train to attend the sixth anniversary celebration of Lodi Parlor, No. 18, N.S.G.W. The Lodi Natives played the host in grand style and won the highest praises from large delegations from Elk Grove, Galt, Oakdale, Tracy and Stockton. The feature of the evening was a sumptuous roast pig banquet. George Jahant donated six fine porkers, and the Lodi committee had them roasted to a turn and served with all the customary trimmings, from salad and baked sweet potatoes and gravy, to Lodi olives and Flame Tokays. In was indeed a feast for the gods. The Lodi Parlor officers were showered with compliments on their fine work in the initiatory ceremonies.

A Russian scientist claims to have discovered an inoculation for use against forest insects.

STATE'S WATER PROBLEM

THEME AT HANFORD MEETING.

The railroads are giving a special fare-and-a-third rate to Hanford and return for the Counties' Convention of the California Development Board which will be held there on Friday and Saturday, November 7th and 8th.

The Convention calls together persons interested in commercial organization work and State development from all parts of California, and several special excursions are being planned from the larger cities to Hanford. The theme of the convention is to be "The Water Problem of California."

The sessions are open to the public, and all interested visitors are cordially invited to attend, although the accredited delegate to the meeting are drawn from the commercial bodies and the Boards of Supervisors of the State. The people of Hanford are planning hospitable and interesting entertainment for the large number of visitors.

IXL TAMALES BRING NEW FAME TO SAN FRANCISCO AND CALIFORNIA.

Workman Packing Company Ships 150,000 Tins to Eastern Market.

A new fame has come to San Francisco in that far-away dominion east of the Rockies known to geographers as Chicago, Kansas City and St. Louis. It is no longer that the Exposition, the Portola, the climate and the Golden Gate are the only symbols of the glory of San Francisco, for now comes the famous IXL tamales to stand in the "Windy City" and in the "show-me" towns, as a tasteful advertisement of the greatness and progressiveness of California and the Pacific metropolis, all of which is due to a shipment from the city of San Francisco of no less than 150,000 tins of the tasty and tested delicacy hitherto unknown to interstate commerce, the IXL chicken tamales, which will be known to the multitudes east of the Rockies as chicken karno, the new name for IXL tamales.

This indicates a reversal of an old rule of commerce, which, in the past, has required that all manufacturing shipments crossing the Rockies must be westbound. All IXL goods, consisting of Tamales, Enchiladas, Chili con Carne, Pork and Beans and Soups, are true "home products" and deserve the hearty support of true Native Sons and Native Daughters.

Save labels from all IXL goods and secure a beautiful California "1915" or other pennants free. The company's "ad" appears in this issue. —(Advertisement.)

SUCCESS FORCES LARGER QUARTERS.

So successful has the Rotary Manufacturing Company of Los Angeles been in the manufacture of Rotary oil burners, for ranges, cook stoves, steam heating, etc., that larger quarters became a necessity, and they have moved to Ninth and Santa Fe avenue. Here, the most complete factory and demonstrating-room on the Coast have been erected, to facilitate the handling of increasing orders and to demonstrate the Rotary burner's many excellent qualities.

The forests of Corsica, the little island upon which Napoleon was born, are managed by the French government. They produce lumber, firewood, and turpentine, and all parts of the tree are far more closely utilized than in America.

Native Sons of the Golden West

In Memory of Departed.

San Francisco—The annual memorial services of the combined local Parlors were held October 12th and were attended by a thousand persons. The memorial address was delivered by Governor Hiram W. Johnson, a member of Sunset Parlor, No. 26, Sacramento, who paid an eloquent tribute to the Pioneers. The program included: Funeral march (Chopin), F. Delleplane; opening remarks, W. P. Garfield, chairman; "Lead, Kindly Light (Johnson), Knickerbocker Quartet; invocation, Rev. J. S. Lee; "Abide With Me" (Liddle), Miss Eva Gruninger; eulogy, Fairfax H. Wheeler, Grand Trustee; "He Knows the Way" (Rubinstein), Louis Albert Larsen; "Our Deceased Brothers," V. H. deGanna, secretary, with accompaniment by F. Delleplane; "I Mourn as a Dove" (Benedict), Miss Virginia H. Fischer; memorial address, Governor Hiram Johnson; "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" (Brown), Misses Virginia H. Fischer and Eva Gruninger; "Flee as a Bird" (Dana), Frederic Purdy; benediction, Rev. J. S. Lee; funeral march (Beethoven), F. Delleplane.

Winter Season Successfully Opened.

Los Angeles—Los Angeles Parlor, No. 45, opened its winter season of activities with an "old timers' night," October 2nd, when over a hundred members of the Order were in attendance and spent a delightful evening, due, in no small measure, to the excellent arrangements of the Good of the Order committee. Early in the evening, there was initiation, which is a weekly feature nowadays, many candidates seeking admission to the Parlor. Later, whist was played, the five highest scoremakers receiving valuable prizes, and a sixth prize going to the one making the lowest score. Refreshments were served at the termination of the card-playing. It is the Parlor's intention, during the winter months, to devote one night each month to social features.

Good Roads Endorsed.

San Andreas—At the meeting of Calaveras Parlor, No. 67, October 1st, there was initiation, followed by a banquet at which good roads were given hearty endorsement. Past Grand President Hugh R. McNoble of Stockton was in attendance and delivered an interesting address.

Want Next Year's Celebration.

Sacramento—After thoroughly canvassing the situation among the merchants and promotion bodies, the local Parlors have been given such assurances of support that they will go before the Los Angeles Grand Parlor next April, and ask for the 1914 Admission Day celebration for this city. A joint committee, with H. E. Yardley as chairman, has been named to look after details.

Vallejo also wants the celebration, and inaugurated its campaign during the recent Oakland Admission Day festivities. The business men of that city have endorsed the project and Vallejo Parlor, No. 77, will make every effort to have that city designated as the place for holding the celebration.

In a Good Cause.

Petaluma—A committee consisting of Ed Butler, Carl Behrens, Warren Early, A. W. Horwege and Will Farrell has been named by Petaluma Parlor, No. 27, to arrange for a masquerade ball Thanksgiving Eve. The proceeds will go to the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Homeless Children's Agency.

Will Officially Visit.

Nevada City—Grand Trustee Jo V. Snyder has arranged his official visiting itinerary, and during President Getting Results.

Los Angeles—Never in the history of Ramona Parlor, No. 109, have the meetings been so well attended as during the past three months. Initiation is a weekly feature, and much enthusiasm is displayed. President Charles Thomas appears to have solved the question as to how to successfully conduct the Parlor, and during his regime there has been something doing each meeting night.

The night of October 10th, Grand President Thomas Monahan was a guest, witnessed the initiation of three candidates, and heard seventeen new applications read. He was highly pleased, complimented the officers on their exemplification of the ritual, and expressed his gratification at the results being obtained by Grand Organizer W. C. Taylor, his appointee, who is securing a large number of candidates for all the Parlors in this city.

Want to Maintain Lead.

Antioch—General Winn Parlor, No. 32, which, during the existence of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Homeless Children's Agency, has annually led every Parlor in the State in the amount of its contributions to the cause, will give a benefit for the Agency at the Belshaw theater, November 1st. It will be in the nature of a comedy, with a love story interwoven and strong scenes. Rehearsals have been in order for some time past, and those assuming the several roles have demonstrated complete ability. The Parlor hopes to maintain its lead as the largest contributor to the homeless children's cause, and there is every indication that it will be successful in its endeavors.

Many Members Greet Visitor.

Oroville—Grand Trustee James J. McElroy of

Oakland officially visited Argonaut Parlor, No. 8, October 2nd, and in addition to the large number of members present, was greeted by several members of Chico Parlor, No. 21. Following the Parlor session, a banquet was served, at which Past Grand President A. E. Jones presided as toastmaster, and responses were made by the Grand Trustee and several others.

New Members—Revived Interest.

Los Angeles—Owing to its small membership, La Fiesta Parlor, No. 236, seriously considered the question, a few months back, of consolidating with one of the larger Parlors, but a few faithful members decided to keep the organization intact until an organizer was put in the field. That the Parlor had a good foundation upon which to build, is demonstrated by the fact that Grand Organizer W. C. Taylor has filed more than forty applications for membership therein.

These candidates are being rapidly initiated, interest has revived, and La Fiesta Parlor is now well launched on the road to success. There is a good attendance at the meetings, a treasury is being accumulated, and the Good of the Order committee sees to it that the members are properly entertained each meeting night.

Indoor Picnic.

Oakland—For the benefit of its band and drum corps, Fruitvale Parlor, No. 252, will give an indoor picnic, November 15th, in Eagle Hall, Liese avenue and East Fourteenth street. George H. Hans will be master of ceremonies and floor manager, and will be assisted by Ray Felton, F. F. Dixon and W. H. Edwards. Other members of the committee in charge are C. Aikens, R. E. Reeves, F. E. Fraights, George Helmken, H. Graham, M. S. Hauser, I. S. Gracier, J. Mulrooney and E. Barthold. Whether it rains or shines, this picnic will be held, and being indoors no one will be inconvenienced even if the weather is wet.

All members of the Order are warned against a swindler claiming membership in Fresno Parlor, and borrowing "enough to help a brother who had been robbed to get back home."

He is young, 19 to 22 years of age; about five foot nine in height; stout, about 180 in weight; blue-eyed, with fair complexion, round-faced and red-cheeked; wore blue serge suit with soft black hat and old Bear Flag pin with most of enamel chipped off. He is fully familiar with the reserved work of the Order and has been giving the name of Watson.

Secretaries are asked to notify the members of their Parlors and if possible to have the notice given publicity in the local press.

FRED H. JUNG,
Grand Secretary, N.S.G.W.
San Francisco, October 1st.

Corona Initiates Four.

Los Angeles—At its meeting October 15th, Corona Parlor, No. 196, initiated four candidates, the ritual being very well exemplified by the officers. It was reported that the lot recently purchased for a clubhouse had been fully paid for, and it is hoped to soon erect a building thereon. Much interest was manifest in the "Days of '49 Festival," to be held from the 3rd to the 9th, and every one of the large number of members present volunteered to assist in making the affair a success. Following the Parlor session, refreshments were served and interesting remarks listened to.

Pig Banquet Draws Big Crowd.

Lodi—The sixth institution anniversary of Lodi Parlor, No. 15, was the greatest event in the Parlor's history, and was attended by delegations from Stockton, Tracy, Oakdale, Elk Grove and Galt, as well as by a large percentage of the Tokay City membership. Sixty members were in the Stockton Parlor quota; they were accompanied by the Parlor drum corps, and upon arrival marched to the meeting place.

During the evening, William Mitchell, born in California nearly a century ago—in 1864, to be exact,—was initiated into Lodi Parlor, the officers thereof exemplifying the ritual in a most impressive manner. Martin O. Schneider, president of Stockton Parlor, extended greetings to Lodi Parlor, and presented a handsome bouquet of chrysanthemums. A. J. Turner, the veteran secretary of Stockton Parlor, announced that National Parlor of San Francisco, the winner in the ritualistic contest, would exemplify the ritual at the Auditorium, Stockton, November 9th, and urged that all members of nearby Parlors be present. Plans were discussed for raising funds with which to participate in the Admission Day celebration at the 1915 Exposition in San Francisco.

To the strains of music from an orchestra, the assemblage then repaired to the banquet hall, where an excellent "pig" banquet was spread, and for which George Jahant, an enthusiastic native, had donated six fine porkers. Hilliard E. Welch presided as toastmaster, and there was a great flow of oratory. The committee that had the arrangements in charge consisted of F. H. McLachlan, F. A. Dougherty, B. C. Dougherty, and Victor Larson.

NATIONAL IS VICTOR IN FIRST RITUAL CONTEST

San Jose—At a ritualistic contest October 8th between San Jose Parlor, No. 22, N.S.G.W., and Santa Clara Parlor, No. 100, N.S.G.W., the former won with 810 points out of a possible 1000, and was therefore eligible to compete with the prize ritual team from San Francisco, National Parlor, No. 188, N.S.G.W., which came to this city October 11th in charge of Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung. National Parlor brought the Past President's Association cup, won in the San Francisco contest. The Board of Grand Officers, N.S.G.W., recently passed an order instructing the Grand Secretary to tour the State with the winning team in the San Francisco contest, and the visit to San Jose was the first on the itinerary.

Upon arrival here, the visitors were met at the depot by a committee from the three local Parlors of N.S.G.W.—San Jose 22, Garden City 82, and Observatory 177—and conveyed by automobile to Alum Rock Park, where they were shown all the interesting features by Park Commissioner Walter L. Chrisman, a member of the Order. On the return trip, the new county clubhouse and golf links were inspected. Dinner was served at 12 m.

At 2:30 p. m., Native Sons' Hall was crowded with local members of the Order and visitors from surrounding Parlors, to witness the exemplification of the ritual by the contending teams. San Jose Parlor, No. 22, initiated two regularly-elected candidates, after which National Parlor, No. 118, put on the work. While San Jose Parlor showed much improvement over the score of 810 made in the contest with Santa Clara Parlor, No. 100, the officers were unable to overcome the big lead of 961½ points made by National Parlor at San Francisco, and National was declared the victor. Following the exemplification, Grand Secretary Jung made an interesting and instructive address concerning the proper rendition of the Order's ritual.

The officers participating in the contest included: National Parlor, No. 118—Senior past president, Frank Bonivert; junior past president, K. J. Neumann; president, H. T. Ungwitter; first vice-president, F. M. Buckley; second vice-president, J. E. Kindelon; third vice-president, H. J. Galvert; marshal, G. V. Ellis; recording secretary, M. M. Ratigan; financial secretary, F. H. Jung; outside sentinel, W. E. Clarke; inside sentinel, R. D. Johnson; organist, Harold McCarthy. San Jose Parlor, No. 22—Senior past president, H. Hernandez; junior past president, William I. Geoffroy; president, Ernest Mathews; first vice-president, Lewis Rossi; second vice-president, William L. Biebrach; third vice-president, M. E. Griffith; marshal, B. Petersen; recording secretary, Joseph A. Belloli, Jr.; financial secretary, J. A. Anthes; organist, Harold McCarthy.

San Jose Parlor's team was composed of the regularly-elected officers. The judges passing upon the Parlor's work were: Jas. F. Stanley, financial secretary Past Presidents' Association; D.D.G.P. Fred Senk, D.D.G.P. Frank Bonivert, Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung, all of San Francisco. Wm. Melander, president of the Past Presidents' Association, was also in attendance.

CALIFORNIA.

California, beloved land, how rich thy virgin soil;
Sun-kist and strangely beautiful thy vales;
Tall mountains rise above thy shores, great valleys lie between,
And over all thy golden haze, Pacific Ocean's queen.

The ocean roars along thy shore, a lover at thy feet,
And ever as its billows roll in eadence low and sweet,
It sings a song of many lands, but none so fair as thine,
And vine-clad hills thy mantle are, whence come thy purple wine.

In flowing robes, thou damsel fair, you trail the whole year through,
And jewels bright thy poppies are, of richest golden hue,
While lilies fair and roses rare in such profusion are,
Nature sits amid the scene as if outvalued far.

And beneath the surface of this flower be-jeweled land,
The riches that Aladdin found are there with lavish hand;
While o'er the plain the golden grain waves richly to and fro;
And with the weight of luscious fruits, thy trees are hended low.

If there's a land more beautiful it must be Paradise,—
The land we're journeying onward to with eager, longing eyes.
A saintly race before us came and blessed this glorious land,—
The early Spanish padres, a noble Christian band.

Contrary to popular belief, forest fires seldom travel more than two or three miles an hour. Even in extreme cases it is questionable whether they burn at a rate of more than six to ten miles an hour.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

Is Shown Santa Clara Valley.

San Jose—Grand President Allison F. Watt of Grass Valley officially visited Vendome Parlor, No. 100, September 29th. In the afternoon she was taken for an automobile tour of Santa Clara Valley, and in the evening was the guest of honor at supper at a local hotel where Mayor Thomas Monahan, Grand President of the N.S.G.W., was the only representative of the "other sex." Following this, the Grand President attended the Parlor meeting, and presided at the installation ceremonies. She was here presented with a handsome hand-painted cake-plate. A large number of members attended the meeting, which terminated with an informal banquet.

Entertain Pioneers.

Salinas—Many pioneer residents of Salinas and vicinity were the guests, September 27th, of Aleli Parlor, No. 102, N.D.G.W., and Santa Lucia Parlor, No. 97, N.S.G.W. The hall was prettily decorated, yellow being the predominating color, and a sumptuous banquet, prepared by the Native Daughters, was spread. Following this, there was an interesting program of musical numbers and recitations, as well as addresses by many of the visitors. Frank J. Fontes of Santa Lucia Parlor delivered an oration, while S. M. Shearer read an original poem, "I'm Growing Old." The remainder of the day was spent in social intercourse and in recounting stories of early-day experiences. The success of the undertaking, which is an annual affair, was largely due to the following committee of Aleli Parlor: Mrs. J. H. Gross, Miss Minnie McCormick, Mrs. James Macquoid, Mrs. J. Thompson, Mrs. James H. Riley, Mrs. Henry Storm, Miss Mary McFadden, Mrs. Sarah Martin and Miss Annie Austin.

Successful Anniversary Ball.

Jamestown—Anona Parlor, No. 164, gave its fifth anniversary ball, September 27th, and the affair was a grand social and financial success. The ball was tastefully decorated, and crowded to its utmost capacity with visitors from all parts of the county. Fine music was provided, and at midnight a supper was served, dancing continuing thereafter until the early morning hours.

Entertains Sister Parlor.

Oroville—Gold of Ophir Parlor, No. 190, had as its guests, October 1st, many members of Marysville Parlor, No. 162, who motored over. D.D.G.P. Mabel K. Richards of Marysville was the honored guest. The ball was beautifully decorated, poppies being used profusely. Following the business session, a banquet was served, the tables being prettily decorated in a color scheme of gold and white.

Welcome Visiting Member.

San Luis Obispo—There was an informal meeting of San Luisita Parlor, No. 108, October 9th, at the home of Mrs. H. H. Carpenter, the purpose being to meet again an old member of the Parlor, Mrs. Yancy McFadden, who has been on a visit to this city from her home in Imperial Valley. A delightful afternoon was spent, refreshments being served.

Has Mothers as Guests.

San Francisco—Orinda Parlor, No. 56, held its first winter whist party at Eagle building, September 26th, Miss F. Edwards and Mrs. Bodie, having the highest scores, being awarded handsome prizes.

Don't blame The Grizzly Bear, if your Parlor affairs are not mentioned in these columns.

If fault is to be found with anyone for such omission, it is yourself.

The space in The Grizzly Bear is at the disposal of the Subordinate Parlors.

But you must supply the news, if you would have it printed herein.

Our only restriction is that copy must be in the office of publication not later than the 20th of each month.

THREE GENERATIONS AT ORINDA'S BANQUET.
Sitting—Mrs. Henry Hock, her mother.

Sunday afternoon, the Parlor celebrated in honor of the mothers with a banquet which was greatly enjoyed by every one of the forty-nine present.

Twelve mothers responded to the invitation—Mesdames Hock, Tosney, Beban, Johnson, Britschgi, Dunn, Friedlander, Dellwig, Ostboff, Worms, Roeder, and Mrs. Watts (who is also a Pioneer, having been in San Francisco since 1852). Three generations were represented in the persons of Mrs. Leonard Britschgi, president of the Parlor, her mother, Mrs. Henry Hock, and her daughter, Miss Verena Britschgi. Mrs. Matilda Hayden, grandmother of Miss Matilda Gilfillan, Mrs. Abbie Hayes, adopted mother of two of the Parlor members, Miss F. M. Edwards, D.D.G.P., and Mrs. R. Kemp Van Ee were invited guests. This was the largest attended of any similar occasion, and the success of the affair proves the truth of the saying, "The more, the merrier."

Those in attendance included: Mesdames I. P. Beban, Elizabeth Johnson, Edna Johnson Bishop, Henry Hock, Leonard Britschgi, Kate Watts, J. J. Cordy, Margaret Dunn, Abbie Hayes, Rebecca Friedlander, J. J. Gerran, Matilda Hayden, C. Osterhoff, W. V. Stolte, J. J. Neely, Blanche M. Steppenson, Annie Tosney, Roeder, H. C. Vogt, Helene Worms, Rebecca Kemp Van Ee; Misses Genevieve Beban, Adeline Johnson, Verena Britschgi, Nellie H. Dunn, Anna A. Gruber, Matilda Gilfillan, Martha Dellwig, Emma Dellwig, Essie Kragen, Elizabeth Osterhoff, Alma Reimers, May J. Tosney, Irene Worms, Frances M. Edwards; Master Paul Daly, Baby Rose Mary Sage; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Daly, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. I. Goodfellow, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. F. Foley, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Dellwig, Mr. and Mrs. Main, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sage.

Grand President Presents Flag.

Middletown—The past month has been a busy one for members of Clear Lake Parlor, No. 135. October 1st, Grand President Allison F. Watt of Grass Valley paid an official visit and was greeted by practically the entire membership. Realizing that it is no easy matter to travel the mountain roads by day and keep late hours at night on account of midnight banquets, Mrs. Watt was entertained at supper at a local hotel prior to the meeting.

The following day, a large number of the Parlor members gathered at the schoolhouse to present the school with a Bear flag. The Grand President, in a very pleasing address which held the attention of every pupil, presented the flag; she impressed upon her auditors the necessity for love of country, for the Stars and Stripes, and for our own glorious State and the Bear flag.

Miss Anna F. Lacy.

In the account of the passing of Past Grand President Anna F. Lacy published in last month's issue, the following was inadvertently omitted from the tribute of Past Grand President Mariana Bertola, M.D.—(Editor):

Miss Lacy served her own Parlor, Las Lomas, No. 72, well and faithfully, for years acting as secretary, after having passed through all the chairs. In the Past Presidents' Association, she was always a power for good, advocating all measures that would reflect honor upon the N.D.G.W. She wrote the greater part of their beautiful ritual, her pen being ever able to transfer to others the beautiful thoughts that were hers. The Board of Relief of the Grand Parlor lost a valuable member when she left us. Always ready, ever faithful, her service will be greatly missed by every member. She held the work of the Board of Relief close to her heart, and her prophetic soul saw this, the greatest and grandest work of the Order.

Pioneers Guests of Honor.

San Jose—The annual reception of San Jose Parlor, No. 81, and Vendome Parlor, No. 100, to the Pioneers of Santa Clara County, was held October 11th, and was largely attended. The reception hall was elaborately decorated with Bear and American flags, poppies, cosmos and smilax, and the program of entertainment, under charge of Mrs. W. H. Carmichael, chairman of the joint committee, was full of interesting features and well received.

"America," sung by the audience, opened the exercises, following which Miss Rena Medici, secretary of San Jose Parlor, rendered a piano solo, and Mrs. Margaret A. Gilleran, president of the Parlor, delivered a welcoming address. Splendid exhibitions of folk dancing were given by girls from the Lincoln and Grant schools, W. Rogers and Glennon Plamondon entertained with solos, and Maxine Cox and Irene Ynostroza contributed a piano duet. A graceful tribute to "Our Honored Pioneers" was delivered by Mrs. Ray Plamondon, president of Vendome Parlor.

J. Z. Anderson, president of the Pioneers, in appreciation for the many courtesies extended them, presented the Native Daughters with an immense bouquet of beautiful chrysanthemums, and spoke of the great love and admiration the Pioneers held for the Native Daughters. The gift was accepted by Mrs. Carmichael in a pleasing speech.

The banquet hall was then invaded, and here all the season's delicacies were houtifully provided. Short speeches, of an historical nature, were made by J. Z. Anderson, Andrew P. Hill, Mrs. Laura J. Watkins, A. R. Woodhams, Mrs. Andrew P. Hill and Judge Black.

The members of the joint committee of Native Daughters in charge of the reception were: San Jose Parlor, No. 81—Mrs. Margaret A. Gilleran, Mrs. Laura Gilleran, Mrs. J. A. Belloli, Jr., Mrs. Ellen Bennett. Vendome Parlor, No. 100—Mrs. W. H. Carmichael, Mrs. Ray Plamondon, Mrs. Mary F. Mitchell, Miss Tillie Brohaska.

Opening of N.D.G.W. Home.

San Francisco—Friday evening, October 10th, the N.D.G.W. Home was formally opened at 555 Baker street, about 300 guests being present. A fine program was presented, as follows: Miss Nan Cary, song; Misses Dolan and Maggini, piano duet; Miss Caradonna, song; Mrs. Ilsey, recitations; Mr. Hynes, piano selections. Addresses were made by Grand President Allison F. Watt, Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Vice-president May C. Boldemaun, Grand Trustee Addie Mosher, Grand Inside Sentinel Mary Bell, Grand Outside Sentinel Dora Bloom, Miss Irwin, and Mrs. H. M. Greene, one of the original members of the Board of Relief, who has been a great worker for the cause.

The Home was beautifully decorated with flowers, huckleberry and oak leaves, and refreshments were served. Many telegrams and letters of congratulation were received. The success of the evening was due to Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Greene, Mrs. Steinhach, Miss Douglass, Miss McGough and Dr. Bertola, members of the Board who are in the city.

The Home is now in need of a capable working housekeeper. The Board prefers that she be a Native Daughter. Any Native Daughter desiring to avail herself of the privileges of the Home must present credentials from her Parlor. Any Native Daughter who desires to spend a few days in San Francisco is welcome at the Home as a transient guest.

WHERE THE GOLDEN POPPIES GROW. (Dedicated to the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W.) (Copyrighted by the Author.)

As in distant lands I wonder
Far from those to me so dear,
I sit and sadly ponder
Life to me seems sad and drear,
As the pictures come before me
And my thoughts will come and go,
I long for California,
Where the Golden Poppies grow.

'Tis no matter where I travel,
Or where I chance to go,
To me there's hut one country
Where the Golden Poppies grow.
God planted them and blessed them
With His sunshine's gentle glow,
And the zephyrs always sing there
Where the Golden Poppies grow.

There are many other countries,
God made them all I know,
But in dear old California
He made Golden Poppies grow.
The good Lord must have loved us
And loved us well you know,
For He gave us His own country
Where the Golden Poppies grow.

On the hills of California
And in her valleys low,
Where the sun is always shining
And the gentle breezes blow,
Where the birds are always singing,
Where her pretty rivers flow—
My own dear California,
Where the Golden Poppies grow.

—FRED A. CAMPBELL.

Army hayonets now form part of the emergency telephone outfits of forest rangers, used chiefly in fighting fires. This emergency line consists of small instruments and a coil of fine copper wire. The wire is attached to the nearest telephone line, the hayonet is thrust into the moist ground at the other end, and with the circuit thus completed the ranger can talk with headquarters, report his position, and summon fire fighters if necessary.

The Passing of the Pioneer

Mrs. Jaue Singley, who came to California in 1850 and took up her residence in Petaluma, passed away at that city, October 2nd, survived by five children. She was a native of Peru, aged 91 years. Deceased had seen Petaluma grow from a village of shacks to an important city; there all her children were reared, and there she was beloved by every resident, all of whom recognized the sterling qualities of this Pioneer Mother.

Theodore Rimpau, who came to California in 1848, died at Anaheim, Orange County, October 4th, survived by eight children. Following the gold rush days in the northern part of the State, deceased went to Los Angeles and invested heavily in real estate, from which he accumulated great wealth. He was a native of Germany, aged 87 years.

Mrs. Phoebe A. Dinning, who came to California with her parents in 1846, passed away September 25th near St. Helena, on the farm which had been her home for more than sixty years. She was a native of New York, aged nearly 81 years, and is survived by five children, seventeen grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. In 1863, deceased was wedded to William Dinning, who died in 1888.

A. H. Lawton, who came to California in 1849, died September 22nd at Huntington Beach, Orange County, at the age of 93 years. A son survives.

Henry Spear Williams, the last of a family of nine children who crossed the plains in 1852 and settled in Watsonville, died near Cambria, San Luis Obispo County, September 16th. In 1863, at Watsonville, he was wedded to Miss Cynthia Ann Smith who, with eight children, survives. In 1882 the family moved to Fresno County, going thence, in 1884, to San Luis Obispo County. Deceased was a native of Missouri, aged 78 years.

Vineut J. Chamberlin, who came to California in 1852, died September 29th on a farm near Capay, Yolo County, where he had resided the past eighteen years. He was a native of Ohio, aged 81 years, and is survived by a widow and son.

Mrs. Mary Lewis Holloway, who came across the plains to California in 1849, passed away near Willow Grove, Sonoma County, September 17th. She was one of those Pioneer Mothers who came here as a child, reared a family, and did much to better conditions in this great Commonwealth. She was a native of Missouri, aged 72 years, and is survived by eight children.

Amos Fisher, who came to California in 1852 and for many years resided at Marysville, died there September 19th. He was a native of Pennsylvania, aged 82 years, and is survived by three daughters.

Michael Baldridge, who came to California in 1851, died recently at Pomona, survived by a widow. Deceased had mined in Tuolumne and Trinity Counties, and had engaged in mercantile pursuits in San Jose and San Francisco, being a charter member of the Pacific stock exchange in the latter city. In 1882, he took up his residence in Pomona. He was a native of New York, aged 87 years.

William F. Friesike, who came to California in 1851, died recently at Sacramento, where he had made his home continuously. He was a native of Germany, aged 82 years, and is survived by two children.

J. H. Slater, who came to California in 1848, died at East San Jose, October 7th, survived by a widow. He was a native of Illinois, aged 81 years.

Mercedes Lugo Foster, who was born in Los Angeles County September 13, 1803, passed away at Los Angeles, October 11th, survived by two children, twenty-seven grandchildren, eighteen great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren. Practically all of deceased's one hundred and ten years of existence had been spent in Los Angeles County—the greater part in the city of Los Angeles—and she witnessed the wonderful developments that have there taken place. Mrs. Foster was the daughter of Don Antonio Maria Lugo, who was born at San Antonio de Padua Mission in 1775 and whose land holdings were enormous. In early life, she was wedded to Juan Peres, and after his demise became the wife of Stephen C. Foster, who was elected alcalde of the pueblo of Los Angeles in 1847 and became the first mayor of Los Angeles City.

Perry Clark Gabbert, who came across the plains in 1850, died at San Andreas, October 4th, survived by nine children. Deceased's family first settled in San Joaquin County, and there he is said to have plowed, with an ox team, the first furrow ever turned in that county; later they went to Tuolumne County, and in 1855 went to Calaveras County, where he had engaged in ranching and stock-raising. He was a native of Missouri, aged 71 years.

Ezekiel I. Barra, who came to California via the Horn in 1850 and settled in San Francisco, died there, October 10th. He was a native of Spain, aged 88 years. Deceased wrote several interesting books, of which "The Tale of the Two Oceans" is the best known.

Thomas Murphy, who came to California via the Isthmus in 1849, and for a number of years engaged in mining, died, October 4th, near Latrobe, El Dorado County, where he had resided since 1872. He was a native of Ireland, aged 80 years, and is survived by a widow and seven children.

In Memoriam

GEORGE T. HESSER.

At a regular meeting of Granite Parlor, No. 83, N.S.G.W., Folsom, the following resolutions, prepared by a committee made up of Raymond Curry, John F. Leonard and R. D. McFarland were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Death has removed from our midst our beloved friend and brother, George T. Hesser; and

Whereas, The loss of this member will be keenly felt by this Parlor, for the welfare of which he had given so much time and effort; by the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West, in the ranks of which he was recognized as an influential member; by the community, in which he was so highly regarded for his many admirable traits and for his devotion to duty both as a citizen and in his chosen profession; and

Whereas, We deeply and sincerely mourn the death of this loyal Native Son and public-spirited citizen; be it

Resolved, That we hereby extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement; that our charter be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days in token of our sorrow; that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and that the same be published in The Grizzly Bear and in the Folsom "Telegraph."

MRS. CLARA GIROUX.

Mrs. Clara Giroux, a charter member of Placer Parlor, No. 138, N.D.G.W., Lincoln, passed away at Roseville, September 17th. The deceased was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Toftt. The funeral was held from the home of her parents at Lincoln, services being conducted by the Native Daughters. Mrs. Giroux was born and raised in Lincoln, and leaves to mourn her loss her parents, one brother and two sisters. The deceased was of a modest and retiring disposition, was kind and affable, and will be missed by a large circle of friends. The body was laid to rest in the I.O.O.F. cemetery, Lincoln, amid many beautiful flowers.

MISS MAY WADDELL.

Miss May Waddell, a member of Placer Parlor, No. 138, N.D.G.W., Lincoln, passed away at her home at Napa, September 11th, having been in poor health for some time. The remains were taken to Wheatland for interment. She was formerly a teacher in the public schools of Yuba and Placer Counties, and at one time lived in Lincoln. She was a most estimable young woman and is affectionately remembered by her many friends in Lincoln. She is survived by a mother and two brothers.

NATIVE SONS LOSE ONE WHO GAVE MUCH TO THE ORDER.

Dr. George Turner Hesser, a member of Granite Parlor, No. 83, N.S.G.W., Folsom, died in San Francisco, September 22nd, from the effects of an operation, at the age of 50 years. He is survived by a widow and four children—Roblee, Charlotte, Elizabeth and Janice Hesser; a mother, Mrs. Mary Hesser; a brother, Charles W. Hesser, and a sister, Mrs. Wayne Yarrick.

Dr. Hesser was well and favorably known in the Order of Native Sons, where he had been an active worker, both in his Subordinate and the Grand Parlor for many years. He was a past president of Granite Parlor, and had frequently been a delegate to the Grand Parlor and served on important committees thereof.

Dr. Hesser was a man of strong likes and dislikes, but was as faithful a friend as any man ever possessed. For some time past, he had been in poor health, and his close acquaintances noticed at the recent Oroville Grand Parlor that he was rapidly failing. Always of a cheery disposition, he uttered no words of complaint, but bore his burden silently. In his death, the Order has lost a valued member, and one whose every act was for the up-building of the fraternity and for the moral advancement of the State and the community in which he had so long practiced his profession. Of a retiring disposition, Dr. Hesser never shirked a duty imposed upon him, and it can be truthfully said of him that he acted well and conscientiously his part upon this earth, than which no man can do more.—C. M. H.

MOST WORTHY WORK OF ANY FRATERNAL ORDER

The work of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West, in finding homes for California's homeless children, is going on apace and has elicited the commendation of those in a position to know the need of such endeavors. The past month, Parlors of both Orders throughout the State have been giving entertainments, the proceeds of which go toward carrying on this work. The home finding is in direct charge of a Central Agency of both Orders, with offices in the Phelan building, San Francisco, presided over by Miss Mary E. Brusie, the secretary.

There are on file in the Central Agency many letters expressing approval of the work in hand, which is unique among fraternal orders, and praise for the thorough and impartial manner in which the home finding is carried on. One of these letters, recently received from Wm. M. Finch, Superior Judge of Glenn County, at whose instigation the Agency found homes for two little girls, is herewith reproduced:

Willows, California, Aug. 28, 1913.

Miss Mary E. Brusie, Secretary Central Committee on Homeless Children, N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W., San Francisco, California—My Dear Miss Brusie: I am very much pleased with your success in placing the two little girls.

I am not a native of the State, and hence not eligible to membership in the Order of Native Sons, though I am member of several fraternal orders. While other orders may or may not be superior to the Native Sons and Native Daughters in some respects, I am convinced that, in its far-reaching effect, your placing of homeless children in desirable homes is the most worthy work ever undertaken by any fraternal order.

I am inclined to think that the general public have little knowledge of the work you are doing for the children, and that those who do know have not come to appreciate fully the superiority of your method of handling the children over that of the ordinary home-finding society.

Sincerely,
WM. M. FINCH.

DOING GOOD WORK.

San Jose—The five local Parlors—San Jose, No. 22, Observatory, No. 177, and Garden City, No. 82, N.S.G.W., and San Jose, No. 81, and Vendome, No. 100, N.D.G.W.—have formed a joint committee to further the interests of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Children's Agency. Much good work has been done in this community, and several children are under supervision. A grand ball and entertainment is to be given towards the middle of November for the benefit of the cause, and the arrangements committee is hard at work and anticipates a grand success.

THE STATE HIGHWAY.

(A Thought for the Native Sons and the Chambers of Commerce.)

To the Editor of The Grizzly Bear—Dear Sir: Now that the construction of the State Highway is well under way, why not begin to plan for its beautification as well? A thought has come to me which may be taken up and still further enlarged. It is to mark the course of the State Highway with distinctive trees and flowers.

If there is a particular tree that will thrive in all parts of California, let it be planted along the roadway on both sides. If this is not possible, select those trees that will grow well in the various locations. The acacia has been suggested. This has a yellow flower, the State's color; but I do not know whether it will thrive in all parts of the State. Where trees are already planted, they need not be disturbed.

In the background along the railroad and other fences plant some bright flowery plant that does not require much cultivation. In a few years the State would have a distinctly marked boulevard extending from one end to the other, and one which could be admired by all travelers.

STATE SCHOOL APPORTIONMENTS SHOW INTERESTING CONDITIONS.

Sacramento—Edward Hyatt, Superintendent of Public Instruction, has apportioned $2,659,750 to the primary and grammar schools of the State, and $295,090.68 to the high schools. This is the first allowance for the present school year.

In the elementary list, the highest allotments go to the following counties, based on number of teachers allowed on attendance June 30th: Los Angeles, $530,102.50; San Francisco, $299,750; Alameda, $222,905; Fresno, $108,747.50; San Diego, $89,377.50; Santa Clara, $84,005. These six counties receive more than one-half the total allotment, Los Angeles County alone being entitled to one-fifth of the whole State allowance.

In the high school list, the following counties lead with a daily attendance as noted: Los Angeles, 12,939; Alameda, 4,458; San Francisco, 3,364; Santa Clara, 1,842; Fresno, 1,484; San Bernardino, 1,342. More than one-half the high school attendants of the State (42,852 on June 30th) went to school in these six counties, Los Angeles County's average being thirty per cent of the whole.

In an experimental test track near Janesville, Wisconsin, an inspection just made showed that hemlock and tamarack ties put in the track without preservative treatment were decayed after five and one-half years' service. Those which had been treated were practically as good as when first laid.

SAM BROWN'S PASSING

During one of these "spells" he was standing against the bar of one of Virginia's principal saloons when Sam Brown entered. A mutual nod of recognition passed between them, and then, "Have a drink, Sam?" Sam, himself partially loaded, lined up to the bar and they drank, and for some time engaged in friendly conversation. Then they drank again, as often men do, until both were full. Then they became confidential. "Sam," said the lesser Brown, "you and I understand each other. You have a reputation as a damned hard man—a fighter—but, Sam, let me whisper in your ear: Don't you never run up agin me; I ain't the kind of game you fellers are lookin' for. Now you just remember that, Sam, and steer clear of me." "Oh, I guess you ain't half so dangerous as you think you are," Sam sneeringly replied. "Well," continued the lesser Brown, "you got your warning, and it ain't necessary for me to tell you any more."

Nor was it any use, nor did Sam wait for "any more"; he simply drew his howie knife and plunged it into Brown's side and kept turning it in the bole as he shoved him along to the end of the bar, where he dropped limp and dying, to the floor. Sam was too drunk and indifferent to run away, but threw himself on a billiard table and went to sleep. During the early morning hours his friends roused and helped him to the barn and astride of his horse and he headed away towards Carson Valley. Enroute he called at Carson City and Genoa and finally hauled up at Van Sickle's hotel, about three miles above. Here he alighted and walked up to the bar and ordered a drink.

Van was behind the bar and served him, though he felt uneasy, as he saw Sam was drunk. Sam emptied his glass and set it down heavily on the counter, looked Van straight in the eye, and belched out, "Van, I killed a ———— last night in Virginia City and I've a notion to cut your heart out." Van cast a glance at his loaded shotgun, at the end of the bar. Sam saw the move and, quick as thought, jerked his pistol. Van saw that he was cut off from his gun, dodged below the counter and out the open door of the dining-room that was at the other end, and then out into another room, thus escaping before Sam could get a shot at him.

Sam, fearing Van might come back shooting, jumped on his horse and rode rapidly off up the valley. Scarcely was he out of sight when Hank Lufkin rode up and hearing the facts said, "Get your horse, Van, and let's go after him." Promptly they mounted their horses and were in hot pursuit. Inquiring of a resident a couple of miles beyond if he had seen Brown and his white horse they were informed: "Yes, he rode in here and inquired the way to Lute Old's place. I told him it was about four miles further up the valley, and he called me a liar and acted as though he wanted to pull his gun. I dodged into the house for my rifle, but he was two hundred yards down the road when I got it, and I let him go."

Lute Old's house stood on one side of the main road and his barn on the other. Van and Lufkin rode up and learned that Sam had not been there, and presuming, rightly, that in his drunken condition he had missed his way but would come in when sobered, they took positions to await his coming—Lufkin on the front porch and Van Sickle just inside the stable door. About midnight they heard the hoof beats of an approaching horse, and a few minutes later Sam rode directly up to the stable. Van threw open the door and remarking, "I've got you now," emptied his shotgun into Sam's body and he tumbled from his horse flat on his back. Raising himself on his elbow, muttering curses and grinding his teeth as he struggled to reach his pistol, Lufkin ran across the road and seeing Sam still alive, placed his pistol to the desperado's head and finished him.

There was general rejoicing when it became known that the much-feared and notoriously bad man was dead. Van Sickle received the congratulations of his friends, and an honorable acquittal.

were loose enough to allow any couple to wed, they were leaving the State for this purpose. On finding their daughter gone, the parents took a wiser view of the matter and wired Marshal J. B. Hume to have them return and be forgiven. The couple had departed, but the marshal rode after and overtook them at Smith's Flat on their way Nevada ward. On making known his errand, the husband-to-be turned to the wife-to-be and asked: "Mary, what shall

HANGTOWN WILL LIVE AGAIN

--LOS ANGELES, NOVEMBER 3RD TO 9TH--

(BY THE GRIZZLY.)

NYONE AT ALL ACQUAINTED with the early history of California, is familiar with the old settlement of Hangtown, which was, perhaps, the best-known and most-famous of all the mining centers during the days of old, the days of gold, the days of '49. It was situated in El Dorado County, and later grew into the mountain city of Placerville and became the county seat.

El Dorado County was, in 1848, in the world's mind, for it was there, at Coloma, that James W. Marshall made the historic gold find that set the great caravan of gold-seekers moving California ward. The destination of hundreds of them was the spot where the prosperous mining town of Hangtown sprang into being, and it became the abiding place during the gold days of many of the State's noted characters.

Today one can, from a perusal of California history, see in his mind's eye the famed Hangtown of old, with all the appurtenances in the way of saloons, gambling houses, dance hall, hotel, general store, etc., that made up the early-day mining center. But with all its fame, Hangtown could not we do?" Mary pondered a few minutes and replied, "Let's go back to Dad." And they went.

Negress Accused of Witchcraft.

At Marysville, a couple arrived November 5th from a nearby mining town to get married. Either through absent-mindedness of the groom or a misunderstanding on the part of the county clerk, the marriage license issued contained the name of a woman other than the bride-to-be. The error was unnoticed by the minister who solemnized the wedding that evening. In the morning, at the hotel breakfast table, the groom, reading the morning paper, saw the announcement of his marriage. Getting the marriage license out of his pocket to compare with the bride's name printed in the paper, he was thunderstruck to see the name thereon not that of the woman he had been married to. In an excited tone he almost gasped to his bride: "Maria, I am married to the wrong woman!" "Never mind, Jerry," she calmly replied, "it's too late to fret now."

Mrs. Harriet Kalisher was divorced in San Francisco on the afternoon of November 2nd. Simon Kalisher, after fifteen years of wedded life, had become cruel to her. That evening there was a knock on her front door and on opening it she saw Simon standing there smiling as of yore. He entered and seating himself in the parlor he made love with his old-time zest, so that at 9 p.m. Harriet consented to be his bride again. A license was obtained and they were husband and wife again before 11 p.m.

An old negro woman left Sonora on the stage November 10th, bound for San Francisco. She had the reputation, among her people, of being a witch. She was accused by them of habitually sprinkling salt across the paths of the people she did not like to bring them bad luck and was blamed for succeeding in her designs. When she was seen aboard the stage a commotion arose amongst the colored population, quite a number gathering around, and all were earnest in their predictions of bad luck on the trip. The old negress smiled and said nothing, but the trip of the stage was one beset with accidents. A short distance from Sonora a thoroughbrace broke and delayed the stage. After moving a few miles further, something broke and suddenly stripped a horse of its harness. This pieced, after moving a while one of the horses fell and broke a leg. Another horse, after some delay, was obtained and this animal, before reaching Stockton, fell and broke one of its legs. The stage finally reached Stockton with driver and passengers thoroughly aroused and believing the old negress to be in league with the devil. She got aboard the steamer for San Francisco with many people believing it would blow up before she got off.

A miner named Duff Green appeared in Colusa this month from Indian Valley, some forty miles distant, with specimens of ore that were almost pure copper. A wild excitement at once broke out and everybody who could depart left the town to locate claims. In two days over two hundred locators were staking out the country, and Will S. Green, then county surveyor, was surveying a townsite. A piece of ore weighing ten pounds, picked up on the lode, contained nine pounds of copper. This specimen set all doubts as to the richness of the find at rest.

stand the test of Time, and it eventually passed into obscurity, and then ceased to exist, except in memory.

But Hangtown is to be resurrected! Far from its peaceful abiding place in El Dorado County, it will rise, with all its "business" houses in active operation, in the very center of Los Angeles, the wonder city of today which, when Hangtown was enjoying the heyday of its prosperity, was practically unknown.

The Native Sons and Native Daughters of the southern city have secured the old postoffice building at the corner of Seventh and Grand avenue for a Days of '49 Festival, which will feature Hangtown, and there the street of the old town will teem with humanity the nights of November 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th.

While none of the 1913 Hangtown residents underwent the trials to reach California that its early-day residents endured, they are just as loyal to the State, are deeply interested in its early history, and consequently will be glad of an opportunity to tread Hangtown's street, view its business houses, and participate in the amusements that attracted the '49ers.

Los Angeles has gained the reputation of successfully promoting the most unique and most attractive amusement features of any city in the world, but the reproduction of Hangtown will eclipse all past efforts. No projected enterprise of the kind has aroused the interest of the residents of the southland as has the bare announcement that a Days of '49 Festival will be an attraction the week of November 3rd.

The promoters of the undertaking have given every detail careful consideration, and promise a reproduction so true to the original that, were any of the El Dorado County Hangtown residents to drop in to the resurrected town in the City of Angels, they would imagine themselves again living in the days of '49.

The festival is being given for the purpose of raising funds with which to entertain the Grand Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, which will meet in Los Angeles the week of April 17, 1914, and which will unquestionably be the largest attended Grand Parlor session in the history of the Order.

Los Angeles has also gained an enviable reputation as an entertainer, and in order to maintain that reputation by properly entertaining the thousands who will be the city's guests that week, it is incumbent upon every Native Son and Native Daughter resident thereof to give the Days of '49 Festival his or her best moral and financial support.

During the week of festivity, nights will be set aside for the special entertainment of various societies, the opening night, Monday, November 3rd, being designated Native Sons', Native Daughters' and Pioneers' night. This should be the banner night, in point of attendance, for who is more interested in early California history than the Native Son, the Native Daughter and the Pioneer?

Every Native Son and Native Daughter in Los Angeles is especially appealed to to get behind this enterprise, for upon its success depends, largely, the progress of these two Orders in the southern city. A few members have devoted unlimited time and much money to the success of the undertaking, and the general membership should encourage those efforts and aid the cause by turning out en masse to the festival.

But don't let your endeavors cease there. Tell all your friends about the '49 Festival, and get them to attend. You can depend upon it that they will be fittingly entertained, and will thank you for securing their attendance.

While the underlying motive in giving this festival is to raise funds, the small admission fee of twenty-five cents can be honestly credited to educational purposes, for in reproducing Hangtown, the promoters are making it possible for everyone to become thoroughly familiar with conditions as they existed in the early-day mining communities. And by gazing upon an exact reproduction of the most noted of all these '49 centers of California civilization—Hangtown—with all its amusing and startling features, one can gain a fund of knowledge that he could not obtain from any other source.

Remember, Los Angeles Native Sons and Native Daughters, the occasion—Days of '49 Festival; the dates—November 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th; and the place—Seventh and Grand avenue. Tickets, entitling the holder to admission any night during the week, can be had at The Grizzly Bear office, 248 Wilcox building.

A BANK WHERE PERSONAL SERVICE IS A HOBBY

Such a bank is one with which it is extremely desirable for you to do business.

The big capitalist doesn't have to seek personal service in a bank, he doesn't have to seek the extra little courtesies and considerations which go to make up what we understand by Service. The very amount of his deposit, the size of his account, guarantees him such personal attention and courtesy. It is the small merchant, the savings depositor, the man who is trying hard to increase an account that to him seems inadequate, who needs that strong, personal, helpful element in banking service.

And he gets it here, invariably!

WHAT IS TO BE YOUR LIFE WORK?

Are you a floater, leaving to chance to determine what shall be your occupation, or are you preparing yourself by a good common school education, for greater service to the world and greater independence for yourself?

The laws of California and other Western states are gradually fixing increased requirements as to high school and college education for those who are planning to supply the professions of the State.

Skilled service is more and more in demand with each year and the person who is better equipped, is the one who will outstrip his fellows in the race. Los Angeles College of Osteopathy offers to send its catalogue and illustrated souvenir to any young man or woman who is seriously thinking of following the profession of a physician.

In a year more, a high school diploma will be required from every beginning student and after two years, not only a high school diploma, but an additional year of college grade work in certain studies, as preliminary requirements.

NOW IS THE TIME TO ACT

Every study which is given in the best medical colleges of America is given in its fullness in this institution. Its graduates go out to successful practice in every state in the Union and Canada, England, Ireland, Scotland and other countries. Seven of their graduates are doing medical missionary work in foreign countries, including India, Mexico, China and South Africa.

SERRA MONUMENT DEDICATION IN PETRA, MAJORCA

(Personal Experiences of C. E. CHAPMAN, Native Son Traveling Fellow in Pacific Coast History.)

NOVEMBER 24, 1713, FATHER Junipero Serra was born at Petra, Majorca. In honor of the event the inhabitants of Petra and other towns of Majorca, under the leadership of Father Francisco Torrens of Petra, collected funds for a monument to Serra in his native town, and proposed to celebrate its dedication with appropriate ceremonies. The date for the celebration was set for September 28th, owing to the likelihood of inclement weather on November 24th, the birth-date of Father Serra.

The writer, who as Native Son of the Golden West Travelling Fellow has been pursuing investigations in the history of California at the Archivo de Indias, Seville, Spain, was directed by the authorities at the University of California to attend the dedication ceremonies as its representative. Owing to the change in date which did not become known until the month of September itself, time was lacking for the delivery of full instructions. However, Acting-President Barrows of the University sent him the following cablegram:

"University of California extends congratulations to the people of Majorca on the anniversary of the birth of Father Serra. Appoint you its representative." Governor Hiram W. Johnson recognized the occasion by sending the following cablegram: "In the name of California I extend congratulations to the people of Majorca on the anniversary of the birth of Father Serra." Armed with these documents, the Native Son Fellow proceeded to Majorca, and will now relate his experiences there in the first person, it being understood, however, that the somewhat remarkable attentions paid him were extended as to the representative of the State and University of California, and were so received by him.

Boat schedules compelled me to reach Palma, the capital of the Balearic Islands, early in the morning of September 26th. I did not expect that any formal notice would be taken of me before the morning of the 28th, but the boat had but just reached the dock when a delegation came aboard to receive me. This was headed by Father Torrens, who is not only the initiator of the monument and its inauguration, but the man to whom it is due that Father Junipero Serra has been raised from almost complete oblivion in Majorca to become one of the great heroes of the island; the result of twenty years of fruitful labor on the part of Father Torrens. Most notable of the other four was Father Salva, who, as Provincial of the Franciscan Tertiaries, stands at the head of some 15,000 Terciarios or more.

From this moment until my departure on the evening of the 29th, I was in the hands of friends who could not do enough for me. As their many kindnesses reflect honor upon California, and show what a high place our State has suddenly come to occupy in the hearts of Majorcans, I propose to devote considerable space to this phase of my mission. To begin with, this was one of the few times in my life when I have found it hard to spend money. Everything was "already paid for." I tried to make it up by tipping on a princely scale, but was not always successful even in this. There were some waiters who refused tips, a barber who had come to serve me in my rooms refused both pay and tip, newsboys and bootblacks in Palma who recognized me would take no pay. Thus it was that great and small united to do honor to the representative of California.

C. E. Chapman Travelling Fellow of the Native Sons of the Golden West in Seville, Spain, attended the inauguration of the Serra monument at Majorca in September, as the representative of the State of California and the University of California, Berkeley. Mr. Chapman holds one of the Fellowships in Pacific Coast History maintained at the University by the Native Sons of the Golden West, and his experiences at the Serra celebration, which are at this time most timely, are presented in The Grizzly Bear, as the official organ of the Native Sons of the Golden West. For this interesting account, we are indebted to Frederick J. Teggart, Curator of the Academy of Pacific Coast History, University of California, Berkeley, to whom Mr. Chapman rendered his report.

Bishop Campins placed Father Sureda at my services as guide during my stay in Palma, and a pleasanter companion, as well as a more expert guide, would have been impossible to find. The bishop himself invited me to an audience in his palace and received me most kindly. He instructed Father Torrens to take the best care of me, because, as he said, the most important personage at the celebration and the one whose presence was most vitally essential to its success was the representative from California. Other dignitaries of the cathedral showed me the highest attentions during my visit. Among these was Canon Miralles, rector of the former University of Palma, an academician with a reputation all over Spain for profound learning, at present archivist of the cathedral. His archive is the most remarkably well arranged and catalogued collection that I have ever seen.

One afternoon, I visited the superlatively beautiful town of Soller, under the friendly guidance of Senor Picornell, secretary of the Tertiaries. Father Sureda introduced me to Senor Burques, whose rank as an Hijo Dalgo dates from the conquest of the island from the Moors in the thirteenth century by Don Jaime of Aragon. His house was a veritable treasure-house of antiquities. Others of the nobility of Palma invited me to visit them, but time did not permit. Three men were appointed to accompany me on the train-ride to Petra. These were Senor Valenzuela, one of five Majorcan deputies in the national Cortes at Madrid, a "California-ophile" of whom we may expect to hear more in the future; Senor Gual, another Hijo Dalgo dating from the conquest; and Father Puigserver, superior of the Tertiaries of Palma. The latter missed me, but I saw him later at Petra.

As to my experiences in Petra, it is best to relate them as they occurred. Petra is a town of about 4000 inhabitants. I think they were all at the station when I arrived, a little after 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the 27th. Also there was a band. After I had been presented to the officials and leading residents of Petra, a march began, headed by the band, through the town. The town was in gala array, flags and banners of every description hanging from every house, and freshly planted young pines lining the streets. To grasp the effect of these, it is well to know that the streets are only about carriage width. Heads were bared as I passed, as if I were president or a king. Seeing that it was more or less expected, I raised my hat in response, not without some little internal misgivings. At length we reached a great house flying the American flag, and I and several others passed in, to the music of the band. This house had been placed at my service by its owner, Senor Fiol, and royal entertainment did I receive therein. The Fiol family is also of Hijo Dalgo rank dating from Don Jaime's conquest, and have occupied the same house or its site since that time.

For the next two days this house was the headquarters for those having the celebration in charge. Not only were they often there, but scores of others were continually calling to pay their respects to me, including members of some of the most notable families in the island. Bands were continually playing—there were three in Petra—and on one occasion, at least, expressly to serenade the representative from California. Without going into details, I may say that on this day and the rest my presence was requested on a great many occasions and for things only indirectly connected with the Serra celebration, such as the inauguration of an electric light plant which had been reserved for this auspicious moment, cake and wine at the town hall, at the house which lodged the bishop, and at that of the king's representative, the welcome given to each of those individuals as they arrived by automobile at the town limits, and so on, one event following another in such rapid succession that I could not keep track of them all.

Briefly stated, the formal Serra celebration was as follows: On the afternoon of the 27th, shortly after my arrival, a procession of the Association of the Daughters of Mary proceeded to the nearby hill of Bonany and brought the Virgin of the hill to the parish church of Petra for the period of the fiesta. A band and the singing of the Daughters made this an impressive ceremony. On the morning of the 28th, the monument was formally dedicated in a discourse by Bishop Campins. This was followed by a procession of Tertiaries past the Virgin of Bonany in the parish church, I and some of the high officials of the island witnessing this from the platform of the high altar. As the last of the Tertiaries passed, the bishop and the clergy joined in, and after them myself and the high officials, and a band. This march was presided over by the civil governor of Majorca, with the mayor of Petra and myself at his right and left. During this march, which lasted an hour, we passed the house in which Father Junipero Serra was born, an humble, one-room edifice. An address by the superior of the Tertiaries of Palma concluded the morning's events. The afternoon was devoted to the literary program beside the monument. On the 29th a procession carried the Virgin of Bonany back to her hill.

The literary act of the afternoon of the 28th was in fact designated as the feature of the day, and it brought together the great crowd that had come for the day's festivities. The crowd in Petra this day may safely be estimated at from 10,000 to 15,000. There were 2350 in the morning's procession of Tertiaries, but Father Salva, the Provincial, told me that there were 6000 of his order in Petra this day, and there would have been more had the railroad been able to furnish facilities. Add to these Petra's 4000, and the incalculable number of religions of other orders and civilians that came in from all over the island, and my estimate will not appear unsafe. The square in which the monument stands was packed to capacity, and windows of surrounding houses and even the rooftops were levied upon by the throng that had assembled for the occasion.

The bishop and the military governor of Majorca, the latter representing the king, presided. There were six speakers, of whom I was one. One man spoke in Majorcan, for this island has a language of its own, and the rest in Spanish. The principal theme, of course, was the life and example of Father Serra. My speech dealt more particularly with California as it is today, with the emphasis upon the estimation in which Father Serra is held among us. I spoke for half an hour, delivering my address in Spanish, and with as much voice as I could command, so that as many as possible might hear me, a task of no mean proportions before that great crowd in the open air. That the Native Sons may understand this phase of their Travelling Fellow's work as well as that among the documents of Seville, I give herewith a summary of my address with some comment on its reception. As to the last, I was generously applauded on all possible occasions, but I am quite sure that it would have been the same, even if they had not understood a word.

After a few opening remarks I read a translation of Governor Johnson's and Professor Barrows' cablegrams. These were received with tremendous applause, a clear tribute to the State and University. I then proceeded to give them some idea of the extent of California, both in Spanish days and now, and followed with remarks on the origin of the name "California" and of the fascination that this name has exerted upon men's minds, from the age of the early explorers even to our own times. All of this, I now set out to show, was of direct interest to Spaniards and related to the career of Father Junipero Serra. My next paragraph (which I had thought of omitting) drew the most prolonged applause of the address. I showed that Spain had not lost her colonies, for Spanish civilization continued in them, winding up by a sentence which may be translated, "come what may, Spain will have a secure place in the hall of honor, and a proof of her vitality in the Americas."

Nor was the United States, so great a proportion of which was once Spanish territory, lost to Spain, and I referred to the great awakening in our country of the study of our history from the Spanish point of view. From this time forth in my speech I was constantly interrupted by applause, due, I am free to say, to the kindness of the audience, desirous of requiting California for its representation at this fiesta, and to the enthusiastic character of Spanish audiences, as anybody who has seen them will readily understand. Reference to the school of Spanish interpretation of our history gave me my opportunity to bring the discussion to California. I dwelt upon the interest in Spanish studies in California, and the force of our Spanish traditions, as shown by Spanish blood, by Spanish place-names, by the strength of the Spanish-American branch of the History Department at the University, and by the fact that Travelling Fellows were sent to Spain to study the sources of our history.

Thus it was only natural that Father Serra should be a Californian hero. To make clear how great was the esteem in which we held him, I proceeded to recount the beauties of California, its mountains and lakes, Yosemite, and the giant redwoods, stating, however, that we were proudest of those precious relics of our past, the missions founded by Father Junipero Serra. Nor had Serra's work been in vain, for he had converted the Indians who remain Christian today, and in spite of the lies of the cinematograph (for they show Wild West films in Spain) are good citizens and live in peace. This remark got almost as much applause as the one about Spain's continued greatness in the Americas. I referred to the monument of Serra at Petra as one link in a long chain hindring Majorca to California. In closing, I delivered myself of a warm paragraph of heartfelt gratitude for the kindly reception that had been accorded me from the moment of my arrival in the island.

All of the other speakers referred in a complimentary manner to California and were impressed by the fact that in Father Junipero Serra we had a bond for mutual regard. One of the speakers, Señor Font, a member of the Provincial Congress, addressing himself to me in an eloquent paragraph, said that I must tell my countrymen when I returned that if they wish to draw tight the bonds that unite them to Spain, Spaniards, too, had the same noble desires.

I might relate a long series of further attentions that I received up to the moment that I retired, but enough has already been said to indicate their character. These included many invitations by the towns of Petra and Manacor and by private individuals, which, if I had accepted them, would have prolonged my stay in the island indefinitely. But I had resolved to leave the next day. I alleged pressure of work in Madrid and Seville, and I never spoke a truer word, but I also wanted to leave before the inevitable reaction set in. Up to this point the representative from California had been an exciting novelty, and I did not wish to become an old story to them.

So I left, next morning, the 29th. I passed the day in Palma, for the boat did not leave until night. There I had the pleasure of seeing Father Sureda again. During the preceding two days, when not doing anything else, I had been talking to representatives of the press. On this afternoon one of them interviewed me for two hours. The two principal items discussed by me were the importance of the work of Father Serra in California, and the coming San Francisco Exposition.

A number of people came to the boat to see me off, and among them Fathers Salva and Sureda and Señores Picornell and Valenzuela, previously mentioned in this account. The boat drew away from Palma and I became myself again. I trust that I have succeeded in showing that as representative of the State and University of California, I was gratefully received by the Majorcans, and that their many kindnesses were a high tribute of respect to our State and University.

ANNIVERSARY OF SERRA'S BIRTH OBSERVED AT SANTA BARBARA.

Santa Barbara—The bi-centennial of the birth of Father Junipero Serra, founder of the California chain of missions, was observed here with civil and religious ceremonies, November 23rd and 24th, the exercises taking place at Santa Barbara Mission. The event was promoted by the Santa Barbara Chamber of Commerce, Santa Barbara Council, No. 1684, Knights of Columbus; Santa Barbara Parlor, No. 116, N.S.G.W., and Reina del Mar Parlor, No. 126, N.D.G.W.

On the afternoon of Sunday, the 23rd, a historically correct play of the founding of the presidio was enacted by the students of St. Anthony's College on the broad steps of the mission. This drama was written by Rev. Father Gliebe of the Franciscan Order. Music was rendered by St. Aloysius band.

On the morning of the 24th a solemn high mass was celebrated in an "Hermita" erected for the purpose, and which was a facsimile of the one where Father Serra celebrated the first mass in Santa Barbara in 1782. The civic observances of the day followed, Mayor E. J. Boeseke presiding.

A large concrete cross, the gift of James Donohue, was unveiled and dedicated to the memory of Rev. Junipero Serra, during which La Monaca's band rendered the beautiful composition, "Santa Barbara." This cross rests upon a rock base composed of stones taken from the foundation ruins of the presidio. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Father Theophilus, O.F.M., and Congressman Joseph R. Knowland, a Past Grand President of the N.S.G.W.

FIRST AMERICAN-BORN NATIVE SON OF CALIFORNIA

Through the kindness of Major Edwin A. Sherman of Oakland, The Grizzly Bear is enabled to present the above likeness of Guadalupe V. Boggs, the first native son of the Golden West born under the American Flag in California, and the accompanying historical data.

Mr. Boggs was born of American parents, his father being the late Hon. William M. Boggs of Napa, a member of the first Constitutional Convention, held at Monterey in 1849; a member of the first City Council of Sonoma, in 1851-2-3, when General M. G. Vallejo was Mayor and Major Sherman, city clerk, and State Senator from the Sonoma District in 1850. His grandfather was Pioneer Liburn Boggs, ex-Governor of Missouri and the first American alcalde of Sonoma, while his great-great-grandfather was Pioneer Daniel Boone, the famous Kentucky hunter.

Major Sherman furnishes the following interesting account of Guadalupe Boggs' birth: Prior to his leaving Independence, Missouri, in the early spring of 1846, to come overland to California, Governor Boggs procured from James Buchanan, Secretary of State at Washington, passports for himself and family. He, with them, arrived in Sonoma Valley and encamped upon the creek not far from the town, in the month of November, when the winter rains had commenced. One morning he was surprised to see two men ride into his camp on horseback, one of whom was General Vallejo, and the other Lieutenant Joseph Warren Revere of the United States Navy.

General Vallejo invited Governor Boggs and his whole family to come and share his hospitality in his house in town. Governor Boggs thanked him for his generous welcome, but could not think of intruding upon him that way, and said that, "it will stop raining soon and the ground will be dry." "But it won't stop raining," said Vallejo, "and this will be a lake of water in two days more. If you will not move up to my house in town, and you cannot remain here, pack up all your things in your wagon early tomorrow morning, and I will be here with my vaqueros and oxen and move you over to my Petaluma ranch, where all will be made comfortable."

The next morning Governor Boggs' family were all moved over to the large adobe building on his Petaluma rancho, which was well stocked with horses, cattle and sheep. "Make yourself perfectly at home here," said General Vallejo, "kill all you want for beef and mutton, and ride all the horses you wish, and if there is anything more you need just let me know and you shall have it." Just then, or soon after, there was a wail and a cry from Mrs. William Boggs and general distress of the female portion of the family. A child had been born and apparently dying, if not already dead.

As quick as a flash, General Vallejo drew his knife, jumped into the corral, and killing a young ram, stripped off its hide while still warm and wrapped that baby boy, who was apparently dead, up in it. Asking the parents if they had any objections to the child being baptized, they said, "No!" "What name will you give him?" he inquired. "Give him your name, General," they replied, and so that baby boy was baptized by the General and named Guadalupe Vallejo Boggs, when all declared he was dead.

However, there was a spark of life remaining in him, and he revived, and the child had a second and miraculous birth from the spirit of God, who had again given him life. That baby boy, now 67 years old, weighs 251 pounds and has a family of his own and resides at Salem, Oregon.

In a letter to Major Sherman, Mr. Boggs says: "I sincerely hope the friendship that existed between you and my late father will be transmitted to the son. If everything goes well, I hope to meet you personally in 1915 and grasp your hand with the same friendship that father and you did in days gone by."

CHRISTMAS IN 1863 WAS OBSERVED in California with the usual festivities, and everybody reported having a merry time.

For three days prior to Christmas Day, a heavy rainstorm prevailed. This had a dampening effect upon shoppers, and brought from merchants complaints of dull times. But as the mining industry was lagging from lack of water, the rain was welcomed by all the people.

The inauguration of F. F. Low as Governor, and the Union party state administration, took place at Sacramento, December 10th. The Ellsworth Guard of San Francisco, claimed to be the best-drilled company of athletic young men in the State, came by steamboat and were the guests of the four local military companies. They were met at the steamboat landing on their arrival by the four companies and escorted to their headquarters.

At 11 a.m., the military companies formed in line and escorted Governor Stanford and Governor-elect Low, seated in a carriage drawn by six gray horses, from the gubernatorial mansion on Ninth and N streets to the Capitol at Seventh and I streets where, in the assembly chamber, Governor Low took the oath of office and delivered his inaugural address. Captain Siddons, with his "Union Boy," fired the salute.

After the inauguration the military companies paraded through the principal streets. The day was cold and foggy, the streets were muddy, and the warmth of sunshine was absent. An inaugural ball was given in the evening by the citizens of Sacramento to the State officials and members of the Legislature. About fifteen hundred prominent people attended, including the officers of the Russian fleet anchored in San Francisco Bay. The steamer "New World" was chartered to bring the society people of San Francisco to the hall.

Legislature Organizes.

The Legislature met on December 7th and for the first time organized without holding a caucus on the first day. The Senate elected R. Burnell, Senator from Amador County, president pro tem.; C. S. Westmoreland of San Francisco, secretary; Albert Bishop of Tuolumne County, assistant secretary; John Helms of Placer, sergeant-at-arms; J. A. Stidger of Nevada County, assistant sergeant-at-arms; John Van Dorn, minute clerk; W. B. Hendro, journal clerk; Albert Hart, enrolling clerk; M. E. Gilston, engrossing clerk; W. A. Plunkett and F. Hallowell, copying clerks. Ben Steinman, a future Mayor of Sacramento, was a candidate for watchman.

The Assembly elected W. H. Sears of Nevada, speaker; J. J. Owens of Santa Clara, speaker pro tem.; Rev. O. C. Wheeler of Sacramento, chief clerk; R. H. Daly, assistant clerk; Wm. Ryder of San Francisco, sergeant-at-arms; J. F. Holloway, assistant sergeant-at-arms; Martin Rowan, minute clerk; J. H. Marple, enrolling clerk; A. W. Gamble, engrossing clerk; L. S. Taylor, journal clerk; M. A. Leese and N. Moritz, copying clerks; Philip Graves, watchman, and M. C. Briggs, chaplain. The Senate had thirty-five Union party and five Democratic members, the Assembly, seventy-two Union party and eight Democrats, so that the Union party was in complete command of everything.

Emperor Norton I paid his first biennial visit to the Legislature on December 17th. He spent the day listening to a debate in the Assembly on a resolution to adjourn for fifteen days during the holidays, and decided to settle the dispute by issuing a proclamation dispersing the Legislature until after New Year's Day. As the Legislature took a recess from December 23rd to January 3rd, he considered his order was obeyed. The Emperor took the freedom of the city as a matter of course, and being a novelty, attracted the curious attention he delighted in. A heavy shock of earthquake in the Bay counties on December 20th was the cause of the Emperor's speedy return to San Francisco, his seat of government.

Hank Monk Gets a Watch.

News was received on December 23rd that the great prizefight for the championship of the world on December 8th in England, between John C. Heenan, the "Benicia Boy," and Tom King had resulted in the defeat of Heenan in twenty-five rounds. At Benicia, Heenan's former home, flags were hung at half-mast and as every American betting man who could place a wager bet on Heenan, there was a blue tinge around sporting circles.

San Jose had a great race meet on December 8th and 9th, when the fastest runners in the State contested. A match of two-mile heats for $1000 was contested on the 8th by Col. E. S. Lathrop's "Ben Lippincott" and Andy Works' "Jack Trimble." Lathrop's horse won in 3:52½ and 3:55. On the 9th, mile heats between Theo. Winters' "Breckenridge," F. DePuyter's "Gladiator" and J. B. Fox's "Victress" showed the mare was invincible, she taking the three heats and making 1:49½ in one of them.

Jerry Thomas, a prominent mixologist of San Francisco connected with the Occidental hotel, published a book entitled "Lives of Eminent Bark-keepers of the Pacific." So important was the thirst quenching industry the book had a large sale.

Hank Monk, the popular stage driver, was presented with a $500 gold watch on December 10th at Carson City by his San Francisco admirers. Chief Justice Turner of the Nevada Supreme Court made the presentation speech.

As presentations to stage drivers by admiring passengers was the vogue, a number of practical jokers inveigled a well-known character of the stage driving profession named "Bally" Green to a watch presentation at Carson City on Christmas Eve. The presentation speech was made by Hal Clayton and the gift was a brass watch four inches in diameter, weighing seven pounds and connected to a brass link chain four feet long with a leather apron fob attached. The hilarious proceedings following made it an event long remembered.

At Red Bluff, the wife of a well-known citizen entered a saloon where he was one of a party playing poker and requested him to come home with her. On his refusal to do so, she swept all the money and chips on the table into her apron and departing, informed the poker party if they wanted their money back to send the sheriff after it.

Whaling Industry at Maximum.

On December 2nd, ground was broken at Omaha by the Union Pacific railroad, and felicitous messages were exchanged by overland telegraph between the Governor of Nebraska and the Governor of California and the building of the Pacific railroad begun at each end with vigor.

Seven vessels that had left New York in June and July loaded with rails for the Central Pacific railroad began arriving in San Francisco, coming around Cape Horn, and a fleet of schooners was kept employed bringing the rails to Sacramento. Six miles of track were laid during the month.

Thos. McConnell, a farmer on the Cosumnes River, returned from the East with seven blooded Spanish Merino sheep which he had bought in Vermont. They cost him over $600 in freight charges to bring them via Panama.

The whaling industry in Monterey Bay was at its maximum at this time. There were four whaling companies, comprised of about 100 men, on a mutual-division-of-the-profits basis, with trying-out works, hundreds of oil casks, piles of whale bone, chunks of blubber and heavy stratas of smell to complete their outfits in close proximity to the town.

The exciting chasing of leviathans was often viewed by the populace from points of vantage on the shore, and the subsequent beaching of the carcass after capture, the cutting of it up into chunks, the trying out of the oil in the midst of lurid flames and dense olfactory smoke, were almost daily occurrences.

Writing schools, in which Spenserian penmanship was taught, became a fad this winter, and every town had its professor with a large class, mostly adults of both sexes, obtaining instruction and amusement several evenings a week by attending.

"The Menken" Creates a Stir.

Adah Isaacs Menken, now acquiring fame in the theatrical world, appeared on the Coast under the management of Thomas Maguire with a well-selected company in the play of "Mazepa." She and the play were described, after a performance, December 5th, as follows: "The Menken is a pretty, shapely Jewess, considerably more undressed than any actress yet tolerated on the American stage. Her costume is of flesh-colored tights, with the little end of dimity fastened at the waist. She fences with a strong wrist and Bowery dexterity. She altitudinizes extra often with statuesque effect. She allows herself to be strapped on the back of a fiery, untamed steed and is thus carried up a mountain over what appears to be a road as rough and perilous as that on the route to Washoe. She again mounts astride the steed and enters upon a campaign against Poland with 'Nothing to Wear.' A crowded audience, interspersed with women, attended the performance. The Menken is a beauty and believes that 'Beauty unadorned, is adorned the most.' She is not an actress, in the full sense of the word, but a voluptuous exhibit that pays. The company is good, so is the horse. We did not learn the name of the horse."

The Menken made a great reputation in California and subsequently, when residing in Paris, became a world-wide celebrity. She played a two weeks' engagement at Sacramento, entertaining in a shapely manner, the members of the Legislature, but she left the Capital City with a bad taste in her mouth as her manager, Tios, Maguire, and five members of the company were arrested for violating the Sunday law, which forbade theatrical performances on Sunday nights. They were tried before Judge S. S. Holf and a jury, convicted, and fined $50 each. As the city had to hire a hall to hold the trial in, on account of the crowd attending, the citizens complained that the fines were inadequate for the expense, and as the performance had a crowded house, it had paid the troupe to violate the law.

Exploding Powder Fatal.

The Cortez stables at Marysville burned December 2nd, destroying ten horses, ten freight wagons, a forty-animal pack train equipment, and causing a $20,000 loss which almost bankrupted half a dozen well-known teamsters.

The Big River lumber mills, in Mendocino County, were burned December 1st, with a $100,000 loss.

Near the Lake House, between Sacramento and Stockton, the three children of Joseph Carrington, on December 10th, found a keg of powder and in some unexplained manner caused it to explode. The explosion blew out the side of the house, destroyed the furniture within, killed the oldest boy and fatally injured the other two children.

Another explosion of a keg of powder, with almost as sad results, occurred on December 20th at Sutterville, when John B. Whitfield, a mechanic, brought home a keg of powder to use in hunting and took it into his kitchen where his wife and two children were sitting. In a jocose spirit he poured out a handful of powder and began dropping portions of it on the hot stove to alarm his wife. She, becoming scared, picked up the youngest child and left the room just as the keg of powder was exploded by a flying spark. The little boy, three years old, was killed and Whitfield fatally burned. Mrs. Whitfield was severely burned in tearing the burning clothing from her little boy.

A distressing accident, one of the first of its kind, occurred on December 1st on the new line of railroad being constructed from Brighton to Freeport by the Sacramento Valley Railroad. Three section men, with Mrs. Catharine Kitts and her nine-months-old child, started at 7 p.m. on a hand car from Brighton for Freeport. Having no light, they were not seen and were struck by a locomotive moving in the opposite direction. Mrs. Kitts, her child and James McCoine were instantly killed.

At Whiskey Hill, Mariano Castro, a young Mexican, attempted to mount a horse and ride behind a friend already in the saddle. This friend had a long knife with its point upward, carried in a scabbard attached to his belt. In mounting, Castro rested his arm upon the knife point, which, when the weight of his body fell on it, penetrated his arm and nearly severed it from his body. An artery was cut and he bled to death in a few minutes.

Murderer Is Murdered.

A Piute chief, known as George, was killed by a rancher and his body thrown into Walker River, where it was found by members of his tribe. They called a council of war and gathered, some 1200 in number, at a rendezvous in Carson Sink. They sent a messenger to the commander of Fort Churchill on December 10th and demanded satisfaction or a fight. Lieutenant Oscar Jewett was sent to parley and, to his surprise, he found the warriors a mercenary band more hungry than bloodthirsty. They agreed to consider the killing of their chief avenged for a wagon load of grub and old clothes and a payment of $1000, on the installment plan, by the rancher who did the killing.

The proverb, "Whosoever sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood he shed," was emphasized by the homicidal occurrences of this month. Horace Smith, a prominent lawyer of Auburn, Placer County, in 1862 killed a newspaperman named Newell by stabbing him in the neck in San Francisco and was acquitted. In an altercation in Virginia City with Captain H. F. W. Johnson, he was wounded with a pistol ball and subsequently died. Joe Magee, a gunfighter and gambler, known from Cariboo to Arizona, he having followed every mining excitement on the Coast, was given a requisition and made a special officer to arrest Captain Johnson, then at large in California, and return him to Nevada for trial. Magee was a participant in the Lloyd-Smith affray on the river front in Sacramento in March, 1862; killed a barkeeper in Virginia City on the Fourth of July,

EL COLEGIO DE SAN JOSE

(By ANNA GEIL ANDRESEN, Salinas, California.)

IN A QUIET LITTLE NOOK AT THE foot of the Gabilan Mountains about six miles from the town of Salinas lie sheltered the adobe buildings of California's first college. Fremont's Peak, conspicuous by its association with General Fremont's expedition to California, is a near-by sentinel, and the old stage road that bore the traffic of pioneer days to Los Angeles winds its course not far away.

The pressing events and achievements of these later years have obscured to memory and public notice much of interest in the early history of California, and were it not that "Alisal Park," a public picnic ground, horders the site of the old college, even local tradition would have borne it hut slight testimony.

Achievements that are without the encouragement of example or precedent always afford profitable reflection, and when they also combine the quality of historic value, surely have a legitimate claim on the attention of the thoughtful reader. A brief review, therefore, of its history, awarded the first college of California, is not amiss, and is of more than passing interest and a fitting recognition of the rapidly receding past.

W. E. P. Hartnell, an English merchant and a man of liberal education and proficient as a linguist, arrived in Monterey in 1822 and shortly afterwards became closely associated with the mission fathers, with the result that he became a convert to the Roman Catholic Church. In 1825 Mr. Hartnell married Senorita Teresa De La Guerra, daughter of one of California's prominent Spanish families.

In 1830 he obtained a grant of land from the Mexican government, for the purpose of building a summer home. He called it "El Patrocinio de San Jose," meaning, under the patronage of St. Joseph—that is, he placed his home under the protecting care of St. Joseph, following the custom of the early padres, who dedicated to some saint all their discoveries and the missions they established. Eleven primary and grammar schools constituted the entire educational system of California in 1833, and their combined attendance did not exceed 339 pupils. The limited opportunities afforded by these, inspired Mr. Hartnell to plan and establish a school for higher education, whereby some of the advantages found in the settled communities of the Old World might be shared by the young men of far-away California. To this end, he sought and obtained the co-operation of the Rev. Patrick Peter Short, a priest from the French missions at the Hawaiian Islands, who had recently arrived in Monterey.

The project had the assent and concurrence of the friars and the support of Governor Figueroa, who promised substantial aid. Under these auspices the plan took definite shape and Mr. Hartnell issued his prospectus, the first call to students in the higher branches, made in California. In this document, which is dated December 10, 1833, Mr. Hartnell modestly announces that he is about to open a "casa de educacion" (house for educational purposes.) The school would be open, however, to only a limited number of students who must not be under fifteen years of age. "By favor of God," it was piously asserted, the establishment would be open and ready to receive students at the beginning of the new year, and all were cautioned that since the accommodations of the school were limited, applications should be made at an early date.

A fair range of subjects was included in the curriculum of study. Spanish grammar and the modern languages, as well as Latin, were to be taught, and also higher mathematics and philosophy. Reading, writing and arithmetic, together with bookkeeping, although of the meaner order, were to receive a just share of attention in fully forming and equipping the student for successful battle with the world. Mere scholarship was not the sole aim of the institution, as it was emphasized that particular attention would be given to teaching the Christian doctrine, and to the boys' habits and manners. For these educational advantages, and for his board and lodging, each student was to pay the sum of two hundred dollars a year. They were to furnish their own books and stationery, and were to hriug with them certain prescribed articles of clothing.

Three weeks after the issuance of this prospectus, on January 1, 1834, "El Colegio de San Jose" was formally opened at the "Rancho del Patrocinio," marking the establishment of the first college in California. Its enrollment was fifteen students, quite a disparagement between it and the enrollment of present-day colleges, hut conspicuous, nevertheless, for this early period. Two, two-story adobe buildings, with shingled roofs, sheltered both master and students. The adobe bricks used in their construction were made near the site of the buildings, and the shingles for the roofs were made at Pajaro by Indians under the instruction and supervision of the mission fathers. The larger of the two structures included the home, classroom and chapel, while the smaller building contained the dormitory, kitchen and dining-room. A pretty and attractive flower garden beautified the approach to the buildings, and in the rear, an orchard and vineyard added to the general attractiveness of the place. The chapel mentioned was the first private chapel in California, and after the closing of the college a priest would come from Monterey every other Sunday and celebrate the ceremony of the mass. When the exercises at the chapel were finally discontinued, Mrs. Hartnell, relict of the founder, donated the sacred vestments and other relics to San Carlos Mission at Monterey. The private library of Mr. Hartnell, which was used in connection with his educational work, was the first general library in California. While the various Spanish families were well provided with books, these were limited to their own language.

Prominent among the young men who attended this pioneer institution was Don Pahló De La Guerra, who, in later years and under a new regime, served two terms as State Senator, sitting in the first Senate of the State of California. Subsequently he became District Judge, presiding over the territory extending from San Luis Obispo to San Diego. The college had a successful, though limited, career and was instrumental in that early day in giving special advantage to young men otherwise remote and harred from the paths of civilization.

California's first college closed its doors long before the Gringoes came, and its master has slept these many years in the old Monterey churchyard, far from his English home. Yet the incident should not be forgotten, nor the efforts of its founder disparaged. It is a subject of sentiment and history intimate in its relation with the development of the Golden West, and well worthy of more than passing notice as an early episode that contributed its quantum where were laid the foundation of the great commonwealth of the State of California.

BOOK REVIEWS

(BY THE GRIZZLY.)

"SAN FRANCISCO ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO AND TODAY," is the title of a very interesting little book by Louis Choris, translated from the French by Porter Garnett. The book has ten illustrations of early San Francisco, drawn by Louis Choris, a Russian who visited San Francisco in 1816, as well as twelve others of that city at the present time, thereby showing the remarkable transformation that has taken place.

This interesting document, which pictures and describes the mission settlement under the primitive conditions prevailing at the time of the author's visit (1816), has been generally overlooked by historians, and its publication now, for the first time, in an English translation, is important and should interest students of California history.

Typographically, the volume is neat, the illustrations and type are clear, the make-up is artistic, and it is gotten up in a manner to make it attractive as a holiday offering. A. M. Robertson, San Francisco, is the publisher. Price: $1.25.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO RESTORE MISSION.

San Diego—A campaign has just been launched to have 500,000 school children of the State contribute a penny each and with the fund restore San Diego Mission, the oldest of the missions. The plan originated at a mass meeting recently held at the schoolhouse in Grantville, half a mile from the mission. Every child contributing will receive a handsome certificate of membership hearing a picture of the old landmark.

THE DAY'S OBSERVANCE

Christmas, as it approaches, fills our thoughts with the question of gifts, rather than with the day's significance, and has come to be an occasion for a display of wealth, instead of one on which we should pay homage to the Saviour. Christmas is the anniversary of the birth of Jesus Christ, and as such should be celebrated as a religious holiday.

As a gift-making occasion, the day has been so generally abused that now its significance in this regard is lost sight of except by a comparatively few. For, instead of showering our gifts upon the poor and unfortunate and those really in need, as the One Whose birthday we celebrate would have us do, we shower them most freely and lavishly upon those who are able to provide for their own wants.

The fact that the great majority of Christmas gifts are made with the hope of receiving something in return from the recipient, probably accounts for the poor and needy being overlooked, for they are unable to provide themselves with the necessities of life, much less make Christmas gifts.

What a grand thing it would be if, at Christmas time, every person would contribute to a general fund the money that he or she plans to spend on gifts for friends not in need, and that fund used to alleviate the want and suffering that exists to a greater extent than most of us can imagine!

What a grand thing it would be if we would all devote Christmas Day to serving the Master, than which no better method is open to us than by providing for those of His children who are in need and in distress!

The poor and the needy we have with us always, and this fact is never brought so forcibly to our mind as during the holiday season. Let us, through them, make our Christmas offerings to Him Whose birthday anniversary we celebrate, thereby expressing in deeds, not merely words, our appreciation of His service to mankind. In this way, alone, can we spread the holiday good-cheer throughout the land.

There are some so cruel as to say that the Mexican "situation" is financed through a percentage of the revenue derived from the war-in-Mexico extras of the sensational daily press.

Get your resolutions ready, for the new year approaches. But make them sufficiently reasonable so that you can at least keep them in force throughout New Year's Day.

"BLUE SKY LAW" NEEDED

The last Legislature enacted a law providing for a commission to investigate the inner workings of all stock-selling corporations, and also providing for the approval of such commission before any such corporation could dispose of more stock. The measure has been generally referred to as the "Blue Sky Law," and was designed to protect the innocent investor.

Among those who strenuously opposed the passage of such law were officials of the Los Angeles Investment Company, the largest stock-selling concern in the State. And the subsequent suspension of the putting into operation of this law, through the referendum, was, it is reported, accomplished mainly through the activity of the directors of that company.

Recently the inside workings of the Los Angeles Investment Company have been bared to light and reveal such conditions as to leave no doubt in the public mind as to why the company's directors opposed the passage and putting into operation of the "Blue Sky Law." The Federal Grand Jury has indicted the eleven directors of the company for using the mails to defraud, and current rumor has it that more serious charges will follow. Several stockholders, applying to the Superior Court for a receivership, have made public additional "inside" information concerning the company by charging a juggling and misuse of funds.

This condition regarding the State's largest stock-selling corporation and one of the most active opponents of the "Blue Sky Law," is cited to show the need of just such a law and to prove that those responsible for the measure knew that the innocent small investor required the protection that the law affords. The "Blue Sky Law" will weed out the many so-called "investment" companies whose chief assets are stock certificates and who are paying unreasonable but attractive "dividends," generally from stock sales instead of legitimate profits. And there are unquestionably many other like concerns which cannot stand investigation any better than could the Los Angeles Investment Company.

We predict that when this company's affairs are thoroughly aired in the courts, a great majority of those people who support such concerns and who are the ones to be benefited by the law, will go to the polls and, by their votes, put into operation the "Blue Sky Law." The law is a good one, and is certainly needed.

The glorious rain that has drenched the State from one end to the other, is but one of the many things for which Californians had occasion to give thanks.

ALL ARE WELCOME

In outlining a plan whereby Easterners who have come to make their homes among them may be assured that they are most welcome, Sacramento Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West have inaugurated a movement which should be followed by those Orders in every part of the State. It will serve a dual purpose—give evidence that the Native Sons and Native Daughters DO welcome newcomers, and disprove the oft-repeated charge that the Native Sons and Native Daughters are antagonistic to Easterners.

Anyone at all interested, and who cares to investigate, will find that these Orders were instituted and are conducted for the sole purpose of advancing the best interests of California and of preserving her early-day history. No class of citizens realize more than do the Native Sons and Native Daughters, how much our Eastern friends have done toward the State's development, nor how necessary it is that we encourage other Easterners to become citizens of the State, in order that our vast resources may be fully developed. They do not contend, as has been charged, that California is their exclusive birth-right, but extend a welcoming hand to all those who, appreciating the glories of the State, decide to make their homes here and assist in the work of developing her wonderful resources.

Christmas in December, and taxes in November, combine to make such a raid upon one's savings as to leave the bank-book balance a very sorry spectacle at the beginning of the new year.

OPPOSITION?

The great success met with in Los Angeles by the Native Sons and Native Daughters at their "Hangtown" festival, gives the lie to the statement, so often repeated, that there is opposition in the southern city to these Orders, because the population is so largely made up of Easterners.

"Hangtown" was featured as a Native Sons' and Native Daughters' production, the proceeds from which would be used to entertain the Grand Parlor, N.S.G.W., next year.

"Hangtown" was visited by more than 25,000 people, who spent nearly $14,000. Conservatively estimated, 75 per cent of those visitors are not affiliated with either Order, and 75 per cent of that money was contributed by those "outside" visitors.

This was the first time the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles sought the support of the public in a financial way. Does the result indicate any very noticeable opposition to them?

We have always maintained that this much-exploited opposition to the Orders in Los Angeles was imaginary, and not a reality. "Hangtown" proved our contention was right.

The announced intention of the counties in the southern part of the State to exhibit at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco in 1915, is received with approbation. While many acts of the exposition management do not meet with public approval, its importance to the State cannot be overlooked, and it is therefore the duty of a united California to aid in making it the greatest world's fair ever held.

Hats off to Harry G. Folsom, D.D.G.P., and a member of Ramona Parlor, N.S.G.W., the one to whom we are indebted, more than to any other individual, for the magnificent success of Los Angeles' "Hangtown." He was "on the job" early and late, to the sacrifice of his personal interests, and without any hope of reward, except the glory and advancement of the cause.

OUR GOLDEN WEST.

(H. G. W. Dinkelspiel of San Francisco, Grand Organist of the Native Sons of the Golden West, recently received the following from T. H. Bridson of San Mateo, and because of the sentiment contained in the lines, forwarded the same to The Grizzly Bear, as the official organ of the Native Sons of the Golden West, for publication. In his letter to Mr. Dinkelspiel, Mr. Bridson says: "Enclosed find a verse or two I have written for the Sons of California, 'The Native Sons.' The lines may be a bit crude, but the sentiment is there, and though not a Native Son, I would not know I was not but by being told so, as my earliest memories are those of California."—Editor.)

Our hills of California!

With their undulating rise

Each gorge and canyon meet us

With an awed and grand surprise.

The Native Sons sing proudly,

Of hill and valley grand,

The Eden of the Nation,

Their own, their native, land.

Chorus.

The land of gold it's called—

Its colors green and gold,

Its metals gold, its poppies gold,

Its flowers have a golden sheen.

Its sands are gold, its cliffs are gold,

Its ships carry golden freight.

There's golden tints in its varied sky,

And its guard is a golden gate,

Its sunshine sends a golden hue,

It has played a golden part.

Its fruits are gold, its grain is gold,

And its men have a golden heart.

'Tis older far than history,

Could it unfold the tale,

Been trod by man for ages,

Thro' mountain, hill and vale.

In forty-nine it wakened,

By the master hand of man

It carved its name in history,

In that narrow, meagre span.

It's rolled in wealth and luxury,

And bounded forth with dash,

It's arisen from blasting flames,

Like the Phoenix from the ash,

Our California hills so bold,

With verdure clad all year,

The sight to greet a loyal son,

His native home so dear.

Wood block paving, tried and discarded in many cities of the United States thirty years ago, is now coming back into marked favor, due to improved methods of treating and handling the blocks.

A FRAGMENT OF LONG AGO

(By FRANCES FAIRCHILD, Placerville.)

E. OF TODAY, HUNT FOR A picturesque background for the great dramas of human life. Sometimes we choose the dizzy whirl and pace of city life, the brilliant lights of courts, or the Rembrandt shadows of poverty; but in the strange story I have to tell, I shall make no apology if the scenery appears unfamiliar to you, nor if the actor bears a strange resemblance to yourself.

It is just the tale of an Indian woman—one who was eighteen years alone upon the island of San Nicolas. A tale of love, loss, devotion, adventure and adversity, and at last, the ripened sheaves of an old woman's life were garnered up. Eighteen years alone, and during that time the whirlwinds swept over the island—the sunshine brought the flowers, and the days gathered up the harvests of her deeds. She may have chafed at the solitude and panted for some wider orbit to revolve in, but the life of the island had entered into her soul, and something, it seemed also of the cool strength of the sea breeze; something of the dewy beauty and serenity of her surroundings, with the green woods, the shell-strewn seashore and the mighty pulse of the lashing waves.

Seventy-five years ago all of this happened, and although it is close to the century mark, it must be recorded once more as one of the early links of tragedy and romance, interwoven with the fragmentary reminders of a time whose like the world will never know again.

In the year 1837 the Indian tribes on the Santa Barbara group of islands of the Pacific Ocean were engaged in a fierce and exterminating war with each other; and if we but listen, silently the echoes flow softly back, carrying with them the tramp, the crash and cry, and all the awful voices of the war. Their hatred was so bitter, their hostility so deadly, that the population was diminishing rapidly and promised to become extinct.

The holy fathers of Santa Barbara Mission had known of the existing hatred and conceived a plan whereby the Indians might be watched over, taught and preserved, if brought to the mission. The padres selected a few of the civilized Indians and together they went to the islands, explaining to the inhabitants the purpose of their visit. On promise of protection from their enemies, they consented to go. Later, a small vessel was sent to the different islands, and one by one, each tribe was removed to the mission.

While the last of the Indians at San Nicolas were embarking and all were supposed to be on board, a child was missing. The frantic mother was rushing to and fro, searching everywhere—each part of the vessel was carefully examined, also the crevices of the rocky shore; but without success. Her mother-love racked her soul, and she implored the captain to allow her to go back into the interior and search for her child. All eyes followed her. Onward, still onward, she sped, to find the object of her love—the one instinct of her heroic soul.

A coming storm closed down about the vessel freighted with anxious natives peering into the gathering darkness, vainly trying to discover some object that might resemble the returning woman and her child. Around the horizon and overhead, there were dark and lowering clouds, pregnant with meaning to the eyes of the captain. The sea had risen in wild fury, and the winds leaped down upon it. There was a hoarse roar of the incoming tide on the rocks; it clutched the small vessel, tossing it up and down on the waves, until one, heavier and stronger than the others, pitched the frail thing, like a feather, in mid air.

The captain's glance swept the boiling sea about him—the black-green surges—and noting the extremity of peril, he was reluctantly compelled to put to sea for safety, before hearing any tidings from the lost ones. Being a man of promptness and executive courage for emergencies, which had carried him through many a desperate extremity on land and sea, he guided the small vessel with its human burden through the battling winds, the rush and roar of surging waves, "out of the valley of the shadow of death," reaching Santa Barbara in safety.

The storm continued—the dark, hungry sea heaved to and fro; the great tides, trembling and panting, rose high, and with a moan dashed against the coast, the foamy spray hiding the jagged rocks. Morning came and the wind changed; the storm dropped down, the clouds shifted, and through them the sun shone clear and warm; the sea, though warped and restive with its last night's struggling, grew quieter with every hour, but the vessel had been wrecked upon the rocks and lost. No other vessel could be obtained at that time, and the woman was left on the island.

Let us go back. The woman stands on the shore and looks as might one who had gone through some awful struggle for life and death; who, washed on the beach, had a rope thrown to her, and, as she clutched at it, the receding waves had washed it out of reach. Then came the horror and the strain that seemed to wrack her very soul—the consciousness of despair. She turned her face seaward, then skyward, in mute longing and appeal to the Great Father. The bitterness of her situation, and her sad fate, held her in its spell. With heavy heart and tear-stained face, each day she sat upon the rocky coast, straining her eyes for a tiny speck on the horizon, which might prove, as it grew into shape, the means of her salvation.

Only the cool waves, laving her weary feet, knew of the scalding tears that trickled down her reddish-brown cheeks and heard her sobbing voice, the bitterness of which her heart alone knew. So the winter grew apace, and springtime came, with birds and flowers and fruits. The future which rose before her had a new significance—new purposes and covenants were made with the Great Father. Her mind seemed to clear, and she set about with a tenacious hold on the life before her.

From day to day the Great Spirit should guide her, and she beguiled the weary hours in providing for her wants. She made snares of her long coarse hair to catch the birds, and prepared their skins for clothing; she made needles of cactus thorns and bones and thread from the sinews of the seal. From a piece of hoop, which had probably been washed ashore from some shipwreck, she fashioned a knife and fastened a wooden handle to it by means of sinews and a black material resembling asphaltum. She gathered grasses and roots and made baskets and water bottles. A mortar was made from a rock, in which she pounded the aulone* for food. Many more things were made by her during the long and lonely years of her isolation.

She made her home in a cave, selecting it as a shelter from storms and wind, as a hiding place from the wild dogs which infested the island, and as a depository for her belongings. A rude bed, made of dried leaves and covered with skins, served for her resting place at night. On the walls she recorded, in her primitive way, the events as they came to pass, from day to day—the great storms, quantities of seals, the hailing of vessels, sickness, and other important occurrences.

This woman of destiny had her day-dreams in the birth of spring, when full-blown flowers sent their sweet-scented message with the balmy breeze; in the golden season of summer, with its harvest of fruits; dreams when the moon shed her silver rays over the darkness of the wooded slopes; dreams when the days faded into the somber tints of autumn and the misty, weeping skies of winter drove her to the shelter of the cave. And could we have caught a glimpse of her inmost thoughts, they would have been veiled in hopeless contemplation.

It was after the discovery of gold, the exciting cause of which soon peopled the Golden West, that several hunters of the sea otter went to the island of San Nicolas and found footprints. There were many of them, but all alike, and the conclusion was, that the island was inhabited by only one person. After searching, without avail, the party enlisted the services of an expert trapper and hunter by the name of Nediver. Without difficulty, he found the track and traced it along the shore. In the distance was a queer object among the rocks. After gradually going forward, he discovered it was a woman, kneeling upon the ground, skinning a seal.

The noise of his approach caused her to arise and look about with alarm; but at the sight, once more, of a human being, her dreams melted into reality, her joy knew no bounds, and with the blood of her race leaping wildly in her veins, she rushed toward him, gesticulating with hands and arms, the speech her heart could feel, but words could never frame.

She showed a great amount of intelligence and let him know she wished to accompany him to the mainland. She was dressed in a robe made from the skins of fifty sea-birds and sewed together with sinews of the seal. In appearance, it was a loose sack, with openings for head and arms, and reaching nearly to the ground. I describe it, because few realize, as they read this, that with her, necessity must prove the mother of invention.

Motioning him to follow her, she led the way to the island cave—the natural, primitive home that had sheltered her in storm, sunshine, and the emotions that disturb a living soul. The knowledge that the Great Spirit had at last heard her prayer, rebounded in her heart and wreathed her face in smiles. Memories stored away in the mysterious recesses of the brain were shaped into reality, and she hurriedly gathered her belongings and placed them in a skin of one of the native animals.

Among these was a water-jug made of plaited grass—globular in form, nine inches in diameter, fourteen inches high, and with a small, narrow neck. Two fish hooks and lines, the former made of nails skillfully bent and sharpened. Two pieces of cord of different sizes, deftly made of numerous strands of sinew, a rude necklace made of slate, and numerous other articles.

In appearance, she was about sixty years of age, of medium stature, muscular, but well formed; eyes large and full; auburn hair, long, smooth and profuse, hanging over a low, broad, intellectual forehead; nose slightly aquiline; finely formed mouth, large and haughty, a full lower lip and well-set chin. Her manner was as simple as a child's.

Mr. Nediver took her to his own home and had her properly and kindly cared for. Father Gonzales of Santa Barbara Mission made every effort to locate some of the Indians who had been taken from the island eighteen years before, but, strange to say, none could be found and the mystery could never be solved. Other Indians within a circumference of miles were brought to Santa Barbara in the hope that they might be able to understand her, but she could communicate only by signs for some weeks.

At one time she represented herself as being very sick, having to crawl upon her hands and knees from the cave to the water. Time brought clearness in the confused recollection of tragedy, and consciousness to the detail of daily life. Being quick to learn, she acquired some knowledge of Spanish and, through this medium, related, as best she could, the story of her lonely life.

How, after leaving the vessel to search for her child, she wandered from place to place, and when she found him, the wild dogs had killed him and mangled the body. How she gently lifted him in her arms, wiped away the dampness from his face and smoothed the hair from his brow. Then she hugged the lifeless body tightly to her breast, lest more harm befall it, and hurried back to the vessel to tell of her sorrow. It was gone, bearing with it kindred and friends.

Reader, can you imagine the feeling of that mother? Words would prove futile and cold to express the agony she endured. Could she have realized then, as the night closed down in darkness, how long it would be before she would look upon another human being, how devoid of comfort, of a cheering look from a friendly eye, or a smile of recognition in the years to come, it would have proved too much even for her wild nature to bear. No one ever learned whether she remembered her native language. She was gentle and kind, especially to children; when she stroked their hair and caressed them, the tears would trickle down her furrowed cheeks.

During her short stay with the Nediver family she committed the Lord's Prayer in Spanish to memory and was baptized in the Roman Catholic faith by Father Sanchez. In a way, she was a curiosity to the people of the city, because none of her tribe could be found and because of her lonely life on the island. They carried her food and clothes and such presents as they thought might interest her.

She soon fell a victim to sickness, in which she suffered much and gave all to understand that she wished to die—for then she would meet her child in the spirit land. She lived but six months, after having been rescued from the island.

The largest tree in the United States is said to be the "Mother of the Forest," a giant redwood in the Calaveras Big Tree Grove in California. It is supposed to contain 140,619 board feet of lumber. There are, however, many claimants for the honor of being the "largest tree" and the "oldest tree," and these claims, according to foresters, cannot always be verified.

LASSEN FORGING TO THE FRONT

(By T. A. ROSEBERRY, JR.)

Susanville—With such improvements as a broad highway reaching from Susanville to the coast, and up-to-date roads running from it to every part of the country; the completion of the Fernly-Lassen branch of the Southern Pacific; full shifts at the lumber plant of the Red River Lumber Company at Westwood; the location of every available acre of tillable soil in Honey Lake Valley; important developments in the northern part of the county, and many other signs of a great progress, Lassen County is forging to the front of the progressive world.

On October 28th, a delegation of "good roads" citizens of Red Bluff, Tehama County, arrived in Susanville and convened with the people here for the purpose of discussing the possibility of constructing a cross-country road through Lassen and Plumas Counties to connect with a road which Tehama County has already built from the eastern boundary of that county to Eureka, Humboldt County. The result of the meeting was the launching of a plan to build the road from the Tehama County line eastward, to connect with the Lincoln highway at Reno, Nevada. It is highly probable that the Lincoln Highway Commission will choose this route, as did the prescient pioneers, in looking for the best pass over the mountains in the early days. But if they do not, we will not be excluded from equally good traveling conveniences. Suffice to say that, if the committee on the Lincoln highway is looking for a combination of good grades, magnificent scenery, and aid in its construction, they can find them on this route.

On the 3rd inst. a delegation of Big Valley citizens, from the northern part of Lassen County, convened with the citizens of the southern end of the county in conference on various matters pertaining to the welfare of the county in general. In consequence a committee composed of "live wires" was appointed to devise ways and means to obtain the means with which to erect an up-to-date court house, a new county hospital, and to construct the best roads "on the market" to every section of the county. Of these roads, one will reach from Susanville and extend entirely around Eagle Lake. This body of water, with its timber fringed shores, its abundance of bass and trout, and resting in the wilds of the Lassen Peak National Forest Reserve like a setting of sapphire in a delicate mold of emerald, is the awakening rival of Lake Tahoe. Big Valley, which has for several years been retarded by the slow service of the Government, which it set aside for a reservoir site, is now rejoicing over the bright prospects of being freed from the aggravating bondage. Big Valley is composed of the sort of people who build empires.

CALIFORNIA.

Written for the Admission Day celebration of the California State Association of Washington, D. C., and read by the author before the association on the evening of September 9, 1913.

Land of lofty mount and manhood,
Land of rushing streams and gold,
Land of vine and grain and orange,
Land of beauty manifold.

Here the eagle in his soaring
Screams across the mountain crest,
And the bear and pouncing panther Thrill this glorious Golden West.

And the broad Pacific roaring
Breaks upon that rocky shore
With a loud sonorous chorus
That resonnds forevermore.

Here tonight with magic memory
Californians proud and free
Celebrate their brilliant statehood
At the age of sixty-three!

And the future of her people
For the home and love and law
Shall be happier, brighter, greater,
Celebrating Panama,—

That canal of giant glory

Floating all the freight of man
From the isles of the Atlantic
To the isles of old Japan.

And when God on throne eternal
Calls the people to His sphere
California will be present—
Blooming through celestial year!

Oils distilled from the needles of spruce and fir trees are being used to scent petroleum floor oils, which are sometimes objectionable on account of their odor.

The average area administered by a ranger on the federal forests of the United States is about 100,000 acres. In Germany the area administered by a man of equivalent rank is about 700 acres.

The republic of Colombia is said to have excellent regulations for its national forests. Lumbermen who take cedar and mahogany are required to plant young trees of the same species in cut-over spaces.

DEVOTED TO FARM, ORCHARD, GARDEN, POULTRY, DAIRYING, BEES, ETC.

Edited by GEORGE H. BANCROFT.

POTATO FACTS.

POTATOES WILL RETURN THE amount invested more quickly than most any farm crop raised. The value of the potato crop in the United States exceeds $165,000,000 per year. The average yield per acre is 106.1 bushels. Three hundred bushels per acre are not uncommon, and in a number of cases over 400 bushels per acre have been raised. Potatoes produce little seed, as the vital energy is expended in the production of tubers, which are swelled portions of the underground roots.

Potatoes do best in sandy, gravelly or clay loam, which is naturally well drained. A moist, cool condition is best; warm, but not hot. The soil should be well supplied with vegetable matter. Stiff land may be improved and made suitable for potato growing by green manuring and drainage. Light soils also do better if green manured and fertilized. Soil previously cropped to clover, alfalfa, corn or root crops, produces good yields of potatoes.

A good rotation of crops must not be overlooked—crops supplying humus for the succeeding potato crop is important. The experiment has been tried of raising potatoes for fifteen years on the same soil—the fifteenth year there was absolutely no tubers produced. The sixteenth year, the same land was seeded to barley without fertilizing and a bumper crop was raised. This shows the importance of rotation of crops. After a few years of other crops, this land would no doubt produce a crop of potatoes again.

Potato growing is now reduced to a science, and one year with another, pays big money to the intelligent grower, and this will no doubt continue. The problem of feeding our large, increasing population will be solved to a great extent by the humble potato. Spraying potatoes to kill fungoid, insect and bacterial pests has become an established practice. Spraying has the effect of not only destroying the pests that feed upon the plant and tuber, but has an added beneficial effect in increasing the strength and size of the foliage. The green coloring matter is increased in the stem, which is an indication of vigor.

Moisture is transpired through the leaves better in sprayed plants, as moisture laden with plant food extracted from the soil moves from the roots to the leaves and back to the tubers through the aid of healthy foliage, the result being a greater growth of the crop. The longer the leaves remain thrifty, the larger the crop. Spraying also results in an increase of starch in the tuber. Green manuring in addition to the use of commercial fertilizer, gives the best results in potato growing. Farm manures (unless thoroughly rotted), lime, and muriate of potash should be avoided in potato growing. Sulphate of potash, being free from chlorides, is the best potato fertilizer, and sulphuric acid in an available form is good.

Perhaps the best manner of fertilizing potato crops is by manuring the previous crops well, and the application of potash and sulphuric acid at the time of planting, taking care that no fertilizing material comes in direct contact with the potato seed (cut tubers). It is presumed that nitrogen has been previously provided to the soil, through green manuring crops of a leguminous nature.

Farm manures applied to previous crops in the rotation, such as corn, benefits the potato crop following. Corn is the ideal crop to precede the potato, for the reason that corn is a gross feeder. Farm manures may be applied to corn in a fresh state and more of the fertilizing material extracted by the corn than is possible, if well rotted manure is used. That is, to produce one ton of well rotted manure takes several tons of fresh manure and a great waste is thus produced. It has been shown most conclusively by reliable experimenters, that spraying increases the potato yield from 20 per cent to 118 per cent.

Owing to the high cost of meats and other foods, the people are consuming more potatoes than heretofore, and it has become one of the most staple crops of consumption. There are more than 400 millions of bushels produced annually in the United States alone. Potatoes have come to be raised largely by specialists—naturally the specialist has an advantage over those who divide their land for the production of different crops. He can plant large areas, and therefore must have a good equipment of improved machinery and implements. He can afford to give more study in regard to the best methods of fighting disease, as well as to keep up to date as to markets. He can ship in carload lots, and provide storage better than small growers.

Probably the most successful potato grower in the world is Harry Lurkin, of Paw Paw, Michigan, who produces an average yield of over 400 bushels to the acre. Mr. Lurkin has reduced potato growing to an exact science, and his methods, if followed, will enable others to do well also. Groves, of Kansas, has been named the potato champion, as he raises 50,000 to 60,000 bushels per year, and has the distinction of selling at the highest prices obtainable by any grower. When we speak of potato raising specialists, we refer to men who plant hundreds and thousands of acres. We are great believers in diversification of crops, in rotation, in keeping more livestock on the farm and up-to-date intensive methods. This general farming applies more to small holdings of from a few acres up to twenty acres, possibly more.

MORE ABOUT BACTERIA.

The life changes of animals and vegetation are so closely related or connected with the functions of bacteria, that in their absence, life itself would soon cease.

Nowadays, it is necessary for the farmer to become acquainted with bacteriology, as he must make use of bacteria in most of his farming operations. In fact, the agriculturist should completely understand and know the action of bacteria as applied to or affecting his business. There are many adverse conditions connected with agricultural pursuits that can only be settled satisfactorily through the aid of the minute soil organisms known as bacteria.

In agriculture, the development of bacteriology has given us a new insight into the culture of the soil, and the nature of soil fertility. We have learned to regard the soil as a culture medium with its almost endless number and species and varieties of bacteria, specialized to do important work in the transformation of the soil, nitrogen, carbon, hydrogen, sulphur; in the transformation, also, of compounds containing lime, magnesia, phosphoric acid, and potash. We have learned to reckon with these organisms in our methods of soil improvement, and have made some progress towards successful systems of soil-inoculation.

Bacteria are grouped with the colorless plants called fungi, which are very important to agriculturists on account of their power of decomposing organic substances and using them as food.

Students and experimenters in biology had great difficulty in determining whether bacteria are animal, or vegetable, in character. The microscope has shown, however, that the reproductive process of bacteria is through a process called fission, which places them in the vegetable kingdom.

However, the specific character or scientific relations of bacteria are matters of indifference to the farmer. His interest is as to their beneficial character, and the means whereby he can foster and encourage the increase and work of those bacteria that help him raise better crops. As there are also injurious bacteria constantly offsetting the farmer's efforts, he is interested in knowing how to combat the pests, and through rotation of crops and otherwise starve them out or destroy them.

MORE ABOUT MANURES.

Corn land is benefited by having application made before land is plowed, thus plowing it under. The best time to apply the manure and plow it under, is in the fall, as by planting time, early next year, the plant food is pretty well mixed with the soil and is thus easily reached by the corn roots, and later on the coarser parts of the manure rots and thus supplies plant food when the corn is reaching a matured stage.

For oats, it would be better for manure to be used for the crop raised previously, say corn. If manure is applied to oats direct, it should be well rotted and used sparingly.

Wheat, like oats, is best fertilized by applying to the previous crop. Applied as a top dressing, manure helps the young plants and keeps the soil warm. On the other hand, if wheat has a forced growth, the straw is soft and has a tendency to lodge. When manure is used for winter wheat, it is best to spread it over the ground and plow under shallow, and after this do the seeding. Ten tons to the acre is generally sufficient. When used as a top dressing it should be well rotted and pulverized. The direct application of barnyard manure is not the best treatment for land upon which either wheat or oats is to be seeded. It is better to apply the manure to a previous crop in the rotation. The rotation of crops should be more generally practiced, and one of the crops should be a green manuring crop, such as rye or vetch.

Well rotted manure should be used in sandy soils. Fresh manure causes sandy soil to dry out too quickly, while rotted manure helps to hold the moisture better.

Manure should be distributed over the field evenly and plowed in shallow. This will cause an even distribution of the plant food, thus preventing rank growths in clumps and poor growth elsewhere. A manure spreader is almost indispensable, as it saves labor and makes manure go over more ground.

In manuring meadows and pastures, it should be done very thinly—if rank manure, not over five tons per acre, but if well rotted, more can be used. If a manure spreader is not available, use a barrow, which will break up the lumps and scatter the manure so that it will be more even.

The amount of manure most desirable, varies with the crop, condition of the soil, the climate, etc. A. O. Gilbertson, the onion specialist of Mason City, Iowa, used 100 loads of rotted manure per acre in preparing his land for onion culture, and says this will answer for fifteen annual crops. He also used green manuring crops and takes three years in preparation before seeding, and he says it pays big.

Asparagus growers use from twenty to fifty loads per acre in the fall, and let it leech into the beds until spring, when harrowing is commenced. Ten or twelve loads per acre will often accomplish as much as greater applications. German authorities say seven to ten tons is considered a light application, twelve to eighteen tons as a regular practice, and twenty or over as heavy, and thirty tons as very heavy.

Barnyard manure is often used very profitably combined with commercial fertilizers such as superphosphate of lime and sulphate of potash.

If too much barnyard manure is applied to any crop in a rotation, succeeding crops receive the benefit. All of the plant food is not absorbed by the first crop after making the application, but the benefit is continued for a great many years afterwards.

DO YOU KNOW BEANS?

Probably not the "tepay" bean? This is something new to most people. It is said to be the most remarkable dry farming crop yet presented to the public. The tepay bean is planted and cultivated like any other field bean. Cover two inches deep, plant four inches apart in rows three feet apart for dry farming. The beans do not do well when irrigated too heavily, but in hot, dry countries they make handsome returns. The information regarding this remarkable bean comes to us through the Arizona Experiment Station at Tucson. The cost of beans for seed ranges from thirty cents to ten cents per pound at Tucson, depending upon the quantity ordered.

We shall be glad to arrange for bringing a supply of these beans to Los Angeles for distribution. We will do this without profit. Send in your orders for delivery later, in time for spring planting. Say how many pounds you wish to try and we will charge you up cost, whatever it is. A small number of pounds should suffice for experimental purposes, but enough should be ordered to insure sufficient seed for planting the succeeding season. Address Editor Agricultural Department, Grizzly Bear.

SOIL FERTILITY SNAPSHOTS.

To be successful, a farmer should keep up soil fertility by rotation of crops, including at least one leguminous crop for plowing under as green manure. This, coupled with raising more cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry, will result in the soil being constantly supplied with fertilizing ingredients, so that improved conditions will be accomplished.

Red clover, being a vigorous legume, should be grown on soils where fertility is at a low ebb. The rapid response in increased crops following clover is very marked.

Soy beans are invaluable as a soil renovator. They gather nitrogen from the air, and phosphoric acid and potash from the soil. Feed the crop to stock and the manure thus produced returned to the land supplies plant food valued at $15 per acre, of crop.

Pure cultures of active, vigorous nitrogen gathering bacteria, which need simply to be mixed with sugar and a little water and the mixture shaken well and poured on the seed before planting, costs less than $2 per acre.

Green manuring crops, preferably legumes, are the modern and most economical builders-up of soil fertility. Just before plowing under the green manuring crop, spread fresh barnyard manure over the field at the rate of two or three tons per acre. This will supply the bacterial life needed in the decaying process.

For a soil to be in its highest stage of fertility, it must contain germ life.

LITTLE FARM NOTES.

With land values soaring upwards, intensive and diversified farming has come to stay.

Large irrigation projects in our State are the means through which large tracts of land are being divided into small tracts and sold to small holders.

Country life is becoming more and more attractive and desirable. The schools are better. Good road systems are being built as fast as money will do the trick. Then there are electricity, the telephone, and other good things.

People on small farms are more encouraged to use co-operative methods in buying supplies and in selling produce.

Farm appliances and new household devices for lightening the old-time drudgery are factors in making farm life more pleasant and congenial.

It is no longer the rule for the young folks to leave the farm and the old folks, as all conditions have so improved as to lessen the effect of the lure of the city, with its glitter and superficial life; in fact, the city has lost much of its seductive effect.

The social center idea has taken root among the rural districts, and not a few substantial and attractive buildings have been provided for sociability and for other neighborhood uses.

DECEMBER PLANTING CALENDAR.

VEGETABLE GARDEN—This is a good month in which to spade over the ground, spread a good thick dressing of stable manure over the surface, and dig the ground as deeply as possible. Sow beets, early cabbage, carrot, corn salad, cress, dandelion, endive, kale, kohlrabi, leek, lettuce, mustard, onion, parsley, parsnip, peas, potatoes, radish, spinach and turnip.

FLOWER GARDEN—This is a good month in which to spade over the ground, spread a good thick dressing of stable manure over the surface and dig the ground as deeply as possible. Continue to sow hardy annuals in the open ground, acroclonium, alyssum, bartonia, calendula, candytuft, annual chrysanthemum, clarkia, collinsia, cosmos, eschscholtzia, godetia, larkspur, linum, lupinus, mignonette, nemophila, poppies, sweet peas, pansy and stocks; also California wild flowers. Continue to plant Dutch bulbs and lilies.

CROWS OUR FRIENDS.

The United States Department of Agriculture says the crow is the farmer's friend, consuming enough grasshoppers, cut worms, white grubs and other injurious insects to make him highly valuable to farmers. The crow has bad habits, but these are more than counterbalanced by his good qualities. Farmers, when they see crows in the corn, are apt to think they are eating corn, while as a matter of fact worms is the object. It is recommended that too many crows may result in their eating other things than injurious insects, and it is therefore recommended that their numbers be kept down somewhat.

CROWN PRINCESS MAXIE DE KOL II.

She's sure some cow. Her number is 118,991, and she has just set a new Holstein-Friesian record by producing 113.8 pounds of butter fat from 2,588.4 pounds of milk in thirty consecutive days. This cow is owned by G. W. Rising, Fayette, Ohio. Up to this time Agatha Pontine held the thirty-day record.

POULTRY

(By MRS. A. BASLEY.)

POULTRY SHOWS.

THE POULTRY SHOWS HAVE ALREADY commenced in this broad land, and although the Los Angeles show is not to be held until January, 1914, it is fully time to prepare for it by selecting the best of our birds and looking carefully over them.

It takes eight or ten weeks for the feathers to grow, and as broken feathers, or those that have been cut off, always bring a cut from the judge, all broken or spoiled feathers should be pulled out at least eight weeks before the show, so that the new feathers may be grown in time. The pulling out should be done quickly, with a slight jerk, and care be taken not to bruise the skin, for strange to say, a bruise or injury will often bring in a white feather in dark fowls, or a black feather in a white fowl.

A little linsed meal in the food for three weeks before the show will add luster to the feathers of the colored fowls. White fowls should be washed, a few days before the show. To wash and dry four fowls is a good day's work for anyone, even an expert. I have washed fowls for every show at which I have exhibited; the last time a helper and I washed thirty-two, so I speak from actual experience.

In washing the fowls I used four tubs, instead of three. The first tub was the clothes boiler, because I could make the suds deeper in that than in a tub. The suds must be made with a good white soap, and be as warm as one can bear the hand in. I use a good soft flannel washcloth, and holding the fowl's shanks between the fingers of my left hand, immerse it, wetting it thoroughly to the skin, using the flannel to scrub and wash it most thoroughly, till every feather was perfectly clean; it takes about a half-hour in this first tub. Two persons can do this better than one, as every feather should be gone over carefully, and, if a white fowl, should look pure white.

When the bird is clean, lift it out, and while one holds it, let the other gently pass the hands down the back to squeeze the suds out. Then immerse in the second tub of warm water, and with a clean sponge wash and rinse it again; taking it out, squeeze the water out, put it into tub three, in which the water is a little cooler, and finally when all the soap is thoroughly rinsed out, put the bird into the last tub, in which there is cold water with a little blueing in it, as much as one would use for clothes. If the soap has not all been rinsed out, the blueing will stick in places, and the fowl will look worse than if it had been left dirty, so one should be careful to have the soap all rinsed out before the last rinse.

Taking the fowl out of the last water, I run my hand gently down its back to slightly squeeze the water out, then wipe it with a dry linen towel. I then make it flap its wings, by throwing it in the air while holding its legs. The room should be very warm—110 degrees Fahrenheit—and must be kept at that heat until the fowls are thoroughly dry. If they are allowed to dry in a cool room, the feathers stick together, but in a hot room, they become fluffy and beautiful. The fowls must be washed in the morning, for it takes several hours for them to get dry. After they are washed I give them a quarter of a teaspoonful of red pepper mixed with a little butter, to keep them from taking cold. I put them in a coop with clean fresh white straw to dry them and feed them dry grain. They should have grain as their principal diet at least two weeks before the show.

CLEANING THE SHANKS.

The afternoon, after having bathed the fowls in the morning, I commence with the first one that many of the clubs are sure to profit by the suggestions. Later, the President's three-minute reports were read, devoting thirty minutes to this work.

In the evening of the first day, a reception was tendered to Luther Burbank and the officers of the district, in which the state officers and visiting district presidents and chairmen also participated. Addresses were made by the Mayor, the chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, and the District Attorney of Sonoma County; also by Mrs. Orr, who delivered an eloquent address on "The Business of Being a Clubwoman," which was greatly enjoyed by the clubwomen. Mrs. Shuman, whose illness precluded her constant attendance, was present at the reception, and when Mr. Rinner, for the Chamber of Commerce, presented her with a very handsome flower bowl, beautifully inscribed, the members nearly "brought the roof down." Mrs. Shuman's acceptance was delivered in her usual happy vein, and this pretty gift to the dearly-beloved president of the San Francisco District only served to cement the bond between the district and Santa Rosa. I should not forget to speak of the musical treat afforded the members in the singing of Miss Elizabeth Wilcox of Oakland. This was indeed a feast, and the members could not thank Mrs. Jury, chairman of music, enough for having provided the treat for them.

The appearance of Dr. Luella Clay Carson and Mrs. Frederick Sanborn on the second day proved a sufficient drawing card to bring many clubwomen from San Francisco to hear these women. Dr. Carson spoke on "A Force in American Literature," while Mrs. Sanborn told the members of her work in endeavoring to secure the funds that will make the "Mothers' Monument" possible. The presidents' hour was later given over to the reports of presidents, after which adjournment was had to the grounds surrounding the Odd Fellows' Hall, where folk dancing by the children was enjoyed. Many of the members also enjoyed auto rides through the county on the second afternoon, others going to the Luther Burbank gardens.

The third day's addresses stood out prominently also, those of Dr. Mariana Bertola on "The Necessity for Physical Examination Before Gymnasium Work," and that of Miss Amada Hicks, Crawford House, University of California, on the "Exceptional Child," containing many surprises and much educational matter. Miss Mary B. Vail, chairman of household economies, also rendered a splendid report. This was the day for surprises. The nominating committee, Mrs. D. C. Farnham (chairman), Mrs. Clinton Folger and Mrs. Fisher, could honestly say they had come to the convention absolutely uninstructed as to officers, no one having expressed her preferences, and no "sign of a slate." Up to the time of the meeting one would hear that either Mrs. King or Mrs. Denniston would be elected, and sometimes, Mrs. Knight. Later, Mrs. Denniston stated that under no condition would she be a candidate. Up to the time that the nominating committee brought in their report, no one had any conception of just what would happen, nor whose name would be presented, and the list contained many surprises, the offices being fairly distributed, and all doubts as to a "slate" being dissipated. Mrs. Percy S. King of Napa was, it seems, the unanimous choice of the convention, and it was forethought on the part of the members in placing her in the position, her splendid qualities making her an ideal president, and her position as vice-president to Mrs. Shuman making it clear that she will continue the work already begun by the latter, and continuing the good club fellowship existing in the San Francisco District. Her officers are all "workers," and it is a foregone conclusion that Mrs. King's executive board will be chosen with the same thought in mind,—of securing the best material in club membership to carry on the work for the coming year. Mrs. King enters her work with the good wishes of all the district, and the promise of co-operation from all the clubs. Her secretaries are Miss Janet MacLay of Napa and Mrs. Crossett of Corona Club, San Francisco. Mrs. Daingerfield of Pacific Grove is treasurer.

We have to say one word for Santa Rosa's club members, and the club husbands. Did they work? What we should like to know was, "When did they rest?" We know that the Santa Rosa clubwomen missed all the sessions, their time being occupied arranging flowers for the members' rooms, preparing boxes of fruits for each member, looking after their general comfort, and providing for their entertainment. They were tireless, and the members serving in the information bureau did yeoman service for three days. Those serving on the reception committee sent their husbands with automobiles to meet the women at the trains and see that they were brought to their hotels, where the arrangements committee attended to the rooms. Those who could not secure rooms in the hotels were taken to private homes, and well looked after. Mrs. Sweet, Mrs. Jacks and Mrs. Riinner were "on the job" from morning until late at night, and to them is owing much of the success of the convention. And the men! What they did not do for the comfort of the guests would be hard to say. They actually worked as hard as the women, and the San Francisco District came away voting the Santa Rosa convention "the finest ever," and the hosts incomparable. The press of Santa Rosa also deserves many thanks, and Mrs. O. L. Houts, the press representative, worked in the interest of the district every moment of the time. Mrs. Houts attended to many of the preparations for the convention.

NOTES OF THE CLUBS.

The Salinas Civic Club has been doing good work during the past year. They have had two clean-up days under the supervision of the club; have had lectures on the prevention of tuberculosis, and also one on civil service, to which they invited the high school seniors. Another meeting was devoted to the consideration of a sanitary milk supply, which was conducted by the teacher of home economics. This club deals entirely with civic matters, and they say that their persistency in treating with these subjects has at last impressed the city officials, and they are now receiving their co-operation in all their work.

The Palo Alto Woman's Club has taken three means to raise money for their new clubhouse: First, a cafeteria; then card parties, and later food sales. All three have brought in large sums to this enterprising club. A subscription paper was circulated by one of the members, and a large sum netted. They have contributed sums of money to the playgrounds, and also to the W.C.T.U. rest-room. The best piece of work performed by this club was securing the enactment of a city ordinance raising the legal age of cigarette smoking from eighteen to twenty-one years. Other clubs take notice, and save the boys of your cities.

The Monrovia Club, Los Angeles District, recently celebrated "A Gentlemen's Night" at their clubhouse in the little town, their guests numbering fully three hundred. It was a Hallowe'en affair, the decorations carrying out that idea. Glimmering jack-o-lanterns adorned the tables, mingling with black and yellow streamers, and witches and black cats completing the Hallowe'en picture. The refreshments were such as would please the men's palates, and what was more, a quartet was engaged to furnish music as would delight their hearts, namely, rag-time melodies. The singers were called upon to repeat their songs many times, to the delight of the audience. The whole evening was a splendid success, and was voted especially so by the men invited by the clubwomen.

The Watsonville Woman's Club lent valuable assistance this year to the leaders of the California Apple Show Association, an annual institution in their town, providing and fitting up a large rest-room for women and children attending the show, and placing a matron in charge. They also assisted in other civic work in their town, donating fifty dollars to the public playground. They claim that their civic work is done "more by suggestion than otherwise, our civic committee, consisting of the wife of the mayor, the wife of an alderman and the wife of a police judge." They are also doing much educational work, "having many teachers on our membership roll." Then they have a rose show every year, open to all competitors, and for which valuable prizes are given, which "has led to the cultivation and care of many beautiful varieties of roses in our city." Then they believe in reciprocity, having been the guests of Santa Cruz Club, which shows more foresight. They are now raising money with which to build a clubhouse, and with the women named above, surely they will have their clubhouse before the next meeting of the district.

The Muricata Club of Pacific Grove is the "baby" of the San Francisco District. This club was federated September 20th. It is a travel club, and has for its motto, "He who from travel would bring home knowledge, must take knowledge with him." The club membership is limited to twenty.

"An Afternoon With Our Men Journalists" brought out, in spite of the rain, all the members and friends of the Pacific Coast Women's Press Association on Monday, November 10th. Representatives of all the San Francisco daily papers were there, numbering among them John P. Young, Edward Cahill, Phil Francis, Edward Bowles, John T. Barry and Edward Weigle, the brains and wit of newspaperdom of San Francisco. HANGTOWN DID LIVE AGAIN

ANGTOWN!

Was it a success?

I'll leave that question to be answered by the 25,000 people who visited it and the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles who presented it in the southern city the week of November 3rd.

Even in the heyday of its fame, the Hangtown of '49 never boasted such a population as did the Hangtown of 1913. But while those who peopled the El Dorado County mining town came to search for gold, those who invaded the Los Angeles Hangtown came to part with their gold, and to witness a reproduction of one of California's oldest gold camps in active operation.

And the Angelenos were not disappointed in any particular, even to the extent of finding numerous places where they could easily separate themselves from their money, just as the '49ers found in the Hangtown of early days.

The commercial and social life of the pioneer mining camp were also depicted, for the Los Angeles Hangtown presented, on one side of the main street, the First Chance saloon, sheriff's office, jail, general store, bank, Redlight saloon, Mother Grady's boarding-house, and a music hall. On the other side were the Last Chance saloon, Chinese laundry, Grizzly Flat mine-shaft, Palace hotel, barber shop, justice's court, and Riley's dance hall.

All of the officials of the town, as well as those conducting the several places of business, appeared nightly in costumes that were familiar in the days of '49. Just as gold-dust was the legal tender in the old Hangtown, so "bones" were the only "excepted" money in the 1913 Hangtown, ten cents of Uncle Sam's money purchasing one bone of Hangtown script. While, also, the saloons did an enormous business, as they did in the early-day mining camps, no "miners' inspiration" was dispensed, nothing but soft drinks, drawn from barrels and bottles bearing alcoholic labels, being served male and female patrons, alike.

The best sustained feature was generally conceded to be the Chinese laundry. The temporary "Chinks" were attired in gaudy costumes, their place contained all the paraphernalia of the best-regulated Chinese laundry, and they jabbered the Chinese-English lingo so exclusively and faithfully that, when the curtain rang down on Hangtown, they with difficulty were able to come back to their real stations in life and converse in straight English.

So numerous were the infractions of the miners' code of laws, that the Vigilantes' Committee and the marshal and his deputies were worked overtime. The culprits, in most cases, were haled before the justice and made to part with a goodly number of their "bones," while in other cases, such as robbing the bank and murder, the suspects were summarily dealt with by judge lynch. Otherwise, the peace and dignity of the City of Angels were sustained, and nothing occurred that could reflect discredit upon the promoters of Hangtown.

The games of chance! How they could testify to the gambling instinct that dwells in the female of the species as well as the male. We thought we had supplied a sufficient number of these to accommodate every person in Los Angeles who desired to flirt with luck, but as the week wore on it became apparent that everyone in the city would, if it were possible, take a gambling chance. The way men and women fought their way to the gambling devices, and piled their "bones" upon the altar of chance, was a revelation—and, incidentally, a good revenue producer.

The entire space in this issue could easily be devoted to a description of the many interesting features connected with the Hangtown festival. But what's the use? Those features do not appear as attractive on paper as they did during their actual presentation, and no description could begin to create the enthusiasm and general approval that a personal visit to the show did. Everybody who visited Hangtown became inspired, and many repeated their visits, some attending every night. Several Easterners wanted to know how much "two bits," the admission price, was, and when told that a quarter or twenty-five cents would do, willingly contributed.

Hangtown caught the public fancy of Los Angeles, and many regrets have been expressed that it was not continued for another week. But no such expressions have come from the members of the Orders who devoted so much of their time and energy to the production, for when the doors closed at midnight, Saturday, November 8th, they were, indeed, a tired band of faithful workers. All, however, are elated over the results of their labors, for, aside from the grand financial success attained, they have, through united effort, succeeded in placing Los Angeles, their home city, conspicuously on the Native Sons' and Native Daughters' map.

The "Hangtown" festival was given to raise funds with which to entertain the Grand Parlor, N.S.G.W., which convenes in Los Angeles, April 20, 1914, and the financial result insures the greatest Grand Parlor in the Order's history.

Through the medium of Hangtown, the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the southern city have achieved the greatest success, in every particular, ever attained by the Orders in any other city, and it proved to be the most successful undertaking of a similar nature ever attempted in Los Angeles.

The affair was planned and carried out by the Ways and Means sub-committee of the 1914 Grand Parlor Committee, which delegated the handling of details to Harry G. Folsom (chairman) of Ramona Parlor, No. 109, N.S.G.W., J. D. Hunter of Los Angeles Parlor, No. 45, N.S.G.W., and William Stoerner, well known in the theatrical world and a member of Ramona Parlor, No. 109, N.S.G.W. That the committee acted wisely in its selection, and that these men gave the best that was in them, is amply proven by the magnificent success that was scored. Their efforts were ably and faithfully seconded by many members, each of whom put forth his or her best endeavors, and each of whom, without mentioning any names least some deserving person might be unintentionally overlooked, is entitled to full credit for the general result.

Just as the Hangtown of 1849 has been but a memory for many years, so now will the Hangtown of 1913 occupy a commanding place in the memories of those who staged it and those who witnessed the production. It has acquainted thousands of adopted Californians with life in the early-day mining camp, and has imbued native Californians with a greater love for the Pioneer days and for the men and women who peopled not only Hangtown, but many other places in this State, famed in the gold days but now but a memory.

During the week, there were several visitors to Hangtown who claimed either to have been born in the original town or to have resided there in the early days, and all were elated at the reproduction. The "boss" of Mother Grady's boarding house—Mrs. Anderson Hall, a member of La

WE THANK YOU FOR YOUR GENEROUS SUPPORT.

On every hand, the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles were given assistance in making the "Hangtown" festival the success that it proved to be. Without regard as to whether he or she was affiliated with either organization, practically every person called upon, gladly and readily responded. And much of the success of the affair was due, and is with pleasure accredited to, those outside the organizations who so ably seconded the efforts of the promoters.

The Grizzly Bear, therefore, in behalf of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles, is pleased to acknowledge this debt of gratitude and to extend the thanks of these Orders, collectively and individually, to those who so liberally contributed to the "Hangtown" festival:

To the daily press, for unlimited space in spreading "Hangtown" fame.

To the merchants, for most generous contributions of merchandise.

To the friends, who volunteered so much of their time and efforts during the festival.

To the general public, for their most liberal contribution of funds.

To the police and fire departments, for their valuable assistance in handling the immense crowds.

To any and every one, who, in any small degree, contributed to the great success.

Esperanza Parlor, N.D.G.W., and whose father was one of the Reed-Donner Party rescuers—spent her early childhood in Hangtown and was importuned on every hand for information concerning the place.

Many of the visitors had heard a great deal about mines, but had never seen one, so that they were naturally attracted to the shaft of the "Grizzly Flat" mine and willingly gave up one of their "bones" to descend the shaft and look at the miniature mine in operation. After reviewing the mine, the sight-seers strolled through "Lover's Lane."

The most commendable feature in connection with Hangtown, and the one which elicited favorable comment from visitors, was that every cent spent was a free-will offering, no one being asked to part with his money (excepting the admission fee). There were plenty of places to spend one's money, but the spending was always voluntary. That the visitors appreciated this fact is proven by the remark, heard on every hand, that "this is the first affair of the kind where we haven't been pestered to death to spend, spend, spend." And this was always answered by, "Isn't it just grand! Let's try our luck again!"

It was, and they did! Hurrah for Hangtown!

WAIT A MINUTE, HONEY,

I MUST BUY HANGTOWN MONEY!

The following parody on "Wait a Minute, Honey, I've Got To Get Some Money," was written by Mary Adair Aubury of Los Angeles, a Native Daughter born in El Dorado County near "Hangtown," after she had witnessed the great Los Angeles spectacle. Mrs. Aubury also loaned her painting of "Hangtown," which adorned the wall of "Mother Grady's Boarding House." She is also the author of "A Toast to the Pioneers," a song inspired by the passing away of so many Pioneers. The "Hangtown" parody is in correct meter, so that it may be used for singing purposes if desired:

We all had been invited old "Hangtown Times" to see.

Cal Wilson stood there shouting, 'twas not a Blackstone plea:

This way for "Hangtown" money, you'll need it very soon,

They'll make relics bye and bye, these cheeks in odd festoons;

They will buy hot tamales, frijoles, chili-con-carne, too.

If you find them all sold out, Stoerner's the man to see;

Bob Hanley and Fred Basset are busy these days, too,

Dreaming dreams behind the scenes as this refrain they soo:

REFRAIN.

"Wait a minute, Honey, wait a minute, do, We've got to get some money, and it must be Hangtown, too.

Don't you worry, Honey, I'll be true to you, Native Daughters sure are sweet but you are my own Boo Boo.

Wait a minute, Honey, wait a minute, do, I've got to buy some money, and it must be Hangtown, too.

Vail and Meador on the job, but trust them not must you,

Native Daughters sure are sweet, but you're my own Boo Boo."

Hunt made a stab for "Grizzly Bear" in a shirt of red, Mother Brady's grown so giddy, she thinks her Romeo's dead.

The Native Daughters on the go, two, then three, then four,

They are serving hot tamales, bought with Hangtown cash galore.

Some there were with white hair who were seen flirting too.

Jo Adair signed up hangings, his score was always new.

McCoy and Folsom "fotod" on the movie's screen.

Singing soft sweet somethings by the shaft to "Lover's Lane."

(Refrain.)

Bradford shows just how to play ping-pong with rondo balls,

Rose made a "Bad"ding mayor, his bark was just a stall!

Thomas, Meyers, Bright and Bright, Loey and William Smith,

The way they put up "Games of Chance" savors much of myth.

Lichtenberger and Soto too, bankers now and then,

Were referees on palms of pretty maids near the "Gypsy Den,"
 Johnny Jump Ups, Hopsing Suey's Cousins of Hop
 Lee,
 Grinned out from almond eyes with chopsticks sung with glee!

(Refrain.)

"These Hantown Times" are over and festive days are gone,
 Leaving memories under cover of these "Dandy Native Sons."
 They're stuff the world has needed since old Adam was a man,
 To posterity they've deeded triumphs by their fathers won.
 Their joys included mothers, and the sisters wore quaint gowns;
 Brothers frolicked with firearms, used by daddies in "Hantown."
 Now the big "play day" is over and they've made the money.—
 Natives in their sleep will cry out, "Wait a Minute, Honey."

THE STATE'S PROGRESS

(October Bulletin, California Development Board.)

Laud sales on large and small scales have largely confined themselves during the past month to smaller holdings. Some reported were: Purchase of 727 acres on Roberts Island; purchase of 3400 acres of reclaimed land near Lodi for subdivision; 1340 acres in Happy Valley, Shasta County, to be subdivided; 3000 acres tule land in Western Sutter County to be reclaimed and subdivided; purchase of the Tisdale ranch of 3000 acres in Sutter County, also the Trabern ranch of 5483 acres near Ripon, San Joaquin County; purchase of the 360-acre Aiken dairy ranch on Pine Creek, near Chico.

An irrigation project embracing 60,000 acres of rich land is on foot south and west of Oroville.
 Five 50-inch pumps are being installed near Grimes, Colusa County, on a reclamation district. The United States Reclamation Service is extending much encouragement to the water users of the Orland water project. Surveys are being made near Red Bluff by Los Angeles capitalists for an irrigation system of 50,000 acres, water to come from Cottonwood Creek, and the land to be given to citrus culture.

Despite the shortage in practically all of the deciduous fruit crops, returns were equal to last year, the growers reporting better prices for their products. Shipments to October 1st were 10,394½ carloads, as against 10,218¾ carloads in 1912. Terra Bella, Tulare County, shipped 75 carloads of casah melons during the month, most of them going to Chicago. A large acreage of these melons will be planted next season. Foreign exports for September were $3,957,145; to non-contiguous territory, $1,608,741.

The cotton crop of Imperial County is estimated at not less than 19,000 bales. There is a great demand for the seed. Experiments in growing cotton have been made at Oakdale, Stanislaus County, and have proved very satisfactory. It is likely to become a leading industry in that section.

The rice crop of the upper Sacramento Valley for this year is estimated at $1,000,000. It is figured that 10,000 acres at fifty sacks per acre will bring $2 per sack. This is a new California industry and is growing rapidly, there being much call for land at fair prices in the rice growing districts, which is much emphasized by the establishment of rice mills within easy reach. Richvale is shipping rice straw, the product of three baling machines, to the Antioch paper mills.

The California hop crop this year is estimated at 95,000 bales, worth approximately $5,000,000.

Orange shipments to date are about 50 per cent of those in 1912, but the predictions for the growing crop are between 80 and 85 per cent. The first ten carloads of the new crop have been sold for export to Australia; this constitutes the earliest shipment on record from Tulare County.

The power company at Lake Spaulding commenced filling the reservoir October 31st. The dam is 305 feet high. Forty thousand acres in Placer County are to be irrigated from the reservoir. The project will cost more than $6,000,000. Two hundred men will soon be employed on the Las Plumas reservoir on the Feather River, the work to cost
 $1,000,000.

INDIAN LULLABY.

The sun has hidden behind the clouds
 And gone to his rest in the sea,
 The eagles are calling their babies home
 To their nest in the old pine tree.

Sleep, my little papoose,
 The camp-fire blazes bright,
 The stars in the sky sing a lullaby,—
 Sleep till the morning light.

The wild goats rest on the mountain crest
 And the deer in the thicket below,
 The white swan hides in the reedy marsh
 Where the evening breezes blow.
 Sleep, my little papoose,
 Out in the soft moonlight,
 The owl in the tree is watching o'er thee,—
 Sleep, little babe, good night!

is dry. I first have a sharp penknife, sharpen a half-dozen matches to a point, spread a clean white cloth on my lap, sit down on my rocking-chair near the kitchen window, my helper hands me the fowl, and I wrap the cloth around it to prevent its flapping its wings. I then take a pointed match and commence at one toe; I clean under each scale, just as one cleans one's finger nail, and gently, but firmly, clean each one. As soon as the point gets worn off I take another match. I have tried tooth-picks and finger-nail cleaners, but found the matches the most satisfactory for the fowls, and always handy. It takes from an hour to an hour and a half to clean every scale on the shanks of the fowls and their toes.

After they are clean, I either wash the feet and legs in warm soap-suds and wipe off without rinsing, or rub them over with a raw carrot (some say a potato will do, but I have not tried it). This is to slightly moisten the scales, for by handling for over an hour, they become hot and dry, and lose their luster. I know a man who every day for a week rubbed his cockerels' shanks with a carrot, and they shown as if newly varnished, and were a beautiful yellow. Moisture keeps the shanks yellow, but the adobe and alkali on some farms bleach and ruin them. For those unfortunate enough to be on "adobe soil," I would advise them to wash and clean the fowls' legs a month or two before the show, and grease them slightly with olive oil, lard or butter, rubbing it well in and wiping it off. Do this every week. This will counteract the bad effect of the adobe soil, and your fowls will come out all right for the show. "Lots of trouble," you say. Yes, but it pays. If you do not use every effort to win, some other person will, and the winner deserves to win.

CLEANING WITHOUT WASHING.

Now I will tell you a secret! This washing of the fowls, when well done (and it must be well done or not at all) makes them look beautiful; there is no doubt about that, but it is very trying upon the person who does it; many a bad cold have I taken from being over-heated, spending four hours of a morning in a room with the temperature at 110 degrees. It is also very trying on the fowls, and they sometimes take cold; for this reason, as a preventative, I administer the red pepper.

The secret is a way of cleaning the fowls without washing them. Give them a large scratching pen under shelter, or in the house; keep this filled twelve inches deep in dry, clean, wheat hay for a month before the show, adding more wheat hay every few days. Feed them all the grain in this. They will almost bury themselves in the straw, and it will clean them wonderfully. The straw, sliding down their backs, keeps a continual wiping down and washing off, and at the end of a month they are glossy and clean. You must be very extravagant with your wheat straw, frequently renewing it, or adding to it, so as to have it clean and deep. In this way you can make the fowls clean themselves.

Of course, the feet and legs must be washed and scrubbed with a small brush and warm soap suds, and then be cleaned, as I have described, with a pointed match under each scale. Do not touch the comb and wattles or the shanks with alcohol. It may brighten them for a few minutes, but afterwards they become dull and some turn almost white, as if they had been scalded. Soap and water is the best thing for cleansing and will not hurt them.

Ducks may be cleaned in the same way, and their legs and feet should be scrubbed with soap and water; they do not need the scales cleaned with a pointed match, as the skin is different. The bills should be rubbed with an oiled cloth after washing, in order to polish them a little.

These are the officers of National Parlor, No. 118, N.S.G.W., San Francisco, who won the recent ritualistic contest in the northern city with the excellent score of 961½ points, out of a possible 1000. Under the guidance of Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung, they have been exemplifying the ritual in different parts of the State—San Jose, Sacramento and Stockton—and although other Parlor officers have competed with them, their lead has not been overcome. The State tour is being made at the Grand Parlor's expense. By its recent San Francisco victory, National Parlor holds the Past Presidents' Association cup, which it has twice won.

shall not say which one it was, but it was one of 'em. Then another thing, clubwomen, can't you really see a joke? Why, if those men had been addressing a men's press club, the men would have been "whooping" at some of the funny stories, but you women, and ye Gods! a polite little snicker is all the funniest story ever elicits from any of you. Really, clubwomen, I believe those "timid fawns" must have died four deaths during the afternoon, for never have I seen such suffering on the part of speakers, and never did I see guests in such a hurry to escape, not even waiting for the "cup that was supposed to cheer them," with the exception of one whose wife was present, and—he could not get away. Well, it was a splendid afternoon, and if the men were uncomfortable, the women enjoyed every moment of it, even if they did not "whoop."

The Alpha Neighborhood Club of San Francisco—the mothers' club of the Grattan school of San Francisco—met on November 13th at the school-house to discuss the question, "The Overdressing of School Girls."

San Gabriel, Los Angeles District, now boasts of a civic club, known as the San Gabriel Woman's Club, and numbering thirty charter members. Although just organized, they have commenced to plan for their own home, a worthy aim, surely. The charter will remain open for another month to allow for a large membership.

The Sketch Club, San Francisco District, has been giving public exhibitions during the past month. Beginning the first week in January, they are planning to give weekly lessons in drawing, design, spotting, scale, composition, color theory and harmony, modern technique, etc., for their members. The lessons may be attended by non-members of the club by paying a fee of fifty cents.

The Saturday Afternoon Club of Santa Cruz has done a splendid service to their city. The clubwomen had planned "The Pageant of American Women" for the benefit of the clubhouse fund, when a calamity befell the city—the high school was burned to the ground, and the students lost all their text books. The women declare the principal motive of their club is "service," and therefore, it was up to them to do something. They were appealed to by the board of education to assist the student body by securing books for those who were unable to purchase new ones. A student text-book library was started, and the club guaranteed $250 towards the desired amount. Instead of the pageant being given for the clubhouse fund, it was turned to the library fund, and the tickets sold amounted to $468, thus assuring their guarantee. The strength and helpfulness of the Santa Cruz clubwomen are greatly appreciated by the citizens of their city, so much so, that one of their members has been appointed on an advisory committee of parks, and another a member of the library board, the first instance of women being appointed to serve in any capacity for that city.

At a meeting of the San Francisco District Executive Board, November 15th, San Francisco, a motion was carried to levy a tax of ten cents on each member for the "Mothers' Monument" fund. It was also decided that a suggestion should be made to the state board that this movement be made state-wide. The monument is first to be placed in the Exposition grounds, later forming part of the San Francisco Civic Center. We feel that this ten cents per capita is very small, considering the cause, but that with twenty-five thousand members, a goodly sum should be netted, as many will contribute larger amounts. Especially will the study clubs rise to this work, as they have all studied "The Pioneer Mother," and know her trials, and whether they are "Natives" or not, they will see the beauty in the movement, and a generous response from the clubwomen will be assured.

A NEW DEAL---THREE SHUFFLES

Stockton—The members of Stockton Parlor, No. 7, N.S.G.W., have just had a new deal consisting of three shuffles, as A. J. Turner, the veteran recording secretary, very aptly expressed it. New life has been infused in the Parlor, thereby, and the members are going forth with greater zeal, "eager upon a higher plane." "The first shuffle" consisted of the visit of the famed championship ritualistic team of National Parlor, No. 118, of San Francisco. The team, accompanied by a large delegation of other members of National Parlor, arrived here November 9th, from Sacramento, where they had performed the night before, and put on the work before a large audience of Natives, assembled from surrounding counties, at the Masonic Auditorium.

The officers of Diamond Parlor, No. 246, of Pittsburg, were on hand to contest with National Parlor for the cup offered by the Grand Parlor to the team scoring an equal or higher percentage than that attained by National Parlor when they won the handsome trophy offered by the Past Presidents' Association of San Francisco. The Diamond Parlor boys made a splendid showing and they put on the initiatory work in a very impressive style. While their percentage was not announced by the judges, they were highly commended in ringing addresses by Grand President Thomas Monahan and Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung. Diamond Parlor is a young Parlor and none of the officers are over 21 years of age.

The National Parlor team gave the assembled through a real treat. Natives who came all the way from the mountains of Amador, Calaveras, Tuolumne and Stanislaus Counties to see and hear the crack team, went home with a new insight into the beauties of the ritual of the Native Sons of the Golden West. Dr. George F. Pache, of Angels Camp, who journeyed all the way to Stockton in an automobile plastered with Native Sons' banners, had the honor of being selected as National Parlor's candidate. The judges of the contest were James F. Stanley, Frank Bonivert, Fred Senk, A. D. Alvarez and Fred H. Jung. The two teams were composed as follows: Diamond Parlor, No. 246, of Pittsburg—Past president, Lorenzo Enflo; president, Joseph Cinolla; first vice-president, Frank Fonda; second vice-president, John Rough; third vice-president, John Enflo; marshal, Joseph Buffo; inside sentinel, David Leekie; outside sentinel, Adolph Johnson; senior past president, W. G. H. Croxon. National Parlor, No. 118, of San Francisco—Senior past president, R. H. Ohea; junior past president, P. J. Neumann; president, H. T. Ungewitter; first vice-president, F. M. Buckley; second vice-president, J. E. Kindelon; third vice-president, H. J. Gaevert; marshal, G. V. Ellis; recording secretary, H. F. Lilkendey; financial secretary, W. W. Vaughn; outside sentinel, W. E. Clarke; inside sentinel, R. D. Johnson.

Second Shuffle.

"The second shuffle" consisted of an excursion to Oakdale, November 10th. Stockton Parlor chartered a special train and a large delegation from Lodi Parlor joined the local boys in a visit to Oakdale Parlor, No. 142, the occasion being an initiation of eighteen candidates. For a long time enthusiasm ebbed low among the Oakdale boys, but lately they have gingered up and now they are doing things. The Stockton and Lodi delegations were met at the depot by the Oakdale Parlor in a body and, headed by a brass band and carrying torch lights, the entire membership marched through the streets of Oakdale in parade. Soon after the arrival at the meeting hall, Grand Trustee Jo V. Snyder of Nevada City came in with a big delegation of Natives from Modesto. Following the initiation, a banquet was served in the Hughes opera house. And such a spread! Chicken, served with peas and gravy, mashed potatoes, pudding and a lot of other good things were set before a throng of appetites which needed no tempting. During the evening talks were made by Grand Trustee Snyder, District Deputy F. H. McLachlan of Lodi, A. J. Turner and M. O. Schneider of Stockton and others. One of the features of the evening was the presence of a delegation of fourteen members of Columbia Parlor, No. 258, the baby Parlor of the State. The boys came down from the historic town of Columbia, Tuolumne County, in two big automobiles. The officers of Oakdale Parlor are: Senior past president, F. H. Lee; junior past president, Joe Axelrod; president, M. F. McNamara; first vice-president, D. Clough; second vice-president, M. Axelrod; third vice-president, J. Larsen; marshal, A. Monk; recording secretary, E. Gobin; financial secretary, G. Swartzel; treasurer, G. H. Bentley; inside sentinel, E. Anderson; outside sentinel, C. Hubbel; trustees—E. Hasbrook, H. Crawford and Roy Acker.

The Last Shuffle.

The third and last "shuffle" produced a reception by Stockton Parlor, No. 7, N.S.G.W., to Grand Trustee Jo V. Snyder, November 17th. Delegations from Oakdale, Lodi and Tracy were present as Stockton Parlor's guests to greet the eloquent brother from the Sierras. The Grand Trustee was at his best, and he delivered one of the finest addresses ever heard on the floor of Stockton Parlor. He reviewed at length the work of the Order, G. M. Steele, one of the speakers at the banquet table, declared that Grand Trustee Snyder's address should be printed in pamphlet form and sent out broadcast. Stockton Parlor initiated a candidate, the officers putting on the work in highly improved fashion. The Grand Trustee remarked that the visit of National Parlor's team must have had a stimulating effect. The ravioli supper provided by the entertainment committee was highly enjoyed. Among those who made talks were: G. H. Bentley, Frank H. Lee and Thomas Towl of Oakdale, District Deputy F. H. McLachlan and George W. LeMoin of Lodi, and S. C. Beane, Floyd Kenyon and Cyril Kenyon of Stockton Parlor. W. E. O'Connor presided as toastmaster. The officers of Stockton Parlor are: Junior past president, Frank R. Fitzgerald; president, Martin O. Schneider, Jr.; first vice-president, Cyril McDonald; second vice-president, G. E. Reynolds; third vice-president, Walter P. Rothenbush; marshal, Walter McLachlan; recording secretary, A. J. Turner; financial secretary, W. C. Neumiller; inside sentinel, Harry Duulap; outside sentinel, George J. Fox; organist, Roy Tbethe-way.

SAD DEATH CASTS GLOOM.

A pall of gloom was cast over the membership of Excelsior Parlor, No. 202, N.D.G.W., of Ripon—one of the baby Parlors of the State—on the morning of November 9th, when Miss Aimee G. Arbios was killed in an auto accident. She was one of the charter members of the Parlor and was one of the most popular young women of Stockton. In company with George Fox, inside sentinel of Stockton Parlor, No. 7, N.S.G.W., to whom she was betrothed, Clarence A. Fitzgerald and Miss May Madden, she was returning to Stockton from a dance given by Excelsior Parlor at Ripon. Mr. Fox was driving the auto. A dense fog hung low over the road, reflecting the glare of the headlights until it became almost blinding. It made driving in the center of the road a hard task. The party was traveling less than twenty miles an hour when the car suddenly left the road, ran down a steep embankment and tumbled in a ditch. Mr. Fitzgerald and Miss Madden leaped and fell clear, while Miss Arbios and Mr. Fox were pinned under the machine. Mr. Fox was easily extricated but the full weight of the machine rested upon the body of Miss Arbios and her companions were unable to lift it. She died within a few minutes but was conscious to the last, bidding her friends a sad farewell. Her chest was crushed. The funeral, which was held on the 13th, was one of the largest seen in Stockton in recent years. Excelsior Parlor, No. 202, held services for their deceased charter member; it was their first funeral. Members of the Native Daughters and of Stockton Parlor, Native Sons, marched behind the hearse to St. Mary's church and thence to San Joaquin cemetery, where the interment was made.

Dance for Charity.

San Francisco—The joint local Parlors of N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. gave a masquerade ball at Pavilion Rink, November 1st, for the benefit of the Homeless Children's Agency, at which many unique and effective costumes were worn. A goodly sum was netted for the work of finding homes for California's homeless children. Judge Charles Creighton of Stanford Parlor, N.S.G.W., was chairman of the general committee, and Mrs. Mae C. Boldemann, Grand Vice-president, N.D.G.W., secretary.

Pleased With Results.

Taylorville—At the entertainment given October 18th for the Homeless Children's fund, Plumas Parlor, No. 228, with outside assistance, played the drama, "Border Land," in three acts. There was a large turnout to see what the Native Sons could do, and all expressed themselves pleased. Dancing was indulged in for a short time, and the Ladies' Aid served ice-cream.

Old Timers Rule Again.

San Francisco—Rincon Parlor, No. 72, celebrated the anniversary of its institution November 12th by having many of the charter officers fill the chairs. Past President William J. Wynn, founder and organizer of Rincon Parlor, presided over the meeting, ably assisted by Past President Joseph A. Murphy as first vice-president; Oscar A. Clegg, a charter member of California and Rincon Parlors, as second vice-president; William Coyle, third vice-president; William E. Foley, recording secretary; Louis K. Hagenkamp, financial secretary; Thos. H. Vivian, marshal; William F. Brown, past president; Frank Carrol (Shorty McGinty Carrol, star catcher and ball player of the Pioneer-Haverly ball teams in the '80s), senior past president; William Williams, treasurer; Wm. H. Grownsey (Rockefeller's rival before the fire), Wm. McCreery (who sold all the fire wood, so that now we have to use gas) and Harry E. Keefe (one of the pillars in a local laundry), trustees; John J. Barnett, inside sentinel, and Daniel R. Black, outside sentinel.

President Wynn called the meeting to order, just as he had in the '80s, and ordered the secretary to read the minutes of Rincon Parlor's institution, November 6, 1885. During the reading of the minutes, it was pleasant to hear the names of Past Grand President John A. Steinbach, Past Grand President Chas. W. Decker, Past Grand President Fred Greely, Grand Secretary Henry Lunstedt, and several others who did noble work in making the Order what it is today, referred to. President Wynn called upon all the charter members present to relate what they could remember of the first meeting, and surely it was a treat to hear the boys of former years tell what happened then, and the biggest "kid" of them all was "Pop" Wynn, who very seldom says a word. It was with the greatest of pleasure that Wm. Brown and Wm. William, two charter members who have been sick for a long time but who managed to get to this meeting to see the boys of '85, were introduced. At the close of the festivities it was voted by all present—both the members of '85 and of '13—that they had participated in one of the best meetings they ever attended, and one which renewed many old ties of friendship.

A Grand Success.

Elk Grove—The annual ball of Elk Grove Parlor, No. 41, October 24th, was the greatest success, in every particular, in the Parlor's history, and was attended by visitors from the Parlors at Lodi,

Don't blame The Grizzly Bear, if your Parlor affairs are not mentioned in these columns.

If fault is to be found with anyone for such omission, it is yourself.

The space in The Grizzly Bear is at the disposal of the Subordinate Parlors.

Galt and Sacramento. The hall was attractively decorated with evergreens, smilax and the Order's colors. T. H. McLachlan, recording secretary of Lodi Parlor, and Mrs. G. M. Keema, wife of the past president of Elk Grove Parlor, won the prize waltz. At midnight one of those chicken-pie suppers, for which the Parlor has a State-wide reputation, was served.

Going After Celebration.

Vallejo—At the meeting of Vallejo Parlor, No. 77, November 6th, it was reported that sufficient funds had been guaranteed to finance the 1914 Admission Day celebration, which is to be sought for this city. The campaign committee, aided by the Chamber of Commerce, will now launch a State-wide campaign for the Admission Day prize and will not cease in its efforts until the Grand Parlor meets in Los Angeles next April and decides upon the place for holding next year's Admission Day festivities.

Preparing Ground for Monument.

Sonoma—The members of Sonoma Parlor, No. 111, devoted October 30th to filling in that part of the historic old plaza where the Bear Flag monument, provided for by the last Legislature, will be erected. At noon, a banquet was served the workers by the Native Daughters. Another day will shortly be set aside for completion of the work. The monument will soon be in course of preparation, and its unveiling will be made a festive occasion.

The Right Spirit.

Sacramento—Oak Park Parlor, No. 213, has taken the initiative in a movement which should be carried out by every Parlor in the State, and which has for its object the welcoming, as future residents of California, of all the Easterners. It is proposed to give a reception to members of the local Eastern Society at an early date, at which entertainment will be provided. All the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Parlors in this city will be asked to co-operate with the Oak Park Parlor committee—Morris Brooke, Hugh Bradford and W. W. Chenoweth.

Mission Parlor Active.

San Francisco—Great preparations are being made in Mission Parlor, No. 38, for the annual Christmas tree party this month. The Parlor's drum corps and drill team, on November 22nd, participated in the parade which preceded the reception of the joint local Parlors to Grand President Thomas Monahan. November 13th, Grand Trustee Jo V. Snyder of Nevada City paid an official visit and was given a rousing welcome. An Extension Committee, made up of Eugene M. Levy, Louis Schmitt, George S. Long, Jr., Thomas McGowan, Wm. Guilfoyle and Historiographer Dan Q. Troy, has been appointed.

Breaks All Records.

Antioch—General Winn Parlor, No. 32, which, since the inception of the Homeless Children's Agency, has led the list of annual contributors to the fund, has broken its own splendid record, in the amount of its contribution, and will this year turn in $530. This amount was netted from a play recently produced at the Belshaw theater by members of the Parlor. Can any Parlor show a better record?

Will Form Military Company.

Sacramento—At a joint meeting of Sacramento Parlor, No. 3, Sunset Parlor, No. 26, and Sutter Fort Parlor, No. 241, November 8th, a movement was launched for the organization of a company of the National Guard, to be made up exclusively of members of the Order. Adjutant-General E. A. Forbes, a member of Marysville Parlor, No. 6, has given consent and is anxious to have a company so composed.

Visits Old Landmark.

Petaluma—Grand Third Vice-president Bismarck Bruck of St. Helena officially visited Petaluma Parlor, No. 27, November 12th, and after witnessing the exemplification of the ritual, delivered an interesting address. Following the business session, a banquet was enjoyed.

The following day, in company with Grand Outside Sentinel Wm. Farrell, Jr., a member of Petaluma Parlor, Mr. Bruck visited the old Vallejo adobe, which the members of the Parlor have been engaged in restoring to its one-time grandeur.

Masquerade a Success.

Oakland—The ritualistic contest between the various Parlors of this city terminated the 21st, Claremont Parlor, No. 240, taking part in all contests scheduled for it. There was not so much interest in the affair as many desired and expected, but it is to be hoped that next spring will see a renewal of the contests. The masquerade ball on Thanksgiving Eve was largely attended, and many beautiful and useful prizes were awarded the winners. The committee showed good taste in the selection of these, and is to be highly commended for its work in making the affair a success. The music, rendered by Claremont's own band of twenty pieces, was praised on all sides, and the boys certainly showed what hard work and honest endeavor will do.

Getting Ready for Contest.

Fresno—Fresno Parlor, No. 25, is working very hard for the contest on November 30th, when it will put a team against the National Parlor team in a ritualistic contest. The boys are rehearsing three times a week, under the supervision of F. M. Lane. Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung was a visitor to Fresno Parlor, November 14th, to give a few instructions on the fine points of the ritualistic work. The committee has arranged for a banquet on the evening of November 30th at a local hotel. One hundred and fifty plates have been arranged for and indications are that this will not be sufficient. All Parlors of the valley expect to be represented at the contest. Grand Trustee W. F. Toomey of Fresno Parlor says that National Parlor is up against a hard team and will have to move to beat the local team.

NEW PARLOR INSTITUTED

Columbia—The latest addition to the chain of Parlors of Native Sons of the Golden West that extends from one end of the State to the other, is known as Columbia Parlor, No. 258, and was instituted October 25th. Al Terzich, D.G.P.-at-Large, of Tuolumne Parlor, No. 144, Sonora, was in charge of the ceremonies, and was assisted by Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung of San Francisco. There was a large attendance of visiting members from Tuolumne Parlor, No. 144 (Sonora), Angels Parlor, No. 80 (Angels Camp), Laurel Lake Parlor, No. 257 (Tuolumne), and Oakdale Parlor, No. 112 (Oakdale).

Following the completion of preliminary details, a team made up of the following visiting members exemplified the ritual for the benefit of the new Parlor's charter members: Past president, Wm. Naismith, Laurel Lake 257; president, Jefferson Walton, Tuolumne 144; first vice-president, Dr. George Pache, Angels 80; second vice-president, Alvin Rydberg, Oakdale 142; third vice-president, Earl Thomas, Laurel Lake 257; marshals, F. Van Harrington, Tuolumne 144, and Wm. J. Mann, Laurel Lake 257; financial secretary, Wm. Harrington, Tuolumne 144; recording secretary, J. Van Harringer, Tuolumne 144; inside sentinel, E. G. Wenzel, Tuolumne 144; outside sentinel, W. Baker, Tuolumne 144; trustees—Al Terzieh, E. L. Gorges and C. C. Ortego, all of Tuolumne 144.

Columbia Parlor, No. 258, was then formally instituted by the following visiting members, acting, except in the case of the Grand Secretary who was present in person, as Grand Officers, and all of whom were letter-perfect in their work: Past Grand President, Jeff Walton, Tuolumne 144; Grand President, Al Terzieh, D.G.P.-at-Large; Grand First Vice-president, M. F. McNamara, Oakdale 142; Grand Second Vice-president, Dr. George Pache, Angels 80; Grand Third Vice-president, Dave Tullock, Oakdale 142; Grand Marshal, F. Van Harrington, Tuolumne 144; Grand Secretary, Fred H. Jung; Grand Treasurer, Jess Gibbs, Laurel Lake 257; Grand Inside Sentinel, Chas. Malaspina, Angels 80; Grand Outside Sentinel, Monte Neehley, Angels 80; Grand Trustees—Elmer Schell, Geo. Goodwin and Sam Rozier of Laurel Lake 257, and Paul Morris, Wm. Harrington, C. C. Ortego and J. Van Harrington of Tuolumne 144.

The first corps of officers for the new Parlor were then installed by D.G.P.-at-Large Al Terzieh as follows, and the organization of the Parlor was completed: Past president, Joseph A. Luddy; president, John W. Nash; first vice-president, David F. Morris; second vice-president, Chas. E. Durgan, Sr.; third vice-president, James E. Keefe; secretary, J. N. Pitts; treasurer, Frank J. Doudero; marshal, Wm. T. Shine; inside sentinel, Louis Kress, Jr.; outside sentinel, August Eagler; trustees—(6 months) Louis Kress, Sr., (12 months) Frank E. Caseron, (18 months) Albert Baier.

The banquet-room was then invaded, where a delicious supper was served by members of Golden Era Parlor, No. 99, N.D.G.W., who had also prepared the dainty morsels, the feature of which was venison. Around the festive board, remarks were listened to with interest from Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung, Dr. Geo. Pache, Wm. J. Mann, Wm. Harrington, Dr. Bromley, Dave Tullock and Paul Morris.

Credit for the organization of Columbia Parlor, No. 258, is due to Al Terzieh, who for the past year has been working hard to accomplish its institution. The charter list numbered sixty-seven, the largest of any Parlor outside San Francisco, and the direct result of Mr. Terzieh's untiring efforts. The Parlor came into the Order under most favorable conditions, promises to keep pace with the Order's growth, and stands as a testimonial to the energy and ability of its promoter, Al Terzieh.

PIONEER COUPLE CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Merced—The fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Yoakum, who came across the plains to California in early days and were wedded at Alamo, Contra Costa County, October 26, 1863, was recently celebrated at their home in this city by a reception to their numerous friends, hundreds of whom called and extended congratulations. The home was prettily decorated in white and yellow, and an appropriate program was rendered. During the evening the couple's daughters served refreshments. Mr. and Mrs. Yoakum have resided here since 1885, and are, respectively, 72 and 68 years of age. They have six children, seven grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

Among those who called and wished the honored couple long life and continued happiness were many members of Veritas Parlor, No. 75, N.D.G.W., and Yosemite Parlor, No. 24, N.S.G.W. Numerous gifts were received, but none were more highly prized than those from these two organizations. Grand Trustee Belle Gribi, on behalf of the Native Daughters, presented a handsome silk American Flag, while Austin W. Oliver, past president, on behalf of the Native Sons, presented a Bear Flag.

PLACES TABLET ON LANDMARK.

San Francisco—The California Historic Landmarks League observed Junipero Serra Day, November 24th, by placing a bronze tablet on the officers' quarters building at the Presidio that was erected in 1776, and which the Government has agreed to preserve.

SAN FRANCISCO

Astonishing progress is being made on the colossal buildings now being constructed on the site of the 1915 World's Exposition fronting on the great harbor of San Francisco. It is now evident that all of the exposition buildings will easily be completed months prior to the opening day, February 20, 1915.

The double festival in celebration of two great discoveries, that of the Pacific Ocean by Balboa and of San Francisco Bay by Portola, was a pronounced success. Tremendous throngs of joyous citizens and visitors made merry from October 22nd to 25th, viewing three large parades, innumerable athletic and aquatic contests, and participating in nightly carnivals on the main thoroughfares. The electric illuminations and decorations were original and effective.

Aviation exhibitions will occur each Sunday during the winter on the bay shore of the exposition grounds. Hydro-aeroplanes, flying boats, etc., will be daringly handled by experts.

The steel frames of San Francisco's new City Hall and of the colossal auditorium building are rapidly rising. These magnificent structures constitute two of the Civic Center group.

The California Land Show and Home Industry Exhibition is to be repeated yearly. Nearly a quarter of a million people visited the show, and Central and Northern California received much valuable advertising thereby.

Through the untiring efforts of the California Camera Club of San Francisco the exposition managers have expressed a willingness to reduce the admission fee on cameras during 1915 from 50 cents to 25 cents, but the club will keep up its gallant fight until the proposed charge is entirely eliminated.

GRAND OFFICER ENTERTAINED.

Pittsburg—November 5th, Grand Third Vice-president Bismarck Bruck of St. Helena paid his official visit to Diamond Parlor, No. 246, N.S.G.W. One candidate was initiated, and the grand officer highly complimented the officers on their exemplification of the ritual. D.J.G.P. Geo. P. Upham of Mt. Diablo Parlor, No. 101, was present and made many interesting remarks. T. Perry of Bay View Parlor, No. 238, and O. G. Scott of Athens Parlor, No. 195, were also present. After the meeting the brothers enjoyed a banquet.

Sunday, November 9th, Diamond Parlor journeyed to Stockton to compete against National Parlor, No. 118, the trophy winners of San Francisco. The work was but on by Diamond Parlor in a creditable manner, scoring 900 out of a possible 1000 points, but being unable to overcome the lead of National Parlor—96½ points. The officers of Diamond Parlor, averaging from 18 to 21 years of age, were highly complimented upon the manner in which the ritual was exemplified.

Hallowe'en Party.

St. Helena—La Junta Parlor, No. 203, entertained the members of St. Helena Parlor, No. 53, N.S.G.W., at a jolly Hallowe'en party, October 31st. The guests were met at the outer door by a ghost bearing a candle and led through a dark hall to the anteroom. Here, through a large spider-web arranged over the door, could be seen the dimly-lighted hall peopled with Native Daughters dressed as witches and ghosts. Before being allowed to enter, every person was taken up a dark flight of stairs and obliged to take an oath to do anything they were told to do during the evening. In the center of the hall was a sphinx with a jack-o'-lantern head. The ghosts led their guests about this mysterious-looking creature in solemn procession before instructing one of the witches to read the messages contained in its mouth. These messages caused much merriment, as nearly every one present was called upon to redeem his oath and do a stunt. After the stunts and an interesting program the fortunes of all were told by a witch, in whose tent, made of corn stalks, a huge caldron brewed all sorts of bright futures. Supper was then announced, and the way led to the banquet-room, which was decorated with corn stalks, while in one corner a harvest moon was shining. Refreshments were served and speeches made, Bismarck Bruck, Grand Third Vice-president, N.S.G.W., acting as toastmaster. This was the first affair given by La Junta Parlor, and the guests were unanimous in declaring that many more should follow.

Initiates Two.

Georgetown—At the regular meeting of El Dorado Parlor, No. 186, November 11th, two candidates were initiated—Mrs. Mary Brown Morgan and Mrs. Flossie Urtel Francis. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

Show Ability as Minstrels.

Pittsburg—A very successful minstrel show was given by Stirling Parlor, No. 146, October 28th, under the direction of a professional engaged for the occasion. Many members of the Parlor took part, proving their ability along these lines. The proceeds are to go towards the payment of a new piano. The committee was composed of Mrs. Lillian McPaul (chairman), Mrs. Mary Houlihan, Miss Mary Leckie and Mrs. Delia Rounser.

Honor Departing Member.

San Francisco—Calaveras Parlor, No. 103, at its meeting October 23rd, had quite a pleasant surprise in store for Leah Wrede Flaherty, one of the charter members. Owing to the fact that her husband, Thomas Francis Flaherty, has been appointed secretary-treasurer of the National Association of Postoffice Clerks, it becomes necessary for him to take up his residence in Washington, and naturally, his charming wife will have to accompany him. After the regular order of business, and just before the meeting closed, the worthy president, Marie Dennis, requested the marshal, Helen Becker, to escort Leah Flaherty to her station, and after a few remarks of appreciation on behalf of the officers and members of the Parlor, the president presented Mrs. Flaherty with a most beautiful gold bracelet, suitably engraved. This token of appreciation could only partially express the feelings of the members of the Parlor towards their departing sister. During the past fifteen years, Mrs. Flaherty has been a faithful worker and officer in the Native Daughters and, as near as can be ascertained, she missed only three meetings during that period. When the meeting adjourned, the members gathered in the banquet-room, where refreshments were served in honor of Mrs. Flaherty. Many funny stories were told, several vocal solos were sung, and at a late hour the members left for their homes after wishing the departing organizer a pleasant trip and a speedy return. The following members witnessed the presentation: D.D.G.P. Mae Himes, Florence Gallichotte, Mary French, Lucy Condren, Agnes McVerry, Tillie Leeman, Mrs. Piddell, Camille Hinz, Eda Garmas, Hannah Poyntz, Kate Campbell, Martie McFarland, Addie Wrede, Jennie Ohlerich, Mary Krogh, Ella Owens, Anna Gilfeather, Josephine Stevens, Matilda J. Schimpf, Mrs. Nye, Margaret Quinn, Mae Bailey, Josephine Plagemann, Lena Schreiner, Dora De Soto, Anna De Andreas, Margaret Giovannoni, Celia James, Anna Casey, K. Fitzgerald and Miss Fiederle.

Entertains Pioneers.

Red Bluff—October 18th, at 2 p.m., the Pioneers of Red Bluff gathered at W.O.W. Hall and were entertained by Berendos Parlor, No. 23. A brief, interesting program was rendered, one of the numbers being a talk by Past Grand President Olive Bedford-Matlock. Afterwards the visitors partook of a generous banquet. All seemed to enjoy themselves very much and promised to "come back next year."

Whist Tournament Closed.

San Luis Obispo—The concluding games of the whist tournament conducted by San Luisita Parlor, No. 108, were played October 26th, and winners of the series were announced as follows: Highest woman, Mrs. Emma Hickey, 126; highest man, W. H. Nixon, 126; lowest woman, Mrs. J. W. Hickey, 89; lowest man, A. D. Davis, 97. Miss Katherine Hourihan made the highest score, 45, at any game in the series. Refreshments were served after the playing. The tournament proved not only enjoyable to the participants, but profitable to the Parlor.

Mothers Are Guests.

Stockton—In honor of Mother's Day, Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, entertained at the home of Mrs. C. V. Salix, October 29th, the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Pioneers and the mothers of the Parlor members being honored guests. Mrs. Emma Wenger, president of the Parlor, was introduced by Miss Emma Hilke and extended a welcome, to which Mrs. Martha Freeman, president of the Pioneer Ladies, responded. Following a vocal solo by Miss Lorraine Kalek, Past Grand President Mamie G. Peyton paid a tribute and read an appropriate poem to "Our Mothers." Mrs. Mary Merrill had jingled the names of the Parlor's officers into a rhyme, which she recited with such effect that she was forced to respond to an encore, when she recited "The Early Bird and the Worm." Mrs. Emma Barney recited "The Launching of the Ship" (Longfellow), after which Mrs. T. P. Bonney rendered a piano solo. Throughout the afternoon, Miss Doty's mandolin club gave appropriate selections.

Yellow chrysanthemums, with Hallowe'en effects, were used extensively in the handsome decorations, while a white carnation—the Mother's Day flower—was presented to each mother. At the banquet which followed the program, a special table was set apart for the Pioneer Mothers.

Parlor Complimented.

Murphys—Grand President Allison F. Watt of Grass Valley officially visited Ruby Parlor, No. 46, October 28th, being accompanied by Past Grand President Carrie Roesch-Durham, under whose administration the Parlor was instituted in 1888. The visitors highly complimented the Parlor and reviewed the Order's work. Following the meeting, all repaired to the home of Mrs. Clara Mitchler, where a splendid chicken supper was enjoyed amid rounds of toasts and general good cheer.

Retiring Secretary Honored.

Haywards—At the close of the meeting of Haywards Parlor, No. 122, November 5th, Miss Alice Garretson, who has retired from the recording secretaryship after ten years of faithful service, was called before the president, Mrs. W. T. Knightly, and presented with a beautiful cut-glass plate, as a token of the Parlor's esteem. Refreshments were enjoyed after the presentation.

Adds Another Success.

Los Angeles—A delightful Hallowe'en party was given by Los Angeles Parlor, No. 145, in N.S.G.W. Hall, October 31st, and was largely attended. The decorations were neat and attractive, flowers and greenery being used in conjunction with lighted pumpkins and other Hallowe'en effects. Light refreshments were served, and dancing was enjoyed until midnight. The committee in charge is deserving of great credit for its efforts in adding another to the long list of the Parlor's social successes.

Many Visitors Present.

Lodi—November 4th, Ivy Parlor, No. 88, was officially visited by Grand President Allison F. Watt. In addition to many local members, there were present twenty-five members of Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, of Stockton, including Past Grand President Mamie G. Peyton and Grand Trustee Grace Willy. The hall was prettily decorated, and many interesting addresses were listened to. At the conclusion of the business session, a banquet was partaken of.

Pioneers at Annual Reunion.

Nevada City—Men and women who came to Nevada County prior to 1860 were the special guests of Laurel Parlor, No. 6, N.D.G.W., and Hydraulic Parlor, No. 56, N.S.G.W., at the annual Pioneers' reception, November 6th. Automobiles were provided to bring those unable to walk, and they were taken home after the festivities. A musical and literary program, over which Mrs. Ida

Sweeney, president of Laurel Parlor, presided as mistress of ceremonies, was presented as follows: Address on behalf of the Native Daughters, Mrs. C. W. Chapman; vocal solo, Mrs. W. L. Carter; address on behalf of the Native Sons, Grand Trustee Jo V. Snyder; vocal solo, Mrs. George Dunster; vocal solo, "I Love You, California" (including a special verse written for the Pioneers of California), Miss Jeanette Watson.

Following this, all repaired to the banquet-room, which was handsomely decorated with California poppies and greens, where a sumptuous repast was served. The tables were attractively adorned, and at each plate was a small American flag favor. Mrs. Ida Sweeney presided as toastmistress, and responses were made by A. R. Lord, Mrs. Henry Campbell, D.D.G.P. of the N.D.G.W.; John F. Hook, Mrs. H. M. Place and Mrs. C. Haskell. The latter claims the honor of being the oldest native daughter in the State, having been born in San Diego in 1813. The afternoon's festivities came to a close with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" by the assemblage.

Oakland—October 24th, Bahia Vista Parlor, No. 167, entertained Grand President Allison F. Watt on her first official visit to Oakland. She was accompanied by Grand Secretary Alice Dougherty, Grand Trustee Addie Mosher, D.D.G.P. Anna Lange and D.D.G.P. Sarah Sanborn. There were visitors from other Parlors of Oakland and San Francisco and from Manzanita, No. 29, Grass Valley. A token, in the form of a tiny silver blue bird on a neck chain, was presented to the Grand President by the marshal, who said she wished her to receive all that the gift implied. Flowers were presented to the other grand officers and to the president of the Parlor. Halloween decorations were used in the banquet hall, where pumpkin pies, nuts, apples and other good things to eat were enjoyed by the guests until a late hour.

Has a Record to Boast Of.

San Francisco—During the month of October, over fifty members of Portola Parlor, No. 172, journeyed to the home of Mrs. Catherine Hall and there tendered her a surprise party, the affair being in the nature of a farewell—both Mr. and Mrs. Hall having since left San Francisco to make their permanent home in Los Angeles. Mrs. Hall was a charter member of Portola Parlor and much beloved by all its members. At the time of her departure, she held the office of third vice-president, and Miss May Lunney, the faithful organist for seven successive terms, was unanimously elected to succeed her, and Miss Rose Moitoret elected as organist. Mrs. Norma Duvall, another faithful member, has also changed her place of residence and is now living in the southern city. October 16th a miscellaneous shower was given to Miss Mame McGoldrick who will, during the month of November, become the bride of a prominent Seattle business man and thereafter make her home in that city.

October 23rd, when nine new members were initiated, the Good of the Order committee took charge and surprised the members of the Parlor and the many visitors who were present to witness the initiation, with an enchilada party, which was voted one of the Parlor's best times. Nearly seventy were present on this occasion. Again, on October 30th, five new members joined the ranks, and on November 13th three more were numbered as members. This Parlor has made splendid progress during the past year. January 1, 1913, the roll books showed a membership of 82, and at the present time the Parlor boasts of 119 members, its particular pride being in that no member is over thirty years of age, a record which it is felt no Parlor in the State can boast of.

November 1st a masquerade was given by the joint Native Son and Native Daughter Parlors of San Francisco for the benefit of the Homeless Children's Agency and a cup was offered to the Parlor having the largest percentage of its membership in costume. Portola girls appeared in costumes representing Columbia and had sixty-four members present. The trophy will be awarded on November 20th. The Parlor's semi-annual dance was held at Native Sons' Hall during the month of October and was both a financial and social success. The grand march was led by the president of the Parlor, Mrs. Carrie Estelita.

Reception to Past Grand.

Stockton—Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, tendered a reception November 13th to Dr. Mariana Bertola of San Francisco, who came here to lecture at the "Better Babies" contest. Over 100 guests, including many from Sonora, Murphys, Lodi and Tracy, joined in the greeting which was extended on behalf of the Parlor by President Clara Wenger.

GRAND PRESIDENT'S

THANKSGIVING CIRCULAR.

Grass Valley, California, November 7, 1913.
To the Subordinate Parlors, N.D.G.W.—Dear Sisters: Greeting!

" 'Tis meet that we render praises, because of this yield of grain.

" 'Tis meet that the Lord of the Harvest he thanked for His sun and rain."

The one distinctive American holiday is Thanksgiving Day. With all the simplicity and earnestness that characterized their lives, this day sprang into existence in the hearts of a people who made famous that first Thanksgiving Day of 1621, and whose Harvest Festival has ever since been the subject of reverence in story and in song. On this special day of our Order, the day set apart by the Chief Executive of our Nation as a day of Thanksgiving and cheer, let us, the children of California, give expression to our gratitude for the gracious gifts, we, day by day, are constantly enjoying, and render thanks that by the grace and will of God we are dwellers in this pleasant, fruitful land.

"The best thing hearts that are thankful can do, Is this: to make thankful some other hearts too."

Thanksgiving Day is the Home day: the day we meet our loved ones at our Home table or at "our ain fireside," in cheerful, happy converse. Let those who are privileged to still have with them, dear Pioneer Fathers and Mothers, give thanks fervently and sincerely, to our Heavenly Father for His graciousness and love in granting that blessing. At this Thanksgiving time, listen to their histories and reminiscences of the days of old. We need their stories, their records and those wonderful tales of earlier days—for with all that God has given us in Order, State and Country, our loving thanks are to them due for "our glorious heritage." May Peace, Prosperity and Progress ever continue in our Golden Land—our great California.

Sincerely and fraternally yours, in P. D. E. A., [Grand Parlor Seal] ALISON F. WATT.

Grand President, N.D.G.W.

N. D. G. W. PARLOR NEWS

to which the doctor responded in her forceful manner. A program was enjoyed, as follows: Vocal solo, Lorraine Kalek, accompanied by Mrs. Edward Oullahan; original poem, Mrs. Mary Merrill, third vice-president; vocal solo, Miss Elise Eickoff, accompanied by Miss Ida Saffhill; address, "The Flag," Miss Clara Stier; song, "Star Spangled Banner," assemblage.

Dr. Bertola was presented with a gift which was a very great surprise to her and which she declared she would always value highly. A very pretty story is connected with the gift: At the Woodland Grand Parlor in 1898 she was presented with a beautiful silk flag, and was so proud of it that she had her picture taken with the flag draped about her. During the great fire in San Francisco the picture, as well as the flag, was burned. Miss Emma Hille owned one of the pictures, she had it framed, and Mrs. Emma Barney, in behalf of Miss Hille, presented it to the doctor, who was greatly surprised, but expressed her thanks in her usual delightful manner.

Aid in Portola Success.

San Francisco—Gabrielle Parlor, No. 139, is very much alive, lately initiating several new members and having a large attendance at meetings. The Parlor was well represented in the Portola parade, Martha Wiegell being chosen one of the many goddesses. She was seated upon one of the finest floats and her silken robes and beautiful blonde hair made her a picture long to be remembered. Rita Novinile, one of the most earnest members,

TO MISSION SAN GABRIEL ARCHANGEL.

Oh, landmark in the corridor of time,
Ye holy, more than holy, God-loved shrine,
Whose glorious past exhales a breath divine,
Whose present breathes a reverence sublime,
Allow me to express in humble rhyme
My love, and drop a tear at your decline,
For you worked well your noble mission fine,
A mission that through passing years will chime.
It was a noble work quite filled with bliss,
To plant the love of God within this land,
To till this soil of sunshine, fruit and flowers;
How happy we should be in all of this
And work to now complete that mission grand,
That mighty legacy that is all ours.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

ACE, LACE, AND THEN MORE lace! We have seldom seen such quantities of beautiful lace used on all manner of garments, from filmy dancing petticoats to heavy brocade opera capes, as this same winter season of nineteen thirteen is showing.

It is, indeed, a triumph of lace. Gowns, sashes, tunics, hats, shoes, bows, bags, bodices, undergarments, all have succumbed to the magic lure of lace, one would suppose, and the yellowed pages of pattern-books of the early sixteenth century are being turned to secure the most beautiful and famous designs for reproduction in this most beautiful of all textiles.

One lovely pattern, of light Venetian rose-point, a copy of an old, old pattern, is said to be that of one designed for a wandering lover's waistcoat frill by a most loving damsel who worked for years to bring the design to perfection. Light shadow laces of a delicate beauty are those which seem to be most favored for the season's diversified uses; they are swathed into picturesque Turkish lines, used as transparent brims on the modish hat, or even wired for the outstanding sauciness of the newest minaret tunics.

The Three-tiered Skirt.

These last newcomers in the field of fashion are wired to stand out from the figure about the hips like a miniature hoop skirt, or, as one woman said last week, like an enlarged piano lamp-shade. There is a gentle bobbing motion, as you walk, and the edge is often finished with fur. They are decidedly new, and are queer.

A more moderate innovation of the season is the three-tiered skirt, which is developed in lace flouncing in net or chiffon. Often the upper tier will be of lace, the next of net, bead edged, and the third of satin, like the gown itself. This style is extremely attractive, and is often met with in the newest imported evening frocks. Usually the tiers are allowed to hang in soft lines, but some show a slight wiring of the upper tier, giving an outstanding effect.

At a recent select exhibition of Parisian importations, there was shown a wine-colored moire afternoon gown, with bustle effect of tulle. Can it be that both the crinoline and the bustle are to be with us again?

Fur-trimmed Dress Sets.

A really charming variation, if it can be called a variation, in this idea is found in the big Madam Butterfly bows which adorn the backs of some of the prettiest of dancing frocks this season, as well as other more heavy costumes of an afternoon nature. These bows on the dancing frocks are of wired lace, and on the cloth and silk costumes, of some trimming fabric. They are placed well up on the bodice in back, almost between the shoulders, and are in width and form like the wide, flat bows worn by the Japanese maidens.

Lace, net and tulle, fur trimmed, form the latest winter offering in the neckwear realm. And most fascinating is the combination. Dainty lace fichus outlined with a single narrow strand of fur, fur trimmed bows, shadow lace and chiffon collars, guimpes and dress sets with fur trimmings, are much in evidence. Many of the guimpes have long sleeves edged with fur and a pretty hand frill; others come in dickey form, and again, many in vest style, with bound armholes.

AFTERNOON DRESS.
—Design from Fifth-street Store, L. A.

Lace Sleeves and Underbodices.

Lace sleeves can also be purchased at the neckwear counters, all ready to adjust into a gown. These fresh touches of dainty lace are excellent for freshening up a gown. Lace bat's wing sleeves are also much favored. This is one of the newest styles of sleeves. It fits the forearm closely and is very long, coming well down over the hand; from the elbow up the width suddenly increases and, being continuous with the kimono bodice, the armhole is left large so that it reaches to the waist line. Sometimes this sleeve is developed in chiffon or tulle, instead of lace, while the lining is cut in the usual form, with closely shaped armholes and fitted sleeve, if desired, or with a lace shoulder strap like a brassiere or corset cover.

Charming lace underbodices, as they are called, can be made from wide shadow lace flouncing for wear under the transparent bodices so much in favor. These dainty garments are made of a straight piece of the lace passing around the body and under the arms, with narrow ribbon shoulder straps holding them up in place and a ribbon run through the top for a shirt string. Small colored ribbon flowerets often adorn these pretty undergarments. Brassiere covers are also exquisite, in hand-embroidered linen and lace.

Neck and Muff Sets.

Black lace waists, made of black chantilly lace over flesh-color and white silk linings, are well liked for wear with dressy coat and skirt suits and are newer than the white lace and net bodices so much worn this summer. Some of these waists are entirely covered by the black chantilly, while others have a cream or white shadow lace foundation over the flesh-colored lining silk, and over this lace the black chantilly is used in bolero jumper or jacket arrangement.

Gold and metal laces are wonderfully beautiful, and rich and lovely in a combination of colors over which the metal mesh throws a glimmering reflection, or brilliant in dazzling colorings, offset with forms in silver or gold. In combination with fur for small hats, as vests in tailored suits, and as garniture for dressy evening gowns and wraps, they are lavishly used and very beautiful.

Lace, fur, and plush or chiffon, combined, together make up some of the prettiest neck and muff sets seen in many seasons. The muffs are large and flat, with side frills of chiffon or lace outlined with narrow edges of fur. The neck pieces are simple in form, usually being of the short folded-over stole variety, while the muff is more complicated and fancy in form. A beautiful long, shirred stole and muff set of chiffon in fox glove purple, seen not long ago in an importer's window, had some wonderful bands of dyed fur in this same shade.

Veils, Shoes and Stockings of Lace.

Lace veils this season tend towards conservative styles, for use on the small hats. Fine, neat meshes continue to the fore, some of the new veils of this kind having one initial letter worn at the side. Others have a bee or butterfly—only a single one, but quite a pretty fashion. Soft and becoming colors are worn, matching the hat or suit color, helios, blues, pinks and yellows all being seen, while black is a leader. Black chantilly veils, worn draped and hanging, are very effective with bright-colored plush or velvet hats.

Large corsage bouquets, tinted in natural colorings, are attracting attention in the younger set, as the newest thing for wear with dancing frocks.

Lace-top shoes, with patent leather vamps, are a novelty of the season, showing the universal usage to which lace is being put. These shoes are of heavy lace and show a black lining beneath the pattern of lace.

Lace stockings, where real lace motifs are inset in silk, are not so new, but are being worn more than formerly. A very new idea in fancy hosiery is being shown, where the entire ankle is only covered by a silk mesh crochet of fine silken cords held together by pearls of a seed like character. These come in flesh color and white.

Newest Thing for Harmony.

Satin boudoir slippers may be painted or embroidered, or made of ribbon attached to a pair of soles—such as are bought for wool knit slippers—or they may be made of silk ratine. Nothing is daintier with a pretty negligee made of colors that either match or are in contrast.

Delicate shadow lace, lined with pale pink and blue chiffon, makes the foundation for the popular boudoir cap, which is finished with a standing frill of lace edging and ribbon.

Following the fad for harmony in every smallest detail, the newest thing is to have your corset elastic trimmed with satin bows that match in color the corset sachet and the silk stockings. They are made in various flower-shaped designs, with embroidered centers. The corset sachet is made up very plain—just the long bow-shaped kind centered with a knot of ribbon, or of nausook, hand

Girdles of Childhood Days.

This season's girdles have assumed such importance and charm that we well may wonder how we ever did without them so completely a few seasons ago. Many of the new models show a diversified array of shapes, sizes and materials. They are easy to reproduce, yet capable of adding great credit to a simple frock, and also make a charming gift for a feminine recipient.

With the loose and swathed effects that are so much in demand, striking designs are obtained by loose folds and decorative materials tellingly applied, rather than the actual use of the needle. They fall in the loose, careless folds of the sash of one's childhood days.

The Roman stripes and plaids, which are so prominent in this season's new silks, are equally noticeable in the latest ribbons.

CALIFORNIA NEEDS EVERY CITIZEN'S SUPPORT

(By MAE B. WILKIN, Past Grand President, N.D.G.W.)

Home Industry!

Define it? Creating such a demand for the products of soil and handicraft, there may be more people employed in the California factories and more factories in which to find employment.

Effect? Increase the population of California and contribute to the prosperity of her people.

So, you see, it is not the use of the broom we are talking about, but the purchase of it. And talking about brooms, do you know that while California is one of the states producing the largest amount of broomcorn, less than five per cent of the brooms sold in California are made here? While on that topic, also, it might be well to remind you that the most unfortunate of our citizens,—those who have been deprived of their eyesight,—are taught, at the State Institute for the blind, to make brooms, that they may have a means of livelihood.

If you are the provider of your home, or if you are not, your interest in its prosperity is just as vital and if you are busy with the things pertaining to the beauty, comfort, or well-being of the home, why not take some special interest in its maintenance?

If you are giving serious thought to the care and education of the children, why not give some thought to that which will provide for them an opportunity in life, when they reach man's and woman's estate?

If you will buy that which is "Made in California," there will be the opportunity when the demand is made, and the rising generation can take their place and become a factor in the progress of the State,—for when you buy that which is "Made in California," there will be more people in California making that which you buy.

This is not intended for commercialism, but a plain statement of self-preservation. It makes no difference from whence comes the revenue which supports a California home, every one is dependent upon the California industries for their existence. California's isolation from the rest of the world surrounds her with conditions peculiar to herself, and the increased prosperity of a single industry cannot but benefit, directly or indirectly, every home in the State.

The Home Industry League of California is composed of the manufacturers and producers of this State, and anyone else who is willing to contribute to the operating expenses of an association, the single object of which is the unbuilding of California. The only people who are barred from membership are those whose business is confined entirely to representing factory products of other states which are in competition with California industry.

The message the Home Industry League of California has for all Californians, natives or otherwise, is not confined to the very essential article of household use mentioned in the foregoing,—that of the broom,—but would direct your attention to the fact that more than $500,000,000 is sent out of this State each year for the purchase of supplies required by the people, when these very articles,—the things which we eat, and use, and wear, every day,—can, or are, being "Made in California."

It is certainly not a selfish motive, this object of the Home Industry League of California; any movement which prompts a people to preserve their homes, or anything pertaining to the upkeep of those homes, cannot be considered as such. You do not buy FOR your neighbor when purchasing for yourself; then why should you buy FROM him before you have utilized that which you can make yourself?

Any movement for the upbuilding of California is worthy of the attention of ALL the people within the State, and if you will give heed to the message of the Home Industry League, you will not only benefit the State, but advance your own personal interests.

California needs the support of her citizens now, as never before. She cries out, "Develop my soil, utilize the products thereof, put into the hands of my people the industries which will make for happy, prosperous homes in greater number."

In 1856, both Mr. Russell and the daughter died, and with gold given the child by the generous miners, deceased went to Negro Hill and built a hotel, which, when the mines there petered out, was removed to Placerville. Upon arrival here, deceased went to Horse Shoe Bar, on the American River, and panned for gold until October, when he proceeded to Sacramento, bought two ox teams and set out for the Santa Cruz Big Trees, where he began lumbering and transported the product by ox team to San Jose, where a lumber yard was established. In 1850, Yost went to Stockton and freighted between that place and the mines of Calaveras and Tuolumne Counties, but abandoned this line of business in 1870, when he returned to his Eastern home. Coming back to Stockton, he followed farming for five years and then engaged in mercantile pursuits and became actively identified with the commercial and political life of that city.

and was known to be the man who assassinated the notorious Jack Williams in Carson City a year previous. Williams, while seated in a saloon, was shot by an unseen party, who, standing outside, thrust a shotgun through the aperture of a half-open door and fired with fatal effect. It seems singular Magee should meet a similar fate. He was seated by a Carson City saloon stove in the early morning hours of December 3rd smoking a cigar and conversing with a number of friends, when a charge of bullets, fired from a shotgun by an unseen person outside, crashed through a window. Seven bullets entered Magee's anatomy and he fell dead. A man named Blackburn was struck by two bullets and severely wounded.

G. N. Symonds was hung in the Sacramento jail yard on December 4th for the murder of B. F. Russell in July, 1860. Three years and five months were consumed in his trial, appeals, rehearings and sentences, before his execution was legally effected. He was cool on the gallows and met his doom without a tremor.

Vigilance Committee at Work.

The Vigilance Committee of Los Angeles had another hanging bee on December 9th. Manuel Ceredei was being taken to San Quentin by the sheriff, when the committee appeared and hung him. Ceredei had attempted to kill Marshal Trafford and had been sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. He had confessed to having committed a murder a year previous and for these crimes the committee disposed of him.

A prominent mining man of Los Angeles County, named John B. Sanford, was murdered and robbed in the eastern part of the county about December 8th, and the murderer was chased into San Berardine County and captured on December 15th. He proved to be Charles Wilkins, a convict who had escaped in the break at San Quentin with twenty-five other convicts two years previous. He was taken to Los Angeles and confessed that he was the son of Mormon parents, and had killed a man in Salt Lake City when 17 years of age; had participated in the Mountain Meadow massacre of emigrants, and had killed eight men in different parts of California before murdering Sanford, the latter being his ninth victim. He was taken into the district courtroom in Los Angeles on December 17th and pleaded guilty. As soon as he had done so, the Los Angeles Vigilance Committee of 300 men appeared and Wilkins soon passed out of existence dangling from the end of a rope.

This made the seventh murderer and horse thief that the Los Angeles Vigilance Committee had hung since it organized on November 21st, and they announced they would continue in business as long as the criminal element furnished supplies.

Large flocks of wild ducks filled the air, moving to and fro from field to marsh in the valleys during the month. In Napa Valley the sky was continually darkened by the flying flocks and ducks became so plentiful in the markets they could not be given away, everybody being more than supplied. B. F. Davenport of Marysville killed twenty-five Mallards in one discharge of both barrels of his shotgun and offered a new hat to any hunter that could beat it. This brought Wm. Hume of Yolo County to the fore, with proof that he was the champion duck and goose killer of the State. He proved he had killed fifty-two ducks with a double-barreled shot from his shotgun and on another occasion had killed forty-three wild geese with a double barreled shot from the same shotgun.

FRIENDS AND CO-WORKERS HONOR THEIR DISTINGUISHED BROTHER.

San Francisco—Hon. Maurice T. Dooling, lately appointed by the President of the United States, District Judge for the Northern District of California, was tendered a banquet at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, September 27th, by his fellow members of the Past Grand Presidents' Association, who have for years been his co-workers and friends in the building up of the fraternity of the Native Sons of the Golden West and by whom he is held in the highest esteem. The affair was one of the most pleasant in the history of the Order and brought together the "old boys" from every part of California. One of the private dining-rooms of the hotel had been artistically decorated for the occasion, and the banquet table was covered with a mass of golden chrysanthemums and oak leaves presented and arranged by Angelo J. Rossi of El Dorado Parlor.

The worthy dean of the Past Grands, John H. Grady, acted as toastmaster and the brothers present, beginning with the senior in service, vividly traced the early days and the subsequent growth of the fraternity, the stirring events of the sessions of the Grand Parlor, and recalled and paid tribute to the past grand officers now departed. The ties which bind together the past grand officers of the Native Sons is close and lasting, and when adjournment was taken from the banquet board it was with the mutual promise to meet again at Los Angeles in April next.

Those present were John H. Grady, Albert F. Jones, Charles W. Decker, Wm. H. Miller, Robert M. Fitzgerald, Frank H. Dunne, George D. Clarke, Frank Mattison, Frank L. Coombs, Lewis F. Byington, H. R. McNoble, Charles E. McLaughlin, M. T. Dooling, Charles M. Belshaw and Daniel A. Ryan. Letters and telegrams of regret were read from the following, who were absent from the State or at such a distance from this city as to render their attendance impossible: Fred H. Greely, Thomas Flint, Henry C. Gesford, William M. Conley, Walter D. Wagner, Joseph R. Knowland, Herman C. Liehtenberger and Clarence E. Jarvis.

TO A FRIEND IN THE SOUTHLAND.

I see the orange and the pepper tree,
The jacaranda with its clust'rous bloom,
The palm, and smell acacia's quaint perfume,
Behold hibiscus flow'rs. I dream and see
The earth at rest in calm tranquility
In noonday's heating sun, and I presume
How happy I would be to 'gain resume
That life of happy days so good to me,
And in it all I see one face and hear
One voice. It is your face. It is your voice.
They beckon on to dream's eternity.
And I dream happily of hours so dear.
Dream on and on without another choice.
It's grand to dream! My dreams are worlds to me.

Conducted by CALVERT WILSON

BULLETIN 65 OF THE CALIFORNIA State Mining Bureau, located in the Ferry Building, San Francisco, has just been received from F. McN. Hamilton, State Mineralogist, and makes interesting reading for those concerned about the wonderful mineral resources of California and their development. This bulletin relates to the State's mineral production for 1912, covers every detail, and makes comparisons with previous years that are most gratifying, in that they show the value of the 1912 production to be the largest in the State's history. From the bulletin, we note:

That Amador County led in the production of gold, with a value of $2,796,194; Yuba County was a close second, with $2,753,408; Butte County was next with $2,346,229, and Nevada County fourth with $2,081,958. The production for the State was $19,713,478, as against $245,301 in 1848. The total gold production of the State has reached the enormous sum of $1,567,680,946.

That of the total production of lead, valued at $61,653, Inyo County is credited with $54,342.

That San Benito County, with a credited value of $409,596, led in quicksilver production, Santa Clara County coming second with $365,538. The entire State's production had a total value of $866,024.

That Shasta County is far in the lead in silver production, its product having a value of $425,382. The entire State's production for the year was $799,584.

That Los Angeles County easily leads the State in the production of brick, its output being valued at $1,692,258, out of the entire State's production of $2,940,290.

That of the $74,120 value given to the State's marble production, $73,920 is credited to Tuolumne County.

That Kern County is away in the lead in petroleum production, being credited with $21,762,532 out of the State's total of $41,868,344. Including 1912, California has produced 561,112,676 barrels of petroleum, valued at $256,803,202.

That in the production of all mineral substances, Kern County led the State, with a value of $23,097,003; Fresno County was next, with $8,897,685; Shasta County third, with $5,825,819, and Los Angeles County fourth, with $5,594,513. Other counties with productions of over a million dollars in value, were, in order:

Orange County	$4,518,275
Santa Barbara County	4,111,258
Amador County	2,925,202
Yuba County	2,775,132
Butte County	2,403,675
Sacramento County	2,171,399
Nevada County	2,108,543
Calaveras County	2,051,781
San Bernardino County	1,428,057
Tuolumne County	1,353,706

That the total value of all mineral substances produced in California in 1912, was $91,472,385, against $89,747,879 in 1911, and $88,419,079 in 1910, the totals for all three years including asphalt.

GREATEST IN NATION'S HISTORY.

All records have been broken in the great mineral production of the United States for the year 1912. The boom year of 1907 has heretofore been considered the banner year of American mineral output, with a total value of $2,072,666,639, but even this great figure was exceeded in 1912 by over $170,000,000. As compared with 1911, the increase in 1912 is $316,098,198, or 16.40 per cent. These figures are shown in a summary of the mineral production of the United States for 1912, compiled by W. T. Bdom, of the United States Geological Survey, now in press.

CALIFORNIA STANDS HIGH.

California, first among the States west of the Mississippi and fifth among all of the States in the total value of its mineral production, rests its principal claim to distinction as a mineral producer on its output of petroleum. In this it leads all the other States, as does Pennsylvania in the production of coal, according to Edward W. Parker, of the United States Geological Survey.

In addition to being first in the production of petroleum and gold, California is also the premier producing State in asphalt and quicksilver and enjoys a monopoly in the production of borax and magnesite, the combined value of these substances being over $3,000,000. The other mineral products of commercial importance in California are chromite, coal, feldspar, fuller's earth, gem materials, gypsum, infusorial earth, iron ore, lime, manganese ore, mineral paints, mineral waters, platinum, pumice, pyrite, quartz (abrasive), salt, sand and gravel, sand-lime brick, sulphuric acid, tale, and tungsten (concentrates).

IMPORTANT RULING.

Congressman John Raker has just secured a ruling from the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office which will be of general interest to California mining men and all others interested in this industry in other states as well. The department will issue a certificate of location immediately upon final proof of a mineral application for patent, which will do away with the necessity of annual assessment work as required by the laws of California and other states. Heretofore the certificate has been withheld, sometimes for several years, pending the report of field representatives of the Government after final proof has been made.

SOURCES OF GREAT WEALTH.

Few mining regions in California have attracted so much general attention and held it for so long a time as the Klamath Mountains of Siskiyou and Trinity Counties, in the northwestern part of the State. The placers along Trinity and Klamath Rivers were developed early in the gold rush and have been worked with varying energy to the present time. The La Grange mine, which is one of the largest hydraulic placers in the world, is now in the height of its activity. An account of an investigation of the auriferous gravels in the Weaverville quadrangle, which embraces portions of Shasta and Trinity Counties, by J. S. Diller, is contained in Bulletin 540-A, recently issued by the United States Geological Survey.

The outlook for future placer mining in this region is encouraging. The success of the La Grange mine consists in the economical treatment on a large scale of the relatively low-grade gravel. The success of the dredging at Trinity Center and of the placers north of Lewiston gives confidence to those who are attempting larger developments at the mouth of Eastman Gulch and at the bend of Trinity River above Lewiston, and the region may well be regarded as worthy of investigation by capitalists interested in dredging and hydraulic mining.

The bulletin also contains an account of the gold lodes of the Weaverville quadrangle, by H. G. Ferguson. Gold was first discovered in the quadrangle in 1848; in the fall of that year $60,000 worth was taken from the bed of Clear Creek. It is impossible to make any close estimate of the amount of gold produced from the lode mines in the quadrangle, but it is believed that the total is in excess of $15,000,000.

In certain of the deposits of the region practically all the gold is contained in small scattered pockets near the surface. One of these pockets yielded as much as $45,000 in a distance of forty-four feet; from another a single plate of gold weighing 100 ounces is said to have been obtained. The peculiar pocket deposits have given rise to a class of prospectors known as "pocket bunters." These men often discover many rich pockets by tracing the particles of gold in the soil to their sources. As soon as a pocket is gouged out and colors of gold are no longer shown, the place is abandoned. A copy of the bulletin may be obtained free on application to the Director of the Geological Survey, Washington, D.C.

MINING NOTES OF THE STATE.

An attempt is to be made to secure gold from the Feather River bed by means of divers.

The American River, near Auburn, is to be dredged for gold.

A coal mine near Yreka, Siskiyou County, is being extensively developed.

The Niagara mine, near Grass Valley, is being re-opened by Southern California owners.

The Federal Government has forty experts at work on a process for eliminating smelter fume troubles, with every indication that the perplexing question will be successfully solved.

Gold ore running $200 per ton has been reported from High Grade, Modoc County.

Los Angeles capitalists have bonded several Plumas County properties.

A company has been formed to exploit the mining resources of Siskiyou County.

The Yuba Consolidated Gold Fields Co., dredging near Marysville, earned net profits of $1,640,000 for the year ending February, 1913. During that period, 14,000,000 cubic yards of ground was turned over.

The Shenandoah mine, one of the famous producers of Calaveras County, is to be fully developed, with good prospects for large production.

Canada cuts about 2,000,000 cords of pulp wood annually, about half of which is exported for manufacture in the United States.

A conservation movement has been started in China, said to be richer in natural resources than any other nation. The Chinese use the word "conservancy" instead of conservation. One of their plans for the Hwai River contemplates dredging and tillage together to control floods.

CALIFORNIA CACTUS CANDY.

Delicious Confection Made in Los Angeles From the Cactus of the Desert.

Nature is all-wise, and the further we delve into her mysteries the more we are impressed with the fact that everything in nature has its use. Man's latest conquest of nature is the production of dainty, tempting confections from the forbidding, thorn-covered cactus.

Cactus candy, as it is made today, is an entirely new product, although the idea of making candy from the cactus originated in the minds of the people of Mexico—and we also find that there are legends to support the fact that the early Aztecs, that once mighty nation, used the pulp of the Biznaga cactus in a crude way to prepare sweets. In modern times, the natives of Mexico prepare candy by boiling the pulp of the cactus in a syrup made from piñon, a crude native sugar. The cactus has now been demonstrated to be a valuable food product, and the novel confection made by the California Cactus Candy Co., owing to its delicious flavor and dainty appearance, is becoming extremely popular.

The production of this cactus candy is extremely interesting. The cactus is gathered on the desert, after first cutting off the thorns with sharp, long-handled knives. It is then pared down to remove as much waste as possible and then shipped direct to the factory. Here it is again trimmed and sliced by machinery, the slices in turn being cut into dainty squares. Then comes the process of heating and treating in syrups, after which, at the end of a fortnight, it is the finished product—California cactus candy—pure as the air of the desert.

Physicians endorse California cactus candy as an aid to digestion, and proof of its healthful qualities is unquestioned. California cactus candy is made under the most extreme sanitary conditions, and every process is guarded with immaculate cleanliness. California cactus candy is typically Western—and their is no more appropriate gift for Eastern friends than a dainty package of this delicious cactus candy.—(Advertisement.)

Such a bank is one with which it is extremely desirable for you to do business.

The big capitalist doesn't have to seek personal service in a bank, he doesn't have to seek the extra little courtesies and considerations which go to make up what we understand by Service. The very amount of his deposit, the size of his account, guarantees him such personal attention and courtesy. It is the small merchant, the savings depositor, the man who is trying hard to increase an account that to him seems inadequate, who needs that strong, personal, helpful element in banking service.

And he gets it here, invariably!

LOS ANGELES COLLEGE OF OSTEOPATHY

There are ten legally recognized medical colleges on the West Coast. Something of the progress of the education of the people away from the unnatural system of internal drug medication is shown by the fact that the "California Journal of Medicine" (Regular), admits that Los Angeles College of Osteopathy has more students in attendance than the ten old school medical colleges added together. The minimum course of the ten medical colleges, as required by the American Medical Association, is 4000 hours. The shortest course of Los Angeles College of Osteopathy is 4810 hours, requiring actual attendance; including every subject, and as much of each as is given in the best of these medical colleges, excepting in three subjects, materia medica, pharmacology, and some additional surgery. In place of these, natural methods of treatment are substituted. In addition to the regular course, Los Angeles College of Osteopathy gives a post graduate course of twenty weeks, in physiological effects of drugs (materia medica), pharmacology and additional surgery, qualifying its graduates for the Unlimited, or Physicians' and Surgeons' State Board examination and certificate. It does not give materia medica in its regular course, because it does not believe in internal drug medication. It does give it separately because every practitioner should know the physiological effects of drugs for purposes of diagnosis and avoidance.

Under the new law, no California college is limited as to preliminary educational requirements until July 1st, 1918. This requires that all students matriculated after one more year in any recognized college shall have the equivalent of a high school diploma. As large a percent of the graduates of Los Angeles College of Osteopathy have successfully passed the California State Board examination as of any other system of practice.

We have set forth the above facts in order that prospective students looking forward to life work as a physician may know:

(1) That there is no short cut to such education and discriminating students will matriculate for a course that will be both efficient and legal.

(2) There must be good reasons why the 351 students of Los Angeles College of Osteopathy for 1913 choose that course.

In presenting these thoughts to the readers of "Grizzly Bear," we realize we are addressing non-conformists—those who have the mental quality of independence, courage and iconoclasm.

We are engaged in education and research work for what is true in the healing art, regardless of what its name is, its source or where it leads. We are not dominated by isms or schisms, but are after Results. We want those who are trying to follow the truth to have equal freedom in all directions, but we want those readers of "Grizzly Bear" whose minds are open to dispassionate investigation, to visit all of the departments of this institution, its four buildings, fifteen stories of laboratories, lecture rooms, hospital and clinic treating rooms. We welcome well qualified, interested, prospective students.

THE EYE OF THE COMMANDER

A NEW YEAR'S LEGEND OF SPANISH CALIFORNIA

(FRANK BRET HARTE, in the San Francisco "Bulletin," January 4, 1867; Reproduced from the "California Scrap Book," 1868.)

THE YEAR OF GRACE 1797 PASSED away on the coast of California in a southwesterly gale. The little bay of San Carlos, albeit sheltered by the headlands of the blessed Trinity, was rough and turbulent; its foam clung quivering to the seaward wall of the mission garden; the air was filled with flying sand and spume, and as the Señor Comandante, Hermenegildo Salvatierra, looked from the deep embrasured window of the Presidio guard-room, he felt the salt breath of the distant sea buffet a color into his smoke-dried cheeks.

The commander, I have said, was gazing thoughtfully from the window of the guard-room. He may have been reviewing the events of the year now about to pass away. But, like the garrison at the Presidio, there was little to review; the year, like its predecessor, had been uneventful—the days had slipped by in a delicious monotony of simple duties—unbroken by incident or interruption. The regularly recurring feasts and saint's days, the half-yearly courier from San Diego, the rare transport ship, and rarer foreign vessel, were the mere details of his patriarchal life.

If there was no achievement, there was certainly no failure. Abundant harvests and patient industry amply supplied the wants of Presidio and mission. Isolated from the family of nations, the wars which shook the world concerned them not so much as the last earthquake; the struggle that emancipated their sister colonies on the other side of the continent, to them had no suggestiveness. In short, it was that glorious Indian summer of Californian history, around which so much poetical haze still lingers—that bland, indolent autumn of Spanish rule, so soon to be followed by the wintry storms of Mexican independence, and the reviving spring of American conquest.

The commander turned from the window and walked toward the fire that burned brightly on the deep, oven-like hearth. A pile of copy-books, the work of the Presidio school, lay on the table. As he turned over the leaves, with a paternal interest, and surveyed the fair, round Scripture text—the first pious pot-hooks of the pupils of San Carlos—an audible commentary fell from his lips: "Abimelech took her from Abraham"—ah, little one, excellent!—"Jacob sent to see his brother"—body of Christ! that up-stroke of thine, Pachita, is marvelous; the governor shall see it!—"A film of honest pride dimmed the commander's left eye—the right, alas! twenty years before had been sealed by an Indian arrow. He rubbed it softly with the sleeve of his leather jacket, and continued: "The Ishmaelites having arrived—"

He stopped, for there was a step in the courtyard, a foot upon the threshold, and a stranger entered. With the instinct of an old soldier, the commander, after one glance at the intruder, turned quickly toward the wall, where his trusty Toledo hung, or should have been hanging. But it was not there; and, as the commander recalled that the last time he had seen that weapon it was being ridden up and down the gallery by Pepito, the infant son of Bautista, the tortilla maker, he blushed, and then contented himself with frowning upon the intruder. But the stranger's air, though irreverent, was decidedly peaceful. He was unarmed, and wore the ordinary cape of tarpaulin and sea-boots of a mariner. Except a villainous smell of codfish, there was little about him that was peculiar.

His name, as he informed the commander, in Spanish that was more fluent than elegant or precise, was Peleg Scudder. He was master of the schooner "General Court," of the port of Salem, in Massachusetts, on a trading voyage to the South Seas, but now driven by stress of weather into the bay of San Carlos. He begged permission to ride out the gale under the headlands of the blessed Trinity, and no more. Water he did not need, having taken in a supply at Bodega. He knew the strict surveillance of the Spanish port regulations in regard to foreign vessels, and would do nothing against the severe discipline and good order of the settlement. There was a slight tinge of sarcasm in his tone, as he glanced toward the desolate parade-ground of the Presidio and the open, unguarded gate. The fact was, that the sentry, Felipe Gomez, had discreetly retired to shelter at the beginning of the storm, and was then sound asleep in the corridor.

The commander hesitated. The port regulations were severe, but he was accustomed to exercise individual authority, and beyond an old order issued ten years before regarding the American ship "Columbia," there was no precedent to guide him. The storm was severe, and a sentiment of humanity urged him to grant the stranger's request. It is but just to the commander to say that his inability to enforce a refusal did not weigh with his decision. He would have denied, with equal disregard of consequences, that right to a seventy-four-gun ship which he now yielded so gracefully to this Yankee trading schooner. He stipulated only that there should be no communication between the ship and shore. "For yourself, Señor Captain," he continued, "accept my hospitality. The fort is yours as long as you shall grace it with your distinguished presence"; and, with old-fashioned courtesy, he made the semblance of withdrawing from the guard room.

Master Peleg Scudder smiled as he thought of the half-dismantled fort, the two moldy brass cannon east in Manila a century previous, and the shiftless garrison. A wild thought of accepting the commander's offer literally—conceived in the reckless spirit of a man who never let slip an offer for trade—for a moment filled his brain, but a timely reflection of the commercial unimportance of the transaction checked him. He only took a capacious quid of tobacco, as the commander gravely drew a settle before the fire, and, in honor of his guest, untied the black silk handkerchief that bound his grizzled brows.

What passed between Salvatierra and his guest that night, it behooves me not, as a grave chronicler of the salient points of history, to relate. I have said that Master Peleg Scudder was a fluent talker, and under the influence of divers strong waters furnished him by his host, he became still more loquacious. And think of a man with twenty years' budget of gossip! The commander learned for the first time of how Great Britain lost her colonies; of the French Revolution; of the great Napoleon, whose achievements perhaps Peleg colored more highly than the commander's superiors would have liked. And when Peleg turned questioner, the commander was at his mercy. He gradually made himself master of the gossip of the mission and the Presidio, the "small beer" chronicles of that pastoral age, the conversion of the heathen, the Presidio schools, and even asked the commander how he had lost his eye!

It is said that at this point of the conversation Master Peleg produced from about his person divers small trinkets, kick-shaws and new-fangled trifles, and even forced some of them upon his host. It is further alleged that under the malign influence of Peleg, and several glasses of aguardiente, the commander lost somewhat of his decorum and behaved in a manner most unseemly for one in his position, reciting high-flown Spanish poetry, and even piping in a thin, high voice, diverse madrigals and heathen canzonets of an amorous complexion—chiefly in regard to a "little one" who was his, the commander's "soul!" These allegations, perhaps unworthy the notion of a serious chronicler, should be received with great caution, and are introduced here as simple hearsay. That the commander, however, took a handkerchief, and attempted to show his guest the mysteries of the sembi-eucana, appearing in an agile but indecorous manner about the apartment, I utterly deny. Enough for the purpose of this narrative, that at midnight Peleg assisted his host to bed with many protestations of undying friendship, and then as the gale had abated, took his leave of the Presidio and hurried aboard the "General Court." When the day broke the ship was gone.

I know not if Peleg kept his word with his host. It is said that the holy fathers at the mission that night heard a loud chaunting in the plaza, as of the heathens singing psalms through their noses, and that for many days after an odor of salt codfish prevailed in the settlement; that a dozen hard nutmegs, which were unfit for spice or seed, were found in the possession of the wife of the baker, and that several bushels of shoe pegs, which bore a pleasing resemblance to oats, but were quite inadequate to the purposes of provender, were discovered in the stable of the blacksmith. But when the reader reflects upon the sacredness of a Yankee trader's word, the stringent discipline of the Spanish port regulations, and the proverbial indisposition of my countrymen to impose upon the confidence of a simple people, he will at once reject this part of the story.

A roll of drums, ushering in the year 1798, awoke the commander. The sun was shining brightly and the storm had ceased. He sat up in bed, and through the force of habit rubbed his left eye. As the remembrance of the previous night came back to him, he jumped from his couch and ran to the window. There was no ship in the bay. A sudden thought seemed to strike the commander, and he rubbed both of his eyes. Not content with this, he consulted the metallic mirror which hung beside his crucifix. There was no mistake. The commander had a visible second eye—a right one—as good, save for the purposes of vision, as the left.

Whatever might have been the true secret of this transformation, but one opinion prevailed at San Carlos. It was one of those rare miracles vouchsafed by a pious Catholic community as an evidence to the heathen, through the intercession of the blessed San Carlos himself. That their beloved commander, the temporal defender of the faith, should be the recipient of this miraculous manifestation, was most fit and seemly. The commander himself was reticent; he could not tell a falsehood—he dare not tell the truth. After all, if the good folk of San Carlos believed that the powers of the right eye were actually restored, was it wise and discreet for him to undeceive them? For the first time in his life, the commander thought of policy; for the first time he quoted the text which has been the lure of so many well-meaning but easy Christians, of being "all things to all men." Infelix Hermenegildo Salvatierra! Through thy foolish pride crept the arch-enemy into thy soul; through thy weakness fell the fair fortune of San Carlos!

For by degrees an ominous whisper crept through the little settlement. The right eye of the commander, although miraculous, seemed to exercise a baleful effect upon the beholder. No one could look at it without winking. It was cold, hard, relentless and unflinching. More than that, it seemed to be endowed with a dreadful prescience—a faculty of seeing through and into the inarticulate thoughts of those it looked upon. The soldiers of the garrison obeyed the eye rather than the voice of their commander, and answered his glance rather than his lips in questioning. The servants could not evade the ever-watchful, but cold attention that seemed to pursue them. The children of the Presidio school smirched their copy-books under the awful supervision, and poor Pachita, the prize pupil, failed utterly in that marvelous upstroke when her patron stood beside her. Gradually distrust, suspicion, self-accusation, and timidity, took the place of trust, confidence and security throughout San Carlos. Wherever the right eye of the commander fell, a shadow fell with it.

Nor was Salvatierra entirely free from the baleful influence of his miraculous acquisition. Unconscious of its effect upon others, he only saw in their actions evidence of certain things that the crafty Peleg had hinted on that eventful New Year's Eve. His most trusty retainers stammered, blushed, and faltered before him. Self-accusations, confessions of minor faults and delinquencies, or extravagant excuses and apologies, met his mildest inquiries. The very children that he loved—his pet pupil, Pachita,—seemed to be conscious of some hidden sin. The result of this conscious irritation showed itself more plainly. For the first half-year, the commander's voice and eye were at variance. He was still kind, tender and thoughtful in speech. Gradually, however, his voice took upon itself the hardness of his glance, and its skeptical, impassive quality; and as the year again neared its close, it was plain that the commander had fitted himself to the eye, and not the eye to the commander.

It may be surmised that these changes did not escape the watchful solicitude of the fathers. Indeed, the few who were first to ascribe the right eye of Salvatierra to miraculous origin, and the special grace of the blessed San Carlos, now openly talked of witchcraft and the agency of Luzbel, the evil one. It would have fared ill with Hermenegildo Salvatierra had he been aught but commander, or amenable to local authority. But the reverend father, Friar Manuel de Cortes, had no power over the political executive, and all attempts at spiritual advice failed signally. He retired baffled and confused from his first interview with the commander, who seemed now to take a grim satisfaction in the fateful power of his glance. The holy father contradicted himself, exposed the fallacies of his own arguments, and even, it is asserted, committed himself to several undoubted heresies. When the commander stood up at mass, if the officiating priest caught that skeptical and searching eye, the service was inevitably ruined. Even the power of the holy church seemed to be lost, and the last hold upon the affections of the people and the good order of the settlement departed from San Carlos.

The long, dry summer passed. As each fierce day burned itself out in little whiffs of pearl-gray smoke on the mountain summits, the low hills that surrounded the white walls of the Presidio grew more and more to resemble in hue the leathern packet of the commander, and Nature herself seemed to have borrowed his hard, dry glare. The earth was cracked and seamed with drought; a blight had fallen upon the orchards and vineyards, and the rain, long delayed and ardently prayed for,

SERRA MONUMENT, PETRA, MAJORCA

Last month's Grizzly Bear gave the interesting personal experiences of C. E. Chapman, Native Son Traveling Fellow in Pacific Coast History, who attended the dedication of a monument erected to the memory of Father Junipero Serra at his birthplace in Petra, Majorca, September 28th. Readers of that article will appreciate the above illustration, which shows the Serra monument and the crowds attending its dedication in that far-away island. The photograph from which the cut is made arrived at the University of California, Berkeley, late in November, and through the kindness of H. I. Priestley, Assistant Curator, Academy of Pacific Coast History, was immediately forwarded to The Grizzly Bear for reproduction.—Editor.

CALIFORNIA.

(This poem, written for the occasion, was a feature of the 1913 Admission Day celebration of the California State Association, Washington, D. C., and is published by request.)

California, O State triumphant,
Enthroned upon the sunset shores,
To Sister States and to the Nations
From the golden horn of plenty outpours

All the wealth the State affords,
Her hand extended with good will,
To grasp the hand in honor given,
That hearts with happiness overflow.

Fruits, she gives, in luscious bounty,
Her throne embowered in beauty stands,
With flowers glorious in tint and perfume,
These her messages to other Lands.

Arisen indeed from ashes,
Arise in speech and noble acts,
Enclosing the wonderful beautiful Arts,
With the scientific, mechanical Facts.

She speaks to the World anew
In Pan-America! Panama!
Drawing all peoples in unity,
Bringing their truest homage from afar.

California, grandly triumphant,
O'er loss—o'er gain—still great,
Shining by the noble Pacific.
California! All hail to the State!

OFFICIAL COLORS CHOSEN.

San Francisco—Blue, gold and orange have been chosen as the official colors of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, to be held here next year. In the exposition flag the diagonals will be of blue and the body orange; in the center will be a setting-sun of gold, with a battleship, in outline, passing through the Panama Canal.

There are fifty-five oaks in the United States, about evenly divided between the East and the West. The Eastern species, and particularly white oaks, are the most valuable.

TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF FOUNDER OF MISSION CHAIN

SANTA BARBARA—THE MEMORY of Junipero Serra was honored here, November 23rd and 24th, as in no other place in the State, the exercises being participated in by practically every resident and hundreds of visitors. The program of both days was enacted at Santa Barbara Mission, founded December 4, 1786, and which is recognized as the best preserved of all the missions.

The feature of November 23rd was an excellent presentation of a drama, "Planting of the Cross,"—written especially for the occasion by Father Giebe,—by the students of St. Anthony College, on the mission steps. The scenes of the play were so realistic, and the characters so faithfully portrayed, that it is hoped "Planting of the Cross" will be made an annual affair at the mission.

The following day another great crowd assembled at the mission, to participate in the unveiling of a memorial cross, the American and Spanish flags which concealed it being drawn aside by Misses Henrietta Vail and Ynez Donahue, attired, respectively, in American and Spanish colors. Father Theophilus preached a sermon on the meaning of the cross, which, he declared, was the sure cure of society. The world realizes it is grossly afflicted. It has intermittent spells of fever, and on its bed of pain shifts from one side to the other and constantly changes physicians. Lots of mixture has been administered. Society has so many different kinds of religion that it really has no religion. Money-greed and lack of spirituality were degrading the innocents. The cause was lack of personal purity and a neglect to heed Christ's prescriptions, and he contended that, only along the royal highway to the cross, could the right prescriptions be found, the cures for all the ailments of society.

Mayor Boeseke, who presided and delivered the opening address, introduced Congressman Joseph R. Knowland of Oakland, Past Grand President of the Native Sons of the Golden West, who has been most active in the preservation of California's landmarks, as the orator of the day. Mr. Knowland's address was a tribute to Father Serra, an appeal for the preservation of all the missions, and an apostrophe to California's commanding position. It follows, in full:

"It is indeed gratifying that the people of California are, as time passes, according to Father Junipero Serra the full honor due him. Many years ago in historic Monterey, where the remains of this saintly man rest, Mrs. Jane Stanford erected to his memory the first monument in this State. Later, in 1907, there was unveiled in Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, a statue of most artistic design—a further evidence of the high esteem in which the memory of this great religious teacher is held. There have been many Californians who have urged that he be given one of the places in the Hall of Fame in the Capitol building at Washington, to which the State is entitled, every commonwealth in the Union being accorded the privilege of placing there two statues of men illustrious in the history of the state. That would be fitting to the memory of one whom all Californians hold dear. Today in every section of the State, including the most obscure hamlet as well as thriving cities, Californians, inquiring why November twenty-fourth has been declared a legal holiday, are being enlightened and made to appreciate the important position Father Junipero Serra occupies in the history of this far-western State.

"The rising generation of California is inspired by the example of the Pioneer Mothers and Fathers of forty-nine. Those noble men and women, big-hearted and self-sacrificing, did not live for self alone. They would divide their last drop of water or remaining crust of bread. As a striking illustration, I might cite the case of the members of the famous Donner Party, forced to winter in the Sierras, who, when starving, furnished innumerable instances of heroism and self-sacrifice that will ever illumine the pages of California history. The life of General Sutter, one of the most noted of California's early pioneers, furnishes yet another example of self-sacrifice of the early Californian. Thousands of needy emigrants received succor at his hands without price. Every California miner shared freely with his comrade.

Sought Souls, Not Gold.

"But what of the original pioneers of California; those who sowed the first seed of civilization and established the first permanent settlements in Alta California—the Franciscan missionaries? The president and leader of this order was Junipero Serra, the two hundredth anniversary of whose November 21th was the two hundredth birthday anniversary of Junipero Serra, founder of the chain of California missions extending from San Diego to Sonoma, and embracing twenty-one establishments. Accordingly, Governor Hiram Johnson declared the day a legal holiday, and it was appropriately observed in various places, particularly in those localities where the missions are situated.

Junipero Serra was born at Petra, Majorca, November 24, 1713, and died at his favorite mission, San Carlos Borromeo (El Carmel), September 28, 1784. The first mission founded by Father Serra was that of San Diego, July 16, 1769, and the last, San Buenaventura, March 31, 1782. He made his home at San Carlos Borromeo Mission, founded June 3, 1770.

Recognizing his great services, the people of California, without regard to religious creeds, joined in paying tribute to Junipero Serra, the pioneer of the Gospel in what has since become the great Commonwealth of California. It is not recorded that any man did greater service for his fellow-men than did Junipero Serra, and for that service the people of California should, and do, honor his works and respect his memory.—Editor.

birth we celebrate today. The story of the devotion and self-sacrifice of this man should be an inspiration. He possessed the worthy traits of the pioneer of forty-nine, but the lure that lured him Westward was not gold—he was just as zealous in his search for souls that he might deliver from darkness. Dreams of fame and greatness were banished from his mind and his eyes were turned toward a wilderness far away, of which mortal man knew little.

"His life has already been reviewed. I need not call attention to the fact that from the time of his arrival to the day of his death, covering a period of nearly fifteen years, he labored with a religious zeal that was commendable. It is related that on his visits to the various mission establishments he would travel back and forth between San Diego and San Francisco, a distance of five hundred miles, walking every step of the way, and these visits were not infrequent. Others might falter and urge that the little band retrace its steps, but Father Serra was fired with that religious zeal that compelled him to continue on and on regardless of his physical condition. To convert the Indians to the faith he so loved his struggles were incessant, and his efforts untiring.

Ruins Plead Eloquenty.

"Standing in the very shadow of what was once the largest and richest, and which is today probably the best preserved and most widely known of the Franciscan missions, we are reminded that these establishments, recalling the days of the reign of Spanish sovereignty and the devotion and self-sacrifice of those early fathers, today constitute the most interesting of our State's landmarks, and that they have not been better preserved is humiliating to every Californian. I have visited all the old California missions and many years ago resolved as a native Californian to devote my energies toward their preservation. As president of the California Historic Landmarks League and as chairman of the committee of the Grand Parlor of Native Sons of the Golden West for the preservation of landmarks, I have been in a position to at least assist in accomplishing some work along these lines.

"How vividly I recall my visit to the ruins of Soledad Mission and how those few remnants of this establishment filled me with a desire to assist in saving the few which yet remained. Soledad means solitude. In the solitude these ruins stand, the rains of successive winters beating down upon and gradually leveling the exposed adobe walls until in a few years but heaps of earth will remain to mark the spot. Ruins of these great structures plead more eloquently to the people of the State than any words within my power to utter, strikingly portraying the inevitable result of public indifference—the passing of California's most important historic landmarks.

Native Sons Restore Missions.

"A few years ago attention was directed to the condition of one of the missions in this very county—Santa Ynez. The beautiful and picturesque bell tower at the side of the chapel had fallen. Representing the Native Sons of the Golden West, we furnished funds to rebuild this tower and it has been restored. Old Mission San Antonio de Padua, in Monterey County, has been re-roofed by the Native Sons. How well I remember my first visit to those old ruins. Passing through a beautiful undulating country skirted upon both sides by live oaks I saw in the distance, forming a background for the mission, what was once Mt. Santa Lucia, now changed to Mt. Junipero Serra, and seemingly at its foot the ruins of this mission. Alone, with few habitations near by, stood San Antonio de Padua Mission. Formerly one of the largest and most beautiful of the old mission establishments, it was for years neglected, with no one to stay the hand of the vandal. During this visit, as I wandered in and about the remaining structures, picturesque in their state of ruin, a feeling of sadness and regret was awakened at the thought of what a small sum of money, had it been expended in time, would have checked the ravages of decay. When the roofs fall and leave the adobe walls exposed to the winter rains, they melt away like snow before the sun's scorching rays. We had the walls rebuilt ready for the roof when the earthquake of 1906 came, and the green adobe walls were thrown to the ground. The work had to be done anew, but finally a roof was placed over this structure. I am not a Catholic, but believe St. Anthony may have helped.

Act Today; Tomorrow May Be Too Late.

"We are now engaged in an effort to save Mission San Jose, in Alameda County. We have funds almost ample to re-roof. Of the original twenty-one mission establishments, but two have entirely disappeared—Santa Cruz and San Rafael. Of the remaining nineteen, all but about five are in a fair state of preservation, and remaining portions belonging to at least four can be preserved. Let us act today in this work; tomorrow may be too late.

"Did you ever consider that no state possesses a history more interesting, more romantic or more picturesque? Do you appreciate the important part played by this State in the history of the Nation? When this prospective state knocked at the doors of Congress for admission there were fifteen free and fifteen slave states. The question came before the national legislative body at a time when the first dark clouds were gathering, forerunners of the impending storm that was to later threaten the very foundations of our Government. A bitter fight was waged. The great statesmen of the time gave vent to their efforts. It was during that memorable debate that Senator Stewart uttered the words which, in view of the acquisition of Hawaii and the Philippines, now seem prophetic. He said:

"The Atlantic states, through their commercial, social and political affinities and sympathies, are steadily renovating the governments and the social constitutions of Europe and Africa. The Pacific states must necessarily perform the same sublime and beneficent functions in Asia."

"Is not that prophecy fast being fulfilled? When a vote was finally taken California was admitted as a free state and the tide was turned. During the first few years following the gold discovery, California was the world's mecca. The methods of travel were slow and irksome. The toilsome journey across the plains, with its attendant perils; the sea voyage, with its uncertainties and hard ships—thus did California invent the serious need of steamboats and long-distance railroading. When the line of the Union and Central Pacific was completed, thus uniting by bands of steel the two great coasts, the practicability of long distance railroading had been demonstrated by California.

"When California was admitted there were but thirty states in the Union. We have since added seventeen stars to the constellation, and today within continental United States no more territories remain to be admitted. Then the United States boasted of a population of 23,191,000, while today we have reached nearly the hundred million mark. Our territorial area was then but 2,995,536 square miles. We have since added 747,808 square miles.

All Eyes Upon Us.

"We of California cannot fail to appreciate the important part we must play in the future progress of the Nation,—a part no less important than we have played in the past. In a decade we have advanced in rank from the twenty-first state to the twelfth. Within the same period our population has increased 60.1 per cent. Our possibilities for future growth can be appreciated when we realize that we have but fifteen inhabitants to the square mile of territory. Massachusetts has over 418 to the square mile. As thickly populated, California would boast of a population of over 60,000,000 people. Japan, with less territory, supports a population of 50,000,000, with 335 souls to the square mile. Contemplate the possibilities of the Orient in connection with the future development of California—China with a population of 432,000,000, Japan

N. JANUARY, 1864, ONLY A little more than an inch of rain fell, and this made only about four inches for the season. Comparisons with the dry season of '51 and '52 were being made, and fears were being felt that the driest season that the State had experienced since '50 was about to be met.

The placer mining industry, especially in the dry diggings sections, was languishing, there being no water in the gulches and creeks to wash the pay dirt that was piled up everywhere awaiting the winter freshets.

Dull times were complained of everywhere, and miners and business men, as well as farmers and stockraisers, were gazing anxiously skyward, looking for the clouds that would not float in.

In the Livermore Valley feed for stock had been grazed off and cattle were dying from starvation, while in Southern California, where there had been only a few sprinkles of rain, cattle and horses were being slaughtered by thousands to save the hides from total loss. As the previous season had been a stormless one, vegetation showed signs of great distress during the month.

The Legislature met after its holiday recess and resumed the making of laws in a desultory manner. Nothing of any great importance was done during the month.

No important battles were fought by the armies in the South engaged in the Civil War, and aside from the bombardment of Charleston, South Carolina, there was no activity on either side. The sum of $50,000 was sent East, by contributors to the Sanitary Fund, from different parts of the State.

State Encourages Home Industry.

J. W. Jacobson of Marysville was paid a premium of $800 by the State of California for his exhibits of manufactured turpentine and resin at the state and district fairs. This award was made under the provisions of an act of the Legislature to encourage home production and manufacture of articles in California that were being purchased abroad.

Mr. Jacobson complained of the acts of reckless destruction by the gum gatherers who, instead of tapping the pine trees in a proper manner and fastening drip pans to catch the sap and thereby not permanently injuring the tree, were cutting out large notches so that the gum would rapidly ooze and form in the cut. This meant death to the pine tree and thousands of pines were being destroyed. It was proposed to legislate so as to stop it. It is singular how this industry has disappeared from the timber sections of the State.

The discovery of a large deposit of salt in Nevada, about seventy miles from Virginia City, was the cause of much rejoicing on the Comstock Lode. About three hundred tons of salt were used each month in the ore reduction works on this lode and as it had to be freighted from San Francisco over the Sierra Nevada Mountains, at a cost of over five cents a pound, it was a big item of expense.

The deposit was found near the overland stage road, and being on the line of travel to Reese River, in Idaho, was expected to be a big source of revenue to the teamsters returning from that district to California, as a load of salt to Virginia City would pay the expenses of the return trip, which was being made with an empty wagon. The salt basin was the bed of an evaporated lake and contained about five square miles of salt, fifteen feet in thickness, and was described as being as pure and clean as ice. It was being quarried in large blocks by a company composed of about thirty men, who were considered to be prospective millionaires.

The copper smelting enterprise at Antioch was meeting with unexpected difficulties. It had been expected to use Mt. Diablo coal, but it was found that only the best quality of this coal would generate sufficient heat to smelt the ore, consequently the expense was exceeding the income. It was now in an experimental course of treatment and, unfortunately for the copper industry, it did not bear the recognizable signs of success.

Assessments Keep Up Drain.

During 1863 about four thousand mining companies had been incorporated in California and these, added to those that had been created in previous years, made certificates of stock as thick as autumn leaves after a November freeze. Every prominent citizen was a director in one or more of these companies and every community was contributing a sum, monthly, to pay the assessments. These were estimated to amount to a sum of over $2,000,000 a month throughout the entire State. The dividends from mining companies were estimated at about $1,000,000 a month, but there were hopes and expectations that every assessment proposition would, within the coming year, become a dividend-payer and all investors become rich.

What Was Doing IN CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

(THOMAS R. JONES, SACRAMENTO.)

While the drain of assessments kept many people hard up, there were frequent good-luck strikes from these investments that made a few people rich and they became prominent and envied. This served to keep others enthused and they made ready payment of the toll. Of course, this money was not wasted. It only changed hands and went for labor, machinery and supplies, and also paid the earnings of a livelihood for many hundreds of mineral developers. It was a great game of hazard, in its most seductive form, and while the many lost, the lucky few made fortunes.

The copper industry began now to languish. Low-grade ore, without facilities of smelting at a profit, was one cause, and a lack of new discoveries, that was giving speculative blood a chance to cool, was another.

The Union Company, in Wet Ravine, Sierra County, produced $15,000 in gold during the first week of the month.

The Massachusetts Hill Mining Company, near Grass Valley, took out, in eleven days, $26,000.

Tracy & Co., who ran an express company in Northern California and Southern Oregon, had, during the summer of 1863, lost a package of gold coin containing $1,500. Although diligent search was made for it they were unable to find any trace of it. One of their offices in Siskiyou County was located in a merchandise store and the proprietor, one day during the month, picked up a package wrapped in soiled paper that had laid at the end of the counter on a box of tobacco for a long time, and found it to be the missing package of coin lost by the express company. It had been thus mislaid and remained unfound all these months.

Violate Sunday Law.

Z. W. Kellum of Denverton, Solano County, now made claim of being the champion duck hunter in the State. He claimed to have killed 133 ducks at one discharge of his double-barreled shotgun and then repeated with a death roll of 142. He must have used a small-sized cannon, and ducks were in flocks of a thousand or more.

J. McM. Shafter, a prominent citizen of Marin County, sent men to Lake Tahoe and at an expense of over $1000 stocked, with trout from the lake, a large pond on his estate in Marin County.

A. A. Bennett, a poultry raiser of Sacramento, imported from Antwerp, in Europe, a coop of silver spangled Holland chickens, the first of this kind that had been brought into the State. He also brought from Europe four Black Spanish roosters, that were said to be of royal chicken blood.

The railroad from San Francisco to San Jose was completed to the latter city on January 16th, and a big celebration held. Over five thousand people attended the exercises and addresses were made by Judge Dame, T. G. Phelps, Laurence Areher and others, and a salute of thirty-six guns was fired in honor of the event.

Dr. Toland had 1600 acres of land near Rio Vista, in Solano County, on which he was ranging 10,000 sheep. He had raised 4000 lambs this season, and his wool clip was sold for 32 cents a pound. His published success was directing attention to the wool and mutton industry.

McKean Buchanan was again the lessee of the Metropolitan Theater, in Sacramento. To entertain the members of the Legislature, from whom the principal patronage came, he had an excellent troupe, headed by Mrs. W. H. Leighton and Charles Pope, with Miss Virginia Buchanan, Mrs. Saunders and Walter Leman, giving tragedy, comedy and melodrama in excellent portrayal. On the first Sunday evening of the new year, they were all arrested for violation of the Sunday law, which forbade theatrical performances on Sunday nights. They were found guilty and McKean Buchanan was fined $100. The other ten members of his company were fined $50 each and the city treasury was $600 ahead of the game. The troupe rendered "The Romance of a Poor Young Man," the night after they were fined.

State Official Defaults.

Starr King's new church in San Francisco, on Geary street, had a pew renting social on January 10th. The yearly rental of the pews was fixed at $10.375, but the wealthy members of the church offered premiums for choice of selection that amounted to $7,300 more. The Rev. T. S. King was considered to be the most eloquent divine in the United States, and his church was always filled.

G. R. Warren, who was State Controller during '62 and '63, was found to be short in his account with the State to the amount of $12,000, and levanted on a steamer for Panama during this month, leaving his bondsmen to meet the deficit. They were all prominent citizens of San Joaquin County, where Warren had formerly resided. Warren was a single man and a hale fellow often met in pleasure resorts. He squandered a large amount of money and his departure was viewed with feelings of contempt and scorn by his former political and business friends.

At Monterey, January 6th, John Martin of Carmelo, enroute to serve on the grand jury, met an Indian named Gregorio on the road. The two men had never seen each other before, and without having a word of dispute the Indian shot Martin. Gregorio, after being captured, stated that he felt like killing somebody and if Martin had not come along when he did he would have killed somebody else. While the justice of the peace was holding an examination in Monterey, a large crowd gathered in the street and the Americans organized a vigilance committee. The native Californians of Spanish and Indian descent opposed them and a big fight ensued in which quite a number of men were injured. The vigilance committee finally got possession of the Indian and hung him in short order.

A man named Patsy Callahan, who was a steamboat runner and sporting man in Sacramento, was stabbed and killed by Thomas Sherman in a saloon affray on January 26th. The quarrel began from a discussion on how to cure hiccup. Callahan was one of the six men who took part in the Lloyd-Smith shooting affray at the steamboat landing in Sacramento, in March, 1862, and was the fifth man of those engaged in the fight to die a violent death. Only one man of the six was now alive, and he was expected to meet a similar fate when his time for exit came.

Criminals at Work.

George W. Corliss and wife, a young married couple just in their thirties, built a stage-stopping house on the stage road south from Santa Barbara, and with a flock of fifteen hundred sheep were beginning to prosper. Their house was named Las Cruces, and a Mexican sheepherder was the only person living there beside themselves. On the evening of January 17th, three men came to the house, murdered Mr. and Mrs. Corliss, robbed the place of all the valuables they could find, and then burned the house. The Mexican herder managed to make his escape, but could give no description of the murderers. As the section of the country had a large number of hard characters, the officers were unable to find a clue to the inhuman murderers.

The Indians in the northern part of Humboldt County were again on the warpath. On January 15th they plundered two trading stores on the South Salmon River, killed six white and about twenty Chinese miners on Parker Creek, and had secured a large quantity of gold dust and supplies from the cabins and camps of the miners. A posse of about twenty white men was organized and went in pursuit. On the 18th a fight occurred in which several of the Indians were killed and wounded and the band dispersed into the mountains. The Government officials ordered a detachment of soldiers sent to chastise the marauders, but they had two weeks' start before the news had been received of their depredations.

On January 29th, S. S. Benton, walking from Dutch Flat, Placer County, to North San Juan, met two highwaymen, about 2 p.m., who robbed him of $175. They then took him up a ravine and held him captive in the chapparal. About dark Benton made a dash for liberty. One of the robbers fired a charge of buckshot into his right shoulder, while the other fired three times from a revolver and missed. Benton ran until he fainted from loss of blood and was found late at night, lying by the roadside. Although dangerously wounded he got well.

Old-style Hoops Saves Life.

The first fatal accident on the Central Pacific Railroad occurred on January 17th at Sacramento, F. B. Clement, aged 37 years and employed on the surveying work, being killed. An excursion train, consisting of four flat cars provided with benches, had been run to the end of the track. In the party were ex-Governor Stanford, his wife and other prominent people. In returning, the flat cars were being run ahead of the engine and at Fourth and I streets the wheels of the first car struck a stick of wood that had fallen upon the rail and it threw the truck of the car off the track. Mr. Clement was standing near the end of the car, holding a box of surveying instruments, and the jolt of the derailed car caused him to fall off. His head was crushed under the car wheels.

LOVE STORY OF CONCHA ARGUELLO

AN FRANCISCO'S OLDEST ADOBE building—the officers' club at the Presidio—was, in celebration of the two-hundredth birthday anniversary of Junipero Serra, marked by the California Historic Landmarks League with a tablet, the Government troops and band participating in the ceremonies. The tablet, which was unveiled by Miss Eleanor Kuowland, daughter of Congressman Joseph R. Knowland, president of the Landmarks League and Past Grand President of the N.S.G.W., bears the following inscription:

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO
COMMANDANTE'S HEADQUARTERS
A. D. 1776
OFFICERS' QUARTERS
UNDER SPANISH, MEXICAN AND AMERICAN RULE
OLDEST ADOBE BUILDING IN

Lewis F. Byington, vice-president of the league and Past Grand President, N.S.G.W., delivered the address of the occasion and reviewed the Presidio's history. Other speakers were A. A. D'Ancena, president of the Board of Education; Count del Valle de Salazar, Consul-General of Spain; Professor Henry Morse Stephens of the University of California; Chaplain Randolph, who accepted the

"There is one name that should be the perennial toast of the men of this Presidio. We have just celebrated by a splendid pageant the four-hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the Pacific Ocean by Balboa, and we chose for queen of that ceremony a beautiful girl by the name of Conchita. There was another Conchita once—possibly the queen of our fiesta was named after her—the daughter of the commandante of this Presidio, the bewitching, the beautiful, the radiant Concha Arguello. Here she queened it supremely; here she presided at every hospitality; here she was the leader of every fiesta.

"To this spot, in the absence of her stern old father, there came from the north the vessel of the Russian Count Rezanoff, his secret mission an intrigue of some kind concerning this wonderland, for the benefit of the great czar at St. Petersburg. He found no difficulty in coming ashore. Father was away. Besides, the Russian marines looked good, and knew how to dance as only military men know how to dance. The hospitality was Castilian, and the grand ball in this old building outlived anything that in these days boasts of the tango or the one-step,—and there was no 'hesitation' about its waltz. Then came Love's miracle; and by the time the commandante returned to his post, the glances of the bright-dashing eyes of the daughter had more effectively pulverized the original scheme of Rezanoff, than any old guns of her father on this fort could have done.

"Their truth was pledged, but as he belonged to the Greek church, with a lover's abandon he started home to St. Petersburg, the tremendous love-stories that have survived the ages, Alexander and Thais, Ptolemy and Aspasia, Anthony and Cleopatra, and all the rest of them,—some of them a narrative unfit to handle with tongs,—shall we let this local story die? Shall not America furnish a newer and purer standard? If to such a standard Massachusetts is to contribute the 'Courtship of Miles Standish,' may not California contribute the 'Courtship of Rezanoff?' Men of the Presidio, what say you? In the barracks, on parade, at the dance, this memory belongs to you. And when at the banquet-board you give your usual toast to 'the ladies,' let it at this army post be ever coupled with the name of the commandante's daughter, Concha Arguello."

came not. The sky was as fearless as the right eye of the commander. Murmurs of discontent, insubordination and plotting among the Indians reached his ears; he only set his teeth more firmly, tightened the knot of his black silk handkerchief, and looked up his Toledo.

The last day of the year 1798 found the commander sitting, at the hour of evening prayers, alone in the guard room. He no longer attended the services of the holy church, but crept away at such times to some solitary spot, where he spent the interval in silent meditation. The firelight played upon the low beams and rafters, but left the bowed figure of Salvatierra in darkness. Sitting thus, he felt a small touch on his arm, and looking down, saw the figure of Pachita, his little Indian pupil, at his knee. "Ah, littlest of all," said the commander, with something of his old tenderness, lingering with wonderful sweetness over the endearing diminutives of his native speech—"sweet one, what dost thou here? Art thou not afraid of him, whom every one shuns and fears?"

"No," said the little Indian, readily, "not in the dark. I hear your voice—the old voice; I feel your touch—the old touch; but I see not your eye. Señor Comandante. That I only fear—and that, oh, señor! Oh, my father," said the child, lifting her little arms around his, "that I know is not thine own."

The commander shuddered and turned away. Then, recovering himself, he kissed Pachita gravely on the forehead and bade her retire. A few hours later, when silence had fallen on the Presidio, he sought his own couch and slept peacefully.

At about the middle watch of the night a dusky figure crept through the low embrasure of the commander's apartment. Other figures were flitting through the parade-ground, which the commander might have seen had he not slept so quietly. The intruder stepped noiselessly to the couch and listened to the sleeper's deep-drawn inspiration. Something glittered in the fire-light as the savage lifted his arm; another moment and the sore perplexities of Hermenegildo Salvatierra would have been over, when suddenly the savage started and fell back in a paroxysm of terror. The commander slept peacefully, but his right eye, widely opened, fixed and unaltered, glared coldly on the would-be assassin. The man fell to the earth in a fit, and the noise awoke the sleeper.

To rise to his feet, grasp his sword, and deal blows thick and fast upon the mutinous savages who now thronged the room, was the work of a moment. Help opportunely arrived, and the undisciplined Indians were speedily driven beyond the walls, but in the scuffle the commander received a blow upon his right eye, and lifting his hand to that mysterious organ, it was gone. Never again was it found, and never again, for bale or bliss, did it adorn the right orbit of the commander.

With it passed away the spell that had fallen upon San Carlos. The rain returned to invigorate the languid soil, harmony was restored to priest and soldier, the green grass presently waved over the sore hillsides, the children flocked again to the side of their martial preceptor, a te demm was sung in the mission church, and pastoral content once more smiled upon the gentle valleys of San Carlos. And far southward crept the "General Court," with its master, Peleg Scudder, trafficking in heads and peltries with the Indians, and offering glass eyes, wooden legs, and other Boston notions, to the chiefs.

tablet on behalf of the army post, and Judge John F. Davis, Grand Second Vice-president, N.S.G.W. Judge Davis' address was an account of a romance connected with the Presidio of early days—the love-story of Concha Arguello—and is given in full below:

"Members of the Landmarks League and Friends: I am glad to see this bronze tablet affixed to this noble old adobe building. I take it, that when some of the wooden eyesores that abound not a hundred miles away from here are torn down in the necessary beautification that should precede 1915, this old historic building—a monument to Spanish chivalry and hospitality—will be spared. We have too few of them left to lose any of them now. And of all buildings in the world the Presidio army-post should guard this one with jealous care, for here was enacted one of the greatest, sweetest, most tragic love-stories of the world,—a story which is all the Presidio's own, and which it does not have to share with any other army-post. To you men of the army, my appeal ought to be an easy one. You have no desire to escape the soft impeachment that the profession of arms has ever been susceptible to the charms of woman. The relation of Mars to Venus is not simply a legend of history, is founded on no mere mythology—their relationship is as sure as the firmament, and their orbits are sometimes very close together.

journey of that day by way of Russian America and across the plains of Siberia, to obtain his Emperor's consent to his marriage with a daughter of the church of Rome. Unknown to his sweetheart, he died on the journey in a little village in the wilds of Siberia. The beautiful girl waited and waited for his return till the roses of youth faded from her cheeks. True heart, no other voice could reach her ear. Despairing of ever hearing from her lover, she joined the Dominican sisterhood, and gave the remainder of her life to the heroic and self-effacing service of her order. In later life, she had the consolation of learning—quite by accident—that her lover had not been false to her, but had died on his mission to win her. Long years afterward she died, at Santa Barbara, I am told; and today while he sleeps beneath a Greek cross, in the snows of Siberia, she is at rest beneath a Roman cross in the little cemetery at Benicia, across the bay.

"Gentlemen, this history is true. These old walls were witnesses to part of it. These hills and dunes were part of the setting for their love-drama. One picnic was taken by boat to what is now the Island of Belvedere yonder. One horseback outing was taken to the picturesque canyon of San Andreas, so named by Lieutenant Rivera and Father Palom. Gertrude Atherton has given us the novel, and Bret Harte has sung the poem, founded upon it. It is the story of this army-post. When we think of the

Are there two kinds of Justice—one for the ordinary mortal, and the other for that class of human beings embracing the "socially prominent," "influential" and "of wealthy parents"? We ask this in all seriousness, because criminal records in our large cities would indicate that there are, and the attendant results have assumed a serious and dangerous aspect.

Take the white-slave crusade: No more loathsome criminals exist than those who engage in the traffic of women, and the trafficker is both criminal and loathsome, whether he be rich or poor, great or small. There have been so many arrests under this head that the people have been astounded to learn to what an alarming extent white-slavery is practiced.

Have you followed the course of these arrests through the courts? Have you noticed how few convictions there are? Have you ever been impressed with the frequency with which the complaining witnesses "disappear" from the court's jurisdiction just before trial? Have you noticed, from the accounts in your daily paper, with what "class" a great majority of these human beasts are identified? If you have been observant, you must be impressed with the fact—which records will prove—that the convicted white-slavers HAVE NOT been those who, upon arrest, were heralded as "socially prominent," "of wealthy parents," or "influential."

And also the automobile: It is a matter of record that a great majority of the automobile accidents (many of them fatal) can be clearly and justly traced to intoxicated drivers. It is also a matter of record that practically all of these drunken automobilists, if arrested at all, are allowed to continue their death-dealing practice with a monetary fine. The records will show, we believe, that more intoxicated auto-drivers are arrested in Los Angeles—small as is the number compared to those who should be arrested—than in any other California city, and yet there has never been a single jail sentence in that city for the offense, or, at least, an imposed jail sentence actually enforced, for there have been a few "suspended" jail sentences.

Most of these criminals—for such they are, purely and simply,—also come under the "prominent" or "wealthy" class rule, and it is significant that the trial magistrate always gives them the benefit of the law's option of a fine. What does a fine, of from five to one hundred (never over) dollars amount to in this class of lawbreakers? Just as much as do the lives of those innocents who are made their victims—nothing! And by their acts, the trial judges place the same value upon the victims, who, in numerous instances, are either killed outright or crippled for life.

These are conditions that actually exist, and so long as they are continued we make a mockery of our boast that "all men are created equal." By permitting such conditions, The People, themselves, who have it within their power to correct such miscarriages of Justice, are encouraging discontent, aye, even anarchy, among that great majority classed as ordinary mortals. We are taught that Right makes Might, but many of us are beginning to believe, from just such occurrences as related above, that we were taught wrongfully, and that Might makes Right.

We do not need more laws to correct these, and similar evils, but are sorely in need of more impartial law-enforcers. We require a corps of arresting officers and a judiciary that will make every criminal answer for his crime according to his guilt, not according to the influence of his friends, his relatives, or himself. In short, we should demand, and get, from our public servants, a strict and impartial enforcement of the laws enacted for our protection. It will reduce taxes by lessening crime and thereby eliminating many useless so-called peace officers, and what should be our greatest concern, will clarify the moral atmosphere of a "prominent" odor.

We are told in the papers that $16,263 was expended in the burial of the late Adolphus Busch. A willful waste of money in making a vulgar display of wealth. How much better would it have been to have spent $263 on the dead, and the $16,000 for the relief and betterment of the living.

A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS
NEW YEAR!

Happy! Why, you can't live in this glorious State of California, which has been so munificently showered with God's blessings, without being happy the whole year round. And Prosperity will come to you in just the same degree that you appreciate those blessings and utilize your God-given opportunities.

A law making it a felony punishable by a jail sentence, for any intoxicated or drunken person to attempt to navigate any kind of a vehicle would fill a long-felt want, reduce the number of casualties, and relieve pedestrians from including in their morning supplication: "Lord, deliver us from the drunken auto-driver."

A constitutional amendment will go on this year's ballot providing for the abolition of the poll tax. We're in favor of it, provided it does not mean a reduction in public-school funds. Look into that phase well before you vote, and if the passage of the amendment will affect the educational funds of the State, swat it.

United States Judge M. T. Dooling, in a recent decision rendered at San Francisco, ruled that Hindus who had been permitted to land in the Philippines, American possessions, cannot enter the United States. The people of California will applaud this ruling, for it should serve to keep out of our midst some of the undesirables, anyway.

Government investigators have reported that, at least in California, a combine of we-won't-lay hens, and not of hen-fruit dealers, is responsible for the high cost of eggs. Now, who can blame the hen for wanting to keep the fruits of her labors in the luxury class?

San Francisco has acquired another street-car line for The People. In inaugurating the municipally-owned street-car system, the big city has set an example that can well be followed by its sister cities, with both profit and convenience to those who pay the operating cost.

"That I will, in every instance, give preference to California products," is the one resolution that should top every loyal Californian's list of good "resolves" this year. And it should be the last to be departed from. Practice this throughout the year, and watch the gratifying results.

In removing Ella Flagg Young from the superintendency of the Chicago public schools, the politicians of the "Windy City" have aroused, and justly so, the indignation of the people of that city. The public schools throughout this country need more Youngs, and no politicians.

Two real-estate men of Los Angeles were recently sent to San Quentin—not on a deal, bowever,—because they misrepresented land to a purchaser. The millennium surely approaches. The very idea of requiring a real-estate salesman to have regard for the truth!

A minister is responsible for the assertion that the "slit skirt is the invention of the devil." Judging from the number in use, his satanic majesty hits the popular feminine fancy, and is entitled to membership in the society of successful inventors.

"Them was the good old days," when the Vigilantes administered Justice. A 1914 Vigilance Committee, made up of men with good red blood and a stiff backbone, would make white-slavers of all classes a rarity in this State.

Every Native Son will be asked in the near future to contribute to the Pioneer Mothers' monument fund. Do it gladly, brothers, for a more worthy cause never sought your support.

Were the "suspended" sentences so often imposed in our courts in the cases of drunken auto-mobile-drivers and white-slavers put into effect betwixt the neck of the culprits and a few strong tree-limbs, conditions would be highly improved.

PROSPERITY'S COMING!

The year nineteen hundred and fourteen will, the Good Lord willing, show greater advancement in California along every line of endeavor than any previous year has recorded. This is the prediction of those who are qualified to judge, and who base their opinions on present conditions of all those things which indicate future tendencies. No man can, of course, assure prosperity; but Prosperity's coming is manifest in everything about us.

The past six months, business has been quiet and there has been an appreciable falling-off in commercial activities of all kinds. This condition is not confined to California, nor does it affect any one particular line of business. It is general throughout this country, and, it is reported, extends throughout European countries.

The reasons assigned for applying the brakes to the Car of Progress which, in California at least, was moving along at a rapid pace, are varied, but when analyzed fail to reveal any one good and sufficient reason that can be generally accepted. All that we really know is that the conditions exist, and that we've got to make the best of them. There being no legitimate reason, therefore, for such conditions, they are but passing shadows that have heclouded the commercial skies.

Those who are developing the State's resources haven't time, now, to worry over the past six months. The temporary quietness has given them an opportunity to rest up a little, get their machinery in good working order, and plan for greater activities in the future. And with the opening of the new year they're going to again get aboard the Car of Progress, open wide the throttle, and develop a greater speed than has yet been attained.

Can't you see Prosperity coming? Well, it's on the way, and if you don't come out of that hard-times sleep it will pass you by. There's going to be no long stop to endeavor to get the calamity-howler aboard, for those who do things haven't time to wait. Just remember you're in California, the land of untold possibilities, the land that's too great in resources to be held back for very long by any influence save that which is wielded by Providence.

Prosperity's coming! The copious rains, the green grass, the huddling trees, the sprouting vines, the well-filled hanks, the optimistic merchants, the contented people—all proclaim it. Be ready to grasp it when it passes by, for thousands of newcomers will be eagerly awaiting an opportunity to occupy the place that will be left vacant by the unprepared.

The fender is now out of place, and of little service, on the street-car of the crowded city street. It ought to be transferred to the automobile with a drunken driver. After one of these death-dealing machines clears a passageway there's nothing left for the street-car to appropriate to its casualty list.

San Francisco won a great victory when Congress passed the Hetch Hetchy bill, permitting her to get a pure and adequate water supply. On with municipal ownership of all public utilities!

People not necessarily superstitious are just as well pleased that '13 is with us no more. And by the way, many queer things did happen during the year with the 13 annex, didn't they?

It will no longer be necessary to speak of San Francisco's big show as the "1915 exposition," but as "next year's world's fair." 1915 is our next-door neighbor, you know.

Los Angeles has put out policemen to protect young girls from white-slavers. Well, they can't accomplish any less good in this line of work than have the policemen.

Two new Native Sons buildings—one for Sacramento and the other for Stockton—have already appeared on the new-year horizon. May their numbers increase.

The poet, Burns, gives the best definition of New Year's Day:

"This day Time winds the exhausted chain,
To run the twelvemonth's length again."

POULTRY

(By MRS. A. BASLEY.)

ARTIFICIAL INCUBATION.

WHEN IS THE BEST TIME OF YEAR to start my incubator?" writes a beginner. This question is easily answered with my favorite maxim, "When in doubt, consult Nature." Nature's time for the birth of all young animals is in the spring, or early summer; eggs are more fertile at that time and one may say it is the natural time of the year to hatch chickens. However, we do not always want to wait Nature's time, especially here in California, where the seasons are all spring-like and where we have incubators to help us make money and "fool the hens."

Incubators, even at this age, have for the average person a certain mystery about them or, as the secretary of a large incubator company writes me, "To the great majority of people there remains a feeling that there is still something devilish or something pertaining to fairy-land about the hatching of chickens artificially." The ancient Egyptians, thousands of years ago, used incubation in ovens or hatcheries and have continued to do so since Abraham's day. In fact, methods for hatching eggs artificially are as old as the Pyramids.

The incubator of the Egyptians was a simple device, nothing like the modern contrivances that are heated and regulated automatically with a thermometer to register the heat and with every comfort for the newly-hatched chicks. The Egyptians hatched eggs in ovens built on the ground and heated by a slow fire. The ovens were kept at a temperature of about 104 degrees. The Egyptian poulterers had no thermometers, they had to guess at the temperature, but by long practice and experience they became expert. Egypt always has been a wonderful egg-producing country. Fowls of many different kinds increased by the million in the lowlands along the River Nile. The Egyptians robbed the nests of the wild fowls and hatched the eggs in their ovens. The modern Egyptians in our own day continue to hatch eggs in the same manner as their ancestors did for thousands of years; in fact, they are obliged to hatch artificially, for the Egyptian hens have been so trained for thousands of years that they have no longer the maternal or natural instinct for sitting and incubating their eggs, and therefore artificial incubation is as necessary now in Egypt as it was thousands of years ago, and it is practiced in exactly the same manner, with never a failure.

It would be impossible to estimate the value of the incubator to the poultry industry of America. It has made possible and profitable the large poultry plants in this country; has developed the broiler business; has created the duck farms; has raised the hen to the position of a money maker; has aroused a widespread interest in standard-bred poultry, and is generally conceded to be as necessary on an up-to-date farm as any of the modern farm machinery. One incubator will do the work of twenty or thirty hens. It can be started at any time, making it possible to hatch chickens in season and out of season or whenever there is a demand for them.

There have been many kinds of incubators invented, made and patented in the last twenty years. The difficulty is to choose which kind will do the work of hatching eggs best, that is, will bring out strong chicks with the least attention and the least expense. There are hot-water machines and hot-air machines; round incubators and square incubators. Some incubators are heated with gas, some with electricity, but most of them by the heat of a lamp which burns coal oil. The best incubator is the one that comes nearest to imitating the natural process of incubation by a hen, for undoubtedly Nature is our great teacher in this matter. It is wiser to buy a machine than to attempt to make one. Good incubators are now sold at so low a price that it does not pay to risk the loss of eggs in experimenting with a home-made machine. I could give a whole chapter of general directions for the operating of incubators, but our space is limited and each machine has with it a book or card of instruction for operating it.

RULE OF THREE.

The three essentials in operating incubators (another rule of three) are: the proper heat, the proper moisture in the atmosphere of the incubator, and the proper ventilation. The directions that come with the incubator will tell you the right amount of heat. It will all rest with you, the thermometer and the lamp, to keep the right heat. YOU are the head of this partnership; you and the lamp must keep the right temperature, and to do this you must be very particular to have the right sort of a clean wick, fresh every hatch, and the lamp kept absolutely clean. The thermometer must also be perfectly correct in its reading. The proper heat will be given in the printed directions. The correct moisture of the atmosphere of the incubator is a very important and difficult problem.

Professor Jaffa says: "The air of the incubator must not be dry but it must not be heavy with moisture. If there is too much towards the end of the incubation, the chick absorbs it, fills the entire shell and shuts off its own air space. If there is too little, the shell and membranes dry and it is difficult for the chick to peek its way out. Have you ever had your hand under the breast of a sitting hen? It feels about the same as if you slipped it under the neck of a sleeping baby that was well covered—just the same warm, moist feeling. That is just the degree of moisture that we want in the incubator, but the question is how to obtain it."

In the Government Weather Bureau there is an instrument called a "hygrometer," for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of moisture in the atmosphere. The "hygrometer" can be used in any of the incubators, and by this means the matter of moisture has been greatly simplified. For many years I have been well acquainted with the use of the "hygrometer" for weather observations, and I often wished for some such instrument small

November and December dividends from the South Eureka, near Sutter Creek, Amador County, have been declared at the rate of 3 cents a share for each month.

Discoveries of a commercial grade of asbestos near Lone, Amador County, are attracting considerable attention.

Oil dividends in California for 1913 will aggregate about $14,000,000.

AUTOMOBILE SERVICE TO YOSEMITE.

Automobile service has now been inaugurated in the Yosemite National Park for the handling of Yosemite travel between the railroad terminals and the hotels and camps in the valley. The initial trip was made from El Portal to Yosemite on November 19th with a twenty-five passenger car. It is understood that the transportation company will make this service up-to-date in every respect, and by the time next spring's travel commences, will have a line of eight or ten new cars on the road, carrying eight to twenty-five passengers each.

This service will be maintained throughout the winter for the benefit of those who wish to see Yosemite in its winter garb. There is also daily auto service from El Portal to the Merced and Tuolumne Groves of Big Trees, so that visitors may visit both the Big Trees and the Yosemite any season of the year.

PAYMENT SICK BENEFITS OPTIONAL WITH PARLORS

Just before going to press with this issue of The Grizzly Bear, word was received from the office of Fred H. Jung, Grand Secretary of the N.S.G.W., San Francisco, to the effect that the Board of Appeals had rendered a decision that the PAYMENT OF SICK BENEFITS IS OPTIONAL WITH SUBORDINATE PARLORS.

The Board's decision was handed down in a case on appeal from Ramona Parlor, No. 109, Los Angeles. A resolution was recently introduced in the Parlor rescinding that provision of its by-laws providing for the payment of sick benefits. When the resolution came up for action, the point of order was raised that the amendment could not be acted upon because it was contrary to the laws of the Grand Parlor.

The president declared the point not well taken, was appealed from, and his decision sustained. The resolution rescinding the by-law providing for sick benefits was then adopted by the Parlor, and the action appealed from.

In sustaining the Parlor in its elimination of sick benefits, the Board of Appeals holds that when the Grand Parlor's Constitution for Subordinate Parlors says that Parlors shall pay such benefits as their by-laws MAY provide, it means that if the by-laws do not provide for any benefits, then the Parlors need not pay sick benefits. The Board holds, in short, that the word "may," as used in this connection, does not mean "must."

The effect of this decision will be to leave optional with the Parlors the payment of sick benefits. The question has been stubbornly fought on the floor of the Grand Parlor the past five years, but has been gaining adherents each year. The ruling will be received with joy by all those members who believed the Order would never assume the commanding position it should occupy until the commercial feature of sick benefits was eliminated.

This decision will not, in any way, affect those Parlors which desire to continue the payment of sick benefits. But, on the other hand, will permit those Parlors which so desire to eliminate that feature. And those who have steadfastly contended for optional benefits are confident that the non-benefit Parlors will show such progress over the benefit Parlors that, in due course of time, sick benefits will be entirely eliminated from the whole Order.

This is the most important question ever decided by the Board of Appeals, from whose decision there is no appeal. It is in fact, doubtful if the Grand Parlor itself ever rendered a decision of such import to the whole fraternity, and the effect of the Board's ruling will be watched with interest by every member of the Order.

The decision in the case will be written by W. H. L. Hynes of Piedmont Parlor, No. 120, Oakland, who is the District Attorney of Alameda County, and will appear in the February Grizzly Bear. The Board's decision not only applies to sick, but, as well, to funeral benefits, and, it is understood, was unanimous.

DEVOTED TO FARM, ORCHARD, GARDEN, POULTRY, DAIRYING, BEES, ETC.

Edited by GEORGE H. BANCROFT.

UP-TO-DATE FARMING.

THE MODERN FARMER CAN NO longer afford to follow the methods in vogue comparatively a few years ago. Much can be learned from farmers' bulletins issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, state agricultural colleges and the experimental stations. The publishers of agricultural literature almost invariably issue books, magazines, etc., that contain information of an authoritative, reliable and practical nature. Worthless books or articles do not meet with support nowadays, as the student of agricultural art has become too observant and discriminative to be imposed upon in such matters.

Good books and reliable journals based upon the publication of matter appertaining to agricultural subjects are now almost as necessary in farm equipment as plows, wagons, seed, etc., and no farmer can afford to be without them. Improved methods are being constantly evolved by specialists and experts in raising, caring for, and marketing farm crops, and in animal and poultry industries. Some methods of producing crops, etc., are not wholly new, but they are being more generally adopted.

Note the improved methods of raising onions by the transplanting system. Tomato raising, through pruning, staking and extensive field culture methods, has gradually reached a near-scientific basis. The methods of raising celery, potatoes, beets, beans, globe artichokes, asparagus, etc., have changed greatly, for the better, the past few years.

In the department of seed breeding and selection, as advocated by experts, wonderful things have been accomplished. Boys of the farm have shown, through the direction of experienced experts in agriculture, how to raise prize crops of corn, and the old folks have had to pay attention. The same thing applies to testing out the dairy herd; poor yielders of milk and butter fat have been eliminated.

The manipulation of soil has greatly increased the fertility of the farm. "Tillage is manure." Through knowledge that we are just now ready to accept as reliable, we are on the eve of seeing many of the worn-out, abandoned farms of the far Eastern states, brought to a state of fertility that will increase their values from four to seven fold. This will be accomplished through proven successful methods of green manuring, bacterial soil inoculation, etc.

Soil fertility has been increased and maintained through a knowledge of soil bacteria and their affinity for leguminous plants, coupled with their power of fixing free nitrogen from the air in the root nodules of such plants. The process is symbiotic. It has been learned that green manuring crops, especially those of a leguminous nature, afford economical means of adding plant food to the soil, as well as rendering plant food already existing in the soil in insoluble forms, available. Lime and other soil correctives are better understood and used with more efficiency.

Subsurface packing of the furrow slice, the maintenance of an earth mulch and summer tillage make it possible to conserve two winters' rainfall in the soil, and thus produce hay or grain crops in regions of light rainfall, of three or four times the value of annual crops, and the same knowledge modified to suit varying conditions, can be applied with good results to various crops whether in irrigable districts or outside the ditch.

We have learned much in applying farm manures and commercial fertilizers to farm crops, and this has resulted in correcting hitherto wasteful methods. The philosophy of crop rotation is better understood than formerly, being productive of better results as our knowledge of soil biology increases. We are gradually and surely accepting the fact that double profits are possible through feeding more livestock on the farm, and that the manure produced and applied to the soil is a big item of profit in added crop production.

A volume could be written upon up-to-date farming, and the subjects treated would include such matters as traction farming, all-the-year pruning of fruit trees, winter irrigation, sub-irrigation, cover crops, annual pasture crops, poultry raising methods, co-operation, intensive farming vs. extensive farming, the parcels post, farm finances, etc.

A most important matter for consideration would be provision for the betterment of the social and educational, or, as one authority calls it, the spiritual side of the farmer's life. Intensive cultivation, and co-operation in social and educational matters, and in buying supplies and selling products, have already been tried out and proved remarkably successful.

Two vitally important things must be presented to the tiller of the soil in such a way as will induce him to accept, practice, and in consequence attain the greatest degree of success, prosperity and happiness possible: First, he must study and put in practice up-to-date available knowledge in matters appertaining to the soil and the manipulation thereof; second, farmers must organize more thoroughly in order to market products and buy supplies to the best advantage. Where this has been done, it has resulted in better quality for the consumer at lower prices, and at the same time higher prices for the producer.

The whole scheme of improvements in farming methods, and the incorporation of social and educational (through lectures, etc.) features will, in a measure, save much of the young blood for the farm by counteracting the lure and glitter of the city, and eliminate that undesirable condition of life on the farm which exists when the young folks have left to make their struggle for success elsewhere.

A FINAL WORD ON MANURES.

All of the fertilizing material in farm manure is not available for the first crop; in fact (as stated in previous articles), experiments at Rothamsted, England, prove that some perceptible effects from farm manures are shown after twenty years, but of course the greater part of the fertilizing material from farm manures is pretty much all used up the first few years. It is profitable to use commercial fertilizers in connection with farm manures, the kind and form depending upon the needs of the crop and the soil. As farm manures require some time to give up their fertilizing constituents, it is well to use something in the way of commercial fertilizers or chemicals to help out.

In the decomposing process of farm manures, soil bacteria come into play. Sunlight, air and moisture all have their place, hence the soil should be kept well stirred. In using fertilizing material in concentrated form, it is better to make frequent applications in small quantities, rather than large quantities with applications further apart. Commercial fertilizers, to be worth buying, must have plant food in available form, and for this very reason, it is easy to lose its value by leaching or passing off into the air in gaseous form. Nitrates should never be used in connection with farm manure, or mixed with it, as the combination encourages the action of de-nitrifying bacteria, through which the value of the fertilizing material is lost.

The amount of plant food removed from the soil by plants is very small compared with the amount contained in the soil. The amount of plant food contained in the soil is practically inexhaustible. This refers to the mineral ingredients or inorganic matter. Organic matter, or the remains of vegetables or animals, is not usually very plentiful, but what is present is in more available form for use by the plant. It is not the amount of plant food removed from the soil that counts so much, it is the amount of plant food in available form removed compared with the total amount of available plant food left in the soil. Therefore it is important that the farmer should encourage good conditions through cultivation and the addition of farm manures. The use of lime, especially, should not be overlooked in connection with soil that has become acid or soured. Lime sweetens up soil and encourages the growth of beneficial bacteria, and this aids in dissolving the locked up food in the mineral part of the soil, in fact, bacteria is needed in nearly all processes of change in chemical contents of the soil, whether organic or inorganic.

The amount of plant food removed from the soil, is a certain index of its effects upon the soil. However, as nine-tenths of plant food is derived from the air in and above the soil, the effect is slight, comparatively. The farmer must supply organic matter to the soil in the form of manures. Nitrogen can be supplied by growing leguminous crops and through the aid of bacteria in connection. Phosphoric acid usually exists in sufficient quantities and in available form, hence, as a general thing, potash will be the greatest expense in fertilizers required. Usually the value of the fertilizing material supplied for use by the crop, can be closely estimated, and the extra profits from its use can be foretold. Nitrate of soda is, when needed by the crop, a good investment, and the same applies to potash and phosphates. Lime is sometimes of inestimable value in correcting acid conditions of the soil.

PROFITABLE GARDEN WORK.

Gardeners in these days must keep up to date and fully informed about everything new connected with horticulture. A gardener can make his work easy, pleasant and profitable, or the reverse. No need for the old-time drudgery, in these days of improved machinery and methods.

If the farmers of our glorious State of California could only realize that an acre of vegetables combined with fruits and bees, taken care of, would prove the best possible investment! A good variety of vegetables and fruits will add more enjoyment to farm living than most any single factor. Besides, the cost of living will thus be reduced.

An acre of vegetables will produce a surprising amount of food. There will be something to sell for cash every day, and more than a large family could possibly consume; green feed for poultry, and much green fodder for the cow. In every way, a family garden is well worth while.

In California, we have several special vegetable crops that yield handsome returns, and these are planted in large areas. Sugar beets, celery, peppers, egg-plant, cucumbers, tomatoes, green peas, melons, are all field crops yielding all the way up to $500 and even $1000 per acre. Strawberries and rhubarb have frequently reached $1000 and more in value per acre.

Referring to the kitchen garden: It should be located as near the house as possible, where short periods of spare time between other work can be employed. The contents of a garden should be small fruits, such as grapes, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, etc., as well as the real vegetables. Long rows with turning places should be arranged for, as well as space between the rows for both horse and wheel hoe cultivation. Where space is small, a half-acre will accomplish wonders, using the hand tools, which take little power to operate.

There are three classes of market gardeners: There are those who raise large crops of special vegetables in southern locations for shipment north early in the season. Railroad facilities and equipment for producing crops early are necessary. Then there are gardeners near large cities who toil during the day, haul their products at night, and come home with a load of manure. This is a hard life, there is plenty of competition, and special aptitude and diligence are necessary for success and profit. A third class is the local gardener whose aim is to supply a small demand close by his land. He peddles direct to the consumer and sells to stores. He has the advantage of cheaper land, low-priced help, and few expenses. It is necessary for this class to have good salesmanship, and there is a good chance for good money to be made.

A combination suitable for California conditions would be to select land situated where climate is mild during the winter. Use a small area for full assortment of vegetables and fruits in small quantities for home consumption and local trade. In connection, raise special crops for shipment to the nearest large city or to distant points. These special crops should be planted in such areas as will enable carload shipments either alone or with other growers. The beginner should go slow and commence with a small area and gradually increase as experience is gained.

THE ALMOND.

The best locations for growing the almond are those free from fog, wind and late frosts. High land with good air drainage and favored with slight breezes is best—land known as foothill, in what is known as a thermal belt—that is, situated so as not to be overcome by the cold such as is encountered both in low valleys or high mountains. The almond blossoms early, and late frosts are disastrous, and for this reason late blooming varieties are safest to plant.

A light, warm soil, well drained, suits best, and less moisture is required late in the season than for peaches or like pulpy fruits. The nut is filled out early in the year, and before the amount of moisture from winter rains is reduced much. The roots go deep, and any bardpan or other impervious strata must be shattered with dynamite or otherwise to allow good and necessary root growth. Dormant buds are best to plant, everything considered, although some prefer year-old trees. The dormant buds are easier to handle, and the root system is always better, the younger the plant. Dormant buds cost less, and little difference would be noticed after the second year of planting. Good cultivation is essential, especially where irrigation is not practiced. Pruning plays a most important part in almond culture. This year's growth produces next year's nuts. We advocate all-the-year-round pruning, the heaviest during the dormant season. Cross fertilization of blooms must be provided, hence several varieties must be planted in alternate rows.

Probably the best varieties and latest bloomers are: Texas Prolific, Drake's Seedling, Nonpareil, and Ne Plus Ultra. Plant one row of each cross-wise of the prevailing spring winds, and continue this same plan until the planting is finished. This will allow the necessary cross fertilization and insure crops, where a single variety might fail. Plant eighteen to twenty-five feet apart, pruning tops and roots accordingly.

In almond growing, all requirements must be carefully studied, and climatic conditions understood in each location, or results will be unsatisfactory. Where this nut can be grown successfully, there is no more desirable crop possible. It can be harvested leisurely and can be marketed also without haste. Leaf blights and borers injure the almond about the same as the peach, and like remedial measures are used.

MORE ABOUT BACTERIA.

One reason that the bacteria are such an important factor in agriculture, is their wonderful power of reproduction. The rodlike, or other shaped plant elongates and then divides or splits, and each becomes a separate organism, and, as not more than half an hour is required for the process, the result, starting from a single parent, and not allowing for deterring influences and computing for a period of twenty-four hours, is startling. At the end of the period of twenty-four hours there will be 140,737,488,355,328 bacteria from a single ancestor. In five days' time, bacteria, if all survived, would encumber the land and water surface of the globe; but there are, of course, negative forces constantly at work, which prevent the survival of the greatest part of the increase. Man is able to control the increase, encouraging the growth and increase of the beneficial, and starving out and otherwise discouraging the injurious bacteria, and at nominal expense, compared with the benefits derived.

Bacteria, when found in the soil, air, water or other medium which is favorable to their life, consists usually of different species all occupying the same part of the soil and working for or against man's interests. Under certain conditions, however, large numbers of certain species are found associated and not mixed with others. It is possible to reproduce bacteria by artificial means in the laboratory, the result being called "pure cultures." That is, the particular species desired are first separated or isolated and then increased to the number desired. Increasing vinegar and yeast is a familiar process which is much the same. Man's ability to control bacteria results in a most important link in the modern agricultural chain. As bacteria are of such minute size, their great importance lies in the fact that they exist in almost inconceivable numbers.

Bacteria are of incalculable aid to agriculture, because of the numerous chemical changes brought about by them. While we understand very little, comparatively, of the changes wrought by these wonderful organisms, we know enough to enable us to make great use of them. There are many things to learn of bacteria, and the future alone can discover many functions, uses and detriments connected with their phenomena.

The chemical change produced by bacteria consists in their building complex bodies out of simpler ones, and this is known as the synthetical process. The opposite process, decomposition, etc., resulting in the pulling down or taking to pieces, or reducing to simpler forms of matter, is called the analytical process. Both of these processes are carried on, to a certain degree, by all forms of bacteria. In their growth and increase, they must necessarily manufacture both protoplasm and proteid out of their food products, as each new bacterium is made of protoplasm. The process is synthetical and peculiar to all bacteria. Bacteria also excrete simple products from the materials serving them as food, which become, of course, decomposed. These certain substances are subject to a series of changes within the body of the bacterium, the process being called metabolism.

JANUARY PLANTING CALENDAR.

Continue to plant narcissus, jonquils, anemones, ranunculus, German iris, Japanese iris, Lillium auratum, L. speciosum and L. Humboldtii, also calla lilies, gladiolus, amaryllis, agapanthus, lily-of-the-valley, spirea and dielytra.

THE STATE'S DEVELOPMENT.

(Reported by California Development Board.)
Though the early months of 1913 gave a bad outlook for the farmer, the great variety of production and the large range of latitude of California prevented entire failure of any crop, and, in many instances, record productions were made. The new enterprises introduced into California are showing remarkably well. Rice, tobacco, dates and cotton all give promise of becoming permanent industries.

Land transactions have resumed activity but have been mainly confined to smaller holdings. Among these may be mentioned: Purchase of 1100 acres of the Broyles estate near Nelson, Butte County; a tract of 320 acres near Corning, Tehama County, to be placed under irrigation and marketed in small lots; 640 acres near Biggs, Butte County, for rice culture, and a ranch of 1500 acres near Biggs to be subdivided into small tracts suitable for rice culture; a 641-acre ranch near Rocklin, Placer County, to be cut into 20 and 40-acre tracts; the Bliss ranch of 25,000 acres south of Merced; the Palos Verdes ranch of 15,930 acres near San Pedro, Los Angeles County.

It is to be noted that rice culture has proven successful in Tulare County. Extensive planting will be done next year. In Sacramento and Sutter Counties, 40,000 acres are to be devoted to rice culture, and an additional 20,000 acres will be put out in Butte County.

Government cruisers report 425,000,000 feet of lumber—sugar pine, poplar, cedar and fir—in the Tehama forest reserve, which will soon be placed on the market.

Last season's citrus fruit shipments, to October 31, 1913, totaled 18,085 carloads; the crop now moving is conservatively estimated at 38,000 carloads. Shipments of deciduous fruits to November 10th amounted to over 13,000 carloads, as against 12,936 carloads in 1912.

The Secretary of State reports the auto vehicle registration for the month of October at 2497; for November at 1508.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

(By MARY B. VAIL, Chairman Home Economics, San Francisco District, C.F.W.C.)

IN THESE DAYS WHEN WE ALL are confronted with the problem of the high cost of living, we are looking for help and suggestions everywhere, and not looking in vain.

There are those who say that it is the cost of high living that complicates the high cost of living. This may have been in the mind of the newly-elected president of the New Jersey clubs, Mrs. Patterson, when she began her housekeeping experiment. Details of her work may be found in the "Home Economics Journal" of June, 1912, and "Good Housekeeping" of April, 1912.

The Chicago women added their bit of proof of the high cost of living when they broke the corner on the egg market. The mayor of Indianapolis helped to knock high prices when he sold his own crop of potatoes on the market place. The women of the East Side, in New York, lowered the price of meat by a boycott. Berkeley's mayor suggested a municipal market to meet this problem. The "Saturday Evening Post" of June 15th had an able article on business methods as applied to the home.

Even the Government at Washington is offering its help. The Bureau of Labor has just concluded an investigation of retail prices in forty cities of the United States. A report of it was published in the San Francisco "Chronicle" of September 16th.

Whatever may be the causes or the more general methods of relieving the high cost of living, women as housekeepers should investigate that fruitful source of unnecessary expenditure—waste. We all know that food material, if not cared for, will spoil, and that housekeepers deal with perishable materials and must be close buyers if they eliminate waste.

Our foods vary in composition and food value, and their value, as nourishment, must be understood, as well as their money value, if we are to be well fed. We must learn of the people of Europe who, through necessity, have long been forced to study the high cost of living, to season, to vary and to combine foods, and not to waste. Do let us study to eliminate waste,—to cheat the garbage pail, if not to do away with it altogether.

There is a big problem of what to do with a little of this or a little of that,—the left-overs as we call them,—without the expenditure of too much time or new material. Housekeepers know that the odds and ends of vegetables will make an attractive salad, or help flavor a soup; that left-over cereal may be moulded with figs or dates (clean ones that have been steamed ten minutes), and served cold as a dessert for the children; that meat may be sliced, cubed or ground and warmed over in many ways; that fresh fruit, left from a meal, if stewed at once, will make a delicious bit of jam for breakfast or lunch; that bread can help out anywhere. Careful spenders cut bread at the table and have little left to use over. Besides the many ways of using toast and bread crumbs, a dry loaf may be freshened by dipping it in water and thoroughly heating it in the oven before serving it. Thus, by watching the leaks, we can minimize the waste.

I want to emphasize my faith in the simplicity of living as contributing most toward the solution of our problem of the high cost of living. Simplicity of clothing, of house building, of house furnishing, and of preparing and serving food. In fact, it is our complicated system of today which has increased expenses beyond all reasonable proportion, and this is the problem we must face and solve. In planning our meals let us have a few, generous, well-chosen, well-cooked dishes served in a dainty and attractive way. Let us dispense with course dinners,—those gastronomic absurdities which some chef has imposed upon suffering humanity,—by serving a stupefying dinner of meat courses. That idea of a menu seems to belong to days when meat was cheap and little else was available; when people had no idea of food values; and when the jaded taste of people of high degree had to be stimulated by variety, spice and wine.

NOTES OF THE CLUBS.

The Sunnyvale Woman's Club is another purely study club, with the motto, "The highest culture is to speak no ill," and the president says she has never known it to be violated. They claim for the club to have "built a higher type of womanhood, who by their interest in history, literature and the science of government, keep in closer relation to their husbands and children, making home life attractive." They believe that from the message of Greek art, and mornings with masters of art, they are prepared to somewhat appreciate the Exposition of 1915. From the study of home life in other lands, they better understand the immigration problem. From social settlement articles, they have learned of conditions which are a menace to our Nation, and of the best methods of prevention. The president of the club, Mrs. Sofie Durst, has made an effort to secure prompt attendance, sounding the gavel at 2:30 to the minute, and teaching the members to "learn the value of other people's time." One of the greatest compliments which could be paid any club has been given this club by a clubwoman of Los Angeles who, after attending one of the Sunnyvale sessions, remarked, "If I could name your club, I should call it 'Peace'."

The Sonoma Woman's Club, now twelve years old, are bending all their efforts towards securing funds for a clubhouse. They have bought and fully paid for their lot, and have as a nucleus for the clubhouse fund in the neighborhood of $550. This was raised by a series of card parties during last winter, and a festa on the Fourth of July. They have discontinued their philanthropy section, substituting public welfare in its stead, and their first work was the removal of a thirty years' standing mass of debris at the entrance to the cemetery. They are now at work on efforts to have their town bonded for a new grammar school. They also assist with funds for the public library.

The Madrone Social Club of Napa is one of the young clubs of the State, making sure headway to success. During the past year, their twenty members, living miles apart, have met twice a month, always with the idea of bettering some condition. During the year, this small club petitioned the supervisors of Napa County to better the condition of the roads in the district, and to their everlasting credit, they succeeded in having this work done. Also in placing railings on the stone bridges at the approaches to Napa. Another good piece of work was the dividing of the voting precinct, as many of the members had to travel six miles to vote. They have a relief committee in the club which has charge of the linen loan, and who look after the sick in the neighborhood, and during the recent forest fire in Napa County they subscribed funds for the sufferers. A subject lately discussed by this club was, "How is it we fail in our bread making?", and a discussion of the question brought forth the opinion that the yeast cakes were at fault, so they immediately wrote to the agent of the yeast company, complaining of the poor quality of the yeast cakes furnished, and they claim that from this letter they received much encouragement, the cakes improving at once.

The Vallejo Woman's Club, consisting of sixty-five members, numbers among its members the secretary of the public library, three members of the park commission and the widows' pension officer. Recently a reciprocity day was planned by this club, at which fifteen clubs were entertained, all those participating in the program being members of the different clubs. They also have a mothers' committee, which serves the same purpose as the mothers' clubs in their relations to the public schools, and at this time, the committee are working on how to teach sex-hygiene without outraging the sensibilities of parents and children. They also have a peace section, which is working to promote the observance of "Peace Day" in the churches and schools. Not the least in their work is that of the political section, whose mission it is to teach the members the study of legislative work. A recent committee appointed has been the committee on clubhouse, whose duty it will be to select a desirable site for the building of their new home.

The Woman's Improvement Club of Santa Rosa have raised twenty-five hundred dollars through a series of teas, parties and musicales towards securing a public park for Santa Rosa. They have interested the property owners in planting palms and through their efforts, several hundred palms have been planted. The women of the club took charge of, and successfully managed, the art exhibit at the Sonoma District Fair. They are now at work on the idea of securing three steps on the street cars instead of two, which, if taken up by other clubs, will mean a great step in the public health.

The Philomath Club of Santa Rosa typify what their name signifies—"seekers after knowledge." Their membership is limited to twenty-five, and only married women are eligible. They say they are simply a study club, doing only one thing, but aiming to do that well. They have a "critic," appointed by the program committee for the year, and to whom the members present any criticisms, and who embodies these in her report read in each meeting. They say, "these criticisms are given and received in a kindly spirit, and form quite an important part of our club education." As clubwomen, their aim is to do one thing well, but as housewives, they have another aim, for they meet once a year in some member's house, each bringing her favorite recipe with her, and enough to go 'round. Then they have their annual dinner, to which their husbands are invited, and I am hoping that all of the twenty-five do not bring their favorite recipes with enough to go 'round. But that may be the secret of so many "club husbands" in Santa Rosa—well fed, you know!

Home industry day was recently celebrated by Laurel Hall Club of San Francisco, Miss Christine Hart, president. The day was planned by Mrs. George Bernhard, one of the staunch supporters of home industry in her home city. She built her plan around the "Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," and her "children" all represented some California product. Madame Tojetti was the mother of these wonderful children, and from the many and varied costumes worn by them, the mother must have worked early and late. First, the rice "child" appeared in a costume constructed of rice sacks, with a Chinese hat and shoes, and baskets suspended from her shoulders; then came "pickles," with a costume fairly hanging with pickles, German and otherwise; "salt" was gaily decked in salt sacks, and "milk" appeared with a miniature cow, whose little squeak, intended for a "moo," convulsed the audience. Then they had flour, butter, canned fruits of various kinds, tamales, flower seeds, etc. I have to say a word for "candies," who appeared in a bridal costume made from the white paper used by candy makers and decorated with the white trimming paper used in the candy boxes. "Candy" was a dream of loveliness. Altogether it was a delightful day. Mrs. Bernhard has repeated this "day" at several other clubs in and around San Francisco.

Several art conferences were held during the month, notably those of the San Francisco District, Mrs. Rose V. S. Berry, chairman, and that of the Northern District, Mrs. J. B. Hughes, chairman. The San Francisco conference was held at the California Club, where a large attendance testified to the interest art is at the present time evoking among the clubwomen. Addresses were delivered by Mrs. Berry, Mrs. Holway, art chairman of the Alameda District, and Professor Washburn of the State University. At noon, many of the members adjourned to a local hotel, where a round table luncheon was served. Mrs. Berry distributed copies of the old masters, and in "poetic" language made the pictures "speak for themselves." Their "thoughts" were nearly all cries of distress, and were the funniest ever. The luncheon and pictures added the little touch to Mrs. Berry's day to make it a perfect success.

The northern conference, held in Sacramento, was also a success, the members receiving much pleasure from talks by Mrs. Stanwood, state chairman of art, and Mrs. Holway of Berkeley. Mrs. Stanwood's talk was on art in connection with the exposition, which seems to be arousing the interest (I might say indignation) of the clubwomen. It was claimed at the San Francisco conference that our California artists have been ignored, and a movement is now on foot, I believe, to see that proper recognition is given to their work.

At the recent convention of the San Francisco District, Mrs. Bostwick, chairman of philanthropy, reported that very few of the clubs have philanthropic sections, this work being done under the head of civics. She also said that her letters to some of the clubs brought forth the reply that such work is performed by the churches and charitable and fraternal organizations. Not all of the clubs, however,—as the Corte Madera Club raised $70, which was given to worthy families and flood sufferers; the St. Helena Woman's Club maintains a Pioneer woman, who otherwise would be compelled to go to the county hospital; the Salinas Civic Club used the receipts of a "pencil day" ($242) in behalf of tornado sufferers; Mountain View's club supplies needy families with their groceries; the Madrone Club of Napa have a relief committee who attend to needy cases; the South Park Mothers' Club (San Francisco) contributed quite a sum to the Ohio flood sufferers; Golden Gate Auxiliary of Railway Men's Association have made children's garments, giving them to the sisters of the Holy Family for needy children; Vittoria Colonna of San Francisco are still at work on the maternity home, endeavoring to secure quarters for poor women, and which will not make them objects of charity. This looks as though some of the clubs have "philanthropic sections," or if not, their civic sections are doing splendid work.

Mrs. Ellis F. Lafler of Carmel-by-the-Sea recently entertained the members of the Civic Club of Salinas with a discourse on art and modern artists. Some thirty or forty paintings were exhibited, a large attendance testifying to the interest of this club in the subject of art. Some of the local artists who exhibited were Evelyn McCormick, Lester Boronda, William Adams, Pizzoni and Miss Morgan. Mrs. Lafler told of the works of the artists on this Coast which have won recognition in the East and abroad, and their position in the world of art. It is the intention of the Civic Club of Salinas to organize an art section where similar exhibitions will take place, giving the members an opportunity to study both the work of the old masters and the modern painters. The aim of this club is to broaden its usefulness in every possible manner. A committee has already been appointed to organize the proposed art section in the club. Another very interesting day held by the same club during the month, and under the direction of the public health department, was devoted to the subject of "Food Sanitation." Various phases of this subject were discussed in papers presented by the members on "Is Your Food Clean," "How Certified Milk Lessons Infant Mortality," "The Tuberculosis Butcher," and "The Fly in Our Food." The program proved very instructive, and will probably be the means of a campaign for pure foods.

The San Gabriel Women's Club has closed its charter with a membership of forty. This club is the baby club of Los Angeles District, yet the members have already purchased a piano, and are now striving to secure a home, negotiations being carried on in an effort to obtain one of the old adobe houses, the preservation of which was one of the reasons for the organization of this club. How fitting would such a home be! The club has a current events section which presents very instructive programs.

The Contemporary Club of Redlands, with the home economics department in charge, recently enjoyed an address by Miss Natalie Feraud of the University of California who spoke on "Columbia College as the Center of Home Economics in the United States." Miss Feraud explained the various courses in home economics offered at Columbia, including nursing, sanitation, preparing food for the sick, the making up of budgets, etc., all in the most scientific manner. A demonstration was made by Miss Feraud of articles prepared for the sick room, an effort being made to prepare each dish in the most attractive manner possible. Miss Feraud is appearing at different clubs in the Los Angeles District.

The Corte Madera "Booster" says, "We have one of the most efficient woman's clubs in the State." We agree with the "Booster." Mrs. George S. Walker, president of the club, tells the story of their work in the following lines:

Corte Madera—the home of our club,

A famous Marin County village,

Old Tamalpais, majestic and tall

Seems to beckon our band and call

For greater efforts from one and all.

But when begins my ditty:

With Mrs. Perry last year in the chair,

And Mrs. Glenn the honors to share

As head of our literary section.

A club there is, and it's made its prayer,

Even as you and I,

For a home of its own—anywhere,

So it won't meet here—it won't meet there,

All over the town.

Well, on Hallowe'en it gave a time

Of frolic and dancing. Then next in line

Was an "amateur night." I'd rather decline

To enlarge on the stunts. Yes. Some got the "hook."

A "potlach" next from Southeastern Alaska

We transplanted bodily. All gold dust was cached away in that "Club House Fund."

A card party, too. It built a locker

To hold all books—likewise the president's knocker.

We put up that lunch for the alumnae at Ross,

And tied with our color (red) a redwood cross

On the top of each box.

Cleared $91.70 for ladies and gents.

The supplies were mostly donated.

The merry Christmas days had come,

The gladdest of the year—

Of Christmas jinks and naughty kinks

We had our night of cheer.

Between the jinks and the springtime,

When art, literature and music held power,

We gave our literary evening—

'Twas known as the "Longfellow Hour."

Music we shouted, and a club song

In answer sprang into our throng

Ready made.

Sweet oft returning wild flower day,

Thou met us there on spring's highway,

Thy poppies gold,

Thy bells of blue, and lilies of heaven's hue,

Thou bonnie gem.

On to the forest we wandered,

Hand in hand with the "Boy's Book on Forestry."

To present to our school.

Ragging,—did we tackle it?

Well, I rather guess we did.

And, everybody ISN'T doing it in our town.

Suddenly there came a tapping,

As of someone slyly tapping.

Rapping at our town door.

He would start a new saloon.

What we did to that petition

Will bear many a repetition—

Quoth the women, "Not one more."

Heard you those alarm bells—

Brazen bells,

When our mountain raged with fire

Leaping nearer, leaping higher?

Did we falter, did we tire?

How we worked to feed the fighters—

Strove to make their task the lighter—

Paid the bills, bills, bills,

With a will, will, will,

In the terror of those days and nights of fire.

But the greatest of these is charity, and we have given or raised about $70 for worthy causes this year.

DECLARES HISTORY MUST BE RE-WITTEN.

The early history of California, as well as the Southwest as far as Louisiana, must be re-written as the result of the discovery of vast unknown treasures in the archives of the state and church in Mexico by Professor Herbert E. Bolton of the Department of History of the University of California, according to the claims of the university authorities.

Most important of the material discovered by Professor Bolton was found in an old dust-covered trunk which had lain for centuries unopened in an attic at the College of the Holy Cross, at Queretaro, Mexico.

In each of us a vacancy is created by her sad death, and when we recall her kind and genial face let us contemplate that we are all looking forward to a general reunion in the home above not made by hands, eternal in the heavens.

We know that she to whose memory we do honor, was of a kind and generous disposition, square and upright in her dealings, a true Native Daughter, a kind and loving daughter and sister.

Sadly we laid her away to rest, with all the honors that could be conferred, showing the esteem and appreciation in which we held her.

Resolved, That the death of our beloved sister, Mary Amelia Bristol, closes the life of a devoted daughter and sister and a cherished member of this Order. That to her bereaved relatives we tender our heartfelt sympathies and consolations, in that she left a heritage of honor, an unblemished character, the contemplation of which in coming years will bring to their hearts only joy and gladness.

Your committee would respectfully recommend that this tribute to her memory be spread upon the minutes of our book, and that a copy of the same be sent to the sorrowing family of our deceased sister.

Resolved, That the untimely death of our sister, Amiee G. Arbios, is deeply regretted by Excelsior Parlor, No. 202, N.D.G.W. We feel that we have lost a faithful member, a dear friend and loving companion, the removal of whose life from our midst leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be deeply realized by the members and friends of our organization, and we desire to extend heartfelt sympathy to the family of our deceased sister. And be it further

Resolved, That our charter be draped for a period of thirty days, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy be spread upon the minutes of this Parlor, and a copy sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine, our official organ, for publication.

CALIFORNIA'S HIGH MOUNTAINS.

The State of California has seventy named mountain peaks and sixty or more unnamed mountains, a total of at least 130, whose altitudes are greater than 13,000 feet above sea level. Twelve of these are 14,000 feet or more high. The highest is Mount Whitney, which is also the highest peak in the United States, with an elevation of 14,501 feet. Mount Williamson is the next highest, 14,384 feet. The elevation of Mount Shasta, probably the third highest peak in the State, has not been determined exactly, but it is generally credited with being about 14,380 feet high. Other mountains attaining more than 14,000 feet are: South Peak of White Mountain, North Palisade Mountain, Mount Russell, Split Mountain, Middle Palisade Mountain, Mount Langley, Mount Muir, Mount Tyndall, and Mount Barnard.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOEEMER.

TOUR OF THE SHOPS AT THIS time of the year is always sure to bring to notice many dainty, trifling novelties of feminine adornment.

This winter has already proven itself most prolific in the launching of new sartorial features of a distinctly novel character, and with the coming of any new type of dressing there is sure to follow a small army of new accessories and frills.

For one thing, we have this Fall a varied assortment of waistcoats, called into being in the realm of feminine attire by the loose Bulgarian coat styles now in vogue.

At first, these vests were part and parcel of the garments themselves. Then came the realm of a separate waistcoat to wear with any coat or to be slipped on under the coat like a gentleman's fancy vest. And now the shops are offering these smart articles in many fabrics and of as diverse colors as the Biblical garment of the favorite Jacob.

Waistcoats of Felt.

Tango yellow, terra cotta, king's blue, Kelley green and royal purple waistcoats, in heavy corded silks, are well liked, piped with black or a contrasting color, and buttoned with small buttons. Two-tone effects in satins and grosgrain are also effective.

Dark ground velours, in rich designs and colorings of an Oriental or modern art nature, are most chic. Any number of plaids and Roman stripes, in velvet or wonderful embroidered and flower-sprigged patterns,—such as might have delighted the eye of an old-time beau—are provided for wear with sport suits and with garments of a more dressy nature.

Waistcoats of soft, pliable felts are the newest offerings for cold weather wear. These come in soft moleskin, in squirrel, or in rich, heavy, seal plush, and are often enriched by pocket pieces and other trimming bits of vari-colored embroidery.

Seductive Evening Coats.

The tunics take on many different outlines. In the neck and tier skirts, the line usually runs pretty straight around the figure, but the peplum tunics frequently droop towards the back or are arranged so that at the front one side is shorter than the other.

In evening dresses, the tunic is used generally over a draped skirt, but in day dresses, especially of the simple type, the skirt is either straight or a peg-top.

The evening coats this winter have been wickedly seductive. There should be, I think, a provision of Providence that the poor should be born without a sense of beauty, for then they would be spared the tug of desire for the lovely, costly things beyond their reach.

However, even in evening coats there is a law of compensation, for the real essentials of their loveliness are the cut and the color, and these are within the means of even a limited purse. The new coats are all very big and ample, droopy at the top, and narrow and knee-hugging at the bottom.

Kimono Sleeves in Vogue.

Nearly all the evening wraps are draped, coming under the arms and, at the bottom, wrapping the figure closely below the hips. Although the evening corsage is invariably low, the coat makes no pretense of covering the throat. Even if the long closing line is edged with fur or the coat finished with a wide collar of fox or sable, both the collar and the closing leave an open "V" at the neck.

The sleeve is wide at the top, so that it does not crush the waist underneath, but it is long, and is frequently narrow at the waist. In most evening coats the sleeve is kimono style, very few being full length. Some are a little shorter than that, and others are scarcely three-quarter length.

But, of course, the shorter coat is more practical in a way, for it takes less material, and evening-coat materials are not cheap. The silks are not very extravagant, however, and they are very lovely.

Satin, charmeuse, moire, corded silks, moire poplins, and, for the spring, taffeta, are all good and not too costly. Of course, the brocades are the most beautiful coat materials.

Tango Caps the Latest.

With an evening dress and wrap, a hat is no longer considered quite correct. Four or five years ago most women wore hats with decollete gowns; now a hat is never seen, and even a head-dress or hair ornament is frequently dispensed with, though there are charming things with narrow filets of brilliants, agrettes or a feather that are tremendously popular.

A pretty and simple bandeau consists of a flat, narrow metal band to which jeweled buckles are attached at intervals. Through these buckles is passed a twist of fine maline, caught in a sprightly bow or rosette at one side and fashioned with a jeweled ornament.

Tango caps are the latest things. They are made of fine net-gold or silver, and partake of the vogue of wired lace, in having the face frill wired and pointed in pleats at each side of the head.

Old-style Fans Returning.

The flat Obi, or Japanese butterfly bow sashes, are also very attractive. These are worn high up between the shoulders in back, or low down on the sash, if preferred. When worn low the bow is placed at the very bottom of the sash.

Colored silk handkerchiefs, in small women's size, made of pale yellow, blue, rose or green shades, and having a white silk hemstitched border, are shown at the shops noted for chic ideas. These are for wear with tailored suits.

Watteau fans, of the old-time folding shape, made with an imitation ivory stick and in circular shape when open, but which fold together into a narrow lorgnette-shaped handle when closed, are being revived with the bustle and hoop tunic. The handles button together with a small cord loop or ivory knob, to keep the fan open. Some very beautiful hand-painted watteau figure designs can be obtained in these charming old-fashioned fans.

Feather fans are also seeing a revival. They are very large, or very small, and remarkably soft and attractive. Some beautiful tints are offered, matching the new evening fabrics in tone. The smaller feather fans are especially pretty if made with small clustering satin roses or tiny blossoms almost hid amid the fluffy feathers.

Novelties in Jewelry.

The newest neck ornaments show tassel ends in a variety of forms. Some are in the new saintoir form, where the chain is of narrow black ribbon ornamented with three rhinestone-set slides.

Again, a black ribbon chain will have a fancy jeweled watch or locket pendant. These are quite the newest things.

Dainty new bracelets, made in a slender band of filigree silver work, or of small chain links from which hang pendant stones in different colors, or of wider bands of dull gray silver in fret work, are set flat with semi-precious stones.

Another novel bit of serpent jewelry is found in the new Egyptian necklaces, made in rich blue, green or purple, with iridescent bead-work where the serpent encircles the throat and bites his own tail by means of a spring in its jaw, thus providing a fastening.

AIMS AND PURPOSES OF SOCIAL AND LITERARY COMMITTEE.

San Francisco—The name "Native Sons and Native Daughters Literary and Social Club" has long been in existence, and yet there are some members in our great Orders who ask what this organization is, and why organized. The writer will gladly state that this club is composed of members in good standing from the Subordinate Parlors of both the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West in this city, their main object being to promote sociability and good-fellowship between the two Orders. The club meets every Friday evening, at which time none of those belonging fail to be present, for it is truly a place where its members enjoy themselves. After the business meetings, dancing, singing, cards and other pleasures are in-deluged in to one's heart's content. The second Friday evening of each month is set aside for initiation. On December 13th a class of ten candidates was initiated into the mysteries of the club, and was afterwards tendered a banquet, at which all heartily enjoyed themselves. The presiding officers are: Past president, Joseph Rose; president, A. J. Sealmanini; vice-president, Eleanor Teeling; secretary, Bertha Mauser; treasurer, George Wood; conductor, Al Vucanovich; door-keeper, Pearl Young; trustees—Louis Erb, T. Richardson, Bessie Kohn and Essie Free.

A number of good times are always looked forward to, one of the main events of December, outside of the regular "at homes" at the club rooms, being the celebration of the passing of the old year, which was observed by the members attending a local theatre on New Year's Eve in a body, after which they repaired to the club-rooms, where a catered banquet awaited them. Fun then reigned supreme until old 1913 had finally said farewell and crossed the river "Styx" into the great beyond. An affair for January will be the semi-annual banquet on January 10th. The committee in charge of this affair is using its best endeavors to make it one long to be remembered. In preparation, the club members and their friends are looking forward to monthly dances which will begin this month. The last dance, given in November, far exceeded the expectations of the members, in both a social and financial way.—(Special Correspondence.)

Zekel says the trick of raising chickens is the trick of raising money to feed them with.

Mrs. Weakly has moved to town. Her husband says he intends sometime to settle his wife down in a nice little home of her own. She is always so pleased when he says that, but Zekel and me think that her castle in the red clouds of promise is the only permanent home she will ever have.

I seen this in the Daily Repeater: "The Gentleman's Sewing Club met in convention to prepare for the season's changes.

"They mended the constitution, altered the by-laws, biased the majority vote, cut out the finance committee, and gored the senior members. They tucked up the expense bill by a yard or two, and then slit it.

"The youngest member was felled for voting 'nay,' but they gathered him up, put the darning needles out of his reach, and basted his lark.

"It was not seaming, but all knots and double shir.

"They voted in favor of slit skirts as a saving of labor. After a short debate the Indian blanket was approved as the most economical, graceful, and classic garment for the female sect.

"Some clever and sharp criticism was made on the eye of the kneedle that never saw its own point.

"They pinned down Senior Wrangler to the whole cloth, and voted to accept machine-made presents with charity and good will."

Men do muddle things so; they like to do things the easiest way.

There ain't quail enough left this year for seed. Our smartest assemblywoman is drafting up a bill to set aside all the singing and insect eating birds, and innocent and well-behaved four-footed wood animals, as the special game of the Ladies' Fire Arm Association.

Zekel shakes his sides a laughing. "That's all right," he chuckles, "deers for the dears, and quail to them that quail. The birds and antelopes will be safe enough with the Female Fire Arm Association shooting at them. It's a good bill."

Boldemann of San Francisco, Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty of San Francisco and D.D.G.P. Emma S. Hachulen of San Jose. The charter officers include: Past president, Mabel Free; president, Emily McDonald; first vice-president, Margaret Hare; second vice-president, Angela Ruch; third vice-president, Katherine Fellows; recording secretary, Emma McBain; financial secretary, Harriette True; treasurer, Blanche Scarpa; organist, Anna Len; marshal, Mayme Trulsen; inside sentinel, Eileen Garliepp; outside sentinel, Nellie Roberts; trustees—Mary Garliepp, Adelaide Freema and Clara McCarthy.

Following the installation, the members of the new Parlor and visitors were the guests of Mountain View Parlor, No. 215, N.D.G.W., at an elaborate banquet. Brohaski's orchestra furnished music during the discussion of the menu, after which many excellent addresses were listened to, among the speakers being the grand officers, Arthur M. Free, Walter T. Selenger, Emily McDonald, president of the baby Parlor, and Angela Ruch.

Christmas Joy for the Old Women.

Fresno—At its meeting December 12th, Fresno Parlor, No. 187, elected officers for the ensuing term, Nancie Brander being selected for president. The bazaar committee reported the recent bazaar a financial success. It was voted that Santa Claus should visit the almshouse, the Parlor appropriating funds which were distributed among the old women to be used by each as she saw fit. A campaign for new members is being outlined, and will be launched early in the new year.

Contest Culminates in Fun.

Hollister—Copa de Oro Parlor, No. 105, elected officers December 8th, and decided to install jointly with Fremont Parlor, No. 44, N.S.G.W., January 12th. There was a large attendance at the meeting, the winners in the recent membership campaign—which netted thirteen new recruits—serving a banquet. A Christmas tree was provided by the winners for their defeated sisters, and the distribution of gifts was accompanied by much merriment, as each recipient disclosed the contents of the package that had been handed her.

Member Reception Guest.

Jamestown—At the meeting of Anona Parlor, No. 164, November 9th, one candidate was initiated. Following the lodge work, many invited guests were admitted, the occasion being a reception to Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon, the latter being an honored member. A program of musical numbers and welcoming addresses was provided, during the course of which the guests of honor were presented with a piece of cut glass. A banquet concluded a most pleasant evening.

Home Parlor Honors Grand President.

Grass Valley—December 2nd, Manzanita Parlor, No. 29, was officially visited by Grand President Alison F. Watt. The event had been looked forward to with much pleasure, as this is the home Parlor of the Grand President. About one hundred Native Daughters were present to greet her, including members of Laurel Parlor, No. 6, Nevada City, D.D.G.P. Agnes Campbell made the address of welcome. A cut-glass water service and carnations were presented to the Grand President by Mrs. Margaret Nolan, past president of Manzanita Parlor. Following the business session, all repaired to the banquet-room. The tables were attractively decorated, and at each place was a small gold bear favor. The Deputy District Grand President presided as toastmistress, and the following responses were made: "Our Order, N.D.G.W.," Alison F. Watt, Grand President; "Laurel Parlor," Mabel Abrahams, president Manzanita Parlor; "California," Ida Sweeney, president Laurel Parlor; "The Flag," Elizabeth Freeman; "N.S.G.W.," Sadie F. Clauson; "Pioneers," Nell Morris.

Entertains Native Sons.

Byron—Donner Parlor, No. 193, entertained Byron Parlor, No. 170, N.S.G.W., the evening of November 12th, the occasion being the celebration of the second anniversary of its institution. Thirty-six were noted present. Cards and other games were played until midnight, when light refreshments were served.

Weather Does Not Cool Loyalty.

Georgetown—At the regular meeting of El Dorado Parlor, No. 186, December 13th, the following officers were elected: Maude A. Horn, president; Clara Rupley, first vice-president; Metta Buchler, second vice-president; Margaret Roberts, third vice-president; Marie Giudici, recording secretary; Irene Irish, marshal; Lena Caprara, Mary Thorsou, Emily Orelli, trustees; Harriett Collins, outside sentinel; Hattie Heiudel, inside sentinel; Dr. W. S. Hickman, physician. The afternoon of November 18th, Grand President Alison F. Watt paid her official visit to El Dorado Parlor, and notwithstanding the day was very disagreeable, she was warmly welcomed by a large number of the members. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

Country Dance.

Watsonville—El Pajaro Parlor, No. 35, gave its annual dance, Thanksgiving night, the affair being in the nature of a "country dance." One hundred and fifty couples tripped the light fantastic to the strains of excellent music. It was one of the greatest social and financial successes the Parlor has ever undertaken, and reflected great credit on the committee of arrangements.

Officers Elected.

Oakland—Piedmont Parlor, No. 87, had a most interesting meeting December 6th, the following officers for the ensuing term being chosen during the evening: Past president, Elisa Kendig; president, Clara Wemmer; first vice-president, Winifred Halter; second vice-president, Inez Lundburg;

An informal dance followed, and punch was served. A basketball team is being formed, with Miss Florence Danforth as captain.

The vaudeville performance recently given by the Parlor in conjunction with Argonaut Parlor, No. 8, N.S.G.W., for the Homeless Children's Agency, was a grand success, the following program meeting much favorable comment: Solo, "I Love You, California," Miss Florence Danforth; mandolin and guitar trio, Misses Thelma Mitchell, Melba Egan and Vivian McShane; reading, "Laska," Miss Mina Gardner; solo, "Oh, What a Beautiful Dream," Miss Harriet Jacoby; folk dance, fifteen eighth-grade girls; solo, Maynard Hickok. The committee in charge consisted of: Native Daughters—Mrs. Maggie Dixie Bowers (chairman), Misses Margaret Parks and Hazel Darby; Native Sons—William Tregallis (chairman), William Hibbard and P. J. There were bags of candy and nuts and gifts for each child, while the older guests were entertained with a musical program. A grab-bag proved a source of fun and surprises. mastide and good cheer was over all. The guests when leaving remarked the festival was like a large family gathering, such is the homelike feeling ever present in Bahia Vista Parlor.

Many Distinguished Visitors.

Berkeley—Berkeley Parlor, No. 150, was honored with the following grand officers, December 12th, it being the official visit of Grand President Alison Watt; Grand Vice-president May C. Boldemann, Grand Secretary Alice Dougherty, Grand Inside Sentinel May E. Bell, Grand Outside Sentinel Dora Bloom, Past Grand President May Wilkin and District Deputy Grand President May E. Barthold. The Grand President was presented with a beautiful fire-screen, by Sister Hall, illustrating our California blossom, a child, Manzanita, from our California forest, and home industry. The other grand officers received potted plants. The banquet-room was decorated to suit the Christmastide. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term: Past president, Eloise Hall; president, May Jacobs; first vice-president, Rose Glavinovich; second vice-president, Lettie Dixon; third vice-president, Ethel Walsh; recording secretary, Anna J. Lahr; financial secretary, Mabelle Edwards; treasurer, Elizabeth Smith; marshal, Lillian Crew; trustees—Sisters Bolton, Irwin and Olsen; inside sentinel, Mamie Rogers; outside sentinel, May Sloan; organist, Carrie Hall.

Holiday Cheer for Young and Old.

San Francisco—December 16th, in response to an invitation issued by the Good of the Order Committee, the members of Keith Parlor, No. 137, with all their own kiddies and all of their neighbors' they could borrow, gathered in the banquet-hall in Native Sons' Building and enjoyed an old-fashioned Christmas party. During the early hours of the evening the little people amused themselves playing games, when they were formed in line and marched up to a beautifully-decorated Christmas tree laden with gifts, and each little heart was made happy with a small gift, a stocking filled with candy and a bag of popcorn. Our Santa Claus met with a mishap on his journey to the hall (lost the suitcase containing his costume), but the kiddies were satisfied when told that possibly something had gone wrong with his airship and he might arrive later, and all went home happy. The later hours of the evening were spent in dancing.

The following Thursday evening, after the close of the regular meeting, twenty of the members of the Parlor gathered around a beautifully-spread table in one of the small committee-rooms and enjoyed a holiday dinner prepared by the members. Turkey, plum pudding, cranberry sauce and all the other goodies that go to make holiday feast were there in abundance. In the center of the table was a miniature Christmas tree whose myriads of candles and ornaments lent brilliancy to the happy scene. During the festivities the president of the Parlor, Mrs. M. Stanton, was presented with a handsome cut glass vase—having recently celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of her wedding—with the congratulations and good wishes of those present. The turkey was donated by our faithful and efficient treasurer, Mrs. A. Gally.

Merrill, second vice-president; Kate Ford, third vice-president; Ida Sufferhill, financial secretary; Emma Barney, recording secretary; May Parker, treasurer; Loraine Kalek, inside sentinel; Ada De Martini, outside sentinel; Lillian Condy, Louise Wagner and Catherine Tully, trustees; Dr. Gnekow, physician; Louise Eickhoff, pianist. November 25th, the Parlor held a most enjoyable social session following the regular Parlor meeting. It was in the nature of a Thanksgiving affair. Games were played and refreshments were served.

Anona Parlor, No. 164, N.D.G.W., its faithful and efficient secretary. She was a native of Stent, Tolueme County, aged 36 years, and all her life, except a few years at Stockton, had been passed in her native county, where she had won the respect and admiration of all. Her life was one of good deeds and kind words, and her passing is mourned by every resident of Jamestown, with whom she came much in contact as assistant postmaster. Surviving deceased, are a father, a sister, Miss Grace Bristol, and four brothers—Edward, James, William and Charles Bristol.

In Anona Parlor, N.D.G.W., Miss Bristol was a most active and earnest worker, and for eight terms had served as recording secretary. She was loved by every member, and by no one is her demise more greatly mourned than by them. The Parlor conducted the obsequies, which were held from her home November 29th, the members in a body escorting the remains to their last resting place in company with a large delegation from Columbia Parlor, No. 258, N.S.G.W. The casket, as well as the grave, were completely hidden by a wealth of floral offerings, sent by deceased's admirers from all parts of the county.

MANY CONTRIBUTORS

TO N. D. G. W. HOME

San Francisco—The Board of Relief of the Grand Parlor, N.D.G.W., are again in full working order, but miss the assistance and presence of Past Grand President Anna F. Lacy, however.

They will hold their annual meeting January 9, 1914, at the N.D.G.W. Home, 555 Baker street, when the vacancy caused by the death of Miss Lacy will be filled. There are many candidates, but Alameda County seems to be the favored county this time. Native Daughters are invited to avail themselves of the opportunity of staying at the Home.

Some contributions since July 1st are: Auoua Parlor, $12.50; Princess Parlor, $5; Manzanita Parlor, $10; El Pescadero Parlor, $5; Darina Parlor, $10; El Pajaro Parlor, $50; Argonaut Parlor, $5; Santa Luisita Parlor, $15; Vendome Parlor, $5; Chabolla Parlor, $3.50; Naomi Parlor, $3; Eureka Parlor, $6.

To the Relief Fund, annual payments: San Jose Parlor, $3; Occident Parlor, $6; Golden Rod Parlor, $3; Las Lomas Parlor, $6 Genevieve Parlor, $3; Argonaut Parlor, $9.

If a sick sister has received all that the by-laws of her Parlor allow her, she is entitled to assistance from the Relief Fund, if her Parlor has contributed.

Fresno Parlor donated one dozen teaspoons, one-half dozen coffee spoons, one dozen table forks, one dozen table knives, one dozen dessert spoons, one-half dozen tablespoons.

San Jose Parlor gave ten pillow cases, two sheets, six dish towels, thirteen doilies, four bureau scarfs, three table doilies, two centerpiece, one pin-cushion, twelve cakes soap, five plates, two bowls.

Veritas Parlor gave four cans fruit, thirteen jars fruit, four cans cocoa.

Sequoia Parlor gave one dozen jars fruit, Marguerite Parlor a beautiful painting of a lake which is situated near them, and Berkeley Parlor a beautiful picture of Lake Tahoe.

Alta Parlor furnished one room with carpet, curtains, two beds, table, twelve sheets, twelve pillow-cases, four pillows, two spreads, one lamp.

Buena Vista Parlor furnished a sick room with white enameled beds, tables and chairs, linoleum on the floor, twelve sheets, twelve pillow-cases, four spreads, six bath towels, six red bordered face towels.

Genevieve Parlor gave one bed and bedding, and Golden State Parlor one complete set of dishes and tableware.

Vendome Parlor donated four bedspreads, one sheet, six turkish towels, twenty-five towels, two dish towels, four bureau scarfs, two centerpiece, ten napkins, ten pillow-slips.

One Parlor, Joaquin, raised $50 in the most unique way: It was decided that each member was to earn $1 in some independent manner. One members made and sold doughnuts, another pies. Still another member was especially original, and her method can be obtained by communicating with Joaquin Parlor, at Stockton.

Mrs. Dora Bloom, Grand Outside Sentinel, gave one complete set of dishes, Mrs. Helen Mar Simon one dozen pin-cushions and one dozen glasses jelly, Mrs. Mamie Carmichael napkins and doilies, Past Grand President Stella Finkeldey embroidered towels, Santa Cruz Parlor embroidered towels, bureau scarfs and bath towels, Misses Alma and Anna Schafer two bureau scarfs, Mrs. Hattie Hall one pair pillows, Miss Nell Cole kitchen chairs and dishes, Mrs. Fenell and Mrs. Fitzhenry one dollar each.

The Board of Relief thank all the donors, and trust that money donations will be forthcoming. If each Native Daughter would donate fifty cents, the Board of Relief would be able to establish the Home on a firm basis.

The Board of Relief extend to every Parlor best wishes for a prosperous and happy new year.—(Special Correspondence.)

enough to put inside my incubator. I carefully watched the atmosphere outside and when I thought it too dry I used to sprinkle the floor of the incubator room or hang wet cloths in the room, but it was very much guess work. In the large adobe incubators which I visited I found the common-sized "hygrometer" was being used, and I learned that at some seasons of the year not only was it necessary to use pans of water, or to sprinkle the floor, to obtain the usual amount of moisture for a good hatch, but the usual amount proved insufficient, and about ten degrees more of moisture was necessary the year of the earthquake. I do not connect the two, except that it fixed the date in my memory. To beginners, I would say, get a good "hygrometer"; it will greatly help you to have a good hatch and one will last you a lifetime. To keep the right heat you need a thermometer, and to keep the right amount of moisture you need a "hygrometer."

The right ventilation is the third essential in our "rule of three." It almost requires an expert to decide upon the amount of ventilation, and I have not yet found an incubator that has the correct ventilation. The hot-water incubators, as a rule, do not have nearly enough, and the hot-air incubators have sometimes too much. All a beginner can do is to watch the air space in the egg and if it does not show the same amount of air space as the chart requires, or as an egg under a hen shows at the same date, then air the eggs more; if the air space is too large, do not air as much. If the temperature and moisture have been kept correct, and if the eggs have been turned twice a day according to the instructions that came with the incubator, the ventilation will not be much out of the way.

There was a good old couple that lived not far from me. They had a hundred eggs incubating in the same make of machine that I was using and only hatched out four chicks. I had become convinced that there was not enough ventilation in mine, that the air became stagnant and had not enough oxygen and that the chickens were smothered in the shells. So I aired the eggs three times a day, taking the trays out and with a fan or wing fanning out the stale air. The result was I hatched 98 chicks out of 99 eggs. This showed me that my surmise about the lack of ventilation was correct. All this took time and experience, so I would say to a beginner, follow the instructions carefully and use your own common sense.

If any of our readers are in any trouble with their incubators I shall be glad to help them in any way I can.

In Memory of the Departed.

Berkeley—The annual memorial services of Berkeley Parlor, No. 210, were held November 30th, in Native Sons' Hall, which was appropriately decorated with flags, greens and sombre coverings. The roll of the departed bore the names of Charles Edgar, William Ofe, Vanellife Wehe and John A. Anderson. Superior Judge Wm. H. Waste delivered the memorial address, and Assistant District Attorney Philip M. Carey the eulogy. The program, in addition, included: Prelude (Chopin), Miss Margaret Cain; opening ceremonies, officers of the Parlor; ode; invocation, Dr. F. X. Morrison; soprano solo, "Hear Us, O Father" (Millard), Mrs. Raymond Greene; roll call, C. J. Tobin; bass solo, "Hold Thou My Hand" (Briggs), Edward V. McGinty; tenor solo, "The Valley of Shadows" (Barry), Edgar Williamson; soprano solo, "Come Unto Me" (Connen), Mrs. Walter C. Martinez; closing ode; benediction, Dr. F. X. Morrison; postlude (Heller), Miss Margaret Cain.

"Her Gloves" Produces Charity Fund.

Pittsburg—December 3rd, Diamond Parlor, No. 216, elected the following officers for the ensuing term: Junior past president, Joseph Cinollo; president, F. E. Fonda; first vice-president, John E. Rough; second vice-president, John L. Buffo; third vice-president, Joseph Buffo; marshal, David R. Leckie; inside sentinel, Angelo Buffo; outside sentinel, Frank B. Gatto; trustee (18 months), L. F. Buffo.

The Parlor held its annual entertainment for the benefit of the homeless children November 13th, the Antioch Dramatic Club putting on the comedy, "Her Gloves." While the Parlor has thanked the members of the club by letter, we feel that a further expression of thanks would not be amiss in the columns of The Grizzly Bear. To describe the ability of each one of the characters in the play, would take up too much space, so will only mention the two leading actors, one of whom is no lesser light than Past Grand President Charles M. Belshaw, and the other our genial friend and brother, J. T. Belshaw, D.D.G.P. Without disparagement to the rest of the players, those two were especially good, and we would suggest that if either ever become "hard up," that they turn their dramatic talent to account. The fact that the members of the club journeyed to Pittsburg and put on the show "free gratis," even paying their own incidental expenses, enabled the Parlor to realize the tidy sum of $97.40, which is now in the hands of the State Central Committee. The Homeless Children's committee of the Parlor has, during the term, placed two children in excellent homes in this city. The credit for this is due to W. G. H. Croxon, ably assisted by John L. Buffo. These brothers are right on the job all the time, and report that they have a prospect for placing another child in a home in the near future.

Start New Year With Big Initiation.

Oakland—Claremont Parlor, No. 240, has elected the following officers: President, J. E. Hourtane; first vice-president, E. B. Torney; second vice-president, W. C. Boehm; third vice-president, W. I. Forrest; marshal, E. C. Cunningham; inside sentinel, P. J. Carroll; outside sentinel, F. H. Robson; trustee, A. M. Stokes. All are active workers and have the interests of the Parlor at heart. Though the past year was a very prosperous one for the Parlor, the advent of Grand Organizer J. J. Dignan has excited the members to a high degree, and their work in one week has proved very effectual. There will be an initiation

January 9th at which a class of twenty or more will be taken into the fold.

The annual Christmas tree and bazaar of Argonaut Parlor, No. 166, N.D.G.W., was held December 16th and was as successful as usual. About 400 children of the neighborhood enjoyed themselves howlingly, and a nice sum resulted from the sale of fancy and useful articles at the hoots in charge of some of California's loveliest.

Claremont extends the compliments of the season to the brothers throughout the State, and hopes for a happy and prosperous new year for all.

Hesperian's New Officers.

San Francisco—Hesperian Parlor, No. 137, elected the following officers, December 4th: Junior past president, B. Johansen; president, C. A. Crowley; first vice-president, A. V. Carroll; second vice-president, G. E. Ritter; third vice-president, F. C. Pattison; marshal, V. G. Paulsen; inside sentinel, O. J. Johansen; outside sentinel, C. R. Keane; pianist, F. P. Indig; trustee, H. J. Hughes. Surgeons, Drs. H. A. Andrews, J. J. Molony, W. B. Coffey, T. D. Maher, R. J. Dowdall.

Receives Official Visit.

Placerville—Grand Trustee William P. Cauba of San Francisco officially visited Placerville Parlor, No. 9, December 9th, and delivered an interesting address on California history. Election of officers was held, Joseph Skinner being chosen president for the ensuing term. A banquet concluded the evening's pleasures. The Parlor gave its annual ball New Year's Eve, and the first meeting in the new year will initiate a large class of candidates.

Banquets Grand Officer.

San Luis Obispo—Los Osos Parlor, No. 61, at its meeting December 8th elected Frank C. Mitchell president for the coming term. Grand Trustee William I. Traeger of Los Angeles was present on his official visit, and instructed the officers in the ritual. A banquet followed, at which addresses were made by the grand officer, the president-elect and others.

Big Time at Fresno.

Fresno—Members of the Order from all parts of the State made up the great crowd that gathered November 29th to witness the ritual contest between the prize National Parlor, No. 118, team of San Francisco and the officers of Fresno Parlor, No. 25. Fresno's officers rolled up the good score of 890, but as this was below the 961½ points to the credit of National, the latter was declared the winner. And incidentally National Parlor's officers won the Grand Parlor trophy, their excellent score not having been equaled in any of the contests held during November.

Following the contest a sumptuous banquet was served in the banquet-room of Hotel Fresno, which was decorated in American and Bear flags and bolly. Grand Trustee W. F. Toomey presided as toastmaster, addresses were made by Grand President Thomas Monahan, Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung, H. Ungewitter, president of National Parlor, John Cappleman, president of Fresno Parlor, James F. Stanley (Stanford), A. D. Alvarez (Bay City), Walter McCreedy (National), Fred Senk (Hesperian), Frank Bonivert (El Dorado) and W. S. Gratton (National) of San Francisco, and Frank Lane of Fresno Parlor.

At the meeting of Fresno Parlor December 12th, Ed Vietor was elected president for the ensuing term, and, as is the Parlor's yearly custom, $35 was donated for Christmas presents for the inmates of the county orphanage.

Coming—a Red Letter Night.

Vallejo—The annual masquerade of Vallejo Parlor, No. 77, November 26th, was the greatest success, both socially and financially, yet attained by the Parlor. Harry Rosenbaum was the floor manager, and had as his assistants Robert Kersting, Frank Hurlay, George Dimpfel, Jr., and Otto Rosenbaum.

The meeting of January 20th will witness the initiation of a class of fifty candidates, secured through the efforts of Grand Organizer J. J. Dignan. It will also be the occasion for installation of the new officers, with Baxter Knight assuming the presidency. A banquet will be spread, and a large outpouring of both local and visiting members, together with several grand officers, is anticipated. Much interest is being taken in the Parlor by all Vallejoites, owing to the determination to bring the Admission Day celebration here in September.

Grizzly Bears Entertain.

San Francisco—In honor of the Native Daughters, the Grizzly Bear Club, made up of Native Sons, recently entertained at the handsome club quarters in Native Sons' Hall, the affair being the first of a series of "ladies' nights." A program made up of addresses by H. G. W. Dinkelspiel, president of the club, Past Grand President Louis F. Byington, selections by the Hawaiian stringed quintet, and a solo, "California, My California," by Miss Ella Tealing, accompanied by Mrs. Bessie Cohn, was followed by dancing and refreshments in the roof garden. The committee in charge consisted of E. J. Barton (chairman), Frank Martell, George MeLaughlin and George Stanzenberger.

Secures Valuable History.

Livermore—Recently, at the request of the History Committee of the Grand Parlor, a committee from Las Positas Parlor, No. 96, accompanied by a stenographer, visited Mrs. Mary Smith, who came to California in 1846 and was at Coloma, El Dorado County, a few weeks after Marshall's famous gold discovery, and secured from her a statement regarding that historic event. Mrs. Smith is a niece of Peter Wimmer, who disputed with Marshall the honor of the discovery of the gold in Sutter's mill-race, and from him she ascertained many of the incidents in her narrative. The statement is considered of great value, and will be preserved in the Order's archives.

Congressman Guest at Banquet.

Santa Barbara—Congressman Joseph R. Knowland of Alameda, Past Grand President, who was a visitor here in attendance upon the Serra Day festivities, was the guest of honor at a banquet given by Santa Barbara Parlor, No. 116, November 24th, at which Mark Bradley presided. Mr. Knowland made a plea for preservation of the State's landmarks, and paid a high tribute to the local Native Daughters for their work in behalf of homeless children. Professor H. A. Adrian, in the course of an address, declared the Pacific Coast would be the battleground of a conflict of brain, not fire or sword, between the Occidental and Oriental races, and said the day's great problem

Plan Annual Banquet.

San Francisco—Preparations are well in hand for the annual banquet of Precita Parlor, No. 187, which will be held January 15th, and which will eclipse all past efforts in this line. At the meeting December 11th, officers were elected for the ensuing term, William S. Reeves being chosen president. A sumptuous banquet and jinks followed the meeting.

Best Showing in County.

Sebastopol—Grand Third Vice-president. Bismarck Bruck of St. Helena paid an official visit to Sebastopol Parlor, No. 143, November 22nd, and was royally welcomed. After witnessing the ritual exemplification, he complimented the officers highly and said the Parlor made the best showing of any in Sonoma County. A buffet lunch, followed by a smoker and cards, concluded a most pleasant evening. Many members of Petaluma Parlor, No. 27, were in attendance, including W. F. Farrell, Grand Outside Sentinel, and C. W. Behrens, president.

Thirtieth Anniversary Celebrated.

Merced—The thirtieth anniversary of the institution of Yosemite Parlor, No. 24, celebrated November 10th, in addition to bringing together practically all the local members and several invited guests, was the occasion for the home-coming of many old-time members now resident elsewhere. After an hour of social pastime in the lodge-room, the banquet-room was invaded and a sumptuous repast partaken of. D. K. Stoddard, one of the Parlor's oldest members, presided as toastmaster. A. W. Meany reviewed the Parlor's history, named the charter members, and quoted from the minutes of the first meeting, November 10, 1883.

Grand Trustee Jo V. Snyder of Nevada City, who was present on his official visit, spoke on the official visit from Grand Trustee Jo V. Snyder of Nevada City, December 17th, and gave him a royal welcome. One of those banquets, for which the Crockett boys are famous, was followed by a "round table" discussion. Plans for raising funds for the Homeless Children's Agency were also discussed.

The great celebration held here by the Native Sons of Contra Costa County last August, was not only a good thing for Carquinez Parlor, but did more real good for this little city than anything ever before tried. Due to the celebration, the people fixed up their places, put in new sidewalks, and improved the streets. From the good accomplished, Carquinez Parlor's members believe that by giving a celebration, every Parlor can not only benefit itself, but can accomplish wonders for its home-place.

Going Up.

Sacramento—The stockholders of the Native Sons' Hall Association of this city have adopted plans for a four-story structure to cost $150,000. Construction work will begin in March. The building will be reinforced concrete and sandstone brick, fireproof throughout, and the foundation will be capable of bearing additional stories. Building arrangements are in charge of the directors: Edward Kraus (chairman), S. E. Pope, V. E. Kohler, A. J. Delano, C. Root, George H. P. Lichthardt and Percy G. West (secretary).

Big Class To Be Initiated.

East Oakland—The night of December 3rd, Brooklyn Parlor, No. 151, elected the following officers: Henry F. Vogt, president; A. E. Glaze, first vice-president; L. J. Hicks, second vice-president; Louis Friedman, third vice-president; William Beauregard, marshal; Paul Lanz, surgeon; Oscar Kunze, outside sentinel; J. E. Mulgrew, inside sentinel; H. K. Townsend, organist; C. K. Townsend, trustee; William De Frietas, trustee. The Spanish feast was attended by fifty members, all of whom took part in the entertainment, which consisted of singing, story-telling and Spanish dancing. The hall was cleverly decorated in the colors of old Spain, intermingled with red, white and blue. Officers will be installed January 14th, on which occasion thirty-five candidates will be initiated.

Challenge Any Parlor.

Palo Alto—At a rousing meeting of Palo Alto Parlor, No. 216, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: N. E. Malcolm, past president; G. W. Tinney, president; James Orr, first vice-president; James Farmin, second vice-president; J. B. Bryant, third vice-president; financial secretary, G. E. Beall; inside sentinel, E. Hansen; outside sentinel, W. D. Morris; trustee, H. Hansen. The competition contest between the senior past presidents and present officers was also put on this evening, and the latter won by a good margin, the former adopting the name of "Hasbeens." Although the Hasbeens did good work, they could not hold their own with the present officers, which was due largely to the absence of Past President Lucas Greer. The officers of the teams were as follows: Present Officers: Past president, N. E. Malcolm; president, G. W. Tinney; first vice-president, James Orr; second vice-president, James Farmin; third vice-president, J. B. Bryant; marshal, E. B. Hochabaut; inside sentinel, L. Braechi; financial secretary, G. E. Beall. Past Presidents (better known as Hasbeens)—Past president, N. E. Malcolm (loaned by the present officers account of absence of Brother Greer); president, P. A. Crowley; first vice-president, J. R. Mesa; second vice-president, Geo. Williams; third vice-president, E. Hansen; marshal, E. P. Cashell (pride of Palo Alto); inside sentinel, I. P. Vandervoort; financial secretary, G. E. Beall. Senior Past President E. A. Hettinger acted for both sides. The captains were James Orr for the present officers, and I. P. Vandervoort for the Hasbeens. The judges for the contest were Past Grand President Decker, District Deputy S. M. Warden and H. Hansen. The only officers to score 100 points were James Farmin of the present officers, and J. R. Mesa of the Hasbeens. The present officers are ready to challenge any team in the State, with the exception of National of San Francisco, to the ritualistic and floor work.

December the 8th, the Parlor celebrated its eleventh anniversary by partaking of a fine banquet, served at the expense of the Hasbeens, at which all present enjoyed themselves. At the request of the toastmaster, the following members responded with interesting speeches: G. W. Tinney (toastmaster), N. E. Malcolm, E. A. Hettinger, Father Gleason, I. P. Vandervoort, James Farmin, W. O. Hornblum and Fred Ricconi, visitors from Stanford Parlor. The banquet was the finest given by the Parlor and will be long remembered by the attendants.

Hall for Stockton.

Stockton—The Native Sons' Hall Association of Stockton was launched December 17th, when articles of incorporation were filed with the County Clerk and forwarded to the Secretary of State. The association is capitalized at $200,000, divided into shares of $10 each. The following, elected by Stockton Parlor, are the directors: Thomas H. Luke, G. E. Reynolds, W. E. O'Connor, R. A. Reid, A. J. Turner, Orrin S. Henderson, Edward Van Vranken, George E. Catts, W. C. Neumiller, Martin O. Schneider and John W. Kerriek. As soon as the charter arrives, the association will proceed to solicit stock subscriptions from the Parlor members on an easy-payment plan. Stockton Parlor, No. 7, will take $20,000 worth of stock in the association.

The Parlor elected officers for the ensuing term at a meeting December 1st. There were a number of lively contests and in one instance three ballots were necessary before a choice was made. The newly-elected officers are: Martin O. Schneider, junior past president; John W. Kerriek, president; G. E. Reynolds, first vice-president; Walter P. Rothenbush, second vice-president; Cyril Kenyon, third vice-president; Walter McLachlan, marshal; George Fox, inside sentinel; Will Whipple, outside sentinel; R. A. Reid, trustee. The installation will be held the first Monday in January.

The Stockton Natives' 1915 Admission Day Boosters' Committee has planned a big mask ball for New Year's Eve at the Masonic Auditorium. At the time of this writing, the affair promises to be a brilliant success. Those in charge are: Ben F. Cooper (chairman), A. J. Turner, Walter P. Rothenbush, A. W. Atwood, Cyril MacDonald and G. E. Reynolds.

High Aspirations.

Suisun—At the meeting of Solano Parlor, No. 39, December 16th, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: Past president, J. J. Joyce; president, W. F. Parker; first vice-president, R. H. Woods; second vice-president, E. J. Seavers; third vice-president, Dr. J. D. Fogarty; marshal, E. G. Long; trustees—R. F. Hunnewell, E. M. Staples, J. A. Wing; outside sentinel, E. S. Harry; inside sentinel, Frank Nickerson; financial and recording secretary, J. J. McCarron; treasurer, E. E. Long. After the meeting the Parlor held an "oh! time" get-together meeting, consisting of a few two, three and four-round goes between the members, also a few vocal selections. Solano Parlor is rapidly gaining in membership, and as a local fraternal social organization, it is in the lead. It is one of the oldest parlors in the State, and is looking forward to the time when it will be the leading fraternal organization in Solano County. The officers are all young men of ability, and perform the duties of their respective offices in a most creditable manner.

TO EXTEND ORDER'S INFLUENCE... GRAND PRESIDENT GIVEN PUBLIC RECEPTION

San Francisco—The local Parlors of Native Sons of the Golden West have organized an Extension Committee composed of the Grand Officers, members of the Board of Appeals, Past Grand Presidents, District Deputy Grand Presidents and five delegates from each of the Parlors. The purpose of the committee is the promotion of the Order and the increase of its membership by means of public entertainments at which prominent members, as well as other eminent Californians, will discourse on the romantic history of California and the true principles and purposes of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. The officers of the committee are as follows: Harry I. Mulerevy, president; Jesse C. Allan, first vice-president; Max E. Licht, second vice-president; H. F. Likendey, secretary; D. Q. Troy, treasurer; B. Mahoney, marshal.

The first effort of the Extension Committee was made on November 22nd, in the form of a public reception to the Worthy Grand President, Honorable Thomas Monahan, Mayor of San Jose. The members of the thirty local Parlors with bands and drum corps, their banners and flags unfurled, assembled at Van Ness avenue and Market street, where they met the Grand President and escorted him through the streets to Native Sons' Hall, where a grand public reception was held. The procession was, in line, as follows: Chief of Police D. A. White and mounted officers; San Francisco Municipal Band; Grand Marshal Angelo J. Rossi and aides, J. Emmet Hayden and Dr. T. B. W. Leland; automobile decorated with flowers and electric lights containing Grand President Monahan, wife and babies; other decorated automobiles containing the following: Mr. and Mrs. Harry I. Mulerevy, D. Q. Troy and Mr. and Mrs. John I. Nolan; Henry Likendey, Jesse C. Allan, Max E. Licht, B. Mahoney; Past Grand Presidents Charles M. Belshaw, Judge H. C. Gesford, Congressman Joseph Knowland, Louis F. Byington, Daniel A. Ryan; Grand Trustees Judge J. J. Van Nostrand, Fairfax Wheelan, Wm. H. Caubus; Grand First Vice-president Louis H. Mooser and Grand Second Vice-president John F. Davis; Superior Judges Franklin P. Griffin, James Conlan, Bernard Flood and Frank Kerrigan; members of the Extension Committee and other members of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. The parade was divided into three divisions—California Parlor, No. 1, with band, leading the first division, Pacific Parlor, No. 10, with band, leading the second, and Castro Parlor, No. 232, with band, leading the third. It is estimated that 5000 Natives participated in the parade and reception.

After the parade the reception was held at Native Sons' Hall, where County Clerk Harry I. Mulerevy acted as chairman. In a short address of welcome to Grand President Monahan, he explained the object and aims of the Native Sons, what they had done for the State in the past, and their plans for the future. He then read a telegram from Governor Hiram Johnson, a member of Sunset Parlor, No. 26, Sacramento, who expressed regrets that he could not attend. Mayor James Rolph, a member of Hesperian Parlor, No. 137, this city, also scheduled to speak, had previously agreed to act as referee at the annual Stanford-California debate. James D. Phelan, a member of Pacific Parlor, No. 10, this city, sent a telegram from Washington, D. C., stating that at the request of Mayor Rolph, he was detained at the National Capitol looking after the Hetch-Hetchy water supply for San Francisco.

Grand Trustee Joe Snyder of Grass Valley spoke on what the organization has accomplished. The preservation of Sutter's Fort at Sacramento, the old Custom House at Monterey and the Big Trees were named. Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington delivered a stirring address, concluding by introducing Mrs. Harry I. Mulerevy, who sang "I Love You, California," and "The Poppy's Aflame on the Hill." She was enthusiastically received and presented with an armful of chrysanthemums.

Edward F. Moran, a member of the Extension Committee, spoke of the committee's plans for the future. He was followed by Professor Henry Morse Stephens of the University of California, Berkeley, who commented upon the Traveling Fellowship of the University, which is the result of the work of the Native Sons. Grand President Thomas Monahan thanked the San Francisco Parlors for the welcome tendered him. He spoke at length on the work of the organization, and told its history in detail. He stated that he would like to see Serra Day become a national holiday.

STATE-WIDE EXHIBIT OF HOME PRODUCTS

Stimulated by favorable business conditions in the State during the last year, and especially by the success of the recent California Land Show and Home Industry Exhibition in San Francisco, the Home Industry League of California is negotiating to give a food, products and industrial show, under the auspices of the National Exhibit Company, that will be state-wide in its scope. Its purpose is to make one of the most complete exhibits of California products—both of the soil and factories—ever undertaken on the Pacific Coast. It will be an enlarged idea of the moving-car plan of advertising.

The exhibits will be made in a tent pavilion, 130 by 300 feet, traveling by special train. It will carry all exhibits, working crew to handle the exhibits, demonstrators, a full orchestral band and high-class vaudeville troupe. County exhibits will also be included along with the food and industrial display.

The start will be made from Oakland, May 4, 1914, and will continue for five months, until September 19th of the same year. An itinerary will be covered during the time that includes all the larger centers of population in California, from Marysville to San Diego. One-week stands will be made in each of the twenty cities selected. It is estimated that more than 2,000,000 people will visit the exhibit, especially as all admissions will be free.

Under the influence of good business results, the Home Industry League of California is carrying on many effective campaigns to advertise home-industry products. The food, products and industrial show will supplement the moving-picture shows and lectures descriptive of home industries that are now being given throughout the State under the Home Industry League's management. In this way there will be carried to all parts of California the largest exhibit ever made of the State's actual products of soil and factory, which must result in the increased consumption of goods "Made in California."

The signal success of the California Land Show and Home Industry Exhibition last October prompted the state-wide exhibit and industrial tour for 1914. The Home Industry League, through the National Exhibit Company's plan, will do much to educate the entire population of the State, including new and old residents, in a most attractive way, to California's home-produced products and the opportunities for homeseekers and investors of all kinds.

Another distressing accident occurred at Saw Pit Flat, Plumas County, on January 28th. Mary A. Wheeler, her sister Elizabeth, and Margaret Kay, all girls in their teens, went into the tunnel of the Franklin mine to view the working of the drift, and when returning got upon a car of gravel to ride out. The car came down the track on to the dump so fast it could not be controlled, and it struck the bulkhead with such force as to throw Mary Wheeler off the car and down the dump about forty feet, where her head struck a timber and she was instantly killed. Margaret Kay was also thrown off the car, but her foot caught between the steel hoops worn by Elizabeth Wheeler and she was held, head downwards, until rescued by the miners. The accident had another sad phase in that James Wheeler and his wife, the parents of Mary, had buried their youngest daughter, aged eleven years, during the first week of the month.

Another sad accident occurred at Fiddletown, Amador County, where, on the 28th, a little girl named Virginia Yates had her dress set on fire by a flying spark from the fireplace and was fatally burned. She and a little sister were alone in the room. She rushed out into the yard with her clothes ablaze, where her father endeavored to smother the flames with his coat. The Yates family had buried their oldest child only a week previous.

A ten-mile trot in San Francisco drew a large concourse of sportsmen to the race track on January 23rd. The match was between a trotter named "George" and one called "Oregon John." It was for a purse of $2000. "Oregon John" was the favorite in the betting at 3 to 1, and led for four miles, when "George" took the lead and won the race in 31:30.

Frog-barometer Attracts Attention.

Another race that created quite a stir among the local sports of Sacramento was a hack race on January 25th for $50 a side. Owing to the annual meeting of the Legislature and the frequent political conventions in Sacramento, and also the bad condition of the streets, hack driving was a lucrative business and attracted to it a number of men who became, on account of their mental characteristics, prominent in public life. Good and fast horses were the rule, in the use of these hack teams, and much rivalry ensued, hence, in order to decide a controversy which arose over the claims of the different owners, the race grew into an event. Three hack owners entered their teams and, according to the rules, had to drive their teams and hacks a distance of one mile. J. W. Wilson, Peter Humrich and Frank Thompson were the contestants, and J. McKenny, C. Trainor and W. H. Foreman the judges of the race. Thompson came in first, Humrich second and Wilson last, all close together; but as Thompson had galloped his team all around the track and Humrich had nearly done the same, while Wilson's team had trotted the entire distance, Wilson was declared the winner in 4:33.

A man named Gruler, in Sacramento, had invented a harometer which was attracting considerable attention. It consisted of a glass jar, half-filled with water, a small ladder, and a live frog. When dry weather was in sight, the frog climbed to the top of the ladder and remained there; but when clouds appeared and rain approached, the frog went down into the water. The frog had shown its perspicacity by going down the ladder into the water several hours before a passage of clouds occurred and returning to his dry-weather perch as soon as they disappeared below the horizon. The betting fraternity were laying wagers whether the frog would foretell the next rainstorm or not.

The forests of Florida contain 175 different kinds of wood.

"The Panama Canal means more to California than to any other state. Never before have the eyes of the world been focused upon us as they are today. The Golden State is certainly a land of promise. We have invited the nations of the world to be our guests in the not far distant future. Your representatives in Congress pledged their words that California would make good in 1915, and we look to the people of the State for a fulfillment of the pledges made.

"We of California and the West never fail in an undertaking. Success is inherent with us. The American people need manifest no further concern when California assumes an obligation on behalf of the Government. All success to California's coming expositions. All success to this magnificent State. May it always remain a united Commonwealth."

BRONZE TABLET UNVEILED.

Ventura—Through the efforts of the Landmarks Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, the two hundredth birthday anniversary of Junipero Serra was observed by the unveiling of a bronze tablet attached to the cross on the hill back of the city, upon the site where the Franciscan erected a cross when he began the work of erecting San Buenaventura Mission in Ventura. There was an appropriate program, following which Miss Myrtle Shepherd Francis unveiled the tablet, which bears the following inscription:

In memory of the 200th anniversary of the birth of Padre Junipero Serra, founder of the Franciscan Missions of California, who closed the labors of his useful life with the founding of the Mission of San Buenaventura, March 31, 1782, this tablet is placed.

Such a bank is one with which it is extremely desirable for you to do business.

The big capitalist doesn't have to seek personal service in a bank, he doesn't have to seek the extra little courtesies and considerations which go to make up what we understand by Service. The very amount of his deposit, the size of his account, guarantees him such personal attention and courtesy. It is the small merchant, the savings depositor, the man who is trying hard to increase an account that to him seems inadequate, who needs that strong, personal, helpful element in banking service.

And he gets it here, invariably!

URING the entire month of February earnest young men and young women from all over the entire world will be entering the freshman classes of Los Angeles College of Osteopathy, the largest medical school in the western two-thirds of the United States and the most thoroughly equipped Osteopathic College in existence. There are now enrolled students from all over the United States and also from Japan, Canada, England, Scotland, Germany, Austria and Switzerland, who are training themselves as physicians at this institution not only because of the splendid advantages offered in the way of a thorough education but also because of the pleasure of living in a climate such as that of Southern California, where it is always spring time and where opportunities for needed recreation are unlimited.

It has been a pleasant part of the duties of the business department of the College, for the past fourteen years, to help find employment for students who wish to reduce their expense while mastering the course. This work is easy to secure in Los Angeles and well compensated. Any young man or young woman, of good health and preliminary education, whose time is not encumbered, and who is able to pay the tuition, can largely earn a living while mastering the course. There is one other condition, and that is, that he should have the courage of his convictions.

The present course is three school years. California has just enacted a new law which provides for a four years' course after 1918, and it is therefore suggested to those young men and young women who desire to be of some service to their fellow-beings and at the same time have a profession which will be the means of a sure livelihood to themselves, that they do not hesitate, but commence in the near future to fit themselves as Osteopathic Physicians.

Full information and catalog will be furnished upon request.

Unknown Treasures Necessitate Rewriting State's History

Important to California.

In connection with the splendid work that Charles E. Chapman, Traveling Fellow in Pacific Coast History of the University of California for the Native Sons of the Golden West, has done in Spain, Professor Herbert E. Bolton of the University is accomplishing equally magnificent work in Mexico.

The accompanying article regarding the work of Professor Bolton shows the tremendous strides that are being made by the University of California toward a correct writing of the history of this State, as far as these two countries are concerned. Mr. Chapman's work having been set forth extensively in previous issues of The Grizzly Bear.

In addition to research work in Spain and Mexico, the authorities of the University are getting ready to make what will probably be some splendid development in the Russian field before long.—Editor.

Particularly is this important for California and the Southwest. California history and Western history in general cannot be understood without knowledge of the Spanish civilization on which later times have builded. English-speaking occupation of California and all the Southwestern United States is only a matter of yesterday, while the sixteenth, the seventeenth, the eighteenth, and much of the nineteenth centuries, saw Spanish institutions everywhere. In architecture, in land matters, in Indian affairs, in agriculture, in use of words and place names, in legal institutions, in traditions, and in ways of life, the whole Southwest of today is profoundly influenced by its Spanish inheritance. The history of Texas, like that of California, the history of Arizona, like that of New Mexico, must be interpreted through understanding of the Spanish centuries. And since Spaniard and Anglo-Saxon faced each other across a wavering Western frontier for a century, the whole history of Western expansion necessitates Mexican evidences for its honest interpretation.

The highest officials of church and state in Mexico gave aid to Professor Bolton in his search for documents that should open up the past to men's gaze. From President Diaz to the guardians of the archives in provincial capitals, from the apostolic delegate for Mexico and the archbishops to the parish priests in distant villages, the authorities gave hospitable and courteous aid to the American scholar.

It was an exciting quest that Professor Bolton pursued in Mexico, with the zest of expectation that each new bundle of papers drawn forth from some dark corner might contain a pioneer's narrative of events before only obscurely understood, a governor's official report of the establishment of a city, a mission father's careful account of the language and customs of some native people now vanished from the earth.

Valuable Historical Finds.

There was the joy of the discovery of long lost buried treasure. At the College of the Holy Cross, for a single instance, founded in 1683 at Queretaro, on the site of a monastery then already old, Professor Bolton was told that the archives had long since disappeared—probably in the troublous times when Maximilian and the French invaded Mexico. But the few priests remaining of the once mighty establishment were courteous to the stranger within their gates, and gave him free leave to search.

Then an aged servingman remembered an old trunk and a chest of drawers somewhere in an attic. There, inches deep in dust, Professor Bolton found the annual reports for a hundred years, of missions scattered far and wide over the Southwest, for it was from the College of the Holy Cross that the young apostles had been sent out to explore and christianize the northern provinces of New Spain, from Texas to California.

This book of Professor Bolton's is not for popular consumption. It is not something to sit down and read for an account of Mexican American history, but a vast mass of information as to the whereabouts and nature of the scores of thousands of documents recording the history of the Southwest which Professor Bolton has discovered in scores of different national, state, municipal, and ecclesiastical repositories in Mexico.

He is a pioneer blazing a trail into a vast forest. Generations of historians to come will follow his footsteps, and through long years of toil will make available for the world's knowledge the treasures whose existence he has revealed.

THE BIRTHDAY OF WASHINGTON.

Our country's heroes, where are they
On immortal Washington's natal day?
Some lie where the grasses wave,
And some, the snow falls on their grave.
But the spirits of those for whom ye weep,
Whose bodies have long lain asleep,
Still hover over this fair land.
A glorious and immortal band,
To guide and hold our Ship of State,
As Washington once held the fate
Of a little band at Valley Forge,
And led them through the icy gorge,—
Those furnished men with frozen feet,
Unmindful of the British fleet,
Who danced the precious hours away,
Till the sun shone on that glorious day
When Liberty her impress set
On men who spite the cold and wet,
Lifted the banner of Freedom o'er
America's land from shore to shore,
And taught us how to dare and do,—
Our Native Sons—and will not you
Uphold this banner till the sun Sets on the name of Washington?

—ANNA D. PHILLIPS.

San Francisco, California.

BECAUSE OF VAST UNKNOWN treasures that Professor Herbert E. Bolton of the University of California, Berkeley, has discovered in the archives of state and church in Mexico, the history will now need to be rewritten of all the Southwest—from California to Louisiana.

The keys to these historical treasure-houses are now made ready to the hand of any scholar through the publication by the Carnegie Institution of Washington of a "Guide to Materials for the History of the United States in the Principal Archives of Mexico." In this volume of 553 pages Professor Bolton tells of the extraordinary wealth of unknown manuscripts, recording the romantic history of the Spaniard in North America, which he has brought to light through a dozen years of exploration in the Mexican archives.

It will take lifetimes of work by hundreds of historians to make adequate use of the historical riches Professor Bolton has opened to the world. His pioneer work of discovery of sources is regarded as the most important contribution made to the history of Western America since H. H. Bancroft's monumental task of gathering the Bancroft library, that vast accumulation of printed and manuscript material for Pacific Coast and Western American history which some years ago became the property of the University of California, and ever since has been busily mined in by scores of graduate students and other historical investigators—with fifty years' work still ahead.

The publication of Professor Bolton's survey of the Mexican archives as a source of American history is part of the great task which the endowed Carnegie Institution has undertaken of publishing similar guides for the archives of all the nations with which the United States has had intimate relations. Too long, say the historical experts, has American history been written from a provincial point of view, and purely from American records. Now the records of neighbor nations are being searched, that the "other fellow's story" may be hearkened to.

FEBRUARY, 1864, LIKE THE TWO preceding winter months, was almost devoid of rain. Only on two days did rain fall, and it amounted to only .18 of an inch. This made a total rainfall from September 1, 1863, of only 4.25 inches and made this the driest season since the discovery of gold.

The lack of water caused the business stagnation in the mining counties to grow distressingly more severe, and times were dull. The only industry that was prospering from the effects of the dry season was the teaming business to Washoe. There was not a snowbank on the route between Placerville, California, and Virginia City, Nevada, and with dry roads in the valley and foothills, the volume of teaming over the mountains almost reached summer proportions.

A terrific north wind began blowing on the 10th and continued for three days, doing an immense amount of damage to the shipping interests in San Francisco Bay. The ocean steamers "Moses Taylor" and "Golden Age" dragged their anchors and collided with other vessels, to great financial loss; several schooners were blown ashore; wharves were demolished, and everything that could be blown over, up or down went sailing before the wind.

While the road to Washoe from Placerville was free from snow, the extremely cold weather had made frequent large, icy surfaces from freezing the mud and water upon it. On February 5th the west-bound stage, when near Strawberry, in turning out to pass a freight wagon, skidded along the icy surface and went over a bluff, rolling to the bottom, a distance of nearly fifty feet. Although filled to capacity with passengers, no one was seriously injured.

Greenbacks Not in Favor.

The Legislature continued in session during the month and stirred things up by considering a bill repealing the "special contract" law, which required all debts and contracts to be paid in gold coin. Greenbacks were valued at 64 cents on the dollar, and were fluctuating between 70 and 60 cents as good or bad news came from the seat of war, or acts, at the seat of government, were construed as being of good or evil import.

Many loyal citizens believed it to be an injustice to the administration for California, a loyal State, to refuse to make currency a legal tender; but a large majority of the business men contended that to make it a legal tender would upset prices—to such an extent that they would fluctuate up and down as the value of greenbacks changed—and make a condition disastrous to business investments.

Public meetings were held in San Francisco, Sacramento, Placerville and other towns, at which resolutions against the proposed change were adopted. The meetings were characterized by disorderly conduct and sometimes muscular violence. The Secretary of the Treasury, S. P. Chase, took a hand and sent a communication to the Legislature by wire from Washington, D. C., asking it to pass the measure and show a friendly spirit toward the greenback.

Finally the State Senate disposed of the question by defeating the bill and political peace quietly spread over the State. The monetary differences between the gold coast and the greenback coast remained unadjusted until the United States Government resumed specie payments.

To Bombard San Francisco.

News from the Civil War was not exciting. The Army of the Potomac being inactive during the month, General Sherman started with an army down in Mississippi, captured Jackson, and was said to be on his way to Mobile to co-operate with Admiral Farragut in the capture of that city.

Charleston, S. C., was being bombarded, and there was arising a popular clamor for General Grant to be placed in charge of the Army of the Potomac and do something with it.

The House of Representatives passed a bill creating the position of Lieutenant-General, and naming General Grant for the position which would give him supreme command, next to the President, of the Federal armies. The Senate struck General Grant's name out and passed the bill, which was construed to be favorable to General Halleck, whom the administration wanted and the country did not.

Divers and wrecking machinery arrived in San Francisco to raise the vessel "Aquila," that was sunk in a gale a few months previous, while it was moored to a wharf to be unloaded. It contained the monitor "Comanche," which was shipped in sections from the East and was to be put together in San Francisco and used as a defense for that harbor.

From London came a report during the month that six vessels had been fitted up in Chinese waters, by the Southern Confederacy, to destroy

What Was Doing IN CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

(THOMAS R. JONES, SACRAMENTO.)

American shipping on the Pacific Ocean and make a naval attack upon San Francisco. This made it more urgent than ever that the "Comanche" be fished out, put together and be ready to defend the harbor. Captain Selim E. Woodworth was assigned to command the monitor when it should be in readiness.

News was received of the death of Captain J. Sewell Reid of the famous California Hundred. He was killed in a skirmish with guerillas on February 22nd, in Virginia.

E. B. Babbitt, deputy Quartermaster-General of the army, advertised the sale of twenty camels by the United States Government at Benicia on February 25th. Bidders were not present. The camel had been proven by experience, on account of its tender feet, to be inferior as a pack animal to the mule and burro, and also to the mustang as a method of conveyance across the deserts of California, Nevada and Arizona.

Very Generous to Clergy, Then.

On February 22nd a beautiful silk flag was presented by the citizens of Georgetown to the Union Guard of that town. Miss Sallie E. Keefer made the presentation address and Captain Bell responded for the company. Five hundred people attended the exercises and a grand ball followed.

The Rev. Mr. Lacy of the First Congregational church, San Francisco, on February 28th announced his inability, on account of failing health, to remain as pastor, and asked for a year of absence to try and recuperate. It was granted, and then, at the suggestion of a member of the church, the contribution plates were passed around to give the minister a donation to make his vacation a pleasant one, $3600 being contributed in less than ten minutes.

The steamboat "Anna Stewart" was launched in San Francisco on February 14th in the presence of a large crowd of people, mainly gathered on Telegraph Hill. The boat was built to run on an opposition line to Sacramento and began regular trips during the month, but the regular company soon bought the opposition off.

The Central Pacific railroad laid its rails as far as Roseville, eighteen miles east of Sacramento, this month. The roadbed was graded to Newcastle and on February 17th the directors of the company, with about twenty members of the Legislature, made an excursion to the end of the track in cars, and then in carriages to Newcastle, to view the progress of the work.

Accommodation Well Rewarded.

The Union Company, mining in French Ravine, Sierra County, cleaned up, after a sixteen days' run, $37,000. It was claimed that this was the richest lead uncovered in California. It was gold mixed with quartz, instead of quartz carrying gold. Chunks as large as a man's head, that were over two-thirds gold, were being broken off the ledge.

T. S. Benoist discovered a deposit of bitumen near Point Arena, Mendocino County. It was thirty feet wide, facing the bay, and the people in the neighboring county were greatly excited over the find. It was being cut out in large chunks for shipment to San Francisco.

Near South Butte, twelve miles from Marysville, four men were engaged in sinking a shaft on a coal vein. On February 9th, on going to work, one of them, on lighting a candle at the bottom of the shaft, caused an explosion which blew the windlass away from the mouth of the shaft and caused severe injuries to three of the miners from flying gravel and rocks and having the hair on their heads and faces burned off. The explosion was from an accumulation of coal gas at the bottom of the shaft.

As illustrating the freaks of luck, mention was made by the newspapers of a youth nineteen years of age who went to Washoe and on the day of his arrival there was given, in order to fill out the necessary location notice, three hundred feet in the Overman mine on the Comstock Lode. He sold his gift this month for $250,000.

The great thoroughbred stallion "Lodi" arrived in San Francisco from Kentucky and was the cause of a furore in horsemen circles. He was bought from John M. Clay of Lexington, Kentucky, by Charles H. Bryan of Virginia City. He was three years old and $3000 was the price paid for him. The great two-mile race between "Lodi" and Norfolk" at Sacramento, in 1865, was a national event in the racing world.

John Land and Susan Fincher were married on February 25th in San Joaquin County, beneath an oak tree in a grove where five hundred of their neighbors and acquaintances assembled and had a picnic after the ceremony.

Fires Do Great Damage.

Indians along the Truckee River were making lots of easy money catching trout for the Comstock Lode market. They were both spearing them and catching them with a hook. Their spear was made of a bone, and when the trout was struck, the spear pulled off the handle and the fish was landed by means of a cord attached to the spear. Their hooks were also made from bone. The line was fastened in the middle of the hook so that when it was taken hold of by a trout it was pulled crossways with a jerk of the fish's mouth, and it was a sure hold. Their great advantage, though, was in the use of a peculiar kind of bait which was kept an Indian's secret. It was thought to be a large worm found only in a species of greasewood. It had a pungency that was attractive to the trout at all seasons of the year. Its presence in the shrub was shown by a number of dead leaves around the spot it was boring, and it was easily obtained by breaking the limb away at the point where the worm was eating its way around the limb.

A great coursing match at Marysville on February 5th brought lovers of that sport, with their greyhounds, from as far east as Virginia City and from the principal towns of California in other directions. The coursing matches were run on the plains of Sutter County, where hares were plentiful and no obstructions were in existence to interfere.

Thos. G. Cary, in San Mateo County, was announced as being interested in propagating the Japanese golden pheasant on his farm.

Downieville, then in its height of prosperity as a mining town, was the first to go up in smoke and down in ashes this year. On February 27th all but three of its business houses were burned, and over a hundred business men were losers to the extent of $400,000.

Clayton, a new town at the base of Mt. Diablo, in Contra Costa County, was the next town to burn. On February 28th its hotel and stores were destroyed and a $30,000 loss sustained.

Napa had a block of buildings burn on February 16th, with a $25,000 loss.

Unparalleled "Necktie" Party.

A severe shock of earthquake, that was felt on the coast from San Francisco to Santa Barbara, occurred at 5:45 a.m., February 25th. E. A. Lawrence, a lawyer in San Francisco, was severely injured by his hookcase being overturned by the shock and falling upon him.

The George Marsh theatrical company, with Master George Marsh and Jennie Arnott as leading actors, were entertaining the people with "Toodles" and other farces.

A lynching affair, unparalleled in the annals of the Pacific Coast, occurred at Aurora, Nevada. This town is located near the boundary line of California, and Californians were concerned in all the details of the stirring event. On February 2nd, a respected citizen of Nevada, formerly of California, named W. R. Johnson, was found lying dead on the main street of the town, shot through the head and his jugular vein severed by a knife thrust. He kept a stage station about twenty miles from Aurora, and had been spending the night of the 1st with a number of easy-going fellows, playing billiards and cards in different resorts until after midnight. His body was found about 5 a.m., and it was soon known a foul murder had been committed. The coroner's inquest lasted five days, in its efforts to fasten the crime upon the guilty men.

It developed that four men, members of the sporting fraternity and well-known gun-fighters, were concerned in the deed, but were able to conceal the direct facts. The four, with another who was believed to be an accessory after the fact, were ordered arrested on February 7th. On the 8th, four hundred citizens of Aurora and vicinity met in the armory of the local military company and organized into a committee of safety and arranged their plans of procedure to rid the community of its undesirable element. At 7 a.m. on February 9th a cannon on a hilltop was fired three times, and this was a signal gun for the citizens to assemble.

Money of No Value Where He Went.

The sheriff was absent, in search of other suspects, and the houses of the deputy sheriffs, marshal and other peace officers were immediately placed under guard of detachments of the military company, who kept the occupants indoors. All stores and saloons were closed, and the town placed under control of the military company, to prevent disorder. A committee then began the erection of a gallows on the street near the center of the town, and at noon another committee brought the four men accused of the murder from the jail to the gallows, around which a great crowd had gathered. The accused men were accompanied by the Rev. C. Yeager, who was asked to give them religious consolation, if they desired it.

James Buckley, formerly of San Francisco, was the first one of the four allowed to address the crowd. He was cool and showed no evidence of fear. He stated that he and Daley had killed Johnson, and that the other men were innocent. John Daley, considered to be the leader of the gang, then stated he had killed Johnson because Johnson had caused his partner to be shot, and he regretted that he could not live to kill every relative Johnson had. James Masterson next made a claim of innocence in a calm and unexcited manner, and was followed by John McDowell, alias "Three fingered Jack," who raved wildly, calling upon God to witness that he was an innocent man and ended his harangue by drawing a derringer out of his pocket and placing it over his heart and pulling the trigger. It snapped and then, with an outburst of oaths, he cast the weapon out into the crowd.

Daley, when he had ended his talk drew from his pocket a handful of half-dollars and threw them into the crowd, remarking he would not need money any more. A man named Hanson was standing in the crowd with his seven-year-old son. One of the half-dollars fell at the lad's feet. His father made him pick it up, and then admonished him as follows: "My boy, don't you ever spend that half-dollar. Keep it as long as you live, and whenever you are tempted to do a wrongful thing just take it out of your pocket, look at it, and then think of the fate of the man who threw it away."

More Lynchings, and Others Coming.

Daley and McDowell appeared to be drunk, when the time came to adjust the noose about their necks; they staggered about on the platform and had to be assisted to stand up when their arms were tied. The fear of death had completely unnerved them. At 1:30 p. m., a signal gun was fired and the four men were launched into eternity. Every man, woman and child for miles around, who desired to see the affair, was present in a great crowd, around the gallows.

The four men that were hung, with another named Vance, lived together in a house owned by Daley and were known as the "Sacramento crowd." They assisted each other financially and physically when in trouble and that they should all die together did not surprise any of the knowing ones of that community.

This month was a bad month for ex-Californians who had taken bad reputations across the mountains and endeavored to maintain them in the mining towns of Nevada and Idaho Territories. Seventeen men were hung by vigilance committees in these two territories during this month and more were said to be on the way.

Natividad, Monterey County, followed the example set by larger communities to rid itself of undesirable inhabitants and organized a vigilance committee. Two brothers, named Lopez, native Californians of Spanish descent, were haled before them. One was charged with a number of robberies and the other with a couple of murders. The robber was whipped in public and then taken to jail to be tried for his crimes, while the other was taken to a tree and hung.

George Colmore was under sentence to be hung for murder in San Francisco on February 6th. On the night of the 5th he committed suicide by cutting an artery in his wrist and bleeding to death. He used the tooth of a comb to do the opening with. He had sharpened the tooth by rubbing it against the wall of his cell until it was as keen as a razor blade.

Unique Experiment.

A man named George Baker, who was the confidential secretary of the Lyons Ale Brewing Company, in San Francisco, levanted by steamer during the month, a defaulter to the firm in the sum of $50,000.

J. C. Gebhardt, County Treasurer of Calaveras, levanted on February 13th, taking passage on a steamer for the West Indies. He was short about $12,000 in his accounts, which sum his bondsmen had to make good. He left a brewery and business worth about $5,000 behind. His departure was a great shock to his friends in Mokelumne Hill, where he was looked upon as a model citizen, a wealthy man, and a leader of the German population of the county.

A woman named Mrs. Smith was found murdered in the kitchen of her house in San Francisco on February 24th. Dr. Sheldon, a physician of that city, created much interest by claiming he could develop from the retina of the dead woman's eye

LANDMARKS OF RUSSIAN OCCUPATION

GREEK CHAPEL.

BLOCK HOUSE.

Editor Grizzly Bear: Dear Sir: I made a trip, not long ago, to Fort Ross, in Sonoma County, and was very much disappointed to see how the buildings are going to pieces. It seems to me that this bit of Russian attempt to make California a Slav state, with all the romance based on the love story between the Russian governor and Donna Concepcion at the San Francisco Presidio, is worthy of a better fate than this.

The enclosed photographs will give you an idea of how the church and block-houses are going to pieces. I would be willing to contribute a small amount in case either yourself or the "Examiner," which I am told did the work of restoring the other buildings, care to take up the matter again.

Sacramento, January 3rd, 1914.

Yours very truly,

C. M. GOETHE.

The photographs referred to are reproduced above and show the need, as Mr. Goethe suggests, of some action to preserve these historic landmarks. And that action should not be delayed.

There are no doubt many others who, like Mr. Goethe, would be willing to subscribe to a restoration fund, and The Grizzly Bear will be pleased to accept any such contributions and will, in turn, turn the same over to Congressman Joseph R. Knowland, chairman of the Historic Landmarks Committee of the Native Sons of the Golden West, under whose guidance much restoration work of California landmarks has been accomplished by the Order.

These landmarks are now, however, the property of the State, and no doubt will be protected if attention of the proper authorities is called to them. But they should not be permitted to pass for want of attention, as with their passing will go the last evidence of Russia's occupation of California.

Fort Ross was founded as a Russian settlement in 1812, and the Russians were very active there until 1842, when they valiantly withdrew. The Greek Chapel, the most interesting of the buildings, was destroyed in the 1906 earthquake, but was restored through popular subscriptions inaugurated by the "Examiner." The enclosure, known as the fort, was a quadrangle 300 feet square, and was constructed of redwood timbers eight inches thick and fifteen feet high, set upright in the ground. At diagonally opposite corners were block-houses of hewn logs, while within the enclosure were the chapel, governor's residence, officers' quarters and storerooms.

The Russians were very active in agricultural pursuits and fur gathering, and as there is no evidence of their having attempted to eventually occupy all of California, they are believed to have founded the settlement purely for commercial purposes. But their presence aroused the suspicions of the Spanish, and they invaded the Russian territory, erecting the Sonoma Mission in 1823. In 1839, General John A. Sutter, who had arrived in California, bought all the Russians' effects, including forty rusty cannons, two brass pieces and a quantity of French flintlock muskets, and removed them to his fort in Sacramento. Thus the Russian occupation of California was at an end.—Editor.

a photograph of the man who murdered her. He was permitted to take one of her eyes and experiment with it. He magnified the retina one hundred and fifty times and obtained a photograph of what appeared to be the form of a man, showing the nose, whiskers and legs rather distinctly, but not producing anything that could furnish a clue. His theory was, that the retina retained an impression of the last object looked upon just before death, and this image could be reproduced in a photograph by a method he had in his mind.

Mrs. John Emerson, living near Healdsburg, on February 23rd, stood upon a box in the smokehouse at her residence and while cutting from a ham hanging above her head slipped and fell to the ground. The butcher knife she held in her hand penetrated her left side up to the hilt. She pulled it out and, rushing to her husband, a short distance away, dropped dead at his side.

DEPOSITARY FOR HISTORICAL MATERIAL.

San Diego—The California State building at the Panama California Exposition, to open here next year, will be designed after the most famous Spanish colonial structures, and will be a depositary for historical material. It will cost $250,000, and will remain the State's property. The building, while near the entrance of Balboa Park, to which it is connected by a concrete bridge of seven arches 136 feet high over Cabrillo Canyon, will be the central or dominant architectural feature of the exposition. It will be surrounded by buildings in the same style, all devoted to exposition purposes.

IMMENSE SUM SPENT BY STATE

FOR GOOD CAUSE—EDUCATION.

Sacramento—During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1913, California spent $25,554,919 for the education of 447,016 children in the State's public schools. This sum is exclusive of $4,000,000 expended for the State normal schools and the university of California at Berkeley. To teach these nearly half-million pupils, 14,519 teachers—12,380 women and 2,139 men—were employed. This information comes from State Superintendent Edward Hyatt's office, which also makes public the following pleasing fact regarding gain in enrollment:

OLD TIMERS DISBAND.

San Mateo—The San Mateo County Pioneers' Association, made up of those who came to the Peninsula prior to 1856, and which was founded years ago with a large membership, has gone out of existence. But three members—Thomas Durham, Charles Jacobus and William Lasswell, survive. The society's banner, charter and historic paraphernalia have been turned over to Redwood Parlor, No. 66, N.S.G.W., of Redwood City, for preservation.

FAVORITE SON WELCOMED HOME

AN FRANCISCO—TWO IMPORTANT gatherings of Native Sons of the Golden West marked the return of James D. Phelan of Pacific Parlor, No. 10, from a five months' absence, during which he did effective boasting for the Panama-Pacific Exposition in Europe and was a big factor in winning the Hetch Hetchy water supply fight in Washington. He was first welcomed at a banquet tendered on January 6th by the past and present directors of the Native Sons' Hall Association, of which organization he has been president since its inception. The second greeting took the form of a reception by the Grizzly Bear Club, which affair took place on the evening of January 9th, in the club's big meeting-room in the N.S.G.W. building.

Several hundred Native Sons attended the reception. So large was the crowd, in fact, that only standing room remained when H. G. W. Dinkelspiel, president of the Grizzly Bears, extended the official welcome to the guest of honor. President C. C. Moore of the Panama Exposition Company, the son of a Pioneer but born across the State line, who was present by special invitation, was declared a member of the Order of Native Sons for the evening and introduced as "Brother" Moore. After commending Phelan for good work done in Europe for the World's Fair, President Moore said: "On his return from Europe, Phelan went to Washington and there put over the biggest thing, in a diplomatic way, that has yet been done for the Exposition. He it was who planned that great feature, the dinner given by the Secretary of State to the diplomatic corps, which established the Government's parentage of the Exposition. This official state dinner and the statements made there has not been wholly a pleasure for me to sit here and listen to your words of praise. It is true I have been president of the Native Sons' Hall Association for twenty years. I called the meetings to order, but it was the members who furnished the enthusiasm and the fine spirit which accomplished results. The directors are entitled to equal recognition for what they did, and I would not for a moment be willing to accept your praise if you were not willing to share it with them. If you had not put in your savings and your efforts you wouldn't have this hall and you wouldn't be here tonight. Whatever I have done, which has been little, has been done in the way of co-operation and encouragement. The generosity has been yours, for you have given more than I have deserved."

Phelan paid tribute to the Pioneers of old and the distinguished native Californians of today. Among the latter he mentioned Holbrook Blinn and David Warfield, whom he found delighting New York with their acting; Mand Fay, a San Francisco girl, whom he found singing in the court theater in that great musical center, Munich. He spoke of Sybil Sanderson, famous the world over as a queen of song, Mrs. Gertrude Atherton, the famous author, Richard Walton Tully, the playwright, and other natives of the soil. In conclusion, he spoke of California's big show in 1915 and predicted that the Exposition in San Francisco would excel those of St. Louis and Chicago because, while they celebrated dead events, California is to celebrate a living triumph, the opening of a great waterway connecting two oceans. Phelan's speech abounded with oratorical gems, one of which was:

by the Secretary of State, speaking by authority of the President, emphasized the Federal Government's direct interest in and sponsorship of the Exposition. For this, Mr. Phelan is entitled to the gratitude of all Californians."

Short addresses were made by Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington, who said the Native Sons would not have had their splendid hall or their fine club if it had not been for Phelan; Grand President Thomas Monahan, who welcomed Phelan on behalf of the Order; Grand First Vice-president Louis H. Mooser, who recalled that Phelan had conceived the Hetch Hetchy water supply plan and from the first filing on the reservoir site till the grant was approved by President Wilson had been on the firing line; and Percy V. Long of Golden Gate Parlor, No. 29, City Attorney of San Francisco, who said that while most of the San Franciscans who went to Washington to fight for Hetch Hetchy were there in their official capacity, doing what they were paid to do, the great big influence, the influence that was needed, was that of the volunteer worker, James D. Phelan.

Phelan was then introduced. The big crowd cheered him again and again, and the band of Pacific Parlor joined in the welcome. Several of the speakers had declared that the Native Sons were greatly indebted to Phelan, and in reply to these expressions of appreciation he said: "It

Last month's Grizzly Bear told of the unveiling of a memorial cross at Santa Barbara, November 23rd, as one of the features of the Junipero Serra day celebration. The above illustration shows the memorial cross and also a portion of Santa Barbara Mission, founded December 4, 1786, two years after Serra's death. This mission is the best preserved of all the missions and has been in use continually since its erection. The illustration is from a photograph furnished by Miss Annie E. McCaughey of Reina del Mar Parlor, N.D.G.W., Santa Barbara, the members of which participated in the celebration at that city and are most active in all things pertaining to Santa Barbara's betterment and advancement.

I love thy hills and hills and flowers,
Thy golden sands and ocean foam.
My heart and soul in lonely hours
Goes back to thee, my childhood home!

Chorus.

My home, my home, the sweetest word
That any mortal ever heard!

Thy lofty mountains shine afar,
Crowned with the pure eternal snow,
And glistens 'neath the moon and star,
Resplendent in the sunset glow!

When all my wanderings shall cease
I only ask my dust shall rest
Beneath that sunny clime of peace,
Entombed within thy blooming breast!

"We who were but yesterday in the bread line are today inviting the nations of the world to our feast." The committee in charge of the reception consisted of E. J. Barton, F. Martel, George Stanzenberger and George McLaughlin.

Among the prominent members of the Order noted present were Dr. C. W. Decker, Past Grand President; Bismarck Bruck of St. Helena, Grand Third Vice-president; John E. McDougald, Grand Treasurer; D. Q. Troy, Grand Historiographer; W. P. Canby, Grand Trustee; Angelo J. Rossi, J. Emmet Hayden, Harry I. Mulerey, C. B. Hobson, J. C. McKinstry, Wm. J. Wynn, Col. Frank W. Marston, Isadore W. Cohen, Max E. Licht, James W. Wetson, I. Lindeman, H. J. Lyons and Edgar Seng.

The banquet given by the Native Sons' Hall Association was also a memorable affair. Joseph B. Keenan was chairman of the committee of arrangements and Lewis F. Byington, vice-president of the hall association, chairman of the evening. Several members and ex-members of the association's board of directors made speeches welcoming President Phelan and lauding him for his work and achievements in behalf of the Order. The guest of honor added greatly to the enjoyment of his hosts by giving an entertaining account of his experiences in Europe and Washington.

Among those at the feast were E. J. Barton, R. O. Bokee, C. M. Belshaw, G. C. Conmy, H. G. W. Dinkelspiel, Adolph Eberhart, John H. Grady, Ben F. Hanlon, J. Emmett Hayden, C. W. Heyer, George W. He has a married daughter and grandson living in Pasadena, and consequently is, to use his own words, "in favor of anything that helps California." In the past thirty years, Mr. Joyce has published several books, and others of his poems in praise of California have been published in The Grizzly Bear. It is good to know that we have, in Mr. Joyce, such a loyal friend. He ought to be a resident of the State, so that he could better appreciate all the beauties and wonders of earth's paradise.—Editor.)

CALIFORNIA LEADS, AS USUAL.

Sacramento—According to information sent out from Secretary of State Jordan's office, 31,372 motor vehicles were registered in California during 1913, representing an investment of $46,908,000. The registration exceeded that of any other state, New York, the nearest competitor, being exceeded by more than 2,600.

Preparations for 37th Grand Parlor Now in Progress

LOS ANGELES—THE AUDITORIUM, located on Fifth street, between Hill and Olive streets, has been selected for the meeting place of the thirty-seventh session of the Grand Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, which will be in session here the week of April 20th. This was decided at a meeting of the 1914 Grand Parlor Committee—composed of representatives of all the local Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters—held January 9th.

With this meeting, preparations were inaugurated for the proper handling and entertainment of the delegates and the hundreds of other members who will attend from all points of the State. Indications are that this will be the largest-attended Grand Parlor in the Order's history, and the local committee is planning accordingly.

A program of entertainment has been arranged, but is subject to change after the various details have been carefully looked into, and provides for the following: Sunday, April 9th, reception of delegates and visiting members; Monday, all-day session Grand Parlor; Monday evening, public reception; Tuesday, all-day excursion to beaches; Wednesday, all-day session Grand Parlor; Wednesday evening, high jinks for members of the Order only; Thursday, all-day automobile excursion, with barbecue at noon; Friday, all-day session Grand Parlor; Friday night, banquet for members of the Grand Parlor and invited male guests. A special program for the entertainment of the wives, daughters, sisters, etc., of visiting members of the Order will be arranged for by local Native Daughters, among the features to be a theater party and afternoon reception.

One of the features of the session will be the planting of a memorial tree, as provided by the last Grand Parlor shall be done at each future session. The arrangements committee also has in mind several other matters of an entertainment nature which will be sprung as a surprise on the visitors. Every detail looking to the proper care and entertainment of their guests will be looked after by the local Native Sons, and Los Angeles' reputation as an ideal entertainer will be fully sustained.

While numerous sub-committees—in all, embracing 200 members—have been appointed to look after various matters, the General Committee has authorized a Supervisory Committee to have full power to direct the movements of all of these committees. This committee is composed of Past Grand President H. C. Lichtenberger, chairman; J. D. Hunter of Los Angeles Parlor, No. 45, N.S.G.W.; H. G. Folsom of Ramona Parlor, No. 109, N.S.G.W.; Cal W. Grayson of Corona Parlor, No. 196, N.S.G.W.; George F. Vaughan of La Fiesta Parlor, No. 236, N.S.G.W.; Past Grand President Eva T. Bussenius, M.D., of La Esperanza Parlor, No. 24, N.D.G.W., and Jennie Elliott of Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124, N.D.G.W. Clarence M. Hunt will be ex-officio secretary to the committee.

The several sub-committees, and chairman of each, include: Accommodations, William Randolph; auditing, W. F. Allen; automobiles, Eugene Biscuit; ball, Lon S. McCoy; banquet, H. J. Vaughan; transportation, Cal W. Grayson; visiting women, Grace Stoermer; ways and means, Harry G. Folsom. These chairmen constitute the Executive Committee.

The officers of the General Committee are: chairman, Past Grand President H. C. Lichtenberger; vice-chairman, J. D. Hunter; vice-chairman, W. T. Craig; vice-chairman, J. B. Coffey; secretary, Clarence M. Hunt; treasurer, John D. Newell. The committee's headquarters have been established at the office of The Grizzly Bear, rooms 246 and 248 Wilcox building.

MANY WANT TO ATTEND.

San Francisco—Much interest in N.S.G.W. circles attaches to the Grand Parlor which will meet in Los Angeles in April. Who shall go as delegates, has created a spirited rivalry in many Sub-

SACRAMENTO—Among the speakers at the banquet of the Sacramento Society of California Pioneers, December 27th, was Mrs. J. J. Cadogan, who related the following incidents of her trip across the plains in 1851: "As some of this assemblage may not know of my parentage, I will state that my father was Patrick Bannon, of our own Bannon's Slough fame, who crossed the plains in 1849. About a year later, he returned, via the Horn, to our home in Joliet, near Chicago, and the next spring all our family started for the Golden West, going to St. Joseph, Missouri, by boat.

"Here my father and others bought oxen, wagons, provisions, etc. Upon resuming our journey the party, or train, consisted of fifty people. The first stopping place of importance was Fort Laramie. Later, the Green River was crossed in the bridge, my father gave the man a pair of trousers. At Carson City, Nevada, we sold a wagon, the man giving my father $50 octagonal California gold slugs. Our journey down the Sierras brought us through Placerville, and we arrived at Sutter's Fort on October 15, 1851. Here we met several friends who had arrived from the East."

Mrs. Cadogan is a daughter of Patrick Bannon, a pioneer of 1849 whose name is closely allied with the early history of California and from whom Bannon Slough, just north of the junction of the Sacramento and American Rivers, derived its name. On June 29, 1863, in St. Rose's Catholic Church, Sacramento, which site is now occupied by the Government building, she was, as Miss Maria Bannon, wedded to J. J. When the Indians attacked us we were prepared for them. Our wagons were all drawn up close together and the men, on horseback, stampeded the redmen.

"On one occasion, the wind was so strong that it was necessary to use ropes and stakes to hold the prairie schooners. Hail stones as large as hen's eggs paid us friendly visits from time to time. As I was only 8 years old, there were many important incidents which I did not remember. Horseback riding was a hobby of mine during the entire trip to California. June 29, 1913, Mr. and Mrs. Cadogan, surrounded by relatives, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at Bannon Slough, the gathering being held on the identical spot where, fifty years previous, amid stately oaks and beautiful shrubbery, the couple's wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Cadogan have one son and three daughters—John Cadogan, Jr., Mrs. Angela M. Desmond, Mrs. Clara G. Kenny and Mrs. Alice M. Artz and three grandchildren—Lyle Kenny, Earl Desmond and Miss Eileen Desmond. All are natives of California, and, together with the couple's sons-in-law, Daniel J. Desmond, Edward D. Kenny and George W. Artz, also natives of this State, were present at the recent family reunion.

Los Angeles—A sunken stadium, to seat 5,000, will be erected in Exposition Park during the year.

Los Angeles—Water from Inyo County, brought in an immense aqueduct, will be turned into the city mains May 1st.

San Diego—The Government will spend $300,000 here on one of the largest wireless stations in the world, for the use of the navy.

Sacramento—The State's printing office manufactured 1,338,914 school books during 1913, twice as many as during any previous year.

Berkeley—The spring semester of the University of California opened January 12th with the largest enrollment in its history. The year's total is expected to reach 7,500, the second highest of any university in the United States.

San Francisco—Rains have been general throughout the State the past month, and the outlook for all crops was never brighter. Some damage by high waters has resulted, but this will be offset a hundred-fold by immense crops now assured.

WASTED SYMPATHY

An epidemic of crime has for the past three months been sweeping over the State, and at present shows no abatement. While the condition is general, it is probably worse in the larger cities, and the newspapers thereof are daily filled with many accounts of murders, robberies, etc., and numberless references to lesser crimes. Among the many reasons assigned for this existing condition, is the contention that many honest men, out of work and unable to obtain employment, are forced to resort to criminal practices to save themselves and their dependants from starvation. Investigation, however, has proven the fallacy of such reasoning. And the record of the few criminals apprehended discloses the fact that not one of them belongs to the honest workmen's class.

Work has been slack throughout the country, and this, coupled with the laying off of hundreds of men in the outlying districts owing to the rainy season, accounts for a large number of toilers congregating in the larger cities, and also accounts for the unemployed situation that confronts those cities. But it does not furnish a legitimate reason for the presence of crime, except to the extent that, because of this gathering, criminals have joined the throngs to take advantage of the situation and carry on their work.

Those of our people who are crying for the abolition of capital punishment, those who are showing a nauseating interest in and sympathy for known criminals of all classes, are indirectly responsible for the presence of a considerable part of the criminal element in our midst, and with the aid of the parole and probation systems, as at present administered, are making of California a mecca for the country's criminals as well as encouraging others to become violators of the laws of both God and man. The State's criminal records of the past year not only disclose an alarming increase in crime, but afford ample proof that a large percentage of those arrested for felonies are either probationers or paroled prisoners.

Probation is generally extended to a convicted felon, not upon any showing of undeservedness, but because of influences that should have no consideration in such cases. As a result, the probationer naturally imagines himself penitentiary-proof, resorts to his old tactics, if necessary, and very frequently commits a graver offense. Probation was never intended to be extended generally to convicted criminals, but rather as a matter of equity in criminal matters. A man accused of crime is either guilty or innocent. If proven guilty after a fair trial, he should be punished, both as a warning to others and as a protection to the people generally. If not guilty, he should be released without any probation string. Instances are rare where probation has benefited a man known to be guilty of wilful crime. The good it is accomplishing—unless the providing of easy berths for a horde of probation officers can be so classed—is inconsequential in comparison with the harm that results from its present administration.

And this growing custom, especially among women, of showering confessed murderers, thieves and white-slavers with flowers, luxuries and even kisses, should not be tolerated by the authorities. Such actions tend to make heroes of criminals, and the newspapers delight in publishing glowing accounts thereof. Result: the weak-minded, criminally inclined, resort to crime to gain the hero's wreath of laurel so graciously tendered by notoriety seekers.

Murders, deliberately committed, are of daily occurrence in California, and yet an attempt is to be made to abolish capital punishment. Murderers have no fear of man or penitentiary, and there is no doubt but that the attempt to eliminate the hangman's noose has added to the frequency with which murders are committed under the least provocation. Our penitentiaries today house many wilful murderers whose existence is prolonged by this agitation for the abolition of capital punishment, to the State's disgrace. According to the Bible, the infliction of the death penalty for capital crimes is justifiable. Deuteronomy: xvii, 2, 5, 6, admonishes:

"If there be found among you, within any of thy gates which the Lord thy God giveth thee, man or woman that hath wrought wickedness in the sight of the Lord thy God, in transgressing His covenant,

"Then shalt thou bring forth that man or that woman, which have committed that wicked thing, and shalt stone them with stones, till they die.

"At the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses, shall he that is worthy of death be put to death, but at the mouth of one witness he shall not be put to death."

And the Bible also informs us (Deuteronomy: xvii, 11, 12) that wilful murder is to be punished with death by the civil authorities:

"But if any man hate his neighbour, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him, and smite him mortally that he die, and fleeth into one of these cities;

"Then the elders of his city shall send and fetch him thence, and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood, that he may die."

Surely, if God Almighty, the Giver of all life, recognizes the right of the duly constituted authorities to exact the death penalty for capital crimes, and commands the putting to death of the wilful murderer, there can be no sufficient reason urged for the abolition of capital punishment in this State. The death penalty is not only justifiable in many instances, but is an absolute necessity, if life is to be made safe. Instead of being abolished, it should be more generally enforced, and the power of setting it aside should be taken from the governor.

Too much sympathy, that could be exercised to advantage in behalf of law-abiding citizens, is being wasted on criminals. Every man, no matter what his station in life, and whatever the offense charged against him, should be given every opportunity to prove his innocence. But if he fail, and his guilt be firmly established, he should pay the law's full penalty. This course, if impartially followed, will bring about a lessening of crime and criminals, and will make of California a place to be shunned by those who do not care to live within the law. But so long as our lawmakers and law-enforcers are swayed from their duty by this mandarin sympathy in behalf of known criminals we can hope for no betterment in the conditions which are disgracing California.

J. P. Morgan & Co., the New York money bogs, have been getting considerable free advertising of late because of a "change of heart" regarding interlocking directorates. They are reported to have severed all connection with some of the country's greatest corporations. That's good news, but it would have been decidedly more cheering had they announced a severance of all connection with the United States.

Statistics of what was accomplished in California during the lately-deceased year cause some regret that we had not a more kindly feeling toward 1912. But when the glorious achievements of 1914 are announced, they will surely so far eclipse all previous records that comparisons will be odious.

A man was sentenced in Merced County recently to eight years in the penitentiary for stealing an automobile. If he had been intoxicated and run down and killed a pedestrian, he would, under the prevailing custom, have probably not been prosecuted at all, and certainly not for manslaughter.

HELP THIS WORTHY CAUSE

We are glad to record that the Board of Grand Officers of the Native Sons of the Golden West has sent a communication to each Subordinate Parlor, asking contributions to the fund for the erection of the Pioneer Mothers' monument in San Francisco. The Native Daughters have already contributed $2500, and if the suggestion of the Native Sons' Grand Officers is complied with, as we have every reason to believe that it will, the Native Sons will contribute $5000 to this worthy object.

We trust that every Parlor of Native Sons will readily and willingly pledge the sum set out in the communication, so that every member of the Order can become a contributor. The sacrifices of the Pioneer Mother, and her great influence in shaping the destiny of California, are matters of history; and for all that she was, all that she accomplished, all that she left us as her ancestors, we should cheerfully assist in the erection of this magnificent monument to her memory. California's debt to the Pioneer Mother can never be repaid, for it is inestimable; but in this small way can the sons and daughters of the State acknowledge that debt and honor her memory.

While it may not be generally known, it is a particularly gratifying fact that the idea of erecting this monument originated with a Native Daughter, Mrs. Ella Sterling Mighels, a member of Haywards Parlor, and a resident of San Francisco, whose parents were among the earliest Pioneers. Four years ago, Mrs. Mighels, in The Grizzly Bear, advocated this monument, and she has kept steadily at work on the project until now her hopes are about to be realized. Mrs. Mighels, because she appreciated the full worth of the Pioneer Mother, conceived the idea of a monument to her memory, and now that the project has passed to other hands for completion, her untiring efforts, yea, even sacrifices, in its behalf should not be lost sight of.

REMOVE THE BARRIERS

A man's ability to become a valued member of a fraternal organization should not be determined from his physical condition but from his moral make-up. And no fraternal organization can hope for complete success that combines commercialism with fraternalism.

The very moment that such an organization provides for the compulsory payment of sick and death benefits, it becomes commercialized, and sets itself up as a direct competitor of insurance companies, with which it cannot successfully compete.

The fraternal organizations that have shown great progress and stood the test of time, are those which are exclusively fraternal—pay no sick benefits and require no certificate of physical perfection. Those that have failed, and those that have shown very slow, if any, progress, are the ones which have made the payment of sick benefits and the requirement of medical certificates compulsory, thereby being both fraternal and commercial, and attempting to do that which cannot be successfully accomplished—serve two masters at once.

Because of these facts, and because we are anxious that the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West should show greater progress and become the most powerful and influential of all fraternal organizations in California, we hail with delight the recent decision of the Board of Appeals of that Order, that the payment of sick and death benefits is purely optional. That decision has removed one obstacle from the path of real progress, and we hope that the remaining obstacle—the surgeon's certificate—will be eliminated by the Grand Parlor when it meets in Los Angeles in April.

Take away these barriers, and the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, founded as it is, purely upon a sentimental basis, will show a phenomenal growth, will attract to its ranks men who do things, and will be assured that place in the State to which it is justly entitled.

MORE PATRIOTIC EXERCISES NEEDED

(By DR. MARIANA BERTOLA, Past Grand President, N.D.G.W.)

When it was my good fortune to be entertained recently by Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, N.D.G.W., of Stockton, among the excellent numbers on the program was a toast to the "Flag," by Miss Clara A. Stier. It was delivered so well, and is so full of good things, that I feel we must share it with others; it will be of assistance to anyone who will want to prepare an address to our beloved ensign. It follows:

"There are many flags in many lands.

There are flags of every hue,

But there is no flag in any land

Like our own Red, White and Blue."

"The American Flag has ever been a symbol of Liberty, and men rejoice in it. No flag on the globe has carried such messages of hope to the captive and such glorious tidings. When our Continental Fathers made this glorious flag, they wove into it not only history, but sentiment. The thirteen stripes ever remind us of the thirteen colonies that fought so valiantly for our freedom.

"The stars in the field of blue tell us of the number of states in our Union. They speak of unity and steadfastness of purpose, just as the stars in the blue vault of Heaven speak of the steadfast love of our Heavenly Father. The red stripes tell of courage—courage to do the right and help the weak and oppressed. This color is emblematical of the red rose. White speaks of purity—purity in thought, word, deed and action. This color is like the beautiful falling snow. The field of blue speaks of Loyalty—loyalty to God, home and country. It is typical of the blue vault of Heaven.

"Just a dash from the leaf of a red rose, just a flake of falling snow, just a bit of blue sky—that makes our flag.

"Then hurray for the flag,

The bouny, bouny flag,

With its bright colors three.

Long may it wave o'er the land of the free

And the home of the brave."

In these days of unrest, when our country is becoming more and more overrun by anarchistic ideas, our Native Sons and Native Daughters should see that we have more patriotic exercises, more and more education in respect to our Flag. Some of our institutions should be made to hear this in mind, and teach it more than they do.

Some of our institutions that get State aid never have a patriotic program or demonstration. Our grammar schools do much, but after these, some have grown to believe that in higher institutions, such patriotic demonstrations are beneath their dignity. The State, the Flag, supports them, and a definite part of their time should be given to patriotic demonstration, to develop by this means, as well as by precept and example of instructors, veneration for our Flag.

The next Legislature should take some steps toward the government of such patriotic demonstrations in all of our institutions.

A rich strike at the 1700-foot level is reported from the famous Utica mine at Angels, Calaveras County.

According to the Geological Survey, California retains first rank in gold output in 1913, and the value increased nearly $300,000. The total output of the country, according to H. D. McAskey of the Survey, was $88,301,023, a decrease of $5,150,477 from the 1912 figures. California also, according to the same authority, led in the production of petroleum, with 98,000,000 barrels to her credit, as against 86,450,767 barrels in 1912. David T. Day of the Survey places the total 1913 production of the country at 242,000,000 barrels, the greatest ever recorded; the total 1912 production was 222,113,218 barrels.

The December bulletin of the California State Mining Bureau places a value of $95,000,000 on California's 1913 mineral production. This is an increase of $4,000,000 for the year.

MRS. CHARLES M. BELSHAW JOINS THE SILENT MAJORITY.

Just before going to press with this issue, word was received by The Grizzly Bear of the sad passing, at her home in Antioch, of Mrs. Charles M. Belshaw, wife of Charles M. Belshaw, Past Grand President of the N.S.G.W., and well and favorably known throughout the State for his services to The People in the State Senate.

Mrs. Belshaw had been in ill health for some time past, and although every attention that a devoted husband's love and medical science could suggest were shown her, but little relief was afforded and she brooded over her apparently hopeless condition. The end came January 20th, while Mr. Belshaw was on the train bound for San Francisco to attend to his business affairs.

In his bereavement, Mr. Belshaw has the sympathy of the thousands of Native Sons who know his worth to the Order and the State. Mrs. Belshaw had attended many Grand Parlor sessions, in company with her husband, and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew her. While blessed with no children of their own, both Mr. and Mrs. Belshaw have shown great interest in the work being carried on by the Native Sons and Native Daughters in behalf of the State's homeless children, and their charity has always been extended with lavish hand.

Conducted by MRS. AMY CLARKE AUBURY

THE WOMAN'S BOARD OF THE Panama-Pacific Exposition during the month held the first of a series of meetings to be held during this year, called for the purpose of disseminating knowledge regarding the workings of the different departments of the exposition, and particularly that part relating to the Woman's Board. These meetings will include the county auxiliaries, and will take place every third Thursday afternoon of the month.

At the first meeting, George H. Perry, chief of the Bureau of Exploitation of the exposition, endeavored to give his audience some idea of the vast amount of work laid down for his department. Starting out against great odds, he has accomplished very much in an advertising way, demonstrating a part of his work by showing how a paper in a small town in Indiana had copied a whole page of their literature, and then showing the same page reproduced in the London "Times." His object will be to bring the people to the exposition, and he firmly believes that we shall see two million people in California as visitors during 1915.

Mr. Berry's address was followed by that of a speaker from the Traveler's Aid Association, a gentleman well qualified to speak on this work, having had charge of the Travelers' Aid in New York for many years. There is much interest being manifested in the subject of the care of unprotected women for 1915, and this speaker was able to tell of the many pitfalls which will be prepared for them, if the Travelers' Aid Society is not continually "on the job." This organization having recently formed an auxiliary body in San Francisco composed of foremost citizens, it is a foregone conclusion that much care will be displayed in preventing a repetition of the many disappearances reported at other expositions, and which the speaker said amount to thousands each year.

He also said that there were fifty thousand white-slavers in the United States, and the work of offsetting the influences brought to bear on innocent women to lure them to destruction will be the work of the Travelers' Aid during the coming year. In this they will have the assistance of the many auxiliaries formed by the Women's Board, each county looking after part of the work along these lines, until an endless chain has been formed, and the formation of which will mean that it will be almost impossible for the white-slaver to encompass the destruction of any young girl or woman.

DISTRICT CONVENTIONS.

Conventions will be held in the various districts during the coming three months as follows:

San Joaquin District will meet on February 10th, 11th and 12th, at Hanford, with Mrs. H. A. Bates, of Modesto in the chair. The other officers are: Vice-president, Mrs. J. W. Tennant, Coalinga; recording secretary, Mrs. Frank Russell, Modesto; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. W. Wilbur, Modesto.

The Alameda District will meet at Haywards on February 18th, 19th and 20th, Mrs. W. E. Colby presiding. Officers: Vice-president, Mrs. Kate Smith, Richmond; recording secretary, Mrs. Cecil Corwin, Hayward; corresponding secretary, Mrs. L. G. Leonard, Berkeley.

The Northern District will meet in Woodland on March 31st, April 1st and 2nd, Mrs. A. F. Jones, presiding. Officers: Vice-president, Mrs. A. M. Seymour, Sacramento; recording secretary, Mrs. V. S. Wooley, Chico; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Robert Stapleton, Oroville.

Information concerning these conventions can be secured by addressing the corresponding secretary of each district.

NOTES OF THE CLUBS.

The Civic Section, Miss Jennie Partridge Chairman, San Francisco District, was the hostess section to the district at a luncheon given in San Francisco, January 31st. Miss Partridge had invited the president and civic chairman of every civic club in the district, as well as officers and other chairmen as guests. A large attendance testified to the very great attention which is being given to civics at this time, more than fifty clubs participating. Miss Partridge arranged her program to provide for an interchange of ideas in regard to the past and future work of the clubs under her direction, and from the general acceptance of many new ideas advanced, provision was made for a splendid civic year, and co-operation among the civic clubs. The luncheon and get-together movement inaugurated last year by Miss Partridge will probably be followed by other committee-chairmen, and with good results. The decorations for the affair were in the hands of Mrs. Burlingame, chairman, and Mrs. Anbury, assistant, and consisted of garlands of smilax, with violets and jonquils for the tables, these lending themselves admirably to the general color scheme of the dining room. The affair was voted a splendid success, as is usual with affairs conducted by Miss Partridge.

With the idea of affording the girls' high schools students an opportunity to inspect the work of the California artists, now installed in the rooms of the Cap and Bells Club of San Francisco, the club invited the students to be their guests on January 14th, where they spent a very enjoyable afternoon. The club members were assisted in entertaining the girls by the conservatory of music, which furnished an hour's musical program, after which the inspection of the pictures took place. Refreshments were served by Cap and Bells members.

Mrs. A. Hornby, newly-elected president of the Redlands Indian Association, is formulating plans for the teaching of lace-making among the Indians of the various reservations; also for the teaching of gardening among the younger children. It has previously been their plan each year to supply Christmas boxes for the Indians, but they have decided that in future the money provided for the boxes will be expended in providing the necessary teachers to instruct the Indians in useful work. Prizes will be offered the children for the best gardens. At one of the reservations, the teaching of lace-making has been carried on for some time, with good results, and such benefits have been derived, that the women have decided to expend their future efforts with the other reservations in the same direction—that of lace-making, making the work in time pay for itself.

La Mesa Redonda Club of San Francisco, a civic club in the Richmond District, have started to interview the proper officials who might work with them in the eradication of poison oak from the public parks in and around San Francisco. A good part of this year's work will be devoted to this end. The club recently held a Christmas reception for one of the nurseries in the district, the members contributing toys, candies, clothes, linen, etc., for the babies in the home.

Mrs. Lonis Hertz, chairman of social and industrial conditions in the San Francisco District, is responsible for the distribution of the "Oath of the Athenian Youth," having sent it to nearly every organization, both of men and women, in California, as well as to all the schools and churches of different denominations. It reads as follows: "We will never bring disgrace to this, our city, by any act of dishonesty or cowardice, nor ever desert our suffering comrades in the ranks. We will fight for the ideals and sacred things of the city, both alone and with the many. We will revere and obey the city's laws and do our best to incite a like respect and reverence to those above us who are prone to annul or to set them at naught. We will strive unceasingly to quicken the public's sense of civic duty. Thus in all ways we will transmit this, not only, not less, but greater, better and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us." Have you received one of the copies? If not send to Mrs. Lonis Hertz, and she will gladly mail one to you.

The Congress of Mothers of the Second District took place in San Francisco, January 19th, the principal topic discussed being "Hygiene in the Public Schools," the study of which at the present time seeming to have caused an uprising among the mothers of that city. The subjects were as follows: "Hygiene in the Schools," by Dr. D'Ancona; "Hygiene in the Home," by Mrs. W. N. Howell, president of the mothers' clubs organization; "The Necessity for Providing Home Amusements," by Mrs. S. G. Perry; "A City's Milk Supply," by Dr. Adelaide Brown.

A Los Angeles Club—The Evening City Club—is the first to inform itself on the new currency law, having listened to a review thereof by one of the local bankers. This enterprising club arranges monthly suppers for its members, always providing speakers who will deal with local situations of interest. This is good material for the country clubs, as well, as we should all be informed on laws of vital interest to our country.

The Thursday Club of San Mateo held an open meeting during the month, chiefly devoted to a lecture on art. Mrs. Rose V. S. Berry, chairman of art in the San Francisco District, was the speaker, taking for her subject a comparison of the Italian with the Dutch and Flemish art. Mrs. Berry, who is a recognized authority on the subject of art, delighted her audience for two hours with her address, using stereopticon views to illustrate her lecture. Following Mrs. Berry's address was a splendid program provided by the members. The club is studying Spain for this year, and the program was in keeping with this study, Spanish dancing and Spanish songs being rendered. The Spanish national hymn, with an encore of bullfight music, brought forth much applause. Spanish vocal solos by Miss Fletcher, a member of the Thursday Club, were very prettily sung. Refreshments, consisting of Spanish chocolate and Spanish cakes, were served at the conclusion of the program. One feature of the afternoon, which had been long looked forward to, was Mrs. Shuman's presence, but at the last moment, on account of inclement weather and her illness, she was obliged to forego the pleasure of meeting the members of the club, of which she has been a member for many years. However, she sent a greeting replete with good wishes for the welfare of one of her favorite clubs.

"Connecticut Day" was celebrated by the San Francisco colony of New England women, January 16th. Mrs. H. Bostford, vice-president of the club, was hostess of the day, with Mrs. Harvey Fairchild as chairman of program. Mrs. Fairchild's paper on "The Temporary Obligation of Connecticut," and that on "Cantillations" by Mrs. Josephine White formed a very interesting part of the program, as well as anecdotes related by some of the old residents of the "Nutmeg State." This club can always be relied upon to furnish good programs for the members, and for February the president, Mrs. George B. Miller, has arranged for a lecture by Mrs. Frederiek Sanborn, president of the Woman's Board of the P. P. E. E., who will talk on the "Pioneer Mother's Monument."

The Hollywood Woman's Club, Los Angeles District, have gone so far in their efforts to build a clubhouse that they have secured $5000 with which to commence construction. The next month will see the building under way, on the lot which they purchased some time ago. The building will occupy the rear of the lot, leaving space for a large garden, with the idea that this space may later be utilized for an immense auditorium. Fifty members have lately been added to the club's roster, which at the present time numbers about four hundred. A new departure for this club is the organization of a section for the study of parliamentary law, in which many of the members are interested, and which will later redound to the club's interest, going far to make officers perfect in the law of conducting a club. This section is under the direction of Mrs. W. W. Macomber, who is a very competent teacher.

What do you think of a "Children's Day" for your club? This is what the California Club of San Francisco enjoyed during the month, under the direction of Mrs. Slessinger, who is also president of the Juvenile Protective Association. Addresses were made by Mrs. Slessinger and Father Edward Stark of the Paulist Fathers of San Francisco, who cooperate with the Juvenile Association in their work. Mrs. Slessinger told her audience that California was the first State to call for an extension of the age limit over fourteen years. She also told how the association cooperates with the juvenile court and the detention home, and of the many children who had been placed in good homes through the organization. Also of their interest in the medical inspection of working children, and of their watchfulness in the direction of placing the children of poor people at school. They also exercise a strict censorship over the character of post cards now on sale in San Francisco. Father Stark spoke eloquently of the necessity for education in all children, dealing directly with both the education received from the school and the home, particularly the latter. That, in his opinion, is the one that counts most. Mrs. Lillian Stark was present and added to the day's enjoyment by relating some of her personal experiences in one of the city's early kindergartens, maintained in what was known as "south of Market Street." A children's orchestra supplied the dainty touch to the program, the children ranging from six to twelve years, and their program called for unstinted applause. Later exhibition drills were given by the boys from one of the city schools.

The Glendale Tuesday Afternoon Club members were recently entertained by the president, Mrs. Mattison Jones, at an afternoon tea at her home in Glendale. Plans were discussed for a series of evening entertainments, to be arranged for the purpose of raising funds for the new clubhouse, and resulted in three lectures being prepared, as follows: "The High Sierras," "What's Under Your Hat," and "Oriental Rugs." These will all be delivered by men of prominence in the county.

The Redwood City Club, through their civic section, are making plans to restore an old town gymnasium, formerly an old home of Redwood City, and to convert the grounds into a public playground. In this work, they will have the co-operation of the school board, the teachers and the children, and all are now working to secure funds to commence the renovation of the building. Mrs. C. E. Amberson and Mrs. Timothy Guy Phelps are two of the members who are exerting every effort towards establishing the gymnasium and public playground.

The Salinas Civic Club, Mrs. John Parker, president, during the month arranged to have a civic day under the direction of the club, first interesting the public officials of Salinas, who heartily responded to the invitation to be present. Mrs. Andreasen, the newly elected auditor of the San Francisco District, was the first speaker, presenting her experience in settlement work both in San Francisco and New York, and giving a history of such work from its beginning in London down to the present time. Mrs. Andreasen was formerly connected with an east side settlement house in New York, and gave her personal experience, also speaking of the personal work of Miss Lillian Wald, a wealthy young woman who had given up an established position in society to undertake settlement work, dedicating their time, health and strength and wealth in efforts calculated to assist the unfortunate people to ways of better living, as well as providing means of education for the children. Mrs. Andreasen also devoted some time to her experiences in the settlement house on Telegraph Hill in San Francisco, that conducted by Miss Ashe, and in which she has the co-operation of many of the society clubwomen of the city. Mrs. Richmond Wheeler also spoke of the work performed by the Tamalpais Center Woman's Club, and also of Mrs. Kent, in supporting the Kentfield neighborhood house of that district. She said there are twenty-one social settlements in California. Miss Ora Cupp, who spent two years at Hull house with Miss Jane Adams, also presented her experience in this line of work.

The Salinas Club has a treat in store for the members on February 21st, the president having arranged for a lecture by Dr. Mariana Bertola, district chairman of health in San Francisco District, who will address the women on public sanitation. The mention of Dr. Bertola's name on a program always means a large attendance, and we anticipate for them a very enjoyable and instructive afternoon.

The laying of the cornerstone of the Santa Monica Woman's Clubhouse was postponed, owing to unforeseen circumstances having arisen. It will probably take place during February. They have arranged a very good year's program, not the least being a dramatic reading by Miss Lillian Quinn Stark, "Lucky Pehr," which took place on January 19th.

A State Executive Board meeting was held January 17th, at the California Club, San Francisco. Mrs. James W. Orr, presiding. Representatives from all the districts were present, thirteen members of the board participating in the work of the meeting. Reports of the district presidents were presented and acted upon, those with conventions near at hand outlining the work proposed to be taken up by them. Mrs. Perry L. Shuman has so far recovered from her illness that she was able to be present, much to the gratification of the board, with whom she is a prime favorite. Mrs. Edson of Los Angeles was also present, and rendered a splendid report on work recently taken up by her in person.

Dancing sections are being formed in many of the clubs, chief among them being Cap and Bells and Papyrus, San Francisco. Exhibition dances are given occasionally by the latter club, illustrating the proficiency of the members in the tango and other popular dances. Cap and Bells gave a soiree d'ansant on January 20th at Native Sons' Hall, this affair being arranged for the husbands of the fair members of the club, and proved the same success as all the other affairs of the club. Mrs. Colburn has inaugurated many new ideas during her administration, and her latest is meeting with much appreciation from the members.

Mesa Redonda Club of San Francisco held an open meeting of their popular club during the month, with the Treble Clef Club supplying the greater part of the program. Mrs. A. Laumeister had charge of the program.

Mrs. Rose V. S. Berry is continuing her travel talks at the Channing Auxiliary, choosing for her topic in January, "The Problems of Elizabeth, the Virgin Queen."

The Twentieth Century Club (Alameda District) prepared an interesting lecture for its members last month, the speaker being Rev. H. J. Loken, with "The Land of the Midnight Sun" as his topic. Music followed.

W. C. Morrow, the California author, recently appeared before the California Club with the subject, "The Philosophical Aspect of the Feminist Movement," comparing the grandmas of yesterday and today, and showing the latter's part in the world's work of today.

ORGANIZE TO PROTECT TRAVELING WOMEN DURING EXPOSITION.

San Francisco—A preliminary meeting for the organization of a non-political, non-sectarian Travelers' Aid of California, formulated along the lines of the Travelers' Aid of New York, was held here January 14th. The call was issued jointly by the women of the Panama-Pacific Exposition and the Y.W.C.A., they realizing the necessity of greater protection to traveling women during the Exposition year.

The Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West were the only fraternal bodies asked to be present at this meeting, and were represented, respectively, by Hon. John F. Davis, Grand Second Vice-president, and Mrs. Ariana W. Stirling, Past Grand President. Among those present were Bishop Hanna, Bishop Hughes, Rev. Mr. Benson (who represented Bishop Nichols), Rahhi Meyer, Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, Wm. H. Crocker, a representative each from the Southern Pacific, Western Pacific, Santa Fe, Chamber of Commerce, insurance companies, bankers, Commonwealth Club, Y.W.C.A., Y.M.C.A., and Mrs. Fred G. Sanborn of the exposition women, who presided.

To Hon. John F. Davis was accorded the honor of being made chairman of the committee on constitution and by-laws. The permanent organization and election of officers will be held in the near future.

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

THIS TIME OF THE YEAR ONE turns to the new plays for hints of the coming modes. The gowns recently displayed on the stage show a considerable increase of fullness in the skirts. Even when they seem to cling scant about the ankles, the material is curved and laid in concealed plaits or lapped in a manner that allows perfect ease of movement.

Charming combination of color is shown in a Poirer gown of champagne-velvet trimmed with yellow fox. Three large sprays of black velvet flowers form the corsage decoration. Another scheme comprised a gown of ruby-colored velvet with a flaring tunic of grey tulle heavily embroidered in silver. In each case, shoes and stockings matched the color of the dress.

There are lavish and interesting suggestions of summer. A sweet frock of white foulard silk, big-spotted with black, is made with a straight skirt with the fullness gathered at the waist line, and slightly puckered at one side into a movement of drapery. Over it was a full tunic of white mouseline de soie, edged with a thick rucbing of white silk. A white frilled collar and white sleeves, with the addition of a wide belt of red ribbon tied with short sash ends, completed this charming little frock.

The Latest Fancy.

For street gowning, elephant-gray and night-blue are predominating colors in the few costumes of vivid that are now occupying the attention of the designers. These dresses are made of soft and shining broadcloth, light mixed woollens, and silks of all sorts. Plaid effects will be prominent in entire gowns and in waistcoats, helts, wide collars and tunics.

Half long coats, with tremendous flare at the hem, are the latest fancy. There are many variations of this coat. One recently seen was cut on the lines of a Russian peasant's house, was made of serge cloth, loose and straight. The body part ended at the edge of the hips, and to it was attached the full skirt, laid in large, flat plaits and trimmed at the hem with a deep band of fur that caused it to hang in an extremely voluminous manner. The collar, flat and square, reached across the back only.

While built now of winter materials and heavily trimmed with fur, these coats, strikingly new in form and already accepted, will be copied for spring wear in silk, satin and cloth, and trimmed with feather bands, rucbed and plaited trimmings.

Fur Trimmings Still in Demand.

A novel feature on the eternal kimono jacket is a half-belt, laid loosely across the back. The ends pass through slits on the sides, to fasten underneath. Only slightly does it control the fullness. These, and other new coats, have no closing of any sort; they bang wide open from the shoulders, exposing the whole corsage.

As the season advances, there is not the slightest diminution in the rage for fur trimmings. On an elegant evening gown worn at a recent opening night, a thread-like line of sable fur was used as shoulder straps on a lacy corsage, and the narrow belt of bright cerise silk was edged, top and bottom, with the line of fur.

In suits for spring wear, such types as are designated as semi-tailored are largely predominant, the strictly tailored suit not being sufficiently flexible, in line of style, to meet the present fashion's ideal. This being the case, there is more diversity in style allowed as to coat lengths, sleeve mannerisms, tails, peplums, collars and belts, than if a certain criterion could be set. In the imported models seen, we notice this wide variety.

"Sports" Coat the Newest.

There is a tendency toward shorter coats, in most cases affecting the tunic and tiered skirt, as well as the draped modes, which still continue calling for some shortness in the upper garment. Many of the advance models shown now are of an extreme shortness—on the bolero order—hardly reaching to a somewhat higher waistline in front, and often fitted with some tail-like appendage in the back.

Or again, the coat will have short lines in front, to harmonize with a tunic or tiered skirt, and then be cut in tapering outlines toward the back, in something of a cutaway fashion.

The sleeves are set on a very long shoulder line, coming well down on the arm. This sleeve, as we all know, has been much used, both here and in Paris, and is capable of a wide variety of forms, the point being that it extends from the collar at the top of the shoulder in some set-in form.

The sleeves seen in the newest "sports" coat for spring are mostly of a very wide order under the arm, many following the bat-wing outline, where the sleeve springs out from the waist at the belt line. Some of these coats show the low belt line below the hip. One sample shown was of pale, pinkish cream color, with sleeves of this order extending down to the run-in back, and worn with black patent-leather belt at hip. This material is so soft and flexible that no clumsiness resulted.

Separate Coats Well Liked.

Both on suits and dresses, we see the new type of collar—standing slightly away from the throat, in a loose, upturned manner at each side of the neck. It is to be noted, too, that coats and other garments are beginning to show modest yokes, sometimes only in back, or only in front.

Some skirts also show a slight tendency in the same direction, where the yoke effect may be produced by the setting on of the popular skirt tunic, not at the waist or belt line, but about four inches below it. The skirt tunics are made of rather scant flounces, in circular shapes, fitting at the top, with a flounce below. The minaret tunic is somewhat longer and more flaring.

Separate coats are very well liked, and the spring wardrobe must contain one of the new novelty cotton "sport" garments to be complete. Here, too, the very latest types are being cut on lines where there is to be detected a flare at the bottom, rather than the pulled-in style of the autumn. This, however, is only to be noted in a garment here and there, the close lines still influencing most women. The "sport" coat reaches to the knee in length, though some of the advance styles come to just below the hip line.

Peplums Much in Use.

Some lovely, bright-colored silk sweaters are being shown in the shops which are both attractive and cheery in the extreme. Such colors as cerise, orange, red, cinnamon brown, yellow and terra-cotta are included in this list, and the sweaters will be found just the thing for slipping on over thin afternoon frocks when the sun has set.

Many of the waists that are used as part of dresses are made with peplum, especially if the skirt is plain or only slightly draped. In simple morning dresses the peplum is plain, usually dropping a little toward the back. In dresses of crepe de chine or soft silk, the side or accordion plaited peplums are very pretty and easily handled, for the real work on them is done by the plaiter.

For afternoon dresses, the Japanese neck is becoming very popular, because the hand, standing away from the shoulders and the little soft fichu of frill-trimmed net are extremely becoming.

Waists for Evening Gowns.

In the afternoon suit, the waist is either one of the new waistcoat blouses, a tuxedo waist, or a blouse of self-colored chiffon over lace and net, made with a jumper or bib section of the skirt material.

The waists are also very much used for evening gowns in which the lower part of the dress is of brocade and the shoulders are veiled with net or chiffon. It is an arrangement that allows you to bring white or flesh-color, in a thin material, next to the face and neck, and use as heavy a material and as brilliant a color as you like in the skirt and bib.

The neck arrangements have not changed, for there is always a "V" opening at the throat.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kingdon are native Californians, the former being a past president of Golden Anchor Parlor, N.S.G.W., as well as District Deputy Grand President. They have hosts of friends in La Porte, where they will reside, and where they are extremely popular.

The women up in Smokey Canyon are so far away they never see the new styles. But they dress more becoming than any other women in this county.

When a woman kills the father of her children a defending herself it's a terrible murder; it isn't nice and reverent. But if he kills her there's some good reason for it outside of the drinks.

Zekel always throws the paper all over the room when he's done with it, and when he wants it again he always says, "I'd like to know what in the world you've done with that paper."

The Bilde says the Lord made the woman to help the man. The Lord knew he'd need her fast enough, mostly about meal time, and to find that paper.

Helf Jones had a way of swearin' at his wife. She took it so sweet. She 'lowed he couldn't help it. She died this morning.

No, Bub, I don't like the women better'n the men. Men can do things easier; but they know it, Bub, and they don't use chivalry enough.

What's chivalry? Well, you can't understand all about it, but it's like Zekel out there taking care of my lily plants 'cause I can't get out in this wet weather. He don't have to do it.

Kitty May's husband is always sluttin' round admiring her, and she's awful happy and smiling, but he don't more than half support her nor buy her clothes.

Susan's husband provides good, everything a woman wants, but he never says "dearie," and she's desperate miserable all the time. Them two men need trimming and fixin' somehow.

Lottie Ann wrote some poetry. This is it:

STANDING ROOM ONLY— YEAR'S PROSPECTS BRIGHT.

Alameda—January 14th will always be known as one of the largest and best attended meetings of Alameda Parlor, No. 47, N.S.G.W., the occasion being the visit of Grand Trustee Jo V. Snyder of Nevada City and the installation of officers for the ensuing term. Fully 150 members of the Order were present, and the reception to the visiting grand officer was most impressive. It began immediately on his arrival in Alameda, when he was met at the Park-street depot by the members of the Parlor and the Alameda Parlor band. As the train pulled into the depot, the band struck up "I Love You, California." The Grand Trustee and other visitors were then seated in automobiles and the procession started down Park street to Native Sons' Hall. On arrival there the meeting was opened and the "standing room only" sign hung out, as the large hall was filled to capacity. During the evening, two candidates were initiated, the ceremonies being conducted by the newly-elected officers. Much praise was bestowed on the new officers by Brother Snyder for the excellent exemplification of the Order's ritualistic ceremonies.

Later in the evening the officers were installed by D.D.G.P. William O'Connor of Claremont Parlor of Oakland, one of the most prominent and capable district deputies in the Order; too much praise cannot be given him for his remarkable efforts, as he came before the Parlor with his several charges to the various officers committed to memory and delivered them without the slightest hesitation. It also boasts of a lively Native Sons' band of twenty-eight pieces, all members of the Parlor. The band boys are planning on many trips this coming summer, to visit Parlors in the country towns. Great good is accomplished in this way to create that Native Son spirit that should be manifested between Parlors. Much is expected of the new officers, and unless all signs fail, the Parlor will enjoy a most prosperous term. Its officers are attentive to their duties, meetings are largely attended, and the spirit of loyalty is supreme among the members.

Resumes Official Visits.

Grass Valley—Alison F. Watt of this city, Grand President, has resumed her official visits to Subordinate Parlors, following her holiday rest. Tuesday, January 6th, she was the guest of Fern Parlor, No. 123, Folsom; Wednesday, of Gold of Ophir Parlor, No. 190, Oroville; Thursday afternoon of Placer Parlor, No. 138, Lincoln; Thursday evening, of Marysville Parlor, No. 162; Saturday, Feather River Parlor, No. 173, Nicolaus. The week of January 11th, the following visits were made: Monday, Calistoga Parlor, No. 145; Tuesday, Argonaut Parlor, No. 168, Oakland; Wednesday, Gabrielle Parlor, No. 139, San Francisco; Friday, Twin Peaks Parlor, No. 185, San Francisco.

In all places, Mrs. Watt was accorded an enthusiastic welcome, and her words of greeting, coupled with interesting reports of the Order's work and progress, were received with attention and approval. Receptions and banquets were of daily and nightly occurrence, and the Grand President added many new admirers to her already large list of friends.

Modesto Girls Busy.

Modesto—The following officers of Morada Parlor, No. 199, were installed January 5th by Past Grand President Mamie G. Peyton of Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, Stockton, acting as District Deputy Grand President and assisted by Margaret Ford of Joaquin Parlor, acting as grand marshal: Nellie Dunlap, past president; Cora Schafer, president; Mary Newport, first vice-president; Maggie Cadrett, second vice-president; Katherine Hunsucker, third vice-president; Ethel Sorenson, recording secretary; Marian Newman, marshal; Mabel Cleaveland, Louise Chase, Mary Morehead, trustees; Rose Briggs, organist; Lucy Boen, outside sentinel; Kate Gillette, inside sentinel. After the installation, a banquet was served, at which several new toasts were responded to and splendid speeches were made by Mamie G. Peyton, Cora Schafer and Mary Swan.

January 14th, twenty-five members of the Parlor journeyed to Stockton in a special car on the electric railroad, to attend the installation of the officers of Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, of that city. After the installation, a fine banquet was served. Long after midnight the jolly party moved to adjourn, and the Morada daughters started on their homeward journey, arriving in Modesto at 2:30 a.m. Everyone agreed that they had a jolly good time, and are looking forward for an opportunity to again be the guests of Joaquin Parlor.

December 19th, the first anniversary ball of Morada Parlor was held, 100 couples responding to the invitations. All made themselves at home, and spent an enjoyable evening. The floor committee consisted entirely of members of the Parlor, and saw to it that everyone was made acquainted; ragging was strictly prohibited. This was the first time that any attempt had been made to decorate the Auditorium, where the dance was held, and the big place was made attractive with red and green streamers and Christmas bells. The committee in charge—Ethel Sorenson (chairman), Eva Dunlap, Katherine Hunsucker, Mabel Cleaveland, Maggie Cadrett, Nellie Dunlap and Mary Newport—is deserving of great credit for its efforts.

Among the many amusing and ingenious methods confessed to were: "Doing my husband," selling dry goods, doing laundry work, literary stunts, pressing suits, selling sacks and scrap iron, cooking, baking and scrubbing. GROW MORALLY MOST BY HELPING OTHERS

(By DR. MARIANA BERTOLA, Past Grand President, N.D.G.W.)

San Francisco—The Board of Relief, Grand Parlor, N.D.G.W., held its annual meeting January 9th, when the following resolutions of respect were passed:

Whereas, That as ever, "in the midst of Life we are in Death," and one by one we are summoned to the Grand Parlor of immortality, and

Whereas, The All-Father has chosen from our Board of Relief our respected and beloved member, Anna F. Lacy; be it

Resolved, That we bow in submission to Him Who doeth all things well, and Who has taken a worthy representative of our Order as she stood far what is highest in integrity, charity, and in Christian womanhood—a choice spirit worthy the exalted position to which she has been called.

Resolved, That this expression of the Board of Relief of the Grand Parlor, N.D.G.W., be spread upon our mingles and a copy sent to the family of the sister. We condole with them in the assurance that their loved one was so fully prepared to be received into the Heavenly Home.

CLARA K. WITTENMYER, Secretary.

The Board elected the following officers to serve for the coming year: Dr. Mariana Bertola, president; Miss Elizabeth Douglass, vice-president; Miss Clara K. Wittenmyer, secretary; Mrs. Carrie R. Durham, treasurer; Directors: Miss Minnie Coulter, Miss Stella Finkledey, Miss Kate McGough, Mrs. Louise W. Morris, Mrs. Anna Monroe, Mrs. Addie Mosher. Power of attorney for N.S.G.W. hall stock, Miss Kate McGough; chairman of the Home Committee, Mrs. Genevieve W. Baker; assistant secretary, Mrs. J. A. Steinbach. The Board elected Mrs. Addie Mosher, Piedmont Parlor, No. 87, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Miss Lacy.

The Board also fixed the rates that will prevail at the Home: Board and lodging, use of parlor and laundry, and use of telephone, for four dollars a week. The Alta room is exceptionally well furnished, and occupants of this room will be charged five dollars a week. For transients, one night and breakfast, one dollar; dinner, 50c; luncheon, 35c; breakfast, 25c. Any Native Daughter in good standing in the Order, in need of assistance and unable to pay the rates, will have special rates made for her. Grand President Alison F. Watt is a member of the Board, through legislation; the Board extends to her the use of the best room in the Home during her stay in San Francisco.

The following donations have been received: Donner Parlor, one dozen linen towels; Mrs. Mary Leahy, a member of Sans Souci Parlor, two dozen towels; Joaquin Parlor, $5 for the Home and $3 for the relief fund; Las Lomas Parlor, $5; Alta Parlor, $60; Mrs. Bloom, Grand Outside Sentinel, $5; Tejon Parlor, six dozen towels; Mrs. Anna Thusen, one load wood.

The Board is especially grateful for the cash donations at this time, when so many bills are due. Thanks to the donors, the Home is now well equipped with linen, tableware and kitchen utensils. Wood, coal and groceries will be very acceptable.

The Board will put on a theater benefit at the Gaiety, February 3rd. Marie Dresslar will be the drawing card; her wit and genius in comedy are well known, and all who attend will be well repaid by an enjoyable evening, and assist the N.D.G.W. as well. The Home will receive forty per cent of the value of the tickets the Native Daughters sell.

May we all endeavor to make this Home a success, and stand together to make it of some use to our sisters. We grow morally most, when we help other lives. Ruskin said long ago: "That country is the richest which nourishes the greatest number of noble and happy beings; that man is richest who,

RAIN NO DETERRENT—

PLENTY DOING THIS MONTH.

Fresno—At the regular meeting of Fresno Parlor, No. 187, N.D.G.W., the officers were installed by D.D.G.P. Cora B. Van Meter. There was a good attendance and every officer-elect was present to be installed. The new president, Nancy J. Brander, called the Parlor to order and then presented the D.D.G.P., who is also retiring past president, with a beautiful bouquet of carnations and the official pin of the Parlor. At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the Native Sons of Fresno Parlor, No. 25, appeared, and a banquet was enjoyed. It had been prepared by the losers in a recent membership contest. The Parlor has begun preparations for its fourth annual Valentine ball on February 14th. The members will have the pleasure of entertaining the Grand President on Saturday, February 7th.

About twenty officers and members of Fresno Parlor accompanied the D.D.G.P., Cora B. Van Meter, to Dinuba to exemplify the ritual and assist in the installation ceremonies at Dinuba Parlor, No. 201. The girls left Fresno at 5:30 in an open auto bus; it was threatening rain, but nothing daunted, on they went, and arrived at 8 o'clock in a steady downpour, which continued until late next day. After installation, the guests were escorted to a nearby restaurant, where supper was served at a late hour. The girls were not prepared for the night, "but they should worry," so stayed at the hotel, most of them three in a bed, and came back on the 8 a.m. train, a tired but jolly crowd.

TELLS OF ORDER'S WORK.

Vallejo—December 17th, Vallejo Parlor, No. 195, N.D.G.W., received an official visit from Grand President Alison F. Watt, who found the Parlor in a flourishing condition, especially in finances, and the members looking forward to the Admission Day celebration in Vallejo in September. The visitor gave an interesting talk on home industries, the N. D. G. W. Home, and the homeless children's work, and at the banquet table favored with an original poem on "California." During her visit in Vallejo, Mrs. Watt was the guest of Verna Berry, D.D.G.P., a granddaughter of a Pioneer of Grass Valley.

PLEASED BY GENEROUS SPIRIT.

Sebastopol—The last official act of J. S. Saunders as president of Sebastopol Parlor, No. 143, N.S.G.W., was to have the Parlor act upon the communication from the Board of Grand Officers urging financial assistance for the Pioneer Mother's statue. Without a dissenting vote, the Parlor's share of the $5000 suggested to be contributed by the Order was appropriated, and the president announced it was, to him, the most pleasing thing the Parlor had done during his term of office.

GOOD SUGGESTIONS WILL BE ADOPTED.

Salinas—Judge John F. Davis of San Francisco, Grand Second Vice-president, N.S.G.W., paid an official visit to Santa Lucia Parlor, No. 97, January 19th, and highly complimented the exemplification of the ritual. He also told the members many interesting things concerning the Order, and offered some good suggestions that will be taken advantage of. D.D.G.P. Frank Fontes installed the officers.

Native Sons of the Golden West

GREETINGS

FROM THE GRIZZLY BEAR CLUB.

To the brethren of the Order, resident outside of San Francisco: When the members of the Order in San Francisco solicited the aid of the membership outside of San Francisco for funds to erect our new hall, it was promised that the interior members would have a home when they came to San Francisco. We are happy to say that this promise has been fulfilled.

The officers and directors of the Grizzly Bear Club are pleased to inform the brothers of the Parlor outside of San Francisco that they are all members of our club, and that our beautiful club-rooms in the N.S.G.W. building, 414 Mason street, are there for them whenever they visit our city. If you haven't a membership card, write the secretary and one will be promptly forwarded to you.

You will please the San Francisco members by making every use possible of the club-rooms.

Fraternally,

HENRY G. W. DINKELSPIEL,
President.

EDWARD TIETJEN,
Secretary.

San Francisco, California.

Reviews Term's Work.

Merced—At the regular meeting of Yosemite Parlor, No. 24, January 13th, D.D.G.P. Manuel Thomas installed the following officers for the ensuing term: Past president, P. R. Murray; president, D. K. Stoddard; first vice-president, C. R. Roduner; second vice-president, James Leonard; third vice-president, Morton Hamblly; marshal, Manuel Thomas; outside sentinel, Luther Hannah; inside sentinel, C. Merino; trustee, M. Davilla. The outgoing president, P. R. Murray, read the following report of progress and events during his term: "The past six months as the president of our Parlor have indeed been a very pleasant period of my life. There are things I've left behind that I am proud of, and there are things that I didn't accomplish that I would like to have done. Only four members were brought into the Parlor, but thanks to the spirit of our 'Home Coming,' there are many applications on file that will receive attention by our newly-installed president. We have had very few sick brothers, and consequently a great deal has not gone out of our treasury for sick benefits; we can be duly thankful in this regard. One death has marred my term; our late brother, Charle H. Dean, whom we all respected and thought so much of, passed away November 14, 1913.

"Reviewing some of the things we have accomplished might be mentioned: Our participation in the Admission Day celebration at Oakland by opening headquarters at Hotel Crellin, something that we haven't done in years; and there is no reason why we shouldn't do the same thing in the future, and especially in 1915. October 20th, Brother A. W. Oliver, on behalf of our Parlor, presented Mr. and Mrs. George W. Yoakum a Bear Flag on their fiftieth wedding anniversary. November 11th, we celebrated our thirtieth institution anniversary by a 'Home Coming' of practically the entire membership; this was a grand success, and far exceeded our expectations; that night we had with us Past Grand President Wm. Conley, who used to be a member of our Parlor, Grand Trustee Jo V. Snyder, and many old members who hadn't been to lodge for many moons. The last event to be celebrated was the outgoing of 1913 and the incoming of 1914 with an entertainment and banquet. The prospects for 1914 loom very bright, and especially so, with our newly-installed president, D. K. Stoddard, in the chair. Altogether, the past six months have been of profit and pleasant memories to me, thanks to those who have been so earnest and faithful to my bidding. I shall always be willing to do anything, to the best of my ability, to further the interest and progress of Yosemite Parlor No. 24."

Create Organizer Fund.

Los Angeles—Members of the local Parlor have recovered from the strenuous days of "Hangtown," and gotten down to the regular routine. Interest in the Order is on the increase, as evidenced by the large attendance at the meetings, particularly those of Ramona Parlor, No. 109. In this, as well as Los Angeles Parlor, No. 45, there is initiation every meeting night, and Corona Parlor, No. 196, also, is slowly but surely increasing its membership. Up to the 15th of January, 117 members had been initiated in the local Parlor since June 1st of last year.

During the past month, the officers of the four Parlor were installed, Ray Golding becoming president of Los Angeles 45, Irving Baxter of Ramona 109, Arthur Polaski of Corona 196, and Ed Ferrer of La Fiesta 236. D.D.G.P. Harry G. Folsom officiated at the ceremonies in Los Angeles, Corona and La Fiesta Parlor, while D.D.G.P. Josiah F. Lyon installed Ramona's officers.

In order to keep an organizer in the local field, Los Angeles, Ramona and La Fiesta Parlor have created an organizer's revolving fund, into which will be placed half the fee paid by initiates. The fund, as well as the organizer, will be under the jurisdiction of an advisory committee made up of one representative of each of the Parlor. As a nucleus for the fund, these Parlor have paid in one-half the initiation fees received from June 1st to January 15th. There is an unlimited field for new members here, and successful efforts on the part of an organizer would, under the arrangement agreed upon, extend the membership campaign indefinitely. Corona Parlor, while not a party to this agreement, has an organizer in the person of one of its own members, who has been working successfully along this same line.

Extension Committee Extends Membership.

San Francisco—The thirty Subordinate Parlor of this city held a joint class initiation, at Native Sons' Hall, December 27th, one hundred and fifty candidates being initiated into the Order by the degree team of National Parlor. After the initiation services, Henry Huber sang several songs, and addresses were made by Grand President Thomas Monahan, Grand Second Vice-president John F. Davis and Harry I. Mulerevy, chairman of the San Francisco Extension Committee. This class initiation is the second big event held recently in San Francisco, under the auspices of the new Extension Committee.

It is proposed by the committee to hold, from time to time, public entertainments at which prominent Native Sons and others will discourse

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

Attention is called to the inauguration in this issue of a Professional and Business Directory of members of the Order, which it is believed will be appreciated by members throughout the State.

While this Directory, to be found on another page, is confined this month to Los Angeles members, it is hoped to extend its operation to every place where there is a Parlor of Native Sons.

This Directory is made up purely of cards, which cannot, in any sense, be classed as advertisements, and hence cannot be objected to by any who "do not advertise." General advertisements will not be accepted for this department.

While the Directory will, of course, be revenue producing for the publication, its chief value is to the membership, for it will not only make their business or profession known but will furnish information often sought by members in one locality in reference to those of another locality.

This Directory is designed simply as a convenience, will be confined exclusively to members of the Order, and the cards will be classified as to business or profession. It is of no value to general advertisers, either in or out of the Order.

The Grizzly Bear has made a special rate for cards in this Directory, and solicits the patronage thereof of members, no matter where located. When the number of cards from any one place justifies, they will be placed under a separate heading of that place, as has been done in the case of Los Angeles. Otherwise, the name of the place will be inserted in each separate card. The contents of any card must be limited to the information contained in the cards in this issue.

on the romantic history of California, also to enlighten the public generally, and native Californians in particular, as to the true principles and purposes of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, and thus endeavor to encourage all native Californians, who are not members of the Order, to enroll themselves under the banner of the N.S.G.W. The Extension Committee is composed of all Past Grand Presidents, grand officers, members of the Board of Appeals, District Deputy Grand Presidents, and five delegates from each of the Subordinate Parlor of the Order located in San Francisco.

January 9th, officers of the committee were elected for the ensuing year, and as a keen, but friendly rivalry was manifest, a spirited contest took place for all the offices. The incumbent president, Harry I. Mulerevy, City and County Clerk, under the rules of the committee became the junior past president and ex-officio chairman of the executive committee.

Plan to Build Hall.

Fresno—As the first step toward the erection of a hall in this city, Fresno Parlor, No. 25, at its meeting December 26th, appointed a committee consisting of J. B. Daly, Russell Uhler and Grand Trustee W. F. Toomey to select a building site in the downtown district. As soon as a site is approved by the members, active steps will be taken toward erecting a permanent home for the Parlor.

January 9th, D.D.G.P. Grover B. Hill installed the following officers, many visitors being present from near-by Parlor: J. W. Cappleman, past president; Ed. Victor, president; Sol Peiser, first vice-president; H. W. Bnsh, second vice-president; F. M. Lane, third vice-president; L. T. Gourget, marshal; J. B. Daly, treasurer; F. J. Salcedo, financial secretary; F. E. Kaiser, recording secretary; G. W. Pickford, inside sentinel; W. W. Corcoran, outside sentinel; L. M. DeShields, trustee. A social session followed.

Chances Good.

Santa Cruz—Fremont Parlor, No. 44 (Hollister) and Watsonville Parlor, No. 65 officers, in the second of a series of ritualistic contests held during December, failed to overcome the lead of Santa Cruz Parlor, No. 90, and the local Parlor, for the second time, won the trophy. A third series will be held, probably in May, and should Santa Cruz again be successful, the beautiful silver cup will be its permanent trophy.

Banquet Follows Installation.

Sau Francisco—Installation night was celebrated by Bay City Parlor, No. 104, in its usual splendid manner. D.D.G.P. Albert Picard of Yerba Buena Parlor, No. 84, assisted by Past President Wm. Hamilton acting as grand marshal, delivered the installation ceremony in his usual impressive manner, and installed the following officers: Past president, S. Bornstein; president, Edgar J. Israel; first vice president, Geo. F. Schlaich; second vice president, D. C. Moses; third vice president, Stanley L. Groom; marshal, Samuel Stern; inside sentinel, Norton L. Pozwanski; outside sentinel, Wm. Carman; trustee, M. E. Licht. After the meeting, visitors and members repaired upstairs to the Grizzly Bear club-rooms and used for the first time the magnificent pergola of the club, where a splendid repast was enjoyed. Past President Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, on behalf of the Parlor, presented to Junior Past President Wm. Hamilton a magnificent golden badge, emblematic of the Order. It was a late hour when the assemblage dispersed.

A Memorable Occasion.

Oroville—The annual ball of Argonaut Parlor, No. 8, was held in the Exposition building January 9th. Heretofore this has been a New Year event, but owing to inclement weather had to be postponed. The postponement did not work to the disadvantage of the affair, however, as it proved the season's most brilliant social success. The usual New Year festivities were enjoyed, serpentine and tin-horns enlivening the occasion. The decorations were novel and attractive, and each dancer was given a beautiful program and badge as souvenirs of a memorable occasion. Many visitors were present from Chico and Marysville.

Wall Flowers Can View Tango.

San Francisco—The annual ball of Stanford Parlor, No. 76, always a decided event in local social circles, will be held February 20th, and will be on a more elaborate scale than ever before. Guests will be limited to 500, and the affair will be strictly full evening dress. That they may look down upon the entrancing scene below, "wall flowers" will be planted in the gallery. The handsome auditorium of Native Sons' Hall will be used for the occasion, and no expense will be spared in its decoration. The tango will not be forbidden, it is announced; in fact, several Stanfords are said to be taking private lessons in the popular step.

Gaze Upon Old Relic.

Oakland—After the officers elect of Claremont Parlor, No. 240, had shown themselves proficient in the ritualistic work, by initiating a large class of candidates, they were duly installed by D.D.G.P. Frank McCarty of Bay View Parlor, No. 238, in a manner very creditable. Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung was present and highly complimented all on the manner in which the work was done, and made an able address which included much good advice to the new members as well as the older ones. A banquet followed, in the preparation of which the committee outdid any former efforts; during its course, W. L. Forrest, as director, presented to retiring Past President A. M. Stokes, a beautiful past president's badge. Brother Stokes was visibly affected, by reason of the unusual circumstances in connection with the presentation, and had hard work to make a connected response. After a number had made remarks, he produced an old thirteen-star American flag, a relic of the early days of our State; in 1864 it was carried in a torchlight ratification meeting at North San Juan, Nevada County, on the re-election of Abraham Lincoln, and was used in 1865 at Freeman's Crossing at the mock funeral procession after the assassination of that revered man by John Wilkes Booth at Washington, D. C. It is badly tattered and plainly shows its age. Brother Stokes intends to place it in the museum, that all Natives may gaze on it.

Claremont entertained the members of Argonaut Parlor, No. 166, N.D.G.W., with a banquet and dance, in accordance with the usual exchange of courtesies between the two Parlors. A most delightful time was enjoyed and they kept the ball rolling till a late hour.

Lecture on California History.

Stockton—The big masquerade ball given by the Stockton Native Sons' 1915 Admission Day Boosters' Committee at Masonic Auditorium, New Year's Eve, was one grand success. Although the skies unloosened and it rained torrents, the Auditorium was packed from 9 o'clock in the evening, when the grand march started, until the orchestra sounded the strains of "Good-bye Everybody" for the last dance at 2 a.m. As a result, $252 has been added to the 1915 parade features fund. Over 250 gaily costumed couples participated in the grand march, which was headed by Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Manthey, richly robed as king and queen of the ball. Masters Jack and Walter Meyer, twin grandsons of Mrs. Caddie Salix, a prominent Stockton Native Daughter, were Queen Mamie's pages and gracefully bore her train. King Charles, by the way, when not wearing the crown and scepter, is the energetic president of the Stockton Chamber of Commerce and is active in the ranks of the Native Sons. Queen Mamie is an earnest worker in Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, N.D.G.W. The royal couple led the grand march across the stage between a searchlight of high power and a transparent curtain, casting silhouettes of all descriptions—fantastic, graceful and grotesque—on the screen. Just on the hour of midnight, Miss Dolly Castles, prima donna of the "Tik-Tok-Man of Oz," was introduced by Acting Mayor Denis J. O'Keefe and the entire audience joined her in singing "I Love You, California," as a greeting to the new year. It was a never-to-be-forgotten scene. The judges had a hard time deciding on the prize winners, so varied and original were the costumes.

V. E. Kohler of Sunset Parlor, No. 26, and George J. Kromer of Sacramento Parlor, No. 3, came over from the Capital City, January 19th, and entertained the members of Stockton Parlor, No. 7, with a splendid stereopticon lecture on early California history. This was given as the opening number of a series of talks by Native Sons on various phases of California history. Stockton Parlor means to set aside a meeting every month or so to an entertainment of this nature. Brothers Kohler and Kromer are not professional lecturers, but they have become greatly interested in early California history and during vacation seasons in the past few years have collected something over 130 photographs which they have made into lantern slides to illustrate their lecture.

F. H. McLachlan, D.D.G.P., of Lodi, installed officers of Stockton Parlor, January 5th, the list being as published in the last issue of The Grizzly Bear. Immediately following the installation, Walter McLachlan, who has served as marshal so efficiently for many years, tendered his resignation. McLachlan has been appointed on the Stockton police force, and his duties as "copper" will not permit him to attend all the Parlor sessions. Inside Sentinel George J. Fox has been unanimously elected to succeed McLachlan. A contest is now on for inside sentinel.

GRAND PARLOR, N. S. G. W. OFFICIAL NOTICE

IN THE BOARD OF APPEALS OF THE GRAND PARLOR, NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST.

RAMONA PARLOR NO. 109, N.S.G.W.)
vs.) Appeal No. 7.
J. Paul Kiefer.)

In this case an appeal was taken to this Board by Brother J. Paul Kiefer of Ramona Parlor, No. 109, from the action of Ramona Parlor, at its regular meeting on October 10, 1913, in adopting an amendment to the By-laws of said Parlor, striking out Article VIII thereof. Brother Fred Stephenson, a member of the Board of Appeals, being a member of Ramona Parlor, No. 109, N.S.G.W., did not participate in the hearing.

Article VIII of the By-laws of Ramona Parlor provided for the payment of sick and funeral benefits, and it is the contention of the appellant that under Sections 1 and 2 of Article VIII of the Constitution of Subordinate Parlor, a Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West must make some provision in its By-laws for sick and funeral benefits, and that the amount provided for must be stated and substantial. Sections 1 and 2 of Article VIII of the Constitution of Subordinate Parlor, provide as follows:

"Section 1. Every member qualified, as required by the By-laws, shall, in case of sickness or bodily injury, not resulting from an immoral or unlawful action, be entitled to and shall receive from the funds of the Parlor such weekly benefits as may be fixed by the By-laws. Such benefits shall not commence until six months from the date of admission to membership in the Parlor, provided, that a Subordinate Parlor may pay sick benefits to a member received on a Withdrawal Card from the date of his becoming an active member of such Subordinate Parlor. But the Parlor may provide in its By-laws that benefits shall not be allowed for the first week's sickness.

"Section 2. In case of the death of a member there shall be allowed from the funds of the Parlor such sums as the By-laws may allow or require. The President shall have charge of the funeral (in the absence of relatives) and shall render an account of disbursements. The By-laws may provide funeral benefits for members not in good standing, if the Parlor so desires, and the By-laws may also provide the conditions under which such benefits shall be paid."

The sole question to be decided in this appeal is what construction shall be placed upon the word "may," as used in Sections 1 and 2 of Article VIII, above quoted. If the word "may," as used in the first paragraph of Sections 1 and 2, is to be construed in its ordinary sense and given its ordinary meaning, there can be no question but that the action of Ramona Parlor in repealing Article VIII of its By-laws was within the law governing Subordinate Parlor.

On the other hand, if the construction to be placed upon the word "may" in these sections is the construction that is sometimes placed upon that word in legal decisions, the action of the Parlor in repealing Article VIII of its By-laws will be clearly erroneous.

A careful examination of the language of the first sentence in each section of Article VIII demonstrates clearly that the framers of the Constitution of Subordinate Parlor used the word "may" advisedly, and this Board is of the opinion that no other meaning can be given to the word "may" than its ordinary and well-known meaning.

Let us observe the language: "Section 1. Every member who shall be entitled to and receive from the funds of the Parlor such weekly benefits as may be fixed by the By-laws." The framers of the Constitution, undoubtedly, meant that if sick benefits were provided, every member should be entitled to them under certain circumstances. But they, also, realized that the amount of the benefits, if any, was a matter which should be left entirely to the Parlor itself, and if it is permissible, under the Constitution, for some Parlor to fix a weekly benefit of Ten Dollars ($10.00), and others to fix a weekly benefit of Five Dollars ($5.00), we see no reason why a Parlor cannot exercise its right to refuse to fix any sick benefits. That this was the intention of the framers of the Constitution seems clear to us, particularly in view of the use of the language "shall be entitled" in the early part of the sentence, which clearly indicates that the framers of the Constitution intended that if sick benefits were paid at all every member qualified should receive the same.

Directing our attention now to Section 2, we find exactly the same situation. If funeral benefits are fixed by the By-laws, it is compulsory upon the Parlor to pay them to the relatives of the deceased brother who died in good standing, but here again we find the section reciting that the Parlor shall pay such sums as the By-laws "may allow or require," which, to our mind, clearly indicates that it was the intention of the framers of the Constitution to leave the matter of the payment of funeral benefits optional with the Parlor.

It is, therefore, our opinion that the action of Ramona Parlor, No. 109, N.S.G.W., in eliminating from its By-laws Article VIII was not in violation of Sections 1 or 2 of Article VIII of the Constitution of the Grand Parlor, and the action of said Parlor is hereby authorized, and the appeal dismissed.

Hugh Fugh Edwards, who came across the plains with his parents in 1849, died at Crockett, December 17th. The family first settled in Stanislaus County, but in 1861 deceased went to Owens Valley, was an active participant in the early-day Indian troubles there, and was instrumental in founding Independence, Inyo County; in 1866 he went to Contra Costa County and engaged in farming and stock-raising on an 1800-acre tract of land fronting Carquinez Straits, and assisted in establishing the city of Crockett, where, for twelve years, he was justice of the peace. Deceased was a native of Missouri, aged 69 years, and is survived by a widow and daughter.

Captain Enos Fournatt, who came around the Horn in 1849 and up to ten years ago had continuously piloted boats on the Sacramento River, died at San Francisco, December 22nd. The history of the "Senator," the "Hartford," the "Hudson" and the "New World" has the name of Captain Fournatt closely interwoven, for he guided these, and many other early-day river craft, through the Sacramento River. Deceased was aged 83 years, and is survived by two sons.

Colonel John Miller Drake, who came around the Horn in 1849 and was connected with early-day military affairs, died at Portland, Oregon, December 16th. He was a native of Pennsylvania, aged 83 years, and is survived by five children.

Benjamin A. Lombard, who came across the plains in 1849 and for a quarter-century mined in various parts of the State, died at Sacramento, January 5th. In 1873 he removed to Kansas, but in 1880 returned to California and made Stockton his home until 1897, when he went to Oregon, whence he returned early last year. Deceased was aged 78 years, and is survived by three children.

Mrs. Mary Gillam, who arrived at Hangtown, El Dorado County, in 1852, passed away at Alameda, December 1st. She was a native of North Carolina, aged 86 years, and was well known in Sonoma and Mendocino Counties, where she had resided.

Michael T. Kelly, who came around the Horn in the early days and from 1850 to 1889 was closely identified with San Francisco's commercial life, died at that city, December 22nd. He was a native of Ireland, aged 77 years, and is survived by a widow and five children.

Mrs. Isabella D. Cheshire, who came across the plains in 1852, and since 1855 had resided in Butte County, passed away at Oroville, December 14th. She was a native of Illinois, aged nearly 75 years, and is survived by five children.

Mrs. Anna Eaton, who went to the present site of Salinas in 1869, passed away at that city, January 11th. With her husband, Benj. E. Eaton, she came to California in 1856. Deceased was a native of England, aged nearly 92 years, and was affectionately known as "grandma." Three children survive.

Richard Baxter Whitaker, who came to California in 1850, and after mining and lumbering on Feather River for fourteen years went to Modoc County, died recently at Fort Bidwell, where he had resided since 1902. He was a native of Kentucky, aged 88 years.

In Memoriam

JOHN A. BOYLE.

The following resolutions, prepared by a committee composed of M. C. Kerr, James A. Nutting and D. J. Robertson, have been adopted by Quincey Parlor, No. 131, N.S.G.W.:

Whereas, It has pleased the Supreme Grand President of the Universe to call Brother John A. Boyle to sit with Him in the Grand Parlor on High; and

Whereas, In the death of Brother John A. Boyle our Parlor has lost a good and loyal member, the state and country a useful and respected citizen, the wife a devoted husband, and the mother a dutiful son; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we, with heavy hearts and thoughts full of sadness, bow to the will of Him Who doeth all things well, we cannot but regret that a life so full of promise should be cut short, while domestic ties and fervent friendship still endure, ere the sun of life had reached its zenith and ere the flight of time had dimmed the eye, silvered the locks or furrowed the cheeks; and be it further

Resolved, That while our hearts go out in loving sympathy to the family of our deceased brother, we can but commend them to the care of Him Who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb, and remind them that earth has no sorrows that Heaven cannot heal; that God looks down upon us all, soothing our griefs, allaying every pain, and shaping our lives to the end that, ere we are aware, our greatest griefs become but sweet and tender memories. That He will smooth our pathway through this vale of tears; that every joy is but loaned us for a while, and every grief is but to chasten, preparing us for that celestial home beyond the skies, and if we but trust in Him, we shall meet our loved one over

C. F. HICKS.

At a regular meeting of Honey Lake Parlor, No. 198, N.S.G.W., Janesville, a committee composed of J. B. Christie, Ray McMurphy and Ray Doyle, appointed to draft resolutions to the memory of their departed brother, C. F. Hicks, reported the following, which were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, We having declared our belief in the infinite wisdom of our Creator, Who has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved brother, C. F. Hicks, be it

Resolved, That our brother, having been known as an exemplary father, husband and citizen, we do therefore declare his death a great loss to our community and Order, and hope that his noble character, unassuming manner and pleasant disposition reflect the meaning our Order desires its members to portray in this life; be it also

Resolved, That to the family, from whom this brother was so suddenly removed and who now mourn his loss, that we are with them in their dark hour, and the sympathy of our hearts goes out to them. But what a great comfort there must be, when they know that this beloved man fell asleep in Jesus, and to know it is written, "Blessed are they who die in the Lord." He has passed to the other side, into God's gracious keeping, there to await the final coming of his loved ones, where we will all be united as one family amidst joy and happiness. May God, our Father, comfort the hearts of this bereaved family until we shall all be called to that long last home, and may we be as he was, ready. And be it further

Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning, and that these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our Parlor, a copy sent to the family of our departed brother, also to our official organ, The Grizzly Bear, for publication.

EARLY-DAY SETTLER OF LIVERMORE VALLEY PASSES.

Mrs. Mary Martin, an early resident of the Livermore Valley, passed away at Pleasanton, December 30th. She was born in Ireland in 1832, but came to the United States, in company with three brothers and two sisters, in 1848; they resided in Illinois until 1862 when, hearing of California's gold which could be picked up anywhere, she, in company with a girl friend and the latter's brother, came to this State via the Isthmus.

Deceased entered the employ of John B. Weller, then Governor, where she remained until 1864, when she was wedded to John H. Martin, who died in 1882. Mr. and Mrs. Martin settled on Government land near Livermore, which then consisted of but two buildings, for the railroad had not yet invaded that fertile valley. Here they resided until Mr. Martin's death, when deceased took up her residence in Livermore.

About seventeen years ago she removed to Pleasanton and made her home with a son, W. P. Martin. She was possessed of a very clear memory up to the time of her death, and took much pleasure in telling of incidents that she witnessed in the early days. One of these, of which she was particularly proud, was that during her residence at Kewanee, Illinois, at the outbreak of the Civil War, and during the presidential campaign in 1860 when Lincoln and Douglass were candidates, she being employed in the leading hotel of the place had the pleasure of waiting on Abraham Lincoln, while the latter stopped there during his speech-making tour.

Surviving deceased are two sons—W. P. Martin of Pleasanton and J. H. Martin, manager of the Tholmune Lumber Co. at Escalon, both past presidents of Las Positas Parlor, No. 96, N.S.G.W., Livermore—and a sister, Mrs. Johanna Handbade of Kansas City, Missouri. Funeral services were held from St. Augustine's church, Pleasanton, and interment made in the Catholic cemetery at Livermore.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT

DEVOTED TO FARM, ORCHARD, GARDEN, POULTRY, DAIRYING, BEES, ETC.

Edited by GEORGE H. BANCROFT.

TARIFF REVISION AND THE FARMER.

THE FARMER DOES NOT NEED protection from foreign importations of manufactured, farm and other productions, as much as he does from the manufacturers of the United States, who charge him much higher prices for implements, sewing machines, etc., than the same articles are sold for, freight paid, in other countries.

The farmer needs better treatment than he receives at the hands of meat packers, commission men and others who compel him to sell at low prices in many cases, while at the same time consumers pay a much higher price than the cost of distribution would warrant. This operates to the disadvantage of both producer and consumer, while the middlemen are enriched beyond proportion to the service they render.

The farmer also needs money at lower rates and on better terms than is now accorded him. Bankers charge highest rates of interest to the farmer, and often refuse to loan him money at any price. This refusal to accommodate the farmer often compels him, if hard pressed, to deal with usurers at very high rates, thus keeping his nose to the grindstone continually. All this is wrong, as the farmer offers the best possible security for the money.

The railroads also feel obliged to charge high rates of freight to the shipper of farm produce in order to make a showing and pay dividends upon watered stock, and to maintain some sort of a price for the stocks and bonds in the exchange, and to thus induce the investing public to buy such stocks and bonds.

Then there are various trusts and combinations that bleed the farmer most numerically and reap a rich harvest in dollars and cents. Taking everything into consideration, the claim that a high protective tariff would benefit the farmer, cannot be substantiated.

Agricultural papers for years advocated the parcel post, and when it came it proved a good thing in many ways, and for many people, especially those who had to submit to the extortions of the express companies. Now that the fees have been reduced and the weight limit increased, however, the farming interests will be really benefited.

As the source of all life comes from the soil, aided by the sun, air and water, the farmer is entitled to better treatment and conditions than he has been the recipient of in the past at the hands of our lawmakers and the general business public. The prospect of a low tariff does not worry many classes of farmers as much as do other conditions under which they strive. A few of the conditions and ills are cited above—and there are others.

HOW TO TEST AND SWEETEN SOUR SOILS.

Very often field crops, fruits and flowers do not succeed where conditions appear to be favorable in every particular. When rich soils do not yield good crops, an acid test should be made. A simple test, involving the expenditure of a few cents and a little time, can be made by anyone. Almost any druggist will sell you twenty strips of litmus paper, one-half inch by two and a half inches in size; the pad costs five cents. The paper is of a light blue color.

Dig below the surface of the soil to where the roots of the plant feed, and from this point take some moist earth, or make it moist if dry. Make this earth up into a small ball or marble, then divide it in two by cutting or breaking, and place a strip of the litmus paper between the parts; then press the two parts together closely. After a few minutes, take out the paper. If the blue color is changed to a pink or cherry red, the soil is acid. It is best to make several acid tests, taking the soil from different depths and from different parts of the field.

One of the best methods, and the most common, of sweetening sour soils, is by applying lime (ground limestone) at the rate of from two to three tons per acre. For large areas it is advisable to use a lime-spreading machine, although a grass seeder may be adjusted so as to answer. Applications every four, five or six years will prove sufficient. Applying lime to acid soils promotes the action and spread of bacteria, which fix free nitrogen, obtained from the air, in the root nodules of alfalfa and other leguminous plants, where the bacteria live.

STILL ANOTHER TALK ABOUT BACTERIA.

As the farmer works to change soil and air into food for man and beast, whether corn, fruits, meat, wheat, etc., the larger part of the material from which all food is manufactured is drawn from the air, which is a vast reservoir of plant food; but a portion, while small, is taken from the soil, and this part is vital and indispensable. It is estimated that over nine-tenths of plant food comes from the atmosphere, and the remaining portion from the soil. The soil, when analyzed, is found to contain a certain amount of material convertible into plant food, and being limited in quantity, the soil should be gradually exhausted of its fertility. Such has not, however, been the history of the past.

The reason why soil has not been deprived of its plant food permanently, is because through a wise provision of nature, the same material is used over and over again in endless cycles. Plants live off of other plants and animals in a decomposed state, and animals live off of other animals and plants in their original forms; hence the food passes from plant to animal and from animal to plant forever and ever. There are several agencies entering into the processes, but we have learned that the most vital factor in the food cycle is the action of soil bacteria.

Moist soil is full of living organisms; many forms of plant life exist, from the highest forms to the lowest. All types of fungi are plentiful, and bacteria are there in countless numbers. The first five or six inches of soil are specially abundant in bacterial forms of life, varying, according to conditions, from a few thousands (10,000) to several millions (5,000,000) per gram of dry earth. (It takes over 28 grams to equal an ounce avoirdupois.) Sandy soil is deficient in bacteria. Soil in which decomposing organic matter exists, not yet dissolved into the forms of humus, contains as high as 100,000,000 bacteria per gram. As the soil increases in depth, there is a corresponding decrease in bacterial life. Very few bacteria will be found at six feet in depth, and deeper they are seldom found.

Soil is made up of chemical compounds, principally of a mineral character, being disintegrated or ground-up rocks, which contain salts, bases, and acids of the various elements resulting from the remains of dead animals and plants. As plants subsist on both these substances, they are essential to their existence. There is usually an abundance of the mineral constituents existing in the soil, and these are chiefly salts of potassium, magnesium, calcium, phosphorus, iron and sulphur. Plant life requires but a small amount of minerals, but while the amount is small, it is absolutely essential. The mineral constituents of the soil are derived from the weathering or disintegration of the rocks; but it has been learned that the process of weathering, while considered chemical and physical processes, yet depend upon the action of bacteria for the complete changes brought about. It has been also found that some species of bacteria are able to live wholly upon mineral matter, along with ammonia salts as a source of nitrogen. These bacteria can subsist upon the bare surface of rocks, and are active agencies in bringing about oxidation. Chemical changes are also going on continually in the soil and are largely brought about by soil bacteria.

Among the mineral foods of plants, sulphates hold an important position, and also certain salts of potassium. It has been proven that the formation and destruction of these compounds in soil is largely the result of bacterial action. Certain bacteria called sulphur bacteria are able to both build up and pull to pieces sulphur compounds. Another class of bacteria is called iron bacteria, on account of their affinity or close connection or dependence upon iron. It is generally agreed that other mineral ingredients of the soil are to a greater or lesser extent modified, and perhaps produced, through the agency of bacteria.

Fertile soil, to a certain extent, contains dead and decaying animal and vegetable matter, and in addition contains material known as humus, which matter, after being subjected to chemical and bacterial action, represents the final condition of organic matter. In composition, humus contains carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and nitrogen. Carbon is the most characteristic element of organic bodies. This comes to the plant from the atmosphere. The most important matter to the agriculturist is the transformation of nitrogen. The whole problem of plant life is bound up in the question of nitrogen compounds, as without nitrogen, plants in nearly all cases would cease to live.

Plants obtain carbon, oxygen and hydrogen from the air, but the nitrogen comes from the soil. Nitrogen exhaustion in the soil is the greatest problem the agriculturist has to solve. Owing to bacterial action, however, and methods of control now available, the farmer need have no fear, but may know that soil exhaustion is not only unnecessary, but indefensible.

THE TOMATO.

California is suitable for the production of the most perfect tomatoes possible, with best flavor and maximum yields. In its native indigenous state, the tomato was found along the Colorado River, and in California it becomes a quadrennial in some locations.

A climate such as we have in California, which produces trees thirty years old or more, of ten inches diameter and over thirty feet high from the ordinary castor-oil bean,—which in most Eastern locations is an annual,—explains somewhat the reasons why the tomato is such a favorite crop here.

The tomato is now the most profitable of all vegetable crops grown in California, and farmers would do well to thoroughly study its possibilities. Any produce commission house will vouch for the profitable shipping features of the tomato. The canning crop, and the fall shipping crop, can be produced at a minimum cost, while the early crops yield big returns, even though the producing cost is much higher.

THE POTATO.

Wherever there is soil in California, potatoes thrive with varying success. Light, warm soils, originally supporting a growth of sage brush and bunch grass now produce our choicest Irish potatoes. The rich bottomlands have yielded to the superior soils of the uplands, as quality has come to be considered as well as quantity. Less irrigation and more cultivation has proven to be the best treatment.

The potato plant is half hardy and not easily killed by frosts—it withstands much more cold than the tomato, egg plants or peppers. In many locations in California, potatoes may be planted any day of the year. It is possible to produce three crops yearly. Different fields should be planted, if a succession of crops is to be produced. Rotation with other crops is best, as constantly cropping the same soil to potatoes results in gradual falling off of the yield. Experiments have proven that land constantly cropped to this tuber fails to produce anything after the fifteenth year, while a barley crop, immediately following, results in a maximum yield. California is capable of producing all the potatoes required for the local markets.

BIG PROFITS FROM PLANT LIFE.

Spineless cactus claims the highest tonnage to the acre and the biggest profits. Luther Burbank seems to be responsible for the introduction of spineless cactus into California. His experiments with this wonder plant cover a period of thirteen years. Two hundred tons to the acre is not uncommon with spineless cactus. According to Luther Burbank, one hundred tons to the acre can be grown without irrigation. Someone reports a tonnage of 713 tons to the acre.

The plant is a wonderful forage plant for cows, sheep, goats, hogs, turkeys, etc. The fruit produces from five to fifty tons to the acre, is a delicious table fruit, and contains fifteen per cent sugar. It may enter into competition with beet raising, beets averaging about nine and one half per cent sugar.

Spineless cactus is probably the most rapidly growing plant. It is propagated from slabs, one slab producing from twenty to forty slabs in a single year. Profits are almost beyond belief. Cactus is a wonder plant, and the stories told about it, from reliable sources, read like a talk from the "Arabian Knights."

FEBRUARY PLANTING CALENDAR.

FRUIT TREES—All deciduous fruit trees can be planted this month.

VEGETABLE GARDEN—Sow beets, early cabbage, carrot, corn salad, cress, dandelion, endive, kale, kohlrabi, leek, lettuce, mustard, onion, parsley, parsnip, peas, radish, rhubarb, salsify, spinach, turnip, also egg plant, peppers and tomatoes on hot beds. Plant potatoes, asparagus, horseradish and rhubarb roots, and cabbage plants.

FLOWER GARDEN—This is a good month to plant roses and all kinds of ornamental trees and shrubs. Sow acaelinum, alyssum, antirrhinum, calendula, calliopis, cosmos, eschscholtzia, gailardia, larkspur, linum, lupinus, mignonette, nemophila, nigella, poppies and sweet peas, in the open ground; also balsam, begonia, gloxinia, lobelia, pyrethrum, scabiosa, veronica, petunia and salvia in seed pans or boxes for transplanting later. Continue to plant anemones, ranunculus, German iris, Japanese iris, Lilium auratum and L. speciosum, gladiolus, agapanthus, amaryllis, also begonia, caladium, gloxinia and tuberose.

DEVELOPING THE LAND.

(December Bulletin California Development Board.)

The outcome of the year 1913 was far better than the first quarter gave any promise. While the cold snap of one year ago sent the citrus product nearly in half, this did not discourage the growers. The results, so far for this season, give good promise. The shipments to December 15th were 4150 carloads, against 3928 carloads in 1912. The groves have already been much extended and in a short time the output will be larger than before. The deciduous fruit season closed with shipments aggregating $18,500,000 in value, over 13,330 carloads having been sent out.

Land sales go on steadily, among which we may mention: Announcement of the division of large tracts near Elk Grove, Sacramento County, and Nicolaus, Sutter County, into ten and twenty-acre tracts; sale of 47,000 acres in Imperial Valley; sale of 1000-acre Coney Island tract in Contra Costa County to Los Angeles capitalists for an alfalfa and dairy ranch; purchase by a Los Angeles syndicate of 20,000 acres of the Perkins ranch, in Chiyama Valley, to be sold to actual settlers in 160-acre tracts.

ANOTHER GOOD COW.

A red-poll cow of Duluth, Minnesota, named "Pear," has broken the world's record for one year's production of butterfat. She gave 13,001 pounds of milk, containing 605 pounds of butterfat. This butterfat is equal to about 726 pounds of butter. The best previous record of butterfat for one year's production is 515 pounds. So "Pear" has "gone some" in raising the record by ninety pounds.

CROPS OF ENORMOUS VALUE.

The annual fruit crop of California is estimated at $100,000,000 by State Horticultural Commissioner A. J. Cook in his annual report made to the Governor. He estimates the value of the alfalfa crop at $15,000,000 annually, gathered from 728,623 acres devoted to its production. Commissioner Cook reports success on the quarantine against the Mediterranean fruit fly and the alfalfa weevil. He deplors lack of sufficient money to keep the quarantine more rigid.

POULTRY

(By MRS. A. BASLEY.)

FERTILITY.

THE QUESTION IS FREQUENTLY asked me, how long a time should the hen be mated before the eggs will be fertile? And another and very similar inquiry is, how long must the hens be separated from a male bird of a different breed before they will be pure bred if mated to a male of the same species or breed?

Professor Jarvis of the Ontario (Canada) station made a series of experiments in the production and fertility of eggs, with the following results: Ten laying hens were separated from the male. The eggs layed each day were placed in an incubator and their fertility tested. Of the eggs layed during the first four days after the male was removed, seventy per cent were fertile; of those layed on the fifth day, sixty-one per cent; on the seventh day, forty-nine per cent; on the eighth, twelve per cent; on the ninth, two per cent, and on the tenth all were infertile.

A test was made with six laying hens to determine the time which elapsed before eggs became fertile after a male is introduced. On the third day, thirty per cent of the eggs were found to be fertile; on the fourth, forty-two per cent; on the fifth, fifty per cent; on the sixth, sixty per cent; on the seventh, seventy per cent; on the eighth, sixty-eight per cent; on the ninth, seventy per cent; and on the tenth, seventy-four per cent.

The influence of the male on the total number of eggs produced was tested with two lots. Lot number 1 consisted of five pullets, five hens and one cock; lot number 2 of five hens and five pullets of the same variety as lot number 1. The test began January 1st and ended September 1st. Both pens were fed and cared for in the same way. Lot No. 1 layed 950 eggs, and lot No. 2, 972 eggs. It can be seen that there was very little difference in the number of eggs produced by the two pens, the larger number, however, being credited to the pen that did not have a male bird in it. This is more evidence that the presence of the male has nothing whatever to do with egg production.

In some cases the cause of infertility in the eggs can be traced to the male bird not getting sufficient food, or his having too little protein. In his care for the hens and his gallantry to them he allows them to eat the best morsels, or the most nutritive, whilst he only gets their leavings, and if the supply runs short he has to go on limited rations. Again, the fault may lie in the size of the breeding pen. There may be too few or there may be too many hens in the pen. If the male is a very active fellow and he be allowed too few hens, he will so harass them and they will be so determined to fight off his advances that the eggs will be poorly fertilized. On the other hand, if the number of hens is too many he will be unable to give them the proper attention.

Fertility of eggs is very apt to occur if two male birds are in the same pen, each one resenting the attentions of the other to the hens. Again, I have known of a hen, a real coquette, being so attractive to the male that she would prevent any attentions on his part to the other hens, and removing her to another pen resulted in the same performance there. The only plan in that case was to keep her by herself and every two days to put a male in with her for a few hours. However, a coquette among the hens is very rare,—more so than in the human family.

Fertility, unless the hens are very fat, is usually the fault of the male, and either results from his lack of vigor or being underfed. During the breeding period I always fed the males at the head of the pens extra, teaching them to come away from the hens for the extra feed. I was a crank on vigor, and am still, and I knew that the first necessity for vigorous chicks was to have the father in a vigorous state. I studied the subject of vigor and how to get it and keep it, and formulated my "rule of three" (comfort, exercise and proper food) in the pursuit of vigor. Any one who succeeds, not only for one year but for a succession of years, must have vigorous fowls, must keep on breeding for vigor.

WISE POULTRY BREEDERS, TAKE HEED!

There is no doubt in my mind but that both chickens and eggs will be higher this year than ever before. They are higher now than this time a year ago, and not only higher here but also in the East, and even in Kansas it is said that the flurry in the Chicago wheat market has evidently frightened the Kansas hen. At least eggs are said to be higher there now, for this time of year, than for twenty years. The grocers report a scarcity and say they cannot buy enough to supply their trade.

The cold-storage men are harder hit than the grocery man, for at the season when they put up eggs, before the weather becomes hot, they are too

BUYING CALIFORNIA PRODUCTS MEANS BUILDING UP THE STATE

(By MAE B. WILKIN, Past Grand President, N.D.G.W.)

ENTION HAS OFTEN BEEN MADE in these columns of the Home Industry League of California, who compose its membership, and the object of the association, but little has been said of its accomplishments. During the three and a half years of its existence, the League has been instrumental in keeping within this State a sum far in excess of $20,000,000, and most of this vast sum has been used in paying for material, and for wages to people who handle the material, on many of the projects which have been under construction, development, or in operation in California during that time. More than $4,000,000 in contracts was held in this State through its watchfulness, while not less than a like amount in building material, such as native stone, has been designated in many specifications through the insistence of the League, and at least $2,000,000 has been spent with the manufacturers for high and too scarce to get, and when the hot weather comes the eggs, having been heated, will not keep through the winter. The result will be that eggs, even cold-storage eggs, will be higher than ever next winter. The wise poultry breeder will heed the signs of the times and hatch and raise all the chicks he can this year.

READY MIXED FOODS.

There are on the market a number of feeds already mixed, both ground and whole, which are being used by many breeders. A large number of these feeds have been analyzed by the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of California, Berkeley, and anyone wanting to learn the ingredients of these feeds can secure the bulletin on poultry feeding by writing to the Director of the Agricultural Station and asking him for the bulletin by Professor Jaffa on poultry breeding.

One advantage of using the foods already mixed, is that it saves time and trouble, and if you buy from a reliable house you are likely to get a good article. The reliable house has a reputation to keep up, and it will not pay to sell you bad food for your fowls. The actions and conditions of the fowls will soon indicate the care and kind of food you are giving them.

POULTRY NOTES.

(Mrs. G. W. Randlett, North Dakota Agricultural College.)

Nearly everyone can keep hens, but can everyone make the hens keep them? Hens do not pay unless you give them suitable care.

The poultry like fresh straw now and then, just as well as the cow likes to be well bedded.

The hens that are yarded should be given the lawn clippings. The daily ration is not complete without animal food in some form. Skim milk fed separately or with the mash furnishes a partial substitute for the meat ration.

Keeping too many breeds is a poor way to succeed. One or two varieties, given the best of care, is best.

A poultryman that is too careless to keep the henhouse free from vermin does not deserve to succeed.

Poultry should be kept off feed twenty-four hours before being killed and dressed for market.

Have some way of telling the oldest eggs and keep them sold.

Be sure to provide some shade in the runs, or you will find that some of your chicks will not feather.

Chicks that have been drowned in watering tanks that someone forgot to empty would make a good-sized flock.

A hen is not lazy by nature and will surprise you in what she can do if given the right chance.

It costs no more to feed a hen that lays 150 eggs a year than one that lays 60.

If you do not like your breed change as soon as you can, for you will never be successful with a breed you do not like. Do plenty of good thinking before you make the change, as it is expensive, not only in money expended but in the experience you have already gained with the breed you have. Give the flock you have a square deal and be sure that the fault lies with them and not that you just want a change.

Poultry raising is what you make it. Lots of people make it drudgery by the attitude of mind rather than the amount of work they do.

such supplies as were required by transportation and public-utility corporations and hotels as a result of the League directing its attention to the necessity for buying that which is "Made in California."

The Home Industry League is very like a wheel, the hub being the terminating point of the many spokes of industry which are bound together by the rim of necessity, and is run for the purpose of keeping the machinery of prosperity in operation in the State of California. But it requires the power of steam, or spring, to make the "wheels go 'round,'" and in California this power is centered in the active co-operation of the people of this State. Not only of all the people, but ALL the people ALL the time. With the prosperity of California dependent so largely upon the home consumption of her products, it is incumbent upon all persons living within the State to concentrate their efforts, when doing their buying, in an endeavor to find that which is "Made in California" to suit their needs, always remembering the Home Industry League only makes this request when price and quality are found to be satisfactory.

When the people pause to reflect upon the number of men and women who will be given employment in California, as a result of the purchases so made, the Home Industry movement will gain ground very rapidly. To particularize: just instance the cracker, or pickle, or soup, or any other goods which are packed in containers. When they are purchased, employment is given to the men and women who are engaged in preparing the product for market and in addition thereto, to all who are employed in the manufacture of the paper in which the product is wrapped, the boxes in which the goods are packed, the jars or containers for the protection of the product, the printer who prints the labels, the ink manufacturer who provides the ink for the labels, and the pasteman who makes the paste for label or box; then the auxiliary articles, such as flour, sugar, vinegar, spices or other things necessary to the preparation of the manufactured product.

All of these industries, and more, will be benefited when purchases along this line are made, and if the people who wish employment in the industries of California are to have opportunity for such employment, all who live in this State will have to make an effort to find "Made in California" goods, and, where they prove satisfactory in price and quality, give them the preference in buying. Many ask, "How am I to know?" ASK for California-made goods, then look at the label, when label there is, to see if the name of the manufacturer and the address of the same are on it. And in connection with the label, remember this: the words "packed for" or "distributed by," followed by the name of some well-known dealer, does not mean the goods are a California production, but if marked "packed by" or "manufactured by," with the name and address of the manufacturer, it is then well established if the article is a California product or not.

It was most unfortunate for California when the proposed law, requiring manufacturers to place their names upon all the products of their establishments, failed of passage at the last session of the Legislature, but the people of this State have it within their power to bring about the same result if they will refuse to purchase any article which does not show upon its label, or upon the article or container thereof, where and by whom made, regardless of its being manufactured in this State or not. In this way it will be possible for the people of California to know when they are buying that which is "Made in California" and to be sure that the revenue from the purchase they are making will go into circulation in California for the development and upbuilding of the State.

An unwritten rule, which is created by the demands of the people, is far more effective than any law written into the statutes. The prosperity of California, which means the prosperity of her people, depends entirely upon the loyal effort of every individual within the State. There was once a song, the refrain of which ran something in this way: "You can't boost a town by running it down, because it ain't built that way," and while the quality of the English might be called into question, the truth of the phrase cannot be denied. It applies just as truly to building up a state, wherein there will be opportunity for greater prosperity for her people, as well as opportunity for a greater number of people to find happy, prosperous homes, for which California's vast area offers every chance.

Such a bank is one with which it is extremely desirable for you to do business.

The big capitalist doesn't have to seek personal service in a bank, he doesn't have to seek the extra little courtesies and considerations which go to make up what we understand by Service. The very amount of his deposit, the size of his account, guarantees him such personal attention and courtesy. It is the small merchant, the savings depositor, the man who is trying hard to increase an account that to him seems inadequate, who needs that strong, personal, helpful element in banking service.

And he gets it here, invariably!

VOLUME BEGAN WITH NOVEMBER NUMBER, ENDS WITH APRIL NUMBER.

HE DREAD THING, LIKE A wraith, came one black night. A torn sail as a shroud, bid the foul rags that hung on the bent and broken form of what, perchance, had once been a man. And with it a curse, for, on that evil hour that, in a lightning flash the corpse-like face was seen, the ground rocked and the few Mission buildings crumbled. The holy saints, though, worked a miracle and saved the little adobe church, but a few red tiles falling from its roof. Shambling and skulking along, the uncanny shape was first seen near a hedge by a road.

On the romantic day when Spain ruled California this historic road was completed. It was known then, as it is now, as El Camino Real, or, in English, "The King's Highway." From San Diego, far south, to Sonoma, at the north, its sinuous course lay over the wild Sierras and quiet vales, and bound the fine old Missions, some of them, alas, in picturesque ruins. During the rainy season, travelers on the rough, muddy way were few. If a weary one arrived at the quaint Mission by the sea, which is the scene of this tale, the friars went forth to give him royal welcome and to lavish good cheer in plenty on the adventurer; for at these distant settlements hospitality was ever the rule. No such cordial greeting, however, was the stranger's mead. Instead, the Mission folks angrily bade him begone, and, shuddering at sight of the awful body and cadaverous face, turned away in terror. From the ghastly head, a narrow eye gleamed, full of hate; the other, deep in its socket, was lusterless, dead.

The wonder grew whence came this malevolent creature. Surely not by way of El Camino Real. Pablo, the young goatherd, who pastured his flock on the land near it, swore to that by everything holy. Manuel, the muleteer, whose path lay along the lane, was quite as certain. The alcalde, the acolytes, the handful of soldiers and the Mission Indians were equally mystified. The way of it was this, so the legend goes: There had been a gale and heavy downpour of rain, and high upon the long stretch of white beach the angry waves dashed and the mad spray, leaping over the mossy rocks, tumbled on the green cliffs. The tempest brought all the lightning-lit furies in its wake, and between a deafening thunder-clap and the weird shriek of the wind, this being—man or demon—burst into view. When the braver ones cowered him, he cowered like a beast at bay.

With many an oath they demanded him to tell what devilish sorcery brought him to terrify the peaceful place, and the reason. Raising heavenward a large cross, by that sacred token the commandant bade him speak nought but the truth, but no human sound came from the fellow's lips. A fearful look crept over his face, and scars upon it became livid; the evil eye narrowed and glinted in a most sinister way. He, too, pointed at the dark sky and shook thereat a trembling hand. His forefinger was severed at the first joint, and with the quivering stump he swept the horizon and indicated a spot away over the raging ocean. He clenched his mutilated hand and with rapid, obscure gestures pointed several times at the ground. Hisses came from between his broken, yellow teeth. Screaming and crossing themselves, the horrified people ran from him in fear, and from that day they spoke of him as "El Hombre del Infierno."

THE MAN ACCURST

(By PHIL FIGEL.)

The Man from Hell. The strange story of his advent and of his passing, in awed whisper, has been handed down from father unto son.

On that direful night of the earthquake, good Padre Ramon returned from his missions of mercy, for many had been rendered homeless. He entered the church and on the way to his small rooms beyond the sacristy knelt before the altar, for a moment in prayer. This worthy priest, tall, angular and lantern-jawed, was beloved by reason of his devout, charitable nature, as well as for his jovial, winning ways. He rubbed his large, white hands together and smacked his lips in anticipation, for there were good things in the larder for his poor flock and for himself, and ah! a faithful black pot swinging from a pot-hook over the cheery, blazing fire. The good old kettle sang merrily, as many a good kettle had sung before and will sing ever on, merrily until the end of time. Before the flames, crouching upon the adobe hearth, snarling and ravenously devouring a hunk of meat, was the mysterious one. The dripping fat and juices trickled over his breast and sorry rags. He was wet and filthy. Mud and wrack clung to his scant, matted hair. With an inarticulate cry of fear or hate, he snatched an adobe brick from the fireplace to hurl at the father, who stood wondering on the threshold. Waiting a move from the priest, the thief cowered, and a wheezing cough convulsed his meager frame.

Then in Spanish spoke good Father Ramon, in his cheerful way, "Peace, my son. Eat thy fill and we will have a little talk." His grey eyes looked kindly at the famished man who, dropping the brick, still clutched the remnant of meat and slunk, limping, alongside the wall towards the door. He hounded out into the darkness and the gale. He had no thought of God, but dire fear of mortal man.

Now, upon the very time of the vagrant's appearance, a broken cedar mast was tossed upon the sands. Lashed to it was a small child, a girl, with large, brown eyes and soft, wavy, dark hair. Her pretty, clinging clothes were of the finest texture, betokening her a child of quality. There was still breath in the dainty body and on being revived, the little maiden was cared for by old Mother Dolores in the wreck of her tiny tute-thatched hut near the Mission church. And there she grew and thrived and became more beautiful day by day.

One evening a week after the visit of the unknown, Father Ramon was suddenly awakened to find the prowler ransacking the pantry. The mellow moonlight, through the open window, flooded the room beyond. Startled, the man of God sat up and rubbed his eyes. He noiselessly slipped out of bed. Then, sitting on the bedside, he offered his unbidden guest a hand of welcome, saying gently, "Fear not, poor soul, and may Heaven bless you."

As if such kind words and manner were new to him, the man, dazed and bewildered, passed his hand over his head. From a shelf near by the priest took a flagon, which, with a cup, he held out. "Drink of this cordial. It will do you no hurt.

Drink of it!" he urged. The intruder hesitated a moment. He stood irresolute, came forward a step; then glancing towards the door, retreated backwards. "Come, son. Be not afraid. Comfort for you in my house. Now drink of this excellent, warming wine," still the padre pleaded.

The man advanced again and lo! was it a tear that rolled down his contorted face, and could it have been a sob that shook his gaunt body? A sibilant sound escaped his lips, and then that asthmatic cough. As if ashamed of its disfigurement, he partly hid his poor face with his trembling hand. He held out that mutilated hand for the proffered liquor, which, with one draught, he gulped down. Alert for a hostile move, the evil eye peeped out between his fingers. Talking first in Spanish, then in Italian, and afterwards in French, Father Ramon strove to allay the unknown's fears but his lips gave no response; and, after all, perhaps he did not understand. Still, intuitively, he seemed to know the good intent of his friend. From that time the derelict found a haven for his bruised and hattered hulk, a pallet with a warm cover for his aching bones, and for many a peaceful day a retreat within the enclosure back of the church and quiet weed-grown burial ground.

Albeit silent, he showed many signs of gratitude for his changed state. However, to the sorrow of the priest, who prayed and urged him to give some evidence of religious faith, he motioned the cross away. Fawning, he often bent and kissed the good man's hand. Then the cleric would sigh and murmur, "Poor infidel. Some day he will come into the fold. Some day he will know God."

The grateful guest lived in the humble cot assigned him and daily bent his steps to the quiet adobe of the padre, which was to him a paradise. The father's plain fare was his fare, but he chose to eat alone, and behind his gnarled hands he was wont to hide his hideous face. Pain racked, he pottered and tinkered about the parsonage. When strength came to him, he became a veritable hewer of wood and drawer of water, and faith! worked harder than any galley slave. He ventured, as time passed, haltingly and timidly among men, but he labored by night rather than by the glaring light of day. At first, he spent much time clearing weeds from the cemetery. When all but the sentry were snug in bed, he cared for the soldiers' quarters. He tended, lovingly, the garden of the priest, and clumsily caressed each fragrant flower. He gathered the tobacco leaves and sun-dried them. To hacco! ah!—words cannot express his wild joy at sight of it growing there. He crushed and harnessed the seductive weed in his hands, smelled of it long, and lingered and rolled and revelled in the midst of the rich green leaves which he fondled and kissed, literally hating his face in the foliage. When the leaves were cured, though it caused him a violent fit of coughing, he took his first whiff. Delighting in it all, he closed his narrow eye and through the happy day he puffed forth great clouds of pungent smoke, as if to make up for many a sad year's deprivation of a smoker's pleasure.

Silently he worked on, ever silent. Fulfilling his duties, his cough was painful and violent now. His pallid, grotesque face, his dull eye, and eye of evil, were half concealed by a large, drooping rimmed hat. He was now garbed in the clean but loosely hanging clothes of a man lately dead. Through the good offices of the padre, with his many gentle reproofs and prayers imploring kindness and mercy, the people relaxed somewhat when that pious man was about, in their abuse of him whom they called the "Man Accurst."

"Judge not, that ye be not judged," quoth the reverend father to them all. Sad to say, when the priest was out of hearing, the pariah was greeted with lowering glances and indignities, and was loathed and exoriated the more. Even the half-naked Indian converts reviled him. The very mangy curs sniffed distrustfully at his bare heels. Had he been a fiend incarnate, or the Evil One, in sooth, he could not have been despised and hated more. In time the intolerant ones grew colder, but to all the gibes and foul insult, that grim man replied not. When the priest, with a sally for each and a kind word for all, strode by, the men, inwardly grumbling, bent over their work or feigned sleep; the soldiers stood to attention, presenting arms. Others doffed their sombreros, for the good man was revered, even feared. When his keen, quick eye caught a gesture of scorn directed at his poor charge, he would lift a protesting hand and pat him on his stooping shoulders. Then, for days, the tormenting hounds did not catch a glimpse of their quarry, for the man was wandering far afield or was hiding in the corner of the sanctuary, eating out, in agony and misery, the remnant of his heart.

Passing strange, that as well as his dog-like devotion for his gentle guardian, there presently grew between the beautiful shipwrecked child and himself (ugly as any fabled ogre) a touching friendship, nay attachment, as wondrous as it was unaccountable. He fetched her golden poppies and other gorgeous wild flowers from the rancharia, gathered while the drones were enjoying the siesta. On perfect days, the ill assorted pair were often seen wandering along the shore. At sight of the sparkling waters, the brilliant sunsets, and even at the gulls' shrieking and flying on high, the little girl would gleefully clap her dimpled hands.

A lone galleon or a caravel came at intervals, anchoring in the offing for a while and then, with men and supplies for the Missions further north, sail gaily on. The arrival of a ship was an advent, and, to the child, a never-ceasing source of wonder. When it had gone, or after a ramble on the beach with her ungainly comrade, her bright eyes would often become tear-dimmed as she ran sobbing into the thin arms of wizened old Mother Dolores, who, scolding like a flustered hen, tottered towards her with a warm wrap or mantilla to cover her head and little shoulders. These sad moments tarried long, and a look of inquiry and great longing came into her large, mournful eyes.

The sight of a vessel and the bright Spanish flag strangely affected the man of misery, who instantly vanished as if the earth had swallowed him. After the ship was well on her course, he crept from behind some remote crag to seek his benefactor. Then the man, excitedly, was wont to direct his finger over the sea; afterwards, with those mystic motions, to point earthward. And his meaning and his thoughts none could guess. Rumor had it from the first that he pointed at the regions of the lost. Or was he thinking of a vile, vermin-infested prison hole in the filthy hold of a ship?

One day, driving a yoke of patient oxen haling weed, the outcast passed a man called Valdez, the smith. That brawny lout spat full on his face between the eye of evil and its dead mate. At this the wretched face contorted horribly. All the pent agony of the cripple's tortured soul racked his abused body. Trembling as if palsied, in revenge he madly flung at his tormentor a piece of offal, receiving on his head, in return, a jagged rock hurled by a coward who had crept stealthily behind him; and he fell like a log. Dead or stunned, an object of abuse and abhorrence, he lay there. At dusk he managed to creep painfully to the shelter of the peaceful, dim-lit church. They put him in the bed of Padre Ramon, who bathed the sufferer's face and, with a cooling lotion, laved the piteous cut. In turning him on his side, the dazed man's garment fell away from his neck, revealing, seared on his dark skin, the word and in roughly formed letters, branded on his bony shoulders the name

X 63.

The scourge or knout cruelly marked his back, and many a cicatrix crossed his lashed, rough skin. By way of thanking the priest for his goodness or in greeting, he raised his feeble hand to his colorless lips and it was a most ghastly salutation. Again he was questioned in Spanish, in Italian, in French. At last! After so many days of waiting the man's lips parted. Was he to speak? What dreadful secret, long locked within that wall of silence, was about to be divulged? The padre gazed, awe-stricken, at the twitching face, amazed, horrified. The quivering lips again opened. And what Ramon looked upon caused him to shed scald-ing tears of pity. He comforted the poor sinner in his loving way, and knelt at his bedside in earnest prayer. Full well he knew then that the mystery of the strange being, who came that stormy day upon the wings of the wind, was not yet to be solved.

The man had no tongue! It was severed an inch below the tip, and the ragged wound was long ago healed.

There was a relapse, and for many days the man lay fever tossed and in pain. The little girl, in turn, now brought him yellow poppies from the wild-flower-jeweled hills and, fresh from the baking, old Dolores' tortillas; and ministering to him, in and out she ran, just like a fairy sprite.

And so, the wound healed. In his weak state, the invalid wandered about, or from some vantage point watched the exciting hull-fights, and the fiestas with the happy, dark-eyed señoritas gracefully dancing, and perhaps his thoughts, who knew, were of a long dead and buried past in a far-away, sunny clime. When it was dark, he peered through some crack at the fandango and the gambling, which seemed to fascinate him. He worked and smoked and dreamed until sorry days for the Mission came again. The people said it was the Curse. History records many uprisings of the Indians against the rule of the padres.

And now, led by ones outside the pale of the church, the natives, because of their lawless acts, gave much trouble. Soldiers were sent after the marauders and, at the cost of several lives, for a time they were subdued. During a clash, a sharp flint arrowpoint pierced the black heart of Valdez, the smith. The military put away its clumsy arms, the weary settlers ceased their vigil, and the bull-fights, fiestas, barbeques and gaming went on more merrily than ever. Peace, however, was not for long. More outrageous acts aroused the Mission. Scowling faces were seen at dark looking through windows. Fat fowls and suckling pigs were stolen, and maize by the bushel vanished from the well-stocked storehouse. The red men were accused and became more surly towards their masters.

THE TALKING TREE.

One day in a gloomy old forest,
I was seated under a tree,
When a voice, both hollow and dismal,
Said, "Madam, what think you of me?"
I sprang to my feet in an instant,
And hurriedly looked all around
From the top of the tree, where the voice seemed to be,
To the place where I'd sat on the ground.

Did you spring to your feet in alarm?
I'm only a tree and no harm would bring thee,
But protect with my sheltering arm."
"A tree that can talk is a new thing, you see,
And one I'm not used to," I said.
"Not so," said the tree, "when you walked under me
You said we sang for the dead."

Then the tree and I laughed together,
For, you see, the old monarch was right,
I had said to my maid, as we walked 'neath the shade,
That the trees sang a requiem each night;
And the trees were so glad that I knew
They could chant a low hymn for the dead,
They poured out a song, joined in by the throng
Of sweet warblers in the branches o'erhead.

Then I lifted my face to the tree,
And I said, "We shall always be friends."
Then he spread his great arms over me
And whispered, "Let me make amends"
For the fright that I gave you when I Spoke so abruptly this morn."
And the branches nudged each other the while
As if laughing my weakness to scorn.

A tree can be dear to us all;
And one we have known in our youth
Will cling as a vine round the heart,
And a tree that can talk will speak truth.
They told me to come to the woods,
All their beauty and grandness to see,
And the birds in their branches will sing
A chorus for you and for me.

If you know of the beauties that God
Has placed in the forest for you,
You'd come to the woods in a trice,
And talk to the trees as I do.

wind's moan,—a weird wail. With her hut in confusion and herself black in the face, lay Mother Dolores, strangled. A piece of Seville lace, torn from the girl's dress, was held in her wrinkled hands. The child had been carried off! Alarms were sent out, searchers scoured the neighborhood, but alas, there was no trace of her. Anxiously and restlessly the padre paced the barracks through all the evening, waiting news. The rain-soaked, baffled ones returned to await the morn for clues and then to renew the hunt. But there was one who, doggedly all that black, boisterous night, kept up the quest alone—none other than the accursed man.

In the darkness before dawn he returned, carrying the girl, limp and lifeless. His dead man's clothes were in shreds. Lahoring and breathing hard and fearing the murdered old Dolores there, he shunned the crone's hut. He carried his precious little friend through the silent church to the priest's room. Gently the man put the child on the bed on which they had once laid him. He awkwardly stroked her winsome, oval face and wiped the beads of sweat from her brow. He covered her with the grey cassock of the Franciscan and tucked it about the quiet figure.

Then he stumbled to the shelf and took therefrom the potent essence. With a few drops of it, he moistened her full, red lips. She gave a faint sigh as life returned to her. The man's body shook with a paroxysm of coughing—that ever present cough—and heedless of a knife-blade broken in his side, he raised the bottle and drained the contents almost to the dregs. The very fire of hell seemed to flash from his eye; then the light flickered and died out, and for a second flared once more. A mist came before that eye, and in an instant it was glassy as its mate.

Fierce gusts of wind blew down the chimney, scattering ashes and embers about the hearth and floor. The firelight danced and cast fantastic shadows on the somber walls. The stricken man tottered, helpless, aimlessly. Slipping from his nerveless grasp, the flagon clattered on the ground and broke in a hundred pieces. The famous wine ran in a tiny stream along the floor, and in the fitful firelight, sparkled like a ruby snake. The falling man groped weakly. He lunged forward, grasped the friar's crucifix, and sinking to his knees, caught the coverlet, dragging it with him. He rolled over on his back, pressing the cross tightly to his mouth.

Father Ramon found him so. His blood was spattered on the bed and ran in another little stream, meeting the glittering elixir on the dark floor. On the vagabond's gargoyle-like face was a smile which actually softened now, rather than accentuated, its dire deformity. The crucifix was in his hand, still on his crooked lips.

Ghouls in the night, from the unconsecrated ground outside the graveyard wall, dug up the body. Then, in the dead man's tattered clothes, far out, they cast the bones into the quiet sea.

MARKING THE HISTORIC WAY.

Pomona—Through the efforts of El Camino Real Association and the generosity of the city council, five bells, marking the path of El Camino Real through this city, have been put in place. One of the bells tells the distance from the bell to the plaza in Los Angeles, another the distance to San Bernardino, and a third bears the name of the mayor and council who voted for the installation of the bells.

When El Camino Real Association will have completed its work, these bells will be found all over that part of California which was trod by the padres in the days of old when they made the trips from one mission to another, going all of the way on foot. The work is being pushed rapidly forward in all the Southern California counties.

EXCLUSIVELY CALIFORNIAN.

Los Angeles—The banquet of the Chamber of Commerce, February 21st, was largely attended and was distinctively Californian. John G. Mott, the toastmaster, is a member of Ramona Parlor, N.S. G.W., and the addresses of the evening dealt largely with the State and her future prospects after the Panama Canal's opening. The decorations, in charge of Leo Youngworth, also a member of Ramona Parlor, N.S.G.W., consisted exclusively of California fruits and flowers, while the menu was made up of the State's products.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF.

Sacramento—The "Grace Dollar," an ocean-going steamer, recently steamed up the Sacramento River, and discharged a large cargo of lumber at the Capital City. This is the first time since 1860 that an ocean-going vessel has been able to navigate the river as far as Sacramento, and the feat has attracted no little attention.

ECHOES OF THE LONG AGO

(MARGUERITE BOVEE, Alleghany, California.)

THE ROSE OF BRANDY CITY

IG JIM CARSON SAT IN HIS CABIN on Craig's Flat Ridge, after a hard day's labor with shovel and rocker, sewing buttons on a pair of trousers—a feminine diversion which brought a frown to his sun-burned forehead and, occasionally, a forcible expression to his lips, as the needle missed the aperture in the button and pierced the thumb of the unlucky hachelor.

The last button was in place, and as Jim laid the needle and thread upon a shelf, he said audibly, "Drat the fancy work, any how. Next time a bit of timber'll do," referring to a method of fastening the suspender by a splinter of wood.

Suddenly a sound like the sobbing of a child startled him, and for a moment he stood irresolute, uncertain whether he had imagined it; but the low, moaning sobs were too near to be a chimera. As Jim stepped to the cabin door, half startled by the unusual sound, the sun was dropping out of sight over the distant ridges, a mountain quail was calling coyly to her mate, and some hunter's dog was barking hoarsely far down the creek.

Looking hastily around, he discovered a small girl crouching beneath a thick clump of chaparral brush close to the cabin. Quickly he gathered the child from the ground, and carrying her to the cabin, seated her upon the doorstep, at the same time trying to soothe her. The little one soon ceased her sobbing and asked for a drink of water, and Jim offered her a slice of bread and wild honey, the spoil of some forest home of the wild bees, at the same time asking her her name.

The child understood little English, but by using a few Spanish phrases he discovered her name to bringing smoothness to the tangled curls, and the pair set out for Morristown to seek some trace of her protectors. Nothing had been seen of the delinquents, and after discussing the situation with his friends, Jim Carson returned to the cabin on Craig's Flat, taking with him the little charge. Two months later they moved to Brandy City, then a new field for gold explorers, and for ten years they lived there, growing with the camp.

Jim spent his evenings teaching little Rose, and after a while a few good women came to live there and Rose was kindly cared for by these people. Ten years found Rose Carson grown to a slender, dark-eyed girl, with a clear, olive complexion, and a sweet, half-sad manner, for her memory still retained the impression of the pitiful experience of her childhood.

She had long before learned to call Jim Carson "father," and the kind-hearted miner had surely filled a father's place toward the child, while every stalwart miner in the camp loved the beautiful girl, and she was known throughout the county as the "Rose of Brandy City."

One autumn evening, when the hills were glowing red and gold in the last rays of the setting sun, Jim sat smoking in a big rocker near the open door, with Rose on the doorstep beside him. Suddenly he dropped his hand upon her shining curls and said, "Rosie, girl, what do I hear about young Gardner? Are you going to leave the old man for the young one?" Blushing shyly, the girl looked up into her protector's face and replied, "No, Daddy Jim, not for a long time yet. I told Russel today that he must wait. You need me, Dad, and took care of me when I was left alone."

"Well, child, if you can be happy with the lad, don't let him grow weary of waiting," the old miner said. "I shall grow old, and would like to know that you are in a safe and happy home he-manner showed all the chivalry of the South, with the easily acquired bravado of early California, and he was passionately in love with Rose Carson. Between himself and Russel Gardner, no good feeling existed, for jealousy had made Lawrence keen to observe that Rose preferred the handsome New Yorker, with his fair skin and frank, blue eyes.

Addressing the girl, he said, "Miss Rose, may I beg you to attend the lecture with me tonight?" referring to a lecture to be given by a Mrs. Pratt, on temperance. Rose hesitated, at a loss for words to frame a refusal without angering Lawrence. Quickly divining her dilemma, Jim Carson said, "Rose will go with her old dad tonight, Thad." With a relieved smile, Rose said gaily, "Dad has the best right, you know, and he does not like to be second best with me." Lawrence bowed, and hiding them good evening, sauntered on toward the town.

After the lecture, Russel, who had been engaged with some legal work during the evening, closed his office with the intention of accompanying Jim Carson and his ward home. Stepping into the street, he came face to face with Thad Lawrence, who had been drinking heavily. He accosted Russel, saying, "You should have been present tonight, Russel, the lady's remarks would have greatly encouraged you in your efforts to become a total abstainer. Perhaps in the course of time you could become weaned from that little brown jug you conceal so carefully."

Russel sprang forward with an oath, and striking Lawrence in the face with his open hand, shouted angrily, "Do you accuse me of being a drunkard on the sly?" With a sneering laugh, Lawrence retorted, "If you are not, then can you say as much for your brother?"

Again Russel struck Lawrence, this time with his clenched fist. A crowd that had gathered then interfered and separated the two men. For two days the matter rested, but bitter animosity was gathering on both sides, and on Wednesday morning Thad Lawrence sent a messenger to Russel Gardner, demanding satisfaction. A meeting was immediately arranged, the seconds chosen, and on Friday morning at 4 o'clock, all the parties met in a grove of cedars, two miles from Brandy City.

The sun had not yet risen, and only the twitter of the wild birds disturbed the shady silence of the quiet grove. All through the summer night Rose Carson had paced the floor of her little room, sick at heart, yet powerless to avert the tragedy so soon to be enacted.

A few hours before, Russel Gardner had declared his love for her, and gained her promise to become his bride if he were victor in the duel of the morning. Jim Carson had consented sadly, for it seemed to him that the young couple were plighting their troth in the shadow of death.

Dawn was breaking, and in the grove the principals stood face to face, with drawn pistols. Their seconds were near, and with a few intimate friends of either party, with the resident physician, made up the spectators.

A wave of the hand, and simultaneously two shots rang out. Russel Gardner fell to the ground, shot through the heart, and Thad Lawrence leaned against a tree with blood pouring from a wound in his shoulder. He was quickly removed from the awful scene. As his seconds hurried him away, a cry was heard, and, like a wounded deer, Rose Carson dashed through the grove and flung herself beside her dead lover.

Friends lifted the unconscious girl, and forming a rude litter, placed thereon the body of Russel, and the sorrowful procession returned to Brandy City. No action was taken against Thad Lawrence, and in a few weeks he disappeared and was afterwards shot in a poker game in El Dorado.

Time softened the grief of Rose Carson for her lost lover, though she was still unmarried when Jim Carson died, five years later. Soon after his death, she joined a band of nurses going out to minister to the sick and wounded in the great battle between the Blue and the Gray, and in the homes of the little town the story is often told of the "Rose of Brandy City."

STATE RESTORING MISSION.

Sonoma—The State has started on the completion of the restoration of Mission San Francisco del Solano, and will soon replace the roof with the original tiles, which were removed before the State acquired the property. The building will be restored in its original state, and the old mission bell, which had been removed to San Francisco, will be hung in the tower. This mission, the last of the chain extending from San Diego, was founded July 4, 1823.

The Panama Canal Commission has requested the Forest Service to inspect the timber being procured at Seattle and Tacoma for the commission.

be Rose, that she was about eight years of age, and that her mother had been living with an Englishman three miles down the creek and had gone to Morristown for supplies and never returned. The forsaken child had lived alone in the lonely cabin for several days, with little to eat, and at last wandered out in search of help, finally reaching Jim Carson's cabin.

Worn out with grief and fatigue, she soon fell asleep, and far into the night Jim Carson sat and pondered over the future of the little one and what course to pursue. There were no women near, fit to assume the care of an innocent child, and his heart had gone out in generous pity to the forsaken baby.

When morning came she awoke bright and smiling. After a few clumsy efforts, Jim succeeded in fore I go. These are wild and troublous times, and a good woman needs a man's sheltering arm. Russel is hot-tempered, but a true gentleman, and your life will be safe in his keeping."

Rose was silent for some time, then said earnestly, "Dad, I fear Thad Lawrence and Russel will have trouble yet. Thad tries to annoy Russel whenever they meet, by sneers and half-concealed slurs at his brother, and it is hard for Russel to control his hasty temper. He knows that I fear serious consequences, or they would have fought it out long before this."

She ceased speaking as a step resounded on the gravel walk, and a moment later Thad Lawrence stood, bowing low before the cabin door. A Louisianian by birth, Lawrence was tall, slightly built, with raven black hair and piercing eyes; his

THE MONTH OF MARCH, 1864, DID not come in and go out with the proverbial lamb and lion arrangement. It had more of the characteristics of a famished burro. An editor, writing of the discouraging condition of mining, farming and business interests, said:

"We are still without rain. Not even a distant prospect of it is discernible in the sky. Matters are becoming serious. On the plains the cattle are dying by thousands; the crops are withered and parched beyond the power of resuscitation; the ditches are as dry as powder horns, and mining operations are at a standstill. The prospects ahead are gloomy, and an extensive emigration will begin as soon as mining operations open up for the summer in Nevada."

A correspondent of a newspaper, writing from San Luis Obispo County, stated that not a drop of rain had fallen in the south since November, and there was not a blade of green grass to be seen on any of the cattle ranges.

On the 10th of March an advance in price of feed and food products took place in San Francisco which spread throughout the State. Flour advanced to $8 a barrel; wheat to 2½¢ and barley to 3 cents a pound. Beans jumped from 1½ to 3 cents a pound, potatoes followed, and hay went up to $50 a ton.

As one result of this raise in prices, General Wright, in command of the Pacific Coast military district, ordered the horses and mules belonging to the United States army to be put on half rations of feed. Oregon was reported to have had an excellent rainfall and preparations were being made by San Francisco produce dealers to draw on that state for food supplies.

Stock Dies of Starvation.

The Sacramento river, on March 31st, was only four feet above low-water mark, and steamboats were having difficulty and delay getting over the "Hog's Back," a ridge that crossed the river about six miles from Rio Vista.

A resident of Los Angeles reported that on a day's journey made into the ranges around that place he had counted over 800 head of cattle dead from starvation. Cattle were being offered for sale at fifty cents a head in Santa Barbara County, and were considered dear at 75 cents a head south of Monterey County.

A shipment of flour made to Shanghai from San Francisco by vessel in January, was ordered returned by a telegram which was sent via New York, London and Calcutta, and was expected to reach Shanghai about the same time as the vessel arrived.

Old inhabitants of California began to tell of the drought of 1833, when the Sacramento River could be waded across at any place above the junction with the American, and ninety per cent of the livestock died from starvation. An old Indian chief in Sutter County told of being able to spit across the Feather River, and things were looking as blue as the sky, which was not flecked with a cloud until the 15th, when thunder showers prevailed in the northern part of the State, giving some localities an inch of rain and others only a sprinkle. The rainfall for the month, at Sacramento, was 1.36 inches, making for the season 5.61 inches.

Large droves of cattle, flocks of sheep, and herds of hogs were being driven from the foothills to the tule lands, and the islands of the San Joaquin and Sacramento Rivers, usually overflowed by the spring floods at this time of the year, were being used for feeding grounds for the starving livestock.

The month ended with a north wind blowing and carrying away the moisture the few showers had dropped upon the soil.

Heavy Earthquake Shock.

The heaviest shock of earthquake that San Francisco had felt since the '40s was experienced at 9:11 a. m., March 5th. It was felt in all the bay counties. While it upset kitchen utensils, knocked down pictures and shelf ornaments, broke some glass in show windows, and cracked some walls, no great damage to property or injury to persons occurred.

Many people, especially women, who had never felt a heavy earthquake shock before, were made seasick. The heaving appearance of the streets and oscillations of buildings produced a nauseating effect upon many people. A waiter in the dining-room of the Occidental hotel, who was carrying upon his uplifted hand a tray of dishes when the shock began, dropped it and the crash that followed caused everyone within hearing distance to believe the building was collapsing and to make a terrified rush for the nearest exit. An Englishman occupying a room in the third story of a lodging house on Kearney street, raised a tremendous commotion by shouting at the top of his voice, from an open window, for a ladder. It required the services of a policeman to go up and bring him down the stairway before he could be quieted. He left the "blawsted country" on the first steamer that departed.

A lodger in a hotel at Santa Cruz left a call for 9 a. m. before retiring the night before. The clerk making the call and the earthquake made their noise at his bedroom door at about the same time. He responded "all right" to the first knock; shouted louder, "all right," as the quake progressed, and when, with its final jerk, the shock rolled him out of bed, he arose, opened the door and shouted down the hallway at the hotelman: "What kind of damned arrangement is this you've got to wake a man up with?"

Brilliant Man Dies.

Rev. T. Starr King, pastor of the Unitarian church in San Francisco, died on March 4th from an attack of diphtheria, after an illness of a few days. His eloquent addresses in behalf of the Union and his ardent effort in aid of the Sanitary Fund had made for him a national reputation second only, perhaps, to that of Henry Ward Beecher. His untimely death was deplored in every part of the Union. Ten thousand persons attended his funeral on March 6th. The Legislature adjourned, courts and business houses suspended proceedings, flags were floated at half-mast, and minute guns were fired by order of President Lincoln. The deceased, being Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of the Masonic Order, that body conducted the funeral ceremonies, and the remains were placed in a vault built in front of the altar of the church.

T. Starr King came to San Francisco in 1860, soon became famed as a lecturer on important topics, and was considered one of the most eloquent men of his time. He had a premonition that he would die in his fortieth year, which he did, and also believed he was forewarned of his approaching death in a dream. He dreamed, a few nights before being taken ill, that he was in the act of shaving himself when the razor slipped and gashed his throat; he held the edges of the wound tightly together with his hand, while surgeons were summoned to attend him; three of these came, one following the other, and each told him his case was hopeless,—that he could not be saved. He awoke, deeply impressed by his dream, and when the throat disease developed he immediately made his will and appeared to be awaiting what he considered would be the inevitable end of his illness. During his last hour he spoke a farewell message to his wife and mother, who were in the East, then audibly repeated the Twenty-eighth Psalm and resignedly awaited the end.

The Legislature filled in another month of its session. It created the County of Alpine, which was then larger, in point of population and property values, than it has been since. The legislation enacted was all concerning matters of local importance, mainly regulating salaries and fees of county officials.

Politics Become Active.

The Central Pacific Railroad was completed to Rocklin, twenty-two miles from Sacramento, on the 20th of March, and on the next day an excursion train of seven cars took the members of the Legislature on a visit to the end of the track. Ex-Governor Stanford and Charles Crocker were in charge.

On March 25th the road ran its first freight train, consisting of three cars of granite, from Rocklin to Sacramento. It also established its first freight rate of $1 a ton, "all the traffic would bear" at that time. The company had now received six passenger cars and five locomotives from the East by sailing vessels around the Horn, and was rapidly getting ready to do business.

The San Jose and San Francisco railroad was now operating two passenger trains a day each way, and running a freight train as often as twice a week. A. C. Hewston was appointed superintendent.

Politics became active during the month. The Union Republican party held a convention in Sacramento on March 26th, to select ten delegates to attend the National Republican convention in June and nominate its candidates for President and Vice-president. The Union men of California were almost unanimously in favor of re-electing President Lincoln, and no other name was mentioned. Wm. H. Sears of Nevada County was the chairman of the convention, and the following prominent Union men were elected delegates: Thompson Campbell, John Bidwell, P. Banning, Rev. M. C. Briggs, Nathan Coombs, Robert Gardner, Wm. Ritter, O. N. Bradbury, W. S. McMurtry and James Otis.

General Grant In Command.

In the Civil War, General U. S. Grant, who had been made Lieutenant-General and given supreme command, next to the President, of the United States armies by Congress, went to Washington to take charge. This was his first visit to the seat of government since the war began. There was little activity on the part of the armies during the month, but reports of General Grant's plans of reorganization kept getting publicity and it is remarkable to read of the belief that prevailed that in General Grant the Union had found a man who could crush the rebellion. His decisive and aggressive action was waited for with a confidence of final success by every section of the country.

General Grant took command in a propitious time. The Southern Confederacy was evidently doomed, and only occupying Virginia, South Carolina and Georgia. It did not have a seaport open, and no lines of railroad communication, outside of the three states mentioned. It was now surrounded by larger and better equipped military forces than it could command, and its last man and its last dollar were in service.

How strong the Union sentiment prevailed in some families, is shown in the following incident: A party of surveyors in San Joaquin County were using a red and white flag for signalling purposes. On entering a field they were much surprised to be ordered off the premises by a seven-year-old boy and notified, no "seesh" were allowed on that ranch. They were told that they had better not come around his mother's house with that kind of a flag. On inquiry they found the objection was due to their flag having no blue and stars upon it. They promised to get the right kind of a flag at once, and did their signalling across that ranch with the Stars and Stripes.

Orange Growing a New Industry.

The home of S. N. Stranahan, at Jeffersonville, Tuolumne County, was burned the night of March 27th. Staying with Stranahan were I. T. Daun and family. Mrs. Daun and two young daughters were unable to escape and were burned to death. Daun had just been acquitted in a trial for the murder of a miner, and the fire was believed to have been set by some of Daun's enemies to revenge the death of their friend.

A part of the business section of Yreka was burned on March 18th, with an estimated loss of $18,000.

Boston Ravine, a small mining town in Nevada County, was the only one to go up in smoke during this month. It was burned on March 10th, fifteen buildings being destroyed, with a $25,000 loss.

The Eureka Company, at North San Juan, cleaned up $12,000 after a twelve days' run.

The Melones mine, in Calaveras County, was reported to have disclosed, by a blast, a chunk of quartz containing over $30,000 in gold.

The stage from Virginia City to Placerville on March 18th made the fastest trip on record. It rolled the distance in eleven hours and fifteen minutes.

The great orange-growing industry of Southern California was now in its incipency and was mentioned in a San Francisco journal as follows: "Los Angeles occasionally sends to San Francisco a portion of its orange crop. This, however, is not all ways of the finest quality that may be had. If the growers would only have patience, and not pluck the fruit too soon from the tree, it would be of a better quality."

"Oranges are often shipped from Los Angeles before they are ripe, and the people here get the impression, therefrom, that an orange is a sour thing. Give them time to ripen, before they are gathered, and they will then have the flavor and sweetness of this tropical fruit. Mexican and Panama oranges are sweet enough, but often taste insipid."

First Sacramento Valley Irrigation.

"At Los Angeles, ripening in the winter, they ripen slowly, but if given time, until say, April, before gathering, they will then have an excellent flavor. Some oranges that have just arrived from Los Angeles are fine, the rind, however, being thicker than Hawaiian oranges. The fruit from Wolfskill's orangery is the best. This orangery is probably the largest in the United States, and is just coming into full bearing. There are over 2000 trees, some twenty years old. There seems to be no reason why, in time, they should not grow there all the citrus fruit we can consume."

During the last week of March four vessels arrived with oranges from the Society Islands. The market was glutted—over a million of oranges were offered for sale and were going at a dime a dozen.

Los Angeles Grand Parlor Will Be Record Breaker

LOS ANGELES—MEMBERS OF THE Native Sons of the Golden West in this city are anxiously awaiting the convening of the Grand Parlor of that Order here, April 20th. The gathering will continue throughout the week, the time being about equally divided between work and pleasure.

The Grand Parlor will be held in the Auditorium, the theater beautiful, which is centrally located and which has every convenience for the accommodation of such a gathering. Directly across the street from the meeting place is Central Park, which will be utilized in the entertainment features.

The last Grand Parlor provided that at each subsequent session a memorial tree shall be planted, and the Park Commission of Los Angeles has consented to the placing of such a tree in Central Park, in the very heart of the city, where thousands congregate each day. The tree planting will be accompanied by appropriate exercises, and the park will be appropriately decorated for the week's festivities.

Reports from all over the State assure the largest attendance at the coming session of any previous Grand Parlor. In addition to the 500 delegates, thousands of members and their ladies will avail themselves of the opportunity to visit the southern part of the State and partake of Los Angeles' hospitality. Among the attendants will be many of the State's best-known and most-influential men.

The Grand Parlor Entertainment Committee, made up of representatives from the local Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters, is holding weekly meetings and has all details well in hand. Three days of the week—Monday, Wednesday and Friday—have been set aside for the work of the Grand Parlor. Tuesday will be given over to an all-day beach excursion, Thursday to an all-day automobile excursion to the missions, through the orange groves, and out into the foothills, with a barbecue at noon. All visitors—men and women—will be invited to participate in these.

of the Grand Parlor Entertainment Committee is now prepared to attend to reservations for the Grand Parlor to be held in Los Angeles the week of April 20th. Make your reservations through the committee. Just make your wants known, and they will be given prompt attention. In writing, state whether you desire a single or double room, with or without bath, and about what price you desire to pay. Address: Accommodations Committee, Grand Parlor, N. S. G. W., 248 Wilcox Bldg., Los Angeles.

The banquet, Friday night, and a high jinks, which is planned for one night of the week, will be exclusively for the men. But to show no discrimination against the fair sex, two exclusive features, a theater party and an afternoon reception, are being arranged exclusively for them.

Desiring to make the Thirty-seventh Grand Parlor session one that will be indelibly impressed upon the minds of its attendants, the Arrangements Committee has in contemplation many features, the nature of which is being kept a close secret.

The souvenir badge to be presented each member of the Grand Parlor will introduce a feature often suggested but never before carried out: a name plate bearing the recipient's name and the particular Parlor from which he hails. The badge itself will be a distinctive Los Angeles souvenir, and will be provided in such quantity as to assure the presentation of one to every visiting member of the Order.

The hotel accommodations of Los Angeles are such as to satisfy all tastes and are unlimited in number. The local committee desires all reservations to be made through the sub-committee on Accommodations, and it is hoped this course will be followed by all those who will come to Los Angeles for the Grand Parlor session. With this end in view, a letter will shortly be sent to all Subordinate Parlor secretaries of the Order asking information that will enable the committee to carry out the desires of all visitors.

CONCERNING THE GRAND PARLOR.

During this month, Subordinate Parlors are required to elect Grand Parlor delegates, and so general is the desire to go to Los Angeles this year, that each Parlor has many aspirants, which means keen but friendly contests. In many of the Parlors the election will be put off until the last meeting night in the month, in an endeavor to get in sufficient new members to increase the representation.

Until delegates are chosen, it is, of course, impossible to say who will be the contestants for Grand Parlor honors. Advancement of incumbents will be the order in the higher offices. For the Grand Third Vice-presidency, considered the stepping stone to the Grand Presidency, three candidates are mentioned—Jo V. Snyder of Nevada City, James J. McElroy of Oakland, and William P. Caub of San Francisco, all members of the Board of Grand Trustees.

The fact that these three will necessarily be eliminated, added to the fact that other members of the Board have not complied with the Grand Parlor laws in the matter of their official visits and are therefore not again eligible to Grand Parlor office, will offer excellent opportunity to those who aspire to be a Grand Trustee. That there will be many aspirants is a foregone conclusion.

Rumor has it that an attempt will be made to practically kill off the bands which have been organized in many of the Subordinate Parlors, by means of legislation detrimental to the bands' best interests.

San Francisco, because of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition to be held there, will be awarded both the Grand Parlor and the Admission Day celebration for 1915.

Sacramento having withdrawn, Vallejo and Santa Rosa will contest for this year's Admission Day honors, and promise a lively campaign. To add interest, there may be other places after the celebration before the Grand Parlor takes action.

Legislation will be proposed, making the requirement of a surgeon's certificate on the part of applicants for membership, optional with Subordinate Parlors.

HIGHWAY WILL BE COMPLETED BY 1915

Sacramento—A $5,500,000 guarantee of faith in the value of the State Highway system has been furnished to the State by counties which have subscribed for highway bonds in excess of that amount in order to assure prosecution of the highway work in advance of the opening of the 1915 expositions. The State Highway bonds bear four per cent interest, and under the law must be sold at par and accrued interest. No sales have been made in the general market since October, 1912. When the lack of a market for low-rate bonds promised to continue, the Highway Commission appealed to the supervisors of counties to take advantage of an act passed by the last Legislature permitting investment of county funds and reselling of State bonds. In return for this co-operation, the Highway Commission agreed to expend the sums received within the limits of the counties financing the bond sales.

About thirty counties have responded, permitting a total of $5,719,500 of highway bond sales, with about $1,000,000 additional informally pledged. Most of the counties have merely taken care of the shrinkage between the par value and the market demand. As the State maintains the State Highway, the saving to the county in maintenance in practically every instance is as great in the first year as the depreciation loss which the county stands to make the bonds saleable. Several counties with considerable money on hand are keeping the bonds, thus bringing an interest return of four per cent in place of the two per cent which the funds have been drawing from the banks. The depreciation has averaged less than five per cent.

The counties in which sales of or pledges to purchase the State Highway bonds have been definitely made are as follows, according to a list given out by the State Highway Commission: Los Angeles, $695,000; San Diego, $557,000; Alameda, $500,000; Solano, $390,000; Contra Costa, $300,000; Colusa, $290,000; San Luis Obispo, $250,000; Santa Clara, $228,000; Glenn, $218,500; Kern, $200,000; San Mateo, $200,000; Orange, $200,000; Imperial, $200,000; Fresno, $150,000; Marin, $150,000; Sacramento, $150,000; Santa Barbara, $141,000; Tuolumne, $125,000; El Dorado, $150,000; San Bernardino, $105,000; Riverside, $100,000; Humboldt, $100,000; Stanislaus, $75,000; Santa Cruz, $75,000; Siskiyou, $50,000; Monterey, $45,000; Mendocino, $45,000; San Benito, $25,000; Shasta, $5,000.

This co-operation, the Highway Commission believes, will make possible the completion, in time for the 1915 expositions, of the greater part of the coast line between San Diego and San Francisco and north to Eureka, the west Sacramento Valley highway from Red Bluff to Benicia, and a considerable part of the route through the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys between Bakersfield and Red Bluff via Fresno, Sacramento and Marysville.

STATE MINERAL NEWS

A ten-foot vein of coal has been discovered at Harrison Gulch, Shasta County.

At the Alleghany mine in Sierra County a gold strike running $1000 to the ton has been made.

English capitalists are being interested in California mines and are said to have much capital for investment therein.

Experiments with the desulphurizing process at the Balakala smelter in Shasta County are said to be encouraging, and it is believed will be acceptable to the farmers, whose lands have heretofore been injured by sulphur fumes generated in copper smelting.

A report from Jackson, Amador County, is to the effect that a rich strike has been made in the Keystone mine, one of the State's famous old gold producers.

Advices from Alleghany, Sierra County, indicate the Croesus mine is well named. A pocket of gold-studded quartz was recently uncovered, and in a single week between $75,000 and $100,000 was yielded.

Eastern people are negotiating for the Plumas Eureka mine near Johnsville, Plumas County, one of the State's pioneer gold properties.

Owing to an abundance of rain and snow, hydraulic mining is in full blast in Sierra County.

An investigation by the United States Geological Survey of supposed oil territory near Oroville, Butte County, has given negative results, the oil "showing" on the surface of water having been found to be caused by the presence of iron oxide.

According to preliminary figures compiled by the United States Geological Survey, California's silver production was 1,606,261 ounces last year, an increase of 306,125 ounces over 1912. The copper output was 36,700,430 pounds, an increase of 3,248,758 pounds. Lead showed an increase of 3,916,130 pounds, the 1913 total output being 5,060,841 pounds. The yield of zinc was 4,500,000 pounds, 154,509 pounds greater than in 1912.

The long-sought gravel deposit on Columbia Hill, above Nevada City, Nevada County, has been discovered and prospects look very bright.

Southern California people are actively developing the Premier gravel property near Grass Valley, Nevada County.

Quartz mills all over the Mother Lode, many of which had been idle through lack of water, are now in active operation.

There is much demand for mining properties throughout the State, and indications are that 1914 will witness a great revival of interest in this industry.

Hollister—The annual pilgrimage to Fremont Peak will be made under the auspices of the Fremont Memorial Association, March 8th, and will be participated in by the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Hollister, Watsonville, Salinas, Monterey, Santa Cruz and Castroville. The flag raising ceremony which has become an annual event in the community, attracting hundreds of sightseers to the peak on the summit of the Gabilans, some twelve or fifteen miles southeast of this city, will this year draw the usual crowd.

FOR ALL CALIFORNIA

We are glad to note that those persons and publications in California that have endeavored, mainly by misrepresentation, to create sectional hatred throughout the State, are fast losing ground, and that the people generally have come to realize that united action is imperative if California's best interests are to be conserved.

This is a large State, both in area and in possibilities, and there are abundant room and opportunities for wonderful development in every section. If we but devote our efforts toward advancing the interests of the particular locality in which we have cast our lot, instead of wasting our endeavors in trying to "knock" some other locality, we will have no cause for complaint, either against our own or our neighboring locality.

Any advancement in a particular section of the State indirectly benefits every other section, and this fact should cause us to applaud every forward movement in the State, no matter what section is the direct benefactor thereof. No one section has every advantage, but California, taken as a whole, has, in one locality or another, every combination of advantages that could be demanded by the most exacting homeseeker.

Unity of action, with a determination to fully develop every fertile acre in this great and glorious State, should be our slogan. Sectional prejudices, from which spring naught but discontent, should be obliterated, and we should be filled with a desire to have CALIFORNIA—not Northern, Central, or Southern California,—reap a full and rich harvest from the limitless possibilities with which she has been blessed by the Giver of All Things.

The visit of several hundred San Franciscans recently to Los Angeles, in the interest of the big exposition to be held in the city by the Golden Gate next year, and the open-handed welcome accorded them in the Angel City, show that sectionalism holds no place in the makeup of the "big" men of both cities. From Los Angeles, San Francisco is entitled to every assistance in her undertaking—which will be of benefit to the whole State—and she will get it. The visit but cemented the friendship existing between the two cities.

The decision of the southern counties to exhibit at the San Francisco exposition, and that of the northern counties to exhibit at the San Diego exposition, give evidence that any little misunderstandings have been amicably settled, as they should be. San Francisco and San Diego are both, for their enterprise, entitled to the best support that every county in the State can give them, and we feel sure that they will not be disappointed, and that the counsel of the broad-minded men, not of the sectional pinheads, will prevail.

Thus, believing in the greatness of ALL California, we are happy in the course events affecting the State's welfare has taken. While rejoicing in the advancement made in any one section, we rejoice not because that advancement may affect the southern, central, or northern part of the State, as the case may be, but because it redounds to the glory of CALIFORNIA, the mecca of all who seek the best that is to be had upon earth.

Readers of country weeklies no doubt saw this startling piece of "syndicated" news in many of those papers last month:

Richmond—While chasing a dog from her front porch, which was acting in a suspicious manner, Mrs. C. H. Boyd of Richmond fell and broke her arm.

Wonder what kind of a "porch, which was acting in a suspicious manner,"—to be exact in quoting—that could have been.

The sentencing to state's prison for life of two I.W.W. agitators at Marysville, for the murder of the district attorney of Yuba County, ought to have a quieting effect on their brothers. These I.W.Ws. are a menace to the country's peace, and they should be promptly and permanently suppressed by the Government.

The Pullman Palace Car Company is said to have issued an order for the dismissal of all employees over 45 years of age. The order is occasioned by the going into effect of a new pension rule under which these men would benefit.

This demonstrates the smallness of a big company which has accumulated millions by exacting unreasonable prices from the traveling public. It is too bad there is not some way by which the concern can be made to suffer for this act of injustice to those who have served it the best part of their lives.

Such tactics on the part of big corporations make a mockery of the pension system, and have a tendency to make all fair-minded people enemies of corporations.

Maury Diggs, under conviction in the Federal Court for while slavery, is again in the toils of the law on a similar charge. If one-half that has been told in the daily papers regarding this beast in man's form be true, he should be dealt with as is the devouring beast of the forest. Too much of honest people's tax-money is expended on such monsters in court trials; they should be dispatched in a quicker and less-expensive manner.

A man arrested in Los Angeles for forgery lays his downfall to "association with men of wealth." Early in youth we are taught to be careful of our associates; but as the prisoner is "a member of a wealthy family," he is entitled to some little sympathy. Wealthy men, however, are, as a rule, not so bad as often painted. This fellow, no doubt, believes in the theory that a poor excuse is better than none.

For failure to provide for his wife and children, a Los Angeles man has been sentenced to the county rock-pile for two years, during which time the county will pay $1.50 per day to the wife. The family is to be congratulated, but the county is to be pitied, for a man who will not support his wife and offspring is not worth $1.50 a day, nor any other sum, even on a rock-pile.

And still the drunken auto driver holds sway, encouraged by the "not sufficient evidence to convict" determination of the prosecuting attorneys hired by The People to protect their lives and property.

Just as a reminder to the several Parlors of Native Sons of the Golden West: Have you sent in your contribution to the Pioneer Mothers' monument fund? Don't overlook this, and don't be swerved from your duty by any picayunish objections that may be advanced. Remember, solely, the Pioneer Mother, and all that we owe her, and her memory.

Everybody in California ought to be happy and smiling, for weather conditions give every indication of immense crops. We really haven't any just cause for complaint, any way; but even our imaginary troubles should have been drowned in the downpour that has drenched the State.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The April edition of The Grizzly Bear will be a Special Anniversary Number, considerably enlarged, and will be mailed to our thousands of subscribers throughout the State on April 6th, instead of the last day of March, as is the usual custom.

This edition is being published on account of the Grand Parlor, N.S.G.W., which meets in Los Angeles, April 20th, and will be a handsome souvenir of that occasion.

In addition to the magazine's regular features, the April number will contain much special matter, illustrated, concerning Los Angeles and the southern part of the State.

This edition will have a specially large circulation in Los Angeles, and hence offers an excellent advertising opportunity for those desiring first-class publicity in an established publication that is circulated in every part of California.

Advertising space for this number is now offered, and can be arranged by mail. Or, if desired, a representative will call if requested. Address: Grizzly Bear Pub. Co., 248 Wilcox Bldg., Los Angeles.

GOOD STATISTICS?

With a school attendance of 44,217, the largest in the history of San Francisco, Superintendent of Schools Roncovieri estimates that the population of San Francisco is approximately a half-million people. Statistics show that multiplying the school attendance by 11.2 gives the entire number of persons in a community. This computation makes the exact population 495,230. —San Francisco Municipal Record.

The "Record," being the city's official publication, the school attendance of San Francisco, as above set forth, must be considered authentic. But whether "statistics show that multiplying the school attendance by 11.2 gives the entire number of persons in a community," we do not know. We doubt, however, that the "exact population" of any community can be arrived at by any such method of calculation.

Be that as it may, however, San Francisco's statisticians can certainly have no objection to applying their figures to the school attendance of other cities, to show the "entire number of persons" in those cities. The daily school attendance in Los Angeles is officially given as 60,000. Multiplying that school attendance by the San Francisco statisticians' 11.2 makes the "exact population" of that city 672,000, or 176,770 greater than San Francisco's population.

By San Francisco's own method of reasoning, therefore, there can be no doubt but that the southern city's population is greatly in excess of that of the northern city, and that California has a new metropolis—Los Angeles.

Is it any wonder that social conditions are in such a deplorable state, when we take into consideration the practice in vogue in our courts of dismissing the charge against a man of contributing to the delinquency of a female minor upon his promise to marry her? The fact that such a culprit had not, previous to his arrest, married his victim, is self-evident proof that he is guilty and should be punished to the law's fullest extent.

The sanctity of the marriage vow has no meaning whatever to such an one. He takes advantage of that course simply to save his worthless self from a deserved fate. In ninety-nine out of every hundred such cases the defendant will, immediately upon dismissal of the charge against him, desert his "bride" and seek another victim. By following such a course in these cases, our courts not only encourage the debauchery of minor females, but show a disgusting disposition to aid and abet such crimes.

RIVERSIDE, FAIR RIVERSIDE.

Beneath the noble Rubidoux,
That honors the valley green,
And memories bears of pioneers
Who trod thy desert sheen,
Stands Riverside, fair Riverside,
Gracing the land below;
In stately pride, while, far and wide
The luscious orange grows.

Here dwelt, of old, heroic souls
Who dared the deserts plain;
And noblest of the pioneers
Who struggled not in vain.
And Riverside, fair Riverside,
Monument to them stands;
In stately pride, while, far and wide,
Spread fertile, verdant lands.

Today with thanks on yonder heights,
Let us build our altar fires;
Make glad our hearts with thankful pray'rs,
To Him Whose love inspires.
For Riverside, our Riverside,
Graces the land below,
In stately pride, while, far and wide,
God's precious fruits do grow.

RECALLS EARLY-DAY TELEGRAPH LINE

Recalling the days when the telegraph was new in California, an insulation of the first overland circuit was recently found on a spruce tree near Forest Hill, Placer County, by Harold T. Power. This old-style "hanger" of the wire that brought the Civil War news into the State in the '60s consists of a chunk of solid oak, six inches thick, into which a cast-iron double hook is set with gutta-percha insulation. The block was nailed to the trunk of the tree with three wrought-iron nails, which were taken out in an excellent state of preservation in spite of their three-score years of service.

According to F. H. Lamb of the Western Union Company, to whom Power showed the insulation and described the location in which it was found, it is a part of the line between Placerville, El

OLD TYPE TELEGRAPH LINE INSULATOR.

Taken by J. A. Ferguson, from spruce tree standing along side of Main Divide road from Forest Hill to Baker Ranch, in Placer County, California, about one-quarter mile north from Breese and Wheeler reservoir. The insulator consists of a black-oak block into which is cemented a gutta-percha insulating holder and a cast-iron hook for holding the telegraph wire. Wrought-iron nails fastened the block to the tree. The nails are preserved because of the purity of the iron of which they are composed.

The insulator was probably erected in 1859 or in 1860. It was on the original Overland transcontinental telegraph line, which was completed to Salt Lake City October 26, 1861. The portion of the line between Dutch Flat and Placerville (connected the then important mining towns of Iowa Hill, Yankee Jims, Todds Valley, Forest Hill, Michigan Bluff, Georgetown and Coloma), on which this insulator was located, was acquired by the California State Telegraph Company in 1861, and may have been built by the Alta Telegraph Company, which had a line between Placerville, California, and Virginia City, Nevada, in the late fifties.

HAROLD T. POWER.

Dorado County, and Dutch Flat, Placer County, which was acquired by the Western Union in 1860 from the California State Telegraph Company. The line was extended by the Western Union to Salt Lake in 1861, where it was tied with the Eastern wire on October 6th of that year. Lamb thinks that the part of the line from which this insulation comes was originally constructed by the Alta Telegraph Company, which had a line into Virginia City in the late fifties. In any event, he says, it was part of the first overland circuit which brought Civil War news into California.

At that time, when the telegraph was still a novelty, and interest ran high in the war news of the day, it was the custom of the miners to congregate in the telegraph office in the evening and listen to the operator while he read off the news on its way to San Francisco. So the mining camps scooped the city on the big Eastern stories.

F. M. Angellotti, Justice of the State Supreme Court and a member of Mt. Tamalpais Parlor, N.S.G.W., San Rafael, and William M. Conley, Superior Judge of Madera County and Past Grand President, N.S.G.W., have announced their candidacy for Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court.

Alison F. Watt of Grass Valley, Grand President N.D.G.W., arrived in Los Angeles, February 16th, to visit the Parlors in the southern part of the State, and was met at the depot by Annie I. Dempsey of Los Angeles Parlor, a former Grand Trustee.

Two little native sons have recently appeared in San Francisco—one at the home of George F. Welch, member of Precita Parlor, N.S.G.W., and former Grand Trustee, and the other at the home of Supervisor Emmet Hayden, member of Mt. Tamalpais Parlor, N.S.G.W.

Mrs. Katherine Hall of Portola Parlor, N.D.G.W., San Francisco, now a resident of Los Angeles, gave a delightful luncheon at her home, February 19th, in honor of Grand President Alison F. Watt of Grass Valley. The guests included Mesdames Prather and Adair of Los Angeles Parlor and Corcoran of Mariposa Parlor.

EXECUTIVE BOARD MEETING.

ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT meetings during the month was that of the San Francisco District Executive Board, which held an all-day session at San Francisco, February 7th. The incoming officers had been invited to take part in the deliberations, and all responded, one member coming from Santa Cruz, and another from Pacific Grove. Twenty members of the Board were present, besides the new officers, and a splendid session was held.

The morning was given over to business of immediate importance, with reports from the various chairmen present. At 12 o'clock, luncheon was served, at which Mrs. Orr, State President, Mrs. Denniston, General Federation Chairman of the Endowment Fund, and Mrs. Sanborn, President of the Woman's Board of the P.P.I.E., were guests of honor. In the afternoon the women addressed the board, extending many helpful messages, and adding very much to the enjoyment of the meeting.

One very important decision reached at the session was the selection of the meeting place for the next district convention. Invitations had been extended by Eureka, Pacific Grove and St. Helena. Eureka offered every inducement, going so far as to provide everything except railroad fare, free of all charge, to the delegates. Length of time consumed in transportation seemed to have a deterrent effect in this selection, and it was afterwards said that later on, when the railroad is finished, there might be a better opportunity for a convention in that city. Eureka clubwomen were very anxious to secure the convention, believing it would have a vitalizing effect on their home clubs, but the board believed they would be voicing the sentiments of the clubs when they finally selected Pacific Grove as the next meeting place. Before voting on the cities, St. Helena withdrew in favor of Pacific Grove.

In the afternoon, Mrs. Sanborn addressed the women on the work of securing funds for the Pioneer Mothers' Monument for the Exposition, and also spoke at length on the work of the committee, newly formed, for the prevention of white-slave traffic during the Exposition year. Mrs. Denniston told of her work with the Endowment Fund, and of her ambition to have this fund complete by May, when the General Federation meets in Chicago. Mrs. Orr spoke on general club matters, making her usual "chatty" speech to small audiences, but in which she gathers the audience right into her confidence. We all think a great deal of Mrs. Orr, and will be sorry to lose her at the expiration of her term of office.

The Executive Board of the San Francisco District held another meeting during the month, on February 28th, and being called to make arrangements for the breakfast and reception to take place the first Saturday in April. Prior to these arrangements, much business was transacted, and the final reports of all chairmen were presented. They were instructed to send their accounts for postage, etc., to their state chairman, for presentation to the State Convention. The reports presented showed what splendid work has been accomplished during the past year, even improving on the first year under Mrs. Shuman's guidance. Further plans were discussed for the formation of a new club, to be composed of the members of Mrs. Shuman's board, and who are not disposed to allow their little reunions to be disturbed because they are not to work together as a board next year, hence the club. These women have worked together for two years, over twenty in number, all in accord, without one discordant note in that time. They feel now that they can go ahead in their organization, knowing they have not only perfected a splendid work, but also lasting friendships. Mrs. Shuman's perfect tact and guidance have been in a large measure responsible for this "oneness" of view in their work, and which has made for such fine results in all their efforts. It is expected by the next issue that their "Down and Out Club" will have come to life.

NOTES OF THE CLUBS.

"The Wanderers" of Salinas are still dealing with the Panama Canal, the latest phase of the question with them being its bearing on immigration. Their meeting last month was very large, opening with a talk on "Immigration," by Miss Mahel Coulter. She spoke of the large influx of Europeans to the Pacific Coast, and of the opportunities awaiting them here. Mrs. J. H. Andreason, one of the bright lights of the club, spoke on "The New Immigration or Slavic Influx," and drawing a comparison between the immigrants of Northwestern Europe and those now coming from Southeastern Europe; her talk very much favored the old immigrants from the northwestern portions. Mrs. R. L. Porter spoke on "Our Present Immigration Laws from the Viewpoint of National Eugenics"; she told of the effects of these laws on those now arriving, as well as future immigrants, presenting some very intelligent and instructive views of this question. Miss B. Porter spoke on "General Slavic Characteristics," and Rev. A. E. Patch on "Immigration Problems in General." As Mr. Patch has given much time to research of the immigration question, the Wanderers were especially grateful in securing his presence for the meeting. A rising vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Patch. During this month, Dr. Bertola, district chairman of Health, addressed the club, the latter having combined for the day for a large meeting to hear the doctor speak on "Hygiene of Home and City." I have no notes at present of the meeting, but it is a foregone conclusion that it was a large and interesting one. Dr. Bertola's name being sufficient to always bring a large attendance of clubwomen to bear her.

Mrs. A. F. Jones, president of the Northern District, has been a very busy woman during the month, preparing for her convention, which will be held in Woodland on March 31st and April 1st and 2d. She has spent several days in Woodland, meeting with the local committees, and attending personally to the details of the meeting. At the last meeting, an outline of the program to be furnished by the local club members was presented to Mrs. Jones. They propose to have both day and evening sessions, the days being given over to the business part of the convention, with the evenings arranged by the Woodland clubwomen, and providing the entertainment of the delegates. A large reception is planned for April 1st, and a play and musical program for the evening of April 2d. March 31st will be the one evening devoted to business. An automobile ride has been planned for one afternoon, when the delegates will be taken to the University Farm at Davis, where luncheon will be served the delegates. Mrs. Jones has promised some good speakers, and will present a splendid program.

Reciprocity Day will be celebrated in Sacramento on March 3rd, the Tuesday Club of that city acting as hostess club. A special program is being prepared. All of the clubs from near-by points have been invited, thirty women from Woodland having already signified their intention of attending. During the meeting, the Woodland women will present the invitation of the clubs of their town to the Federated Sacramento clubs of Northern California to attend the district convention.

The Monterey Civic Club held a very important meeting last month, their object being to seek information regarding settlement work. Mrs. J. H. Andreason of Salinas had been invited to speak to the women, and from her vast knowledge of this question they gained much information. Mrs. Andreason told them of her work in New York and San Francisco, emphasizing the need for settlement houses in the small towns, and urging those in affluent circumstances to take up this work, with the idea of bettering the condition of the poorer classes, helping them by supplying opportunities for employment, enjoyment and happiness. This meeting followed a general movement to secure a clubhouse as a civic center for settlement work. Edward Berwick, of the World's Peace Congress, also made an address. At the conclusion of the program, the following resolution was adopted by the club: "Resolved, That the Monterey Civic Club hereby endorses the peace policy followed by the United States Government, and begs the President to take steps toward the summoning of the next Hague conference for the discussion of measures needed for a universal naval holiday, somewhat similar to that which, by the provisions of the Treaty of Ghent, has been maintained on the Great Lakes between Canada and the United States."

A new club has been started in San Mateo County, to be known as the San Mateo County Civic Betterment League. The league will be composed of representative women from the Peninsula towns, and is the outcome of the recent jury in which women from these towns played a large part. On the dismissal of the jury, they decided to form an organization, looking to the correction of many of the conditions which they found existing in their county, and summing up the leaders, it is to be expected that should there be a repetition of these conditions, or any attempt to repeat them, there will be "something doing" in San Mateo County. It has been rumored that several women from the Peninsula towns will be candidates for office, one even establishing a precedent in announcing herself as candidate for the Assembly from her county, and another seeking the position of treasurer of Burlingame. Two others have stated they will seek the nomination for trustee of their respective towns, so it is expected that the clubwomen will figure largely in politics of the present year.

Architects' plans have been submitted to Mrs. Frank Baum of the building committee of the Hollywood Woman's Club, and it is expected that these will soon be passed upon by the committee. They are still deep in the plans for their new clubhouse and furnishings, and on February 14th gave a card party to help swell the funds. The following members have been named as delegates to the convention to be held in Santa Barbara in March: Mesdames Smith, Wright, Baum and Cason.

Miss Florence Musto, representative of the Parent-Teachers' Association of San Francisco, was called in to assist in the formation of a new club in Burlingame during last month. While popularly known as the "Mothers' Club," it is a branch of the above-named association, with all of the aims of the parent body. Mrs. Charles Godfrey, the president, is one of the most active clubwomen of Burlingame, and her ambition in this new organization is not only to secure the best conditions possible for the children, but to educate the mothers in many new ideas, which, as a general thing, they are slow in adapting. Dr. Caroline Goss Haskell has been made chairman of "child hygiene," and in her hands this subject may assume a different aspect than which it has hitherto enjoyed. We predict splendid success for the Parent-Teachers' Association, with Mrs. Godfrey as its leader.

A decided novelty was enjoyed by the Pacific Coast Women's Press Association last month, when the members took a "dip" into politics. Representatives of all parties had been invited to speak by Mrs. Corwall, chairman of the day, and responded as follows: "Republicanism," Francis Keesling; "Democracy," Senator L. W. Juillard; "Prohibition," George De Kay; "Progressivism," Milton U'Ren; "Socialism," M. T. Christenson; "Home Rule and Taxation," Walter McArthur. They were all splendid speakers, and one bad to concede, when they finished, that all the "parties" are good, and all have splendid merits—if we would all be led by the speakers. But—were we?

The subject of redistricting is now disturbing the delegates to the many conventions. San Francisco District disposed of the subject by the following resolution, copies of which have been sent to the other districts: "Whereas, This San Francisco District Federation of Woman's Clubs in session assembled at Santa Rosa has held a free discussion of redistricting the San Francisco District, as proposed at the State Federation at Fresno in May last, and Whereas, The general sentiment seemed to be against any change affecting the San Francisco District, therefore, be it Resolved, That we, the San Francisco District Federation of Woman's Clubs do earnestly protest to the State Federation against any change in the boundaries of our district." Miss Jennie Partridge of the San Francisco District was appointed a member of this committee, and has been called on by the different conventions to give her views, and to her credit it is said that she gives a fair and impartial view of the question. At the present writing it is thought that Los Angeles District will stand alone for redistricting, Alameda County having stood with San Francisco, and it is thought that the northern convention will also vote against it.

San Mateo Club is working on a rather ambitious effort, in the shape of a "boost magazine" for their county. They expect to prepare a book of something like seventy-five pages, setting forth the advantages of their county, with its resources, as well as presenting photographs showing the beauties of the Peninsula country. They have a splendid opportunity for the latter, the many beautiful homes and gardens lending themselves admirably to this feature. San Mateo County is the garden county of the State, and colored photos of the beautiful flowers produced will be presented. Some of the best writers of the county have offered their services for the book, and many stirring articles are looked for. It is expected that the book will be ready for May, when it will be taken to the biennial at Chicago, and where it is hoped it will act as an advertisement for their county. Many of the women who attended the last biennial will need no reminders of San Mateo County and the hospitality of its women, for they took back to their homes many pretty little souvenirs of both, after their reception by the women of the Peninsula county. As this work will also receive assistance from the men of their town, it is expected that their effort will meet with great success. During the past month, the club celebrated "Founders' Day," with Mrs. Charles McCarthy presiding. Samuel Shortridge was the speaker of the afternoon.

"Home Industry Day" was celebrated lately by the Twentieth Century Club of Oakland. Miss Mary B. Vail, chairman of home economies in the San Francisco District, gave an interesting talk on pure foods, with the subject, "Short Cuts in House-keeping." Miss Vail also presented an exhibit of foodstuffs, with the proper proportions of each allowed for one meal. Later on, Miss Wilkin, of the Home Industry League, was a speaker, and also presented an interesting exhibit, the latter, of course, consisting entirely of California goods. The club had made this a "public day," having issued no invitations, but inviting the general public to both lectures and exhibitions.

Los Angeles recently had a "Civic Day," devoted to topics of civic interest, such as "The Public Parks," "Obligations of American Citizenship," "Tree Planting," "Woman Suffrage," etc. Among the speakers were J. B. Lippincott, who is connected with the force of the Los Angeles aqueduct; Dr. R. W. Hunt, of the Southern California University, and Mrs. Seward Simons, all of whom are well versed in their subject. The meeting was preceded by a luncheon served at the Woman's Clubhouse in Los Angeles.

Corona Club of San Francisco held a valentine luncheon, and later a reception to the state officers, on Valentine's Day. All of the members appeared in costumes representing valentines. Mrs. Orr represented "The Heart of the Federation"; Mrs. Woodbridge, state chairman of civics, was "Madame Civics," and her costume consisted of a dust cap, ornamented with fly swatters, an apron thickly labeled with "sanitary signs," while she was "armed" with a broom and duster. Mrs. Rhinehart, chairman of literature, was encased in a book; and so on, the costumes all being exceedingly unique. The guests were all presented with valentines, suitable "poetry" being supplied by a cupid who presented them. We are informed that Miss Jessica Briggs, State Corresponding Secretary, was the bright mind that composed the rhymes, all bearing on some particular fad of the recipients. The program went forward with the usual dash and vigor that this particular club always lends to all its social days.

Clubwomen do not devote their entire time to cards nor dansants, as is the popular impression, and no better example can be offered than in the town of Burlingame, where the past president of the Burlingame Club, Mrs. Mary Gervais, now acts as librarian in the public library. Mrs. Gervais has converted this library from a mere "book room" into a beautiful library, with hanging baskets, growing plants, Indian baskets and other curios to help out the general effect. She has installed several cases of curios, and lately collected all the curios to be had in the town, arranging them with considerable care, and then invited the public to come and inspect them. Many of the relics were loaned for the occasion, but the day resulted in a permanent exhibition for the library, and now stands there to Mrs. Gervais' credit. She is now arranging a manufacturing exhibit, with the products in the raw form, and then brought up to the finished product. Eastern manufacturers have responded very liberally to Mrs. Gervais' plea for their raw products, some of them going to considerable expense to arrange their exhibits in handsome cases. This exhibit will also include home-industry products and will probably be shown early next month. A visit to the Burlingame library by the librarians of other small towns would prove an interesting and educational one for some of them.

A Los Angeles paper states as follows: "Miss Anne Morgan has found partners for the society of girls to whom she is having the tango taught properly. They told her they did not like to dance with one another, and so she has invited the Young Men's Christian Association and men's church societies to attend the next dance." As this is likely to develop into a matrimonial society, we think it would not be a bad idea to establish a cooking class as an "auxiliary" to the tango class, for a "man must eat," you know.

CLUB PERSONALS.

Mrs. J. W. Orr, Mrs. E. G. Denniston and Mrs. Frederiek Sanborn were guests at the recent luncheon given by the Executive Board of the San Francisco District.

Miss Janet Maclay, newly-elected corresponding secretary of the San Francisco District, was a recent visitor to San Francisco.

Mrs. James Wallace Orr attended the convention of the San Joaquin District and also that of the Alameda District during the past month.

Professor S. H. Clark of the University of Chicago is a guest in Los Angeles, where he has appeared before several of the woman's clubs.

Mrs. James Sweet and Mrs. George Luttrell of Santa Rosa were in San Francisco recently.

Mrs. Lee Daingerfield, newly-elected treasurer of the San Francisco District, is recovering from a bad cold contracted during her recent visit to the north.

Mrs. W. V. Grimes of Pacific Grove presented the invitation of Pacific Grove to the Executive Board of the San Francisco District for their consideration, and it was later accepted.

Mrs. F. H. Warner, a former Angeleno, but now of New York, is at present in Los Angeles, where she has addressed several of the clubs. Mrs. Warner holds the position of corresponding secretary to the National Federation of the Congregational Woman's Home Missionary Union.

Among those from California most likely to attend the National Federation meeting in Chicago in May are Mrs. Percy Shuman, Mrs. E. G. Denniston and Mrs. Percy King.

Mrs. S. W. Bingham of San Mateo is a guest of her mother in Los Angeles.

Mrs. George Murray and Mrs. Henry Hansen of Humboldt County contemplate a visit to San Francisco in March.

OF BENEFIT TO FRUIT AND NUT GROWERS.

Berkeley—According to a decision received from the Postoffice Department at Washington by the local Chamber of Commerce, dried and cured fruits and nuts may be shipped by parcel post to any part of the world. Dried and cured fruits, aside from being useful when fresh fruit is not obtainable, are declared by the Department of Agriculture to afford a nutritious and economical diet. The shipment of these commodities through the mails will increase consumption and stimulate production.

FAVOR SILK PRODUCTION.

San Francisco—Announcement was made at the recent annual meeting of the Ladies' Silk Culture Society of California that during the coming season 5,000,000 silk worms will be raised at the society's station on the Rutherford farm in Napa County. Thirty years of patient experiments, say the women, have proved that California can be made a silk-producing state, and that the industry can be made commercially practicable. The society has begun a state-wide agitation in favor of silk production, as thirty-eight counties, it is estimated, can successfully grow mulberry trees and raise silk worms.

Florida buttonwood, a tree confined largely to the keys along the south coast, is very highly prized for use in cooking on ships' galleys. It burns slowly with an even heat and makes but little smoke or ash.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

THE ADVANCING SPRING SEASON shows an inclination to effect certain changes in fabrics and lines. Particularly is this evidenced in the silks that are now being introduced with a greater degree of "body," or weight, than has been the case in a long while.

Paris has decreed the revival of taffetas, and, in fact, has been using that shimmering silk for months past in the development of gowns, wraps and costumes.

It is being advanced in plain and in two-tone effects, and among the very latest importations is moire taffeta, delightfully soft and yielding, and especially adapted for the construction of the new panner and puffed gowns.

Corded silks, soft and drapable, are included in the spring schedule, and crepes are not neglected, by any means.

Greatest Change in Movements.

Lastrous foulards, in Oriental colorings, are having a tentative showing, and other than these, there are a number of novelty weaves, in both woollens and silks, which are astonishingly and successfully imitated in cottons and certain of the linens.

The greatest change in the styles has to do with the "movements" of the drapery. There is, in fact, a distinct difference between the draped effects of the winter and those now offered for spring consideration.

The drawn-up movement is less emphatic and in its place has come an odd little tunic that is not unlike the apron overskirt of two decades ago.

Advance models for the spring Fashion Show indicate considerable diversity in the use of the new drapery. Sometimes it is merely drawn across the front, the sides being adjusted beneath the closely-plaited panels of the side gores.

Then, again, the drapery appears only across the back, in the guise of a sort of misplaced capuchin hood. The latter arrangement is the one that bears some resemblance to the hustle of a period happily past; and even if it is accepted in its new form, it can never become the horrible, ugly appendage of other days, because the shaping of the foundation material—to say nothing of the straight lines of the undergarments—will counteract the bunching tendency of the new hack drapery.

Skirts and Waists Separate.

Blouses that accompany the new skirts are loose, almost to a point of lacking form. Many of them have the regular style of shoulder, in place of the kimono that has reigned supreme for many a season.

Necks are collarless, and stand out at the back after the manner of the Japanese garments. In fact, they are deliberately cut down at the back, to give the modish ill-fit look. Sometimes the neck is finished with a straight band that forms its own ruffled edge. But there are other effects that have a fitted collar of the shawl or modified sailor type, completed by the inevitable frill of lace.

An interesting thing in connection with the new models is the fact that designers are now making the skirt and the waist separately, finishing them as distinct pieces, and attaching the two only when adjusted to the figure of the wearer. It is claimed that this produces a less tendency to pulling and sagging, than when the two pieces are joined to form a one-piece garment.

NEW SPRING CREATION

—Design from Robinson's, Los Angeles

The waist is completed by its own belt, which does away with any superfluous fullness beneath the belt, the material being cut away. The skirt is then drawn on, and it, too, has its own belt, which is the one that is the completing girdle, making an harmonious ensemble of the two pieces.

Belts, by the way, have returned to favor. Skirts are cut with elevated waistband raised a little higher in front than at the back, and then there is the stitched belt of the fabric, if the garment is a tailor-made, or a belt of patent leather, to give the proper modish finish. In case of a gown, the girdle is crushed or is of the sash variety, with knotted or fringed ends.

Petticoats Are Plain.

Linings are of the highest importance just now. As a matter of fact, the skirt lining takes the place of the erstwhile petticoat, and the corsage lining makes it possible to dispense with the corset-cover of other days. But as now constructed, the linings are quite unlike those of former times.

For example, all properly-made gowns show a half-drop skirt, or skeleton lining, of some soft silk that is usually cut in two gores—with seam down the front and down the back—and in length reaches just to the knees, thereby giving a certain degree of freedom for pedal movements.

Just a narrow hem finishes the little petticoat—no ruffles, frills, lace edging, or anything of that sort. This demi-petticoat is tacked onto the waist-belt along with the skirt proper, and in case of draperies, the latter are tacked to the foundation. From the knee to ankle there is nothing between the skirt and the hosiery.

Waist linings are cut along the lines of the underbodice, and are of china silk and crepe de chine. Cotton fabrics may be used also.

There is talk, as usual at this time, of the fear of high collars and splashy designs in dress patterns and in garnitures. The truth of the matter seems to be, that for those who prefer gay tones, there will be plenty to select from; and for those whose tastes incline to quiet effects, there will, likewise, be a broad choice offered.

Sand colors, gray greens, yellow, brick, and deep blue are already scheduled in woollens, and in silks and cottons they will lend themselves very happily to the development of the jaunty short-coated costumes that Paris informs us will be the thing for spring.

Skirts Narrow at Ankles.

The little Eton jacket, so popular a few years ago, is again coming in in time for the spring showings. It will be worn with a skirt of the same color, or with one of contrasting color.

The peplum is apparent in all spring styles, from the one which is almost tunic to the one which is nearer a belt.

Pockets are seen in all sorts of places—some for use, and some for show.

The skirts continue to be narrow at the ankles, with decided fullness at the hips, exhibiting variations of the minaret, peg-top and bustle effects.

Plaids, in all varieties and in all colors, will be used a great deal this summer. The voiles, and other similar materials, are manufactured with broad borders of plaid.

Ratine, in many colors, will continue popular, especially in places where pique and linen have been used, as it does not become so quickly mussed.

Yellow has been one of the favorite tints of the winter, and will, undoubtedly, be carried over into the summer season in some of the wonderful shades of the ripening corn, or deepening into the soft browns of chestnut and cigar.

There are, besides, beautiful shell pinks and crushed raspberries, but the predictions are that the main choice will lie between blue and yellow.

Buttons and ornaments of a Chinese character are often used with charming effect on the separate waist, as are pendants, tassels and jet, or bead or braid ornaments of some antique Oriental style.

The buttons best liked are those in Chinese and Japanese effects, and colorings of Chinese blue, with motifs worked out in burnt orange or dull saffron yellow, are extremely effective.

Pendant ornaments, in jade, amber and carved bone, to imitate ivory, are made in designs taken from Chinese prayer heads, from decorations of mandarins' garments and other sources, and are used for weighting the ends of fichus, sashes, neckties and collar ends.

Many wonderful ideas in styles and colors will be shown during the Fashion Show. The hats are marvels of beauty, and simply adorable.

SPRING FASHION SHOW.

Los Angeles—The Spring Fashion Show will be held March 5th, 6th and 7th, and, it is expected, will draw a larger crowd than has attended the shows of the past.

Spring frocks are now arriving at all the stores, and all show the latest degree of looseness and no-fit. The V-shape neck is in evidence, and for this the jewelers offer a brooch of similar shape. There are also the new "baby" shoes, with no heels.

Local merchants are making great preparations for the show, and the latest creations in everything dear to the feminine eye and heart—from headgear to footwear—are being received from the world's fashion centers.

Delighted With Grand President

Los Angeles—A most delightful evening was enjoyed on February 23rd at Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124, N.D.G.W., the occasion being the official visit of Grand President Alison F. Watt of Grass Valley. The lodge-room was beautifully decorated with flags and banners of the Order, ferns and flowers, the color scheme being yellow; the bright jonquils, mingled with the delicate ferns, rivaling in color the wonderful treasure found by Marshall at Sutter's mill in pioneer days. Various Parlors were represented, the guests coming from Reina del Mar No. 126, Santa Barbara, Mariposa No. 63, La Esperanza No. 24, Manzanita No. 29, Grass Valley, Portola No. 172, San Francisco, and Ursula No. 1, Jackson. The Grand President was well pleased with the work put on by the Parlor, and the loyalty and splendid California spirit shown by the members. All present were delighted with the most interesting talk given by the Grand President, who is a woman of very refined personality and great intelligence, possesses sound judgment, and is truly fitted in every way to be the leader of nine thousand daughters of California.

Los Angeles Parlor was found to be in a very flourishing state, under the able management of President Grace Stoerner and her capable assistants, Past President Fannie Prather and Junior Past President Willette Biscailuz. Under good of the Order, a beautiful gift was presented to the Grand President by the loyal members of Los Angeles Parlor. Then was formed the flower chain, a very pretty custom which has always prevailed in Los Angeles Parlor, in which each member presents the Grand President with a flower, the whole then forming the Grand President's bouquet. After the singing of the closing ode, the guests and members repaired to the banquet-room. Here the Washington birthday spirit was truly apparent in the cherry-tree branches which festooned the walls, and the tiny hatchets and beautiful place cards and cherry blossoms which decorated the handsomely set tables. The menu was truly enjoyed, and fun and merriment made happy the closing of an evening which will be long remembered by those present and will form one of the jewels in memory's precious casket.

DEVOTED TO FARM, ORCHARD, GARDEN, POULTRY, DAIRYING, BEES, ETC.

Edited by GEORGE H. BANCROFT.

ROTATION OF CROPS—ITS PHILOSOPHY.

EARLY EVERY ISSUE OF THE leading agricultural journals touches more or less upon the importance of "The Rotation of Crops." In few cases are sufficient reasons given as to the "why" of the matter. Rotation of crops has been practiced for many years, but without its philosophy being understood.

One reason why it is best to omit growing certain crops for a year, or several years, in the same soil, is that each farm crop is preyed upon by a particular kind of pest, and in most cases pests have a close affinity for certain crops only, and will starve out and die if the cultivation of such crop is omitted for a time. On the other hand, the continual cropping of the same plant in the same field encourages the increase of bacterial or insect pests to such a degree as to prevent the production of paying crops.

Hardly any two kinds of plants use exactly the same proportion of the different plant foods contained in the soil; some feed deep and others shallow. Some crops have, or use, immense feeding areas for their roots. For instance, the common squash vine will sometimes grow 1,000 feet of root in a single day, and fifteen miles of roots in a season. The different habits in root growth of plants have much to do with the maintenance of soil fertility.

Some crops, like corn, are gross feeders—they can stand the application of fresh manure, where many other kinds of plants would be killed. This manure applied to the corn crop, benefits that crop and also the next succeeding crop in the rotation. Potatoes will follow corn in the rotation and use the rotten manure without detriment, whereas fresh manure would often cause the potato crop to become scabby.

It is desirable to have a leguminous crop in the rotation, on account of its ability, through the aid of bacteria, of adding nitrogen to the soil, thus saving the almost prohibitive expense of buying this necessary fertilizing ingredient in commercial forms, such as nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia. Another reason is that the roots of leguminous crops when plowed and allowed to decay add humus to the soil. Once every four years, at least, a green manuring crop should have a place in the rotation, and it is generally advisable to have this crop a legume. Plowing under this crop, intact, adds humus as well as nitrogen to the soil.

The various crops of a rotation have other beneficial effects on the soil. Among these may be mentioned the improvement of the soil's physical texture, which makes conditions more favorable for the soil to admit air, heat and moisture. Plant roots must have access to plant food and also have air to breathe, also warmth to start the germination and allow plant roots to be comfortable. Moisture is most essential—plants must drink and all plant food (nearly all) is supplied in solution with water.

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES

IN AGRICULTURE.

The College of Agriculture of the University of California announces correspondence courses in agriculture to be given under the direction of the Division of Agricultural Education. These courses are designed for farmers, or persons expecting to live on the farm, who desire specific and detailed information regarding the production of certain farm crops or animals. They are prepared by members of the faculty of the College of Agriculture with special reference to agricultural conditions in California and to the farming methods that apply in the various sections of the State. In the present announcement thirty-two courses are listed, and other courses will be prepared when the need and demand for them become apparent. These embrace:

(1) Alfalfa culture, (2) bean culture, (3) corn culture, (4) potato culture, (5) onion culture, (6) wheat culture, (7) oat culture, (8) barley culture, (9) rice culture, (10) dairy husbandry, (11) swine husbandry, (12) sheep husbandry, (13) beef husbandry, (14) poultry husbandry, (15) bee keeping, (16) apple culture, (17) pear culture, (18) peach culture, (19) plum culture, (20) cherry culture, (21) walnut culture, (22) almond culture, (23) grape growing, (24) citrus fruits, (25) olive growing, (26) fig culture, (27) home floriculture, (28) home ground ornamentation, (29) rural public health, (30) canning and preserving, (31) date culture, (32) certain semi-tropical fruits—avocado, loquat, pomegranate, feijoa, cherimoya, mango, tuna, persimmon, guava and carob.

The following courses are now ready: Courses numbered 1, 5, 14, 21, 23, 24, 26. February 15th: Courses numbered 8, 10, 11, 15. March 15th: Courses numbered 12, 13, 25, 27. May 1st: Courses numbered 29, 30. June 1st: Course numbered 28. July 1st: Courses numbered 3, 9, 17. August 1st: Course numbered 22. September 1st: Courses numbered 2, 4. November 1st: Course numbered 31. January 1, 1915: Courses numbered 6, 7, 32. Courses numbered 16, 18, 19, 20 will be completed as soon as possible.

Written application to the Division of Agricultural Education of the College of Agriculture, Berkeley, California, may be made for enrollment in the course desired. Two lessons will be sent to each student as soon as enrolled in a course, with questions upon each lesson. On completing the first lesson, send in answers to the questions and begin work on the second lesson. A third lesson will be mailed after receipt of answers to questions on lesson one, with corrections of the same. On receipt of answers to questions on lesson two, a fourth lesson will be sent, and so on to the end of the course, the student being constantly supplied with a lesson to be studied.

THE ALMOND.

(Answering a Criticism of Our January Article, With Additional Remarks.)

Our correspondent prefers the term "frost drainage" to that of "air drainage." We contend that frost cannot drain—the cold air that produces frost seeks the lower levels by gravity, and at this lower level the cold air produces frost by concealing moisture, and consequent damage results. Sloping ground is more free from frost than level, other factors being equal. Cold air is heavy and seeks lower levels, and its place is taken by air that is warmer. The altitude of a location does not always indicate whether climate of winter is warm or cold, even in most temperate or semi-tropic sections. The surrounding land in the immediate vicinity, if it slopes downward sufficiently, insures a good air drainage and thus makes the farm products more immune from frost. The degree of immunity depends somewhat upon other factors.

It is a well-known and proven fact that bodies of water temper the climate of the surrounding country, the extent depending upon the area of the water surface as well as upon its depth. When speaking of frost, we must not confuse the term with a "freeze." A freeze is general, while a frost is local. In the case of a freeze, the cold air fills up the valleys and extends up the slopes to a disastrous degree, and man has not discovered a means of combating such a condition.

We believe that hardening of the growth of trees on the approach of winter, or the coldest time of year, will help a great deal. Trees that are fed, watered and cultivated very much late in the season have a tendency to take on a forced growth, which is tender and easily affected by cold weather. On the other hand, trees that have been neglected by starving and in irrigation and cultivation have not sufficient life and vigor in them to resist frost, disease, or to bear profitable crops. We have in mind citrus trees, as these trees suffered much in some localities last winter in our State. This subject, however, puzzles men who have made a life study of the matter.

Our correspondent does not believe in setting dormant buds in the orchard. We are aware that setting dormant buds or June buds is not a popular idea with many orchardists. Our idea is based upon the fact that setting dormant buds has been very successfully practiced. Dormant buds are usually buds set in young nursery stock so late in the season that they remain dormant until placed in the orchard row the next spring. The advantage of using dormant buds is that, being used on young nursery stock, a better root system is preserved—the older the bud the more loss in roots in moving. A good root system is of the first importance to the orchardist. The idea is not a popular one with the general run of nurserymen, as less profits are derived than from older trees.

Our correspondent does not believe in the practice of setting out almonds of different varieties in alternating rows in order to produce heavier crops through cross fertilization of blooms. As this is universally conceded to be the best procedure, we emphatically differ from him. As to pruning the almonds, we will agree that we did not round out our remarks sufficiently to give the right idea as to what we were driving at. Our remarks on pruning the almond were intended to apply to the first few years of the orchard life of the almond while undergoing the shaping up process. We must always bear in mind that in matters of this kind, practice differs as well as opinions. Different orchardists, each working a little differently, but all successful, illustrate the point. A considerable difference in opinion exists as to the best roots upon which to bud or graft different fruits.

Take our January article as a whole, we are pretty well satisfied with it. We slipped some in being too brief on the pruning question. Will be more careful in the future. Short articles, designed to catch the eye and hold attention until read, cannot go into details to a space-killing degree. The writer is inclined to longer articles, in order to be enabled to cover the ground more completely. By the way, we have been criticised for having articles too long, and we shall try to remedy this as much as possible in future issues. Our desire is to give our readers something a little different from the general run—something from which a direct value can be derived.

THE TEPARY BEAN.

In our December issue, we called attention to the above bean. The Tepary is a small bean about the size of the navy or Lady Washington. There are various colors, but the white is recommended as being most satisfactory. We first learned of this wonderful bean through the Experiment Station at Tucson.

The Tepary bean is cultivated like any other field bean—cover 2 inches deep, plant 4 inches apart in rows 3 feet apart for dry farming. The beans do not do well when irrigated too heavily, but in hot, dry countries, they are the most remarkable dry-farming crop yet presented to the public.

We offered to distribute some of these beans at a close price, based upon a cost at Tucson of 10 cents per pound, the ordinary price in small quantities being 30 cents per pound. We are sorry to say that little interest was evinced, and few orders have come in thus far. However, we will hold our offer open for a time. We certainly advise our readers to try a few, and if the result is satisfactory, these will be a good start in seed for next year. People who go into these well-recommended things often derive much satisfaction and financial profit. There is sure to be a big demand for seed in the near future. Send your orders in at once to Editor Agricultural Department, Grizzly Bear Magazine, 248 Wilcox Building, Los Angeles.

OUR LAST TALK ABOUT BACTERIA.

We have devoted considerable space for several issues to notes on bacteria, and feel that we have given a pretty fair outline of the subject. It is vitally important that all who have to do with the soil secure all possible information about these wonderful organisms. They have much to do with the success or failure of farming operations.

In closing, we wish to repeat that some bacteria have the power of adding nitrogen direct to the soil, while others, and a much more important class, store nitrogen from the air in the root nodules of leguminous plants, which comprise such plants as the clovers, peas, vetches, beans and also trees, such as acacias, locusts, etc. Then there are other plants, not legumes, upon whose roots bacteria nodules form; among these are the alder, New Jersey tea, Buffalo berry, silver berry, mountain balm, etc. Good authority says that buckwheat also produces bacterial nodules on its roots, but we have thus far been unable to verify this statement—but if so, buckwheat should have great added value as a rejuvenator of worn-out soils.

Another valuable fact about bacteria is that two or three tons of stable manure per acre spread over a green manuring crop before it is turned under, add to the soil millions of bacteria that hasten the decay of the green crop and make it more quickly available. Another phase of bacterial life, while not relating to agriculture, yet shows the insidious character and work of these most wonderful organisms. This relates to health and disease of the human body. The human body is usually immune from disease when provided with protection in the form of intact skin and mucus membranes, which usually successfully resist the deleterious effect of injurious organisms.

Doctors recommend their patients to take a sea voyage, go to the high mountains or to arid or polar regions. The reason is that the number of bacteria is small or entirely absent in such regions; consequently the body is enabled to gain strength and health on account of being relieved of the necessity for combating such injurious bacteria. The average number of bacteria in the air of a large city is 5,445 per cubic meter as against 300 in country air.

Only one possible conclusion can be reached concerning bacteria, which is, that the farmer, specially, must realize that bacterial knowledge is absolutely essential, if profitable crops are to be raised. A fertile and healthy condition of the soil depends more upon bacterial life and action than upon any other single factor. We have already shown that the beneficial bacteria can be encouraged and their numbers multiplied, also how seed can be inoculated so that the crop roots will be plentifully supplied with nodules. We have also shown how the injurious bacteria can be discouraged and starved out through rotation of crops and otherwise. Agricultural and horticultural success is made up of many links, the absence of one being disastrous. Ignoring the bacterial question is like leaving out one of the necessary links, and we trust our readers will not overlook this fact.

SPINELESS CACTUS.

In planting spineless cactus, it must be borne in mind that the slab, to a great extent, must be treated the same as seed. Take corn, beans and squash seed: while containing embryonic plants, they also contain a supply of food of the proper kind in each case, and until such stored food is pretty much used up, it is useless and, in many cases, positively injurious, to force the plant with artificial food.

The cactus slab, like a potato cutting, does not draw plant food from the soil before first wasting away or drying out somewhat and the young plants drawing their first food from the store contained within the slab or cutting. This food produces the leaves and roots of the young plants, and then only will soluble plant food in the soil be assimilated.

The cactus slab, considered as seed, has a high optimism temperature and does best the same season of the year as beans, tomatoes, melons, etc. Being a heat-loving plant, it will be unsafe to plant the slabs until late in April, and then only in somewhat dry, but warm, soil.

MARCH PLANTING CALENDAR.

FRUIT TREES—Planting of all deciduous fruit trees should be completed during this month. Citrus and other evergreen fruit trees may also be planted now.

VEGETABLE GARDEN—Sow artichoke, asparagus, beans, beets, late cabbage, carrot, celery, chervil, chicory, corn salad, sweet corn, cress, cucumber, dandelion, egg plant, endive, kale, kohlrabi, leek, lettuce, musk melon, water melon, mustard, okra, onion, parsley, parsnip, peas, pepper, potatoes, radish, rhubarb, salsify, sorrel, spinach, squash, tobacco, tomato and turnip. Plant out cabbage, tomato and pepper plants.

FLOWER GARDEN—Continue to plant roses and ornamental trees and shrubs. Hardy annuals as mentioned for February and the previous months may still be sown the early part of this month; also sweet peas. Sow amaranthus, aster, balsam, begonia, celosia, cantanrea, cohoea, dahlia, gloxinia, helianthus, heliotrope, humulus, hennemannia, malope, mandevilla, marigold, mima lobata, nasturtium, pyrethrum, salpiglossis, salvia, scabiosa, verberna and zinnia. This is the best month in which to sow most kinds of tree seeds. Plant gladiolus, begonia, tuberose and dahlia bulbs.

NEIGHBOR SETS PACE.

Tuolumne County is taking hold of the apple cultivation business with the same energy that has marked the efforts of that county during the past few years towards a greater prosperity. As that county is so much like Calaveras in soil, climate and other conditions, we believe that Calaveras would do well to take some lessons from its neighbor. Thousands of acres of apple orchards are being added each year to the already large acreage in Tuolumne and the fruit growers are reaping good returns on their investment. The opportunities are equally as good in Calaveras, saving only transportation facilities, and these would quickly be provided should the demand be sufficiently strong.—Calaveras Prospect, San Andreas.

Of the two million trees to be planted on the National Forests of Montana and Northern Idaho during the present fiscal year, one-half have been set out this fall and the rest will be put in next spring.

(By MRS. A. BASLEY.)

THE FULL AND PLENTY METHOD.

THE PHRASE, "THE FULL AND plenty method of feeding," has come to be used as a proverb among poultry breeders. The credit of inventing this phrase belongs to our Australian cousins, or to Professor Thompson, who has had charge of one of the Australian laying competitions. Full and plenty should be the motto of every poultry keeper who seeks for the best results. I believe more money is lost, and more failures result, from a false notion of economy in feeding than from any other one cause, unless it may be from insect pests.

"My aunt's hens always lay eggs, even while they are moulting," said Renate. "She has White Wyandotts; her neighbor is an English woman and has Buff Orpingtons, and gets scarcely any eggs in the fall, when eggs are dear." On investigation, I learned that the English woman was afraid of over-feeding, carefully weighing every grain fed, so that her hens might not have half an ounce too much, not realizing that while the hen was making the egg she needed a larger amount of food than when she was not laying. She managed to keep her hens alive, but that was all. Renate's aunt, on the other hand, was giving her hens all they wanted to eat, but of a rightly balanced ration.

Economy is right, but the idea that it is dangerous to feed hens all they will eat for fear of making them too fat, is all wrong. Those that think that a hen should be kept rather thin, in order to do her best as a layer, are mistaken. Give a hen or a pullet all she wants to eat, but let that food be properly proportioned. Remember that a hen requires animal food, green food and grain in her diet. Some argue that a very fat hen is not a good layer; that is perfectly true, but it does not follow that liberal feeding is the cause of this; it is wrong feeding.

When a dairyman finds that one of his cows is getting too fat, he does not cut down her feed, but gives her as much as she will eat, and when she is fat enough, sells her to the butcher. This should be the fate of an over-fat hen. The American breeds, being dual-purpose fowls, have an inclination to turn the food into fat, consequently they require more intelligent feeding than the Leghorns. It is entirely possible to fatten a hen until she becomes over-loaded with fat, to such an extent that egg laying ceases; but this rarely, if ever, happens where the hen is a good layer naturally, has plenty of exercise, and is kept under proper conditions. The best layer is always the best-fed hen, other things being equal.

Given a plentiful supply of the proper sort of food, a hen will produce the largest possible number of eggs, whether she grows fat or lean. If over-feeding were such a dangerous practice the hopper feeders, who are growing more numerous every year, would soon over-fatten every hen in their yards. A hen must be fed on the full-and-plenty method before she will do all she possibly can.

The English woman was always talking about feeding a balanced ration, keeping the hens a little hungry, feeding by theorie, and invariably ending by telling Renate's aunt that she was over-feeding. Renate's aunt was getting the results—lots of eggs. Finally the English woman decided she would give up the Buff Orpingtons and try White Wyandotts, but with the same results, and she decided there was no money in the poultry business. There is an old saying amongst English dairymen that, "Nothing comes out of a cow that does not go in at her mouth." It is so with the laying hen; we must give her material to manufacture eggs or she cannot produce them in abundance.

To do her best as a layer, a hen must have abundant opportunity to exercise. Our Australian cousins cover the whole of their poultry yards with six or eight inches of straw, and the grain is fed in that. They realize the value of exercise. "Make the hen work," writes a would-be poultry man. Give the hens an opportunity to work, and you need not talk about making a hen work. Give her an excuse for exercising, and she will not stop from morning till night, except when she is on the nest. This is the Australian secret of heavy production with heavy feeding.

To beginners, I would say, feed all the grain in the scratching pen; let that grain be a mixture of wheat, oats, barley, kafir-corn or the excellent scratch feed which you can buy at the poultry supply houses, properly mixed (balanced for egg production). Keep a box, hopper or bucket full of the dry mash, and all you have to do is to supply plenty of succulent green food daily, during the summer. Do not forget the water.

More than two-thirds of the egg is water, and more than two-thirds of the hen's body is composed of water. Water is the cheapest part of the food, and yet how many are careless in the matter of providing plenty of clean water to the fowls. Shorten the water supply, forget it for one day, and you shorten the egg supply. It is utterly impossible for the hen to manufacture the egg inside her without water. First, she has to have enough water to supply the needs of her body, and when that is satisfied, she supplies the amount necessary for the making of the egg. A good layer is a great drinker! Keep your hens well supplied with water, shelter the water vessel from the sun, and have the water as cool as you can keep it during the warm, sunny, summer days.

MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE

DOING GOOD WORK.

Oakland—The Membership Committee of Claremont Parlor, No. 240, N.S.G.W., is still doing good work, presenting, on February 13th, two new candidates who were duly instructed; they have several in the hole and more on deck; no fault may be found with their activity. February 14th, a large number of the members celebrated the sixth anniversary of the institution of the Parlor by attending a banquet. The first gun was fired at 9:30 by W. I. Forest, acting as toastmaster, who presented a very amusing poetical effusion recounting the name, occupation and some foible of each member of the Parlor; it created much merriment. Viands, many, varied and delicious, were then served and they soon disappeared in the vigorous onslaught of the party. Many were called on to respond to toasts, among which were those referring to the principles of the Order by President J. E. Hourtane, Past President A. M. Stokes and First Vice-president W. T. O'Connor. Judge J. F. Kavanagh, past president, delivered an appropriate address, after which coffee was served and adjournment came, all expressing themselves as well pleased and sure to be on hand next year. The joint Parlor and band minstrel company will present themselves on April 18th, and the manager promises a great shakeup in this vicinity. P. J. Carroll has signified his intention of heading a vigilance committee, saying it will be more necessary than at any time in the history of the State.

There is promise of a large turpentine industry in the West and Southwest, the raw product being supplied by the resinous gum of western yellow pine.

More than 120 million board feet of timber was given away free by the Government last year to settlers and miners living in or near the national forests.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

A Busy Evening.

San Luis Obispo—January 19th, at 6:30 p. m., San Luisita Parlor, No. 108, served a hot turkey supper, with all the trimmings, to the members, officers-elect and four prospective members. The tables were set in shape of a hollow square, in the center of which was a large potted palm. From the chandelier in the center hung orange boughs laden with the golden fruit, while festoons of smilax were brought to the four corners of the tables. When the lights were turned on a most beautiful scene presented itself. At 8 p. m., all repaired to the lodge-room, where the regular meeting took place. Four candidates, Mrs. Addie G. Righetti, Mrs. Henriette M. Rowan, Misses Elaine Schmidt and Julia O'Leary, were very happy to become true Native Daughters. The following officers were installed by D.D.G.P. Margaret R. Murray: Past president, Charlotte Miller; president, Lena Spence; first vice-president, Vivian H. Grove; second vice-president, Rosanna Taylor; third vice-president, Gertrude O'Connor; recording secretary, Agnes M. Lee; financial secretary, Callie M. John; treasurer, Almira Fiedler; marshal, Katherine McHenry; organist, Eva B. Johnson; inside sentinel, Edith G. Potter; outside sentinel, Nellie Thomson; trustees, Anna Kluber, Annie Shipsey, Eulalie Rose-lip. After the meeting, music, singing, recitations and dancing prevailed until a late hour. Much credit is due the committee and the efficient chairman, Callie John, for the very enjoyable evening. All were happy, and wish the affair to be repeated.

Honor Newly Weds.

Sierraville—Imogen Parlor, No. 134, gave a supper January 24th, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George Maxwell, who recently returned from their wedding tour, Mrs. Maxwell being a member of the Order. A delicious chicken supper was served to the members and invited guests, to which all did justice, after which all were invited to the lodge-room, where the following program was rendered: Piano solo, Florence Colt; recitation, "Papa's Letter," Aimee Small; vocal solo, "Star of My Heart," Mrs. J. A. Linebaugh; recitation, "The Tale of the Tramp," Mrs. J. Dearwater; vocal solo, "The Moonlight, the Rose, and You," Will Copren; recitation, "Happy Bill, the Brakeman," Mrs. Julia Strang; vocal duet, "Because You Are an Old Sweetheart of Mine," Misses C. Dearwater and F. Colt. At the conclusion of the program, remarks were called for, and brought forth many interesting and humorous responses. Games followed for the remainder of the evening, after which all departed, thanking the Native Daughters for their hospitality and wishing them success in their Order.

Installation and Presentations.

San Francisco—Portola Parlor, No. 172, held public installation, January 30th, D.D.G.P. Mae Barry installing the new officers as follows: Past president, Carrie Estalita; president, Frances C. Britt; first vice-president, Agnes Curry; second vice-president, Mae Lunny; third vice-president, Charlotte Collins; marshal, Lucy Campbell; recording secretary, Esther Johnson; financial secretary, Ethel A. Davis; treasurer, Helen Brimskill; inside sentinel, Emalyne Fields; outside sentinel, Amy Lang; organist, Rose Moitoret; trustees, Jennie Johnson, Gertie Campbell, Margaret McKee. A presentation of a handsome cut-glass powder-jar was made to D.D.G.P. Mae Barry by Frances Britt, a token of love from Portola Parlor. Hannah Barry, who volunteered her services for the evening, was presented with a hand-painted china dresser-tray. The occasion being public, there was a joyous gathering, the ceremonies being followed by a musical entertainment, dance, and piano selections by Milton Batt.

Following the Crowd.

San Francisco—January 28th, Cabrille Parlor, No. 139, installed the following officers: Eva Albrecht, past president; Bessie Roche, president; Nellie Hester, first vice-president; Elin Machris, second vice-president; Gertie Hester, third vice-president; Edna Hansen, marshal; Martha Weigel, inside sentinel; Mabel Ayscough, outside sentinel; Lucy Johnson, recording secretary; Mary Vivian, financial secretary; Josephine McQuade, treasurer; Rita Normile, Estber Card, Amelia Woelke, trustees; Alice Collins, organist. The members had a most enjoyable evening, serving a unique refreshment,—ice cream cornucopias,—which added to the general hilarity. The Parlor has "followed the crowd" to Native Sons' Hall, the initial meeting being held there February 4th.

Many Candidates Initiated.

Pittsburg—Stirling Parlor, No. 146, officers were installed February 11th, by D.D.G.P. Mrs. L. V. Richardson, as follows: Past president, Dolly Canevaro; president, Lillian Rouner McFaul; first vice-president, Delia Rouner; second vice-president, Belle Leckie; third vice-president, Kate Latimer; marshal, Mary Valvo; recording secretary, Hannah Clement; financial secretary, Amy McAvoy; treasurer, Theresa Minaker; trustees—Mary Leckie, Mary Houliban, Mae Latimer; inside sentinel, Mayme O'Donnell; outside sentinel, Pauline Gatto; pianist, Estelle Houlihan. During the evening, seven candidates were initiated, attesting the progressiveness of the Parlor. Ten members of Donner Parlor, No. 193, Byron, attended the meeting; the trip being made by autos. There were also present two members of San Francisco Parlors. After the closing of the Parlor, a banquet was served at prettily decorated tables.

Grand President Visits.

San Francisco—Grand President Alison F. Watt paid Castro Parlor, No. 178, an official visit, January 28th, and charmed all present with her gracious manner. At the previous meeting the following officers were installed: Past president, Frances Mahlman; president, Eva Milsner; first vice-president, Bessie Scott; second vice-president, May Mahlman; third vice-president, Alice Lane; marshal, Eva Meyn; financial secretary, Gabrielle Fairfield; recording secretary, Esther Pierce; treasurer, Ida Smith; organist, Alice Dwyer; inside sentinel, Hazel Goddard; outside sentinel, Isabel Riegelhuth; trustees—Eva Kierce, Florence Gerlack, Elizabeth Warren.

Profit by Official Visit.

Fresno—Fresno Parlor, No. 187, enjoyed and profited very much by the visit of Grand President Alison F. Watt on February 7th, at an adjourned meeting. A large number of members were present, and Miss Marie Allen and Harriett Bynan of Columbia Parlor, No. 70, friends of the Grand President, were visitors and presented her with a lovely bunch of carnations in the name of their Parlor. President Nancy J. Brander, on behalf of Fresno Parlor, very gracefully presented her with a souvenir spoon of Fresno. The Grand President, in her talk to the Parlor, touched on all the work being done by the Order—the Home in San Francisco, the Children's Agency, the Pioneer Mothers' monument fund, in which a state-wide interest is being taken, and closed by reciting a beautiful poem, "A Tribute to Mother Love." The Grand President complimented the officers on their work and made them very proud, by her praise of their talented organist, Florence D. Clanton, who is also the Charter Past President. The members of Fresno Parlor, No. 25, N.S.G.W., were invited to meet the Grand President, and all repaired to a local cafe, where a light banquet was served to about seventy-five guests. The tables were beautiful in the Parlor colors of white and gold, eschscholtzia, fern and white narcissus. The place cards were dainty little conceits with poppies on them. On the mirror across the banquet hall a local artist had painted a huge bear with "Welcome, N.D.G.W.," above it. The toastmistress of the evening was D.D.G.P. Cora B. Van Meter, who introduced the Grand President. She responded in a happy vein. The following toasts were responded to: "The Ladies," Edward Victor, president Fresno Parlor, N.S.G.W.; "Combined Orders, N.D. and N.S.G.W.," Wm. F. Toomey, Grand Trustee, N.S.G.W.; "Good of the Order," Nancy J. Brander, president Fresno Parlor, N.D.G.W.; "Fresno City," Prof. Frank Lane. The song "California" was beautifully rendered by Miss Gladys Noonan, the youngest member of the Parlor, initiated at the evening's meeting. At the suggestion of Florence Brooks, the floral decorations were taken to the old women at the Alms House, who the Parlor looks after and who are always glad to see the Native Daughters. A number of the members, accompanied by the Grand President, motored out, she giving to each old woman a word of cheer and flowers.

Fresno Parlor scored a great success at the fourth annual valentine ball, given February 14th at New Armory Hall. The ballroom was beautifully decorated with woodwardie fern and large flags. The valentine idea was carried out at the booth where punch was served. The posters were large hearts and the programs dainty heart leaflets. At 9 o'clock a six-piece orchestra struck up the grand march, which was led by Wm. F. Toomey, Grand Trustee, N.S.G.W., and Mrs. Mattie Nixon Walton, past president of Fresno Parlor, N.D.G.W.

Mr. Toomey left for the bay cities at midnight to continue his official visits to Native Sons' Parlors, he having returned here at the earnest request of the Native Daughters especially to lead the grand march, as he takes great interest in that Order, as well as his own. The committee of arrangement was made up of Mesdames Nancy J. Brander, Edna Burt Wolfo, Evelina Bailey Paul and Cora B. Van Meter.

Eclipses All Efforts.

Oakland—The eighteenth anniversary of the institution of Piedmont Parlor, No. 87, was celebrated by a ball, February 24th, at which many grand officers were present. The affair was a distinct social success, eclipsing all similar functions of the Parlor during the past seventeen years.

Introduces Novelty.

San Jose—Vendome Parlor, No. 100, gave a delightful dancing party, February 9th, the hall being prettily decorated with red hearts and kewpies, which were strung from the chandelier to all parts of the room. One of the spectacular features was that during one of the dances all the lights were turned out, and the dancers revolved in the light supplied by tiny sparklers in the hand of each. During the evening Miss Evelyn Morton and A. J. Cantillon supplied musical selections.

Entertains Many Guests.

Modesto—Morada Parlor, No. 199, was hostess, February 2nd, to Grand President Alison F. Watt of Grass Valley, Grand Trustee Grace Willey of Stockton, twenty-five members of Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, Stockton, and many members of Modesto Parlor, N.S.G.W., the occasion being the official visit of the head of the Order. Following the closed session, at which matters of interest to the fraternity were discussed, all guests were admitted, and addresses were made by Grand President Watt on "California," Mrs. Mary Merrill of Stockton on "The Pioneers," and Grand Trustee Grace Willey. A turkey banquet followed, at which Mrs. Cora Schafer presided as toastmistress. Short toasts were responded to by many.

Many Pleasing Events.

Oakland—The installation of Mission Bells Parlor, No. 175, took place January 20th with D.D.G.P. Mrs. Lange of Argonaut Parlor, and a corps of officers from Brooklyn, Piedmont and Argonaut Parlors in charge. The officers installed are: Past president, Louise R. Straub; president, Stella Beakeley; first vice-president, Ida Olerich; second vice-president, May Koch; recording secretary, Edna Wallhurg; financial secretary, Mary Weher; treasurer, Emma G. Carter; marshal, Catherine O'Neil; trustees—Auna Ellison, Lillias M. Smith, Mary Bain; inside sentinel, M. O'Leary; outside sentinel, Josie Weber; musician, Minnie Johnson. The installation work was letter perfect. The district deputy was presented with a large cut-glass bowl, the past president and president of the Parlor with potted ferns, and the outgoing past president, Mrs. O'Connell, with a past president's jewel. There was a large delegation present from the different Parlors around the bay on the Alameda County side. The banquet-room was ready for visitors, and after the installation ceremonies, all flocked there, where a large delegation of Yew Club boys awaited the closing of the Parlor. With feasting, song, music and dancing a merry hour was spent.

February 3rd the Parlor, together with the Yew Club, composed of young business men of Central Oakland, gave a dance at the hall of the Parlor. There was a very large attendance, and all enjoyed the dance, the music being furnished by a five-piece orchestra. February 14th, a valentine party was enjoyed at the same hall by the Parlor and the Yew Club.

Harmony and Peace Prevail.

San Francisco—Dolores Parlor, No. 169, celebrated its fifth anniversary at a sumptuous banquet January 20th. Thirty members were present, and the guest of the evening was D.D.G.P. Leah Williams, of Las Torosas Parlor, No. 131. The supper was most daintily served, and the decorations, of American heavy roses and ferns, most elaborate. Every one present enjoyed themselves, and at the close of the repast all joined in singing, "I Love You, California."

In Monterey Hall, N.S.G.W. building, January 26th, the officers of Dolores Parlor were installed by D.D.G.P. Leah Williams, assisted by several Grand Officers, as follows: President, Estelle Carr; first vice-president, Ame Silva; second vice-president, Emma Jess; third vice-president, Alice Blanford; marshal, Edith Straessler; inside sentinel, Mabel Keefe; outside sentinel, Bertha Mack; recording secretary, Janet Payne; financial secretary, Mayme O'Leary; treasurer, Frances Frisk; trusttees—Kathryn Juri, Emma Klahn, Irene Evers; organist, Nell Leahy. Dainty refreshments were served and the district deputy and worthy president were each presented with gifts of hand-painted china.

In this Parlor, energy and enthusiasm vie with each other, and the members possess that fine spirit of fraternity which assure to the Parlor enviable harmony and peace. Dolores is proud to say it is gaining in membership, and when the Grand President makes her official visit, she shall receive a royal welcome from each member.

Dolores Parlor, No. 169, N.D.G.W., and Dolores Parlor, No. 208, N.S.G.W., gave a joint social dance in N.S.G.W. Building, February 7th, which proved to be a great success. These two Parlors, so closely connected by name, are two of the finest Parlors in the State, both possessing a fine personnel of members. They work conscientiously together to promote the best interests of our great State, and are especially interested in "home industry." The success of the dance was especially due to the efforts of Mayme O'Leary, Emma Jess, Estelle Carr, Mae Bresnahan, Alice Blanford, George Stelling, Alex Branhoffer, Myles Bennett, Jack Guilfy and Ed. Heinze. Both Parlors intend to give these dances semi-annually and all who attend are assured of a big time.

Mrs. Fannie Prather: President, Grace Stoerner; first vice-president, Margaret Moloney; second vice-president, Frances Moloney; third vice-president, Rose Lee; recording secretary, Katherine Baker; financial secretary, Jennie Elliott; treasurer, Grace Haven; trustees—Alberta Hays, Priscilla Lincoln, Mattie Lobory; marshal, Leona Noutly; inside sentinel, Sister Robinson; outside sentinel, Grace Culbert; organist, Annie L. The Grizzly Bear. Discussion followed, and all the members agreed to buy home products.

Installation at Long Beach.

Long Beach—D.D.G.P. Fannie Prather installed the officers of Long Beach Parlor, No. 154, at the regular meeting January 30th. A very pleasant evening was spent, and after the installation an enjoyable banquet was served at the home of Kate McFadyen. The District Deputy was accompanied by Katherine Baker and Margaret Moloney of Los Angeles Parlor. Grand President Allison F. Watt visited the Parlor, and was given a rousing welcome. While in the city, she secured several applications for the Parlor.

Installation at Arrowhead.

Sau Bernardino—At the regular meeting of Arrowhead Parlor, No. 149, the officers were installed by the D.D.G.P., Fannie Prather. After the banquet the Parlor presented the district deputy with a hand-painted cake plate. Arrowhead Parlor entertained Grand President Allison F. Watt at the regular meeting, February 16th.

Valentine Luncheon.

Los Angeles—A valentine luncheon was given in the banquet-room of Native Sons' Hall by La Esperanza Parlor, No. 24, the occasion being the official visit of Grand President Allison F. Watt. The tables were prettily decorated with carnations and ferns, the valentine feature being red hearts and dainty place cards. The Grand President was seated beside Past Grand President Eva T. Bussenius, who is the present president of La Esperanza Parlor. At the conclusion of the banquet the following toasts were responded to: "Our Grand President," Eva T. Bussenius; "Parlors in Southern California," Fannie Prather; "Charter Members," Frances Simpson; "La Esperanza Parlor," Annie K. Adair; "California," M. K. Coreoran; "Donner Party," Eleanor Hall; "Portola Parlor," Katherine Hall. The Parlor then met in regular session. The Grand President was very much pleased with the work of the Parlor and the progressive spirit of the members. All present enjoyed the very splendid talk given by Mrs. Watt. Under the head of good of the Order, Mrs. Hall, on behalf of La Esperanza Parlor, presented the Grand President with a silver souvenir spoon and a bouquet of pink hyacinths and ferns. A bouquet of yellow jonquils, violets and ferns was sent by Past Grand Trustee Anna I. Dempsey, to be given to the Grand President.

Grand Officers' Visit Enjoyed.

San Francisco—Grand President Allison F. Watt paid her official visit to Keith Parlor, No. 137, January 29th, and was warmly welcomed by a large number of the members, many visiting sisters, and the following Grand Officers: Grand Vice-president Mae Boldemann, Grand Secretary Alice Dougherty, Grand Inside Sentinel Mary Bell, Grand Outside Sentinel Dora Bloom, Grand Trustee Amy McAvoy, Past Grand President Eliza D. Keith, and D.D.G.P. Genevieve Clark. When the Grand President was escorted into the lodge-room, a smile of pleasure lit up her face, for massed in great bunches all over the room she saw the beautiful manzanita, a native shrub of her home town and the name of her home Parlor. From the center of the ceiling hung a huge ball of woodwardia ferns, which also grow in profusion around her home. Quantities of American and Bear flags completed the decorative scheme, which made of the hall a bower of beauty. The ferns and manzanita came all the way from Amador County, and this pretty compliment delighted the Grand President more than volumes of words could have done. The officers of Keith Parlor were complimented on the way in which their floor work was performed, as well as the good work they have done during the year in the various lines of civic and fraternal work. The Grand President was presented with a very beautiful hand painted plate, and at the close of the meeting all were invited to the banquet-room, where a hounteous spread was enjoyed, and many good wishes for the success of Keith Parlor sped across the well filled tables.

In the early part of the month the following officers were publicly installed by D.D.G.P. Genevieve Clark: Past president, Margaret Stantou; president, Cora Taylor; first vice-president, Bertha Mauser; second vice-president, Lillie Abrams; third vice-president, Tillie Meyer; recording secretary, Mae Edwards; financial secretary Grace Macmillan; treasurer, Allice Gally; marshal, Verda Shurtleff; inside sentinel, Hazel Jones; outside sentinel, Annie Long; organist, Leontine Dentsch; trustees—E. O'Brien, H. Scanlon and L. Herzog.

District Deputy Is Busy.

Vallejo—D.D.G.P. Verna E. Berry, on February 21st installed the following officers of Vallejo Parlor, No. 195, being assisted by Julia Hunt, Cecelia Dempfel and Stella Hayter: Past president, Mary Claus; president, Nettie Doyle; first vice-president, Margaret Soanes; second vice-president, Carnelia Ferea; third vice-president, Fannie Shouse; marshal, Mary Combs; recording secretary, Verna Berry; financial secretary, Ida Sproule; treasurer, Lydia Howe; organist, Ida Sproule; inside sentinel, Winnie Cassidy; outside sentinel, Ellanor French; trustees—Emma Pope, Sarah Clark.

The Parlor is planning a card party, to raise funds with which to entertain on Admission Day. Everyone in this city is anxious for Vallejo to have this year's celebration, as it has never had one.

January 29th, D.D.G.P. Berry went to Napa and installed the officers of Eschol Parlor, No. 16, all of whom were present and proficient in the work. The Parlor is flourishing, and in March will move into the new N. S. G. W. Hall, which event will be celebrated by a large class initiation. Eschol has set an example for other Parlors to follow—doubled its membership—and each member is going to get a candidate. A banquet was enjoyed.

February 6th, D.D.G.P. Berry went over to St. Helena and installed the officers of La Junta Parlor, No. 203. While young and small, La Junta has bright prospects, and the work would surprise some of the older Parlors. During the evening a banquet was served, in the course of which the retiring president was presented with an emblematic pin and the district deputy with a bouquet.

Officers Publicly Installed.

San Francisco—Orinda Parlor, No. 56, held public installation January 23rd at Eagles' Hall, which was very beautifully decorated with American and Bear flags, California poppies and greens. The following were installed by D.D.G.P. Frances Edwards, assisted by Miss Minnie Ruess, acting grand marshal, Miss Elizabeth Osthoff, acting past grand president; Miss Barnett, acting grand organist; Miss May J. Tosney, acting grand secretary; Trustees—Martha Dellwig, Genevieve Behan, Mary Conuertin; outside sentinel, Adeline Johnson; inside sentinel, Tillie Gillfillan; treasurer, Alma Reimers; marshal, Blanche Stephenson; financial secretary, Emma G. Foley; recording secretary, Anna A. Gruber; organist, Vereua Britschgi; third vice-president, Maude Daly; second vice-president, Minnie Gerran; first vice-president, Mary Vogt; junior past president, Kate Britschgi; president, Edna Bishop. After installation, the retiring past president, Miss May J. Tosney, was presented by the Parlor with a handsome gold watch, the presentation being made by Past Grand President Emma G. Foley. Tokens were also presented to the president and past president. Refreshments were served and all voted it a very enjoyable evening.

Past Presidents Lose Ritual Contest.

Martinez—By a score of 830 to 803, the regular officers of Mt. Diablo Parlor, No. 101, February 2nd, defeated a picked team of Past Presidents of the Parlor in the first ritualistic contest to be held in Contra Costa County. As an incentive to the officers, Mt. Diablo Parlor purchased a handsome silver cup, which was given to the Past Presidents, to be held by them until the regular officers should win it, and thereafter to be offered each term in open competition in which all of the seven Contra Costa Parlors may take part, the trophy going to the team which makes the highest score. The judges of the contest were Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung, Grand Third Vice-president Bismark Bruck and Past Grand President C. M. Belshaw. The officers of the Parlor who won the cup are: Senior past president, F. R. Jones; junior past president, A. J. Soto; president, William Welch; first vice-president, J. R. Boothe; second vice-president, George T. Barkley; third vice-president, H. J. Wilson; marshal, M. B. Brewen; inside sentinel, Joseph Robrecht; financial secretary, A. N. Sullenger. The Past Presidents' team consisted of senior past president, J. H. Wells; junior past president, W. M. Veale; president, James F. Hoey; first vice-president, F. J. Barnard; second vice-president, C. M. Bulger; third vice-president, George P. Upham; marshal, George H. Bulger; inside sentinel, Joseph Robrecht; financial secretary, F. R. Jones; recording secretary, W. R. Sharkey. At the conclusion of the contest, an elaborate banquet was served in the Martinez hotel, Past President J. F. Hoey presiding, and members of Concord and Diamond (Pittsburg) Parlors being present, together with a delegation from General Winn Parlor, Antioch. Diamond, Concord and General Winn Parlors have already given notice of their intention to challenge for the trophy cup in July. During the evening, D. D. G. P. George P. Upham, on behalf of the Parlor, presented the retiring president, A. J. Soto, with a past president's jewel.

Gaining Strength.

Suisun—Following their examination in the ritualistic work, E. M. Staples, D.D.G.P., in a most creditable manner installed these newly-elected officers of Solano Parlor, No. 39: Past president, J. J. Joyce; president, W. F. Parker; first vice-president, R. H. Woods; second vice-president, E. J. Seavers; third vice-president, Dr. J. D. Fogarty; marshal, E. G. Long; trustees, E. M. Staples, R. F. Hunnewell, J. A. Wing; outside sentinel, F. R. Nickerson; inside sentinel, E. S. Harry; recording and financial secretary, J. J. McCarron; treasurer, E. E. Long. The officers are all live young men, showed an improvement in the ritualistic work, and have entered upon a determined effort to increase the membership to 100. A prize for the member bringing in the most candidates for the term ending June 30th has been offered, and as it has created considerable enthusiasm will be made a permanent feature. Solano Parlor's future is very bright, the past term being the most successful in some time.

D.D.G.P. Staples went over to Vallejo, January 27th, and installed the officers of Vallejo Parlor, No. 77. He reports a great improvement in that Parlor, both in the ritualistic work and in securing new members. Solano County has been slow in making headway as a Native Son county, but the young men are at last realizing that the term "Native Son" is worthy of all the praise that can be bestowed. So, look out for the "Native Son Boosters" of Solano County between now and September 9th. Our motto: "Come to Vallejo, September 9th, and help the Natives of Solano County give you a good time."

New Hall Dedicated.

Napa—The handsome new N. S. G. W. Hall erected by Napa Parlor, No. 62, was opened to the public February 19th, and on the 21st was formally dedicated, on which occasion thirty-eight candidates were initiated. On the 23rd a grand ball was held in the ballroom of the new building. Full particulars of these events, as well as an illustrated description of the hall, will appear in these columns next month.

Good Resolve; Prosecute It.

Visalia—At an enthusiastic meeting of Visalia Parlor, No. 19, January 29th, a determined campaign for new members was launched, and several members volunteered to get actively to work with this end in view. Visalia is one of the oldest Parlors in the Order, and being in one of the fastest developing parts of the State, it is planned to make it one of the largest and most influential links in the Native Son chain. Officers were installed as follows: President, A. N. Swain; first vice-president, Alison Rouse; second vice-president, Ewald Noble; third vice-president, G. C. Henry; secretary, George R. Prestige; treasurer, Gus Mitchell; marshal, L. C. Branch; inside sentinel, Harry Loeey; outside sentinel, A. E. Noble; trustee, A. W. Grant.

Marshall Day Observed.

San Francisco—The sixty-sixth anniversary of the discovery of gold in California by James W. Marshall was celebrated January 24th at the Grizzly Bear Club, N.S.G.W. Building, by a reception of the Past Presidents' Association, N.S.G.W., to the Past Presidents' Association, N.D.G.W. Addresses were made by H. G. W. Dinkelspiel, president of the club; W. P. Garfield, president Past Presidents' Association, N.S.G.W.; Mae Boldemann, Grand Vice-president, N.D.G.W.; Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Secretary, N.D.G.W., and Dora Bloom, Grand Inside Sentinel, N.D.G.W. Miss Julia Conroy and K. Fischer entertained with songs. Dancing followed.

Grand Secretary the Attraction.

Los Angeles—Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung of San Francisco was the attraction in Native Sons circles the past month, and was well received during his visit to each of the four Parlors. The Grand Secretary in his addresses laid particular stress upon the necessity for members of the Order visiting all the Parlors in the city, if they are to receive the full benefits of membership in the fraternity. No member, he said, should content himself with activity in his own particular Parlor, but should make it part of his duty to visit the other Parlors; this would not only benefit the Parlors visited, but would make it possible for him to extend his acquaintanceship and thereby renew old friendships and create new ones. The Grand Secretary holds this course to be the real exemplification of Friendship, one of the Order's cardinal principles.

Officers Installed.

Selma—D. D. G. P. Grover Hill of Fresno installed the newly-elected officers of Selma Parlor, No. 107, January 21st, following which a banquet was served and several interesting addresses listened to. The officers include: President, P. W. Hastie, Jr.; first vice-president, Albert Jessen; second vice-president, G. P. Johnson; third vice-president, Ralph Copley; marshal, M. B. Carrington; inside sentinel, Walker Gilreath; outside sentinel, Percy Crocker; trustee, R. J. Cooper; junior past president, C. G. McDowell.

Enthusiasm at High Pitch.

Vallejo—Vallejo Parlor, No. 77, had a rousing meeting January 27th, and the members' enthusiasm went to a high pitch when reports were made indicating that the Parlors of the State are in favor of this city for the Admission Day celebration. Grand Trustee William F. Toomey of Fresno was present on his official visit, and witnessed the initiation of a large class of candidates. E. M. Staples, D.D.G.P., of Suisun, was also on hand, and installed the following officers: Past president, E. Carr; president, Baxter Knight; first vice-president, Otto Rosenbaum; second vice-president, Carl Kersting; third vice-president, S. S. Lundberg; marshal, M. Higuera; inside sentinel, George Dimpfel; outside sentinel, C. Ostrowski; trustee, F. S. Houseman; surgeons, Drs. B. J. Klotz and P. H. Reilly. Following the Parlor session, a splendid banquet was served. George Weniger, County Treasurer, presided as toastmaster, and both visitors and members were heard from on subjects concerning the Order.

Want To Get In.

Long Beach—Officers of Grizzly Bear Parlor, No. 239, were installed February 10th by D.D.G.P. Josiah F. Lyon of Los Angeles, assisted by Grand Trustee William I. Traeger of Los Angeles, as follows: W. B. Schweitzer, junior past president; Percy Hight, president; J. D. Loop, first vice-president; George L. Curtis, second vice-president; E. W. Oliver, recording secretary; Edgar McFadyen, financial secretary; Charles Malcolm, treasurer; A. O. Lindgren, marshal; Charles R. Austin, inside sentinel; W. B. Van de Car, outside sentinel; Dr. V. Ray Townsend, surgeon; W. B. Bodenheimer, trustee. Late in the evening a delightful repast was served, at which the Native Daughters lent their presence. The Parlor has entered upon a membership campaign, three applications being received at the meeting.

Celebrates Anniversary.

Pittsburg—January 28th the following officers of Diamond Parlor, No. 246, were duly installed by D. D. G. P. Geo. P. Upham of Martinez: Junior past president, Joseph Cinollo; president, Frank E. Fonda; first vice-president, John E. Rough; second vice-president, John L. Buffo; third vice-president, Joe Buffo; marshal, David R. Leekie; inside sentinel, Angelo Buffo; outside sentinel, Frank B. Gatto; trustee (18 months), L. F. Buffo. For this meeting, which was in the nature of the celebration of the Parlor's fifth anniversary, invitations were sent to the Parlors in the vicinity, and to Grand President Thomas Monahan, Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung, Grand Trustee W. F. Toomey and Sheriff R. R. Veale. Bros. Monahan and Jung tendered their regrets, but Bros. Toomey, Veale, and twenty members of Gen. Winn Parlor of Antioch were in attendance. Two candidates were initiated, the work being put on in the usual efficient manner which is the habit of Diamond Parlor, winning the commendation of all present. Following the business session, the Good of the Order committee prepared the banquet table, at which W. G. H. Croxon presided in his usual urbane manner. The "feed" was eaten by candlelight (the electric service having become defunct when half way through the initiation ceremonies), but this did not deter any one from enjoying himself. Speeches were made by Sheriff Veale, Grand Trustee Toomey and others. At about 12:30, the banqueters departed.

February 2nd a delegation from Diamond Parlor journeyed to Martinez to witness a ritualistic contest between the Past Presidents and regular officers of Mt. Diablo Parlor for a silver cup, the trophy being won by the regular officers. The "boys" report having had a good time. While returning to Pittsburg, J. E. Rough had the misfortune of being swatted in the neck with a bottle thrown by a party whose dreams had been disturbed. The bottle, which had been thrown half a car length, fortunately did no more damage to Bro. Rough than to put a dent in his collar.

Highly Complimented.

Palo Alto—D. D. G. P. George M. Kelley recently installed the officers of Palo Alto Parlor, No. 216, following which N. E. Malcolm, retiring president, and E. P. Cashel, past president, were the recipients of beautiful emblems consisting of silk watch fobs bearing a gold emblem of the banner of the Parlor; upon the banner was impressed a miniature of the Palo Alto tree and underneath was engraved the words "Past President of Palo Alto Parlor No. 216;" upon the other surface of the emblem were engraved the names of the past officers, together with dates of the years in which they had served. President George W. Tinney thanked the members for the honor conferred upon him, and assured them of his desire to give the best that is in him during his occupancy of the highest office. During the evening, Rev. Father Joseph A. Gleason delivered a stirring address on the history of the Order in the State and its possibilities in Palo Alto, which was received with enthusiasm. Other speakers were Past President N. E. Malcolm and D.D.G.P. George M. Kelley. A banquet concluded a most enjoyable evening.

William F. Toomey of Fresno, Grand Trustee, officially visited Palo Alto Parlor, February 2nd, and highly complimented the officers and members on the Parlor's excellent condition. Three candidates were initiated, and three applications read. During the social session, Norman E. Malcolm acted as toastmaster, and remarks were made by President George W. Tinney, Second Vice-president James Farmin, Treasurer E. A. Hettinger, D.D.G.P. George Kelley, Trustee Lucas Green, and Recording Secretary Pat Crowley. Refreshments were served.

The Palo Alto band has been organized by the Parlor, and instruments have been purchased and presented to the members. The band will provide outdoor concerts for residents of the city, and its purpose will be to boost Palo Alto.

EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY TO MAKE PAYING INVESTMENT.

Sacramento—The report of the Native Sons Hall Association of Sacramento issued under date of January 19th by Secretary Percy G. West, shows the association has assets in excess of liabilities of $38,861.20. The only liability is the $48,500 paid in by stockholders, while the assets include a piece of property, fully paid for, valued at $64,740, and $17,503 in cash.

The association was organized in October, 1906, when a piece of property was purchased for $14,250. In April, 1913, this property was sold for $53,500, netting the association, over and above all expenses of maintenance, the handsome sum of $40,333. The corner of Eleventh and J streets was then purchased for $57,000.

Plans have been accepted for a four-story building to be erected on this site within the next three months. The basement will be devoted to a large banquet-room, while the first floor will be made into stores. On the rear half of the second and third floors an auditorium, with stage and balcony, will be built; club-rooms will occupy the front half of the second floor, and a lodge-room the front half of the third floor. On the fourth floor will be arranged twenty-five office rooms. Every modern convenience will be provided throughout the building.

The association desires to dispose of more stock, and the excellent showing made should make it possible to sell sufficient stock to erect the hall, free of all debt. There is no doubt but that the building will pay a good dividend, as there are sufficient applications on file from prospective tenants to occupy all the space at good rentals. Stock is being sold at $100 per share, payable $5 down, and $2.50 per month. Percy G. West, 804 K street, Sacramento, the secretary, will be glad to furnish full details to anyone interested in the purchase of stock.

HISTORIC DATE OBSERVED.

Weaverville—January 24th, the anniversary of the discovery of gold at Coloma by James W. Marshall was celebrated by local Native Sons and Native Daughters and invited guests. Superior Judge J. W. Bartlett discoursed on the discovery of gold in California, which was followed by a vocal solo by Mrs. T. J. Montgomery and a piano solo by Mrs. J. A. Wallace. After the presentation of two laughable farces, various games were indulged in. Refreshments were served during the evening.

OPPOSE STATE PROHIBITION.

San Francisco—A large gathering of grape growers of the State took place in this city recently, when a new organization was formed to oppose the adoption of the proposed prohibition amendment to the State Constitution against the manufacture, sale, giving away, or transportation of wine from one point to another within California, on the ground that it is "unfair, contrary to public policy, and inimical to the industrial, viticultural, agricultural and commercial development and welfare of California."

CALIFORNIA PRODUCT THAT HAS BECOME A NATIONAL STANDBY.

It should be pleasing to most people of our State to know that we are producing the best mineral water on earth. It is only a question of time until the world will turn to Santa Barbara, as it has looked to Carlsbad, Budapest and other European countries, where people have been in the habit of going to drink of the waters. They are now waking up to the fact that Santa Barbara County, according to an official report, produces the best medicinal springs water on the face of the earth. When the world realizes this, and also the beautiful climate of our State, it will be more than likely that the millions traveling to Europe each year will visit our coast, where we have not only the superior water, but a far superior climate than is known in any of the foreign watering resorts.

During 1910 California produced 2,330,000 gallons of mineral water, and of this supply Santa Barbara produced more than one-tenth. The most notable output is the famous Veronica, which comes from the springs located in Veronica Valley, four miles west of the beautiful city of Santa Barbara. W. W. Skinner, chief of the water laboratory of the National Bureau of Chemistry, has just completed a preliminary inspection of the mineral water springs of California, and the investigation made is to the credit of the Santa Barbara Company, for there is nothing but the simon-pure national spring water bottled by it, and the majority of the springs of California show an exceptionally pure condition. Veronica water is sold throughout the United States, and during January of this year more than 80,000 bottles have been shipped to the different parts of the United States.

the Sacramento, and intended to save his crop from loss by the drought through irrigating. He was the first farmer to become an irrigationist in the Sacramento Valley.

Ground squirrels were a pest in Contra Costa County, and playing havoc with grain and other crops. An effort was being made to exterminate them by using a sheet-iron cylinder two or three feet long, three inches in diameter, and tapering to a point. In this was placed a mixture of sulphur and charcoal, which, being set on fire, caused a dense, suffocating smoke. This was blown, by use of a bellows, through the hole at the small end. The canister was thrust into a squirrel hole and the sulphur fumes forced down, causing the death of the squirrel.

On Norman's Ranch, near Stockton, a rancher found in the tules a table standing upright. It had been floated there by a flood in '62 from some foothill home. On taking hold of it he found that a swarm of bees were hiding underneath it. He obtained the table, seventy pounds of honey, a big lump of beeswax, and the swarm of bees from his find.

In 1850 an Englishman named C. B. Egerson fell off Meigg's wharf, San Francisco, and would have drowned had not a special policeman, named Van Ness, plunged into the water and saved him. Egerson died in Liverpool at the beginning of this year, and on March 5th Van Ness received notice that he had been willed $50,000 by him.

John Wilson, a circus manager who was the L. T. Barnum of the Pacific Coast, was the plaintiff in a unique suit against his partner, Wm. Henderson. His complaint showed they had entered into a circus company partnership in 1859, investing $30,000 in tents, elephants, horses, performers, etc., and up to September, 1861, had made a profit of $65,000. Wilson then went to South America with a show and lost $5000; Henderson went to British Columbia with another show, and lost a large sum and also his account books. Wilson was not satisfied with the result, and demanded by law an accounting.

Captain of Police Lees of San Francisco and his detectives made a big haul of pickpockets on March 15th. Over twenty people had their pockets picked at the Rev. T. Starr King funeral, and another harvest of watches and money was reaped at a mass attended by all the Spanish descendant Catholics in San Francisco on March 11th. The capture was made through a process of elimination. Lees was satisfied there were no pickpockets in San Francisco previous to March 1st. As he and his officers personally knew everybody then living in San Francisco, the arrivals there after March 1st were carefully located, with the result that five New York pickpockets, who had arrived on the Panama steamer since the date of inquiry, were located and found with the stolen goods in their possession.

NEW MINING BUREAU PUBLICATION.

In response to a demand not only from residents of California but from prospective investors and others interested in the mineral resources of the State throughout the world, the State Mining Bureau announces the publication, for free distribution, of Bulletin No. 66, containing the mining laws of California. A working knowledge of the law governing the location, development and acquisition of mineral land is necessary to all who are in any way connected with mining, and the above bulletin is presented with the idea of following out the principle which State Mineralogist Hamilton is pursuing in all branches of the work of the mining bureau, i. e., the advancement of the mineral industry in all possible ways.

All statutes and amendments including those enacted by the State Legislature during the 1913 session are contained therein, as well as the United States mining laws and various court decisions relating to mining. As an appendix are included the full text of the "Blue Sky" law and the Water Commission Act which were passed by the last Legislature but are inoperative at present, having first to go before the people under the referendum.

It has been deemed proper to include the "Blue Sky" law, as its action, if it becomes operative, will have considerable effect in suppressing illegitimate mining schemes, and will on that account accomplish much toward putting the industry on a sound footing and establishing a confidence in mining which is merited in the great majority of cases, but which is often lacking because of the fact that unscrupulous persons have used the industry as a means of perpetrating frauds upon the public. The Water Commission Act, which covers the regulation of the waters of California under State jurisdiction, has been included because the use of water is vital to the mining industry and it is to the miners' advantage to know that their interests in the use of water may be fairly adjudicated and protected. Those wishing a copy of this bulletin will be supplied upon addressing, F. McN. Hamilton, State Mineralogist, Ferry Building, San Francisco, California.

FEAR OF TUBERCULOSIS FOOLISH.

Sacramento—The State Superintendent of Public Instruction has just issued a little leaflet to the teachers of California calling attention to the latest conclusions of science in carrying on the world-wide fight against consumption. It is chiefly written by Dr. B. F. Howard, who is in charge of the bureau of tuberculosis for the State Board of Health. It particularly assures us that the unreasoning fear of associating with diseased persons is a foolish and useless thing. Worse still, it is cruel and harmful to the cause. A consumptive who takes care of himself is not a source of danger to his associates. The bacilli are so widely distributed in civilized life that every one has continued opportunities for infection, whether he sees consumptives or not. To ostracize patients or to frantically avoid them serves no good purpose whatever. The leaflet is called "A Word to Teachers on Health," and it may be had of the several county superintendents or of the State Superintendent.

ORDER NATIVE SONS DOES ALL, AND MORE, THAT OTHER SOCIETIES DO

San Francisco—Over one hundred and fifty delegates of the San Francisco Extension Committee of the Native Sons of the Golden West assembled in Native Sons' Hall, February 6th, and nominated and elected officers for the ensuing year. County Clerk Harry I. Mulerey declined reelection to the presidency, but in a few well-chosen words nominated Jesse C. Allan for the position, saying in part:

"Our ritual teaches us that the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West was instituted in 1876, when a small but patriotic band of young native Californians banded themselves together in a fraternal society, dedicated to the principles of Friendship, Loyalty and Charity. While it is true that during the years that have intervened the Order has grown to an organization of over two hundred Subordinate Parlor, with an aggregate membership of over twenty thousand, it has not increased in membership in proportion to the native-born male population who are eligible for membership. There are a number of reasons to account for our lack of membership, but notwithstanding these facts, within the membership of the Native Sons can be found men who occupy the biggest and most responsible positions in public and private life, and their success in many instances is largely due to the support and encouragement received from their brothers in the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West.

"Therefore, among other things it will be the duty of this Extension Committee, by educational means, such as public lectures, proper receptions to the Grand Officers, and in the preparation of literature for publication in the daily papers and magazines published in this State, to instruct all Californians, the native-born in particular, in the true principles and purposes of the Order. We must first impress upon the minds of all that this is not an organization for selfish purposes, and that it does not attempt to advance the interests of any one person or set of persons to the detriment of the rights of others.

"The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West does all that other fraternal societies do, and more.

It teaches a reverence for our Pioneer Mothers and Fathers, love of our native State, defense of womanhood, and the protection of the widows and orphans of our deceased members. It also provides for the homeless child and the childless home, the scientific research of California history, the preservation of pioneer California landmarks, and maintains an employment bureau where positions are secured for those out of employment. We aim to invite the world to California, and when the people know her beautiful and romantic history, they will love the State more; and when the native-born knows the true facts concerning the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West, he will be glad to enroll himself under the banner of the N.S.G.W. and do his part in carrying out its principles and purposes.

"It was my privilege and honor to be the first permanent president of this Extension Committee, which I deeply appreciate, and if I have been of some service, that fact alone will compensate me for any effort that I have made. But now, in compliance with the by-laws, I feel it is my duty to retire as president and take my place as past president and chairman of the Executive Committee, and in doing so, beg to assure you I will not lose interest in the work, but will give to my successor the benefit of my experience and help him in every way that I can. In retiring from the office of president, I wish to submit to you the name of a brother for the position, who I believe will fill the office with credit to himself and to your satisfaction; one whom I know has the welfare of our Order at heart, and will do all in his power to carry out the work of the committee, and I take great pleasure in nominating Jesse C. Allan of Pacific Parlor, No. 10."

The following officers were elected and installed: Past president, H. I. Mulerey; president, Jesse C. Allan; first vice-president, Max E. Liebt; second vice-president, Jas. A. Wilson; third vice-president, A. J. Rossi; treasurer, D. Q. Troy; secretary, H. F. Lilkendey; marshal, F. Dolly; inside sentinel, H. Viner; outside sentinel, L. E. Erb.

VAST SUMS SAVED

San Francisco—Hon. M. F. Tarpey of Fresno was the guest and principal speaker at the regular Thursday luncheon meeting of the Home Industry League of California, February 19th. The officers of the League are: A. C. Rulofson, president; J. H. Harbour, first vice-president; R. E. Queen, treasurer, and Chas. R. Thorburn, executive secretary. The League numbers among its membership 750 merchants and manufacturers, scattered through all sections of the State, and has also 10,000 auxiliary members, each pledged to give preference to "made-in-California" goods when price and quality are equal.

The League has but one object: the fostering, protecting and upbuilding of the manufacturing and producing industries of the State of California. It recognizes no locality, class, individual, corporation, trust or combination; it works for the benefit of all alike. Its object is one that every citizen of the State can endorse, and one that every patriotic citizen of the State of California should be in sympathy with. There is no good reason why it should not have the support of not only every manufacturer and producer of the State, but every loyal citizen, as well. Its work covers a vast field. It is not only designed to revive the waning industries of the State, but to endeavor to create others which may be profitably established in this State, with its vast natural resources.

Through the efforts of this League, vast sums of money have been expended in California that would otherwise have been sent out of the State. This money is now in circulation in California and is adding to the general prosperity.

GOOD ROADS INCREASE TRAFFIC

Los Angeles—The influence of good road construction upon increase in traffic is strikingly shown in figures compiled by the California Highway Commission relating to the increase of the number of motor trucks in Los Angeles County since the 300 miles of improved county highway began to be available in this section. Since December 31, 1909, when the good roads agitation began to crystallize into construction in Los Angeles, motor trucks in the county have increased as follows: Number in use December 31, 1910, 64; on December 31, 1911, 985; on December 31, 1912, 1880; on December 31, 1913, 3100 or more.

As the improved highways have been built for greater distances out of Los Angeles, the delivery zones have been steadily widened. Business houses whose heads testify that at one time they refused to make deliveries as far out as Jefferson and Main streets in the city of Los Angeles, a distance of some forty blocks, now make delivery trips daily to the beach and foothill cities nearby. Regular truck hauls are made from Los Angeles to Santa Monica, Long Beach, Whittier, Pasadena, San Bernardino, Pomona, Riverside and other cities fifteen to sixty miles distant. In some instances, owners of trucks have made hauls at rates practically equivalent to the short-haul rates of the steam and electric lines.

A feature which will be developed by State Highway construction, in the opinion of motor truck experts, is the use of motor truck trains, in which tractors will pick up trailers at different ranches to haul products cheaply to the centers of population.

HISTORIC BUTTE COUNTY SPOT

TO BE MARKED BY MONUMENT.

Oroville—A committee from Argonaut Parlor, No. 8, N.S.G.W., composed of A. M. Smith, J. V. Parks and Frank Tobin, went out to Bidwell Bar, February 8th, and with the aid of J. S. Bendle, a '49er, located the site of Butte County's first court house.

Carrying out the suggestion of the Grand Parlor which met in this city last year, that Parlor throughout the State should erect monuments at the places in their vicinity connected with the State's early history, Argonaut Parlor will erect a monument and beside it a tablet, fittingly engraved, to mark the place where the first court house stood. Situated on a high knoll—that has yielded its share of golden gravel to the world,—overlooking the Middle Fork of the Feather River, and in a place where it can be seen from the county road, it will stand as an everlasting memorial to the birth of Butte County.

Experiments with various chemical extinguishers for fighting national forest fires have not been very successful. The unlimited supply of oxygen in the open, forest officers say, tends to neutralize the effect of the chemicals.

The big capitalist doesn't have to seek personal

ARCHIVES OF LOS ANGELES TELL INTERESTING STORY

UESTRA SENORA LA REINA DE los Angeles (Our Lady the Queen of the Angels), from which grew the great City of Los Angeles, was visited by Captain Portola shortly after the founding of San Diego Mission, August, 1769, and possession taken in the name of Spain.

By royal grant, dated May 26, 1781, the place acquired its title, and in September of that year the pueblo was formally established by twelve families—forty-six persons in all. In its treaty with Mexico in 1848, the United States recognized and sustained this title.

From the earliest dates, those governing the pueblo made grants and dispositions of lands to the citizens, but few of which were recorded. It is to be regretted that more of these grants were not recorded. The holders of them seemed to have been satisfied with their titles, entered into possession, took very little care of their paper muniments, and in too many instances allowed them to be lost or destroyed. Thus it happens that to some of the most valuable property in the city, the only proof of the original source of title consists of such fragmentary memoranda as happens to be found in those of the municipal records that yet remain. A title by prescription has, however, been acquired in most instances, which, under the Mexican law, accrued upon ten years' possession.

By an act of the California Legislature passed April 4, 1850, following Los Angeles' becoming an incorporated city under the act of March 11, 1850, the city was especially incorporated with respect to the land included within the limits of the old pueblo, and was made to succeed to all the rights, claims and powers of said pueblo.

On the 26th of October, 1852, the city filed its claim with the United States Land Commissioners, and a decree of confirmation was rendered to a tract of land containing four leagues in a square form, whose boundaries should be so drawn that the respective centers should be in a direction due north, south, east and west from the center of the Plaza of the city, and each at the distance of three miles from the same. And as so confirmed the lands were surveyed by Henry Hancock, the United States Deputy Surveyor, in August, 1858, which survey was approved by the United States Surveyor-General for California and has ever since been regarded as final.

On April 15, 1854, the Common Council of Los Angeles passed an ordinance releasing the title of the city to the respective occupants of all lands of which they had been for twelve years in undisturbed possession by themselves or their grantees, and directed that upon the showing of this fact by the applicant, the observance of certain formalities, and the payment of certain fees, the mayor should execute a deed to the applicant for the land so occupied. And from time to time, the Council has passed other ordinances providing for the disposition of its public lands and for confirming its title to former grantees.

The Archives of Los Angeles, in which have been preserved the proceedings of the Ayuntamiento—the governing body before the advent of the gringos—and the Common Council—the governing body after the formation of the State Government and the city's incorporation therein—date back as far as October, 1827. For a period of five years, however, from 1839 to 1844, the record is missing, and it appears there was no Ayuntamiento during that time.

These Archives are full of interesting, as well as amusing, matter, and a few of the records are here quoted to contrast conditions as they existed as late as 1869 with those of the present day. These records point out in a most convincing manner, the Angel City's phenomenal growth:

Four Blocks in 1832 City Election.

The first minutes of the Ayuntamiento bear the introduction, "El Pueblo Nuestra Senora la Reina de Los Angeles," but beginning about 1830 were titled, "In the Town of Our Lady of the Angels in the Territory of the Upper California."

At the session of November 30, 1832, provision was made "to divide this town into four blocks," for a primary election to be held the first Sunday in December for the election of the Ayuntamiento.

The Ayuntamiento, at its meeting January 19, 1832, "dwelt on the lack of improvement shown by the public school of this town and on the necessity of civilizing and morally training the children. It was thought wise to place Citizen Vicente Moraga in charge of said school from this date, recognizing in him the necessary qualifications for the discharge of said duties, allowing him fifteen dollars monthly."

COPY OF ACT INCORPORATING LOS ANGELES CITY.

An Act to Incorporate the City of Los Angeles.

The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. All that tract of land included within the limits of the Pueblo de Los Angeles, as heretofore known and acknowledged, shall henceforth be known as the City of Los Angeles; and the said city is hereby declared to be incorporated according to the provisions of the act, entitled, "An act to provide for the incorporation of cities," approved March 18th, 1850:

Provided, however, that if such limits include more than four square miles, the Council shall, within three months after they are elected and qualified, fix by ordinance the limits of the city, not to include more than said quantity of land, and the boundaries of the city.

Section 2. The number of Councilmen shall be seven. The first election of city officers shall be held on the second Monday of May next.

Section 3. The corporation created by this act, shall succeed to all the rights, claims and powers of the Pueblo de Los Angeles, in regard to property, and shall be subject to all the liabilities incurred and obligations created Ayuntamiento of said Pueblo.

JOHN BIGLER,

Speaker of House of Assembly.

E. KIRBY CHAMBERLAIN,

President Protem of the Senate.

Approved April 4th, 1850:

PETER H. BURNETT,
Governor.

At the session of February 27, 1833, "the Alcalde made known that Citizen Pedro Feliz, owner of the San Jose Rancho, informed him that on the 24th inst. there had been stolen from his lands the greatest number of his gentle horses and according to the tracks on the ground, they were being conducted toward the 'Tulares' and for other reasons given, he sought permission to go in pursuit of them accompanied by four citizens whom he would take at his own expense. The corporation 'opined' he should go on this errand only to the Rancho San Francisco, on account of the evident dangers existing beyond that place."

In the year 1836, for the purpose of preserving order, the Ayuntamiento decreed that all individuals of the age required by law, who resided in the city and its jurisdiction, were obliged to serve as guards of the city. Four days was the time of service required.

Volume 3, page 315 (1845), has this to say regarding a public school system: "The year 1845 witnessed the real beginning of the public school system in this city. The president of the Ayuntamiento in his inaugural address, speaking of the founding of the schools by the preceding Ayuntamiento said, 'the public hears witness to the noble enterprise of your illustrious Ayuntamiento, whose term but yesterday expired. At the very beginning they, overcoming many obstacles, established a primary school, having no material aid from the municipal fund; and as even the memory of such an establishment had been lost in this unfortunate country, everything was lacking to produce the result required. The 15th day of January, however, saw the solemn opening of that establishment which is so useful and important and which for many reasons is for the best results. The superior government which up to this time would not perhaps grant a school to the different towns of the department, listened to the supplications of the illustrious Ayuntamiento and protected the same by donating five hundred dollars a year, appointing Corporal Guadalupe Mendina as preceptor. One hundred and three youths from this vicinity alone made rapid progress under the care of their honorable professor.'"

Property of Little Value in 1849.

The following police ordinance is recorded in volume 4, page 367, under date of July 3, 1847: "Article 9—Whosoever gives shelter in his house to any stranger intending to remain in town longer than one day, shall notify the authorities as to who the person is, and in case of wishing to remain here, state his profession, trade or means of subsistence."

That property was not considered of much value in 1849 is revealed in the record (volume 4, page 548,) where it states that at an auction held at that time, ninety-one lots in the district bounded by Main, Hill, Third and Fourth streets were sold for the total sum of $6,648.

Volume 4, page 572, under date of May 30, 1849, says that the Council convened in special session to consider a communication from Tomas Talamantes which stated that "Squata Indians of the Sierra San Vicente are damaging his ranch, committing hereafter depredations, such as coming up to his house and stealing three horses that had been securely staked and driving away some of his cattle from the adjoining pasture. The Coun-eil instructed Messrs. Jose Lopez and Francisco Ruiz to solicit from among our citizens, arms and ammunition with which to aid Talamantes, with this understanding, however, that he should return all borrowed arms, and as much of the ammunition as had not been used in the pursuit of the marauders."

In June, 1849, an ordinance was passed providing for a survey of the town by Lieutenant E. O. C. Ord. This survey divided the town into lots and blocks, and delineated the various tracts and parcels already granted. It is commonly known as Ord's survey.

Los Angeles a California City.

The city of Los Angeles was incorporated under the act of the Legislature providing for the incorporation of towns and cities, approved March 11, 1850, and by a subsequent special act, approved April 4, 1850, was made to succeed to all the rights and privileges of the pueblo.

The first Common Council of the city took the oath of office July 3, 1850. It consisted of seven members—David W. Alexander, who was chosen president, Albert Bell, Manuel Requena, John Temple, Morris L. Goodman, Christabel Aguillar and Julian Chanez. They, by resolution, received no salary. A P. Hodges was chosen the first mayor. Meetings were held in a house offered by Juan Temple.

Rules for the Council's guidance were adopted July 27th, and provided, among other things, that "when a meeting is held, there shall be on the table a copy of the Constitution of the United States, of the State of California, and of the law of March 20, 1850, besides a copy of these rules in both languages."

At a meeting August 7, 1850, some interesting police regulations were adopted in the form of an ordinance. These regulations were no doubt in keeping with the times, but today appear queer. We find, among others, one providing that "the police shall gather in the vagrants of both sexes, who shall be assigned by the recorder to serve private parties under proper and just conditions." Others provide that

"On Saturday every householder shall clean the front of his premises to the middle of the street, or for the space of at least eight varas."

"Whosoever brings cattle into the city must have them tied to tame oxen and attended to by one or more conductors, so as to prevent the cattle doing any damage; should any be done, however, the conductor or conductors shall be held responsible for the same."

"Every owner of a shop or tavern, as well as everybody who lives in a house of two or more rooms facing the street, shall put a light in the door of said premises during the first two hours of every dark night."

"Every shop or tavern shall close in winter at eight o'clock at night."

"The wasbing of clothes in the zanjias (canals) which furnish water for common use is prohibited."

First Gas and Railroad Franchises.

"Whosoever should walk the streets in a scandalous attire or molest the neighbors with yells or in any other manner, shall be taken to jail, if the hour be late for business or the offender be intoxicated, and afterwards at the proper hour, or when again sober, the recorder shall impose a fine of not less than ten dollars, nor more than twenty-five, which must be paid on the spot, otherwise the offender shall be sent to the chaingang (place of confinement, fortress,) for the space of from ten to twenty-five days. If he be an Indian, he shall pay a fine of $3 to $5, or be imprisoned eight days in the chaingang."

In addition to these matters of regulation, the Archives give this interesting information:

That on May 4, 1850, the Council voted to loan the Honorable County Judge $350 to defray the expenses of a special messenger to the State Capital to secure a set of laws for the county officers.

That in July, 1851, Dr. A. W. Hope was appointed

Chief of Police to command a volunteer force of seventy-four members.

That on May 5, 1866, James Walsh was granted the first gas franchise, he being given an exclusive right to lay gas mains in the city, the franchise to run for twenty years and the mains to cost at least $5,000. For the privilege he agreed to furnish gas free to the mayor's office.

That in February, 1869, G. G. Wasner filed a petition asking that Main street, from Fifth, southerly, be closed up and abandoned. His reasons, as set forth in volume 7, page 38, were that "Spring street from its location is better adapted for a general thoroughfare than Main street. Main street from Fifth street southerly is unseemly and tortuous and there are but few persons residing upon it, and those mostly of little influence, political or otherwise."

That on June 1, 1869, R. M. Widney was awarded the first street railroad franchise, to run for a period of twenty years. The privilege was granted over the following streets: Beginning at the junction of Main and Springs streets, thence along Spring to First, First to Fort, Fort to Fourth, Fourth to Hill, Hill to Fifth, Fifth to Olive, Olive to Sixth, Sixth to Figueroa.

THE HILLS OF CALIFORNIA.

Sing not to me of sweeping plains,
Luxuriant tho' they be,
Where flowers bloom and rivers clear
Flow onward to the sea.
But sing to me of hills whereon
The white clouds love to lie,
Where streams are born, where winds are soft,
Where kiss the earth and sky.

Oh, California's hills are fair
When on them sunshine gleams,
Or when above in starry skies
The bright moon o'er them dreams.
In summertime the wild birds sing
For joy among the trees,
While wandering winds with music sweet
Steal through the scented leaves.

Here Nature dwells in happiness
And with her gentle voice,
Bids man to follow in her steps
And make her will his choice.
Where Nature dwells the heart is glad,
For Life and Beauty raise Expressions of the human soul
To gratitude and praise.

Who would not dwell among the hills
So near the stars and sky,
Where all is peace and joy and rest,
And Discord is not nigh?
Who would not choose the pine's low song,
The breeze so full and free,
The wild bird's song, the wild flower's bloom,
'Tho' fair the lowlands be?

—JOSEPHINE F. RICKARD.

Tree planting on national forests has to be confined to comparatively short intervals in spring and fall. In spring it starts when the snow melts and stops with the drying out of the ground; in the fall it comes between the fall rains and first snow-fall.

FELLOWSHIPS IN PACIFIC COAST HISTORY

(By H. MORSE STEPHENS, Sather Professor of History, University of California.)

IN THE YEAR 1910 A COMMITTEE of the Native Sons of the Golden West on the feasibility of establishing a chair of California History in the State University at Berkeley reported that it would not be feasible to establish at that time a chair of California History, for the following reason: "That to establish such a chair calls for some one whose study and research make him qualified to occupy such a chair."

The committee went on to suggest that it should be the first duty of the Native Sons of the Golden West who are interested in the history of their State, to provide for the training of such a man and to provide for the collection of authentic material upon the history of the State, from which, alone, accurate knowledge could be required.

The committee accepted a suggestion of the Department of History of the University of California that the most needed thing for California history was the establishment of a Traveling Fellowship, which should make it possible to unlock the secrets of early California history which are hidden away in the archives of Spain and Mexico, of London, Paris, and St. Petersburg, of Washington, Sacramento, and the Bancroft Library at Berkeley. The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West responded generously.

The first Fellowship, paying $1500 a year, was at once established, and a second Fellowship was added at the Santa Cruz meeting in 1911. The regulations for the filling of these Fellowships were carefully drawn up by a committee of the Native Sons, and are herewith subjoined:

UNIVERSITY FELLOWSHIPS IN PACIFIC COAST HISTORY.

Established by the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

The following are the regulations governing appointment:

PROFESSOR H. MORSE STEPHENS.

Candidates for the Fellowships must be graduates of a university and must have done at least one year of graduate work upon Pacific Coast History.

They must present some written work showing knowledge and power of research upon some subject in the history of the Pacific Coast.

The names of the candidates for the Fellowships, with their qualifications and evidence of their training for historical research in the form of written work, shall be submitted by the Department of History of the University of California on or about the first of May in each year, to a committee chosen by the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West at its annual session, and the names of the candidates selected by the committee shall be submitted to the President of the University of California, to be announced by him upon Commencement Day.

University Fellowships in Pacific Coast History may be candidates for re-election to the Fellowships upon their submitting proofs of their fitness, either by thoroughness of the work done during the year or their term of Fellowship, or by promise for the completion of larger investigations.

The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West shall pay annually to the Regents of the University of California the sum of three thousand dollars for the maintenance of the Fellowships in Pacific Coast History.

Fixes Date of Galvez' Coming.

The first Native Sons Traveling Fellow elected was L. P. Briggs, who at once went to Seville and established himself there in 1911. The particular work to which Mr. Briggs devoted himself was the European, and especially the Spanish, background of the Portola Expedition. He worked over the documents preserved not only at Seville, but at Simancas and Madrid also. Applying himself with the greatest energy to his subject, he solved many important historical problems.

He showed, for instance, that Don Jose de Galvez came to America in 1765 and at once undertook the work of occupying Alta California. Earlier historians had fixed the date of the arrival of Galvez as 1761, but Mr. Briggs found the records of the ship in which he sailed, the names of his companions, the date of his arrival in Vera Cruz, and his first official act in Mexico. For the first time, the relation between the occupation of Upper Cali-

HOMES FOR HOMELESS; CHILDREN FOR CHILDLESS

(By CHARLES M. BELSHAW, Past Grand President, N.S.G.W., Antioch.)

THE NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN West and the Native Daughters of the Golden West are the only fraternal societies engaged in finding homes for homeless children, and they are pioneers in this most laudable work.

Fairfax H. Wheelan, Grand Trustee of the N. S. G. W., first suggested the idea. He has been actively interested in charitable work in San Francisco for many years, giving particular attention to the work of the children's agency of the associated charities, endeavoring to bring the childless home and the homeless child together.

He realized that the success and permanency of the work depended, in a very large degree, first, upon a thorough investigation of the home, and second, upon a careful supervision of the child until adoption. He laid his plans before the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West, which convened in Yosemite Valley, May 25, 1908. The matter was thoroughly discussed and was again referred to a committee to confer with the Native Daughters of the Golden West and the children's agency of the Associated Charities, and report to the next Grand Parlor.

This committee, after a thorough investigation, submitted its report to the Grand Parlor of the N. S. G. W. which met in Marysville, April 26, 1909, and recommended that the Order take up the work of finding homes for homeless children, and that suitable legislation be enacted for the purpose of carrying on the work. This legislation was enacted, and provided for a Central Committee composed of three representatives of the N.D.G.W., three from the N.S.G.W., one from the Catholic charities, one from the Protestant charities, one from the Hebrew charities, and one from the Associated Charities of San Francisco.

This Central Committee held its first meeting on October 13, 1909 and proceeded to work out plans for the permanent organization of a committee and the formation of rules for the conduct of its work and the collection of funds. At a meeting of the committee held April 26, 1910, it was decided to open offices at 855 Phelan building, San Francisco, and start the active work of the committee on May 2, 1910.

How Funds Are Derived.

The funds of the committee are derived from entertainments given by the different Parlors of both Orders each year, as near as may be to October 8th, which day has been designated by the committee as California's Day for the Homeless Child. The Parlors have always responded well. General Winn Parlor, No. 32, N.S.G.W., at Antioch, has always headed the list of contributing Parlors, and from the entertainment given under its

SENATOR CHARLES M. BELSHAW, Chairman Homeless Children's Committee.

In their finding of homes for the homeless and children for the childless, the Native Sons of the Golden West offer additional proof of their claim to being a fraternal organization different from any other.

This work is not carried on for the benefit of native Californians alone, but in behalf of all children of the State, and in its prosecution neither nationality, creed nor color are considered.

With the aid of the Native Daughters of the Golden West, the Order expends $5600 annually in this work, without any hope of reward beyond the rearing of a better manhood and womanhood in the State.

To help in the prosecution of this most laudable work, should be a sufficient reason why every eligible son of California should affiliate with the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West.—Editor.

auspices November 2, 1913, $535 was returned to the Central Committee.

The method of handling children by the Central Committee is as follows: Anyone desiring a child must make application on an application blank, setting forth, among other things, the age and sex of child desired, the reason for wanting a child, and the financial ability for caring for a child. Character references must also be furnished. Upon filing this application with the Central Committee, an investigation of the home is made, either by an employee of the Central Committee or by members of the Homeless Children Committee of the N.D.G.W. or N.S.G.W. Parlor in the immediate vicinity of the home of the applicant for the child. If a favorable report is made upon the home, and character and financial ability of the applicant are satisfactory to the Central Committee, the child is placed in the home, and until it is adopted by the foster parents is under the supervision of the Central Committee, wherever possible represented by the Homeless Children Committee of the Native Sons or Native Daughters Parlor nearest the home where the child is placed.

This committee of the Parlor is required to make a report to the Central Committee at least once in two months as to how the child is getting on and

THE FIRST DAY OF APRIL, 1864, brought with it a sequence of welcome April showers that dropped nearly an inch of rain in the valleys, and deposited about eight feet of snow on the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

The rainfall caused a drop in the price of flour, grain and other products; raised the rivers eight or ten feet, and gave the placer mines a supply of water that enabled them to begin washing their pay dirt. It raised the hopes of farmers and stockraisers of harvesting part of a crop and getting pasture, and also gave a new impetus to business over the whole State.

The rainfall for the month was 1.09 inches, making 6.70 for the season to date. The storm, during the first week of April, was followed by an unusual hot spell, the temperature rising to 80° in San Francisco and over 90° in the interior. This hot spell counteracted the good the rain had done, and at the end of the month the drought conditions had been but slightly bettered.

Grain prices again advanced and mining, farming and stockraising interests were shadowed with gloom. The snowfall in the mountains had put a stop to the teaming business, and the hum of industry had a very feeble sound.

C. M. Weber of Stockton was completing a big system of canals to use the water of the Calaveras River to irrigate a large section of land near Cherokee Lane, in San Joaquin County.

Legislators Part in Friendship.

The Legislature adjourned sine die at noon on April 5th. On the last day of the session a bill was passed appropriating $15,000 for the relief of General John A. Sutter, to be paid in monthly installments of $250. It was immediately signed by Governor Lowe. The General was said to be in very straitened circumstances. The land he once owned and the money he had made during the placer mining era were all gone, and he was feeling the pinch of poverty.

This session of the Legislature was placid. There were no turbulent hours, nor blood-shedding threats; good nature prevailed, and the members separated with a feeling of good-will toward each other that was almost unanimous.

Lieutenant-Governor T. N. Machin was presented by the Senators with a beautiful diamond pin, and Speaker W. H. Sears, by the Assembly, with an expensive silver service.

The Central Pacific Railroad inaugurated its first passenger service on April 25th, scheduling a train each way, once a day, between Sacramento and Roseville. The gauge of the Central California Railroad, extending from Folsom to Lincoln, was five feet, while that of the Central Pacific was four feet eight and one-half inches so that the rolling stock was not interchangeable. The Central California made a connection at Roseville and ran passenger trains to Lincoln and Folsom. Many people made the trip during the next thirty days, on account of the novelty of the ride, and the initial business exceeded expectations.

Powder Demand Increases.

Near Newcastle, April 15th, J. H. Strobridge, in charge of the grading work of the Central Pacific, and two other employees were blown up by the unexpected explosion of a keg of powder in a cut they were blasting. It was at first feared they were fatally injured, but they recovered. Mr. Strobridge lost an eye, but was soon able to resume charge of the grading work and completed it to Promontory. While the loss of his eye did not impair his energy and ability to push the work along, it made him one of the most conspicuous and best-known men in the employ of the company.

The San Francisco and San Jose Railroad was now said to have developed a business on its line that was paying, in gross receipts, $1000 a day, and it was considered to be upon the highway of prosperity.

The building of these different lines of railroad had greatly increased the demand for powder. The only kind then in use was black blasting powder, and Santa Cruz became the center of this industry. Sulphur, charcoal and saltpeter were the ingredients used in making this kind of blasting powder, and the largest powder works were on San Lorenzo Creek, about two miles from the town. Fifteen buildings were used in the different processes of manufacture, and the company was turning out an average product of two hundred kegs a day.

Benjamin Franklin was one of the big teamsters in the '60s; with sixteen belled mules and two big prairie schooners, he was making the trip from Sacramento to Reese River in twenty-one days. His animals were consuming five tons of barley on the trip.

In the Civil War, no important events transpired. There was some fighting on the Red River, but everything appeared to be waiting on what

(THOMAS R. JONES, SACRAMENTO.)

General U. S. Grant intended to do. Nobody seemed to know what his plans were, but the country was patient and confident, and the newspapers, for the first time since the Civil War began, appeared to have no plan of campaign of their own to advise President Lincoln to follow.

Sack of Flour Brings Money.

Ridgely Greathouse, a banker of Yreka, who, during '63, had attracted much attention through his connection with the fitting up of the vessel "Chapman," in San Francisco, for piratical purposes in aid of the Southern Confederacy, was again brought into public view by being ordered arrested by the Government authorities in Washington. It was stated he had violated an oath of allegiance, given in Kentucky in 1862. He was ordered taken to Fort Lafayette, New York City, and left by steamer, in charge of a military guard, on April 15th. A large crowd gathered at the wharf to witness his departure. It was the first arrest made by authority of the United States Government at Washington for treasonable acts in this State.

The Rev. Dr. Bellows of New York City, a prominent Unitarian minister of that city, accepted the invitation of the Unitarian Association of San Francisco to fill the place made vacant by the death of Rev. Starr King. Dr. Bellows was at the head of the Sanitary Fund Commission and he gave as a reason for coming to San Francisco that as California had contributed a million dollars to the fund and that the labors of the Rev. Starr King having undoubtedly aided in accomplishing this result, he felt it a duty to go and continue the good work of the lamented leader.

The Sanitary Fund received a material increase of coin during this year from a very novel incident. R. C. Gridley, of the firm of Gridley, Hobart & Co., merchants in Austin, Nevada, made a bet on an election result with Dr. Herriek, the County Assessor. It was agreed that the loser was to carry a sack of flour upon his back, from Gridley's store to a distant destination. Gridley lost, and on April 19th, at 10 a. m., headed by a "brass band and accompanied by a crowd of amused fellow citizens, he paid his lost bet. At the end of his journey, Gridley donated the sack of flour to the Sanitary Fund Commission.

E. J. Davis, who was the Lander County Commissioner, received it and appointed Thomas B. Wade auctioneer. M. J. Noyes was the first buyer, his bid being $350. He donated the sack to the cause, and R. C. Gridley was the next buyer at $305. The buying and donating kept on all day, and $4,400 was realized. The auction continued the next day and finally the famous "Gridley sack of flour" was started upon its Pacific Coast journey, bringing a golden shower to the Sanitary Fund treasury, wherever it made its appearance.

Captain Kidd, a steamboat man, launched the steamboat "Washoe" in San Francisco, April 5th, and during the latter end of the month began operating in opposition to the California Navigation Company's steamboats between San Francisco and Sacramento. His proved to be the first really successful opposition they had to contend with.

Beaver Exhausts Milk Supply.

The steamer "San Joaquin" had its boiler explode seven miles above Sacramento on April 28th. E. H. Burbank, the engineer, was blown overboard and severely scalded. Fortunately, no other persons were injured.

On April 2nd, the convicts in San Quentin State Prison made a desperate attempt to escape. They were under the leadership of a convict named Tom King. In the melee, five convicts were killed and four others, including King, were wounded by the guards who, by promptly shooting, prevented the break.

A shipment of three hundred boxes of dead Chinamen's bones was made in a sailing vessel from San Francisco for China.

A boy in Stockton found a beaver cub, about ten days old, in a beaver house on Mormon Slough. He took the little animal to his home, where it soon became a pet and made itself contented with its surroundings. It was about the size of a rat, had very short legs, thick fur, and a tail four inches long. It was fed bread and milk, and was a very bearty eater. In a few days an old cat, who had a litter of kittens on the premises, carried the little beaver off and adopted it into her family. She endeavored, to the best of her ability, to satisfy its voracious appetite from her milk fountain, without success.

A man named McCoy, living on San Benito Creek, in Monterey County, went on a hunt after a grizzly bear that had been killing his sheep. While sauntering along in the brush on a ridge, the grizzly came up behind him, and before he became aware of its being so near, he was felled by a blow on the head, struck with a paw by the bear. The grizzly then tore McCoy's arm out of its socket, crushed in his ribs, and left him for dead upon the ground. McCoy managed to drag himself home and soon died from his injuries.

Dromedary Race Creates Riot.

Samuel McLonergan purchased the herd of camels belonging to the Government and which the quartermaster at Benicia had failed to sell at auction, in February, on account of no bidders. This herd was part of one bought by Jefferson Davis, when he was Secretary of War in the '50s, and was then put into the service of packing water and supplies for the surveyors and soldiers on the frontier in Texas and Arizona. It also contained twelve camels that were presented to the President of the United States by the Sultan of Turkey at the time the others were bought in that country. The patriarch of the herd was "Old Tule," thirty-five years old, and he was said to have made a journey of 150 miles, in Arizona, in one day. His mate was "Old Mary," about twenty-five years old, who was larger, stronger and speedier, and was considered capable of carrying a pack of eight hundred pounds one hundred miles a day. There were now thirty-four camels in this herd. Seven of them were under three years of age and natives of this country.

McLonergan took part of the herd to Sacramento and made a contract to pack freight from Sacramento to the Humboldt River, via Red Bluff and Beekwith Pass. While making his preparations a farmer named Riley, living near Sacramento, bought three of them to start a camel ranch. A discussion arose as to whether these animals were camels or dromedaries. They had one hump, and it was claimed a real camel had two. Public attention became attracted, and opinion heated, so that when this state of the public mind was taken advantage of and a dromedary race was announced to take place on April 7th at the State Fair grounds, a crowd of nearly two thousand paid their admission fee and gathered about the race track to witness the racing novelty.

Little did any one know of the peculiarities of this animal's nature, for the only way a camel will race is straight away between distant points. It has decided objections to passing the same point twice, and when sent around a circular track it soon discovers it is not getting anywhere and quits. On this occasion the camels made one circuit, then laid down and began chewing their cuds.

The race deteriorated into a drive. The only way they could be kept moving was by having a horseman, provided with a blacksnake, follow each animal around the track. The crowd, after bowling their derision until tired, came back to the city wiser than before, and for many months, when a man desired to convey the information something had not come up to his expectation or he had been bilked, a remark that "he had been to a dromedary race," would convey the desired information.

Vicissitudes of Mining.

Jones and Woodman, working a quartz vein near Columbia with an arrastre, cleaned up at the rate of $175 a ton and had a big fortune in eight.

A Chinese company mining on Long Gulch, in Siskiyou County, found a lump of gold weighing three pounds and worth nearly $700.

David Boyver, a citizen of Rough and Ready, Nevada County, sold his interest in a ditch company for $80,000 and was considered a very fortunate person.

A Mexican prospecting a ravine near Little York, in Nevada County, struck a rich placer claim which, after taking out several thousand dollars of gold dust, he sold for $7,000. The miner who purchased it took out $20,000 and then sold it for $7,000. The new owners took out $8,000 during this month, and the claim was considered to be only about one-half worked out.

Illustrating the vicissitudes of luck in mining, the following incident is only one of many that could be cited: On February, 21, 1858, in Grass Valley, Michael Brennan, his wife and three children, were found dead in their home. They had all died from cyanide of potassium poison, administered by Brennan. He was the owner of the Mt. Hope mine, and had spent a large amount of money sinking a shaft on Massachusetts Hill, searching for a quartz ledge he believed existed in the depths of the hill. He left letters stating he was hopelessly in debt; his claim had proved to be a delusion, and he could not live in poverty and see his family suffer from his mistake. He was a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, finely educated and a well-informed, intelligent man. The tragedy was a

ORDER OF NATIVE SONS FOUNDED BY A PIONEER

THE ORDER OF THE NATIVE SONS of the Golden West, which will send members from all parts of California to Los Angeles to participate in the Thirty-seventh Grand Parlor of the organization, owes its origin and progress to one of the strongest feelings implanted in the human breast—pride of nativity, love for the place of birth.

It is essentially and practically a California Order, being confined to those born within the State. Its origin was patriotic, its purposes benevolent, its object to perpetuate the men and memories of "the days of '49," and to unite all native Californians in one harmonious body.

It owes no allegiance, save where the Stars and Stripes shall ever wave. The burden of the Pioneer founders has been taken up; and upon the foundation laid by them, the Native Sons have erected a superstructure which today, in its ramifications, includes every city and hamlet of importance in the State of California.

From a beginning of twenty-one members thirty-nine years ago, it now numbers twenty-five thousand of the bone and sinew of the land, honored in their native State and in the Nation.

The object and aim of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is best told from the prefatory to its constitution and by-laws: "The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West was organized for the mutual benefit, mutual improvement and social intercourse of its members; to perpetuate in the minds of all native Californians the memories of one of the most wonderful epochs in the world's history—"the days of '49"—to unite them in one harmonious body throughout the State by the ties of a friendship mutually beneficial to all, and unalloyed by the bitterness of religious or political differences, the discussion of which is most stringently forbidden in its meetings; to elevate and cultivate the mental faculties; to rejoice with one another in prosperity, and to extend the 'Good Samaritan' hand in adversity."

It is a secret society only so far as is necessary for the purpose of conducting its business affairs and the private relations of its members towards one another. In the secret part of its work, there is nothing antagonistic to the scruples or conscientious opinions of the opponents of secret organizations. Its great principle is to "honor the builders of the Golden State," and to perpetuate the memory of their deeds; and, in addition to this, to instill into the minds of the Sons of California a full and complete understanding of their relation and duty to the State, and to cultivate a spirit of friendship, brotherly love and harmony among them.

The constitution of the Order confines its membership to white males born in the State of California, and at least eighteen years of age. Candidates must be of sound health, of good moral character and industrious habits, having some respectable means of support, and believe in the existence of a Supreme Being.

The initiatory ceremonies are necessarily secret; but they are founded on, and bear an allegorical reference to, the history of California, and are calculated to impress the initiate with an idea of the importance to be attributed to the historical events that have made California what she is today. The principles of Friendship, Loyalty and Charity are enlarged upon, with the endeavor to instill into his mind the duty he owes to all worthy mankind.

Not Founded by a Native Born.

To many not familiar with the Order's history, it will perhaps be surprising to know that it was founded by one not a native born—General A. M. Winn—and is the outgrowth of an assemblage of native Californians called together in San Francisco in 1875 to participate in the celebration of the ninety-ninth anniversary of American independence. Upon the occasion of this meeting, General Winn said: "This organization of young men, under the name of the Native Sons of the Golden West, is to become the future pioneers of California. The real Pioneers are fast passing away; and the rising generation will surely fill their places, and the course you have adopted in forming this organization is one that I have long looked for among young Californians. As to the future of our State, never was there such an outlook known in the annals of history." The organization was formally launched as a patriotic and fraternal society July 11, 1875.

General Winn not being a native of California was ineligible to membership in the Order he founded, but was made an honorary member—the only one who was ever so honored by the fraternity. Upon his death, the Order conducted the obsequies, and his last resting place in the City Cemetery at Sacramento is marked by a massive monument erected by the Native Sons of the Golden West.

GENERAL A. M. WINN.
Founder of the N.S.G.W.

Grand Parlors of Past.

The Grand Parlor of the Order, the thirty-seventh annual session of which will convene in Los Angeles, April 20th, was organized November 30, 1878, in San Francisco. It is made up of the Grand Officers, Past Grand Presidents and delegates elected from the two hundred Subordinate Parlors. Sessions of the past have been held as follows:

- First, 1878, San Francisco.
- Second, 1879, San Francisco.
- Third, 1880, San Francisco.
- Fourth, 1881, Oakland.
- Fifth, 1882, Sacramento.
- Sixth, 1883, San Francisco.
- Seventh, 1884, Marysville.
- Eighth, 1885, San Jose.
- Ninth, 1886, Woodland.

GROWING BETTER.

The world is growing better
And wiser every day,
And Christian love is broader
In its universal sway.
The optimist is working
For a higher, loftier sphere,
Where hope and truth shall linger
Every hour and day and year!

The world is still progressing
In science, love and art,
Diffusing richest blessing
In the home and soul and heart,
And matchless man is moving
To propel and still increase
The reign of equal justice
With the Prince of perfect peace!

The day is surely coming,
When all creeds shall find a way
To unite their blind contention
With imperial Christian sway,
With truth and love the masters
To rule our birth and life
And charity the angel
To guide us in each strife!

This is my latest poem—"Growing Better,"—that will suit your progressive, optimistic California readers; for of all the citizens of this Republic, that I have met during the past fifty-five years, the typical Californian has the most confidence in himself and his State, and no adversity can chill or break his indomitable pluck and perseverance!

When Alaska shall soon pour in its undeveloped cisco, through the "Golden Gate" of San Francisco, through the double-track railroad that Uncle Sam will quickly build, then California will double its greatness and its golden glory!

great shock to the community, as the family stood high in the estimation of its citizens.

The ledge that Brennan vainly sought for was struck this month, six years after his death, just eighteen inches below where he stopped working. It was two feet wide, very rich, and would have made him a wealthy man. Had he only continued work a day or two longer, what a different fate would have been his!

Dr. B. F. Tilden, a prominent physician of Mariposa, on April 29th, while inspecting the shaft of a mine at Horseshoe Bend in that county, was caved upon and instantly killed. He was buried under a mass of earth and rock that took several hours' hard work to remove before his body was uncovered.

FIGURES REVEAL LOS ANGELES' MARVELLOUS GROWTH

PRESENTED HEREWITH IS A MASS of figures which tell, better than words, of the remarkable growth of Los Angeles. When one stops to consider that, less than fifty years ago, this city was but a village, practically unheard of, the facts contained in the figures are a revelation.

Los Angeles has, in every way, shown phenomenal growth, and, as has been most aptly stated, "With a past so satisfactory, and a future so promising, there would seem to be every reason for the city to achieve an enviable place among the greatest cities the world has known. She has the natural means at hand in her superb climate, prolific soil, fine location, and the artificial resources of abundant, unfailing water supply, great harbor, notable electric power, regulated transportation facilities, and back of it all, a universal spirit of united action, civic pride, and high appreciation of manifold blessings."

Californians, in particular, are not generally familiar with Los Angeles and her growth, and it is for their education that these statistics are presented. They are not extracted from "boost" literature, but chosen largely from Government records, hence their correctness cannot be doubted, even by the most skeptical. Read these over, digest them, then see Los Angeles for yourself, and your praise will be added to those of thousands of others who shout the glories of this great and growing city:

AN EARLY CALIFORNIA ROMANCE

(COLLATED AND RETOLD BY H. D. BARROWS, LOS ANGELES.)

THE STORY OF THE ROMANTIC marriage of Henry Fitch to a daughter of California, constitutes one of the most interesting episodes in the annals of California, and, incidentally, reveals many characteristic features of the picturesque life that was lived here in the very early days.

As a wise man has said, "The course of true love never did run smoothly," and that of Captain

Fitch and his "novia," la Señorita Josefa, daughter of Joaquín Carrillo of San Diego, was no exception to the general rule.

Captain Fitch first arrived in California in 1826, landing at San Diego. He soon fell in love with the charming señorita, who, in time, was won, as she herself confessed in after years, by the handsome person and dashing manners of the young captain.

In 1827 he gave her a written promise of marriage. There were legal impediments, because of the fact that he was a foreigner, but the parents of the young woman approved the match, and a Dominican friar consented to perform the marriage ceremony. It was hoped there would be no interference by either civil or ecclesiastical authorities.

As an essential preliminary, Padre Menéndez baptised the American, April 14, 1829, at the Presidio chapel of San Diego. The friar promised to marry the couple the next day, and preparations were made, and a few friends assembled late in the evening at the house of the Carrillos. At the last moment, Domingo Carrillo, uncle of the bride, refused to serve as witness; the ceremony could not proceed.

Neither the angry arguments of the "novio," nor the tears and entreaties of the "novia," could overcome the padre's fears and scruples; but he reminded Fitch that there were other countries where the laws were less stringent, and he even offered to go in person and marry him anywhere beyond the limits of California.

"Why don't you carry me off, Don Enrique?" naively suggested Josefa. Captain Barry approved the scheme, and so did Pio Pico, cousin of the woman. The parents were not consulted.

Fitch was not a man to require urging. Next night, Pio Pico, mounted on his best steed, took his cousin, Josefa, up on the saddle and carried her swiftly to a spot on the bay-shore, where a boat was waiting. The lovers were soon reunited on board the "Vulture," and before morning were far out on the Pacific.

The elopement of Señorita Carrillo naturally caused much talk in California. Rumors were current that she had been forcibly abducted from her home and the ecclesiastical authorities were greatly scandalized. Nevertheless, next year Captain Fitch returned in command of his own ship, the "Leonor," having on board his wife and infant son.

He touched at San Diego in July, 1830, and thence came up to San Pedro. Here he received a summons from Padre Sanchez at San Gabriel, Vicar and Ecclesiastical Judge of the territory, to present himself for trial on most serious charges. But he merely sent his marriage certificate by an agent, one Virmond (owner of the Mexican brig, "Maria Ester," of which Fitch had been master), for the Vicar's inspection, and sailed up the coast for Santa Barbara and Monterey.

H. D. BARROWS, LOS ANGELES PIONEER.

Arrived in San Francisco, May, 1852, via the Isthmus, and came to Los Angeles, December 12, 1854. November 14, 1860, wedded to Juanita Wolfskill. Taught school in Wm. Wolfskill's family four years. In 1853, was on a ranch near San Jose, and in the mines near Jamestown. Then, teacher of music at Collegiate Institute, Benicia. Was member of Los Angeles Board of Education from 1857 to 1877, and United States Marshal for Southern District of California (Monterey to Los Angeles) for four years, under President Abraham Lincoln.

Padre Sanchez at once sent an order to Monterey that Fitch be arrested and sent to San Gabriel for trial, Doña Josefa being ordered placed with some respectable family at the Capital. This order was executed by Governor Echeandia on the arrival of the "Leonor." The woman was sent to Captain Cooper's house, and the husband was placed under arrest. He protested against imprisonment as ruinous to his business, complained that the trial had not been begun at San Diego, and asked that at least he might be allowed to travel by sea rather than compelled to endure the hardships of the long overland journey.

José Palomares, to whom, as Fiscal, the Vicar submitted this request, strongly opposed it, declaring that no concessions should be allowed to Fitch, his offenses being most heinous, and his intention being to run away again. But Padre Sanchez, more tolerant, consented to the trip by sea, on Virmond becoming bondsman for the culprit's presentment in due time, and in December, Fitch arrived at San Gabriel and was made a prisoner in one of the mission rooms.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Fitch petitioned Governor Echeandia for release, and permission to go south by sea, which request was granted, and Dona Josefa arrived at San Gabriel in due time, November 24th, where she was committed to the care of Doña Eulalia Perez of centenarian fame.

[Note: I may be permitted to say here, parenthetically, that I knew Doña Eulalia well and esteemed her highly. At one period in the '50s, she came daily to the house where I resided, to sew for the family. Although then far advanced in years, she did not use glasses. There are still living people, already advanced to old age, who, as children, knew the aged woman, and who have only the most pleasant memories of "dear old Doña Eulalia."]

When Captain Fitch came, the house of Doña Eulalia was deemed too near his prison, and Josefa was transferred to the care of Mrs. William A. Richardson. Palomares, the Fiscal, pronounced Gov. Echeandia's act, in releasing Doña Josefa, a gross infringement on ecclesiastical authority, and urged that he be arrested and brought to trial. But Padre Sanchez, for sundry reasons, decided not to arrest the Governor.

Fitch and his wife were repeatedly interrogated before the ecclesiastical court, with Fiscal Palomares as prosecutor, but finally the latter was obliged to concede that the motives of the accused had been honest and pure, though still maintaining the nullity of the marriage. Fitch eloquently pleaded his own cause, emphasizing the threatened illegitimacy of his son, but for which he would gladly consent to have the marriage declared null and to have the ceremony performed over again. Many witnesses were examined, both at San Gabriel and San Diego.

On the 28th of December, the Vicar rendered his decision, that the Fiscal had not substantiated his accusations; that the marriage at Valparaiso, though not legitimate, was not null, but valid; that parties be set at liberty, the wife being given up to the husband; and that they be "velados" the next Sunday, receiving the sacraments that ought to have preceded the marriage ceremony.

"Yet, considering the great scandal which Don Enrique has caused in this province," added the Vicar, "I condemn him to give as a penance and reparation, a bell of at least fifty pounds in weight for the church at Los Angeles, which barely has a borrowed one. Moreover, the couple must present themselves in church, with lighted candles in their hands, to hear high mass for three 'dias festivos,' and recite together for thirty days one-third of the rosary of the holy virgin."

January 9, 1831, Fitch wrote from San Gabriel to Captain Cooper of Monterey, denying the rumors current at Santa Barbara that he was doing penance, saying Padre Sanchez treated him very well and seemed anxious to let him off as easily as possible.

It remains to add, that Captain Fitch was a native of New Bedford, Massachusetts, born in 1799; he died at San Diego in 1849. Bancroft, California historian, from whom the foregoing facts are derived, and condensed, and who obtained his account from the (Spanish) "Ecclesiastical History of California," has this to say of Captain Fitch:

"He was one of the earliest, most prominent, and most popular of the early Pioneers; he was straightforward in his dealings, generous in disposition, frank and cheerful in manner; in physique, he was a tall man and inclined to corpulency."

Doña Josefa was born at San Diego in 1810. Soon after her husband's death, in '49, she moved, with her large family of children—eleven in all—to Healdsburg, where the writer saw her in 1854, then still a charming matron and hostess, with her boys and girls around her—the youngest some ten years of age, and the eldest twenty-four,—all of whom spoke, fluently, both the Spanish and English languages.

Captain Fitch was master of the Mexican brig, the "Maria Ester," plying between Lima and California and other Mexican ports, from 1826 to 1830.

UNIQUE MINING DISPLAY

San Francisco—The mining men of Southern California and the producers of borax, magnesite, cement, gems and other minerals will be interested in the scheme now being considered for the display of these important industries at the coming exposition at San Francisco in 1915. The Department of Mines and Metallurgy of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition has submitted to the mining men of the State for the California counties exhibit of their mineral resources a plan that is both unique and impressive. It is designed to do away with the customary endless duplication of exhibits so familiar to exposition visitors.

In pursuance of this idea, it is proposed that the petroleum exhibit include relief models of the various oil districts, glass models of certain oil wells, models of field storage and transportation equipment and an educational exhibit of oils. The producers of borax, magnesite and the kindred metals and non-metals will proceed along the same lines in arranging their exhibits. The plan calls for the erection, in a central space under the great dome of the Palace of Mines and Metallurgy, of a miniature mountain, which would divide itself naturally into quadrants, each of which would face one of the four main entrances to the palace.

Each quadrant of the mountain would be finished to represent one of the great subdivisions of the mining industry of the State. On one side would be reproduced a fac-simile of an oil field. Another would be devoted to a presentation of placer mining, with giants throwing streams of water twenty to twenty-five feet in length, and at the foot of the mountain a working model of a dredge, showing all operations in detail. The copper mining industry would occupy the third quadrant, and the fourth would be devoted to a representation of quartz mining. A section of the mountain would be cut away on this side showing behind a plate-glass front the underground working details of the mine. Each county would plan its mining exhibit opposite the section which represented the particular phase of the industry most prominent within its borders.

RESEARCH WORK IN ARCHIVES OF THE INDIES

THE FOLLOWING INTERESTING letter from William Lytle Shurz, the holder of the second Traveling Fellowship in Pacific Coast historical research work at the University of California, under the guidance of Professor H. Morse Stephens and of the other officers of the Academy of Pacific Coast History, was received by his superiors at Berkeley. A copy was forwarded sometime ago to the committee of the Grand Parliaments in Pacific Coast History, but has not heretofore been published.

Mr. Shurz appears to be eminently fitted to step into the shoes of Chas. E. Chapman, when the latter shall be promoted to a professorship to be created at Berkeley in California History, and the future report of the work being prosecuted by him and under his charge in the Archives of the Indies in Seville, Spain, will be awaited with great interest.

Independent of the exhaustive work which Mr. Shurz will necessarily be accomplishing in carrying out the purposes of the Fellowship, it is particularly fortunate to have at Seville at this time a Californian of scientific equipment and capacity, as well as enthusiasm, ready to give any aid he can in procuring documents bearing upon the particular subjects being followed out in research work in advanced courses at Berkeley, or at any other university or college in California.

Mr. Shurz' address is, "Care of the Archives of the Indies, Seville, Spain," and we are informed that he desires to be of service, in the midst of this treasury of inexhaustible data, to all earnest advanced or original scholars in California historical research work wherever located. His letter is in the nature of a "progress report," and is as follows:

"Your Fellow arrived in Seville, September 26, 1913, and at once began his work of investigation in the Archives of the Indies. From the beginning, his work was greatly facilitated by the work of organization carried out by Mr. Chapman in systematizing the work of investigation. Mr. Chapman had drawn up a set of rules for his own use and that of the two clerks employed, which have been of great value in directing the technical side of investigation.

"As to the field of this, whereas Mr. Chapman's work has been preeminently that of the land ap-

One of the greatest works being carried on by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is the maintenance, through funds collected in the per capita tax, of Traveling Fellowships in Pacific Coast History at the University of California, Berkeley.

This feature was inaugurated in 1910, and through the Order's generosity and interest in early history pertaining to California, much valuable research work has been accomplished by these Traveling Fellows in foreign lands. The results of their labors are filed in the History Department of the University for the benefit of the public.

In an Admission Day address delivered at Monterey in 1908, Judge John F. Davis, Grand Second Vice-president of the Order, made an urgent plea for the collection, preservation and diffusion of information relating to the history of California, and he is largely responsible for the Order's subsequent action.

The reports of these Traveling Fellows have, from time to time, been published in The Grizzly Bear, the Order's official organ, and containing much valuable information, have been greatly appreciated by students of California history.

The maintenance of these fellowships is one of the things which indicate the Order's REAL WORTH to the State, and as all the people may benefit thereby, it proves the Order's motives are not selfish, as is sometimes charged.—Editor.

proaches to California, the work of the present Fellow is on the maritime approaches. The thesis subject is the early galleon trade between New Spain and the Philippines. This not only involves almost the entire trans-Pacific commerce from 1565 to 1815, but it formed the first impulse for the occupation and settlement of Upper California.

"On their eastward voyage across the Pacific, the Manila or China galleons, as they are sometimes known on account of their cargoes of silks, were accustomed to sail almost the entire length of California, from Cape Mendocino southward. It was the need for a station where these galleons could refit and reprovision themselves that led the Spanish government, before the end of the sixteenth century, to plan the exploration of the California coast in the hope of finding a suitable harbor. This was the motive for the famous voyage of Vizcaino, which resulted in the demarcation of the coast and the discovery of the harbors of San Diego and Monterey. Finally, when posts were afterward founded at these points and at San Francisco, the galleons were directed to put in at one of them on their way to the Mexican coast. Also closely connected with this subject is the great importance which Spain always attached to the Philippines as an outpost against the occupation of the unprotected California coast by English or Dutch from the Orient.

"It is needless to say that the Archives of the Indies is rich in documents on this subject of the Pacific or sea approaches to California. This material is chiefly contained in the divisions classified as the Audiencia de Filipinas and Audiencia de Mexico, of the Real Patronato, and to a lesser ex-

EVERY ELIGIBLE OWES DUTY TO THE ORDER

(BY JO V. SNYDER, GRAND TRUSTEE, N.S.G.W., NEVADA CITY.)

S MEMBERS OF THE NATIVE Sons of the Golden West, it is our duty to lend our best efforts toward extending the Order; to make it what it certainly should be—the leading and most progressive fraternal organization in the State of California. Our membership should be 100,000, and I trust that I may live to see the day when we will reach this apparently stupendous figure.

To many, this may seem impossible, but we have the material to work upon, and I am one of those optimistic Native Sons who believe that the goal can be reached. It cannot be accomplished by standing still. In order to secure results, we must stand together as firm as the rock of Gibraltar, work in perfect unison, and not shift the burden upon a few. We must take steps to have others see the light as we see it, proceed along educational, systematic and progressive lines.

The widest publicity is due our aims, objects and purposes, for they are lofty, and entitled to the support of every person who loves the State of California, believes in its upbuilding and advancement, and the perpetuation of the memory of its wonderful romantic early history and of the deeds of our Pioneer Men and Women. Our first duty, however, is to ourselves—to infuse life and interest into our Parlor meetings, to make them worth the while, so that the members will attend regularly and manifest a more profound interest in the welfare of the Order. There must be diversion, as mere routine Parlor business is not attractive to attendance. Social sessions, debates on early history, State progress, current topics, and other live subjects; card parties, occasional entertainments and dances; band practice, if the Parlor has a band, and if it has not, it should have; and last, but not least, initiation about every other meeting, are some of the things that stimulate interest.

Intelligent and convincing reasons why every worthy Native Californian should affiliate with us must be advanced, and our past accomplishments, and plans for the future, fully explained. For the information of those who are unfamiliar with what the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West has really accomplished, and what it plans to do, I set forth the following:

What the Order Has Done.

Purchased Sutter's Fort and grounds at Sacramento, deeded it to the State of California, with a provision that the State shall perpetually care for this famous landmark. Restored and preserved Colton Hall, the scene of the first Constitutional Convention held in California. Restored the first United States Custom House, at Monterey. Erected a monument in the Sacramento City Cemetery to the memory of General A. M. Winn, early Pioneer and founder of our beloved Order.

Secured legislation whereby the Yosemite Valley, California's greatest natural wonder, became the property of the United States Government as a National Park. Prevented the destruction of the remaining groves of redwood forests in the State, and secured legislation whereby the largest redwood forest, known as the Big Basin of Santa Cruz County, become the property of the State.

Erected a monument to the memory of Junipero Serra, founder of the California missions. Assisted in the erection of the Sloat monument at Monterey. Erected a memorial at Mare Island Navy Yard in memory of Rear Admiral Sloat, Admiral Farragut and Commodore Stockton. Obtained title to and restored the old General Vallejo adobe at Petaluma.

Secured State appropriation for the restoration of the old mission at Sonoma. Is restoring old Mission San Jose, which will cost $5000, and the missions at Santa Ynez, San Fernando and San Juan Capistrano. Assisted in the erection of a monument in Los Angeles to the memory of the late Senator Stephen M. White, who was one of California's greatest Native Sons; erected two buildings at the Barlow sanitarium, Los Angeles, for the treatment of tuberculosis.

Erected a monument at Camp Far West, Yuba County, which marks that historic spot. Assisted in the launching of the cruiser "California" and presented that ship with a stand of colors. Is Under direction of Mendoza and Alarcon, the representatives in Mexico of the Spanish throne, Cabrillo had sailed north from Navidad, on the west coast of Mexico, on June 27, 1542. The task assigned to him must have appeared fraught with the same sort of perils as those which had confronted Columbus a half-century before. He was sailing forth into unknown seas. The theory still prevailed that the earth was flat and that the over-daring navigator stood an excellent chance of sailing over the edge.

LOS ANGELES COUNTY WAS CREATED February 18, 1850. It has a land area of 4067 square miles, three-fourths of which is tillable and astonishingly fertile, and is the wealthiest county in the West, as ascertained by the official assessments. The county's assessment in 1901 was $100,020,956, while in 1913 it had reached $804,111,796.

The population has shown an even greater proportionate increase than the assessment roll, until today Los Angeles County is the largest in California. From an almost unknown county of 4,000 persons in 1860, Los Angeles has developed with such rapidity that at the 1910 census 504,131 people dwelt within its boundaries. Today, conservative estimates place the county's population at 760,000.

Los Angeles is a county of broad, bountiful valleys, a county of splendid, rugged pine and oak covered mountains, whose topmost peaks are clad in mantles of snow during much of the year; a

Cabrillo seems to have been undaunted by the mysteries that lay before him, and in September of the year 1542 his vessel plowed the waters of San Pedro Bay. A heavy pall of smoke, it is chronicled, overhung the harbor, due to the burning of underbrush by the Indians engaged doubtless in a rabbit drive; hence Cabrillo referred to this harbor as "The Bay of Smokes." So far as known Cabrillo made no effort to go inland, and it was two hundred years after Cabrillo's discovery before a white

With the idea in mind of furnishing its readers with pertinent facts regarding Los Angeles County, so that they may be well and reliably informed thereof, The Grizzly Bear presents this article, combining historical with statistical facts. Credit for much of the data is due the "California Blue Book," issued last year by the Secretary of State, who, in presenting figures comparing Los Angeles with the other fifty-seven counties of the State, says that

"These comparisons are based on United States Census and authentic State reports for 1910. Undoubtedly they will be received with amazement, particularly by a large class of citizens living north of the Tehachapi, who are wont to regard Los Angeles City as the limit of the county's prosperity, and the county itself as rather devoid of extensive agricultural, horticultural and mineral development. But these figures stand, and they show beyond the peradventure of a doubt that Los Angeles County is not only the home of an extensive fruit growing industry, but that it is a great farming section, and has mineral resources sufficient to place it almost at the top of the best producing counties of the State."—Editor.

Dairy products were valued at $1,415,144, and poultry products at $951,299. The milk products amounted to 8,447,162 gallons, and the butter product for the year ending September 30, 1911, was 482,000 pounds. The poultry raised numbered 586,566, and the egg product was 2,032,397 dozen. There were 25,930 colonies of bees; the honey product amounted to 1,289,820 pounds; the value of the honey and wax was $93,569. The wool and mohair product was valued at $32,366.

All crops were valued at $14,720,884, with cereals valued at $806,507; other grains and seeds, $218,428; hay and forage, $3,430,698; vegetables, $1,255,093; fruits and nuts, $6,731,532; all other crops, $2,278,629. There were 49,957 acres planted to cereals; 9,084 acres in corn; 6,760 acres in wheat; 32,804 acres in barley; 3,874 acres in dry and edible beans; 154,048 acres in hay and forage; 19,027 acres in alfalfa; 129,978 acres in grains cut green for hay; 4,140 acres in potatoes; 14,191 acres in sugar beets.

The cereal product amounted to 1,138,533 bushels; oat product 38,720 bushels; wheat product 59,866 bushels; barley product 783,129 bushels; dry and edible beans 105,011 bushels; hay and forage 316,541 tons; alfalfa 100,855 tons; grain cut green for hay 189,856 tons; potatoes 413,151 bushels; sweet potatoes 44,142 bushels; sugar beets 162,059 tons.

The part fruit growing plays in the county's prosperity is shown by the fact that there were 446,698 bearing orchard fruit trees; 1,994,402 bearing tropical fruit trees, and 359,349 bearing nut trees. This included 101,433 bearing apple trees; 160,197 bearing peach and nectarine trees; 16,149 bearing pear trees, 43,592 bearing plum and prune trees; 122,769 bearing apricot trees.

The apple product amounted to 118,528 bushels; peach and nectarine product 234,581 bushels; pear product 21,161 bushels; plum and prune product 34,295 bushels; apricot product 181,079 bushels.

There were also 5,736 bearing fig trees; 1,674,695 bearing orange trees; 219,149 bearing lemon trees; 84,934 bearing olive trees, and 6,853 bearing pomelo trees. The fig product amounted to 397,376 pounds, orange product 4,124,161 boxes; lemon product 704,301 boxes and olive product 1,549,419 pounds. The small fruit product amounted to 7,837,987 quarts, and the grape product to 44,846,307 pounds.

The bearing almond trees numbered 76,949, and the bearing walnut trees 281,837. The almond product amounted to 57,770 pounds, and the walnut product to 6,138,033 pounds.

The total mineral product for 1910 was $5,525,317; the total petroleum product, $3,185,433.

The acreage included in irrigation projects was 241,794, and the cost of irrigation enterprises to July 1, 1910, was $7,817,023.

Los Angeles City, the county seat, is, of course, the largest in the county. San Pedro, annexed to Los Angeles to give the city a harbor, is the greatest lumber port in the world, and a port of call for thousands of vessels from all parts. Other large cities in the county include:

Pasadena, a city of beautiful homes and a center for educational institutions.

Long Beach, a large seaport city with an ideal beach. It has many manufacturing plants, as well as all advantages of a residence place. During the county of varied coast line which the waves of the Pacific Ocean lave for a distance of eighty miles or more; a county of desert, of valley, of mountain and of seashore; a county of fruits, of grain, sunshine and flowers; a county of orchards, alfalfa farms, vineyards; a county of astonishing oil productivity; a county whose fertility, resources and widely-varying products have made her the richest county in Western America. Los Angeles stands peerless among the counties of California.

To Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, a daring Spanish navigator, is given the credit of being the first man traversed what was later to become the site of Los Angeles City.

Here are some of the "Blue Book" figures on this remarkable county—figures which speak for themselves:

With a land area of 2,602,880 acres, Los Angeles County in 1910 had 757,985 acres in farms. The value of all farm property reached the enormous total of $199,998,200, an increase in ten years of $125,180,554, or 167.3 per cent. Domestic animals on farms had a value of $4,734,487, and those not on farms, $3,617,253. The total number of cattle,

GRAND PARLOR IN LOS ANGELES MUTUALLY BENEFICIAL

Los Angeles, while well and favorably known throughout the rest of the United States, is practically a stranger to her neighbors lying north of Tehachapi, at least so far as her importance to the State is concerned.

Both the city and her northern neighbors are responsible for this condition. The one, because she has been so occupied in heralding her charms beyond the Rockies, that she has not been concerned with her neighbors' opinion. And the others, because they have not been sufficiently interested to ascertain the truth regarding the Angel City.

This is a sad, but true commentary, and because it is true, we are overjoyed that the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West will hold their annual meeting in Los Angeles this month, so that the attendants can become personally acquainted with this wonderful city.

Natives of California, and particularly those affiliated with the Order, should have at their command facts relating to every city in the State; and being possessed of facts, they should use them in defense of every city attacked by the unknown, as well as in lauding their own home-city.

Los Angeles, by many Californians, among them some few Native Sons, is still looked upon as a pueblo, whose only claim to greatness is based upon an extensive tourist trade. Among this number, some there are whose opinion of the city results from ignorance. While others, displeased with the city's world-renowned progress, deliberately misrepresent her. With this class, we are not concerned, for their grey matter is of such quality and quantity that all the facts and figures in the world would not influence their opinion.

But the TRUE Native Son,—he who loves ALL California, and delights to hear and read of progress in any part of his native State,—will be benefited by his visit to Los Angeles in April. He has, perhaps, read of the pueblo, but when he beholds that magnificent city, and learns of the manifold and unlimited resources that surround her and assure her continued growth, he will go away a wiser and a better Native Son.

To Los Angeles, the visit of the Native Sons will also be of benefit. For, when they have been her guests, have enjoyed her numberless attractions, have had pointed out to them her undisputable claims to further greatness, and have partaken of her bounteous hospitality, this mighty band of "boosters" will return to their several homes imbued with a determination to do her justice. And, perhaps, like our Eastern friends, many of them will not rest contented until they have taken up their residence in the Southland.

Oftimes individuals and organizations, over-enthusiased with the glories of their home-place, are inclined to make exaggerated statements concerning that particular locality; and this is no doubt true of Los Angeles. But in the dissemination of information pertaining to any locality, Government and State statistics are not swayed by prejudice or optimism; they are confined exclusively to cold facts.

From such data, we have published in this issue a mass of statistics, all of which clearly show the progress that has been made by Los Angeles, and indicate that her people have every reason to be optimistic of her future. Being taken from all those channels of activity which denote actual conditions in any city, these statistics should be thoroughly digested by all who wish to be rightfully informed regarding Los Angeles.

The writer cannot be accused of prejudice for Los Angeles. Previous to becoming a southland resident, he was, like many Native Sons, not informed as to real conditions there, and looked upon the "progress" news sent out from Los Angeles as exaggerated "hoom" literature. But when he had seen for himself, and had taken into consideration the fact that, thirty-four years ago, Los Angeles was a small, non-progressive city, he was impressed with the city's wonderful progress. And he believes the thinking Native Sons who visit Los Angeles in April must be likewise impressed.

Los Angeles has not, by any means, reached the zenith of her prosperity; she is the natural center of a vast and fertile land area, and her resources are unlimited and but slightly developed. Those who, through prejudice or ignorance, contend that her only claim to future greatness lies in the fact that she has been extensively advertised as a tourist resort, have but to refer to the last edition of the State "Blue Book" to know that Los Angeles County—but a small part of the rich surrounding territory from which Los Angeles City benefits—is the greatest agricultural county in California, and also to learn just what is really produced in the county, and in what quantities.

Los Angeles stands today as a magnificent California monument to Eastern enterprise; for all that she is, all that she has accomplished, is largely due to the faith that her former Eastern residents had, and have, in her future. They have, through civic pride and unity of interest, erected a city second to none in the United States, and one whose progress cannot be stayed. We need more of our Eastern friends, to help develop the wonderful resources of every part of California, and the result of the visit of the Native Sons of the Golden West—after they have viewed the results of those Easterners' labors—must surely be the wiping out of any prejudice that may exist, and therefore be of untold benefit to ALL California.

ORDER OF NATIVE SONS HAS A RECORD THAT SHOULD ATTRACT

Many good reasons are advanced why a man should affiliate with one fraternal order in preference to another. But these do not apply to the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, for it is not a competitor of any other fraternal organization, being in a class by itself.

This is so because, no matter what the reputation of any man, he cannot affiliate with that Order unless born within the confines of the State of California. And, besides, the Order is engaged in work entirely different from that pursued by any other organization.

Any organization which expends funds derived from its members for the public good, is certainly deserving of, and entitled to, the commendation of the public. Such an organization is the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, which is annually expending $3000 for California history research work, $5600 for the benefit of California's homeless children, $2500 for the preservation of California landmarks, and thousands of dollars in furthering every endeavor in behalf of California's development.

There is absolutely no feature connected with the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West that should make it objectionable to any individual, whether eligible to membership or not. It is founded, purely and simply, upon loyalty, its purpose is lofty, and it ranks among its membership men of national and state fame.

The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is not, as has been sometimes unjustly charged, in existence to prohibit others than native-borns from making a living in California. Naturally, as do all other fraternal societies, it endeavors to find employment for its members, but does not demand, nor expect, that they shall, because they are native-born, he given the preference over any other honest and deserving men.

The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West teaches: Friendship—that friendship which caused our Pioneer Fathers and Mothers to share the last drop of water in the desert and the last crust of bread in the snow-bound canyon. Loyalty—that loyalty which necessitates undying fealty to the Stars and Stripes and to the best interests of California. Charity—that charity which expands the heart at the cry of distress, and upon which rests all fair and honest judgment for the motives of human action.

Now that the Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of the automobile tax—pending which decision owners and chauffeurs were graciously permitted to evade the law—is it not incumbent upon the authorities to remain inactive until these much-abused (?) citizens can have an opportunity to have the law repealed?

"Blackmail" appears to be the popular defense of all accused of white-slavery who have long pocket-books.

Jack London will, it is rumored, be the Prohibitionists' candidate for president. Politics surely "do" make strange bedfellows.

The Mexican rebels have one good deed to their credit, anyway. They refused a Japanese count the right to land.

Have you noticed how popular handshaking has become recently? Election time is dawning, you know.

The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West has been in existence nearly thirty-nine years, and during that time it has concerned itself with the promotion of those things which, its members believed, were for the best interests of California. Its record is an open book, not one page of which is marred by a single act that can be justly criticised. Its good deeds and accomplishments, however, are manifold.

The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West stands for naught but which is ennobling, and gladly gives support, both moral and financial, to every movement which has for its object the elevation of humanity. It aims to keep California in the forefront, and to create a better manhood.

With such a record of past achievements, present endeavors, and future hopes, can anyone, no matter whence he hails, and any legitimate objection to the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West? Shouldn't its members be proud, as they are, of their membership in such an Order? And shouldn't every eligible native of the State of California be anxious to affiliate with the Order, and lend his moral and financial assistance in the accomplishment of those things which the Order has now under way and others which it will inaugurate?

The average daily school attendance in Los Angeles County, June 30th, according to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, was 79,891. At that time, the same authority informs us, the total attendance in all the counties lying south of Tehachapi was 121,504, and for the whole State, 341,736.

Carrying out the suggestion of San Francisco's statisticians (as mentioned in these columns last issue), that the only way to arrive at the CORRECT population figures for any place is to multiply the average daily school attendance by 11.2, we have the "correct" population, June 30, 1913, of

Los Angeles County, 894,779.
South of Tehachapi counties, 1,360,844.
State of California, 3,827,443.

Uncle Sam is going into the railroad business, Congress having voted $35,000,000 for a railroad from Alaska's coast to the great coal fields. Here's hoping Uncle will extend his rail operations.

Governor Hiram Johnson is to be congratulated on refusing financial aid to the so-called "army of unemployed," after he had satisfied himself that they are not looking for work. These men, with but possibly few exceptions, are deserving of no sympathy. They should be made to work, and could be used to advantage in constructing the State Highway.

Los Angeles is devoid of California monuments, and, for that matter, every other sort of monument. Would it not be an excellent thing for the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West, during the meeting there this month, to make financial provision for the erection of a monument on Fort Moore, an historic spot within the city's limits?

Graduates of the Stockton High School have agreed to limit all expenses for material in graduation dresses to $5 each. Judging from the scarcity of material in the present-day dress, $5 will insure an elaborate costume.

WANTS THOSE WHO WILL RENDER BEST SERVICE

(By LOUIS H. MOOSER, Grand First Vice-president, N. S. G. W.)

TO MEMBERS OF THE ORDER:

Upon assuming the office of Grand President it will become my duty to appoint a number of members upon Committees of the Grand Parlor and as District Deputies, etc.

As I shall have but one aim in view, namely, the best interests of the Order, it shall be my purpose to choose only those whom I believe will render the best service.

It is therefore my wish that any member who desires to serve as a Deputy Grand President, or upon a Committee, shall file his request with me, giving his reason for wishing to serve.

Let no one hesitate on the score of not being personally known to me, for it is not possible for one going through the chairs to come in personal contact with all, and frequently it happens that the best material has been overlooked. That is what I am endeavoring to avoid.

There will be no rewarding of friends merely for friendship's sake. The Order at large has been my best friend, and I owe to it all the reward I can possibly bestow.

Fraternally,
LOUIS H. MOOSER,
Grand First Vice-president.

And so the contrasts may be drawn between the good old idle days before the "gringo" came and the present. The people of those days were, perhaps, a more contented and happy lot, not having the terrible struggles that the present generation has to pass through.

But will those who are so fortunate as to attend the Grand Parlor enjoy their week of fiesta as well as did the early-day visitor? The Los Angeles Natives have undertaken to answer this question affirmatively, and I am one of those who take them at their word.

ANXIOUS TO SEE OFFICIAL ORGAN HOUSEHOLD PERIODICAL.

Having had no experience in writing for publication, I am doubtful, in responding to The Grizzly Bear's request for an article, of being able to interest its readers. But, as I am most anxious to see the magazine grow and become a household periodical for all the members of the Native Sons of the Golden West and Native Daughters of the Golden West, I have responded with the feeling that, if by so doing I accomplish no more than evidencing my friendship for, and interest in, the publication, I shall be contented.

It is possible that not as many of our members as should, read The Grizzly Bear, for I fear many of them have fallen into the mistaken impression that their interest consists only in reading the happenings within the fraternity. I would have them look forward to the interesting bits of history and romance revealing the early life in California, that appear in every issue.

The Native Sons of the Golden West is so different an organization, that it does not require the usual fraternal reportings to make its official magazine most interesting reading. Ours is essentially a patriotic society, dedicated to the work of keeping alive the particular history and sentiment surrounding the Pioneers of California, and what better place to record, and for the Sons and Daughters of California to seek, the rich contributions that so frequently appear, than in their official magazine, The Grizzly Bear.

in this year 1914, this gallantry will, of course, be observed by the presentation of the key to the city by the Alcalde or Mayor. The visitors will be conducted not now upon beautiful chargers with silver mounted saddles, but, at greater speed, in prosaic automobiles, to an elegant pile of steel and concrete, sumptuously garnished with the most

HOME BUILDING, MATTER FOR CONGRATULATION

(By FRED H. JUNG, Grand Secretary, N. S. G. W.)

URING THE CURRENT YEAR THE Order has, in common with the balance of the State—or, perhaps, it might be more properly said, in common with the balance of the Nation and the world,—felt more or less the touch of "hard times," and in consequence has remained almost stationary in membership and has made comparatively but a small gain in assets.

One lusty youngster has been added to the list of Parlors during the year. In the old mining town of Columbia, near Sonora, in Tuolumne County, the need for a Parlor was discerned by District Deputy Grand President Al Terzieh, who opened correspondence with the Grand President nearly two years ago, seeking to have an organizer sent there. The field did not seem promising to the Grand President, who feared that, in place of increasing, the list of eligibles would be constantly decreasing in that neighborhood, and he declined to send an organizer, as did also the succeeding Grand President.

Not daunted by two unfavorable opinions, Deputy Terzieh decided that "every District Deputy his own organizer" was the only slogan proper under the existing condition of affairs, and he thereupon promptly proceeded to gather signatures to a petition for a charter, till he had something over the minimum twenty-five limited by the constitution, and again he communicated with the Grand President. At the June meeting or the Board of Grand Officers, Grand President Thomas Monahan laid the matter before them and they decided that the Parlor should not be established unless at least fifty petitioners were secured.

Then Deputy Terzieh once more scoured the country round, and for fear lest perhaps some of the signers might "fall down" on institution night and spoil the ceremony by breaking the quorum of fifty established as the limit, he kept on getting signatures till he had sixty-three, when he sent the petition in to the Grand Secretary on October

FRED H. JUNG, GRAND SECRETARY, N. S. G. W.

1, 1913, and on October 25th, Columbia Parlor, No. 258, was instituted with a membership of sixty-five, one of the largest Parlors ever instituted.

Membership Shows Gain.

Bakersfield, Riverside and Winters Parlors, for some years past suffering from waning interest, have given up their charters. Hanford, Loyalton, Anderson, Iron Canyon (Red Bluff) and Willows Parlors are in a similar somnolent condition, and it will be recommended to the Grand Parlor soon to meet in Los Angeles that their charters be taken from them.

In the balance of the Parlors, while the "hard times" have doubly exerted an unfavorable influence, both by increasing the number of losses in membership of those who found themselves unprepared or unwilling to meet their financial obligations for dues, and by making prospective candidates reluctant to assume new financial burdens in the face of approaching business depression, the accessions to membership have outnumbered the losses. The chief gains have naturally been made in the centers of population, where the membership of the Order is strongest.

San Francisco's thirty Parlors have gained a net 174, eighteen Parlors there showing a gain of 254, while the other twelve have lost a total of 80. In Oakland, six of the Parlors have contributed a gain of 119, and the other Parlor reports a loss of 4, a net addition to the roster of the Order of 115 members.

In Southern California, the approaching Grand Parlor has evidently caused an awakening, for all of the Los Angeles Parlors show increases, Ramona, No. 109, leading with a gain of 38, Los Angeles, No. 45, reports an increase of 27, Corona, No. 196, has added to its membership a net 14, and La Fiesta, No. 236, the smallest, which began the year with 28 members, reports 40 at the end of the year—a total net increase for the Los Angeles Parlors of 91 members. (The Los Angeles Parlors are yet initiating, but that's "this year" and therefore "another story.")

The other cities and the rural Parlors show smaller gains, or else return net losses. The final computation, however, overcomes the small losses and the hundred per cent losses of the Parlors disbanded during the year, and shows total gains, 1819, total losses, 1661, and the membership of the Order on December 31, 1913, to be 20,756—a net increase during the year 1913 of 158.

Financial Condition Good.

In finances, the Parlors have fared somewhat better—the more favorable comparative financial showing being due partly to the fact that the dissolution of moribund Parlors results in no appreciable loss.

LOS ANGELES, METROPOLIS OF THE SOUTHWEST

(By FRANK WIGGINS, Secretary Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.)

WE THINK EVERYONE who is conversant with the facts and the situation will agree when we say that Los Angeles and Southern California are in closer touch and relationship with the State as a whole, than ever before. Two great agencies have contributed mainly to this end—the imminent opening of the Panama Canal, the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, with the splendid San Diego Exposition, with its unique attractions, thrown in for good measure.

We have, all over the State, come to realize that our new responsibilities are state-wide; that in the matter of boosting and entertainment and practical doing, there is room enough and work enough and glory enough for all. It is a man's size job that is before us.

Los Angeles Harbor.

How are Los Angeles and Southern California equipped, with reference to the situation that confronts the Commonwealth? Among the things chiefly to be considered, locally, are Los Angeles Harbor, where trade and travel to this section will be received and distributed; the facilities for sight-seeing and recreation; and the physical and material condition of city and country in relation to the early incoming tide of immigrants and tourists.

It is scarcely necessary to say that our breakwater is completed, affording a harbor of refuge and of commerce for the fleets of the world. It is to the point, however, to say that, tested by the most severe storms, the outer harbor has done everything expected of it, and more.

The inner harbor is Los Angeles' special province, and this city is in no wise neglecting its responsibilities. Several years ago it appropriated, on paper, ten million dollars for the improvement of the inner harbor, and it is now actually spending the money. Dredging, docks, warehouses, commerce facilities, transportation connections, etc., are being pushed. Arrangements are being made with railroads that will facilitate the movements of traffic and travel with the least inconvenience.

To Encourage Factories.

We realize that this preparatory work cannot be done upon too large a scale, or too rapidly pushed. About twenty of the world's leading steamship lines have already announced intention to make Los Angeles Harbor a regular port of call as soon as the Panama Canal shall be permanently opened. The coming of these world vessels will, of itself, establish several branches of industry and commerce on a large scale.

The Chamber of Commerce early realized the importance of taking advantage of the opportunities which the opening of the canal and the completion of Los Angeles Harbor will bring. It determined that Los Angeles should become known and established as a manufacturing and commercial city on a scale commensurate with its growth in other directions.

The Chamber has created a Bureau of Industry, with an annual income of $30,000, for the encouragement of manufactures. It has already brought one large establishment here, and is now negotiating for a cotton factory to handle the rapidly-increasing product of the Imperial Valley.

Last year the Imperial Valley produced 16,000 bales of cotton, more than double the output of the preceding year. A Government expert, stationed in the valley, estimates this year's crop at from 30,000 to 50,000 bales, including the output grown just over the line, in Mexico. There is no good reason why all this raw material should be sent East, to come back to us as cotton manufactured. We propose to keep at home as much of this money as possible.

In Splendid Physical Condition.

All of Southern California is in splendid physical condition. Citrus fruit will be a bumper crop—from 43,000 to 45,000 carloads, at the latest estimates; and the fruit is in splendid condition.

There have been no frosts to injure it. So complete a recovery from the injury inflicted by the unprecedented cold spell of a year ago is indeed marvellous.

The generous rainfall has replenished the underground reservoirs, rendering secure the needed supply for irrigation, while the soil has been put in the best possible condition. Maximum crops are predicted in every branch of agriculture and horticulture. While the sugar-beet acreage may not be as large as that of last season, it is believed that the crop will be fully as large, owing to the exceptionally good growing conditions. Shipments of vegetables to Eastern markets will be greater than ever before.

An increased acreage of canteloupes has been planted in the Imperial and Coachella Valleys, and it is thought that shipments will begin as early as May this year. Vegetable shipments generally are a month ahead of last year. Alfalfa and hay crops will be very large, from present indications.

Good Roads a Specialty.

Good Roads are another connecting link between Southern California and the remainder of the State. No other section has given this important matter greater consideration and recognition. The State is expending the due proportion of the $15,000,000 appropriation voted several years ago, in Southern California; and the several counties are either expending, or have appropriated, millions more for county good roads to connect the various State Highways.

Los Angeles County alone has expended $3,500,000. San Diego County has appropriated and is spending $1,250,000; Kern County, $2,500,000; Orange County, $1,270,000; Riverside County, $1,125,000. The recent bond vote for good roads in San Bernardino County failed by a small margin, but the result has only stirred the advocates of good roads to renewed and greater effort, and this county can be depended upon, ultimately, to do its share. When the work now under way is completed, Southern California will have no less than 1500 miles of good roads, built at a cost of $11,000,000, and it is needless to add that it is proving a mighty good investment.

The various county roads will, of course, connect with the system of State Highways throughout the interior. Orange County is preparing to build also a coast boulevard, which is to extend from Naples, where the Los Angeles County system ends, through the coast cities of Seal Beach, Sunset Beach, Huntington Beach, Newport Beach and Balboa to San Juan Capistrano, where it will connect with the San Diego County system.

Good Roads Good Investment.

When the coast boulevard is completed, it will be possible for autoists to drive from Los Angeles or the Santa Monica Bay cities on the ocean front to San Diego, at no time being out of sight of the sea. That this will prove a very popular trip for thousands wishing to attend the San Diego Exposition, goes without saying.

Southern California, and the whole of the State for that matter, has done nothing else so calculated to bring the Eastern tourist with money and leisure here, and keep him here, as by this good roads movement. The time has gone by when any section of the State can depend upon climate and scenery alone to entertain the thousands of tourists who come to California. We have a better climate and more attractive scenery in California than Europe can boast; but they understand better there how to entertain the tourist. Europe has spent millions upon millions of dollars to provide entertainment for American tourists, and it has proved the most profitable investment it could make.

Local Capital Spreading Out.

Los Angeles has not confined the investment of its capital and the work of improvement to its own part of the State. A large amount of Los Angeles capital has been invested in developing the central and northern parts of the State, and more will follow. Such an interchange of interests is a mighty good thing for all concerned. It makes all our interests mutual; and in helping each other, we are helping ourselves.

We intend to take care of the visitors who stop in Los Angeles enroute to or from the San Francisco Exposition. A county committee of 100 "live" men has been named to act as a ways and means committee on reception and entertainment, and to assist in carrying out the various plans adopted.

It is expected that a large proportion of the immigrants who come to California via the Panama Canal will try to get "hack to the land," and that their efforts will be mainly in the direction of intensive farming.

One Million in 1920!

The completion of the Owens River aqueduct will add much to the area of irrigated land immediately around Los Angeles. It is the policy of the city, in disposing of the surplus water, to make annexation an indispensable condition; and considerable area and population will be added to the city in this way.

"One million population in 1920," has for some time been a boosting slogan in Los Angeles; and now disinterested observers from other cities, who have observed conditions, are taking up the cry with considerable emphasis.

My final word to everybody is to prepare for the rush that will surely come next year, as to tourists, fair visitors, colonists and immigrants. Much will depend upon first impressions; much upon the conditions presented and the facilities afforded. We want to keep in California every desirable citizen who comes here. We must make it as easy as possible for each one to do the things he is best fitted to do, with profit to himself.

ONE OF THE SIPHONS ON THE LOS ANGELES AQUEDUCT.

THE PUBLIC AND THE ORDER'S ACCOMPLISHMENTS

(BY THOMAS MONAHAN, GRAND PRESIDENT, N.S.G.W., SAN JOSE.)

THE NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN West was organized as a fraternal and patriotic order in the year 1876. The constitution of the Grand Parlor of the Order in its preamble then stated its objects to be "To perpetuate in the minds of all native Californians the memories of the days of '49; to encourage a lively interest in all matters and measures relating to the promotion of the material interests and to the upbuilding of the State of California; to unite all Native Sons in one harmonious body; to improve the condition of its members by encouragement in business and by aiding them to obtain employment, and to extend to its members assistance in time of sickness and need."

The foregoing purposes and activities of the Order have been carried into effect during the past thirty-seven years of its life to an extent which, in its magnitude, variety and practical results and benefits, the general public knows very little about; in fact, many persons who are not eligible to membership in the organization have often judged its merits by the exuberance of some few of its members upon stated occasions, and have not sought to be informed as to the detail and variety of its actual accomplishment throughout the years.

Does the Public Know?

It is true that these matters are made the subjects of official reports to the Grand Parlor at its annual sessions, but these are not available for general circulation. For example: I doubt if it is a fact generally known among the people of California that the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, in addition to its Grand Parlor, or central organization, has over two hundred Subordinate Parlors scattered all over the State of California, and with an aggregate membership of about 23,000 native-born Californians.

I doubt, also, if it is generally understood that the Homeless Children's Committee, organized some years ago upon the initiative of the Order, has succeeded in placing about 500 homeless children in childless homes; that through the efforts of the Landmarks Committee of the Grand Parlor, the old Custom House at Monterey, Sutter's Fort at Sacramento, Colton Hall at Monterey, together with a number of the historic old missions, have been restored and are being preserved for the benefit of future generations who will come in time to glory in the possession of these priceless memorials of the infancy of our institutions.

I doubt, also, if the people of California realize that the Order of Native Sons, at a cost of $3,000 a year, maintains one traveling and two resident fellowships in the University of California, devoted to Pacific Coast history, and having for their ultimate object the preparation of a complete and absolutely accurate history of the Pacific Coast, which will be introduced into and taught in all the schools of the West.

Urges Extension Committees.

In the matter of monuments, also, the Order of Native Sons has been, and is still, doing splendid work. A monument costing $25,000, at Donner Lake, in memory of the Donner Party, is under way, and a $5,000 subscription has been this year given toward the creation of a monument to Pioneer Motherhood, to occupy an important place within the grounds of the Panama-Pacific Exposition during 1915, and thereafter to have a permanent place in the Civic Center of the city of San Francisco.

These are only a few of the accomplishments of our Order, but they are sufficient to show its worth, and their setting forth should appeal strongly to all young native Californians to ally themselves with the Order and thus help in its noble, charitable and patriotic work. In order to properly make this appeal, I strongly endorse the formation and proposed work of the Extension Committee of the Native Sons of the Golden West, recently organized in San Francisco, and of the proceedings of which a very interesting account appeared in the March number of The Grizzly Bear. Similar extension committees should be organized in every town and city of the State, with the purpose of acquainting the people of California with the real merits and actual purposes and achievements of the Order through lectures, entertainments, and other forms of publicity.

Order a School for Young Men.

During a period covering some eight or nine years, it has been my pleasure to visit Parlors in every section of this State. The leading merchants and men of affairs in these cities have invariably Golden West will assemble for its Thirty-seventh Session at the city of Los Angeles on April 20th. This promises to be the most interesting and fruitful session in the entire history of the Order, not only by reason of the very elaborate plans for the entertainment of the delegates by the Los Angeles Parlors now in course of execution, but also because there has been developed a very high degree of interest and enthusiasm among the members of the individual Parlors over the selection of delegates to this session of the Grand Parlor.

This feeling, and the assured success of this session of the Grand Parlor, should be transmitted into a permanent enthusiasm and organized effort all over California for a better general understanding of the aims and purposes of the Order, for a large increase in its membership, and for a consequent enlargement of its charitable and historical work. As Grand President of the Order, I shall labor unceasingly to have these results flow from the approaching Thirty-seventh Session of the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

been members of the Order, who have taken an active part, during their early career, in the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West, and passed through the various chairs. To this experience and training can be traced, in almost every instance, the reason for success.

Perhaps no other Order in existence offers a better school for cultivation of those vital qualities so essential to success—so essential to true manhood. Here, sobriety, honesty and fidelity are the watchwords; here, in the halls of this Order, some of the best speakers of the State were made. Any member who goes through the different offices of the Order will be able to take the floor in any meeting, no matter what the nature of that meeting may be, and make himself understood and felt. The knowledge gained here is not confined to the Order alone. It is not alone the Order of Native Sons that is being built. The members play a very prominent part in the building of towns and of cities, and a very prominent part in the building of our great Nation.

PUTS BAN ON SUNDAY PICNICS

Members and Subordinate Parlors of the Native Sons of the Golden West will, according to a notice just sent out from the office of the Grand Secretary, be in future proceeded against, under the laws of the Order, for any infraction of the Constitution for Subordinate Parlors that prohibits the holding of picnics or excursions on Sunday, except upon permission of the Grand President. That the practice will be made to cease, is evident from the notice just sent out, which is herewith appended.

GRAND PARLOR NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST.

San Francisco,
March 18, 1914.

To the Officers and Members of All Subordinate Parlors of the Native Sons of the Golden West—Dear Sirs and Brothers: Your attention is called to the following provision of the Constitution for Subordinate Parlors:

"ARTICLE IX, Section 14—Neither a Parlor nor the members thereof shall use the name of the Parlor or Order, or any portion thereof, in giving a picnic or excursion on Sunday, except upon obtaining a special dispensation from the Grand President."

Take especial notice that the section forbids "the members thereof" acting in the guise of clubs, drum and fife corps, bands, or any other separate organization,

LOS ANGELES GRAND PARLOR RECALLS PAST

(By H. C. LICHTENBERGER, Past Grand President, N.S.G.W., Los Angeles.)

THE COMING SESSION OF THE Grand Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, in the city of Los Angeles, makes the "City of the Angels" the mecca toward which all Native Sons who have the time and means will bend their steps. For the time being, the brains and sinew of the fraternity will be gathered in that city to pass judgment on the work of the past year, and to enact laws and adopt plans for the future guidance of the Order.

Not since 1892 has Los Angeles been favored by a visit of the Grand Parlor, and the great changes which have been wrought will certainly surprise those who have not visited the wonder city of the Southland since that time.

The Order has made favorable progress in that city, and is held in high esteem by her citizens, not only because of the personnel of the membership, but more particularly because of the work accomplished for the betterment of the State and her institutions. The Native Sons have received recognition on all occasions where fraternal or patriotic societies were invited to co-operate.

Very early in the history of the Order, native sons residing in Los Angeles instituted a Parlor and were granted a charter. The establishment of this Parlor, which was known as Los Angeles Parlor, No. 5, probably occurred sometime in the fall of 1878 or early in 1879. Mention of it was made in the proceedings of the Second Session of the Grand Parlor, which convened on June 10, 1879, but the records are not clear as to the exact date of its institution. Only one name survives to posterity as having been connected with the Parlor—B. A. Yorba, one time its secretary. The charter was surrendered on June 1, 1880.

November 13, 1884, D.D.G.P. George W. McPherson, assisted by Frank D. Owen, then of Fresno Parlor, No. 20, and J. Williams of Eureka Parlor, No. 13, instituted Los Angeles Parlor, No. 45. Dalton Wheeler was elected the first president.

During the Eighth Session of the Grand Parlor, 1884, a resolution was presented proposing that the Grand Parlor convene at Los Angeles in 1885. The cities of Woodland, Petaluma and Oakland were competitors. The resolution favoring Los Angeles was carried, but was reconsidered at a meeting of the Board of Grand Officers held in San Francisco, February 13, 1886.

H. C. LICHTENBERGER,
Chairman Grand Parlor Entertainment Committee.

This action was taken upon receipt of a communication from the secretary of Los Angeles Parlor, who then stated: "That Los Angeles Parlor finds herself in a deplorable condition. Her treasury is depleted, and her credit involved to the extent of over $300. The city has just been sorely afflicted with a severe flood, causing immense damage and suffering. Business men have been called upon to relieve the distress caused by the disaster. Numerous charitable organizations are making preparations to hold fairs, etc., for the purpose of raising money, and the prospects of the Parlor securing any subscriptions appear to be a misty impossibility."

June 6, 1887, Grand Vice-president M. A. Dorn of San Francisco, assisted by officers and members of Los Angeles Parlor, instituted Ramona Parlor,

No. 109. The late Native Son, Senator Stephen M. White, was selected as the past president, and Hon. R. F. Del Valle as the president of the Parlor. These honored members represented the Parlor at the next session of the Grand Parlor, at Fresno, and there, for the first time, the Native Sons heard the matchless eloquence of that peer of orators, Senator White.

At the session of the Grand Parlor held in the city of Chico in 1891, Los Angeles was again chosen as the meeting place of the Grand Parlor, winning from Sacramento by a vote of 125 to 84. Over $8,000 was contributed to entertain that Grand Parlor, and at the close of the session, a resolution was passed tendering the sincere thanks of the Grand Parlor for their most hospitable reception and generous entertainment. The feature of the session was an excursion over the "kite-shaped track," the memory of which still lingers with the delegates and visitors, who were shown the wonders of the Southland.

The success of the entertainment of the Grand Parlor resulted in renewed interest in the Order, and it began to flourish in Los Angeles. Three additional Parlors were organized, namely, Corona No. 196, Sierra Madre No. 235, and La Fiesta No. 236. Sierra Madre Parlor was afterwards merged with Ramona. Today, the organization in Los Angeles forms one of the strongest links in the chain of Parlors extending throughout the length of the State.

The great disaster which was visited upon the imperial city of San Francisco in 1895, gave the Parlors in Los Angeles an opportunity to test the metal and the resources of their membership. How well and how quickly they responded to the call of the stricken city, is a matter of history and a record of which we are proud. First to organize in relief work, first to send food and clothing to the stricken sufferers, first to carry into the still burning city much-needed money, and first to systematically care for the refugees who came to Los Angeles by the thousands, the Native Sons of Los Angeles received the praise and commendation of the entire population of our State.

The Parlors of the city of Los Angeles invite all native Californians of good moral character, who have a love for the State of their birth and who desire to be a factor in its development, to make application for membership.

THE NATIVE DAUGHTERS SOUTH OF TEHACHAPI

(By DR. EVA R. BUSSENIUS, Past Grand President, N. D. G. W., Los Angeles.)

S TIME, WITH SCYTHE AND glass, runs on in sun and shade, "through April's tears, October's flame," we are reminded of the event when Native Daughterism became a realism in Southern California, and through the mist of recollection comes the memory of "The Hope" that was created when No. 24 was added to our infant fraternity.

La Esperanza Parlor came into existence in the latter part of November, 1887, and at a period when there was no other call for its being than that of patriotic fervor. As if in anticipation of the time when the East should come West, this Parlor was born of "the hope" that all might be well with the Order, even till the end of time.

Many have been the trials and disappointments which have beset its progress towards a larger growth in things fraternal; but by persevering effort, and not waiting for circumstances to change or mold its destiny, the faithful ones have preserved a Parlor to the Order that gives promise of taking its place among the foremost of the State.

The next splendid event in Native Daughter history in the south, was the organization of Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124, in April, 1901. A most commendable spirit marked the membership of this Parlor from its inception, and ever has the attitude of its leading members stood for progressive Native Daughterism in Southern California.

"Harmony" is the force which holds these sisters in a happy relationship. They work unselfishly and diligently for the common good, to the end that the interests of the Order may be advanced; and stand as advocates of the increase of those qualifications which will enhance the value of the Native Daughters of the Golden West in the eyes of the unseeing.

DR. EVA R. BUSSENIUS, P. G. P., N. D. G. W.

Arrowhead Parlor, No. 149, San Bernardino (so named in honor of the Native Sons Parlor by that name), was instituted in February, 1906. As natural conditions play a leading part in the formation of character, these delightful sisters seemed to partake of the happy environment of the "Gate City," and thus was given to the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West a Parlor of women dignified in mien and of peculiar charm. Their ideals are of the highest, and the fraternal life of these sisters has been attuned to patriotism, friendship and charity.

Long Beach Parlor, No. 154, was given to the Native Daughters of the Golden West, February, 1907, and has been an inspiration to the entire Order. In a city where "West" is spelled "East," the active duties and responsibilities of membership found neither a fertile field nor a congenial air in the famous beach city.

However, No. 154, has lived in spite of, rather than because of, its location. The faithful few have dominated their surroundings, and have upheld the principles of the Order in the face of the most discouraging conditions. No call is made upon No. 154 in vain; no task too great to carry to a successful completion.

Here, in Southern California, the struggle for existence is at the minimum, and here Nature has seemed to concentrate her energy toward crating a happy abode for man. Accordingly, our Order should flourish even as do other bounteous blessings, for the Daughters of this State are singularly fortunate in the privilege given them for advancement and can the more often turn to the cultivation of fraternal relations and find more time for its active duties and responsibilities.

A sense of the heartiest co-operation exists between the Native Sons and Native Daughters in the southern part of California. The Native Sons find the assistance of the Native Daughters, in affairs of no matter how much importance, of inestimable value; and the strength and encouragement which the Daughters receive from the Sons render their self-allotted tasks, regardless of how great scope, easy of accomplishment.

We of the section "south of the Tehachapi" realize the necessity of the call "to arms" in the interests of our splendid Order; and "so we work for California." "Where the hand of God hath hung it, down the middle of the world."

LANDMARKS WORK OF THE NATIVE SONS

(By LEWIS F. BYINGTON, Past Grand President, N.S.G.W., San Francisco.)

THE HISTORY OF CALIFORNIA IS unique, its traditions inspiring. It is a land of scenic wonders and matchless resources. No other state can claim a more interesting, a more stirring, or a more picturesque origin. Its name was derived from an old Spanish romance published shortly before Cortes and his followers, in 1535, sailed up the west coast of Mexico. In this old romance mention was made of the island of California on the right hand of the Indies and near the Terrestrial Paradise. It was peopled with a race of beautiful women of ardent courage and great strength. Their armor and the trappings of the animals which they rode were all of gold, and gold was the only metal to be found upon the island. Cortes was doubtless familiar with the romance, and as he sailed up the coast he believed he was at the place indicated,—that is, to the right of the Indies,—and gave the name "California" to the peninsula along which he sailed.

It was almost two hundred and fifty years after this that the first attempt was made to colonize California, when Father Junipero Serra, the gentle but courageous Franciscan and pioneer of civilization in the West, started from Lower California with Portola in command of the land forces, and inspired by Christian zeal and the love of humanity established the long chain of missions reaching from San Diego to Sonoma.

The Franciscan fathers seem to have selected the most beautiful spots in California upon which to plant the missions dedicated to God and to the civilization of the West. What is more beautiful than the settings of the missions at San Diego, Santa Barbara, Carmel and San Buenaventura, harked by the circling, empurpled hills with the shimmering beauty of the bays in the foreground? At San Antonio de Padua, San Gabriel, San Juan Capistrano, Santa Ynez and Sonoma, the beauty and charm of mountain, valley and sky, combine to please the eye and touch the soul.

In carrying forward their work of conversion and civilization, the missionaries constructed a highway, El Camino Real, over 700 miles in length and which connected the twenty-one missions of the State. The spirit of the old Mission period seems to have given a coloring to our whole local landscape:

"Bells of the Past, whose long forgotten music
Still fills the wide expanse,
Tinging the sober twilight of the Present
With color of romance.

Before me rise the dome-shaped Mission towers,
The white Presidio;
The swart commander in his leather jerkin,
The priest in stole of snow.

Once more I see Portola's cross uplifting
Above the setting sun;
And past the headland, northward, slowly drifting,
The freighted galleon."

Awakens Interest in Historic Past.

It was in June, 1846, that the American settlers in California learned that General Castro, then in command of the Department of Sonoma, had issued an order to drive foreigners from this territory. The settlers determined to defend themselves and establish a republican form of government. They were loyal Americans and wished to raise the Stars and Stripes in place of the flag of Mexico, but had no authority to do so. They, however, organized, captured the Mexican fort at Sonoma, designed and raised the Bear flag, and proclaimed the independence of California. This flag was uplifted in the cause of liberty, equal rights and independence, and is preserved as an historic emblem and has been adopted by our Legislature as the State flag. When Commodore Sloat, in the following July, landed from an American vessel at Monterey and raised the Stars and Stripes, the settlers of Sonoma took down the Bear flag and with demonstration of great loyalty replaced it with the American flag which was gladly hailed throughout California as symbolizing the authority of the United States. To commemorate the raising of the historic Bear flag, the Native Sons have raised funds and secured an appropriation of $5,000 from the Legislature and expect on the 14th day of June next to dedicate an appropriate and artistic monument on the public square of the town of Sonoma and on the spot where, sixty-eight years before, the Bear flag was first flung to the breeze.

Of the original twenty-one missions which were established in California, two, San Rafael Arcangel

In the expenditure of thousands of dollars for the restoration and preservation of historic landmarks—many of them private property—the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West again establishes its claim to being unlike any other fraternal organization.

The Order annually appropriates a goodly portion of its funds for this purpose, without hope of financial gain, being prompted solely by love of State and by a desire to preserve her landmarks—the illustrations, as they are, of her wonderful and unique past history.

To assist the Order in this laudable work, if for no other reason, should prompt every eligible native Californian to affiliate with the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West.—Editor.)

and Santa Cruz, have entirely disappeared, and many of the others have been permitted to fall into decay. The history and traditions of the early tribes and people of the West are, to a great extent, embodied in the monuments and structures which they planned, constructed and embellished. When one of these landmarks is defaced, or destroyed, much that would serve to throw a flood of light upon the heliefs and civilization of departed races is lost forever.

The aim and purpose of the Native Sons of the Golden West is to awaken an interest in the history and traditions of California, to restore and preserve the missions and landmarks, to perpetuate the memory of the Pioneers, to strengthen the love which every American citizen should have for the Flag and the institutions of his country, to stimulate civic integrity, to develop our resources, and to render more attractive our cities and towns.

The Order has restored, at an expenditure of several thousands of dollars, the splendid mission of San Antonio de Padua and the bell tower of Santa Ynez, which fell several years ago, and has secured an appropriation from the Legislature of $5,000 to preserve the mission at Sonoma, and stands ready to aid all movements for the restoration of other missions of the State.

It has made a yearly contribution of $2,500 for the establishment of Fellowships in California History at the State University, with the intention of appropriating hereafter $5,000 annually for the maintenance of a professorship in that branch and to gather manuscripts, books and data bearing upon the subject and see that knowledge thereon is diffused among our people. It has urged the preparation of a text-book on California history, and instruction thereon in all public schools.

It has preserved the old Custom House at Monterey over which floated the flags of Spain, Mexico and the United States. Above this building Commodore John Drake Sloat, on July 7, 1846, raised the Stars and Stripes, which act marked the passing of Mexican rule on these shores and brought California into the Union.

Creates Interest in State's Development.

The Order also preserved Colton Hall, within which the first constitution of our State was drafted in September, 1849; the constitution under which she entered the Sisterhood of States. It was through the efforts of the Order that Sutter's Fort, at Sacramento, was rebuilt; the hospitable refuge where the Pioneers, descending from the snows of the Sierras, were received with open arms by General John A. Sutter. In memory of James W. Marshall, the discoverer of gold, it has reared a monument overlooking the old mill-race at Coloma, in which Marshall first discerned the golden sands on the morning of January 24, 1848, and which brought the people of every land to our shores.

Near Donner Lake, and on the spot where the snows of winter closed around the Donner Party, one of the first to cross the plains, and where hunger, starvation and death rode the winds, the Order is building a monument to commemorate the fortitude, the dauntless courage, the trials and tribulations of all the Pioneer Fathers and Mothers who blazed their way across mountain and plain and laid the foundation of this Commonwealth. The Order will also provide the means to have marked out the old roads, over which the Pioneers crossed the Sierras, thus commemorating the hardships and dangers of the emigrant trails.

The Order is also interested in conserving the resources and in the development of California. The preservation of the matchless forests of sequoia and pine which cluster on the flanks of her mountains has enlisted the earnest efforts of its members. The wonderful scenic beauties of the State, and the fertile valleys, should be rendered easily accessible by the construction of broad and well-paved roads adorned by means of trees and flowers. The cities of California should be made attractive through the erection of public buildings, architecturally beautiful, the creation of public parks and squares, linked together with well-paved boulevards; while tablets and monuments placed in appropriate places should preserve the traditions of the past and inform the traveler of the stirring deeds which were there enacted.

The Panama-Pacific Exposition will bring thousands of travelers, from every land, to California. Of special interest to them will be the old missions, rich with traditions of the days when the Franciscan fathers brought the cross and civilization to the West and beautiful in the simplicity of their architecture and the charm of their scenic settings. The missions are the oldest monuments, architecturally, in the State and should not be permitted to fall into decay. If destroyed, an important link connecting our later civilization with the heliefs, arts, and romance of a departed race, is lost forever. Upon the walls of many, now standing, are paintings and frescoes made by the Indians and within their lockers are magnificent vestments as bright in texture and coloring as when brought from Spain more than a century ago.

The restoration of El Camino Real, the old highway stretching from the first mission established at San Diego to the last one which was erected at Sonoma, will permit the tourist to traverse in comfort the most fruitful and scenically beautiful land on earth.

The Grand Parlor, which convenes at Los Angeles, will have additional reason to now press forward in the great work of preserving the landmarks, stimulating an interest in good roads, and in historical research.

Subserves the Commonwealth's Welfare.

While the Exposition will draw thousands to San Francisco and our other large cities, the wonders and charms of our mountains and valleys will delight the traveler above all else, and the halo of romance which clusters around our Golden State will interest the people of every land. Appropriate tablets, placed on all historic spots, should commemorate the poetry, the romance and the tragedy of other days and should instruct the youth and the traveler in the history of California.

In many of the states of the East and Middle West, hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent by historical societies in gathering and preserving data and material and publishing works bearing upon particular localities where the societies are established. California has a most unique and romantic history, but its citizens are doing practically nothing to perpetuate the traditions of the West, and the California Historical Society seems but a name. The Native Sons should be proud to pre-empt this field of research, to restore and perpetuate the landmarks, and to conserve the

CALIFORNIA DAY

AT WORLD'S FAIR

San Francisco—"California Day" at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco next year will mark the greatest celebration ever held in this State. On September 9th, Admission Day, the Native Sons of the Golden West and Native Daughters of the Golden West will, for a day and a night, take complete possession of the exposition grounds and will show whatever visitors are able to squeeze in between the ranks of the real thing—i.e., the real Californians,—what we can do when we get started. While the exercises will be under the auspices of the Native Sons and Native Daughters, the Pioneers' Association also will participate.

Plans for the big celebration were formulated at a recent conference between a committee from the joint 1915 committee of the Native Sons of the Golden West and Hollis E. Cooley, chief of the bureau of special events of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. The meeting was held in the chambers of Superior Judge John J. Van Nostrand, Grand Trustee of the Order. Those present were L. F. Byington, Rudolph Herold, Jr., H. I. Mulerevy, William H. Crocker, John P. Harms, Judge John J. Van Nostrand and Hollis E. Cooley. At the meeting, the Native Sons present decided, on behalf of the organization, that the Native Sons and Native Daughters should participate in the world's greatest celebration by holding all Admission Day festivities within the exposition grounds.

The daylight historic pageant, which will eclipse in magnificence all the brilliant parades ever held by the two native organizations, will start and end within the exposition grounds, taking in, in the line of march, the two and one-half mile sweep of the beautiful broad esplanade of the Marina, and passing for review before the great grandstands at the race track grounds. The parade will terminate at Festival Hall, where there will be music, in which choruses of thousands of California school children will participate, and speaking.

During the afternoon there will be daylight fireworks for the amusement of the children, and at night a great spectacular electric parade, the floats of which will pass over the exposition car tracks. The electric parade will be followed during the evening by elaborate fireworks from boats anchored 300 feet out from the exposition water front, and the whole festivities will terminate in a grand ball, at which the Native Sons and Native Daughters will act as hosts and hostesses, to be held either in Festival Hall or at the California Hotel building.

"California Day," September 9th, promises to be the biggest day of the big exposition.

CALIFORNIA: DARLING OF THE GODS.

On the slopes of Parnassus, in ancient Greece,
The gods were sporting, the world was at peace.
Suddenly Aurora, Goddess of Morn,

Bethought an idea, of happiness born:

To endow a great garden, from each god a gift,
A lovely Dream Country, for deities fit.

The fanciful thought was met with acclaim,
In musical clamor, their gifts they each named.

Flora lavished her boon with bountiful grace,
With extravagant hand, she sets the pace.

Phoebus, the Sun, in his trip every day,
Promised to smile benignly, to soften each ray.

Bacchus, the wine god, with a wave of his hand,
Great luscious grapes, bestowed on the land.

And next came Ceres, her bounty she cast
With liberality—her barvests vast.

Then Venus with bewitching smile,
Breathed Love and Beauty o'er every mile.

Each god and goddess with gracious mien,
Heaped wealth and grace on the entrancing scene.

Great wooded stretches, bright rippling streams,
Golden sands, sparkling in the sun-beams.

The favored land of which I prate?
California! My own Golden State!

BOOSTERS TO TOUR COUNTRY.

To boost for California and the two great 1915 expositions in San Francisco and San Diego, is the primary object of a trip across the continent and back to be undertaken by the Shrine bands and patrols of San Francisco, Oakland, Los Angeles and San Diego, starting from California on April 30th. About 300 "boosters" will accompany the bands and patrols, and four special trains will be used to convey them to all the big cities of the country.

LAUDABLE ENDEAVOR

SHOULD BE GIVEN SUPPORT.

Mrs. Wm. Fairchild of Placerville, State Chairman of the History and Landmarks Department of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, is working to retain the department under its original name, instead of including it in the work of the educational department. The San Francisco department was allowed to continue with the work, and under the able administration of Mrs. Carrie Burlingame, Sonoma, has been the means of securing funds to aid in the restoration of several of the old missions of California. Mrs. Fairchild writes us, in part, as follows:

"Of all the departments in the Federation, I have this one embedded the deepest in my heart. I love California! I am not urging this movement because I am a candidate for office, nor am I seeking anything from the Federation—only their loyalty, as Californians, to our glorious Commonwealth.

"In the plan of the concentration of work, I understand that history and landmarks should be classed as educational, but I also realize that there are many topics besides history that will come first, and with the rapid strides of progression, no one will want to go back and grope through the mists of the past to bring forth anything of that long-ago. Gradually, but surely, our beloved history and landmarks will be pushed aside and submerged.

"Another reason why this department should retain its identity, is the fact that the last link binding the past and present will be lost in the great gap between. The Pioneers are rapidly decreasing in numbers, and the silent oarsman, with his curtained barge, soon will have rowed the last one through the sunset gate. There is no time to be lost, if we would get their stories, for their lips will soon be mute. Can we do this if history is put to one side? Never! And our cup of regret will be filled only with might-have-beens.

"Scientists are combing the State periodically and systematically for any and every thing which would tend to throw light upon our past. It has already been said by one from Chicago that if Californians did not awaken soon, they must go to Chicago to study their own history.

"There are many other reasons: State loyalty, and pride, and the idea of keeping the subject in mind 'lest we forget' to give our glorious State her just dues. If for no other reasons, those in the resolutions would be enough to inspire all true Californians to retain this unique department.

Authoress; Member Pacific Coast Press Association.

"I have every reason to believe that the Los Angeles District will approve and second the resolutions. The Presidents' Council which met there in February approved and heartily endorsed them."

The resolutions referred to by Mrs. Fairchild, and which have been sent to each district convention, are herewith published with the hope that the individual clubs will make a plea for the retention of the History and Landmarks Department, to perform the work under the original name. Now, you Native Daughters, here's where you can show your loyalty to your State. Have your clubs endorse these resolutions and send to your district chairman at once, for presentation at the State meeting. Do it now!!!

Resolutions to keep the department of History and Landmarks by itself and not put under the head of "Education":

"Whereas, Danger menaces California's treasures, namely, history, relics of the Indians, the purchase from local collectors, articles of value, the greed of the tourist, inspired simply by the desire of possession without intelligent purpose, the keen appreciation of scientists, who realize that California is one of the richest states in the Union for investigation and research, and the apathy of Californians regarding their treasures; and

"Whereas, These scientists are systematically hunting the State over from time to time; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we arouse ourselves to the situation, petition our district boards to petition the State Board at the coming convention to be held at Riverside, late in April, to RETAIN the Department of History and Landmarks, and appoint an historian for the State and each district to conserve the heritage left us by the Pioneers and native races of the State of California; and be it further

"Resolved, That the work of conservation be begun at once, collecting books, pictures, relics, Pioneer biographies, and everything which may tend to stimulate a desire for California's romantic past, and at the same time better fit us to entertain the 1915 exposition."

NOTES OF THE CLUBS.

The clubwomen comprising the Northern District will commence an aggressive campaign to beautify the State Highway running through their counties by planting trees on both sides of the road. This campaign will begin in all the counties simultaneously, with a view of securing immediate action, so that when the work upon the highway has been commenced, tree planting will take place at the same time. Mrs. A. F. Jones, president of the Northern District, and past chairman of forestry in her district, is the leader in this movement, and will make it one of the principal topics to be discussed at the Northern District Convention to be held in Woodland.

The San Mateo County Center of the California Civic League held another "organization meeting" during the month at Redwood City. The club of the latter city had offered the use of their clubhouse for the afternoon, and joined with the leaders of the Center in enlarging the membership by about fifty members. The Center will meet in different parts of the county, the next meeting taking place at Colma, under the direction of Mrs. Spellman, chairman of the Colma district.

A club recently added to the Los Angeles District is the Business Women's Civic Club of Long Beach, modeled after the Business Women's Club of Los Angeles, and much of their work will be along the same lines. They meet every Thursday evening in the offices of the commissioner of public affairs, and three meetings a month are open to the business women of every occupation. At each meeting the club will provide a speaker who will instruct the members on topics of general interest, and especially on matters pertaining to legislation.

The Salinas Civic Club recently enjoyed a day prepared by their current events section, and discussed the work of the Women's Board of the exposition, with the idea of taking part in the auxiliary which was later formed in their county. They do much work for improving conditions in the home in this club, and at this meeting, a discussion of a book on pure foods brought forth the fact that not many California brands are mentioned. The suggestion was made that all California canneries and packing houses should be open to the public.

Here's something new: The Kentfield Club, or rather, the Tamalpais Center Woman's Club, recently prepared a program, the chairman requesting each member to present, in writing, something she had discovered which would help others in their housekeeping, these ideas later being presented to the club. A speaker addressed the members on "Some Things Mothers Ought to Know."

And here's another: The Whittier Woman's Club of the Los Angeles District recently had an afternoon where the members were requested to bring samples and recipes of various kinds of relishes, which were afterwards given to those requesting them. They also had a speaker, the subject being "The Value of Vegetables as Food."

The Sierra Madre Woman's Club, Los Angeles District, will hold its annual flower show in the Woman's Clubhouse April 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th, assisted by the board of trade and the town trustees. Besides the exhibit held in the clubhouse, which will include the wild flowers as well as the cultivated, the visitors are to be treated to auto rides through the town, and then taken to the heights, where a most beautiful view of the San Gabriel Valley may be obtained. A daisant on the last evening will terminate the show.

A Monterey County Auxiliary of the Woman's Board of the P.P.I.E. was recently formed, with headquarters at Monterey, and the following officers: Chairman, Mrs. Thomas Doud; vice-chairman, Mrs. E. T. Erb; treasurer, Mrs. J. K. Dobbins; secretary, Mrs. F. A. Zimmerman. Sub-chairmen were named for the different towns in the county, and they will act in conjunction with the officers in securing members for the auxiliary, and funds with which to furnish, maintain and administer the "California Host Building."

The different sections of the Salinas Woman's Civic Club have had a busy month. The music section presented a program consisting of Handel and Bach selections to a capacity-crowded hall. Mrs. H. F. Kenworthy, chairman, presiding. Biographies of the two noted composers were given by Mrs. Andrensen and Mrs. McDougall, and vocal selections from the works of Handel were rendered by Miss Velita Hughes; instrumental selections from the works of Bach were rendered by Mrs. Stella Fitch-Campbell. A novelty was presented in the form of phonograph records of the compositions of these two great composers. The art section presented an interesting program, with papers on "How to Study Art," "Art and Its Twin Sister, Nature," and "Byzantine Art." The latter, by Mrs. Andreassen, was particularly interesting and instructive, giving the history of art during the period of Constantine, the Great. Mrs. Richmond Wheeler, chairman of the art section, presented a paper on "Botticelli and Meunier."

Invitations are out for a luncheon to be given for the retiring and incoming officers of the San Francisco District, April 4th, and have been extended to the state officers and to all club members. Mrs. Percy L. Shuman, retiring president, will receive the guests, assisted by her board and the incoming officers, after which the luncheon will be served. A program containing some novelties is insured, Mrs. Sexton being chairman, and will be assisted by Mrs. Norman Martin. Mrs. Percy King, the new president, will be in attendance, and take part in the program.

The Philomath, a San Francisco club, enjoys a high reputation for the ability of its members as "actresses." This club's programs are always of exceptional merit, and invitations are eagerly sought for all its affairs. Recently, their annual dinner took place, when the members had the privilege of inviting their husbands to participate—that is, in the dinner, as the program was distinctly feminine, and the toasts of such merit as to occasion much surprise on the part of the said husbands. Mrs. Abraham Brown, the president, was chairman, and introduced Mrs. I. Loweberg, who is also president of the Press Club, and an authoress of note, who gave a history of the Philomath Club, born twenty years ago. Mrs. Helen Hecht spoke of the "Woman of Today." A play entitled "The Ken-Nix Kinder in Search of a Jay" was later produced, the characters all representing notable persons of a past generation, and all portrayed by members of the club.

The Wednesday Afternoon Club of Alhambra, Los Angeles District, with the civics committee in charge, recently gave an afternoon in the high school auditorium, with "Tree Planting and the Care of Trees," as the subject for consideration. Dr. F. E. Corey, chairman of the City Park Commission, addressed his audience on the care of park trees, and Dr. Smith, County Horticultural Commissioner, delivered an illustrated lecture on tree planting. Dr. Corey made a point as follows: "The design of a good tree is to grow straight from a central trunk, having equal sized branches, and a leader which points skyward. No tree should be selected which has not a well defined leader." He said that almost any tree will grow in California, planted at any time, if given plenty of water and proper care, and also spoke of the necessity for uniform tree planting, believing that much beauty was added to the parks when all trees are of a uniform height.

The Papyrus Club of San Francisco presented an Irish program to its members on March 17th. It was in the hands of Mrs. Florence Richmond, one of San Francisco's woman writers, and was distinctly Irish from beginning to end. This club will celebrate its twelfth anniversary with a cotillion on the evening of April 17th, under the direction of its popular president, Mrs. Kathleen Byrne.

Exposition Day was celebrated March 10th by the California Club of San Francisco. Nearly all of the members of this club are members also of the San Francisco Auxiliary of the Woman's Exposition Board, and take an active interest in all affairs connected with the fair. A large attendance greeted Mrs. Sanborn, president of the woman's board, who spoke on the "Mothers' Monument Fund" and the Travelers' Aid work in San Francisco. Her visits to the different clubs mean an increasing membership to the auxiliaries, and also to the funds both for the monument and for means to furnish and maintain the woman's building at the fair. All the clubwomen are assisting Mrs. Sanborn in her work, recognizing her earnestness of purpose, and, more than that, the cheerfulness with which she has made this strenuous work a part of her every-day life.

The music section of the San Francisco District will give a splendid program some time in April, under the direction of Mrs. John Jury of San Jose, who expects to present a famous singer now visiting San Jose in a repertoire of California compositions. It has long been Mrs. Jury's desire to bring out the compositions of Californians, and she has decided to close up her two years' work with a concert as outlined. She has been instrumental in having much of the rag-time music eliminated from the moving picture exhibits, and it is laid to her credit that the organ installed in a San Francisco theater, and which delights so many music-lovers, was brought from San Jose and placed there through her efforts. Her work with the San Francisco District has been mainly an effort to raise the character of music rendered in public places.

Mrs. Racine McKoskey, whose photograph appears in this number, is a prominent clubwoman in the San Francisco District, belonging to no less than seven clubs. She is an authoress of note, her "Drift O' Dreams" having been enjoyed by many Californians. Another book from her pen is now in the publisher's hands, and is looked forward to with keen interest by the clubwomen, who are often regaled with pretty compositions by Mrs. McKoskey.

BEHOLD! THE SPRING IS HERE.

Hark! a tapping at my window!
A call drifts through the door.
The meadow lark brings greetings sweet,
And trills it o'er and o'er.

The robin and the sparrow
And the tiny humming bird,
Are blithely chattering about
The message they have heard.

The sunshine through the fleecy clouds,
Casts shadows on the grass.
The palm trees wave their fronds and nod,
To birds and bees that pass.

The violet sheds the dewy crown
Of jewels from her head,
The daffodil and jowl fair
A wealth of perfume shed.

The tender, fragrant southern breeze
Brings joyous life and cheer,
And ushers in our radiant guest,—
Behold! the Spring is here!

The birds and bees and flowers rejoice
To welcome Spring's glad days,
So let us, with God's "little ones"
Lift hearts and voice in praise.
—RACINE McROSKEY.

ing these picnics and excursions brings the entire Order into disrepute. It is forbidden by the laws of the Grand Parlor, and in a general manner such violations have been repeatedly censured by Grand Presidents and by the Grand Parlor.

Such general censures having been in many cases ignored, all Parlor and the members thereof are warned that any violation of the law which is called to the attention of the Grand President or Grand Secretary will be followed by the prompt filing of charges against the Parlor or members offending. Mrs. Grace Krumland, junior past president, installed Mrs. Bertha Richardson as first vice-president.

March 7th, Donner Parlor observed Arbor Day by planting trees around the Byron Hot Springs school. There were thirty-three trees planted altogether, including locusts and peppers, also a number of palms. It was a lovely day, and the members enjoyed the outing.

PAY RESPECT TO PIONEER MOTHER.

Georgetown—Mrs. Martha Childress, a resident of California for over sixty years, died at the home of her daughter in Colfax, Placer County, March 9th, at the age of 84 years. The remains were brought to Georgetown, El Dorado County, for burial beside her husband, who passed away two years ago. El Dorado Parlor, No. 186, N.D.G.W., turned out in a body to pay their last tribute of respect to a Pioneer Mother.

TO GRAND PARLOR ATTENDANTS.

During their visit to Los Angeles at the Grand Parlor, members of the Order are invited, and requested, to visit the offices of The Grizzly Bear, the official organ, rooms 246 and 248 Wilcox building, Second and Spring streets.

Information will be gladly given, to the best of the management's ability, and every endeavor made to make your stay in Los Angeles agreeable and of interest. In short, the facilities of The Grizzly Bear will be at your disposal for the asking.

Purposes Commendable.

Oakland—The Past Presidents' Association of the East Bay N.S.G.W., made up of those who have been through the chairs of their several Parlors, was organized at a banquet held February 23rd, and which was attended by past presidents of the Alameda and Contra Costa Counties Parlors. The organization purposes to further the interests and well-being of the Order, to encourage the members of Subordinate Parlors in its work, and to bring about a higher understanding and appreciation of its objects, purposes and aims; to disseminate its principles to the world at large; to enlist the older members more fully in the good work of the Order, and to revive the interest heretofore taken by many past presidents in their early days in the Order; to cultivate and encourage sociability and fraternity among the members of the association, as well as among members of the Order throughout the State; and, generally, to encourage and enlarge upon the work of the Order, and to be an incentive to members of the Subordinate Parlors to pass through the chairs, giving them something higher to look forward to. Harry G. Williams, Grand Marshal, presided at the banquet, and toasts were responded to by Grand President Thomas Monahan, Past Grand President R. M. Fitzgerald, and W. H. L. Hynes. W. T. O'Connor rendered a song.

Wants Fort Miller Preserved.

Fresno—That "Fortune Favors Fresno" was the slogan that inspired the speeches at the anniversary banquet of Fresno Parlor, No. 25, February 23rd, which was attended by a large number of local Native Sons and Native Daughters and invited guests of city and county officials. The banquet-room was decorated with American and Bear flags, while the table decorations were of flowers. Grand Trustee William F. Toomey presided as toastmaster, and after dwelling on the accomplishments of Fresno Parlor and the Order, made an appeal for the preservation of Fort Miller, as a spot which has borne its share in the making of the State's early history. Mayor E. A. Snow responded to the toast "Playgrounds," and Chester H. Rowell to that of "Washington." F. M. Lane, in responding to the sentiment, "Homeless Children," protested against California being the only State not commemorating Washington's birthday by closing its public schools. Other toasts responded to were: "California," by M. F. McCormick; "Home Industry," by William Glass; "What the Panama Canal Will Be to California," by N. J. Levinson; "Public Library," Ray Baker. During the evening, George F. Wilson sang "Beautiful California," a new song, and won great applause.

Old Parlor Observes Anniversary.

tion with a "stag" affair, February 19th, at which speeches and vaudeville numbers held the attention of the large number present. George A. Burns presided over the festivities, and addresses were made by Grand President Thomas Monahan of San Jose, Past Grand President Walter D. Wagner of San Bernardino, Ted C. Atwood of Placerville Parlor, Ed Kraus, historian of Sacramento Parlor, Lester Hinsdale, Ed Head of Stanford Parlor, Keeper of the State Archives, and W. J. Hicks, president of the Parlor. During the evening, the retiring past president, H. Hanlon, was presented by Robert S. Shorrock, on behalf of the Parlor, with a handsome token.

Has Fine Meeting.

Antioch—Accompanied by fifteen members of Diamond Parlor, No. 246, D.D.G.P. Frank S. Brandon came up from Pittsburg, February 18th, and at one of the largest attended and most interesting meetings of General Winn Parlor, No. 32, installed the following officers after they had exemplified the ritual for the benefit of two candidates: C. Bonnickson, past president; Carl McElhenny, president; Archie Waldie, Jr., first vice-president; Bedson Juett, second vice-president; Geo. Kennerly, third vice-president; Ernest Arata, marshal; Francis Crawford, inside sentinel; Judson Biglow, outside sentinel. At the banquet which followed, Past Grand President Charles M. Belshaw presided, and interesting addresses were made by Grand Second Vice-president John F. Davis of San Francisco, Sheriff R. R. Veale, A. S. Ormsby and George Upham of Martinez.

Something's Going to Happen.

Oakland—All Oakland is boosting for Claremont Parlor, No. 240's minstrel show. It is expected to be one of the greatest events ever afforded Oakland for merriment and the Parlor's financial success. W. T. O'Connor is chairman of the committee, consisting of seven other good "live" ones, namely, Bert A. Stone, P. J. Carroll, K. W. Ingraham, G. W. Phillips, R. De Martini and J. Kavanaugh. Mr. O'Connor is directing the show, with the assistance of his committee, and he assures all local talent, jokes never heard of before, and songs to be sung by "some" songsters. The boys claim to set Klinkner Hall, Fifty-ninth and San Pablo avenue, where the show is to be given on April 18th, on fire without burning anything. Some boys, these Claremont fellows.

Mt. Baldy To the Front.

Weaverville—At the meeting of Mt. Baldy Parlor, No. 87, March 2nd, twelve candidates were initiated, bringing Mt. Baldy's membership up to 115. Three candidates were initiated at the following meeting.

Mt. Baldy's aim is to increase its membership to 150 before 1915, making it one of the banner Parlors of the mountain region of California. The Parlor at a recent meeting contributed $26 to the Pioneer Mother's monument fund, and $20 to the Homeless Children's fund. The grand ball given February 13th, by Eltapome Parlor No. 55, N.D.G.W., and Mt. Baldy Parlor, No. 87, N.S.G.W., was a big success, financially and socially. Seventy couples were in attendance.

Piedmont Generous Host.

Oakland—The twenty-sixth anniversary banquet of Piedmont Parlor, No. 120, March 12th, proved to be the greatest event held in local Native Sons circles in many a day. Among the 400 members of the Parlor present were H. J. Husing, who has been paralyzed for two years and was conveyed to the gathering in an auto, and C. H. Somers, J. B. Donnelly, G. D. McHugh and E. Planer, charter members. Among the invited guests were Herman Gard and Ed. P. Cook, old-time members of Oakland Parlor; the president of every Alameda County Parlor; all the District Deputies in the county, and last (not arriving until 10 o'clock, after their meeting,) but not least by any means, 150 members of Piedmont Parlor, No. 187, N.D.G.W., escorted by Grand Trustee Addie Mosher.

Central Hall, 75 x 150 feet, was the scene of the festivities, and it was packed to the doors. It was attractively decorated in red, white and gold. The menu consisted of the season's delicacies, provided in abundance, and the hospitality of Piedmont was extended in the generous manner of which the Parlor is noted. During the evening, Dick Hamb was presented by the Parlor with a large electric table-lamp.

J. J. McElroy, Grand Trustee, was the toastmaster, and the following numbers were enjoyed: Address of welcome, Henry Weber, president Piedmont Parlor; selection, Piedmont Parlor band; remarks, "Increased Membership," Grand President Thomas Monahan; reading minutes March 10, 1888 (the occasion of the Parlor's institution), J. I. Dignan, secretary; song, "Dream Days," Robert Bankhead; remarks, "Admission Day Parade," Grand Marshal Harry G. Williams; monologue, Jim Fitzsimmons; selection, Piedmont quartet; remarks, "Our Oorder," W. H. L. Hynes; remarks, "The District Deputies," J. P. Brennan, Berkeley Parlor, N.S.G.W.; baritone solo, Henry Taylor; remarks, "The Old Guard," E. A. Brackett; violin solo, H. C. Coward; boxing match, single vs. married men; remarks, "Absent Members," Frank Barnett; tenor solo, Frank Campbell; remarks, "Our Beautiful Sisters," W. J. Baccus; remarks, "More Light," M. B. Morrison; response from the young blood, R. M. Hamb; selection, Piedmont Parlor band. Piedmont Parlor was organized with seventeen members, and today has a membership of just 400 more—417.

Spirited Contest.

Pittsburg—Diamond Parlor, No. 246, regretfully announces the loss, by death, of one of its members, Joseph Draggio. He was born in San Francisco, but had resided in Pittsburg with his parents the major portion of his life, having only recently removed to Oakland, where he entered the employ of the Southern Pacific Company as fireman on one of their ferryboats. Deceased succumbed to typhoid fever after an illness of but ten days, aged 20 years and 6 months.

Arbor Day was celebrated March 5th, by Diamond Parlor, in conjunction with Stirling Parlor, N.D. G.W., by planting some new palms on Railroad avenue, the main approach to the city, and by the rejuvenation of others that had been planted last Arbor Day.

At the regular meeting March 11th, the Parlor elected F. S. Brandon and J. E. Rough as delegates to the coming session of the Grand Parlor, with Joseph Cinollo and Thos. A. Feighery as alternates. The contest was the most spirited that Diamond Parlor had ever experienced, there being six candidates in the race, all of whom were anxious to represent the Parlor at Los Angeles, where the Grand Parlor convenes.

In Splendid Condition.

Oakland—Claremont Parlor, No. 240, was highly honored by the visit of Grand First Vice-president Louis H. Mooser the 13th of March. He was met at the depot by the Claremont band and a large number of the members, who escorted him to the hall. A candidate was introduced and the initiatory work performed; reports were presented and nominations for delegates to the Grand Parlor were made, nine or ten being put forward in most eulogistic terms and each designated as the best to represent the Parlor. Mr. Mosser spoke at length, and the members were delighted to hear their officers very highly commended for the manner in which they rendered the work, and also as to the condition of the books. A large number were present and after the Parlor closed enjoyed a bountiful spread laid out by the Good of the Order committee. The Parlor is in a flourishing condition, and rapidly increasing its membership.

AN ACTIVE WORKER

Harry I. Mulcrevy, city and county clerk of San Francisco, is the son of Pioneer parents, who came to California in 1849, and settled in San Francisco, where he was born. He is a past president of Olympus Parlor, No. 189, N. S. G. W., and has always represented his Parlor in every public and private project that the Native Sons have been interested in during the past twenty years; he has been a delegate to the Grand Parlor since 1896, and has served on many important committees; at present he is Chairman of the Board of Appeals of the Grand Parlor, N. S. G. W.

HON. HARRY I. MULCREVY,
Chmn. Board Appeals, N.S.G.W.

Mr. Mulcrevy's political life commenced in 1896, in which year he was elected from his native district to the California Legislature; in 1897 was appointed chief of the Department of Elections of San Francisco, and in 1905 was elected to the office of City and County Clerk. His administration of this latter office has been endorsed by all the state and local bench and bar, also by the leading civic, industrial and political organizations of San Francisco, and his reelection to four successive terms as County Clerk, is a fitting tribute to an honest, efficient and courteous public official.

The navy department has asked the forest service to investigate guijo, a Philippine wood, for possible use in decking boats and ships. Longleaf pine, sugar maple and beech are the domestic woods most used for decks.

INTEREST SHOWN IN N. D. G. W. HOME

(By DR. MARIANA BERTOLA, Past Grand President, N.D.G.W.)

Herewith is presented a picture of the N.D.G.W. Home conducted by the Board of Relief at 555 Baker street, San Francisco, taken by Mrs. Walter Crapo of Buena Vista Parlor, No. 68. The following donated the several articles mentioned to the Home during January:

Mrs. Hall, Alta Parlor, one pair pillows; Miss O'Meara, Veritas Parlor, one dollar; Tejon Parlor, six dozen towels; El Dorado Parlor, one dozen jars fruit; Misses Alma and Anna Schafer, Alta Parlor, two scarfs, hand embroidered; Mrs. May Nohle, Buena Vista Parlor, crocheted a towel and raffled it in the Parlor for $3.15; Grand NATIVE DAUGHTERS' HOME.

Trustee Addie Mosher, Piedmont Parlor, bed. Miss Kate McGough, as our attorney, reported a dividend of $10 on N.S.G.W. hall stock which the Board of Relief owns.

Keith Parlor has started an innovation for the Home that may well be imitated by many: Some time ago Past Grand President Wittenmyer suggested that if each Native Daughter saved a penny a day we could soon get a large amount for the Home. Accordingly, Keith Parlor has started a penny mabeh in the Parlor, each member depositing, at each meeting, what she has saved. This Parlor is to be especially commended, as its members have shown a liberal broadness far above petty prejudice. May they be fully repaid in greater joy of living and sweetness of spirit; may they always act independent of praise or blame.

"Only the Master shall praise us,
And only the Master shall blame;
And no one shall work for money,
And no one shall work for fame;
But each for the joy of working,
And each in his separate star,
Shall draw the thing as he sees it
For the God of Things as they are."

GRAND PARLOR NATIVE DAUGHTERS GOLDEN WEST.

Grass Valley, March 14, 1914.

To the Subordinate Parlors, N.D.G.W.—Dear Sisters: Your attention is hereby called to legislation of 1912—"That Subordinate Parlors devote one day in May of each year to some form of entertainment for the purpose of raising funds to aid the Native Daughters' Home."

The month of May will soon be here. There is need of prompt action, that entertainments may be successfully planned, and returns made and acknowledged before the coming session of the Grand Parlor. For the unbounded success of this cause, I ask each and every Native Daughter to "Bring her best in thought and word and deed,

Nor save them for some future hour or goal. Here is the place, and now the time of need, Here in 'Our Home'."

Dear sisters, no matter how little the aid, give it loyally and lovingly. Please send checks to Past Grand President C. K. Wittenmyer, Mills College, California.

Sincerely and fraternally yours, in P.D.F.A.,

ALISON F. WATT,
Grand President, N.D.G.W.

tola was there recently to lecture on "Hygiene" to the Women's Club, and was entertained at dinner in the evening by the following Native Daughters: Mrs. Mary Piratsky, Mrs. L. Sheehy, Mrs. M. Coward, Miss Dora Zinnowski, Mrs. Maniseo, Mrs. Kempke, Miss M. Boyd, Miss J. Ross, Mrs. Alice Morse. With these enthusiastic members, it is certain that El Pajaro Parlor, No. 35, must grow in strength and power; they must exert great influence for good in their Parlor and in the community in which they live.

Donations for February were: From Golden Gate Parlor, a beautiful picture of the Golden Gate; Bahia Vista Parlor, $5 cash; Presidio Parlor, $5 cash; Santa Cruz Parlor, $3 cash; Miss Minnie Spillman, member of Alta Parlor, made and donated a beautiful linen bureau scarf; Miss Emma Dellwig, of Buena Vista Parlor, very cleverly covered a lounge; Sterling Parlor donated one dozen embroidered face towels, and one dozen bath towels.

One large attic-room is still unfurnished; it needs two three-quarter beds with mattresses, two dressers, one small table, two chairs. It also needs to have two large windows take the place of the three small ones it now contains. It should be newly papered. A 9 x 12 rug should be put upon the floor. Any Parlor who desires to assist, may equip this room, the size of which is about 16 x 20 feet.

There are two guests at the Home: Mrs. Jones, a member of Golden State Parlor, and Miss Louise Maceord, a member of Alta Parlor.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

RIPPLES AND RUFFLES ARE COMING in strongly. The new models are showing these effects as the features of the spring, and as we look back on the tier and minaret effects we have been making, and on the pleatings shown last spring, we can easily see how the tendency to ripples and ruffles is the natural outcome.

All the newest models show flounces and pleatings that add flare to the bottom of jackets, coats and tunics, and have become a very chic trimming feature, more and more used.

The short jackets are often finished on the bottom with pleatings or flounces, with the extreme godet ripple. Coats have the flounces and ripple effects applied in a number of novel ways. The hips of the latest skirts are widened by ripple tunic effects of one or more tiers, by flounces finished with pleating, or by one or two ruffles.

Full Variety.

Cloth skirts, with ruffles or pleating of taffeta, make nice separate skirts to be worn with taffeta blouses. Dresses were never more full of variety than this spring.

The use of taffeta, net or crepe is indicated for these ruffles and pleatings, according to the type of garment. For a cloth suit, coat or separate skirt, taffeta combines well in tailored styles. For dresses of any type of silk, especially in "dressy" designs, net and crepe combine well as ruffles or pleatings.

Collar Novelties

Collars should stand away from the neck as much as possible. The Japanese-fold collars, or Paquin-hood collars as they were at first known, are very fashionable for kimono-cut garments and oriental effects. The crinolined Pickadilly with flaring points—is adaptable to many styles; it is also known as the Norman collar.

The cavalier ruff, a modification of the Elizabethan ruff, used on a collarless garment without revers and made of silk instead of lace or net, is finished smartly at each side with a large button or an ornament and tassel. Shawl collars are used on strictly plain tailored garments, and tuxedo collars on some of the smart short jackets.

The "Serpentine Skirt."

Etons are coming in strongly, especially those that are cut short at the back and front but extend below the waist line on the sides.

The "serpentine" or "snake" skirt is a new idea. Those who have seen the serpentine dance, so popular with stage productions, will recall the grace of the whirling draperies. This was produced with veils of diaphanous chiffon, but it is possible to get from soft silks and cloths, that drape well, an equally graceful spiral effect in a skirt that is something out of the ordinary and yet just in line with spring styles. The skirt may be produced as follows:

It is cut in two pieces: a plain tailored skirt narrowing at the bottom and scant in width throughout, then a fold of the material is cut from two and a half to four inches in width, according to the kind of material used and the effect to be produced, and about twice the length of the skirt, that it may encircle the skirt in spiral flat flouncing.

Beginning at the waist line and winding around, ending at the seam opposite the side on which the flounce started at the waist, the flounce is stitched on the skirt.

Coats of All Sorts.

In coatings, there is a special line of sport coats that calls for novelty effects and high collars, for which the light-weight spring chinchillas, velours, duvetyn and golfines are much used in the brightened colors and in white and check patterns. These sport coats are a development of the mackinaws, and the same class of rough-faced goods in plaids and waffle checks are especially good for them.

For silk coats, taffetas, moires, poplins, bengalines and tussah are all good. The afternoon cloth coat is also showing combinations of silk frills, pleats and ruffles, for which taffeta is in much demand.

For automobile and storm coats, the English tweeds and gabardines, rough finish effects in wool coating, will be worn. For suiting the crepe cloths are considered the best things in the market, with velours and all novelty goods—worsted in shadow checks of all sorts, and mixtures of soft woolsens of all the new shades and novelties—in demand in coatings.

New and Beautiful Trimmings.

As for trimmings, the fancy effects of the season have called out a wonderful range of new and beautiful ideas. For girdles and sashes, facings of collars or tunics meant to show, and for collars and cuffs, also vests, bright patterned silks, brocades and prints are used the same.

Ruchings are used for collars and also for finishing the waist line of skirts.

Buckles and buttons of all novelty effects are much used. Also slides, in connection with girdles and sashes.

One of the features of the spring, which was introduced last season, is the use of tubular piping. The piping is used for frogs and ornaments, in the material of the garment, or in a silk of some contrasting color.

Small Hats Hold Sway.

Despite all criticism to the contrary, women are becoming more insistent upon comfort in apparel every season, and having once experienced the delights afforded by small, well-fitting hats, are loth to give them up for unmanageable, broad-brimmed ones. So, once again, small hats hold the situation.

There are innumerable clever arrangements of trimming, to supply the grace which, in shape, they may lack. Height is added in various ways—for instance, by the tall plaiting of moire ribbon on the hat. Pointed wire loops help to trim.

Velvet or chiffon veiling silk is used repeatedly for crowns, with an effective application of jet grapes and black satin; the front trimming is repeated at the back. Ribbon flowers and feathers dominate the trimmings used on the new hats for elderly women, which are lightened with flutings of lace and plaitings of billowy tulle. Ottoman ribbon, with a fancy embroidered edge, trims satisfactorily. Tiny clusters of violets and all French flowers make a pretty finish.

Black Frock Always in Style.

A black satin frock is a most desirable possession. You can wear it anywhere, at any time, and feel comfortable in it. If you have one that is slightly old-fashioned, you will be able to make it over nicely. Get some figured plaid, striped taffeta or surah to go with it. Make the skirt plain, draped if possible. Arrange the blouse in the drop-shoulder style, and below the drop line, which is scalloped on the edge, attach sleeves of satin. It would be a good idea to make two pairs of sleeves and attach them with snap fasteners—one pair of black satin for afternoon wear, and the other pair of chiffon to harmonize with the silk of the blouse.

SPORT COAT AND PARASOL FOR OUTING.
—Design, Jacoby's, Los Angeles.

If you have no dress that could be made over into this one, try and match up some remnants of three different fabrics, say plain satin or taupe for the skirt, brocade for the waist, and silk or satin to match the brocade for the sleeves, girdle and collar, or short lengths of light weight wool could be combined.

Nothing Impossible.

Think what they would have said if we had suggested to our mothers the use of velvet coats to wear with their organdie summer gowns; or their surprise at seeing tulle dancing frocks trimmed with fur; or, for instance, metal bodices worn with tulle overskirts and underneath the tulle a short skirt of brilliantly colored velvet.

I think of how we use heavy-weight materials, such as the new brocade moire, with delicate laces and nets. Nothing seems impossible in the way of combining different materials.

In accessories of clothes, the tunic is the dominant inclination more than any other one thing, barring, I should say, the sash or girdle.

Forest fires in the United States have caused an average annual loss of seventy human lives and the destruction of twenty-five million dollars' worth of timber.

HOME INDUSTRY LEAGUE OF CALIFORNIA

SPREADS FAME OF HIS NATIVE STATE

(Address Delivered by CONGRESSMAN JOSEPH R. KNOWLAND of Alameda, before the Tenth Annual Convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, Washington, December 4, 1913, and by Unanimous Consent Published in the "Congressional Record.") of California, whose beauties and wonders are indescribable.

Had the ancestors of these gentlemen first landed upon the shores of that Pacific wonderland the great Eastern states mentioned would to-day, I fear, be deprived of the valuable services of their two most able champions. Should I attempt to describe the resources of my native State, or endeavor to enumerate the great things we are accomplishing, my time would be exhausted before I touched the subject to which I am supposed to address myself. We hope, however, to welcome the delegates of this convention to California in 1915 so that you may see for yourselves what words are inadequate to describe.

Mare Island Operates at Less Expense.

Referring but briefly to the criticisms by Gov. Glynn of the expenditure of $6,000,000 and more at the Mare Island Navy Yard, located in California, I will say that modesty prevents me from directing attention to the fact that I have, until very recently, represented the district in which that yard is located, and that during my term a great part of the large sum was appropriated. Should I reply, I might be compelled—although of course it would greatly embarrass me—to direct attention to the fact that the large and generous appropriations demonstrated the advisability of sending live men to Congress. Just a word, however, touching the utility of the Mare Island Navy Yard and the efficiency of its working force: Several ships have been built there, and during recent years three naval colliers or fuel ships. Sister ships in two instances were under construction at the same time at the New York Navy Yard, and when the Navy Department figured up the cost, the plans being identical, it was found that the Mare Island Navy Yard, way out in California, had built both ships for less money. But I must get to my subject.

Pacific Coast Ports Preparing for Canal Opening.

The people of the Pacific Coast are fully alive to the tremendous importance of immediately enlarging and otherwise improving the terminal facilities at the various ports to meet the increased demands of commerce expected with the opening, in the almost immediate future, of the Panama Canal.

Experience extending over a period of many years has demonstrated the advantages and necessity of state or municipal control as contrasted with that of corporations and individuals. This awakening has in many localities, resulted in the institution of actions in the courts and in insistent demands for legislation aimed to place the ownership and administration of terminals in the hands of the people, where they belong, so as to accord to the smallest shipper the same advantages and facilities which heretofore and in too many instances were enjoyed exclusively by favored corporations and large shippers.

Legislates to Prevent Throttling Water Competition.

In so far as it exercises jurisdiction, the Congress of the United States has endeavored to assist in the movement to provide for the fullest utilization by all the people of the great rivers and harbors of the country, upon which there has been expended by the Government nearly $700,000,000. Not only has Congress provided for the funds for improvement, but it has gone a step further and enacted legislation to prevent the throttling of these watercourses, the great highways of the people, where exclusive franchises and rights of way cannot be granted.

Much of this recent legislation aimed to maintain the competitive value of these waterways has emanated from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House of Representatives. As a member of this committee and an enthusiastic advocate of the fullest development of our waterways, I am proud to say that in the framing of some of this legislation I have taken at least a small part. Before discussing the terminal facilities of Pacific Coast ports, I will refer very briefly to a few of the recent legislative enactments aimed to aid in the nation-wide movement, led by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, for a maximum utilization of the facilities for water transportation.

Proposed Legislation to Protect Water Traffic.

In 1910, when the bill creating an interstate commerce court and amendatory of the then existing interstate commerce act was pending before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, it contained a proposed section, known as section 12, which provided that no railroad corporation which was a common carrier subject to the act to regulate commerce should hereafter acquire, directly or indirectly, any interest of whatsoever kind in the capital stock of any railroad, or purchase or lease any railroad with which it was directly and substantially competitive. I proposed an amendment in committee adding water carriers to the inhibition, which the committee adopted.

The bill as then amended provided that railroads could not acquire competing water carriers or water carriers purchase competing railroads. On the floor this section was stricken out, and I need not here mention the influences that were responsible for its elimination. While this same bill was pending in the House I proposed the following amendment, which was adopted by a vote of—ayes 106, nays 77: "Whenever a carrier by railroad in competition with a water route or routes shall reduce the from owning competing water lines, the Panama Canal act of 1912 squarely meets the situation. The act provides, in section 11, that after the 1st day of July, 1914, it shall be unlawful for any railroad company or common carrier, subject to the act to regulate commerce, to own, lease, operate, control, or have any interest whatsoever in any common carrier by water, operated, not only through the canal but elsewhere, with which such railroad does or may compete for traffic. It also confers upon the Interstate Commerce Commission power to extend the time during which railroads may operate such water lines if, after investigation, they are convinced that such water service is being operated in the interest of the public and is of advantage to the convenience and commerce of the people. This extension, however, cannot be granted to railroads, which would operate ships through the Panama Canal in violation of the act, applying only to other localities.

Free Tolls In Interest of Shippers.

The framers of this law, anticipating conditions likely to prevail with the opening of the canal, conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission additional powers, enabling that body to establish physical connections between railroads and the docks of water carriers. The commission was also empowered to establish through routes and maximum joint rates between rail and water lines; to establish maximum proportional rates by rail to and from the ports to which traffic is brought or from which it is taken by the water carrier.

If interstate railroads enter into arrangements with water carriers operating from a port in the United States to a foreign country, through the Panama Canal or otherwise, for the handling of through business between interior points of the United States and such foreign country, the Interstate Commerce Commission may require such railroad to enter into similar arrangements with any other steamship.

Vessels permitted to engage in the coastwise or foreign trade of the United States are prohibited, under this act, from passing through the canal if such ships are owned or controlled by persons or companies violating the Sherman antitrust law. The provision granting free tolls through the Panama Canal to American coastwise ships is in the interest of the water shipper.

Thus it can be seen that Congress has taken advanced steps that should give an impetus to the movement for the public control of water terminals. The Pacific Coast is moving rapidly in this direction, as I shall attempt to show. (Here Mr. Knowland referred, as follows, to the California ports):

Port of San Francisco.

Practically the entire harbor front of San Francisco, approximately eight miles in length, is under State control and administered by a board of three State Harbor Commissioners appointed by the Governor. The port of San Francisco receives no appropriation from the State or city. The State law requires that the harbor must be self-supporting, the cost of improvements, including the building of wharves, dredging, and the construction of sea walls, together with the expenses of administration, to be provided for out of the receipts. There is also a provision stipulating that harbor charges shall not exceed such rates as necessary to meet the cost of construction, operation, and maintenance. In private hands, returns would be demanded upon the total value of the property and improvements, with the result that much higher rates would be charged. The belt railroad is controlled by the board. Practically no long leases have been granted, and every shipper can obtain accommodation at reasonable rates.

Prior to 1911, the State had control of the water front and tide lands of the chief harbors of California, namely, San Francisco, Oakland, Los Angeles, San Diego, and Eureka. At the session of the Legislature which convened that year the State of California transferred these water fronts and tide lands, with the exception of San Francisco and Eureka, to the respective cities upon which they border.

Among the commercial bodies of San Francisco there has been considerable agitation in favor of turning over to that city the control of the water front, the claim being made that San Francisco has no voice in its management. Now, when it is desired to issue bonds for improvements on the San Francisco water front, it is first necessary to appeal to the Legislature to submit to the people a bond issue, which the voters of the entire State must approve at the next general election. Even when this is rates on the transportation of any kind of traffic it shall not be permitted to increase such rates unless after hearing by the Interstate Commerce Commission it shall be found that such proposed increase rests upon changed conditions other than the elimination of water competition."

Panama Canal Act Protects Shippers.

With but slight change in phraseology this amendment remained in the bill and is now a part of the interstate commerce law. Its effect has been generally beneficial, but it did not go far enough to meet conditions that it was believed would exist with the opening of the Panama Canal. This is why there was written into the Panama Canal act, at the insistence of Pacific Coast shippers, the section that prevents railroad owned ships from passing through the Panama Canal where they "compete" with their rail lines for business. Such "competition" is fake competition aimed to minimize the competitive value of this great waterway. This provision does not deny, as some charge, railroad owned or controlled ships access to the canal when engaged in foreign trade. In line with what I regard as sound public policy, it prevents railroads from practically paralleling their own rail lines by boats, which should not be permitted if the canal is to be of any real value to shippers throughout the United States.

While we were not successful in 1910 in writing into the law an amendment preventing railroads

IN FAVOR OF HOME RULE.

San Francisco—At the meeting of Olympus Parlor, No. 189, N. S. G. W., March 18th, the election of delegates and alternates to the Thirty-seventh Grand Parlor was held. It was attended by the largest number of members in the history of the Parlor, and the contest was one of the hottest ever held.

The vote on resolution No. 4 was carried in favor of home rule. A resolution to join the Grizzly Bear Club was carried almost unanimously, there being but three opposing votes. Three new members were initiated and two suspended members were reinstated. The Parlor has started a grand whist tournament for valuable prizes, beginning in March.

CELEBRATES ARBOR DAY

HAS ST. PATRICK'S DANCE.

Santa Barbara—In celebration of St. Patrick's day, Reina del Mar Parlor, No. 126, N.D.G.W., gave a brilliant and successful dancing party at Elks' Hall which was tastefully decorated, an appropriate feature being the graceful union, on the stage, of the American and Irish flags, joined together with fish net trimmed with asparagus ferns and smilax. These same beautiful greens were skillfully used in festooning the chandeliers around the walls, a scheme which, in conjunction with the crimson paper shades, created an exquisitely pretty effect. About 150 couples participated. Good music was provided, and dainty refreshments served. The committee of arrangements was composed of Miss Lydia Whitney, president of the Parlor; Misses Edith and Mahel Probert, Margaret McKenzie, Marjorie Greenwell, Ella Jones, Ida Blaine, Elisa Orella, Stella Myers, Sallie Walker, Beatrice Ruiz, May Hubel and Elisa Bottiani, and was given valuable assistance by Annie E. McCaughey and Mrs. Grant Leslie.

Arbor Day was celebrated March 11th by the Parlor with the planting of trees at McKinley school. The attendance was large, including the school children, their parents and friends, public officials, and a large delegation from the Parlor. The initial feature of the program was the hoisting of the National and Bear flags, the latter of which was presented by Reina del Mar. After the singing of the flag song by the school children, Miss Eva C. McPhail, principal of McKinley school, as director of ceremonies, introduced Leon Dawson, who delivered an interesting talk on birds.

Following the singing of "I Love You, California," by the children, Lydia Whitney, president of Reina del Mar Parlor, in a few well-chosen words, presented the trees. E. A. Gilbert, president of the city park commission, spoke on the intelligent planting of trees, and Lonnie Forhush, a former McKinley school pupil, voiced a message from the high school, of which he is now a student, telling the duties of the community in tree planting.

After the singing of "America" by the children and all of the others in the assemblage, the trees were given to the boys chosen to plant them, and they were set into the ground in expert fashion, and with the evident conviction of the workers that they were doing well good men's work.

FORMATION EAST BAY

COUNTIES ASSEMBLY, P. P. A.

Oakland—The institution of the East Bay Counties Assembly of the Past President's Association was held March 18th, the degree team of the San Francisco Assembly officiating at the ceremonies of initiation, institution and installation of the elected officers of the new Assembly. The officers elected for the ensuing term follow: Governor, Harry G. Williams, Oakland, No. 50; first vice-governor, W. J. Muntz, Estudillo, No. 223; second vice-governor, A. J. Summers, Richmond, No. 217; third vice-governor, J. P. Brennan, Berkeley, No. 210; Chaplain, J. F. Hoey, Mt Diablo, No. 101; recording secretary, J. P. Barry, Piedmont, No. 120; financial secretary, L. G. Jackson, Athens, No. 195; treasurer, J. J. Dignan, Piedmont, No. 120; trustees—J. R. Knowland, Halyon, No. 146, W. J. Dolan, Bay View, No. 238, D. C. Dutton, Fruitvale, No. 252; sergeant-at-arms, W. T. O'Connor, Claremont, No. 240; inside sentinel, W. J. De Blois, Brooklyn, No. 151; outside sentinel, A. Kihn, Alameda, No. 47.

The charter membership list numbers 125 and it is expected it will reach two hundred when closed the latter part of April. The plan of organization involves four meetings yearly, which will take the form of social gatherings at the banquet board, on which occasions the committee representing the various phases of past president activity will present their reports for ratification by the main body. It is expected that this plan for the transaction of routine business will find strong favor at the hands of those who have earned a rest from the transaction of routine labor, and will materially aid in the prompt and efficient dispatch of related business.

WILL INITIATE BIG CLASS.

Stockton—The members of Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, N.D.G.W., are not permitting any grass to grow under their feet in making preparations for Admission Day, 1915. A committee consisting of Mrs. Caddie Salix, Mrs. Mamie Manthey and Mrs. Mattie Porter is actively engaged raising a fund to defray the expenses of Joaquin Parlor's participation in the big celebration in the exposition grounds. They desire to raise $1,800 and have made a fair start on the fund. The committee had charge of the Colonial theater March 5th and netted a fine sum as a result of its efforts.

The Parlor is looking forward to the official visit of Grand President Alison F. Watt on April 14th. A splendid program will be given, and a class of about fifteen candidates will be initiated.

HISTORY LECTURES

AROUSE GREAT INTEREST

Stockton—Stockton Parlor, No. 7, N.S.G.W., celebrated its thirty-third anniversary, March 12th, with special exercises at the Auditorium. Grand Second Vice-president John F. Davis of San Francisco was the speaker of the evening, and delivered one of the most interesting and inspiring addresses ever heard by a Stockton audience. The eloquent grand officer took for his subject "California, Romantic and Resourceful," and gave his large audience more intensely interesting inside facts in connection with the settling and developing of California than they could have obtained from weeks of careful reading. As a result, scores of people outside the Order have manifested a desire to attend future lectures on early California history now being given under the auspices of Stockton Parlor.

President John W. Kerrick of the Parlor called the meeting to order, and introduced Leroy S. Atwood, one of the charter members, as the chairman of the evening. Selections were rendered by the student band from the Stockton high school. Mrs. George E. Housken, Miss Myrtle Stephens and Frank T. Smith sang pleasingly and the audience emphasized the fact that Stockton is proud of its high-class voices. One of the features of the evening was the reading of a letter from Dr. George F. Pache of Angels Camp congratulating Stockton Parlor on its anniversary and requesting the privilege of subscribing for $500 worth of stock in the Native Sons' Hall Association of Stockton. The celebration was brought to a close with an informal dance.

Protests at Name Butchering.

Stockton Parlor's series of lectures on various phases of early California history has aroused much interest and enthusiasm. The last lecture was given by Assistant District Attorney C. P. Rendon after the regular meeting of the Parlor, February 23rd. He spoke on "The Early Spanish and Mexican Occupation of California." Much charm was given to the talk by the speaker's pronunciation of the various California geographical names which are of Spanish, Mexican and Indian origin. Mr. Rendon protested against the "butchering" of California names by improper pronunciation. "To me," said he, "these California names are so beautiful, so full of harmony, so sweet and suggestive of romance and local application that I don't see how any Native Son or Native Daughter can fail in the desire to know them better and to pronounce them correctly."

Building Project Bowling Along.

The Natives' new building project is bowling along toward success. At the time of this writing the stock subscriptions of the Native Sons' Hall Association of Stockton aggregate something over $47,000, including $20,000 pledged by Stockton Parlor. The project has been incorporated for $200,000, divided into 20,000 shares at $10 each. The stock is being sold on an easy payment plan of 4 per cent down and 2 per cent per month. As soon as a sufficient amount of money has been paid in, a site will be purchased. About four years hence, when the final payments are being made on the subscriptions, it is expected that the building will be well under way and nearing completion. The officers of the association are: George E. Catts, president; Thomas H. Luke, vice-president; G. E. Reynolds, secretary; A. J. Turner, treasurer. These, with W. C. Neumiller, Robert A. Reid, Orrin S. Henderson, Edward Van Vranken, William E. O'Connor, John W. Kerrick and Martin O. Schneider constitute the board of directors.

HAVE DELIGHTFUL OUTING.

San Francisco—March 8th, twenty-five members of La Estrella Parlor, No. 89, N.D.G.W., crossed the bay to the country home of May Barry, San Anselmo, where they celebrated Arbor Day. A most delectable repast was served on the lawn of Chateau de Barry, after which tree planting took place with appropriate ceremonies, two pepper trees and a cypress being planted on the grounds of the cozy little home. The first, planted by Hannah Barry, president of the Parlor, was named "La Estrella"; the second, by Grand Vice-president May Boldemann, was named "California," and the third was named after May Barry's little daughter, Dorothy. The beautiful surroundings, aided by a glorious California day and the gay summer attire of the girls, made the occasion an ideal one—not to mention the hospitality shown by the hostess. All had such a delightful time, they were loath to leave for home at the appointed time.

THIRTY-SEVENTH GRAND PARLOR, N. S. G. W.

LIVELY CONTESTS AMONG MANY aspirants have marked the election of delegates to the Thirty-seventh Grand Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, in the Subordinate Parlors. Reports to The Grizzly Bear from every part of the State, almost without exception, set forth that the election was the "hottest" in the Parlor's history.

The Grand Parlor will assemble at the Temple Auditorium, Los Angeles, Monday, April 20th, at 10:30 a.m., and the business sessions will, according to the program outlined for the week set apart for the gathering, include sessions all day Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Delegates in and around San Francisco will make the trip by steamer, leaving San Francisco the afternoon of April 18th and arriving in Los Angeles at 11 o'clock the following morning. Those from other parts of the State will travel by rail, and nearly all of them will arrive in the southern city some time during April 19th.

Grand President Thomas Monahan of San Jose will preside at the session, and Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung of San Francisco—than whom no organization has a more efficient man in that important office—will be at his post of duty. All the Grand Officers will be in attendance, and reports to the Los Angeles Arrangements Committee indicate that every Past Grand President will attend the session.

Many Parlors Cited.

What had promised to make the coming Grand Parlor a lively one, has practically been settled since the Oroville session by the Board of Appeals. This is the matter of leaving optional with Subordinate Parlors the payment of sick and death benefits. The question was hotly debated at Oroville and referred to the Los Angeles session, the Grand Secretary being instructed to submit the matter to the several Parlors for an expression of opinion. In the interim, the question went to the Board of Appeals on appeal from Ramona Parlor, and the Board has held that the laws already provide for optional payments. This decision, therefore, will in all probability eliminate the necessity for further controversy over this much-mooted question.

The Board of Appeals, as at Oroville, will have a lengthy session, as complaints against many Subordinate Parlors for violation of the laws pertaining to the initiation of new members have been filed and will be heard. It is also rumored that other Parlors will be cited to defend themselves against the charge of violating the law of the Order prohibiting the holding of Sunday picnics, excursions, etc.

Three matters which have frequently been voted down by the Grand Parlor will, it is hinted, bob up again: Granting of charters to proposed parlors outside the State; providing for "auxiliary" and "honorary" members of Subordinate Parlors; conferring membership in the Grand Parlor, as delegates, to past presidents of Subordinate Parlors. It is not probable, however, that any of these proposals will receive any more favorable consideration than has been accorded them at previous Grand Parlor sessions.

To Encourage Home Building.

An attempt will, it is rumored, be made to put a damper on the organization of bands in Subordinate Parlors by passing legislation which will so limit the rights of the musically-inclined members in the dispensing of music that the bands will be of no benefit to the Parlors and hence will cease to be for lack of enthusiasm.

Provision will be made for the Order's part in the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco next year. The exposition management has named Admission Day, September 9th, "California Day," and delegated the arranging for its due observance to the Order. The Subordinate Parlors are already preparing for the occasion, and it is safe to say that it will be the biggest day of the exposition.

Many requests for the Order's financial assistance in landmarks work will come up for consideration, and it is very likely that provision will be made for an additional Fellowship in Pacific Coast History at the University of California, Berkeley.

The building of Native Sons' halls is projected in many cities, and as the Grand Parlor assisted financially in the erection of the handsome edifice in San Francisco, the Grand Parlor will be asked, it is rumored, to take stock or purchase bonds in one or more of these projects. It is contended that the Grand Parlor should aid all such undertakings, to so encourage building operations that eventually every city and town in the State will have its Native Sons hall.

Several plans will be submitted for the creation of more interest, among eligible non-members, in the work of the Order, to the end that they may affiliate with it and lend their assistance in its work.

Three-Cornered Contest.

A very interesting contest has sprung up between Vallejo and Santa Rosa for this year's Admission Day celebration. Both cities will have goodly delegations of "boosters" at Los Angeles to urge their claims. San Francisco will, without opposition, be awarded both the 1915 Grand Parlor and Admission Day celebration. Modesto will be on hand again to announce that the Stanislaus County city wants the 1916 Grand Parlor.

Officers for the ensuing year will be chosen the last day of the session, Friday, April 25th. The fact that there are three aspirants for the Grand Third Vice-presidency, the stepping-stone (by precedent, only), to the Grand Presidency, insures an unusually interesting contest. Three of the present members of the Board of Grand Trustees—Jo V. Snyder of Nevada City, James J. McElroy of Oakland and William P. Cauba of San Francisco—seek this honor, and each will be aided in his campaign by a coterie of supporters from among the membership of his Subordinate Parlor.

Would Serve as Grand Trustees.

But three of the present members of the Board of Grand Trustees—William F. Toomey of Fresno, William I. Traeger of Los Angeles and Judge J. J. Van Nostrand of San Francisco—will seek re-election. Fairfax Wheelan, also a member, in a letter to The Grizzly Bear, says: "I regret very much to say that business matters will prevent me from aspiring once again for the position of Grand Trustee. I appreciate most deeply the honor that the Order was good enough to confer upon me, and am indeed sorry that conditions demand that I shall not be a candidate for re-election. However, I am sure that you will understand that I stand ready to render service to our Order as heartily and willingly in the ranks as if I were fortunate enough to be numbered amongst its Grand Trustees." This does not mean, however, that there will be any dearth of candidates for the seven positions on the Board. At this writing, the following have announced their candidacy, and there is every assurance that the list will be doubled before election day:

George A. Burns, Sacramento 3, Sacramento.

Joseph A. Belloli, Jr., San Jose 22, San Jose.

William F. Toomey, Fresno 25, Fresno.

William J. Wynn, Rincon 72, San Francisco.

Judge John J. Van Nostrand, Stanford 76, San Francisco.

James F. Hoey, Mt. Diablo 101, Martinez.

William I. Traeger, Ramona 109, Los Angeles.

William J. Hayes, Berkeley 210, Berkeley.

W. J. Farrell (Petaluma 27), at present Grand Outside Sentinel, aspires to the Grand Inside Sentinelship, and Dr. Mervyn Resing of Rincon Parlor, No. 12, San Francisco, aspires to become the Grand Marshal. For the higher offices there will be no opposition, those occupying them being advanced one station.

Present Officers Will Be Advanced.

Louis H. Mooser (Presidio 194) of San Francisco, who has served the Order faithfully and well for many years, and is recognized as the most fearless—but, at the same time fair and impartial,—grand officer the Order has ever had, will assume the Grand Presidency.

Judge John F. Davis (Exeelsior 31) of San Francisco, conceded to be one of the State's most brilliant orators and unquestionably the best-informed member of the Order in California history, will become the Grand First Vice-president.

Bismarck Bruck (St. Helena 53) of St. Helena, one of Napa Valley's prominent grape-growers, who for years has been an untiring worker in the Order's "ranks," will be elevated to the Grand Second Vice-presidency.

Thomas Monahan (San Jose 23), Mayor of San Jose, who has given years of service to the Order and been foremost in aiding all undertakings for the Order's benefit, will assume the duties of Junior Past Grand President.

Clarence E. Jarvis (Amador 17) of Sutter Creek, Assessor of Amador County, who will have completed his years of service in all the offices within the gift of the Grand Parlor, will, much to the TEMPLE AUDITORIUM (CENTER OF THREE BUILDINGS FACING CENTRAL PARK), WHERE GRAND PARLOR SESSIONS WILL BE HELD.

GOING TO LOS ANGELES? THEN READ THIS, AND ACT.

The necessity for all those who will attend the Los Angeles Grand Parlor—either as regular members of the Grand Parlor, delegates-elect, or visitors,—making reservations through the Accommodations Committee of the Los Angeles Grand Parlor Entertainment Committee is urged.

It is not a question of rooms, for they are plentiful. But it is a matter of much importance, both to the attendants and the Los Angeles committee, that the visitors secure RIGHT locations at RIGHT prices, and these are guaranteed by the Accommodations Committee, when reservations are made through it.

This committee is at the service of those who will visit Los Angeles, but its services will be of no avail unless it is supplied with information as to who's coming and what's wanted. For this reason, it is necessary that secretaries immediately notify the committee of the NAMES and ADDRESSES of delegates-elect, and advise other members who contemplate visiting Los Angeles to address the committee.

The matter of reservation should be attended to NOW. Address, regret of his many friends who admire him for what he really is, will retire from "active" service and join that faithful band, the Past Grand Presidents.
Accommodations Committee, N.S.G.W.,
248 Wilcox Bldg., Los Angeles, California.

Fred H. Jung (Stauford 76) of San Francisco, Grand Secretary, and John E. McDougald (California 1) of San Francisco, Grand Treasurer, will, so far as known, have no opposition for re-election.

The Thirty-seventh Grand Parlor will be made up of the following:

Make-up of Grand Parlor.

Junior Past Grand President, Clarence E. Jarvis.
Grand President, Thomas Monahan.
Grand First Vice-president, Louis H. Mooser.
Grand Second Vice-president, John F. Davis.
Grand Third Vice-president, Bisuarek Bruck.
Grand Secretary, Fred H. Jung.
Grand Treasurer, John E. McDougald.
Grand Marshal, Harry G. Williams.
Grand Inside Sentinel, Charles P. Mosconi.
Grand Outside Sentinel, William J. Farrell.
Grand Organist, Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel.
Historiographer, Daniel Q. Troy.
Grand Trustees—William F. Toomey, Jo V. Snyder, Fairfax Wheelan, James J. McElroy, William I. Trieger, William P. Cauby, Judge John J. Van Nostrand.

Board of Appeals—Harry I. Mulerevy, Fred A. Stephenson, Bernard J. Flood, W. H. L. Hynes, J. Clem Bates.

Past Grand Presidents—John H. Grady, Major A. F. Jones, Fred H. Greeley, Dr. Chas. W. Decker, William H. Miller, R. M. Fitzgerald, Senator Thomas Flint, Jr., Judge Frank H. Dunne, Judge Henry C. Gesford, George D. Clark, Judge William M. Conley, Frank Mattison, Hon. Frank L. Coombs, Lewis F. Byington, Hugh R. McNoble, Judge Charles E. McLaughlin, Walter D. Wagner, Judge Maurice T. Dooling, Senator C. M. Belshaw, Congressman Joseph R. Knowland, Daniel A. Ryan, H. C. Lichtenberger.

Delegates:

Subordinate Parlor delegates, as far as received by The Grizzly Bear up to the time of going to press, will include:

BERKELEY PARLOR WILL PRESENT GRAND TRUSTEE CANDIDATE.

Berkeley—Berkeley Parlor, No. 210, N.S.G.W., will present the name of Wm. J. Hayes to the 1914 Grand Parlor for the office of Grand Trustee, and asks consideration and support of each and every delegate to the Los Angeles session in his behalf. "Bill" Hayes, as he is familiarly known to a large circle of friends and acquaintances, is a past president of Berkeley Parlor and has been a delegate to three successive Grand Parlors, representing Berkeley Parlor at Santa Cruz, Oroville and Fresno.

Grand President Thomas Monahan appointed him on the Committee on Fellowships in Pacific Coast History at the University of California, and he has served as secretary of the committee during the past year. He is a graduate of the University of California and a practicing attorney of Oakland and Berkeley. He has a large number of friends and acquaintances in all parts of the State, and is in a position to render valuable service to the Order. He has at all times been an active and earnest worker in his own Parlor and for the cause of the Order at large. Berkeley Parlor realizes the importance of selecting the proper men to represent the Native Sons of the Golden West on its Board of Grand Trustees, and in Mr. Hayes, Berkeley feels assured that it has a Native Son who will honor the office as the office will honor him, and one who will work for the good of the Order at all times, justifying every confidence that is placed in him.—(Published at Parlor's request.)

CALIFORNIA SINGER DIES.

Stockton—Native Daughters throughout the State will learn with regret of the death of Miss Kathrin Hilke, the noted American dramatic soprano, in New York City, March 8th. Miss Hilke was a sister of Mrs. Lena Hilke Mills, a former Grand President of the N.D.G.W., who presided at the session of the Grand Parlor in Stockton in 1899, when her sister, the famous singer, sang for the delegates. The Stockton singer went to New York to win her way to fame just twenty-three years ago. Her first appearance in the great American metropolis won instant recognition from the critics, and her Eastern tours were great successes. At the time of her death, she was soloist in St. Patrick's cathedral, New York, and also of the Beth-El synagogue of that city.

She is survived by her aged father, Nicholas C. Hilke, who came to California fifty-six years ago, five sisters, Misses Louise and Emma Hilke of Stockton, Mrs. John S. Mills of Piedmont, Mrs. A. M. Aitken of Oakland and Miss Nettie Hilke of Oakland, and one brother, Charles N. Hilke of Stockton.

Will the Native Sons and Daughters Save the State of California?

At the next election the prohibitionists would vote the entire State dry—

Thereby destroying our entire Wine industry—

Insuring the absolute failure of our Expositions,

Ruining our Celebrations of all kinds,

And preventing the manufacture of Wines, Beer and kindred beverages, as well as denying the right of the citizens of this State to import or export any champagnes, wines, beer or other spirituous liquids.

To prevent this appalling calamity descending upon this great State we appeal to all thinking men and women to Register immediately and vote on November 3rd against this threatened evil.

Yours for the good of the State,

NATIVE SONS HALL, SAN FRANCISCO

ITS HISTORY, REVENUE, AND SIGNIFICANCE

(By HON. JAMES D. PHELAN, President N.S.G.W. Hall Association, San Francisco.)

THE FIRST MEETING OF the Board of Directors of the Hall Association of the Native Sons of the Golden West was held at Native Sons Hall in the Pioneer Building, 24 Fourth street, San Francisco, March 13, 1894. The thirty-six directors who represented the stockholders at that meeting were: John H.

Grady, John T. Greany, John A. Steinbach, Lewis F. Byington, James D. Phelan, Adolph Eberhart, Jos. Bassillia, Henry Lunstedt, J. B. Stovall, Frank Marini, G. H. S. Dryden, M. E. Foley, Sol Bloom, E. P. E. Troy, H. E. Coffey, R. W. Martland, E. D. Roach, L. J. Rufina, J. H. Nelson, Henry Stern, C. A. Boldeman, W. H. Miller, John R. Krapp, C. Conny, H. J. Seitz, J. P. Donovan, F. H. Jung, D. C. Martin, J. R. Howell, Dan Suter, J. F. Schroth, L. Nonneman, C. H. Buck, G. H. Tietjen, J. B. Keenan and L. P. Powelson. The Board of Directors organized with James D. Phelan as president, Lewis F. Byington, vice-president, and A. Eberhart as secretary, and after twenty years of service, the same officers remain.

After much earnest work in raising funds, the Association purchased from the Congregation Ohabai Shalome, for $42,500, the lot located on the east side of Mason street, sixty-eight feet and nine inches north of Geary street, and having a frontage of sixty-eight feet and nine inches and a depth of one hundred and thirty-seven feet and six inches, and the cornerstone of the completed Native Sons Hall was laid on Washington's Birthday, 1895, and the building, which cost about $82,000, was dedicated February 9, 1896.

The hall and seven lodge-rooms were a success from the start, and when the building was hurned in the conflagration of 1906, there was left in the treasury, after the payment of all indebtedness, a balance of about $13,000, as the nucleus of a building fund for a new and greater building to be erected. Meanwhile, the land had increased in value over one hundred per cent, the lot being very conservatively appraised at $91,000. Hence, with assets of $104,000, it was determined that the 13,000 shares of the hall stock were worth $8 per share. Then, there were some who advocated selling the site and building in another and cheaper locality, and others who wanted to construct a class "C" structure; but, after many conferences, the directors decided to build on the old site a building to be class "A" in every particular; and further than that, to raise enough money to build and equip it, so that when it was completed, it would be without debt and on an income-paying basis.

To raise this money, required herculean effort, which was done, thanks to the members of the Board of Directors and of the "boosting committees" of the several Parlors in San Francisco, who responded to the appeal of Past Grand President Charles M. Belshaw, chairman of the directors' committee on Ways and Means, who worked untiringly in the city and among the several country Parlors. In fact, to the energy of Senator Belshaw is largely due the credit of raising the entire amount and of fulfilling our promise, "to build a class 'A' building without a single dollar of indebtedness." The stock of the Hall Association is now held as follows:

Subscribers.	Shares.	Amount.
San Francisco members	17,829	$142,632
San Francisco Parlors	15,401½	123,212
Grand Parlor, N.S.G.W.	3,750	30,000
State Board of Relief, N.S.G.W.	45	360
Parlors of the N.D.G.W.	139	1,112
Out of town Parlors	4,311½	34,492
Out of town members	2,894	23,152
Totals	44,370	$354,960

After a competition, the design of Righetti & Headman, and E. H. Hildebrand, associate, was chosen for the new building, and on Washington's

HON. JAMES D. PHELAN.
Member Pacific Parlor, No. 10, N.S.G.W., and President Hall Association.

Birthday, 1911, the cornerstone of the new building of the Native Sons was laid. It is the old cornerstone saved from the fire with a new stone covering it. Upon the old stone appears the inscription:

HALL OF
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST :
WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY :
A. D. 1895 :

and upon the stone above is carved:

Building Destroyed by Fire, April 19, 1906 :
Corner Stone Relaid February 22, 1911 :

Throughout the building, names of men who rendered historic service to our great State have been remembered. Around the two main entrances to the building are placed medallions of distinguished men, who are thus honored and commemorated for their services in connection with the discovery and civilization of California. They are: Cabrillo, discoverer of California; Father Junipero Serra, civilizer and founder of missions; General John A. Sutter, typical Pioneer; General John C. Fremont, U.S.A., the Pathfinder; Admiral John Drake Sloat, U.S.N., who raised the American flag at Monterey; James W. Marshall, the discoverer of gold; Peter Burnett, the first American Governor of California; General M. G. Vallejo, typical Hispano-Californian; General A. M. Winn, founder of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West.

Set in the front of the building at the height of the second story are six terracotta panels, the work of Domingo Mora and his son, Joseph J. Mora, artistically designed and depicting important historical events, namely: "The Discovery of California," "Civilization," "The Raising of the Bear Flag," "The Raising of the American Flag," "The Pioneers," "The Discovery of Gold." The sculptured heads of grizzly bears, which mark the line of the third floor, have been designed as emblematic of California, while the sculptured phoenix, placed over the doorways, typifies San Francisco.

In the main hall are twenty circular windows, which it has been decided to use for art-glass portraits of twenty Native Sons and Native Daughters who have won distinction in the arts and sciences, literature and drama. The names of the following have so far been selected: Gertrude Atherton, Sybil Sanderson, Mary Anderson, Denis O'Sullivan, David Warfield, Jack London, John J. Montgomery, Douglas Tilden, David Belasco, Jules Pages, Maude Fay, Richard Walton Tully and Ernest Pixotto.

It is the eighth floor of the building, however, in which our visiting brothers will be most interested. Here is located the "Grizzly Bear" Club, and here the dream of the Directors of the hall is being realized, where members of our great fraternity shall be welcome. Twenty-four Parlors of the Native Sons and fourteen Parlors of the Native Daughters meet in the hall, and any night, after a meeting, one may greet, at the club, brothers from all parts of the city, and State. Hence it is, that the building has been a great boon to the Order, in bringing together and cementing in the bonds of friendship the sons of California.

The following is the report rendered at the last annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Hall Association for the year ending February 28, 1914:

RESOURCES.

Treasury stock	$ 45,315.80
Real Estate	95,000.00
Furnishings	26,646.31
Building	237,033.01
Insurance (unexpired)	438.40
Cash in banks	6,275.49
Dividend Advanced	8,874.00
	$419,583.01

LIABILITIES.

Capital	$400,000.00
Surplus	6,262.35
Sundry Creditors	820.56
Balance Surplus assets	12,500.10
	$419,583.01

It will be seen that the net gain for the past year has been $12,500, or over $1000 a month. On January 1st, the hall paid a dividend of 2½%, and as time rolls on, we hope to increase this rate. Our location is the finest in the city, our hall second to none, and the loyalty of our members should make them urge not only their Parlors, but other fraternal organizations with which they may be affiliated, to patronize our auditorium and lodge-rooms.

Under our own roof-tree do we sit "in a land of milk and honey"—the consummation of the Pioneers' dream. Our building is at once a refuge, a home, and a monument.

PROMINENT ANGELENOS

JUDGE GRANT JACKSON

Grant Jackson was appointed Superior Court Judge in 1913 by Governor Hiram Johnson. His appointment was one of the most popular in some time. Born in Petaluma, California, June 13, 1869, he has resided all his life in his native

State. Educated in the public schools of Santa Barbara County, he later began the study of law in Santa Barbara City, in the office of Hon. W. C. Stratton, and was admitted to the bar October 11, 1891. He went into practice there and continued until November, 1902, when he moved to Los Angeles.

In Los Angeles he began a general civil practice. In 1905 he associated with Theodore Martin and Louis W. Moultrie, and this partnership continued up to Judge Jackson's appointment to the Superior Court bench in the fall of 1913.

Judge Jackson is a director of the Union League Club, where he makes his permanent residence, is a member of the Los Angeles Bar Association, and of Ramona Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West.

W. JOSEPH FORD

William Joseph Ford, Assistant District Attorney of Los Angeles County, was born in Oakland, August 2, 1877, and educated in the Los Angeles public schools.

In 1889 he was admitted to practice law in the State Courts, later to the Federal Courts. In 1907 he was secretary to the Judiciary Committee of the State Senate.

In 1907, Mr. Ford entered the office of the Los Angeles County District Attorney, has been steadily advanced, and has prosecuted, on behalf of the county, some of the most noted criminal cases. He is affiliated with Corona Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West.

JUDGE JOHN M. YORK

John Marvin York, Judge of the Superior Court of Los Angeles County, was elected to the bench in 1912. For thirteen years previous he had practiced law in Los Angeles City. He was born in Berkeley, January 29, 1878, and is therefore one of the youngest jurists in the State. He served seven years in the Signal Corps, N.G.C.

Judge York is a member of the Americus Club, Pasadena; Union League Club and Lincoln-Roosevelt Republican League, of Los Angeles, and Corona Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West.

WILLIAM HENRY WORKMAN

William Henry Workman is one of the oldest Pioneers in Los Angeles. He came to the city in 1854, when there were but 300 English-speaking people in a population of 2,800, 2,500 of whom were Spanish. He was the "father" of Boyle Heights, which he has made one of Los Angeles' attractive residential sections. He introduced car lines, water service, and all modern improvements there. During the years 1886-9, Mr. Workman was Mayor, and it is generally admitted that no official in this same capacity has done more effective work in the general upbuilding of the city. He was elected City Treasurer in 1900 and held that position till 1908.

Connected with the early history of Los Angeles, as Mr. Workman is, he is replete with interesting data, and stands foremost in the vanguard of city builders. While he says that he always held high hopes of the city's great progress, he admits its present tremendous growth has surpassed his wildest anticipations. Mr. Workman was born in 1839 in Boonville, Missouri. He came to Los Angeles in 1854 with his brother, Elijah H., and soon after settled at Boyle Heights.

WILLIAM J. HUNSAKER

William J. Hunsaker, of the firm of Hunsaker & Britt, attorneys, was born in Contra Costa County in 1855, and there received his education.

In 1869, with his parents, he removed to San Diego, where he was admitted to the bar in 1876; during 1883-84 he served as District Attorney of San Diego County.

Mr. Hunsaker came to Los Angeles in 1892, and until 1896 was attorney for the Santa Fe Railroad. He then renewed, with Mr. Britt, an old law partnership that had formerly existed in San Diego.

Mr. Hunsaker is a member of Ramona Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, and has always been interested in things pertaining to the welfare of the Order and the State. He is also affiliated with the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

FORTUNE FAVORS FRESNO

Fresno Parlor, No. 25, N.S.G.W., at its meeting February 20th, adopted the above slogan and design, which will be used on all stationery, banners, badges, etc. The bear and grapes are to be shown in natural colors, while the slogan will stand out in red. The design was executed by E. C. Berg.

At the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco next year, at which the Native Sons of the Golden West will make a great display, Fresno Parlor's members will be adorned with gold badges of this design, thus demonstrating their activity in boosting their home-city.

The design is typical of Fresno, showing a bunch of grapes in the background and a wheel for the center piece, surrounding an outline of the wheel, with Fresno so situated that it constitutes the hub of the wheel. The California bear surmounts the whole.

STATE MINERAL NEWS

Reports from Redding, Shasta County, are to the effect that the Hall desulphurizing process, designed to eliminate sulphur fumes, is proving a success at the Balaklala smelter.

A shoot of free-gold quartz, assaying $50 to $250 per ton, is reported from the Golden Center mine, Grass Valley, Nevada County.

A group of mines embracing the Pacific, Blue Rock, Hanson, Brattie and Parsons, near Georgetown, El Dorado County, has been hounded.

A company has been formed to make another attempt to work the West Eureka, an old mine at Sutter Creek, Amador County.

It is reported that a powerful Eastern syndicate will purchase the group of copper mines near Copperopolis, Calaveras County.

Auburn Ravine, near Auburn, Placer County, is to be invaded by dredgers.

Near Weaverville, Trinity County, a big body of ore, with large assay value, has been struck at the Democrat mine.

Calaveras County, in 1913, produced 2500 pounds of graphite, the first commercial production of that mineral in the State, with the exception of a small amount mined in Sonoma County in 1901-2.

During 1913, California produced 2,343 short tons of iron ore valued at $4,485, as compared with 2,508 tons in 1912 valued at $2,503. Deposits of the ore are found in thirty-one of the fifty-eight counties.

California oil dividends for March will, it is reported, run to $1,250,000.

The California Mines Company has been organized to operate a group of Mother Lode mines in Calaveras County and some gravel mines in Plumas County.

CONTRA COSTA WANTS TRUSTEE

Martinez—Mt. Diablo Parlor, No. 101, N.S.G.W., has launched a campaign for Past President James F. Hoey of that Parlor for the office of Grand Trustee, to be elected at the session of the Grand Parlor to convene in Los Angeles the 20th of this month. In Mr. Hoey, Mt. Diablo Parlor has one of the most enthusiastic and popular Native Sons in Contra Costa County. Born at Martinez 29 years ago he obtained his education in the public schools of that city and after graduating from the grammar school he entered Lowell high school in San Francisco from which educational institution he later graduated with honors. He is a past president of Mt. Diablo Parlor and has served as a district deputy grand president. Two years ago he was a delegate to the Thirty-first Session of the Grand Parlor which was held at Marysville. In 1906 he was appointed to a position in the clerical department of the San Francisco postoffice, which he later resigned to become deputy postmaster at Martinez. Three years ago he resigned this position and was appointed deputy tax collector of Contra Costa County, in which position he has proven himself a faithful public servant. For the past five years he has served as clerk of Laurel Camp, No. 145, Woodmen of the World, of Martinez, and one year ago was honored by election as a member of the Head Camp at Colorado Springs, Colorado. He is also a member of Richmond Lodge, No. 1251, B. P. O. E. To further the candidacy of Mr. Hoey, Mt. Diablo

Parlor has named a committee consisting of M. R. Jones, A. E. Dunkel and George P. Upham to communicate with the Parlors throughout the State. The election of Mr. Hoey to the office of Grand Trustee would be a signal tribute to his energy in behalf of the Order, and would be an honor of which the county might well feel proud. Contra Costa County has once before been favored with a grand officer, in the person of Hon. Charles M. Belshaw of General Winn Parlor of Antioch, who is now a Past Grand President, and the members of Mt. Diablo Parlor feel that the psychological moment

JAMES F. HOEY,

W. R. SHARKEY,

Delegates to Grand Parlor

has arrived when they might, with a just claim, go before the Grand Parlor and ask for recognition.

Contra Costa County has eight Parlors of the Order that are active in promoting its progress and prosperity. In appealing to the members of the Grand Parlor for support for their favorite candidate, they feel that they are entitled to consideration and that they will not be disappointed in their request. Mr. Hoey has, by his ability in the past, proven himself a capable young man. While holding a position in public life in Contra Costa at the present time, he is fitting himself for the future during odd moments, and within the next year or two will apply to the Supreme Court for admission to practice law.—(Published at Parlor's Request.)

THE PAST.

Oh, a wonderful thing is our organization,
Of its latest achievements I'm proud as can be,
But somehow, tonight my thoughts go a-straying
And the days of the past through a mist I can see:
I see the wild plain and the camp fires burning,
The grewsome reminders of Death's awful toll,
The vision of home with its infinite yearning,
The hopes of the future a-kindling the soul.

We may sing of success, we are covered with glory,
We may drink to the joys and the fame that's in store,

But as the goblet I'm buoyantly raising,
There comes to my memory the old days of yore:
I hear the deep growl of the grizzly breaking,
The wail of the panther creeps in on the spell,
The whoop of the redman the night's peace is taking,
Bleached bones of the desert, the tales you might tell.

Yes, a wonderful thing is our organization,
It has made us distinguished and given us caste,
And though our new fancies I'm loyally praising,
My thoughts go a-sneaking 'way back to the past:
I dream of the padres, their monuments crumbling,
Of history's milestones unknown and unset,
I think of our redwoods, God's temple, a-tumbling,
I fain would remember, I fain would forget.

TALKS ON CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles—At the meeting of Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124, N.D.G.W., March 16th, the study of the early history of California was discussed at some length, especially that delightful and most romantic period when the silver clang of the mission bells rang clear and sweet, calling the Indian neophytes to worship in the wonderfully constructed adobe churches, showing what wonders the Franciscan friars accomplished, both spiritually and manually, with the native California Indians. The president, Grace Stoerner, appointed Grace Culbert, Fannie Prather and Annie L. Adair as a committee to secure a lecturer to give a course of talks on early California history, the first of the series to be given April 6th.

Mrs. Snyder, Willette Biscailuz and Annie L. Adair were appointed to represent the Parlor on the branch Central Committee of the Children's Agency.

Mary L. Coreoran, the charter president of Mariposa Parlor, No. 63, took out a withdrawal card from Mariposa and placed the card in Los Angeles Parlor, which is to be congratulated on securing her as a member, as she has served the Order faithfully and well. Very sincere were the expressions of pleasure uttered by the Los Angeles members as they shook hands with Mrs. Coreoran.

Jennie Elliott has been selected to represent Los Angeles Parlor on the Advisory Committee with the Native Sons for the coming meeting of the Grand Parlor, N.S.G.W.

Louise Robinson entertained the members of Los Angeles Parlor at her home the evening of March 24th.

A very delightful surprise was given the members of Los Angeles Parlor on St. Patrick's eve, at the close of the Parlor meeting. It had all been uniquely and cleverly planned by Grace Culbert, and it was her "treat" to the Parlor. The banquet table was prettily decorated in white and green, each guest receiving as a favor a tiny pot of growing genuine Irish shamrock. The menu, which was thoroughly enjoyed, carried out the emblem of Ireland, as everything was in the shape of the three-leafed shamrock, and the hostess, in her charming way, made the banquet a memorable one. Three Irish ballads, "Come Back to Erin,"

"Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms" and "Wearing of The Green," were beautifully sung by Daisy Prideaux of Ursula Parlor, No. 1, Jackson.

THIRTY-SECOND ANNUAL BALL ELABORATE AFFAIR.

San Francisco—A most brilliant success was the thirty-second annual ball of Pacific Parlor, No. 10, N. S. G. W. The affair was a formal one, and was held in the ball-room of the Native Sons' building on the evening of Lincoln's birthday. The large and representative attendance emphasized the fact that this popular Parlor's affairs are always looked forward to with a great deal of interest. More than three hundred couples participated in the grand march, led by Henry C. Tennis, the president, and Miss Alyce Whorthy. The hall-room presented a scheme of elaborate floral decoration which was decidedly novel and distinctive. This feature was capably handled by an artist who was instructed to work out an idea of originality, and in this he succeeded in masterful manner. Three massive Australian tree ferns, tastefully set in a bed of almond blossoms and ferns, formed the attractive centerpiece, while closely-set palms had been placed on the balcony above. On the stage, the orchestra was hidden from view by tree fern plants and profuse spring blossoms. On the ball-room paneling golden hanging baskets, filled with daffodils and acacias, with a background of woodwardia ferns, completed a beautiful effect. Beautifully gowned and attractive women, and men prominent in the business life of San Francisco, enjoyed "up to date" dancing until midnight, when the merry throng left for a down-town cafe, which had been specially engaged for the occasion. High-class entertainment assisted at the cafe to promote a scene of merriment, gaiety and revelry which will long be remembered. J. Henry Bastein was floor director, with Walter V. Walsh as assistant, Hon. Jas. D. Phelan being chairman of the reception committee. The energetic ball committee was composed of the following: Jas. H. Mc Donough (chairman), J. C. Allan, J. F. Noonan, John Cannon, Walter V. Walsh, Henry C. Tennis, H. L. Whipple, Cyril Appel, E. Lynch.

WILL DEDICATE BEAR FLAG MONUMENT

Sonoma—June 14th will be celebrated in this city as "Bear Flag Day," and at that time the Bear Flag monument for which, through the efforts of the Native Sons, the State appropriated $5,000, will be formally dedicated.

At the same time old Mission San Francisco Solano (founded July 4, 1823), which will have been restored by the State, also through the efforts of the Native Sons of the Golden West, will be reopened.

Sonoma Parlor, No. 111, N.S.G.W., has charge of the arrangements for a big celebration on June 13th and 14th, and will be ably seconded by all the residents. Thousands of Native Sons and Native Daughters will be here to take part in the dedication ceremonies.

The monument, which will be of bronze, will be erected in the Plaza at Sonoma where the Bear Flag was originally raised.

For the base of the statue, a large granite boulder, near the site, will be utilized. The statue will consist of a hardy Pioneer, holding in his right hand the Bear Flag. On the front of the base will be a bronze tablet depicting, in relief, the raising of the Bear Flag.

Sonoma Parlor, N.S.G.W., has been working long and diligently in this matter, and its members have put the old Plaza in fine condition for reception of the historic monument.

A publicity committee will take up with all Subordinate Parlors shortly the matter of making June 14th a gala day for the Order, when the members will congregate at the old town of Sonoma to participate in a due observance of the occasion.

a lively one, something doing all the time. The Solano delegates are going to assist Vallejo Parlor land the Ninth of September celebration, so keep your eyes on the Solano County "boosters." The members of Solano Parlor are figuring on giving a "high jinks," some time in the near future.

PROMINENT ANGELENOS

STODDARD JESS

Stoddard Jess, vice-president of the First National Bank, is one of Los Angeles' most enterprising and valuable residents. He is a native of Wisconsin, and received his education at the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Upon coming to California, Mr. Jess first located at Pomona, where he, with others, started the First National Bank of that place. There, also, he was interested in many public enterprises, and held several offices of trust.

Mr. Jess is an important figure in Los Angeles banking circles, and is affiliated with the Jonathan, Union League and Los Angeles Athletic Clubs.

ED. W. HOPKINS

Since 1907, Ed. W. Hopkins has been Assessor of Los Angeles County, and has been commended for his uniform fairness. He was born in Iowa, where he was educated in the public schools; in 1887 was admitted to the bar.

In 1891, Mr. Hopkins came to Los Angeles and engaged in the real estate business. In 1895, he entered the County Assessor's office, being elected to the head of the office in 1907. He is affiliated with the Union League and City Clubs, Chamber of Commerce, Masonic Fraternity and Knights of Pythias.

IRVING H. HELLMAN

One of the youngest and most popular bankers in Southern California is Irving Herman Hellman, son of the late Herman W. Hellman. He is a native son of the Golden State, having been born in Los Angeles May 10, 1883. His earliest business career was devoted to reinforced concrete construction, being the first reinforced concrete engineer of Los Angeles. His father's vast interests needed his personal supervision, however, and in 1908 he became manager of the Hellman estate.

For some time Mr. Hellman has been vice-president and manager of the Sixth and Main streets branch of the Hellman Commercial, Trust and Savings Bank. His affability and business sagacity have helped greatly to enlarge the clientele of the branch bank of which he has charge. He is interested in an official capacity in a number of very large corporations, but finds time, despite a multiplicity of duties, to devote an occasional hour to club life and outdoor sports.

DR. J. P. COPP

Dr. Joseph Pettet Copp, dentist, specialist in prosthesis—replacement of the teeth by crowns, bridges and plates—is a Native Son of California, having been born in Los Angeles on September 4, 1887. He is the son of Andrew J. Copp, attorney and capitalist. The original ancestor of the Copp family, David Copp, is an historical character. Copp's Hill, where the British encamped in their fight against the Yankees in the memorable battle of Bunker Hill, was named for David Copp.

Dr. Copp graduated in 1910 from the University of Southern California Dental Department with the degree of D.D.S. He has a fine suite of offices in the Auditorium building.

When only fifteen years old Dr. Copp joined the United States navy, and remained in the service five years. He trained at Goat Island, San Francisco Bay, and spent practically four and a half years in China. He entered the navy as a third-class apprentice and was discharged as third-class quartermaster, non-commissioned officer.

He is a member of the Los Angeles Country Club, the Southern California Dental Society, Southern California Blue Lodge of Masons, Scottish Rite, Los Angeles Consistory, Al Malaikah Shrine, and Ramona Parlor, N.S.G.W.

SPREADS FAME

done the State does not pay the interest on the bonds or retire them at maturity, although the credit of the State is pledged, which possibly makes the rate of interest less. Under the State law these bonds must be taken care of out of the funds accumulated from harbor receipts. It is charged that it might be possible for localities interested in rival harbors to retard the development of San Francisco's water front; that it is sometimes difficult to explain to the voters of the State that the large bond issues for San Francisco Harbor improvements are not a burden upon the State. It may be stated, however, that so far there has been a disposition on the part of the people of the State to grant the necessary authority for the issuance of bonds to develop California's chief port. For instance, a $9,000,000 bond issue is now available for improvements which are rapidly being made, and another issue of $10,000,000 is contemplated.

At present the piers and bulkhead wharves on the San Francisco water front offer about five miles of berthing space. In a recent report of the board of State Harbor Commissioners the statement is made that dock facilities may be so enlarged as to give forty-four miles of berthing space.

Oakland Harbor.

Directly across the bay from San Francisco, and on the continental side, lies Oakland Harbor, with twenty miles of available shore line. The city of Oakland has fought for years to regain control of its water front. In the early fifties the then town of Oakland made some unfortunate grants of valuable rights on the harbor to an individual. These were later transferred to a railroad corporation. It has only been within recent years that the city has obtained substantial control of its entire water front. This has been due to court decisions, legislative acts, and favorable compromises. The city has already voted $2,500,000 for improvements and has under way the building of re-inforced concrete wharves and a quay wall 3,700 feet in length equipped with railroad tracks, steel warehouses, and machinery for the handling of freight. There is also being built a retaining wall across the key route basin, on the western water front, where most extensive improvements are contemplated. The city plans to eventually expend $20,000,000. The municipal belt railway system as planned will extend around the entire city front, connecting with every railroad that enters the city—three transcontinental railroads now entering Oakland—and with every wharf, with spurs leading to manufacturing plants. Under the proposed development of the water front there will be 46,000 feet of municipally-owned docks and 46,000 feet of privately-owned.

Colonel Thomas H. Rees, the Government engineer in charge of the Oakland district, has just reported a most comprehensive plan for the fullest development of this western water front, a project that will allow of such expansion as to meet fully the growing demands of the future.

Harbor of Richmond.

The Rees plans for the east San Francisco Bay district include the harbor of Richmond, lying north of Oakland. The enterprising people of this growing community have set an example of liberality in co-operating with the Government that many localities might well follow. The city has already voted $1,170,000 to be used for harbor improvements and in addition has authorized the submission of another bond issue, which provides for the payment of $75,000 per annum for a period of five years to be applied toward defraying the expense of Government dredging. Part of the receipts from the harbor will be set aside for a like purpose. The entire inner harbor will be municipally controlled.

Richmond, fast becoming a manufacturing center, will offer, when the present plans are completed, fully thirteen miles of berthing space. At least seven miles of the water front will be municipally controlled.

Los Angeles Harbor.

If, by chance, there is in this assemblage an individual hailing from a locality which nature has provided with harbor possibilities, but where there is an apparent disinclination to develop these facilities which lie at its doors, I would direct this individual's attention to the city of Los Angeles, that wonderfully enterprising community in Southern California. The city of Los Angeles was originally twenty miles from the ocean. Appreciating the impossibility of bringing the great Pacific to its doors, but realizing the necessity for a water terminal, this city, with the nerve to tackle big projects, did the next best thing by extending its boundaries twenty miles to the ocean by annexing cities bordering on the water and strips of connecting territory, and did all this in order that it might vote bonds to improve the harbor now known, if you please, as the Harbor of Los Angeles. Already the city has voted $5,500,000 and has agreed to expend an additional $5,000,000 in the near future, with larger sums to follow.

The port of Los Angeles is controlled entirely by the municipality, which, through a Board of Harbor Commissioners, makes all rules and regulations for the government of the harbor, fixes all pilotage, dockage, wharfage, and handling charges, and operates the port as a municipal enterprise.

The city owns 394 acres in the outer harbor of what was originally submerged land. Of this, 151 acres was leased by the former city of San Pedro to private parties, who have reclaimed it and improved it with wharves and warehouses. Of the balance, the city has just completed reclaiming sixty-six acres, which are being improved with re-inforced concrete wharves and steel transit sheds, and plans are under way for reclaiming 134 acres more.

Approximately 1,300 acres of tide and submerged lands in the inner harbor were originally covered by tideland patents, the validity of which was disputed by the city and are in litigation, the city winning its suits in the Superior Court of Los Angeles County, and the case is now pending in the California Supreme Court. (Since this address, the Supreme Court has sustained the decision of the Superior Court.)

There are now 24,905 feet of privately-owned wharves along the water front held under franchises or permits, and the city has 1,985 feet of municipal wharves, most of which have been recently built. It also has under construction 3,590 feet of additional wharf, of which 2,520 feet will be of re-inforced concrete, costing approximately $176 a linear foot. The city also is constructing 1,800 feet of steel transit sheds and 1,530 feet of wood-frame transit sheds, besides doing a large amount of dredging.

Because of the involved condition of titles to some of the property covered by railway terminals at the harbor and the desire of the city to open the harbor to access by all railroads, as well as by paved streets, a terminal agreement has been agreed upon which virtually makes the railroad companies and the municipality co-partners in the terminal, with the city in control.

There are on present Government harbor lines approximately twenty and three-quarters miles of water front, most of it unimproved. This can be greatly increased by dredging slips, but only a few such slips have yet been definitely determined upon. The possibilities of the harbor, as shown by E. P. Goodrich, the consulting engineer for that city, will afford more than 100 miles of water front when fully developed.

San Diego Harbor.

The Legislature of 1911 granted to the city of San Diego control of its entire water front. The city has already voted $1,000,000 for a municipal pier, which is now nearing completion. This pier will be equipped with railroad tracks and every facility for expeditiously handling freight. The total length of bulkhead at San Diego is 50,500 feet, giving a total deep-sea dockage of thirteen miles and a total coaster dockage of six miles.

Very extensive plans have been prepared by the municipality for the future development of the harbor to meet the needs of increasing commerce. The importance of San Diego Harbor will be greatly increased with the opening of the Panama Canal, as it will be the first Pacific port in the United States for ships bound north after passing through the great waterway. The municipal wharves now under

BOOST FOR "TONY."

We call attention of our readers to the advertisement, on another page, of "London Life" cigarettes. This is a new 10c package which is just being introduced and sold as 100 per cent pure Turkish cigarettes. However, it is not so much the brand mentioned as the man behind it we wish to describe.

It is our old friend, "Tony" Schwamm, one of the "old guard" of Ramona Parlor, No. 109, N.S.G.W., who puts out this brand. He is the agent of P. Lorillard Co. for Southern California and Arizona, and is "some" hustler.

"London Life" cigarettes will be served at all the banquets and dinners during the Grand Parlor festivities. Mr. Schwamm also controls the "Nebo," "Trophies," "Murad" and "Luxury" cigarettes; "Stag" and "Union Leader" smoking tobacco; "Climax" chewing tobacco; "Between the Acts" and "Hoffman House" little cigars; "Tiger" fine cut, and many other standard lines. Let us boost for "Tony."—(Advertisement.)

Photo Post Cards and Papers Made in California.

The business of the Pacific Photo Paper Co., now at 82 Third street, San Francisco, has grown with such rapidity, that the management has found it imperative to secure larger quarters, negotiations for which have just been closed. The new location will be announced shortly, and in the meantime, amateurs and professionals requiring paper or post cards that are suitable for any and all negatives, should promptly order a trial lot of six grades, as per advertisement in this issue. It will surely please. The Pacific Photo Paper Co. also prints post cards in any quantity for advertising purposes, etc., in the best of style and finish.—Advertisement.

(LOS ANGELES, APRIL 19TH, 20TH, 21ST, 22ND, 23RD, 24TH, 25TH)

RACTICALLY ALL ARRANGEMENTS for the entertainment of the Thirty-seventh Grand Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, have been completed by the Los Angeles Entertainment Committee.

And unless rainy weather interferes,—many of the entertainment features being planned for out-of-doors,—the southern city will set a pace, in the way of entertainments, that will be hard for future Grand Parlor cities to equal.

Los Angeles, through her Native Sons and Native Daughters, will maintain her reputation for lavish hospitality, and if any of the hundreds of visitors go home dissatisfied, it will be because he or she is tired out from the one-continuous-round-of-pleasure program arranged, or else is physically unable to enjoy himself or herself.

Ever since, at Oroville, they were awarded the Grand Parlor, the Los Angeles Native Sons and Native Daughters have been looking forward to its convening. The wherewith to properly entertain their guests was supplied by the people of Los Angeles in their usual open-handed way through the medium of the memorable "Hangtown."

Waiting With Open Arms.

And now, having completed the necessary arrangements incident to their proper entertainment, the Los Angeles Native Sons and Native Daughters, as well as the citizens generally, are awaiting with open arms the arrival of their guests.

Through arrangements made by the Transportation Committee of the Grand Parlor, a large percentage of the visitors will arrive in Los Angeles Sunday, April 19th, at 11 a.m. They will be accorded a fitting reception at the depot, whence they will be escorted to Hotel Alexandria, where the Grand Parlor Entertainment Committee will have headquarters, and where the grand officers will be quartered.

Registration and Information.

Here, a registration bureau will be maintained, and as soon as the visitors have gone through the formality of registering, they will be taken to their several quarters. By mutual consent, the Past Grand Presidents will have headquarters at Hotel Clark, and indications are that, for the first time, every Past Grand will be in attendance at the coming session.

For the convenience of visitors, an information bureau will be maintained in the lobby of Hotel Alexandria throughout the week. Competent attendants will be in charge, to give any required information. This will, it is believed, be especially appreciated by the women visitors, when their escorts are attending the Grand Parlor session.

The Official Badge.

Each Grand Parlor member will be given a handsome metal badge consisting of a name-bar from which is pendant, by ribbon, the seal of Los Angeles enameled in colors. This seal is particularly appropriate as a Native Sons' souvenir, for it combines all the flags under which California has existed—Spanish, Mexican, Bear and American. The name-bar contains a card setting forth the name of the wearer and the Parlor from which he hails. Visiting members of the Order, and also the women, will not be overlooked, for they will be given a handsome souvenir badge also.

For Sunday, no formal program has been arranged by the committee. There are numerous places to go, in and around Los Angeles, however, so that visitors will not be put to the extremity of "killing time."

Monday, April 20th.

Monday, at 10:30 a.m., the Grand Parlor will convene at Temple Auditorium.

At 1:30 p.m., three memorial sycamore trees, dedicated to Friendship, Loyalty and Charity, the Order's cardinal principles, will be planted in Central Park,—directly in front of the Auditorium,—with appropriate ceremonies, in which Dr. D. W. Edelman (Corona 196) will represent the local Natives. These exercises will be of a public nature.

At 8 p.m., a public reception will be accorded the visitors at Temple Auditorium, at which seats will

On behalf of the Order, Thomas Monahan, Grand President, will reply. Other speakers will include Hon. James D. Phelan (Pacific 10), San Francisco; Judge Wm. M. Conley (P.G.P.), Madera; Congressman Joseph R. Knowland (P.G.P.), Alameda; Judge John P. Davis (Excelsior 31), San Francisco. Governor Hiram W. Johnson (Sunset 26) will, if it is possible to cancel previous dates, also be one of the speakers.

Tuesday, April 21st.

Tuesday, at 9 a.m., the visitors will leave Los Angeles for a day's trip to the beaches. The first stop will be made at San Pedro (Los Angeles Harbor), where the city's water-front developments will be inspected. Long Beach will be the next stop, and there the visitors will be served lunch on the shores of old Pacific. Boarding the electric cars, the visitors will be whirled to Santa Monica, where automobiles will be awaiting to show them the beautiful Palisades. Venice will be the next objective point, and there the evening will be given over to pleasure until midnight, when the start will be made for Los Angeles.

Venice's citizens have planned a great welcome, and the place will practically be turned over to the Natives. The beach city will be appropriately decorated, half-prices will be in force for all concessions, there will be a great display of fireworks, and an informal dance in the immense pavilion will be a continuous attraction, free to all official-badge wearers.

Wednesday, April 22nd.

Wednesday, the Grand Parlor will be in session all day. This will not affect the women visitors, however, and from 2 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon they will be the guests of the Los Angeles Native Daughters at a reception at Hotel Clark.

Wednesday night, at Hotel Alexandria ballroom, will be given a grand ball, complimentary to the officers and members of the Grand Parlor, and their ladies, to which all members of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. will be welcome. A large space in the hotel has been set aside for this purpose, and for the benefit of those who do not dance, cards will be provided. The affair will be, largely, in the nature of a reunion.

Thursday, April 23rd.

Thursday, the visitors will be shown the sights of a large part of Los Angeles County. The trip will be made by automobiles, leaving the city at 9:30 a.m. The route will be entirely over the county's good roads, and stops will be made at San Gabriel Mission, Hollywood, Busch's sunken gardens (Pasadena), and other noted places. Arriving at the "Lucky" Baldwin ranch at noon, a California barbecue will be served. Here, Senator R. F. Del Valle (Ramona 109) will deliver a short address.

At 7 p.m., the Past Grand Presidents will be the guests of Past Grand President H. C. Liechtenberger at a sumptuous supper at his home.

From 8 to 12 p.m. (with no limit to the closing hour), all members of the N.S.G.W. will be entertained at a "classical" high-jinks in Turner Hall. The show will be of the Eisen-Polaski variety—"muff eel."

Friday, April 24th.

Friday, the Grand Parlor will again resume its labors, and the grand officers for the ensuing year will be chosen. Following the installation of the new officials, probably at 5 p.m., the Thirty-seventh session will adjourn sine-die.

At 6:30 p.m., a banquet will be tendered to the Grand Parlor members at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. The capacity of the rooms being limited, the affair will be strictly invitational. The menu will be an excellent one, and all appointments first-class.

At the banquet, Edwin A. Meserve (Ramona 109) will preside as toastmaster, and some brilliant addresses are promised, the list of speakers including such men as: W. H. L. Hynes (Piedmont 120), District Attorney of Alameda County; Congressman Joseph R. Knowland (P.G.P.), Alameda; United States Judge Maurice T. Doelling (P.G.P.), San Francisco; Supreme Court Justice Frank M. Angellotti (Mt. T. 64), San Rafael; Senator Charles M. Belshaw (P.G.P.), Antioch; Hon. James D. Phelan (Pacific 10), San Francisco; Daniel A. Ryan (P.G.P.), attorney for the State Board of Harbor Commissioners, San Francisco; Isadore B. Dockweiler (Ramona 109), Los Angeles; James Rolph (Hesperian 137), Mayor of San Francisco.

During the course of the banquet, Louis H. Mosser of San Francisco, the then newly-installed Grand President, will formally present to Thomas Monahan, Mayor of San Jose, the retiring Grand President, a diamond-studded Past Grand President's badge, such as is possessed and highly cherished by every man who has attained that honor in the Order.

Saturday—See the Sights.

For Saturday, the Arrangements Committee has made no formal plans for the visitors, believing they may differ in their desires as to what additional of the Southland's attractions they will care to view. Transit is quick, and at frequent intervals, to all such places, and special rates will be in effect.

The Golden State Auto Tours Company has agreed to make special Los Angeles and Pasadena sight-seeing trips all during the week for the convenience of Grand Parlor attendants, and will arrange additional trips for any point.

Visitors desiring to take any special trips, other than those programmed, will find the Los Angeles Arrangements Committee ready to serve them in any capacity. Notice of what is desired can be sent in advance, or given upon arrival, and the committee will do its utmost to make snitable arrangements.

"SOME PUMPKINS,"

THIS LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

Director William J. Harris of the National Department of Commerce has just completed the final report on the 1910 census of agriculture. The report covers the 2950 counties of the United States, and in it

Los Angeles County is given first rank in the valuation of all crops, $14,720,900.

The average crop value per acre in the county, according to the report, was $35, and the per-capita per acre, $29.

The report gives the principal crops raised in Los Angeles County, in the order of their value, as fruits, hay and forage, livestock, dairy products, and vegetables.

START SUMMER SOCIAL SEASON.

Fresno—March 20th, occurred one of the hottest contests for delegates to the Grand Parlor that has ever been held in Fresno Parlor, No. 25, N.S.G.W. Seven candidates were in the field, and two ballots were required to make the selections. In addition to the delegates, there will be a number of the Parlor members at the Grand Parlor session in Los Angeles.

Fresno Parlor of Native Sons and Fresno Parlor of Native Daughters started their joint spring and summer socials March 27th. From March 25th to October 1st, joint weekly dances will be held at Zapp's Park.

Fresno Parlor expects to have the officers and members of Dinuba, Selma and Visalia Parlors of Native Sons and, in fact, all of the Parlors in the valley, with it on April 3rd, to see the officers exemplify the ritualistic work and initiate a number of candidates.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY.

Vallejo—Vallejo Parlor, No. 195, N.D.G.W., had a birthday party, March 18th, in celebration of its second institution anniversary. California poppies supplied the decorative scheme, and at the banquet, which was made a feature of the affair, there was the regulation birthday cake, handsomely decorated and adorned with two candles. Mrs. Nettie Doyle, the president, officiated as toastmistress and much credit for the success of the evening is due to the following committee: Mrs. Nellie Ferrera chairman, Mrs. Margaret Soanes, Mrs. May Veloir, Mrs. Winuie Cassidy and Mrs. Coombs.

VISITED BY GRAND PRESIDENT.

San Francisco—Orinda Parlor, No. 56, N.D.G.W., was visited by Grand President Alison F. Watt, March 13th, and a great number of visitors from all over the State, as well as a large delegation from the San Francisco Parlors, were present. The Grand President congratulated the Parlor on its fine work, and made a few remarks on the work that the Order is doing along all lines for the betterment of the State. At the close of the meeting, the visitors were treated to refreshments, which were enjoyed.

FORGING AHEAD.

Placerville—Placerville Parlor, No. 9, N.S.G.W., had a rousing meeting March 24th, five candidates being initiated and one admitted by card. January 13th, a class of thirteen was initiated, so it is evident that Placerville Parlor is forging ahead. After the regular business of the evening, the "Pioneer Degree" was conferred, and a banquet was served. The election of delegates to the Grand Parlor at Los Angeles was warmly contested.

San Francisco—Increased traffic on the municipal railway necessitates the purchase of twenty-five additional cars.

Davisville—The State Fruit Growers' Convention will be held here the first week in June.

Van Nuys—This new Los Angeles County town has voted $120,000 school bonds.

HOME NEWSPAPERS

THE EXPRESS.

The oldest, most reliable and cleanest afternoon newspaper in Los Angeles is the "Express." It never has deviated from its fixed rule of presenting the truthful side of the news. Elaboration at the cost of veracity is taboo in the office of the "Express." Its telegraph news is never perverted to suit the taste or editorial policy of its editors.

The "Express" has done more in the real upbuild of the business of the city, and of the city itself, than any other agency or combination of agencies. Long before any other local newspaper was even dreamed of, the "Express" was pegging away, giving out the news of Los Angeles and environs. It has always maintained a clean reputation for truth-telling.

You can give the "Express" to your children to read, without the least fear that they will find anything to harm them in its columns.

THE TRIBUNE.

A clean, breezy, newsy morning paper, giving all the news fit to print for one cent. The first and only morning newspaper to dare sell at the penny rate. A family paper in the strictest sense, readable alike by parent or child, without fear of perusing contaminating material.

In the short space of its existence the "Tribune" has acquired the largest city circulation in the morning field. Its readers are composed of the most alert thinkers and most active workers in all fields of labor and the professions. Active, bitter campaigns directed against it by its contemporaries served only to popularize the "Tribune."

Its reliability as a newspaper is admired by even its hithermost foes. When it is a question of morals, of good government, of justice to all, the "Tribune" always can be relied upon to speak the truth, and to lay open the matter to the home, so that the public may be able to judge for itself and to make a decision in the right.

The "Sunday Tribune" is a high-class weekly newspaper, having for its motto, "truth first." It makes no pretense at publishing matter simply to display type or illustrations of questionable merit. It is a good, clean Sabbath newspaper.

GRAND OLD PIONEER PASSES

With a feeling of personal loss, the writer is called upon to record the death of Major Edwin A. Sherman, which occurred at Oakland, March 17th. In his passing, California loses one of her oldest and most loyal citizens, and one who, having been personally associated therewith, was, perhaps, the best-informed man in the State on her early history. He was, because of its interest in early California history, a staunch friend of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, and had contributed to the official organ, The Grizzly Bear, many interesting articles containing valuable historic information. Due to his untiring efforts, the monument at Monterey to Commodore John Drake Shoat was erected, and shortly before his death he had informed the writer that he hoped to be in Sonoma on June 14th, when the Bear Flag monument is to be dedicated.

Major Sherman was born in Bridgewater, Massachusetts, August 25, 1829. In 1846, he enlisted in Company A, Eighth United States Infantry, and saw service at Vera Cruz during the Mexican war. May 24, 1849, he came to California, via Panama, and was appointed City Clerk of Sonoma in 1850, serving under General Vallejo. In 1855, he was elected surveyor of Sacramento County; later he was elected State Controller of Nevada.

When the Civil War came, Major Sherman enlisted, and saw service. At its close, he returned to California and, in 1872, was wedded to Miss Adeline A. Dodd who, together with a son, Edwin A. Sherman, Jr., of Alturas, survives. He resided in San Francisco from 1877 to 1883, when he took up his residence in Oakland.

Major Sherman, 33, was prominently identified with the Masonic Fraternity, being an officer in the Grand Lodge of California, in which he was the oldest member, as well as secretary of the Masonic Veteran Association of the Pacific Coast. He was a prolific writer of Masonic treatises, and in 1899 was presented with the Masonic Grand Cross for his books. He was the oldest Scottish Rite Mason on the Pacific Coast, and had organized twenty-five bodies of that auxiliary.

The notable career of Major Sherman was closely interwoven with the early history of California. He was one of the institutors of, and active workers in, the California Pioneer Society, and had accumulated a wonderful fund of California early-day data which he was arranging in book form for publication. His was an active life, spent in the best interests of his adopted state, California, which he loved so well.

With the demise of Major Sherman, one of the State's most valued and best-loved human landmarks has been removed. But the memory of this grand old man of California will ever hold a commanding place in the minds and hearts of those who knew and loved him.—C. M. H.

PERSONAL MENTION

Ed. L. Head, a member of Stanford Parlor, N.S.G.W., and Keeper of the State Archives at Sacramento, is a candidate for State Treasurer. He was formerly a member of the San Francisco Board of Education.

Charles M. Belshaw of Antioch, Past Grand President, N.S.G.W., was in Los Angeles last month attending a good roads conference as a representative of the California Automobile Association.

William Edgar Curtis is a new native son arrival at Long Beach. He arrived March 15th at the home of Geo. L. Curtis and wife. The mother is a member of Long Beach Parlor, N.D.G.W., and the father is affiliated with Grizzly Bear Parlor, N.S.G.W.

TO BEGIN RESTORATION OPERATIONS AT MISSION SAN JOSE.

The mission San Jose Restoration Committee met March 21st, Carrie Hall of Berkeley Parlor, N.D.G.W., presiding. A building committee consisting of Congressman J. R. Knowland, P.G.P., chairman, Geo. L. Donovan, secretary, M. M. Manning, J. J. Dignan, C. F. Corrigan, F. F. Duterherry and John Haar of Eden Parlor, who has donated his services as architect and has drawn up plans and specifications showing that it will cost $5,200 to restore the mission. Three thousand dollars has already been raised by the Native Sons and Native Daughters through carnivals, theater parties, and the Grand Parlor, N.S.G.W., aided by the co-operation of the citizens of Alameda County.

Active restoration operations will begin in April, as the roof will have to be taken off and replaced by tiles, restoring it to its original state. The building cannot be unroofed until after the rains are over, on account of the adobe walls. A transportation committee has been appointed and will convey the Oaklanders to the mission the day set to begin operations, the committee consisting of Mrs. Nellie De Blois, C. F. Corrigan, F. Rohson, Miss Augusta Schuman, Jas. G. Beatty. Grand President Thomas Monahan of the N.S.G.W. was present with Grand Trustee Addie Mosher of the N.D.G.W. and both promised to assist the committee.

SCHOOL FIGURES SHOW

WHERE POPULATION CENTERS.

From the report of State Superintendent of Public Instruction Edward Hyatt, issued March 2nd, it will be noted that the counties generally classed as Southern California are given the following daily average school attendance June 30th:

County	Elementary	Secondary	Total
Los Angeles	66,952	12,939	79,891
San Diego	9,428	1,546	10,974
San Bernardino	7,538	1,342	8,880
Orange	5,902	1,173	7,075
Riverside	4,798	959	5,757
Santa Barbara	3,140	519	3,659
Ventura	2,585	422	3,007
Imperial	1,947	314	2,261

Total 102,290 19,214 121,504

For the whole State, at that time, the attendance is given as 341,736. These figures show that a little over twenty-three per cent of all the State's school children are in Los Angeles County, and that thirty-five and one-half per cent dwell in Southern California, eight counties out of a total of fifty-eight. This indicates where the population of the State is centered.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS INITIATE

LARGE CLASS CANDIDATES.

Napa—One of the largest and most enthusiastic meetings recorded in Native Daughter circles was the meeting of Eschol Parlor, No. 16, March 16th, which was attended by Grand President Alison F. Watt and several visiting members, including a delegation of sixteen from Vallejo Parlor, No. 195, headed by D.D.G.P. Verna Berry.

Eschol is one of the original Parlors of the Order and its delegate to the first Grand Parlor is still a member. A number of the charter members were present at the meeting. Thirty-one candidates were initiated, the officers doing their work in an impressive manner. Every one of the members aided the president, Mrs. Ramsey, in securing a new member; she has four sisters who are also members of the Parlor.

Grand President Watt had many words of praise for the manner in which the officers performed the floor work, as well as for the way in which the members are building up the Order; she gave an interesting account of visits to other Parlors. A banquet, at which the Native Sons acted as waiters, terminated the meeting.

Well Cared For.

Merced—During her recent official visit to Veritas Parlor, No. 75, Alison F. Watt of Grass Valley, Grand President, was entertained during the day with an auto ride about the city. In the evening, a banquet was served in the Parlor dining-room, which was beautifully and tastefully decorated. Following this, there was a business session, at which the following officers were installed: Past president, Lila Ellis; president, Belle Gribi, Grand Trustee; first vice-president, Josie Lagomarsino; second vice-president, Lena Van Fleet; third vice-president, Lennie Crawford; marshal, Mamie French; treasurer, Mollie Clough; financial secretary, Emma Nordgren; recording secretary, Mary Powell; inside sentinel, Mary Vanden Heuvel; trustees—Martha Warfield, Josie Lagomarsino, Mary Vanden Heuvel; organist, Alma Fowler.

Small But Enthusiastic.

Niles—Laura Loma Parlor, No. 182, gave an enjoyable whist tournament, February 28th, a large number being present and participating in the game. Prizes were awarded the winners, and refreshments were served by the members. All voted it one of the most enjoyable affairs ever given by the Parlor, and hoped for another soon. Laura Loma Parlor is small, but has some very enthusiastic members. The committee to whom all credit is due, was Frances Simpson (chairman), Ida Easterday and Josephine Jacobus.

Faithfulness Rewarded.

St. Helena—The following officers of La Junta Parlor, No. 203, were installed February 6th by D. D. G. P. Verna E. Berry: Past president, Clara Herdelt; president, Geneva Bonhote; first vice-president, Ruth Long; second vice-president, Mae Wood; third vice-president, Wilna Vann; recording secretary, Gretta Grant; financial secretary, Ruth Thorson; treasurer, Frances Kersting; marshal, Esther Thompson; trustees—Theresa Kennelly, Anna Arigbi and Wilhelmina Vann; organist, Katherine Dowdell; inside sentinel, Inez Forni; inside sentinel, Louise Klubescheidt. After the installation a banquet and social time were enjoyed. In appreciation of the retiring president's faithfulness to her office and her untiring efforts, the members of La Junta Parlor presented her with a jewel.

Officers Installed.

Sebastopol—The following officers of Sunset Parlor, No. 188, have been installed by D.D.G.P. Elisabeth Phillips: Past president, Mae Burroughs; president, Leeta Mello; first vice-president, Delphine Frates; second vice-president, Cora Howell; third vice-president, Mary Silva; recording secretary, Vera McBride; financial secretary, Eva Seudder; treasurer, Sadie Barnes; marshal, Nellie Burns; trustees—Mary Holloway, Elisabeth Phillips, Dora Boyd; organist, Cora Howell; outside sentinel, Carrie Vier; inside sentinel, Adelaide Mentasti.

Eighteen Years Old.

Oakland—The birthday anniversary of Piedmont Parlor, No. 87, has come and gone, and it is now eighteen years old. The event was celebrated in a grand way by a ball in the ivory ballroom of Hotel Oakland, the natural beauty of which was greatly enhanced by a bountiful use of silk Amer-

An immense crowd was in attendance, and the affair was declared the most elaborate and successful social event ever given by this popular Parlor, which has an enrollment of nearly 200. Miss Clara Wimmer, president, was in charge, and was assisted in making the affair so successful by every member of the Parlor.

Civic Work Pleases.

Santa Barbara—Reina del Mar Parlor, No. 126, was officially visited, February 28th, by Grand President Alison F. Watt, who expressed herself as highly pleased with the work the Parlor is doing along civic lines. The meeting place was prettily decorated in acacias and ferns, and during the evening the Grand President installed the Parlor officers, Lydia Whitney assuming the presidency. Late in the evening a banquet was served, the room being decorated in jonquils and violets. In the course of the speechmaking, the visitor was presented, by the Parlor, with a picture of Santa Barbara Mission, and Mrs. Bruce Anderson, past president, was the recipient of a token expressing the Parlor's esteem. The following day, Sunday, Mrs. Watt was shown the many beauties of Santa Barbara.

Plan Innovation.

San Jose—At a very recent meeting of Vendome Parlor, No. 100, the newly-elected officers were installed by D. D. G. P. Emma Haehnlen, and during the initiatory ceremonies of the installation six new candidates were taken into the Order, after which a well-prepared banquet was enjoyed. Arrangements have been made for basket lunches on Monday evenings during Lent, which ought to prove an attractive feature and a popular innovation. On Easter Monday another dance will be given. The newly elected officers are: Past president, Lizette Faber; president, Francis Plamondon; first vice-president, Mary Mitchell; second vice-president, Naomi Purcell; third vice-president, Maude

Shown Many Attractions.

San Luis Obispo—San Luisita Parlor, No. 108, had the pleasure of an official visit from Grand President Alison F. Watt, March 2nd. The Grand President was met at the depot by Agnes M. Lee; an auto ride about town and to the California Polytechnic school, and a visit to the mission were much enjoyed by the visitor. Instead of sitting down to a banquet after the meeting, a new procedure was adopted, and at 6:30 o'clock the Grand President was guest of honor at a sumptuous repast, consisting of hot turkey and all the delicacies that go with it. The supper was prepared by a committee of good cooks, and the turkeys were raised and donated by Sophia F. Jones, who is noted for her thoughtfulness and generosity to the Parlor. The dining-hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the long tables being placed in the form of a square, around which fifty Native Daughters found their places by pretty place cards. In the center of the room was a huge collection of calla lilies, while from the four corners ran long strings

After the banquet, the regular meeting of the Parlor took place. A most interesting address was delivered by the Grand President, and she also instructed the members concerning the work of the Order. During the evening, six candidates were initiated. President Lena Spence, in behalf of the Parlor, presented the Grand President with a souvenir spoon of San Luis Obispo.

Housewarming in New Quarters.

San Francisco—Wednesday, February 18th, Gabrielle Parlor, No. 139, entertained Rincón Parlor, No. 72, N.S.G.W., at a housewarming in the new quarters in Native Sons' Hall. A very pleasant evening was spent in singing and dancing. During the supper, the members were addressed by several well-known Natives, among whom was “Daddy” William J. Wynn, founder and organizer of Rincón Parlor. The committee in charge was Alice Collins, Martha Weigel, Nellie Hester, Sadie Johnson, Rita Normile, and Mahel Ayseough, chairman.

Observes Arbor Day.

Red Bluff—The afternoon of March 6th, the members of Berendos Parlor, No. 23, presented an excellent programme at the Red Bluff Union High School and planted part of a row of fine eucalyptus trees, in the presence of the faculty, school, trustees and a large assemblage of visitors. The day was one of those ideal spring days for which California is far famed. The high school is surrounded with spacious grounds, and already has some splendid trees, planted by the school authorities, such as eucalyptus, date palms, cork elms and redwoods. But, notwithstanding this, there are so far no trees on the western exposure of the grounds, and a part, only, of the southern exposure has trees planted. It was on this side that Berendos Parlor planted its trees, to partially complete the row already started, and the members hope to complete the work at another time. This is the first tree planting to be done at the high school by an outside organization. The program, which was presented on the grounds, opened with an excellent selection by the high school band under the direction of the instructor, Ed. Unash. Miss Golda Schoenfeld then, in a few words, explained that Arbor Day, being one of the special observance days of the Order, the members had this time decided to have their program and planting at the high school. Under the leadership of the instructor, Miss Hallie Owen, the high school then sang “I Love You, California,” the band accompanying. Miss Naomi Baker of Berendos Parlor then delivered an excellent address on “Arbor Day,” explaining its origin and presenting the subject fully. Next, Vern Fish and Elgin Norris, representing the school, spoke, respectively, about “Luther Burbank, His Home and Surroundings” and “Conservation and the Beautifying Effect of Trees.” After this the high school band rendered another selection. Professor Paul G. Ward, principal of the school, then spoke, paying a high tribute to the Native Sons and Native Daughters, and saying that the Native Sons and Native Daughters are the greatest assets the State has. His remarks, as well as those of the other speakers, were listened to with a great deal of interest and received with much applause. R. L. Douglas, president of the board of high school trustees, was also listened to with much interest. Next on the program was the planting of the trees and their dedication to the high school. Accompanied by the band, all present then joined in singing “America.” The committee having the affair in charge was Misses Golda Schoenfeld, Steina Epperson and Emma Crumhaugh Rambo.

Plant Laurel in School Yard.

Nevada City—Arbor Day, March 7th, was observed by Laurel Parlor, No. 6, by the planting of a laurel tree in the high school grounds. Thirty members of the Parlor attended the tree-planting exercises, Miss Annie Bley, the president, terminating her splendid dedicatory address with Lucy Lareom's beautiful tribute to trees. Following this, the members sang “America” and each one placed a shovelful of earth in the pit where the tree was set.

Plenty of Enthusiasm.

Oakland—Argonaut Parlor, No. 166, entertained the members of Claremont Parlor, N.S.G.W., March 10th, in a right royal manner, serving ravioli made by one of the members, and it would have done any one's heart good to have seen the way they disappeared. Dancing was indulged in, the music being furnished by the Claremont band. The uniformed drill team of Piedmont Parlor, N. D. G. W., was present and went through their evolutions in splendid style. They are a fine looking lot of women and make a splendid appearance. Argonaut is doing mighty well in the way of increasing its membership. A large delegation journeyed to East Oakland to help Brooklyn Parlor in the reception of Grand President Alison F. Watt. The hall was

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT

DEVOTED TO FARM, ORCHARD, GARDEN, POULTRY, DAIRYING, BEES, ETC.

Edited by GEORGE H. BANCROFT.

THE MEAT IN THE NUT.

PEAKING OF THE RELATION OF agricultural production to prices, Leon M. Estabrook, Chief of the Bureau of Statistics for the United States Government, and who conducted the estimate of the total value of farm productions in the United States for 1913—(the total production was estimated at $9,750,000,000; of this, much will never be sold, but remain on the farms where produced; reducing the net cash sales to $5,867,000,000)—remarks as to the effect on the high cost of living:

"However desirable increased production on farms may appear to be from the consumer's standpoint, it does not follow that such increased production would result in any increase in the cash income per farm or per capita of farm population, or that prices paid by consumers would be any lower.

"The long line of distributors and middlemen between the farmer and consumer are in a position to take advantage of the market, and to a certain extent control the market because they are better organized to keep informed of crop and market conditions and to act more promptly than either farmers or consumers, who are not organized, and as individuals are helpless.

"The high prices paid by consumers,—ranging from 5 per cent to nearly 500 per cent, in some cases more than the farmer receives,—indicate that there is plenty of room for lowering the cost of farm products to consumers and at the same time largely increasing the cash income per farm without increasing farm production. This condition is undoubtedly a marketing problem which will have to be solved by better organization of farmers and improved methods of marketing."

THE HOLSTEIN-FRESIAN

BREED OF DAIRY COWS.

(One of our readers has called attention to an error—through omission of complete data from our authority—in the article, "Another Good Cow," published in the February issue. We thank Miss Frakes very much for her letter. There appears to be no better way of squaring ourselves with that noble breed of dairy cows, the Holstein-Fresian, and her breeders who have brought her up to the present standard of perfection, than to publish the letter in full, which we do below.—Agricultural Editor.)

"Sutter Creek, California.

"My Dear Editor Grizzly Bear Magazine: In re 'Another Good Cow,' published in the last issue of The Grizzly Bear Magazine, let me say, that the article seems to be misleading, since I infer from the publication that 'Pear', a polled Durham cow, is now the world's champion of ALL breeds in the productivity of milk and butter-fat, she having just made a record of 13,001 pounds milk and 605 pounds butter-fat.

"The uninformed would naturally suppose, from the reading of this article, that 13,001 pounds of milk and 605 pounds of butter-fat, the record made by 'Pear', a polled Durham cow, was the highest record made by any cow, or breed of cows, up to date, while those who are conversant with the history of the Holstein-Fresian cow, know the facts to be otherwise.

"No doubt the article was written with the intention of informing the public, that 'Pear', a polled Durham, had, by giving 13,001 pounds of milk and 605 pounds of butter-fat in one year, become the world's champion of that particular breed of cattle, and in such case we congratulate the owner of 'Pear' for his endeavor to attain the world's record.

"The publication of such an article does an injustice, however, not only to the Holstein-Fresian cow, but to the many breeders thereof, and to the association which has been instrumental in bringing the productive ability of the Holstein-Fresian cow to its present high standard.

"The world's champion, Spring Farm Pontiac Lass, gives to the world an official test of 44.18 pounds butter in seven days, while 'Barnstone Belle De Kol,' 'High Lawn Hottot De Kol,' and 'Daisy Grace De Kol,' produced in one year 74,715.2 pounds milk containing 3,019.48 pounds fat. The average for each cow was 24,905.1 pounds milk and 1,174.24 pounds best commercial butter. Is not twelve tons of milk and 1,200 pounds of commercial butter a wonderful average for any three cows to make?

"There are dozens of other Holstein-Fresian cows I might mention which have astonished the world, at one time or another, by their wonderful records. The owners of 'Dutchland Creamelle Korndyke Lad' refused $10,000 for him when a calf six months old. Why? Because his five nearest dams, on the dam's side, and a full sister to his sire, have yearly records averaging 25,760.3 pounds of milk and 1,100 pounds butter.

"LAURA J. FRAKES,
"Secy. Panama-Pacific Dairy."

THE COTTONTAIL RABBIT PEST.

From information just received, we learn that the game laws protecting the cottontail still stand as originally passed. There are locations in Southern California where some relief should be given the farmers, enabling them to exterminate cottontails if possible, or at any rate abate the nuisance. Ground-squirrels and gophers should be classed with cottontails, in respect to their damaging habits. There are some predatory animals which the law allows one to kill at any time without a license. Mountain lions, coyotes and wildcats are mentioned.

In these same locations where the cottontail are so pestiferous, the last two named animals are a great help to the farmers in destroying injurious pests, both animal and insect. The cottontail rabbits are taken care of by these four-footed friends, else they would encumber the earth. Modern methods of poultry keeping, even in the country, provide perfect control of the fowl, so that coyotes are seldom able to kill any.

Some bunters have complained to the writer that they are unable to find cottontail during the open season. One reason for this condition is that while the cottontail is a wonderful breeder, the skill of the coyote is such that its numbers are greatly thinned out by July 1st. What are left are so frightened that they feed only at night, early in the morning, and late in the evening. The law providing that game cannot be taken one-half hour before sunrise or one-half hour after sunset, is a good joke on the gunner, as far as cottontail rabbits are concerned.

Notwithstanding the inroads made in the ranks of the cottontails by predatory animals and birds, they still abound during most of the closed season, to a very serious extent. The only thing farmers can do is to organize and show some political strength, or they will never secure relief from the cottontail pest. Of course the gunners are well organized, and they do not care a whoop for the farmer's troubles.

THAT PHENOMENAL VINE AGAIN.

Editor Grizzly Bear: You published a note regarding my mammoth blackberry vine in the November issue. Wish to state that the vine is meeting predictions. The vines in the aggregate cover two sides and top of an arbor, and while holding the original last year's leaves, are sending out an abundance of new leaves and blossom buds. The vines now make a solid green carpet 12 x 24 feet in size besides six feet of comparatively bare stalks and some eight or ten feet of straggling long vines in addition. If the blossoms come with any sort of profusion at any one time, will send you a photograph. We notice a number of blossoms now.

A READER.

THE SUB-SURFACE CRUST.

All farmers are familiar with crusts which form upon the surface of soils after a rain, and the remedy is known to most agriculturists. But how about the crust that forms just below the surface mulch?

The writer, during the days of his farm experience, was greatly puzzled by this condition in the orchard, and he thought of subsoiling to remedy the evil. He felt, however, that this would make matters worse, hence gave another cultivation and then noticed that the condition was improved. Since that time the full solution as to the "why" of the matter has been learned through the writings of Prof. H. W. Campbell, the soil expert of Lincoln, Nebraska. I now give the scientific explanation, as made public by Prof. Campbell:

The excessive heat of summer brings up the soil moisture through capillary attraction with great force. This moisture contains various salts in solution. A great part of the moisture is absorbed by the roots, which take the mineral substances needed. The remaining solution rises until it reaches the under side of the mulch, where the excessive heat turns it into vapor, which escapes through the mulch into the air, leaving the salts behind. This forms a crust over the packed sub-surface, which shuts out the air and causes the plant to suffer, or die by suffocation.

The remedy is cultivation, to break up the capillary channels in the mulch. You can dig down through the mulch and determine whether crust is forming or not. It would be better to anticipate this trouble and head it off by cultivation. If weather becomes hot, get out and cultivate. In cultivating do not go deep. You must not disturb roots of the crop, no matter what you do. Do not be stingy in cultivating during the approach of hot weather. "An ounce of prevention," etc.

LACK OF PROGRESS IN SOIL CULTURE.

The lack of progress in the science of soil culture is due largely to the fact that farmers have been slow to accept advanced ideas—they are prone to stay in the old rut, to farm in the same manner their fathers did before them. In fact, they have refused to believe some things advanced and advocated by those who have spent many years in special study and experiment.

Another reason is that farmers have not given proper encouragement, in the past, to their children, in order to make them contented on the farm. This and the lure of the city, have drawn heavily upon the farm population. The result is that much new blood has been lost to the farm.

Methods of farming have worn out the soils of the Eastern and Southern states, so that many farms are partly or wholly abandoned and can be bought for less than the cost of improvements. The fashion has been to crop lands continually, without fertilization or renovating the soil. Some of the Eastern farmers have caused their lands to depreciate in value, on account of lack of organization in marketing crops.

Now, we people of the West believe we have done much to improve marketing conditions. We have in mind organizations which specialize on apple crops, especially those of Oregon. These people are experts in ALL things connected with raising and selling apples. Their customers receive first-class fruit at a reasonable price. Compare the price of apple lands in Oregon with prices of land claimed to be equally capable of producing apple crops 2,000 or 3,000 miles in an easterly direction. We have in mind, also, our almond growers. Through organization, the almond growers have actually lowered the prices to consumers and at the same time pay the producer higher prices than before organization. Celery, tomatoes, walnuts, and other products are sold successfully through exchanges.

Raisin growers have been striving for years to find some method of marketing their products, but as far as we know they have not been satisfied with results. The same condition, almost, that renders our raisins slow of sale, exists in Greece with currants. The Grecian government has exerted its power to the utmost, and still there is a surplus of currants, and those sold bring low prices. People who know things, say the trouble is that people are not educated as to the uses of these products and their economic culinary value.

We admit that conditions are gradually changing for the better. Many farmers are aware that it would be possible to use better methods, but are unable to do so on account of finances. Many farmers live from hand to mouth, and cannot take a year to properly subdue the soil before beginning operations. To look more on the bright side of the matter, the drudgery of farm work has been greatly lessened through improved machinery, and in many cases farming is conducted in such a way as to bring a great measure of joy, content and profit to all the family, but these cases are not numerous enough.

TREES—Plant oranges, lemons and loquats. All deciduous trees should be set out by this time, and care taken that the soil is kept in good condition around them.

LAWNS—Lawns that have not received their annual top dressing of loam or manure should be attended to this month.

CACTUS—While the established plants (in this locality) commenced to show new growth March 1st, we still believe the better time to plant slabs (which should be matured or have at least nine to twelve months' growth) is late in April. The established plants will start with a minimum soil temperature, but the fresh cut slabs will require a soil temperature more nearly approaching the optimum (best). You will be throwing money away if you lay young, immature slabs.

INNOVATION PROVES SUCCESSFUL.

Spraying with nitrate of soda, applying fertilizer to the blossoms and branches of trees instead of to the roots, is the latest innovation in California horticulture, and, according to the reports of farmers and experts, the success has been phenomenal. Recent experiments in the Pajaro Valley with apple trees have produced wonderful results, one remarkable instance being where seven trees in the center of an impoverished orchard were sprayed, the others being left unsprayed. When fruit time came the seven sprayed trees were laden heavily, while all the other trees in the orchard were almost barren.

POULTRY

(By MRS. A. BASLEY.)

ECONOMY IN THE POULTRY YARD.

ETALUMA, SOMETIMES CALLED the "White Leghorn City," in Sonoma County, reports an export of over five million dozen eggs in the past year. Petaluma supplies San Francisco with eggs, yet even San Francisco has to import eggs from the Middle West, or, at least, she did until last winter, by the earload lot.

This should be a sufficient reply to an inquiry recently received, "Is the poultry business being overdone?" It certainly is not, in this country, and for the next half-century I believe it will be impossible to overdo the poultry business in California.

In talking over the matter with a member of one of our largest commission houses of poultry and produce—a firm which imports large quantities of poultry from Kansas and Nebraska by earload lots, both alive and dressed,—I was told that they simply could not get enough here to supply the demand. They use every effort to get local poultry, pay cash for all they buy, yet cannot supply the demand, and have to send over the Rockies for poultry to feed us. Does it not seem a pity to let all that good money go to the farmers in Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska and other states, when we might keep it in our own pockets?

"The price of food for fowls is so very high that it takes away most of the profits," argues one. I know it, and it seems a shame that a few gamblers in Chicago should be able to so "bet" on our food supply, or an imaginary supply, as to affect all the foodstuffs of the whole nation, and that we have not a Government that can stop this iniquity. But the plan is for poultry-raisers to economize as much as possible on the more expensive grains, and use those that are less costly.

For instance, a number of years ago an opportunity occurred so that I could buy over a ton of beans that had some weevils in them—not many—for about fifteen dollars. Finding that the hens would not eat them whole, I had them cracked, or coarsely ground. I found that the hens ate them more readily when I soaked them over night, adding about a small teaspoonful of bi-carbonate of soda. I used about two quarts of the beans and added a little salt and a teaspoonful of dried blood, set the kettle on the back of the stove at breakfast time, and when I got dinner I took it off and stirred in enough bran and alfalfa meal (if I had the latter) to make a dry, crumbly mash. I fed this at night, and my hens never did better; they liked it exceedingly. I fed about one iron spoonful for each hen. I have recommended beans many times since that, and have never heard a word of complaint of them.

Available Grains.

Available grains vary in price in different places. Wheat of course, we all know, is the best of all grains, as it contains more closely the same elements as does the egg. Barely is next in value, and oats about the same. If barley is cheaper than wheat, then utilize barley; that is to say, if there is a decided difference in the cost, remembering that barley has a husk on it, and that fowls do not like it as well as wheat, although they eat it readily if rolled or soaked or sprouted. In some places oats can be obtained very cheaply.

To make oats thoroughly available, they should either be scalded or clipped or, better still, hulled. In the large fattening establishments oatmeal, ground so fine that it may be called pulverized, has been found to be the best food for fattening fowls, mixing it with sour milk. This makes the flesh fine-grained, juicy and delicious. Next in order for fattening is barley meal, buckwheat flour, and cornmeal. There is, however, a quality in oats which analysts have not yet discovered and which induces vigor in the young, and I always fed a good proportion of oats in the ration for both chicks and for my breeders. I was willing to pay more for it for I was after VIGOR, and I got it.

Amongst the available grains are Kaffir corn, Egyptian corn, sorghum seed, and broom corn. These have almost the same nutritive value, and can be fed with very satisfactory results. One year, when on the farm, I had several tons of broomcorn seed which was left where the threshers had worked, and to which the fowls had free access; they also had green growing wheat. They got through with the moult early and laid profusely all through the winter—I never saw better laying. Sorghum seed is more fattening than wheat and less fattening than corn. I have found these smaller seeds better for the fowls, both large and small, than corn.

Three Food Essentials.

The three essentials for egg production (which my friends sometimes call my "rule of three") are comfort, exercise, and proper food. The three essentials of the proper food are grain, green vegetables, and animal food. And the getting of these three as economically as possible is the topic interesting poultry raisers, especially during these times of high prices. The green foods are the least expensive of all, and if only poultry-raisers realized their true value would spare no pains to get them. Among the "systems" now being advertised in the poultry papers is one that tells how three quarts of dry oats, when sprouted, make a good meal for a hundred hens once a day. This in theory is good; there are some wonderful theories going the round of the chicken press, which, in practice, do not always "pan out." For instance about the oats: nothing is better for egg production than sprouted oats, but you must be very particular not to let them mildew or ferment. There are many "green" foods, but there is something in oats which stimulates egg production more than any other vegetable grain I know of.

Alfalfa and clover are considered the best green food for hens, because they contain a very large amount of protein. To make them available, they should be cut in a clover cutter, putting the cutter to the quarter-of-an-inch length; this will make the size suitable for a hen or even for the chickens. A lawn mower cuts a clover lawn just the right length for the fowls to eat the clippings. In feeding green barley, rye, wheat, oats, they should all be run through the clover cutter, not only to utilize all the stem, but to prevent the hens from swallowing long lengths of it that might easily become packed or rolled into a ball in the crop. I have known of several cases of crop-bound from this cause.

Besides the clover and alfalfa, there are various vegetables, many of which may be had for almost nothing. Small potatoes can be picked up and kept for the hens; these can be chopped up in a few minutes. Also turnips, carrots, onions, and the outer leaves of cabbage, cauliflower, celery, etc. Small potatoes, carrots, turnips can be boiled, mashed (without peeling), mixed with bran and blood meal or milk, and make a good variety in the diet. If you have other vegetables, such as beets, cucumbers, squash, pumpkins, and find that at first the fowls do not like them whole, chop some up and mix bran with them, or sprinkle a little bran over, and soon the hens will acquire such a liking for them that there will be no need of chopping them up.

Economy in Labor.

In view of the high prices of food at present, and the need of economy, I would mention that nearly all kinds of fruit can be eaten with impunity by fowls. Peaches do not agree well with young turkeys, but I have not found that they hurt them, although they do not seem to like either peaches or plums as well as other fruit, such as figs, apples, pears. Turkeys are very fond of all nuts and of olives. Melons, in season, do not hurt the hens, although they do affect the kidneys and act as a purgative, if fed in very large quantities. There is very little nourishment in melons; they are about ninety-five per cent water, but they are appetizing, and a variety in the hot weather, and make a treat for the hens on a hot day.

An economy which should not be overlooked is economy in labor. Many a farmer's busy wife will agree with me in this. Economize the steps, and husband the strength. The dry feed method now becoming very popular is a great economy of strength, as well as of time. It is much easier to carry round a bucket full of dry food, nicely mixed in the right proportions, and put it into a box or trough or hopper and let the hens eat it dry, instead of laboriously mixing it with water.

Economy in labor may be made by having a water faucet in each pen, or one between each, so that two can be supplied at once. Fresh water is as important as good food, and if it requires but the turn of a faucet the hens are sure to be amply supplied. I would caution chicken-raisers against allowing the water to run in a stream from pen to pen, as that may carry infection, especially the infection of colds and roup.

Whilst on the subject of economy I would add that it is poor economy to buy spoiled grain of any kind. The best of grain is none too good and anything that is spoiled is apt to bring on disease. Wheat or any grain that has been moistened will become musty and develop fungoid growth, and smutty wheat is very bad for fowls. Corn that has been dampened ferments or sours, and that disagrees with fowls.

Passing of the California Pioneer

Rev. J. W. Brier who, at the age of 6 years, as a member of the famous Jayhawker party, came via the southern route to California through Death Valley in 1849, died at Lodi, February 25th, at the age of 71 years and 8 months. In the June, 1911, issue of The Grizzly Bear a full account of the thrilling experiences of this pioneer party, prepared by deceased, was published. The data for the article, Rev. Calm on the bosom of thy God
Fair spirit, rest thee now!

Even while with us thy footsteps trod,
This seal was on thy brow.

Long are the paths, and sad the hours,
Whence thy meek smile is gone,
But Oh! a brighter home than ours
In heaven is now thine own.

PLAN INDEPENDENCE DAY CELEBRATION

San Jose—The Native Sons of the Golden West of this city, represented by San Jose Parlor, No. 22, Garden City Parlor, No. 82, and Observatory Parlor, No. 177, have launched a movement for a monster Independence Day celebration to be held here, July 3rd, 4th and 5th, and to carry out the plans, the following celebration committee has been organized: H. D. Melvin (chairman), H. R. Tripp (secretary), A. B. Langford (treasurer), J. A. Desimone, J. A. Belloli, J. A. Anthens, W. J. Benson, Thos. Gavin, C. A. Merritt, J. M. Waterman, J. S. Williams, T. Monahan, M. J. Willoughby, J. W. Ganong, M. F. Mareball, D. P. Narvaez, John Moore, H. Jung, H. E. Hoff, T. R. Dougherty, L. Doerr, E. F. Distel, Earl Hall, W. L. Christman, H. W. McComas, J. McCabe, L. D. Bohnett.

The festivities will consist of parades, fireworks, games, sports, concerts, etc., and the city will be attractively decorated. Arrangements are being made for the entertainment of 25,000 Native Sons and Native Daughters, and their friends, on this occasion.

A formal invitation will soon be extended to all the Parlors to join in the celebration, and the publicity committee will personally visit every Parlor in the central part of the State to urge them to get behind the movement. At the Grand Parlor session in Los Angeles, this month, the matter will be brought up for official approval, already having been endorsed by Grand President Thomas Monahan, who is giving it every encouragement.

San Jose is known throughout the State as the rendezvous for all Natives in that particular section and the members of the Order there have often been the hosts upon Admission Day, and know how to entertain in a hospitable manner. As the San Jose Natives have always been most loyal to the Order and responded to the call of any other city in large numbers, it is a foregone conclusion that when this big event occurs there will be a nice surplus over to add to the building fund.

For, be it known, San Jose is going to have a Native Sons' hall very soon. This was firmly decided at a meeting of representatives of all the Parlors, March 7th, when plans for a five-story and roof-garden class A building were enthusiastically adopted.

The building association of the Parlors owns a fine piece of property on North First street, the main thoroughfare of San Jose, upon which the building will be erected at a cost of $75,000. Its promoters claim that it will be the finest fraternal edifice outside of San Francisco. Bonds will be sold to members of the Order only, to finance the project.

According to the plans adopted, the lower floor will be given over to stores; the second, to offices for professional men; third and fourth, to lodge-rooms; fifth, to a ball-room or assembly hall. This will be fitted with maple floors, large stage for theatricals, cloak-rooms, and every other feature to make it attractive. The roof-garden and open-air ball-room has been planned. Access to this will be by a wide stairway from the pergola. The roof-garden will be provided with cloak-rooms, a kitchen and buffet, in order that the guests at the open-air dances will not be called upon to leave the roof.

SOUTHERN COUNTIES GET

BIG SLICE SCHOOL FUNDS.

Sacramento—For support of the public schools, Edward Hyatt, Superintendent of Public Instruction, March 2nd set aside $2,165,616.68 for elementary (primary and grammar) schools, based on average daily attendance June 30, 1913.

Los Angeles County, with 66,952 pupils, gets the largest slice, $486,741.04; its next largest competitor is San Francisco, which gets $276,957.92 for 38,096 pupils. Next, in order, come Alameda County, 28,404 pupils, $206,497.08; Fresno County, 13,236 pupils, $96,225.72; San Diego County, 9,428 pupils, $68,541.56.

For the secondary (high) schools, $347,689.32 has been apportioned, the allowance being made on average daily attendance June 30, 1913. Here, again, Los Angeles County leads with 12,939 pupils, and gets $86,960.31. Of this number, according to the State Superintendent's segregated figures, 7,467 pupils are credited to Los Angeles City.

The next highest counties, and their apportionment, are, in order: Alameda, 4,458, $27,886.74; San Francisco, 3,364, $21,025.96; Santa Clara, 1,842, $13,734.18; San Diego, 1,546, $12,603.94. It requires but a little addition and subtraction to show that the total attendance at the high schools in these four counties (11,210) is 1,229 less than the total attendance (12,939) in the single county of Los Angeles.

HONORED BY OFFICIAL'S VISIT.

San Francisco—Grand President Alison F. Watt of Grass Valley officially visited Portola Parlor, No. 172, N.D.G.W., March 12th, and was accorded an enthusiastic welcome. Her words of greeting, coupled with interesting reports of the Order's work and progress, were received with attention and approval. In behalf of Portola Parlor, the visitors were received with a cordial welcome. In addition to the members of the Parlor, and the many visitors from other Parlors, there were present the following grand officers: Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Inside Sentinel Mary Bell and Grand Outside Sentinel Dora Bloom, who spoke on the principles of the Order. As a mark of esteem, Frances C. Britt, president of Portola Parlor, presented the Grand President a hand-painted china dresser-tray, while D.D.G.P. Mae Barry was the recipient of a cut-glass cologne bottle. Flowers were presented to all the grand officers, also to the president and officers of the Parlor. The trip to and from Native Sons' Hall, where the meeting was held, was made in a taxi, in which Frances C. Britt escorted the Grand President. The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion. A banquet closed the ceremonies.

GOOD WORK BEING ACCOMPLISHED.

Los Angeles—The southern branch of the Central Committee of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Children's Agency met at Native Sons' Hall, March 8th, those present being Josiah F. Lyon (chairman), Dr. Eva R. Bussenius, P.G.P. (secretary), Mrs. C. Reis of La Esperanza Parlor, Mrs. J. A. Adair of Los Angeles Parlor and A. Maehl, D. Taggart and Lou McCoy of Ramona Parlor.

The secretary read a lengthy report of the children handled since the last meeting in August. Excellent work is being done by the committee in charge, and the result shown by the reports of the members proved that good judgment was being exercised in placing the homeless little ones in good homes.

FRITTERING AWAY THE PEOPLE'S MONEY

The pavements shown in these cuts were built under the same specifications that the State Highway Commissioners are building the roads under the $18,000,000 bond issue.

Words are unnecessary to explain why this mode of construction is BAD. One year's use shows this better than columns of printed matter.

Stand up, Messrs. Highway Commissioners, and answer why The People's money is being frittered away on this class of roads?

The illustration on the right depicts a concrete pavement with asphaltum and screenings carpet, showing where carpet has worn off, principally at expansion joint. The photograph from which the cut is made was taken November 22, 1913, on Huntington Drive, near El Molino Station, Los Angeles County, California. The pavement was constructed in November, 1912.

4000-MILE HIKE

TO NATIONAL CAPITAL

The Pacific Coast has done much to attract the attention of the world, but one of the most unique things that has been formulated here and carried out to a successful termination was the organization of a hiking party consisting of several individuals who had been cured of so-called hopeless cases of tuberculosis by a remedy manufactured in Los Angeles and who were equipped there with pack burros and started to walk to Washington, D. C., to carry a letter to the President, offering to donate to the Government the formula for this remedy, providing the Government would keep it out of the hands of charlatans and treat the deserving poor free of charge. These cured patients, after walking 4000 miles, reached the White House a few weeks ago and delivered their message to the President, of which the following is a copy:

"Honorable Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.—Your Excellency: We bring you a message of hope for the millions afflicted with The Great White Plague:—ourselves rescued from the grave, have walked from Los Angeles to Washington as living testimonials of the fact that Tubercleide will cure consumption. "It is within your power, sir, to save the countless lives that are daily being needlessly sacrificed, and we trust that your universally-recognized democracy of principles, as well as governmental administration, will sever the iron hands of ethical medical prejudice, and give this remedy an impartial test in the Government Hospitals.

"We are authorized to say to you, by the discoverer of the Tubercleide, that he will surrender the formula to the Government if you will protect it from the hands of charlatans and give it to the poor free. Faithfully yours,

"A. A. BERGER,

"J. T. PRICE,

"CARRIE VAN GAASBEEK."

The caravan created a small sensation in Washington when it arrived, the parties all being in good health after their long trip; moving pictures were taken of the outfit as they, with their pack burros, went through the White House grounds and presented the letter to the President's secretary at the executive office, and more than a thousand metropolitan papers published the history of the trip, many of them illustrating it. The following reply was written the Tubercleide Company of Los Angeles by the President, which would indicate that he was deeply interested in this new specific for tuberculosis:

"The White House, Washington, D. C.

"My dear Sir: The President directs me to acknowledge the receipt of the letter which was left at the executive office yesterday by Mr. Price

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

PROUD OF LAW SCHOOL

Southern California has just cause to be proud of the College of Law, University of Southern California, which has become such an important factor in the history of the bar of California. During the past ten years it has grown from a student body of less than fifty to its present enrollment of over six hundred. Among its graduates will be found many prominent members of the bench and bar of Southern California. This year the freshman class numbers 298, the largest thus far in the history of the school. There are 93 seniors, 158 juniors, and the woman's department has an enrollment of 48. This growth is attributed, principally, to its excellent faculty, although the loyalty of its Alumni Association adds a great deal toward the increase of students each year.

This year, the College of Law has added another degree, Juris Doctor (J. D.) to those it has been conferring upon its graduates in the past. Many of the large Eastern law schools are giving this degree. The various courses of instruction lead to the following degrees:

The degree of Master of Laws (LL. M.) may be conferred upon those students who hold the degree of Bachelor of Laws (LL. B.) from this, or an approved institution maintaining a three year course of study, and who have completed in this department the fourth year of work prescribed by this College of Law.

The degree of Juris Doctor (J. D.) may be conferred upon those students who have received the degree of Bachelor of Arts (A. B.) or a substantially equivalent degree in the University of Southern California, or in an approved college or university, and who have pursued the study of law and others, and to say that he is bringing it to the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury for reference to the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service. Very truly yours,

"W. TUMULTY,

"Secretary to the President.

"President, Tubercleide Company, Los Angeles, Cal."

If this remedy proves to be all that is claimed for it—and several thousand cases have already been treated successfully—California will have one additional feature along with its many others placed to its credit to attract the attention of the world.—(Advertisement.)

The Government has just sold 43,000 cords of cedar wood for shingles from the Washington national forest. The shingles manufactured from this wood, laid six inches to the weather, would cover two and one-half square miles of roof.

in this department for three university years, completing in full the curriculum prescribed by this college of law; or who have completed two years in an approved law school and taken the third year in this department, and who have maintained a standard of scholarship for the three-year course of at least 85%. The A. B. degree must have been secured before entering upon the third year of work in the law school.

The degree of Bachelor of Laws (LL. B.) may be conferred upon students who are graduates of a high school maintaining a four-year course of study, or of another educational institution whose course is equivalent to such a four-year high school course, and who have pursued the study of law in this college for three university years, or in any approved law school for two years followed by one year in this college, and who have completed in full the course prescribed in this institution, and have maintained throughout a standard of scholarship of at least 75% in every subject. Credit received in summer sessions will count toward such degrees.

Dean Porter realizes that the well-equipped lawyer must have the power of oratory and debate highly developed, and to that end has encouraged the men and women of the law school to take up joint debates. This year has been one of the busiest debating seasons in the history of the school. Six debates were arranged with other institutions, one of which has already taken place. This was the annual between the local law school and Northwestern University at Chicago. The local team received a unanimous decision. The other debates will take place later on in the spring, and are as follows: The first will be with Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah, second with the University of North Dakota to be held in Los Angeles, third with Oklahoma University at Norman, Oklahoma, and the last two between Whittier College and the two freshman teams at the College of Law, both debates to be held on the same evening, one in Whittier and the other in the assembly-room at the law school, Tajo building, Los Angeles.

The home of the College of Law, U. S. C., in the Tajo building, First and Broadway, Los Angeles, is ideally located. It is in the center of hundreds of law offices and close to the courts. The hours of recitation are arranged so as not to inconvenience those students who are employed in law offices. There are classes before nine o'clock in the morning and after five o'clock in the afternoon, leaving a student free from nine till five during the day. This arrangement is considered one of the most attractive features of the law school, and the night classes are also very popular among business men. It behooves Southern California to support this College of Law. Its faculty is second to none in the United States, and the curriculum and method of instruction equal to any of the best-known law schools in the East.—(Advertisement.)

STATE'S ONWARD MARCH

(February Bulletin, California Development Board.)

In the first month of the year before the opening of the great world-wide exposition at San Francisco, California finds itself facing conditions that are most promising—an abundant and seasonable rainfall to insure bountiful crops and the profitable prosecution of other industries, and the exposition company with its program of preparation right on schedule time for the opening.

Building and general construction work, both public and private, is active throughout the State, especially in the bay cities and in Southern California. The re-financing of several large enterprises, batted for a time, promises a renewal of large and profitable work under favorable auspices.

The citrus shipments up to February 16th were 11,874 carloads, against 8534 same date 1913. Foreign exports for January, $5,430,841; non-contiguous territory exports for the same month, $1,389,868. Canneries look for a busy year, their buyers being already in the field.

Traction engines about Sacramento, with three crews, are plowing night and day, seeding and harrowing at the same time, working by electric lights. A bridge is planned across the lower Sacramento delta region. Various counties have taken $1,654,000 State highway bonds; other counties have agreed to take $1,088,000 more. The acreage in grain promises to be greater this season than for many years past.

Land sales have been numerous. Among them are reported more than 20,000 acres near Woodland, which have been put on the market for small farms. The famous Santa Margarita ranch, 22,000 acres, near San Luis Obispo, and the Santa Rosa ranch, 16,000 acres, in upper Santa Barbara County, are to be marketed in small tracts, 10 to 40 acres.

Three San Diego enterprises, together capitalized at $3,000,000, are reported sold to New York interests. A new town is growing up at Minnesota, Shasta County, where a great concentrator is to be built. The town of Westwood, Lassen County, started July 2, 1913, is growing fast and can now accommodate 4000 people.

The large new pumping station on the reclamation project near Knight's Landing is nearing completion, at a cost of $250,000; fifty miles of levee, at a cost of $1,500,000, and a hundred miles of roads have been constructed. That Owens River water will flow through the Los Angeles distributing system May 1st, is the announcement of Engineer Mulholland. A second railroad track will be built over the Tebachapi this spring, at a cost of $7,000,000.

Many of the forest fires attributed to railroads are caused not by sparks from locomotives, but by cigar and cigarette butts thrown from smoking-car windows.

A 4000 Mile Tramp

From Los Angeles, California to Washington, D. C.

On the Arizona Desert

These people have just completed an endurance tramp of 4000 miles, en route from Los Angeles to Washington, D. C., to prove to the world that there is a cure for tuberculosis and to deliver a letter to President Wilson, asking for an investigation of the remedy and offering it to the Government free, if they will keep the formula out of the hands of charlatans and treat the poor free, as the Tubercleicide Company is doing. Three of these people were genuine victims of the dread disease in its last stages. They were treated by some of the noted specialists on the Pacific Coast, but without relief, and were restored to health by a few months' treatment of Tubercleicide, as evinced by this remarkable journey.

They delivered their letter to the President, as here shown, and the long sought for investigation was at once ordered by the President, as described by recent press dispatches and the confirmation of the same by a letter from the President himself to the Tubercleicide Company.

Tubercleicide is the one proven and guaranteed treatment for tuberculosis, which fact has been demonstrated by four years of successful tests, 200 cases having been successfully treated in Los Angeles and 2000 elsewhere. You can see and talk with cured persons in Los Angeles. Eminent physicians have investigated and endorsed it and are prescribing it for their patients. Tubercleicide is an internal remedy, a specific which absolutely eliminates tubercle bacilli from the human body. It is a home remedy, taken with meals, not a hypodermic, nor does it require a physician to administer it.

Is sold under a positive guarantee; the price is low and you may have your money back at the end of 30 days, if not satisfied.

resources and wonders of California. The truest and best citizenship springs from love of home and country. Pride in the history and traditions of our State will tend to stimulate patriotism. The organization which promotes such work best subserves the welfare of the Commonwealth.

He who, unselfishly, works for the welfare of the State by rendering happy and contented all classes of its people, who plants a rose where a thistle grew or a tree to give shelter by the highway, who cultivates the artistic taste of the people and elevates the character of citizenship, who preserves, by means of monuments and schools, the achievements of the founders of the Commonwealth and beautifies our cities and develops the resources of our State, is the benefactor of his country. Loyalty should also be taught in all fraternities, for the strength of the Nation is its liberty-loving sons and citizens, whose hearts beat high when the Flag is borne by in the parade.

This is the character of work in which the Native Sons of the Golden West is engaged, and we believe that every son of California should enlist in the movement. It is not narrow in its aims, or selfish in its pursuits, but proud of California; and, glorying in the achievements of the Pioneers, its members are striving for the welfare, the honor, and the advancement of their State and their country.

able diminution of assets, since they ordinarily have rather nominal assets. Sickness has not been as heavy a charge as last year, for while more members have been relieved, the aggregate amount paid them is less by a thousand dollars or so than was paid in 1912. The total assets reported by the Parlor on December 31st last are, in round numbers, $786,900, an increase in assets of $30,500.

The actual financial prosperity of the Order is even greater than shown by the books, for in a number of cases Parlor are carrying on their books at actual cost investments which have much increased in value. The membership accessions, while only one hundred and fifty-eight greater than those shown by the preceding year's reports, are encouraging when viewed in the face of general business depression, which it had been feared would prevent any forward movement at all.

The financial gains, and the activity shown by the Parlor in providing themselves with their own meeting halls and homes, are matters of congratulation, for each hall or home forms an anchor to hold fast to that particular Parlor the members thereof. The ties of fraternal brotherhood are wonderfully strengthened by the knowledge that in a manner they are measurable by a substantial figure with a dollar mark in front of it.

Limber-neck.

In using beef scraps, meat meal, blood meal, or any animal food, be careful to buy the best you can get, and keep it carefully away from any dampness. Dampened or spoiled animal food is poisonous to the chickens. Many a fowl has died from ptomaine poisoning from eating spoiled animal food. Limber-neck is a disease caused by the fowl having eaten something putrid. Its neck is so weak (really paralyzed) that it cannot hold its head up, and it dies. Sometimes, when a fowl has only a slight quantity of the poison, only one side may be affected, or it will go backward or sidewise, as if sunstruck, or it may have convulsions and turn over backwards. These are the symptoms of ptomaine poison from using bad meat or bad animal food; the symptoms of poisoning from mildew are very similar. The treatment is first a dose of castor oil (a teaspoonful) or half a teaspoonful of epsom salts; follow this with a half teaspoonful of hyposulphite of soda in half a cup of water; give a teaspoon of this every two or three hours until the fowl is relieved. For the following week give a little bi-carbonate of soda in the drinking water (a level teaspoonful to a quart of water). And if the fowl is very weak mix a raw egg with the same amount of good olive oil and beat well; give a teaspoonful every two hours.

IRRIGATING GRAIN ACRES.

According to the irrigation investigation of the Government Department of Agriculture, there are now more than 2400 acres of grain being irrigated in the territory immediately contiguous to Woodland, Yolo County, California, most of which is harley. One of the most scientifically irrigated tracts is 500 acres in extent. Three hundred acres are irrigated from a ditch and the remainder from pumping plants. The investigation also disclosed that the cost for water per acre is about $1.63 a year. The average yield of grain was about twenty-four sacks to the acre. Irrigated oats yielded more than two tons of hay to the acre, while wheat averaged about one and one-fourth tons to the acre.

assisting in the restoration of historic El Camino Real, connecting all the old missions of the State, and has erected numerous hell sign-posts along the Real to mark the way. Purchased land and buildings for a Native Sons Home at Coloma, where gold was discovered by Marshall.

Encouraging California History Study.

Established two Fellowships in the University of California for the study and research of early Pacific Coast and California history, a work for which the Order makes an annual appropriation of $3000, and which will cost from $20,000 to $25,000 before it is completed.

Secured legislation making the ninth of September—Admission Day—a legal holiday, and annually celebrates the same. Secured the adoption of the Bear Flag as the State Flag of California. Secured the passage of an act by the last Legislature for the erection of a Bear Flag monument at Sonoma. Was first to spread the gospel of "home industry," thus assisting in building up the material welfare of California, and encouraging and building up our varied industries.

Established The Grizzly Bear magazine, official organ of the Native Sons and Native Daughters, the peer of any magazine in the Great West.

Erected in the city of San Francisco a magnificent eight-story structure, at a cost of over $300,000, which is the only fraternal building in that great city that stands free of debt.

Recently dedicated a beautiful three-story temple in the city of Napa, which is the most pretentious building in the entire Napa Valley. Is preparing to erect a $200,000 building at Stockton, and a $150,000 structure at Sacramento.

Presented to the Panama-Pacific Exposition a large and handsome Bear Flag, which flies over the world's fair grounds. Intends to erect a monument at Donner Lake, costing $50,000, in memory of the pioneers of the ill-fated Donner party, and toward which the State has appropriated $5000.

Intends to secure a grove of magnificent redwoods in Humboldt County for a public park. Is preparing to erect a granite shaft at Rich Bar, Plumas County, as a tribute to the Pioneer miners.

Will ask the Legislature to pass an act for the teaching of early California history in the public schools of this State, and also to have the State prepare a roster of California Pioneers. Intends to petition the Legislature to apply historic names to the great State highways now being constructed, and to have suitably marked all the old emigrant roads and trails.

Leads in All Civic Improvements.

Has introduced in the United States Congress a measure to make Lake Tahoe, the greatest high-altitude fresh-water lake in the world, a national park. Will plant a memorial tree in every city where future Grand Parlor are held, the first of which will be at Los Angeles.

Established the Grizzly Bear Club, on the eighth floor of the Native Sons building in San Francisco, where all the Native Sons in California are ever welcome. Maintains in the city of San Francisco and in all other cities employment agencies to assist in securing employment for unemployed members.

Finds homes for California's homeless children, without regard to creed or nationality. Intends to suggest names for some twenty-five of California's nameless mountain peaks. Is raising funds to assist in the erection of a Pioneer Mothers' monument, symbolizing motherhood, in the Fine Arts buildings at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Tenders annual receptions to Pioneer men and women in various communities of California. Takes the lead in civic improvements in all parts of the State where there are Parlors. In some communities Parlors have committees to welcome and entertain Eastern settlers and newcomers to California. Has assisted, and is assisting, in beautifying cities and towns by the planting of trees and shrubbery, the laying out of public parks, establishing free libraries, and making other public improvements.

Has saved Indian reservations and other domains from private usurpation. Has never been found dilatory in assisting public charities. Has paid out for the relief of sick and needy members a sum exceeding $1,500,000, while the aggregate wealth of the 200 Subordinate Parlors is over $800,000.

Is not the above enough evidence to convince any State-loving, loyal and patriotic Californian, who takes pride in the State of his birth—the greatest State in the greatest country of all the world—and who desires to become a factor in its development and in the laudable work carried on by our beloved Order, that our purposes are lofty and that he owes it, as a duty to himself and to his State, to become a member of the Native Sons of the Golden West?

HISTORY FELLOWSHIPS

fornia as a result of the Portola Expedition and the Seven Years' War in Europe, which came to an end in 1763, was established.

Mr. Briggs did much more than this; he discovered the home of Galvez and made it possible to put together a biography of the great Spanish statesman who brought about the first real knowledge of Upper California. Mr. Briggs further discovered documents that throw light on the history of the Council of the Indies, and by his investigations in Seville cleared up many minor points in the history of the early exploration of California. His work was essentially pioneer work. The authorities at Simancas, in Madrid, and at the Archivo de Indias at Seville gave him every encouragement, when they found that he came to them, not as a mere individual researcher, but as the delegate of a powerful organization which was patriotically interested in the early history of its State.

Mr. Briggs, the first Native Sons Fellow, opened communications and cleared the way, and he was followed in 1912 by the second Native Son Fellow, Charles E. Chapman, who took up the work where it was left by Mr. Briggs and devoted himself to the particular investigation of the documents at Seville concerning the exploration and settlement of Alta California. Mr. Chapman took as his special topic the Auza Expedition, an inland—as opposed to a seaboard—immigration into California, and he has discovered an immense amount of documentary material which for the first time gives the full hearing of the exploration and settlement of California from the Mexican and Spanish standpoint.

Will Be at Pacific Ocean's Discovery Centenary.

So excellent was Mr. Chapman's work that he was reappointed in 1913 to the Native Sons Fellowship, and he has since discovered not only important documents but the original texts of some of the most important of the early historical works of Spanish historians of California. A few months ago he was joined in Seville by W. L. Schurz, whose special topic of investigation has been the relation between Mexico and the Philippine Islands, a relationship which throws the greatest light on the history of the navigation and commerce of the Pacific Ocean in the days of the Spanish monopoly.

But the labors of the Native Sons Fellows in Pacific Coast History will not only appear in their printed work, but will be made increasingly evident as the years go by in making accessible to other students the material that exists in Spain on California History. These young men have now convinced the authorities in Spain that California cares for its history. They have been looked upon as the intellectual representatives of the State of California. Mr. Chapman, for instance, represented the State of California at the great celebration at Father Junipero Serra's birthplace, Petra in Majorca, last September and was the only American there present. In the course of his Spanish speeches he emphasized the fact that his presence was due to the generosity and wise foresight of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

Mr. Schurz has been appointed representative of the University of California at the celebration which is to be held at Seville next September of the fourth centenary of the discovery of the Pacific Ocean, and he, too, will, by his mere presence, testify to the grandeur of the ideas of the Native Sons in sending representatives to Spain. In the time to come, it is to be hoped that other representatives of the Native Sons will investigate the material that lies in London and Paris and St. Petersburg upon the history of California. Nor should American material be neglected. The records at Washington and at Sacramento, the collections made by H. H. Bancroft now preserved at Berkeley, and the local and family records all over the State must be investigated in order to throw light on the history of California civilization.

It seems as if the day is at hand when the dream of the original committee of the foundation of a chair of California History in the State University may be realized, and it would be a singular compliment to the foresight of the Native Sons if the choice of the Regents of the State University should fall upon one of the Native Sons Fellows to fill the first chair of California History at the State University. If this should happen, the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West may well pride themselves on having done a unique service to the State in training a Professor of California History to train the future teachers of their children to understand and honor the founders of California.

THE HETCH-HETCHY VALLEY.
(An Appreciation.)

No alpine fastness here,
No towering peak for Seer
To muse o'er sublime challenge
Or gaze on vast black menace
Of canyon from terraced cliff.

No music of wonderful silence
Pitched 'gainst wall of precipice,
Or murmuring of winds
Bringing the wail of memories
Of men long dead.

No reaching granite wonderment,
Or suggestion of infinite:
No nude, jagged, time worn bluffs,
Bordering a past and blessings
Of nature's awful eminence.

Nothing, Nothing, but a vale
In the embrace of spongy hills:
Aye, a pocket with elevation,
A watershed wasting its mission
To cup the mountain's nectar.

A plain valley floor,
Plain wooded hills, aft' and before
No part of Yosemite's grandeur:
Site for a mirror to reflect grander
This gift of a State to its Nation.

Site for man built reservoir
Greeting El Capitan with answer:
'I gather heaven's rich drippings,
To reflect your glories
And quench a vast thirst below.

"Mere hills I conquer,
And conquering conjure
Service for manifold needs
With wonderful acts and deeds,
Leaving Yosemite undefiled.

"In this new service
Yosemite's glories will rise,
New guardian of health,
Unconquerable barrier to wealth,
Undesecrated."

NAPA DEDICATES NEW HOME

Napa—After years of planning, the members of Napa Parlor, No. 62, N.S.G.W., saw their hopes realized when, on February 19th, their handsome building, which will henceforth be the Parlor's home, was opened to the general public. The occasion was in the nature of a public reception, and thousands availed themselves of the opportunity to inspect the handsome quarters, and to compliment the members on the success of their achievements.

February 21st, the building was formally dedicated, and it proved the greatest event in Napa Parlor's history. Four hundred members of the Order were in attendance, including many Grand Officers and large delegations from near-by places.

The Parlor assembled in the main lodge-room of its new home, with President Fred Flake presiding. At 9 o'clock the impressive dedication ceremonies round window back of the presiding officer's station depicts the great seal of the State. A large anteroom, as well as committee-rooms, all equipped with every convenience, adjoin.

To the right on this floor is another lodge-room, 25x47 feet, cosily furnished, and provided with anteroom and paraphernalia-room for the convenience of organizations that will meet there. On this floor are also six offices.

On the third floor are the club-rooms and banquet-hall. The latter is 35x49 feet and has a seating capacity of 200; adjoining is a large kitchen, fully equipped, and storerooms. The club-rooms are cosy, well ventilated and lighted, and contain billiard, card and reading tables. These rooms occupy a space 33x53 feet, and are finished in pine and elm.

A stairway leads to the roof, where a roof-garden, overlooking the entire city, will be completed

Troy of San Francisco.

Forty candidates were then initiated by the officers of Napa Parlor, who officiated in a most creditable manner. With these additions, the Parlor's membership is now well beyond the 350 mark. It is one of the oldest and most substantial in the Order, and among its membership boasts two Past Grand Presidents—Hon. Frank L. Coombs and Superior Judge Henry C. Gesford.

A flow of oratory followed, Nathan F. Coombs, District Attorney of Napa County, acting as master of ceremonies, and prominent men from various parts of California responding to toasts. All waxed eloquent in their remarks in summing up the advancement made by the Order, and extended their hearty congratulations to Napa Parlor. Among the speakers were Grand President Thomas Monahan, Past Grand President Charles M. Belshaw, Grand Trustee Jo V. Snyder, Past Grand President Henry C. Gesford, Grand Trustee William I. Traeger, Grand Third Vice-president Bismarck Bruck, Past Grand President Frank L. Coombs, Historiographer Daniel Q. Troy, Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung, and John T. York, of the Parlor's building committee.

It was past midnight when the spacious banquet-room was reached. Here the members of Eschol Parlor, N.D.G.W., served, and the tables were laden with every delicacy.

NAPA PARLOR'S NEW HOME.

Napa Parlor's beautiful new home is a three-story structure of all-steel, fireproof construction, 70x120 feet, and occupies the corner of First and Coombs streets. Stores occupy the first floor. The entrance to the upper floors, in the middle of the building on Coombs street, is finished in marble and oak.

To the left of the second floor is the main lodge-room, 41x68 feet, with lofty vaulted and artistically beamed ceilings, exquisitely moulded cornices and pilasters, and is finished throughout in mahogany. Art-glass windows, showing grapevine and poppy effects are a feature, while the big shortly. The furnishings of the building throughout are both tasteful and elaborate, and Napa Parlor has a home that will compare favorably with that of any fraternal organization in a city of like population.

ACCESSIBLE TO ALL

San Francisco—One of the purposes of the Legislature in creating the State Compensation Insurance Fund was to make industrial insurance accessible to the smallest employer in the remotest nooks and corners of the State. The Commission is preparing to provide every city and county clerk and treasurer with the necessary manual of rates and classifications and printed matter, in order that they may be enabled, for the convenience of the employer seeking insurance, to fill out insurance fund applications for compensation insurance in such fund, as required by law.

The saving to the people of the State in the great reduction in the number of damage suits in the courts, and the fact that not society, through increased taxation for the support of crippled workers, widows, and orphans, but the industry itself will have to stand the cost of caring for the maimed and killed workers and their dependents, will on the whole more than offset the social cost of industrial accident insurance, to say nothing of the value to society in having the injured worker retain his self-respect by receiving compensation instead of charity.

Notwithstanding the exclusion of the farm laborers from the benefits for accidental injury, many farmers are electing to come fully within the operation of the new law, in the belief that it affords them greater protection by limiting the cost of accidents, than would be the case if they were to take their chances of possible heavy damages in suits at law. Election to come under the compensation law and insurance against the liability for compensation gives to the farmer complete protection. The State Compensation Insurance Fund is proving a pronounced success, as evidenced by the hundreds of applications for insurance which have already been registered by employers.

A Bank Where Personal Service is a Hobby

SUCH a Bank is one with which it is extremely desirable for you to do business. The big capitalist doesn't have to seek personal service in a bank. He doesn't have to seek the extra little courtesies and considerations which go to make up what we understand by Service. The very amount of his deposit, the size of his account, guarantees him such personal attention and courtesy. It is the small merchant, the savings depositor, the man who is trying hard to increase an account that to him seems inadequate, who needs that strong, personal, helpful element in banking service.

And he gets it here, invariably!

HOMES FOR HOMELESS

how it is being cared for. In this way the Central Committee is enabled to keep in touch with every child placed until final adoption. If, for any reason, the home is unsatisfactory or the child does not suit the home, it is taken away by the Central Committee and another home is secured for it.

Over Half Thousand Children Placed.

The first child was placed by the Central Committee on August 27, 1910, and up to March 1, 1914, 507 children have been placed in good homes. Of these, only eighty have been replaced, so that 427 different children have been handled. Of these, 242 are under the supervision of the Central Committee and the committees of the Parlors of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W., 127 have been adopted, 12 have died, and 26 have been returned to the parents or institutions. From April 1, 1913, to March 1, 1914, 176 children have been placed. The total cost of placing a child during the last fiscal year has been a little over $34 per child, which is very much less than such cost for any other home-finding society in the State.

The Central Committee does not conduct an orphan asylum, and while some money is expended for the board of the children while they are awaiting placement, it is the endeavor of the committee to keep from the payment of board as much as possible, as it is desired to use the funds entirely for the placement of children. The children are obtained from orphan asylums, maternity homes, juvenile courts and from parents who cannot afford to take care of them.

The work of the Central Committee has nearly reached its limit with the funds that are provided—about $5600 per year. While most of the Parlors of the two Orders are much interested in the work and contribute liberally to the funds of the Central Committee, still there are some Parlors that have not as yet realized the great importance of the work, and have failed to contribute to the fund.

It is the hope of the Central Committee that before long every Parlor of both Orders will come to a realization of the great good that is being accomplished by the Central Committee, and that they will contribute to the fund, thereby furnishing a larger amount of money in order that more children may be placed.

The Central Committee is made up of the following representatives: Native Sons—C. M. Belshaw, P. G. P., H. G. W. Dinkelspiel, E. F. Moran. Native Daughters—Olive Bedford Matlock, P. G. P., Alison F. Watt, Grand President, Genevieve Watson Baker, P. G. P. Catholic charities—Mrs. W. G. Hitchcock. Protestant charities—C. A. Murdock. Hebrew charities—L. Solomon. Associated Charities of San Francisco—Fairfax H. Wheelan.

The office of the Central Committee is located at room 855 Phelan building, San Francisco, telephone Sutter 993, Miss Marie Brusie, secretary, being in charge. Those who wish to make application for children, or who desire further information relative to the work, are requested to communicate as above.

EXTENSION COMMITTEE ENDORSES OFFICIAL ORGAN

San Francisco—The San Francisco Extension Committee of the Native Sons of the Golden West held an enthusiastic meeting at Native Sons' Hall, March 6th. Encouraging reports were received from all the sub-committees, and if present indications are a criterion, the Extension Committee will certainly make good on their pledge to increase the membership of the Order in San Francisco at least one hundred per cent by 1915.

On the recommendation of the committee on entertainment, it was decided to hold a grand reception and high jinks at Native Sons' Hall in honor of the Grand Officers and delegates to the Grand Parlor to be held in Los Angeles in April, the date to be fixed for some evening just preceding the departure of the delegates for the southern city. The reception will be held in the main auditorium, and addresses will be made by a number of the prominently active members of the Order, including Hiram W. Johnson, Governor of the State of California; James Rolph, Jr., Mayor of San Francisco; Thomas Monahan, Grand President, Mayor of San Jose; D. A. Ryan, United States Judge M. T. Dooling, Lewis F. Byington and Judge Frank Dunne, Past Grand Presidents; John F. Davis and Louis H. Mooser, Grand Vice-presidents; County Clerk H. I. Mulerevy and Jesse C. Allan, past president and president, respectively, of the Extension Committee. The speechmaking will be interspersed with a program of the best vocal and instrumental talent obtainable.

After the reception, the smoker and high jinks will be held in the rooms of the Grizzly Bear Club, top floor N.S.G.W. building, at which refreshments will be served and entertainers will be on hand from all the fashionable theaters and cafes in the city.

Upon motion of H. I. Mulerevy, the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, The San Francisco Extension Committee of the Native Sons of the Golden West, recognizing the necessity for an official organ for the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, and appreciating the benefits derived from the publication of The Grizzly Bear, a monthly magazine devoted to all California; and

Whereas, In order to make said publication, The Grizzly Bear, more beneficial to the State, and more effective in its publicity of our Order, be it

Resolved, That we use our best efforts to continue said publication, The Grizzly Bear, as the official organ of the Native Sons of the Golden West; and be it further

Resolved, That we urge all members of the Order to become subscribers to said publication, The Grizzly Bear.

PHELAN ACTS AS GODFATHER.

San Francisco—Saturday, March 7th, at high noon, George Berge Welch, the infant son of George F. Welch, member of Precita Parlor, N.S.G.W., was christened at St. Bridget's Church. Ex-Mayor James D. Phelan, a member of Pacific Parlor, N.S.G.W., and his sister, Miss Phelan, acted as sponsors at the christening. Mr. Welch has served as Grand Trustee, and is a well-known member of the Order in this city. He has been connected with the Phelan interests for many years.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA'S FIRST CENSUS

(By ED L. HEAD, Past President of Stanford Parlor, No. 76, N.S.G.W., Keeper of the State Archives.)

OW FEW A NUMBER OF OUR members, or Californians in general, know what a lot of the history of our State is contained in this department. Priceless documents are on file, and are about all that is left of an official character in the State.

In the great fire in San Francisco, which destroyed the Government buildings, a great number of the old documents in the United States Surveyor-General's and Land Office were burned up, and records that can never be replaced were lost. Ever since California became a State, the Legislature has, from time to time, made provisions for the safe-keeping of these valuable records. I hope the time will come when the Legislature will provide for absolute fireproof rooms, in which all the archives of the State can be placed and preserved by future generations.

from 1850 to 1913. Records of all the Legislatures, from the first to the fortieth sessions. Maps and records of the tide lands, deeds to all State properties, records of vote at all State elections, and many more documents of various descriptions too numerous to mention.

Last, but not least, are the Governors' executive records, from the administration of Governor Peter H. Burnett, March 6, 1850, of Bigler, McDougal, Johnson, Weller, Downey, the great war Governors of California, Leland Stanford and Frederick F. Low, and those who have followed after them, up to Gillette.

What a great political and historical fund of information is contained in these executive records for someone who, in the future, will delve into them.

It is our duty, as Native Sons of the Golden West, to see that they are kept free from danger and in a safe place, as they are more valuable than gold source of funds for maintenance of the State highway the Highway Commission was entirely without money for maintaining the road already constructed. In spite of the severe demands through abnormal weather conditions of the present winter, the highway engineer's force was able to keep up the highway without material loss.

Now that maintenance funds are made available, the plans submitted to the Highway Commission some time ago by Highway Engineer Fletcher, providing for maintenance, will be made effective. These include organization of a veritable "flying squadron" for maintenance of the 2700 miles of State highway on which work is now under way. By use of the motor truck the amount of territory covered by one maintenance outfit is greatly widened and quick repair work in case of floods will be possible. The maintenance plans as developed by Highway Engineer Fletcher and approved by the Commission are especially adapted to the widely varying conditions of California highways.

The State has been laid out in seven divisions for maintenance purposes by the highway engineer, and in each of these divisions there will be installed a complete repair outfit costing probably about $20,000. The major portion of the expense will be for motor spraying outfits for making surface applications of bitumen. These will be heavy duty trucks carrying huge tanks for California asphaltic oil, while smaller trucks will distribute sand or screenings. It is estimated that the crews with these will make as high as fifty miles a day.

TO AN OLD SPRUCE TREE

(Which was felled February 5, 1914, in the yard of the late Jas. Sheridan, at Downieville, California.)

Good-bye, old tree. For sixty years or more thou hast spread thy branches in defiance of sun and storm, lifting up thy head to thy Maker, thus ever looking "upward and onward," constantly putting before our eyes what progress can be attained by even slow and tedious growth. In thy solitude thou hast stood as a monument to time, having watched the growth of old Downieville.

Thou hast been a silent sharer in all our joys and sorrows; an inspiration to us at all times. As we gazed upon thy majestic size thee brought us closer to Mother Nature and to our God. Admiring His divine power and wisdom in making thee so grand and so sublime. Thou hast sheltered the old town church and listened to many a prayer and choir singing on the Sabbath Day, bending thy tall head in fitting benediction, it would seem. How the little children, tired of their studies at school, loved to play and rest beneath thy cool boughs!

Above all others didst thou tower, and protect us from the shower, like some sentinel guarding all, in summer or winter, from the inclemencies of the weather. And, after years of absence from the old home, with what a thrill of joy, which brought back old, sweet memories, have we gazed upon thee and noted thy growth. And, leaving, felt as though another staunch old friend had been greeted once again.

Thou hast been the pride and boast of every loyal Downievillean, and the admiration of all strangers. Many a traveler hast blest thy cool shade after a tramp on hot and dusty roads, when he paused beneath thee weary and foot-sore. The birds of the air made thee their home and refuge, especially old robin has caroled his morning song from thy tree-top, awakening the slumberers to their realization of another dawn. Thou hast been an example of fortitude, for whether in care or abuse, thou hast ever been fresh and cheerful to behold—the same dear old evergreen.

But, alas! the ruthless ax has lain thee low, and never again shall we enjoy all these benefits which thou hast silently and bountifully bestowed upon us. We will miss thee more than words can tell, but will never tire of recounting the good thou hast done. Thy beauty will ever keep green in our memories. Good-bye, old tree, good-bye.

CENSUS RETURNS FOR SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, 1798.

—Reproduced from original in California State Library.

It might be well to give a brief description of these records. They are all contained in four large rooms, one of which is made out of solid steel, with two-foot walls of brick surrounding it; another is a large brick-walled room or vault, while the other two are not fireproof, but should be.

The oldest record in the collection is the first census of California, taken December 31, 1798, by order of the Spanish king. The reproduction herewith of the original shows the population of Southern California at that time, and is of great historical value of that period. Other valuable data here preserved include:

The original Spanish archives in eight volumes, with their translation into English in eight volumes, containing all the grants of land in California by the Spanish and Mexican governments, with the original maps.

The Constitution of the State, adopted at Monterey in 1849. The present State Constitution, adopted in 1879. The original laws of the State or silver and if once destroyed can never be replaced. We should also endeavor to secure all things of an historical character and place them where they can be seen by those who shall come after us.

The State of California has provided, and is keeping up, such a place in Sutter's Fort, in Sacramento, a beautiful tract of six acres, with lawns, lakes and trees, and in the center the old Fort Sutter, rebuilt exactly like the old fort with large, commodious rooms, in which are already installed many historical things.

It is the duty of the Native Sons to help and build up this museum, by sending to it all historical documents and other things that will be of interest. I hope that this appeal will not be in vain, for old Sutter's Fort,—the place most sacred of the many historical places of California and to which our Pioneer Fathers and Mothers were received with open arms by that grand old man and Pioneer, General John A. Sutter.

This work consists of the cataloguing of material and the taking of notes. Another important phase of the Fellow's work here is the securing of photographed copies of old maps of importance in the study of Pacific Coast history. These maps are to be incorporated in an historical atlas now under preparation by Professor Frederick J. Teggart. Your Fellow is also attempting to be of service to advanced students of the University of California who are engaged in researches on California history. This is done through the search for documents bearing on their particular subjects, and the making

FORAGE PLANTS ON NATIONAL FORESTS.

Nearly 2,000 plant specimens have been collected on the national forests in California for the purpose of determining their value as forage for stock. Data are collected as to their range, abundance, forage value, etc., and the information will be compiled in pamphlet form for the use of the field force. In this way knowledge is gained of the plants beneficial to stock and of those which are worthless or injurious, and practical use is made of this information in the administration of National Forest stock ranges. In the course of this work a number of species previously unknown to botanists have been discovered.

Apple wood is the favorite material for ordinary saw handles, and some goes into so-called brier pipes.

WHY TO VOTE "NO" ON THE POWER BONDS

LOS ANGELES READERS OF THE "Grizzly Bear" are deeply interested in the power bond election on May 8th, and in order that they may have information on the subject from an expert engineer, it has asked Mr. W. A. Brackenridge, Vice-President and General Manager of the Southern California Edison Company, to express his opinion on the subject. Mr. Brackenridge says:

"Consideration of a serious proposition to issue $6,500,000 of power bonds of the City of Los Angeles will culminate in an election to determine the question on May 8th. The avowed purpose of such an added issue is to complete power plant No. 1 and to provide a distributing system for the city; but the city council has stubbornly refused to segregate the propositions, and they are being presented to the people in the form of a blanket ballot, thereby compelling the voters to act without the opportunity of a free and intelligent expression of their will. For the first objection that presents itself to the issuance of such an amount of bonds is that the people may very properly want to vote for $1,250,000 of bonds to complete the power plant, while the second objection is that the remainder would be plainly insufficient to construct more than the beginning of a distributing system. But the manner in which the question is presented permits of no discretion, and is therefore unfair and un-American.

"The ultimate purpose of these bonded issues with respect to power and light utilization from the waters of the aqueduct is to perfect the arrangements for municipal ownership. But the contention is raised at the outset that the city cannot be in position within a period of four or five years to supply power and light at retail to the people. That being the case, it devolves upon the city in furtherance of its program to provide for the sale of such power as the aqueduct may be able to produce, in order that revenue may be obtained for the city treasury. In such an emergency the power companies offer to purchase the power at a rate to be established by the State Railroad Commission.

"Failing in that offer, the companies offer the city an alternative co-operative agreement whereby the city should pay the companies for the use of their distributing systems to distribute electricity for a period of five years, the city to make all rates, and all contracts with consumers, read all meters, handle all money and collect all bills. The State Railroad Commission would make the rate the companies should pay to the city, and the city council would make the rate for consumers, and this arrangement would, in effect, be requiring the companies to serve the people under direct municipal control; and certainly should not lay the companies open to a charge of ulterior motives.

"It has been estimated by engineers acting for the municipality that when the aqueduct power should be harnessed for public use, which will require some years to accomplish, a rate could be established of 5c per kilowatt hour for electricity. Admitting this to be true, in the meantime the city is already establishing for the power companies to charge during the next year a rate of 5½c per kilowatt hour. Thus, without the issue of more power bonds by the city at this critical time, the companies are almost equaling the cheap light and price fixed by estimate as the ultimate under municipal ownership. And the question very naturally forces itself upon the public mind, 'Why not accept the overtures of the companies and enable the city to sell power instead of bonds?'

"A statement recently made by the Mudgett Audit Company of this city places the present amount of outstanding city bonds at $39,000,000 on which the people pay in interest and sinking fund $9,534.61 per business day. If the power bonds should be voted, this would be needlessly increased to $11,035.91 per business day. An income of approximately one million dollars per year from the sale of power to the companies would reduce this to $6,894. Therefore, while the voting of power bonds would increase taxes $1,501.65 per business day, the acceptance of the companies' offer would reduce taxes $2,640.26 per business day. Thus, voting 'NO' on the power bonds would mean a saving to the people of $4,141.91 per business day. This is a plain business proposition, one that should not be deflected at the instigation of politicians into side-issues which end nowhere except in 'bonds and more bonds.' And while we are speaking on this subject, it must be remembered that our country is just now entering upon a war with a foreign power at the very gates of Los Angeles, a fact requiring the city to be unusually careful of its credit and its treasury. We may need both for larger and more imminent matters before the international controversy is settled.

"Personally, I dislike to see projects of engineering skill and accomplishment confused with other issues and mixed up with selfish considerations foreign to the purposes of such work. It was designed by the builders of the Los Angeles aqueduct first, to supply this city with an abundance of water; and, second, to meet the great cost of the enterprise by the disposal of power and the distribution of light. The city not being ready at this time to enter into the second portion of its program, its next best business is to raise revenue by the sale of power to the power companies at a fair price. And no amount of political quibbling should be permitted to interfere with an honest consideration of this question. Shouting for 'cheap power and cheap light' is demagoguery unless you take advantage of the means immediately at hand that will produce 'cheap light and cheap power.'

"I am not disposed to raise a question at this time about municipal ownership of power and light plants, except to say that there is a diversity of opinion among engineers as to whether they are profitable as business ventures for a city to engage in. It would be foreign to the question at issue to discuss that proposition here or now. The only present question for the people is whether it would not be most profitable at this juncture to sell power to the power companies at a rate to be fixed by the State Railroad Commission, rather than authorize an amount of bonds that would be insufficient for the city's purposes. What the people need now is revenue, wherewith to reduce their burden of taxation, and this way I have suggested is a sure one.

"The power companies are loyal institutions of Los Angeles. They have labored faithfully to make this city the best lighted city in the world, and their success in this direction must have had great influence in the progress and development of Los Angeles. I believe that my business associates are tremendously interested individually in the advancement of this city, and I am certain they would not advocate any measure that might be hurtful to the people. The fact that they are earnest in their recommendation that the companies' offers to the city be accepted, and that the proposal for another burden of bond issues be rejected is evidence to me of their loyalty and continued fidelity to the public interests of Los Angeles. Time has been when it appeared to be popular to attack the lighting companies, but those days of ignorance and prejudice have passed away."

COLLEGE LIFE! WHAT A THROG of memories, grave, gay, sad, and sacred, come with its recollections. What an imperium in imperio is college environment.

More than fifty years ago I attended a pretentious little college in California, whose students never exceeded two hundred and fifty in number. The students of our little college were young men, ranging in age from twenty to thirty years. Many of them were young men who had lived on the frontier during their boyhood and having had no early educational advantages, had sought the classic groves of our little college with the determined purpose of acquiring an education. About one-third of the number, however, had been "sent" to college by well-to-do parents, and their only ideal of a college student's life was to be as much of a rough as their courage allowed them to be.

During my fourth year at this institution of learning, there entered the college a student named Otto Stedt. He was about eighteen years old, of very small, attenuated frame, small, sharp features, an intelligent forehead, and dark eyes of oriental brilliancy. One of his eyes turned inward to such a degree that it marred the only beauty of his features. Stedt had not been long at the college before he developed an intellectuality that attracted the attention and commanded the respect not only of the students but of all the members of the faculty.

One Friday night big Tom McClish and I were going home together from a meeting of the Literary Society and were deep in the discussion of some, to us, very learned theme, when our attention was attracted by an unusual noise in the gymnasium. A university boy of today would laugh if I could picture to him the building which we called the college gymnasium. It was a large, square, barn-like structure and had been built out of the scanty means contributed by the students.

As McClish and I entered the gymnasium, an unusual sight was presented to our eyes. The dark, barn-like room was dimly lighted by a half-dozen tallow candles placed at intervals around the walls, and at the upper end of the room was a huge cross, an imitation crown of thorns, a long pole with a sponge upon it, and a bucket of foul water. Near by lay a hammer and a pile of large, rusty spike-nails.

In the center of the room, lying on the ground and surrounded by some twenty-five or thirty of the roughest rowdies in the college, lay poor little Otto Stedt, half-divested of his clothes and sobbing and begging for mercy. While two or three lubberly young fellows held poor Otto on the ground, a couple of the hazers were engaged, amid ribald jokes and shouts of laughter, in divesting Otto of his remaining garments.

As we stepped across the threshold, McClish shouted at the top of his voice, "What the hell are you doing?"

Amid a shout of laughter one of the hazers answered, "We're going to crucify the Jew."

McClish did not wait to hear any more. With the expression on his face of a bulldog, he jumped into the midst of the hazers and landed his fists squarely on the mouth of one of them, knocking him down. Then, shouting something which I did not hear, he commenced an indiscriminate slugging of Otto Stedt's tormentors.

Now Frank McClish,—although he was twenty-two years old, weighed nearly two hundred pounds, and had a fist like a Dupee ham,—was no match for the big crowd of roughs who were engaged in the hazing enterprise. No sooner did the hazers discover that McClish was fighting them single-handed, than they gathered themselves up in a body, and forcing him against the wall, almost smothered him with kicks and blows. Twice I saw him go down like a stag among a lot of hounds, only to see him emerge again from the smothering mass, still fighting, bloody, but confident.

All this had taken place in so short a space of time that I had not courage, or presence of mind, enough to interfere. Not being a fighter, I looked about for some means whereby I might assist my friend McClish out of his difficulty. Lying by the door of the gymnasium was a piece of a broken buggy shaft. It was about four feet long, made of hickory, and as tough as whalebone. Seizing this for a cudgel, I laid out two of the hazers by well-directed blows upon the top of the head, but as I raised my cudgel for a third stroke, some one caught it from behind, and wrenched it from my hand; and then began a game of shuttlecock and battledore, I being the shuttlecock and the fists and boots of my assailants answering for battledores. Try as I would to defend myself and get clear of the melee, I was struck repeatedly about the head and face, rendering me helpless so far as fighting was concerned.

During this time I saw the little Jew pick up a six-pound iron jumping-weight and poising it in both of his puny hands, hurl it with all his weak force at the seething, struggling mass of McClish's assailants. The iron struck a husky hazer squarely in the back of the head, and he fell like a bullock struck with a sledge-hammer. Little Otto, frightened at the apparently awful result of his action, gathered up his seedy garments and disappeared through one of the doors into the darkness. Such was the excitement, that I think no one but myself noticed the incident. Beset, even as I was, a sense of the ludicrous came over me at seeing the expression of vengeance-mingled fright upon the little fellow's countenance.

While I was so terribly beset, I would occasionally catch sight of McClish fighting like a tiger and trying to come to my rescue. Three times I saw him dragged down, overwhelmed by numbers, but by some almost superhuman energy, he would rise to his feet, bloody but confident.

In the midst of the struggle, just as I was knocked to a sitting posture, I heard the voice of Duncan McGregor and the sound of hurrying footsteps, telling us that our senior classmates were coming to our rescue; but for me, the relief came too late. Some one kicked me between the eyes, and as I lay prostrate on the ground, someone planted both boot-heels in the center of my face, and I lost consciousness.

My next recollection was hearing a confusion of sounds, and, getting one eye open, I found my head resting in the hollow of Charley Silverthorn's arm, while with his right hand he was washing the dirt and blood from my battered countenance with a wet silk handkerchief.

Outside the gymnasium we could hear the victorious pursuit of the flying hazers. Above it all could be heard Duncan McGregor shouting to "smite them hip and thigh," as the pursuit and retreat continued.

As soon as I could see clearly, I beheld, by the dim light of the one remaining candle, some seven or eight of the would-be hazers lying about on the floor of the gymnasium in various conditions of semi-consciousness, where they had been knocked down and kicked by Duncan McGregor, Tom McGlynn, Gilbert Merl and Charley Silverthorn.

McClish, though not dangerously injured, was a picture to behold. From the waist upward nearly all his clothes had been torn from his body. His hair, which was long, stood out from his head, giving him a leonine appearance, and his face was scratched and battered almost out of human resemblance.

In a few moments my friends gathered about me, and I could see, from the expressions of their faces, that I was seriously injured. It was only with assistance that I could go to my lodgings, and for two weeks I was under the care of a surgeon. Though a number of the hazers had broken bones to set and were a badly hattered-up set, I was the only one seriously injured. I am an old man now, but my face still bears the scars of that terrible beating.

But what of Otto Stedt, the little Jew?

The next morning, on inquiry at his lodgings, it was learned that he had paid his bill, packed his little belongings, and taken the stage for the nearest boat-landing, evidently going to San Francisco.

In a short time Commencement Day came, college honors were divided, and we scattered out into the wide world, full of high resolves and lofty ambitions.

When the Civil War broke out, Tom McGlynn, being wealthy, went East, raised a regiment of soldiers, and was killed at the head of his regiment in Grant's campaign in the wilderness. Duncan McGregor studied theology, became a minister of the Gospel, was an army chaplain, and died of malarial fever while caring for sick and wounded soldiers in McClellan's ill-fated campaign on the Peninsula. McClish went to San Francisco and began operating in mining stocks and before many years became one of the most skillful and daring operators of that feverish period when fortunes were made and lost in a day, when great financial institutions became stately wrecks, strewn about the purlieus of the mining-stock exchange. Silverthorn and I both studied law. He, settling in Virginia City, became one of the foremost advocates of the time; while I, located in San Francisco, was content to acquire a modest competence by a quiet probate practice.

I had been in San Francisco some ten or fifteen years, when, passing along the street one day, I was accosted by a strange individual who smiled and held out his hand, which I took while I tried to recall the name of the individual before me.

"You don't remember me, I thee," he said, and before I could answer, he smiled again and passed on.

A few months afterward I met the same individual in the same place, and again he saluted me affably, and seeing I did not recognize him, he passed on and was lost in the crowd. A number of PROCEEDINGS THIRTY-SEVENTH GRAND PARLOR, N. S. G. W.

(BY THE GRIZZLY.)

WITH A PUBLIC INSTALLATION OF the newly-elected Grand Officers—and, by the way, the first such ceremony that has been open to the public in the Order's history—the Thirty-seventh Session of the Grand Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, closed its labors at 6 p.m., April 24th, after having been in session at Temple Auditorium, Los Angeles, April 20th, 22nd and 24th.

The assemblage was made up largely of the wives and relatives of the Grand Parlor attendants, and the occasion was made particularly pleasant because of the presence of a twenty-piece orchestra, supplied through the kindness of the management of Clune's theater.

Past Grand President Clarence E. Jarvis of Sutter Creek acted as installing officer, and was assisted by Past Grand President Charles M. Belshaw. Prior to the installation ceremonies, Grand President-elect Louis H. Mooser announced the reappointment of H. G. W. Dinkelspiel as Grand Organist, and Dan Q. Troy as Historiographer. Following are the Grand Officers who will serve until the close of the next Grand Parlor:

Van Nostrand, Stanford 76, San Francisco; James F. Hoey, Mt. Diablo 101, Martinez; Arthur E. Curtis, Precita 187, San Francisco; Charles W. Heyer, National 118, San Francisco.

Upon assuming the Grand Presidency, Louis H. Mooser was visibly overcome by emotion, but in a few words, addressed to the assemblage, expressed his appreciation of the great honor conferred upon him, and pledged his very best efforts in the Order's behalf. He expressed the hope that, when his term of office shall have terminated, he will have won the lasting gratitude of all members of the fraternity.

Summarized proceedings of the business sessions of the Grand Parlor are given below:

Berkeley, California, April 20th.

Hon. Thomas Monahan, Grand President, Native Sons of the Golden West, Los Angeles, California: I send my warm congratulations to the N.S.G.W. assembled at their Thirty-seventh annual meeting. I like to remember the pleasure I had in meeting with you at the Thirty-first Session in Yosemite Valley in 1908.

Upon my recommendation, the regents of the University have, for the first time, provided funds for the teaching of California history. With their approval, have selected as instructor Charles Edward Chapman, for the past two years the representative of the N.S.G.W. as Traveling Fellow at Seville, Spain, and who represented both Native Sons and the State of California at the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Junipero Serra in Minorca.

It is due to the interest and generosity of the Native Sons that this appointment was made possible. This announcement I send to you with hearty greeting to you all.

INCORPORATION ARTICLES AMENDED.

The articles of incorporation of the Grand Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, were amended, and the Board of Grand Officers, as directors of the corporation, directed to take the necessary action as to cause the incorporation articles to read:

"That the purposes for which this corporation is formed are social intercourse, mental improvement and mutual benefit, united with the purpose to render such service as it may to the State, the Nation, and to humanity.

"To that end we propose to own, buy, sell, rent, lease, improve and otherwise dispose of real, personal and mixed estate, including the capital stock of other corporations, domestic or foreign, to organize auxiliaries, sustain, suspend, disband or regulate them by charter, dispensation, constitution and by-laws with such name, officers, privileges, authority and power as the society may from time to time determine.

"Also to establish Subordinate Parlors with such members, officers, authority, privileges and powers as the society may determine and do all other acts that may legally be done under and by virtue of the laws of this, the State of California."

WANT BEAR FLAG OVER SCHOOLS.

The following resolution, requesting the hoisting of the Bear Flag over all public-school buildings was passed:

PROMPTED BY PATRIOTISM.

Whereas, Many members of the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West have enlisted under Uncle Sam's banner to aid in preserving the integrity of the Flag in the present difficulty with Mexico; now be it

Resolved, That it be the sense of this Grand Parlor that all Subordinate Parlors should remit the dues of any enlisted member during his term of service.

Whereas, The memory of the California Republic holds a lasting position in the history of our State, and its emblem, the Bear Flag, is one of the most distinguished and striking state flags of the Union; and

Whereas, The frequent display of the Bear Flag is a pleasant recollection for the pioneer and a proud inspiration for his descendants, a patriotic lesson for the young and an impulse for local pride of all our citizens; and

Whereas, The national emblem is regularly flown from all public school buildings in this State by direction of local or state school authorities; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West request that the historical and sentimental value of the Bear Flag be preserved by display on the public school buildings of the State of California directly beneath the Stars and Stripes; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the school authorities of the State and also to the school authorities of each county of the State.

BENEFICIAL, IF CARRIED OUT.

The State of the Order Committee—Jos. B. Keenan (chairman), Harry W. Gaetjen, Geo. J. Hans, Jas. G. Conlan, Ted C. Atwood—in its report made the following recommendations, which were adopted by the Grand Parlor, and which will be of benefit to the Order at large if conscientiously carried out:

That the Board of Visiting Grand Officers and the Deputy Grand Presidents, especially, visit the Parlors in their districts as frequently as possible in order to instill enthusiasm and interest in the work of our Order.

That the Deputy Grand Presidents should be selected for their enthusiasm and interest in our Order, and the duties and responsibilities of their commission should be impressed upon them.

That public installation of officers be encouraged and that the installation charge be so re-written that it would inform the public and the members of the Order of the principles and purposes of the Order. We feel that more good could be accomplished by the district deputy delivering a set talk or oration of about ten minutes' duration, than in delivering the present work, such oration to be prepared by the grand officers during the present year.

That the Deputy Grand Presidents-at-Large be compelled to visit Parlors, other than their own, where possible, in the city or town in which they reside, at least six times each year and that such visits be to as many different Parlors as possible.

That prior to the official visit of a Grand Officer, the secretary of the Parlor to be visited secure a list of eligible and desirable native sons, who shall be called upon by the visiting Grand Officer with the object of securing their applications for membership into the Parlor. It should be the duty of the visiting Grand Officer to report upon the success of his efforts in securing such prospective candidates.

The total amount paid for benefits during the year, to 1906 members, was $72,369.40; and the total assets of all Parlors is $787,231.99, or a gain of $30,751.32 during the year. From this it will be seen that the Order is progressing, even though it be slowly, and if we keep in mind the grand patriotic principles of our Order, together with its fraternal and charitable features, little difficulty should be met in impressing desirable native Californians of the advantages to be gained by joining the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

As our reports show that the most stable Parlors are those which own their own buildings, and as the erection of a Native Son building in a city gives to the Order a standing of stability in that community, we recommend that the encouragement and indorsement of this Grand Parlor be given to Parlors in securing their own building, when their funds and conditions warrant such an investment.

FAVOR UPBUILDING OF INDUSTRY.

The following resolution, dealing with California's viticultural interests, was adopted:

Whereas, After years of costly experiment, it has been proven that California, by reason of its soil and climatic conditions, is the only territory in North America where foreign varieties of wine, table and raisin grapes grow to perfection; and

Whereas, Through concentrated efforts of the viticulturists of the State of California, aided and encouraged by the State and Federal Governments, the viticultural industry of this State has attained a pre-eminent position at home and abroad; and

Whereas, A large body of our citizens engaged in this industry with the belief that viticulture would develop vast areas of land which have heretofore been non-productive, enlarge the field of honest and healthful labor, and aid in the commercial and industrial development of California; and

Whereas, In this State there is devoted to the viticultural industry more than 320,000 acres of land (a large part of which is hillside land, unsuited to any other purpose), representing an investment of more than one hundred and fifty millions of dollars, and directly employing more than 150,000 people who have, with the aid of instruction from skilled and experienced specialists of the University of California and the United States Department of Agriculture, made it possible to place California in the front rank of grape-growing countries of the world; therefore be it

Resolved, By the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West, acting in harmony with its fixed principle of encouraging home production, that we favor the upbuilding of this valuable industry, and we believe that the members of our Order should co-operate with the State Board of Viticultural Commissioners, the University of California, our State Legislature, and the United States Department of Agriculture, in making this the leading grape-producing country of the world.

SAN JOSE'S JULY CELEBRATION ENDORSED.

The following resolution, endorsing the Independence Day celebration being arranged by the Parlors of San Jose, was adopted:

Whereas, A movement has been inaugurated and is under way by the Native Sons Hall Association, of San Jose, composed of members of our Order, to erect a handsome building on the lot owned by it in that city; and, Whereas, In order to give this building movement impetus and stability, the members of the three Parlors located in the fair Garden City are preparing a grand celebration to be held in that city on the occasion of our country's natal day; and, Whereas, The erection of buildings, owned, occupied and enjoyed by the Parlors tends to give to the Parlors and to the Order the dignity and stability which instill enthusiasm among our own members, and inspire confidence in those whose membership we solicit, leading to the infusion of the new and younger membership necessary for the continuance of the Order; and, Whereas, All propositions tending to increase the membership should be earnestly encouraged and supported; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Thirty-seventh Session of the Grand Parlor in session at Los Angeles commends the efforts of the San Jose Native Sons Hall Association to erect a new temple to Native Sonism, and that it be the sense of the Grand Parlor that the support and encouragement of every loyal Native Son be shown wherever consistent with the possibilities of his personal business or welfare, by attending the ground-breaking ceremonies and festivities at San Jose on July 4 and 5, 1914.

MONUMENT WILL RISE IN HIGH SIERRAS.

According to a report made to the Grand Parlor, N.S.G.W., in Los Angeles last month by Dr. C. W. Chapman of Nevada City, chairman of the Donner Monument Committee, there is available in the fund for erecting the Pioneer Monument on the shores of Donner Lake, $6,738.37.

A contract has been entered into with John McQuarrie, a San Francisco sculptor, to model a plaster pioneer group, as approved by the committee, sixteen feet high, at a cost of $4,000. From this plaster monument a magnificent bronze statue will be cast, and it is hoped to have it in place in time for next year's expositions.

CONSERVATION BOOK OF VALUE TO SCHOOL TEACHERS.

The State has just amended and reprinted Superintendent of Public Instruction Edward Hyatt's handbook on "Conservation of California Resources," in such quantity that each teacher may have a copy. This was issued five years ago and the edition was at once exhausted, but an insistent demand for it has continued ever since, not only in California but in all the Pacific states. Many hundreds of requests were refused a year ago from Oregon, when the schools and debating societies of that state took up the subject.

The book urges wise and economical use of our forests, our soils, our waters and our mines. It contains a hundred pages culled from newspapers, magazines, speeches, addresses and original sources, and is richly illustrated by photographs. It gives a more vivid and complete conception of the current idea of conservation than anything else in print, which accounts for the extraordinary demand.

It is reprinted so that each instructor in the State may have at hand the material for passing some good ideas on to the children regarding the fundamental sources of our prosperity and wealth. It has been sent out to the teachers. Anyone who fails to receive a copy may get it by applying to the local county superintendent or to the State Superintendent at Sacramento.

RITUAL CONTEST

San Francisco—The ritualistic contest of the Parlors of Native Sons of the Golden West, held every six months for a beautiful trophy offered by the Past Presidents' Association, terminated April 15th. The following Parlors entered the contest, and received the percentage scores noted:

El Dorado, 844; Alcalde, 865; Rincón, 884; Hesperian, 866; Guadalupe, 773; Presidio, 911; National, 936; Bay City, 770; El Capitan, 856; Golden Gate, 909; South San Francisco, 868; Castro, 841; Mission, 856; Marshall, 818; Balboa, 797.

A final contest will start May 4th, between National, Presidio, Golden Gate and Rincón Parlors, they having made the highest scores. The trophy must be won by a Parlor three times before it can be permanently claimed. To date, National Parlor has been victorious twice, and Rincón Parlor once.

The Past Presidents' Association committee having the contest in charge is made up of F. A. Bonivert (chairman), Fred H. Jung, Fred A. Senk, Jas. F. Stanley and John M. Glennan.

URING THE MONTH OF MAY, 1864, there was a rainfall of .75 of an inch, making for the season, to June 1st, a total average rainfall of 7.70 in the Sacramento Valley and less the further southward the record was kept.

May 5th, there was an eclipse of the sun. It was a partial one to the sight of the inhabitants of Western North America, and possibly total to those living on the Island of Borneo. Clouds obscured the sky in Northern California, and so little did our people know of the origin and movement of rainstorms that the showers falling on that date and a few subsequent days were attributed by public opinion, as expressed in the newspapers, to the effect of the eclipse upon the weather.

This first storm was followed by a severe frost in the northern part of the State that nearly destroyed the entire fruit crop in Shasta and Siskiyou Counties.

Owing to the favorable weather conditions for ripening fruit, the season was the earliest known, and the markets were being supplied some three weeks in advance of previous years.

Complaints of half crops in Napa Valley and other Northern California localities, to no crops at all south of Santa Clara County, kept coming in with discouraging regularity. Drought conditions brought other troubles in its train.

Immense flocks of blackbirds descended upon the grain fields of San Joaquin County. They were driven north from Southern California by the lack of a food supply and were filling their crops from crops of standing grain, to the dismay of the farmers.

Flint, Bixby & Co. were grazing 40,000 sheep in Monterey County which they were compelled to drive north for feed. Two big flocks of 15,000 head were driven from Gilroy to the Norris Grant near Sacramento. This rancho contained 48,000 acres and good pasture on its river bottom lands. The moving flocks raised a cloud of dust by day—as they came up the San Joaquin Valley—higher and larger than the cloud by day that led the children of Israel out of Egypt.

Copious showers fell south of Tehachapi during the last week of the month that greatly relieved that parched section. A heavy shock of earthquake at 6 p.m., May 20th, that cracked some walls, was felt in San Francisco and over nearly all the State, but did very little damage. Following the quake, came a very hot spell. San Francisco sweltered in 85°, and the interior valleys were panting with 96° in the shade. Business conditions were about as bad as they could be, with a long, hot and dry summer ahead.

Great Month for War News.

Lieutenant-General U. S. Grant, now in full command of the Federal armies, got the Army of the Potomac started upon its "On to Richmond" campaign, May 3rd, and the whole country stood up and took notice. A great battle was fought May 5th and 6th, and when the news was received that General Lee was retreating toward Richmond, the citizens began firing salutes, having impromptu processions, and celebrating in an enthusiastic manner which they had not had an opportunity to do for some time.

Another great battle was fought at Spotsylvania Court House, in Virginia, on May 10th, and this, followed by the news that General Lee had been compelled to move still further southward, gave the impetus to more exultant demonstrations. It was on May 12th that General Grant sent a report to Washington of the result of the battles the Army of the Potomac had fought, and concluded with the famous sentence which electrified the North: "I propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

This was the first intimation the country had received from General Grant as to what his plan of campaign was to be, hence the great importance attached to what his brain had evidently worked out. Heavy skirmishing, flank movements and steady retreating of the Rebel army continued during the remaining days of the month, ending with the Army of the Potomac camped at Mechanicsville, about fifteen miles from Richmond, and on the battlefields it had fought over in '62.

Every day a heavy battle was expected to occur, and men of betting proclivities began wagering on the date that Richmond would fall into General Grant's hands. One enthusiastic individual wagered to take a dose of jolap, daily, for thirty days, if Richmond was not captured before July 4th.

General Sherman's army fought a battle and won a victory in Georgia; General Benj. F. Butler, with an army, was menacing Richmond from the James River, and preventing reinforcements moving from the south to General Lee's army; General Banks was fighting west of the Mississippi River, and General Sheridan was making a cavalry raid, circling around General Lee's army in Virginia, destroying many miles of railroad tracks and large quantities of military stores, so that there was something doing in the fighting line every day and the public mind was kept on the qui vive for the latest news.

Something Big Happened.

How the news was exaggerated, as it was carried by excited individuals from the telegraph offices to the isolated mining towns, is shown by the following incident: A resident of Yankee Jims read the fragmentary items bulletined by the telegraph operator at Placerville, giving the reports of the battle at Spotsylvania. Mounting his horse, he made a rapid ride home; hitching his horse to a post in front of a saloon, he rushed into a crowd of miners loitering there and shouted:

"Great news, boys!"

"What is it?" asked the crowd, almost to a man.

"There is the damdest, biggest fight down in Virginia that you ever heard of!"

"Many killed?" asked a listener.

"Yep. Over a hundred thousand."

"Many captured?" asked another.

"Yep. Over a hundred thousand, and a thousand cannon."

"Any big Generals captured?" was the next question.

"Yep. Both Grant and Lee are captured."

When he got through telling all he had heard the crowd knew something big had happened, but what it had resulted in nobody could tell.

The Rev. Dr. Bellows of New York City arrived in San Francisco to take the place of the late Rev. T. Starr King in the Unitarian Association, and on account of his prominence in connection with the Sanitary Fund in the East, his presence gave a new impetus to that cause in this State. Coupled with the victories won by the Union armies during the month, his energetic efforts caused many purse-strings to be untied and thousands of dollars to be contributed.

Sacramento, due to the construction of the Central Pacific railroad to the oak groves fringing the foothills of Placer County, was in the throes of a picnic fervor. The greatest, in point of numbers and prominence of those attending, was the one managed by the Sanitary Fund Committee on May 18th. It was attended by Governor Low, ex-Governor Stanford, Rev. Dr. Bellows and several hundred other prominent Union men of the State with over five thousand people from Sacramento, Placer and adjoining counties. It was held in a grove near where Loomis is now located and the entire rolling-stock equipment of the Central Pacific Railway, then consisting of three engines, six passenger coaches, one baggage car, eight box cars and twenty-three flat cars (fitted up with benches), was required to handle the crowd.

Sack Flour Brings Good Money.

Everything to eat and drink on the grounds was contributed to the Sanitary Fund by citizens of Sacramento and while there was a minimum charge for a sandwich or a glass of lager beer, no change was returned to a spender for any larger piece of money given in payment. The Sanitary Fund, from the receipts of this picnic and other contributions, received over $20,000 from the citizens of Sacramento during this month.

R. C. Gridley of Austin, Nevada, with the sack of flour he had made famous by paying a freak bet in carrying it a mile or so and then donating it to the Sanitary Fund, started for California to continue its sale at auction. In Virginia City it created a furore and $15,000 was raised; $12,000 more was bid on it in Carson City and other Nevada towns. He arrived at Sacramento on the 18th, and at a Sanitary Fund meeting held that evening the sack of flour was sold and resold until $2,150 was bid and paid in on it. San Francisco was invaded on May 27th, where the sack of flour was sold forty-eight times, realizing $2,800 for the fund. Gridley and his sack of flour had now raised over $40,000 for the fund, but his spirit of gladness was darkened by a false charge that was being made in the newspapers, stating he was a "Copperhead."

At Dutch Flat, Placer County, May 13th, during a jollification on the part of the Home Guards and a Little York company over a flag presentation and the victories in Virginia, a cannon prematurely exploded. Simon and William Jordan, brothers, each had his left arm blown off below the elbow.

Wm. Williams was hung by the sheriff at Sacramento on May 20th for the murder of a farmer named A. Blanchard on August 3, 1860. Williams had a dispute with his victim over a debt and killed him with a club.

While floating logs down the American River to a sawmill located near Sacramento, Menzo Countryman, riding a log, lost his balance by its violent rolling, and fell into the river. The log floated over him and he was drowned.

Grizzly Occupies Miner's Bed.

A party of seven prospectors on Mill Creek, Tehama County, espied a grizzly upon the side of a hill and arranged to capture it. One of the party found the cub of the grizzly and killed it with a club, but its yells being heard by its dam, she made a rush through the brush to its aid. James Purdon, one of the party, climbed a tree and perched in safety upon a branch for a few minutes. It broke, and he dropped upon the ground directly in front of the grizzly. She clawed the muscles of one arm and of his breast, inflicting fatal injuries before the others of the party could come to his assistance. The grizzly, badly wounded, escaped.

A grizzly bear appeared on the wagon road near Strawberry just ahead of the west-bound stage drawn by six horses. The leaders turned around and started to run away, breaking the tongue and nearly upsetting the vehicle. The bear did not stop to investigate.

Another grizzly, in Mariposa County, ripped the roof off a miner's cabin during the absence of the owner and carried off his supply of bacon. The owner claimed that the grizzly also took a nap on his bed before leaving.

The stage running between Oroville and Quincy, near Eagle Gulch, Plumas County, May 23rd, went off the road over a bluff and fell 300 feet. The driver, Samuel Johnson, was fatally hurt and all the horses killed. No passengers were injured.

The stage from Coulterville was stopped by two highwaymen two miles from that town on the morning of May 30th. Wells-Fargo & Co.'s treasure-box, with $3,000, was taken. The passengers, one white man and four Chinamen, were also robbed. The white man had two purses containing $500 each in his two trouser pockets. He promptly gave one to the highwaymen and then asked them to give him back enough to pay his expenses to the Bay. They handed him $50, and he went on his way rejoicing.

The town of Silver Mountain, Alpine County, was having a boom. It now boasted of having 160 houses, four sawmills and a weekly newspaper published by Dan. S. Lane.

Irataba, a chief of the Mojave Indians, who claimed to rule from Tehachapi to Tucson, arrived in San Francisco, by steamer, from New York. He had been making an extended visit over the Eastern states to find out from where so many white men came. He was liberally entertained and made a guest at the Occidental Hotel.

Union and Rebs Both Honored.

The citizens of Red Bluff were surprised on the afternoon of May 25th to see 150 Pit River Indians marching into town in single file. They were armed with bows and arrows, decorated with war paint, and on the war path. A few weeks previous Cocotupa, their chief, was found dead near Millville, with three arrows shot into his body by some of the members of the Yuba tribe. The Pit River Diggers were on the hunt for the Yubas, but the latter must have heard of trouble coming, for they made their appearance in Sacramento at this time and the Pit River Diggers failed to find them.

The "stereoscopiclan," a new form of displaying pictures enlarged upon a screen, with Capt. T. G. Funston as lecturer, was giving entertaining exhibitions of war and other scenes through the State.

At Copper City, Shasta County, the wife of D. B. Zell presented him with four children at one birth. There were two boys and two girls. The father was a Southern sympathizer, and promptly named the boys Stonewall Jackson and Lee Longstreet. The mother was for the Union, and asserted her side by naming the girls Annie Lincoln and Alice Grant. Copper City was a new town only in existence about a year, but was doing exceedingly well.

The Central Pacific Railroad was built and operated to a distance thirty miles east of Sacramento this month. A temporary station was established, and on May 31st the company published the gratifying information that the east-bound train that date had 132 passengers out of Sacramento. Stages for Auburn, Grass Valley, Dutch Flat and Virginia City were connecting with the trains. The Sacramento and Folsom Railroad began the extension of its line to Latrobe, then called Miller's Corral, this month.

SAN FRANCISCO DISTRICT LUNCHEON.

THE LUNCHEON GIVEN TO THE retiring and incoming officers by the San Francisco District Executive Board April 4th was a decided success. Many plans had been made for the program, in the desire to secure something novel, and finally the suggestion made by Mrs. Lewis E. Anbury, that they have a "wireless luncheon," carrying out the effects in the decorations, was accepted.

The plan called for wireless stations to be installed on several tables, with the receiving station at the speaker's table. The stations were miniature wireless affairs, carried out with bamboo poles, topped with the American flag, and ribbons and flowers finishing the effect. The main station was a huge affair, beautifully decorated, and forming the center of the principal table. Mrs. Ella M. Sexton, chairman of program, was assisted by Mrs. Anbury, vice-chairman, who also acted as wireless receiver. In front of the latter's plate was the electrical apparatus, which lent a realistic touch to the messages.

All the greetings came in the form of messages, transmitted by the receiver to Mrs. Sexton, who announced them, with the requests for replies from the recipients. As postals had been sent to the different presidents asking them to reply to certain questions in ten words, much merriment was occasioned by the effort to condense the work of the whole year into a day message, at regular charges. For night messages, three minutes were allowed, with bargain-day prices for messages.

Mrs. Sexton was in her happiest mood, and her manner of announcing the messages kept everyone on the qui vive for the next one. The wireless apparatus was also used as a "timekeeper," and was used with telling effect. At the expiration of one minute for some, and three minutes for others, the wireless spark and buzzer would announce "another message arriving," and kept the guests in a constant state of laughter.

Mrs. Shuman's greetings to the members, and her introduction of the incoming officers, were beautiful tributes to all, and served to cement even stronger the kindly feeling for the dear little woman who has given her very best,—even while quite ill for the past year. There is a very strong bond existing between Mrs. King, the incoming president, and Mrs. Shuman, and it is predicted that Mrs. King will follow along the same lines of work carried on by Mrs. Shuman during her incumbency. Mrs. King is also very much beloved by the members of the district, and for her is prophesied a splendid administration.

During the afternoon, a pleasant surprise took place, in the form of a presentation of a little token of the esteem of her board for Mrs. Shuman. This was a seed pearl necklace, with amethysts, and was the prettiest thing imaginable, and, as one member said, "as dainty as the little woman herself." The presentation was made by Mrs. King, and in her usual graceful style. As this is the first testimonial of its kind ever presented to a district president, it speaks well for the popularity of Mrs. Shuman's administration, and particularly her thoughtfulness of the members of her immediate board.

The board returned many thanks to the Federal Wireless Company, which supplied the paper on which the messages were received, and to Paul Seiler & Co., who assisted with the electrical effects. These services were all rendered gratis, through the kindness of several of the "club husbands," who helped in making the luncheon a success.

One little incident happened during the afternoon, which, had it become known, might have served to mar the pleasure of some; but, happily, it was observed by so few that no attention was paid to it until it was magnified by the newspapers. A member of a San Mateo club failed to find a seat, which seems a small thing to build mountains of newspaperity upon, doesn't it? However, it did not spoil the success of the luncheon, and the board are still congratulating themselves upon having arranged one of the most graceful and novel affairs ever presented in clubdom.

NOTES OF THE CLUBS.

The women of the little town of Richmond are an enterprising set of clubwomen when it comes to securing a home. Some time ago they purchased a lot, and then set about putting something on that lot. They canvassed the town, and when they finished had a large sum to their credit, the business men having come forward with large cash contributions. Then they solicited contributions of material and even labor, to the end that the structure has been commenced, and at no cost to the organization for labor, as the union men of Richmond are devoting their Sundays and holidays to the work, with the clubwomen providing luncheons for the workers. When finished, they will have one of the most complete, as well as the most beautiful, clubhouses of its size in California, and which will represent in the neighborhood of $20,000. This, at little money cost to the clubwomen except that expended on the lot, and in three years' time. This clubhouse will represent more than its money value, as it will testify to the worth of the clubwomen to the town of Richmond, where they are held in the highest esteem and are called in on all matters of importance.

The Alameda District clubs are using the primary election as a means of electing their officers. This method seems to have met with popular feeling among the clubs in the different districts, the San Francisco District clubs nearly all adopting the primaries. The Adelphean Club of Alameda have just held a primary election, with the result that Mrs. A. J. Barger will preside during the coming club year, and Mrs. Waldo Parkhurst will be general curator.

Nearly $1,000 was realized from the tea dance given by the Pioneer Women for the benefit of the Pioneer Mother's Monument Fund, April 15th. Mrs. Timothy Gay Phelps, president, was the principal hostess, and was responsible for the success of the splendid affair. Many of the clubwomen had reserved tables a month before the dansant, knowing how popular any benefit for this worthy cause would be. The tables were crowded. Mrs. Frederick Sanborn, president of the Woman's Board, was delighted with the success of the affair, as she also had worked hard to make it the complete success that it developed.

The Laurel Hall Club of San Francisco believes in the primary for the election of its officers, but the primary also developed the esteem in which Miss Christine Hart, the president, is held. When the cards were returned, they all contained the name of Miss Hart for the coming president. That is surely pleasing to a president, don't you think, to have her good work recognized in that manner? The other slips, however, did not prevent nominations from the floor, and two tickets will be presented for all the other officers. We believe it will be a friendly contest, however, as harmony always prevails in Laurel Hall, whether it be in elections or mere appointments.

The city planning exhibit, similar to that already exhibited in San Francisco and Oakland, also held forth in Los Angeles during the month, and many of the clubwomen of that city participated. The exhibit was open for ten days, and on each day women from the different clubs acted as a reception committee.

Papyrus Club of San Francisco has lately given over much time to the dancing section, to which many of the members belong. Some time since a tango instructor was engaged, and the former card section lost many of its devotees, all the enthusiasm now being directed towards dancing. Many affairs have been held during the past season, under the very efficient management of the popular president, Mrs. Kathles Byrne, the last one being a dansant held on the 17th. All the guests conceded it was the prettiest cotillion of the club season.

The San Francisco Center of the California Civic League is now engaged in the work of educating its members on the different bills to come before the next Legislature, as well as all questions of the day. Several luncheons have been given during the month, at which time speakers conversant with these bills have appeared before the center, the last and most important question being the prohibition movement. Albert Elliott was the speaker against it.

The Santa Clara Woman's Club will soon be in their own home. Workmen are now restoring the old adobe house, which was recently purchased by the club, and will endeavor to put it in its original shape. The hand-hewn rafters will be restored, as will the tile on the roof. This building was erected in 1799. A large porch will be added to the building, over which vines will be trained, and a large pergola, leading from the entrance to the building proper, will be covered with a grape vine. The clubwomen are now endeavoring to secure funds with which to furnish their new home, and when that is completed, it will be safe to say that they will have one of the most unique, as well as comfortable, clubhouses in this State.

Many of the clubwomen assisted at the dansant given April 21st in aid of the new St. Ignatius Church, San Francisco. Elaborate preparations were made for the affair, and resulted in a very brilliant assemblage. Among the prominent clubwomen assisting were Mrs. D. C. Heger, Mrs. James Rolph, Jr., Mrs. Thomas Graham, Mrs. Tiley L. Ford and D. F. Ragan. The floor committee consisted of men prominent in the Native Sons of the Golden West and Knights of Columbus.

Mrs. Max Elftman has been elected president of the San Mateo Woman's Club, with Mrs. Harry Hermance, secretary. Mrs. Racine McRoskey, also a member of the San Francisco Press Club, represented the San Mateo Club at Riverside. Under Mrs. Elftman's regime, it is expected that much good work will be done, and to begin with, the club has approved a resolution urging the Governor of California to provide for an official participation in the centenary celebration of peace, to be held next year throughout the United States.

The Burlingame Club, with Mrs. Thomas Hill as chairman, will celebrate a "peace day" on May 27th. Mrs. C. E. Cumberson of Redwood City, chairman of peace in the San Francisco District, will deliver an address on "Universal Peace," and as Mrs. Cumberson's name is sufficient to draw a large audience, it is sure that an enthusiastic set of women will attend on that day. Mrs. Cumberson's address on peace, delivered at the Santa Rosa convention, was a gem, and should have received much more publicity than it was given.

On April 15th, a flower festival was held in the home of the Hanford Women's Club, and attracted the residents from all over Kings County. The carnival was held in the spacious auditorium of the clubhouse, where a musicale was also held. Musicians were present from both Los Angeles and San Francisco, and much delight was expressed with the splendid program rendered. In April, Kings County is at its very best, its flowers presenting a perfect blaze of glory, and as the carnival was given over principally to the exhibition of Kings County roses, it presented a sight fit for the gods. Mrs. Dixon Phillips was chairman of the occasion, and presented many prizes for both single and collective displays of roses. A dance ended what was a successful affair, in both a social and financial sense.

Los Angeles clubwomen also have a 1915 committee, preparing for the reception of visitors who may visit their city. The Hollywood Club, through its civic committee, are working with the Los Angeles clubwomen, and plan to make a beauty spot of Hollywood to compare with none south of Tehachapi. Plans are now being outlined for the general beautification of the town, and as this is flower-land in the south, it is safe to say it will be a bower of beauty when the clubwomen finish their work.

Cap and Bells Club of San Francisco gave a performance, with its members in the cast, of "Much Ado About Nothing." The drama section of this club is composed of many talented amateurs, whose ability is a constant surprise to the public. A large audience assembled to bear them in their latest Shakespearean venture, and came away with their expectations well satisfied.

The delegates from the Friday Morning Club to the State Convention to be held in Riverside will be led by Mesdames Waters, Francisco and McCan, who are three of the most prominent clubwomen in the State, and before our next issue will have testified to their good generalship, for it is conceded in the north that their candidate, Mrs. Lillian Pray Palmer, will be the next president. Our own opinion is, that there should be no line drawn on this occasion, and that the "south" should, with their usual magnanimity, give the presidency to San Francisco, as the exposition will figure largely in club work the coming year. Could the state president be in that city, she could take her position as hostess at many functions, where it would be a hardship for her to travel back and forth on the many occasions when it might be necessary. Many argue this side of the question, while the majority say, "it belongs to Southern California, and they should have it." If only that little line should be eliminated, and our women look at the big side of the question, just as Mrs. Westland did at Fresno, what a different aspect it would give us of many things that come before us. Well, if the woman comes from Southern California, the northern women are ready and willing to welcome her with open arms.

A meeting of the Outdoor Art League, San Francisco, during the month, was devoted to beautifying Lombard street, an avenue leading to the exposition grounds. Various suggestions were made, some favoring overhead arches with trailing vines, and the planting of the vacant lots, of which, sad to say, there are many which have not been rebuilt upon since the fire.

Tropic Club, Los Angeles District, are now planning to sell their lot, which they bought some time ago for a clubhouse. Having an advantageous offer, they are considering the advisability of disposing of it, with the opportunity of adding to their clubhouse fund. The women of Southern California have the advantage of buying early, and then keeping a watchful eye on real estate values, when they immediately seize the opportunity, and this generally means their clubhouse is a reality a short time after. If other clubs would only take lessons from some of these enterprising women, we would have clubhouses in every corner of the State.

The Mothers' Club of Burlingame is branching out. It was organized three months ago, and now has 118 members. They boast of a section in child hygiene, another in home economics, and have a lecturer well informed on both subjects for one meeting a month. Dr. Caroline Haskell is the lecturer on child hygiene, and also devotes one hour every day for private talks with the mothers, and many mothers are taking advantage of these "heart to hearts." Mrs. Godfrey, the president, is highly enthusiastic, and is taking every means to educate the mothers to the every-day needs of the child. She is meeting with great success in her work.

San Mateo also has a Mothers' Club, who are taking up much the same line of work as the Burlingame Mothers' Club.

PANORAMIC VIEW OF YOSEMITE.

A panoramic view of Yosemite National Park, showing the characteristic features of the landscape, has just been issued by direction of Secretary Lane. This panorama shows, in a striking manner, the gradual rise in the elevation of the country from the western boundary of the park to the eastern boundary along the crest of the Sierra Nevada, and the sudden drop to the level area of the Great Basin.

Eight colors were used in the printing, the meadows and valleys being in light green, the streams and lakes in light blue, the cliffs and ridges in combinations of colors in order to give the hazy effect characteristic of the region, and the roads in light brown. The lettering is printed in light brown, which is easily read on close inspection, but which merges into the basic colors when the sheet is held at some distance. The panorama is surrounded by a gray border to make an effective background.

This view, which may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for 25 cents, measures 18½x18 inches, and is on the scale of three miles to the inch. It is based on accurate surveys and gives an excellent idea of the configuration of the surface as it would appear to a person moving over it in an aeroplane.

HOMESTEADS ON NATIONAL FORESTS.

Eighty applications were filed with the District Forester at San Francisco, during February, under the forest homestead law for the listing and opening to entry of lands within the National Forests of California. In addition to these there were twelve requests to amend previous applications by including more land. The lands applied for will be examined, and if found to be chiefly valuable for agriculture will be listed with the Department of the Interior to be opened to settlement and homestead entry.

Every applicant must be qualified to make a homestead entry and will not receive title to the land until he has complied fully with the homestead law which requires residence upon and cultivation of the land for a period of three years. During the month reports were made on fifty-five different tracts which had previously been applied for. Sixty tracts, embracing 9,491 acres, were listed to be opened to entry.

SUB-IRRIGATION.

(In Four Parts. Part One.)

Y SUB-IRRIGATION IS MEANT irrigation by carrying moisture below the surface of the soil in comparison with flooding the surface by means of surface furrows, whereby the surface of the soil is wet so that the moisture is exposed to the rapid action of the sun and air, thus inducing evaporation and consequent waste.

The best and most continuous crops in California are produced where irrigation is practiced. Some farmers who understand the scientific manipulation of the soil produce paying crops where irrigation is impossible and where rainfall is limited. These dry-land farmers till larger areas than farmers in districts where water is at hand for irrigation. This article is intended to be helpful to those who have a limited amount of water, and land areas too large to irrigate in the regular manner by furrows, etc.

It is generally conceded by agriculturists and by authorities in California that we make irrigation take the place of cultivation to a wasteful degree. Where water is plentiful and cheap, or where crops (like the citrus crops) yield returns that stand careless financial management, the waste of water is not noticed so much. There are districts, however, where it would be wise to make the "Duty of Water" cover as much surface as possible. This article is intended for the study of this latter class. Our researches in compiling available information on this subject, and what we now write as a result, are not intended to be conclusive as to benefits to be derived, but merely to call attention to the subject, and encourage experiments along the lines suggested or otherwise.

Some lands are naturally sub-irrigated, or become so by the soil gradually filling up with water from adjacent ditches. Near Fresno, the writer noted that in the early '80s, and before many canals were built, the water level at Kingsburg was situated twenty feet or so below the surface, and water was drawn to the surface through the use of tubular buckets with a valve at the bottom. The best land for raising corn or potatoes in this section at that time was low places where moisture was present. A few years later the same location was visited, and, owing to the large number of canals in operation, the soil was well saturated with water, so that the water level was raised to within a few feet of the surface. The lands formerly used for raising corn, etc., had to be drained to remove the surplus water.

At Riverside, after years of constant irrigation, the soil has filled up with water so that orange trees have too much, and do not thrive in some locations. Some of the former choicest orange groves, now ruined by a surplus of water, are being dug out and replaced by alfalfa. Such locations were generally in the trough of the valley or in small basins and were also subject to disastrous frosts; hence, it suited some growers to plant alfalfa and thus save fighting frosts. As alfalfa itself will not do well in soil supersaturated with water, it would be well to consider some remedy. One would be to organize a drainage district and use the water on lower levels, and the cost of the drainage system refunded in this way. There is also some prime orange land situated on higher levels and adjacent, that would, on account of the absence of frost, grow fine oranges if supplied with water. As orange land pays handsome profits, the drainage water could be raised by electric pumping at a low enough cost to be worth while.

However, we have in mind particularly sub-irrigation methods whereby the usual irrigating water, in place of being used on the surface of the soil, is fed to underground passages so as to make a little water go a long ways in efficiency or "duty," and also allow the surface to be kept in better condition for growing healthy plants and at less cost.

THE HOLSTEIN-FRESIAN BREED OF DAIRY CATTLE.

(Note: Part seven will give reasons why the Pacific States, particularly our grand old State of California, should soon lead the world as a breeding place for the Holstein-Fresian cattle, and in the production of milk, butter, etc.)

It is said that the Fresian people came originally from Central Asia, bringing with them cattle which were white in color. Tradition also informs us that the Batavians, another tribe, came to Holland from the Upper Rhine country, also bringing cattle, but of a black color. The cross breeding of the Fresian white and the Batavian black is supposed to be the origin of the present black and white Holstein-Fresian cattle. This breed has been known by the names of "Holland cattle," "Netherlands cattle," "North Hollanders," "Dutch cattle," "Holsteins," "Dutch-Fresians," etc. We believe the most sensible name would be "Dutch cattle."

The Fresian people deserve our thanks for this breed of cattle more than the Batavians, for the reason that they stayed home during the Roman wars, paying their tribute, or taxes, to Rome in cattle and hides, while the Batavians paid tribute in men to fight the Roman armies. It is likely that the Fresians found great pleasure in increasing the efficiency and productiveness of their herds.

A description of Holland, as far as it relates to and affects the dairy operations of its people, and the environments most responsible for the great value of that noble breed of dairy cattle, the Holstein-Fresian, should prove both profitable and interesting.

Holland is said to be the most densely-populated country on the globe. There are two hundred people to the square mile. In the United States we have about thirty-four inhabitants to the square mile. Taxes in Holland amount to $5.85 per acre, but notwithstanding this burden, the Dutch are, and have been, a prosperous and happy people. They are intensive farmers, and every part of the surface of the ground is used and kept well fertilized by manures derived from domestic animals. Dairying is the basis for most farming operations, and it has been reduced to an art, or, rather, to a science, by these thrifty people.

The land is level, and much of it is below the level of the sea. It is the land of "dikes and ditches," the dikes or levees keeping out the waters of the North Sea, and the ditches acting as drains from which accumulating water (fresh water) is pumped up and over the dikes. You might say it is "pump or drown" in many localities.

THE STATE'S DEVELOPMENT.

(March Bulletin, California Development Board.)

Fear that the unseasonable hot weather would mature the fruit blooms so rapidly as to harm them seems to have been dissipated, and not only from the Santa Clara Valley, but the Pajaro, the Upper San Joaquin, the Sacramento, as well as Sonoma Valleys and Southern California, report a promising outlook for all kinds of crops. Thinning will probably have to be done by hand later on. The celery shipping season in Contra Costa County is about closed, 1,190 cars having been shipped to the present time. Citrus shipments to date—March 16th—are 17,228 carloads, against 9,598 last season, same date.

Reports are to the effect that the beet-sugar industry is in a flourishing condition throughout the State. Seven beet-sugar factories in the southern part of the State will run to capacity this year.

In Colusa County, 2,400 acres have been planted to rice. Between 6,000 and 7,000 acres in Butte County are already devoted to rice culture, and it is planned to increase the acreage 300 per cent, if the ground can be made ready.

Two thousand acres are being planted to early orchards in Nevada County, and a cannery will be operated at Grass Valley. There will also be a new cannery at Armona, Kings County. Imperial County reports fine crops, and a large influx of population.

Among recent land transactions may be mentioned: Purchase of 1,100 acres near Suisun, to be reclaimed and put on the market. Purchase of 560 acres of land near Colusa Junction, to be set out in oranges and lemons. Purchase of a tract of 15,000 acres in Yuba County for subdivision. Purchase of a 3,960-acre ranch in Modoc County.

MAY PLANTING CALENDAR.

VEGETABLE GARDEN.—Sow peas, sweet corn, squash, pumpkin, cucumbers, okra, beets, carrots, lettuce, radish, turnips, parsley and spinach. Plant onion sets, cabbage, sweet potatoes and tomato plants, asparagus, horseradish and rhubarb roots.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Sow primula, calceolaria in seed beds or frames and plant up to this time. Chrysanthemum plants that are well rooted by this time are planted in the open. All other summer flowering plants, such as petunia, balsam and zinnia, take the place of winter flowering bulbs, which are stored away in a cool place for the next season. The planting of carpet beds of coleus, iresine and acheranthus still goes on this month. Dablia, hollyhock, amaryllis, agapanthus and canna bulbs will bloom all summer if planted now. Care should be taken to have the ground manured heavily with old manure. These plants should get plenty of water, as they must be kept growing vigorously in order to have a profusion of flowers during the summer.

TREES.—It is not yet too late for planting orange, lemon and other citrus trees in orchard. Other trees of a semi-tropic nature may also be planted; this includes most evergreen fruits, etc.

CACTUS.—The highest authority says the best time to plant spineless cactus is from April to August. This agrees with our ideas. Dealers in spineless cactus will show you selected samples. See that your planting stick is of mature slabs or somewhat like samples. Immature slabs, like immature seed of any kind, are subject to rotting and poor germination. It would be well to plant at least a small experimental acre of soil to spineless cactus. This plant will undoubtedly prove of great value, but one should not go in too deep at the start.

WHEAT ROOT DISEASES.

Wheat root diseases is the subject matter of Bulletin No. 107, North Dakota Experiment Station. H. L. Bolley is the author. The discussion takes up the decrease of quality and yields due to these root diseases, and the relation of constant cropping to the occurrence of them.

The means of control recommended are: One—Grow one variety of pure bred seed, grade it up and treat before seeding. Two—Rotate the crop so the disease fungi are starved out before wheat is grown there again. Three—Avoid introducing the disease in fresh manure containing wheat straw onto land that is to grow wheat. Copies of the bulletin may be secured from the North Dakota Experiment Station, Agricultural College, North Dakota.

The Government has spent a considerable sum of money this year on the Yosemite-El Portal road, taking out curves, reducing grades, and otherwise putting the road in good and safe condition for automobile traffic. This improvement in the Yosemite transportation service means much for the comfort and pleasure of the trip, without additional cost. The time on this road will be reduced to an hour and a half in each direction and it will certainly be a most delightful ride through the Merced River Canyon and over the floor of the valley in the large, open, sight-seeing cars.

POULTRY

(By MRS. A. BASLEY.)

CARE OF LITTLE CHICKS.

THE HATCHING OF CHICKS IS but half the battle, for eggs from good, vigorous parents will hatch with but little trouble, if a good standard incubator is used, and if the directions with it are followed to the letter.

There is not a subject pertaining to poultry culture which needs more thorough, painstaking investigation and discussion than the care of little chicks, and it is said that not more than fifty per cent of the chicks hatched, the country over, reach maturity or a marketable age. Let us discuss the principal causes for mortality among little chicks—how we can combat them and what the essentials are in the successful raising of chicks.

We should, as far as possible, imitate Nature, taking the hen for example and following her methods, for in brooding and caring for chicks, the nearer we can come to Nature,—the closer our imitation of the old hen,—the greater will be our success. Our artificial hen, the brooder, should, and must be, made to do as good, if not better, work than the hen. It must be always absolutely clean, always warm and ready to shelter the smallest, chilliest chick whenever needed. With common sense, care, and favorable conditions, chicken raising should be a comparatively easy task.

"Well begun is half done," and as the natural tendency of a sturdy chick is to live, thrive and mature, all we have to do is to encourage this tendency and help nature in her work. There are three essentials to the successful raising of chickens. My friends call it my "rule of three." These are "Comfort, Proper Food, and Exercise," and the chief of these is COMFORT.

Under the head of Comfort, we must have the proper kind of an artificial mother, and plenty of room. Want of elbow room is one cause of great mortality in brooder chicks. It is poor economy to put 75 or 100 chicks into one brooder and have them thinned by death down to fifty, when by dividing them, between two brooders, nearly all of the chicks might be raised.

The next requisite under the head of Comfort is oxygen, or, in other words, plenty of fresh, warm air but no draughts in the house. The temperatures given for operating brooders vary with the machine and the position of the thermometer. A reliable guide for temperature is the action of the chicks. If they are cold they will crowd toward the source of heat; if too warm, will wander uneasily about, but if the temperature is right, each chick will sleep stretched out on the floor.

Brooders should have their floors well sanded, and covered to the depth of an inch or more with some fine scratching litter to induce exercise and provide hedging. The litter should consist of finely cut clover or alfalfa, chaff, cut straw, or even finely shredded cut corn fodder. The brooder should never be allowed to become foul. It should be cleaned regularly, the dirty litter and sand being replaced by clean material.

The hover of the brooder should be aired and sunned daily, for sunshine is the best natural disinfectant. Do not spray with lice-killers, distillate or coal-oil, but occasionally scald them with good hot soap suds. It will keep them thoroughly clean without the risk of making the chickens sick. Careful attention to these little details will be well repaid in better results and better chicks. It is attention to the little things that count.

The brooder should be heated for at least twelve hours before the chicks are put into it. They should be carried to the brooder in a basket lined and covered with flannel, great care being taken that they be not chilled on the way. I am sure that many chicks lose their lives by being chilled on this, their first journey. A chill will harden the yolk of the egg, which is drawn up into the chick the last day of its stay in the egg shell. If the chick is vigorous the yolk should be assimilated or digested in about three days; but if the chick is chilled or overheated, the yolk can never be assimilated, blood poisoning ensues, and the chick's life ends.

Chicks should not be fed for from thirty-six to forty-eight hours after they come out of the shell, because, first, they do not require any food, and, secondly, if they are fed too soon (that is, before the yolk is digested), the effort of digesting the new food draws the nervous energy or gastric juices away from the part containing the yolk, up to the crop and gizzard, and the yolk either does not digest at all or digests so slowly that it brings on bowel trouble, which at such an early age stunts the growth, if it does not kill the chick.

Feed Carefully.

The first few hours in the brooder they require no food but the sand to eat and water to drink. The sand supplies the little gizzards with the necessary teeth or little grindstones, so that they are ready to commence work when the food comes. I know some people do not give water at first, but it has succeeded well with my chicks. At about four o'clock they have the first meal of rolled breakfast oats, scattered on the sand. The white flakes quickly attract their attention and they pick them up. I also give them a fountain of fresh water and one of sweet skimmed milk. It is surprising to see how quickly they learn to eat and drink.

In the evening I look in upon them and am pleased when I see them spread over the hover floor, as it indicates that they are comfortably warm and will not crowd or huddle during the night. The first thing in the morning I give them some more rolled oats and some "chick feed." Chick feed and rolled oats are their main feed until they are six or eight weeks of age. I feed them five times a day at first, and always leave a little feed trough or hopper of chick feed where they can get it. I know this is contrary to the advice of many, but I found the weaker ones did not get the proper amount when all rushed for the food, and also it was a great comfort to me, if anything detained me beyond the usual feeding time, to know they had food before them. Also when fed at the usual hour they were not so ravenously hungry; they would not overload their little stomachs.

Their morning meal, at about six in the morning, consists of rolled or flake breakfast oats; next, green feed; then chick feed, rolled oats, green feed; and the last feed after they are a few days old is hard boiled eggs (two for every fifty chicks), chopped fine, shell and all, mixed with chopped onion and dry bread crumbs. I add Johnny cake or rolled oats to the onion and eggs. I always send them to bed with their little crops full.

As They Grow Older.

I keep a thermometer under the hover in the brooder and lower the temperature one degree a day until it is down to sixty-five degrees. After the chicks are six weeks old, unless the weather is unusually cold, they require no heat. For green feed they seem to prefer lettuce to anything else. Finely cut clover or alfalfa is excellent. The lettuce I cut up very fine at first, but in a few days they learn to tear it up, and lettuce suspended on a string or even thrown on the ground, gives them exercise and amusement as well as food.

In the playroom, where the chicks are fed, the floor is covered with chaff. If I cannot get from the mill real chaff, I cut up hay in the clover cutter, either wheat hay or alfalfa hay, to give them something to scratch in, and I throw a handful of chick feed into it for them to have something to reward their efforts. The alfalfa hay or chaff keeps them busy and exercising and this broadens their backs and increases the size and vigor of the egg making organs, which are already commencing to grow and which we must develop from the very first if we want to increase the egg output. The chaff, or preferably the alfalfa hay chopped short, also conceals their little feet from their active and sometimes mischievous brothers and stops them from pecking the feet and drawing blood, which tastes so good that they will actually turn cannibal and tear out and eat the bowels, sometimes causing great loss. This is always prevented by keeping the chicks busy scratching in deep chaff.

They have fresh water each time they are fed. They come out at daybreak, eat a little, and sometimes drink, and then go back and take another nap. The brooders must be cleaned twice a week the first week, three times a week afterwards, and every day when the chicks grow larger. The chicks should be dusted with insect powder about once a week. To do this I have a tin box (a baking powder can with a perforated cover), put insect powder into it and after dark raise the hover and sprinkle the powder liberally over the chicks. This will usually keep them free from lice.

While there are five hemlocks in the United States, only two are of any commercial importance, common hemlock and western hemlock. Of these two western hemlock makes the better lumber.

Only one wood, Spanish cedar (cedrela odorata) is commonly used for cigar boxes. Sometimes a cheaper wood may form the basis of the box, with paper-thin veneers of the tropical cedar over it.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

High Jinks for District Deputy.

San Francisco—March 18th, Golden State Parlor, No. 50, held a "high jinks" for D.D.G.P. Mae E. Himes, the following program being rendered: Grand march, all in costume, accompanied by an amateur band of fourteen pieces; song, "Paddy Dear," entire company; dramatic sketch, "Equal Rights," Sadie Daley, Emma Doane, May Jones, Hattie Mullane, Rose Hanley and Millie Tietjen; kewpie song, little Dorothy Wende, Lizzie Miller representing the kewpie doll; song, "We Landed a Few Short Weeks Ago," Jennie Blondell; duo, "Pals," Gertrude Lynch and Beatrice Nelson; German cornet (the only instrument of its kind in California) solo, Lizzie Muller; song, "Down in New Orleans," May Hogan and Tina Wende; song, "Chesapeake Bay," entire company; specialties, Johanna Meyer; song, "Rebecca," Beatrice Nelson and May Hogan, with chorus by entire company; dance of the seven veils, Kate Tietjen; presentation of a "man" to D.D.G. P. Mae Himes, May Jones, on behalf of the Parlor; song, "I Love You, California," entire company. Tillie Kock was the accompanist of the evening. Refreshments were served in the banquet-hall, after which the tango and other popular dances were indulged in until midnight, and the affair was voted a grand success by all present.

Fill Vacancy.

Byron—At the meeting of Donner Parlor, No. 193, March 25th, Mrs. Anna Ramos Pimentel was installed as financial secretary, to succeed Mrs. Bertha Hoffman, resigned. At the close of the meeting, a social time was enjoyed, in which Mrs. Grace Krumland favored those present with a recitation and the Nightingale quartet rendered a song entitled, "Lo! Again 'Tis Evening." Light refreshments were served.

Entertain Members.

Los Angeles—One of the most pleasant affairs ever given in honor of Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124, was the entertainment by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Robinson at their home on Rockwood avenue. The spacious house was made beautiful with ferns and carnations. Games, music, fun and laughter made the occasion a merry one, and all enjoyed the excellent and appetizing Spanish menu. Both Mr. and Mrs. Robinson are excellent entertainers, having the true California hospitality.

At the regular meeting of Los Angeles Parlor, April 20th, five new members were enrolled. At the conclusion of the meeting, owing to the thoughtfulness and kindness of Sisters Elliott, Calkins and Robinson, the members were quickly conveyed in automobiles to the Auditorium, to attend the public reception given to the Grand Parlor, N.S.G.W.

Grand President as Guest.

Alameda—Encinal Parlor, No. 156, was a recent hostess to Grand President Alison F. Watt, the occasion being her official visit. Mrs. Watt was accompanied by Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, Past Grand President Mae Wilkin, Grand Trustee Addie Mosher and Grand Outside Sentinel Dora Bloom. There were also present District Deputy Grand Presidents Anna Lange, Mrs. Lillian Murdoch and Miss M. Barstow, as well as delegations from Brooklyn, Piedmont, Fruitvale, Aloha, Joaquin, Alta, Sans Souci, Bahia Vista, Bayside, Mission Bell, Argonaut and Laurel Parlors. Encinal's members turned out in large numbers. The Grand President, in the course of her address, complimented the Parlor on its work, and told about the various works in which the Order is interested. Following the address, she was presented, by the Parlor, with a handsome hand-painted plate. P.G.P. Mae Wilkin delivered an interesting address on "Home Industry." Mrs. Laura E. Fisher, who has been Encinal Parlor's recording secretary since its institution, was given a handsome gold bracelet. A banquet was served, the tables being prettily decorated with California poppies. The committee in charge of the arrangements consisted of Mrs. L. Lomhardi, Mrs. M. Murdock, Mrs. G. Joseph, Mrs. Laura Fisher, Miss Loretta Du Fosse, Mrs. H. Hulse, Miss Mennu and Miss Eckstein.

Birthday Celebrated.

Grass Valley—Manzanita Parlor, No. 29, celebrated its twenty-sixth institution anniversary, March 31st, among the invited guests being the members of Quartz Parlor, No. 58, N.S.G.W. Mrs. Olive Vincent, president of the Parlor, welcomed the guests, and an entertaining program, consisting of musical numbers and a presentation of the drama, "The Minister's Wife," was rendered. As a surprise, several of the Native Sons, in Oriental costume, invaded the meeting and pulled off a Chinese stunt that provoked much laughter. The hall was tastefully decorated with American and Bear flags and ivy. An elaborate banquet concluded the festivities. During the evening, James C. Tyrrell, on behalf of Quartz Parlor, N.S.G.W., presented Manzanita Parlor with two beautiful cut-glass vases.

WATCHES FOR EACH ISSUE.

To the Editor of The Grizzly Bear—Dear Sir: Every month I watch for my copy of The Grizzly Bear. Since my visit to the Grand Parlor last June, the affairs of the Order interest me more and more, and I wish I could do more to help in the upbuilding of our glorious Golden State.

Visitors Welcomed.

San Francisco—After an exciting session, April 15th, Gabrielle Parlor, No. 139, elected the following delegates to the Grand Parlor: Mary Vivian, Emma Heymer and Augusta Cames. The Parlor has been very successful since its advent to Native Sons building, initiating several candidates. The success is surely merited, as the members are of the "go-ahead, pull-together" variety, working with indefatigable energy for the good of their beloved Parlor. Through the medium of The Grizzly Bear Magazine, the members would like to extend an invitation to all sister Natives to call on them, as visitors are always welcomed with open arms.

Pleased With Parlor's Work.

Oakland—Mission Bells Parlor, No. 175, entertained Grand President Alison Watt March 31st, a large delegation from the Parlors around the Bay and a large number of grand officers being present. The Grand President was presented with a hand-painted china tray, all the visiting grand officers with corsage bouquets of pink carnations and fern, the D.D.G.P. with red carnations, and the organizer of the Parlor, Mrs. L. L. Straub, and Mrs. Jennie Brown, who helped in the organization work, were presented with bouquets of enchantress carnations. The Grand President said she was very much pleased with the work of the Parlor.

Has Basketball Team.

Oroville—Pictured on this page is the basketball team of Gold of Ophir Parlor, No. 190, which was organized January 5th. The team has played one out-of-town game, at Chico, with the State Normal School team, March 6th, but being outclassed in size and experience, was defeated, but is now ready to meet all-comers. Florence Danforth is captain of the team. Reading from left to right, those in the picture are: Upper row—Madeline Stolder, Maud Will, Florence Danforth; lower row—Lou Campbell, Hazel Wells, Hattie Smith. Next fall, the team expects several lively times, socially and with games.

April 1st, the Parlor gave an April-fool mask ball, at which pretty, comical and unique costumes were displayed. Prizes were awarded, and many jokes indulged in. The admission ticket read:

N. D. G. W.

On ye night of April first, at stroke of nine,
Ye Fooles and Jesters will congregate
At Gardella Hall; prithe come, likewise
Bedecked in frivolous garb, thy face disguise
So unquestioned you may see

Class Initiation and Reception.

Oakland—At the meeting of April 16th, Piedmont Parlor, No. 87, held a class initiation, seven candidates being received into the Order. All the officers fulfilled their stations perfectly and in splendid style. A feature of the evening was the large number of sisters who had gathered for a reception in honor of Mrs. Lizzie Reyes, who had recently returned from a long Eastern trip, and who will soon return there. Mrs. Reyes has always taken an active part in all affairs connected with the Parlor and all miss her during her absence in the East. After the class initiation and meeting, a short entertainment was held. Mrs. Frances Rulfs, the gifted sweet singer of Piedmont Parlor, rendered a solo and was loudly encored. Mrs. Annie Bram favored with a piano solo, and rendered a march as all the members and guests marched to the banquet-hall, which was prettily decorated with spring blossoms. Here a sumptuous repast was spread. Short speeches were made by the District Deputy, Mrs. Sanborn, Grand Trustee Addie Mosher, Mrs. Lizzie Reyes, Mrs. Jennie Jordan, Mrs. Carrie Hall of Berkeley Parlor, Mrs. Thompson of Bahia Vista Parlor, and Mrs. McFeeley, a visiting sister from Los Angeles. During the course of speech-making, the guest of honor, Mrs. Reyes, was presented with a pretty picture—a scene of California. Two candidates were initiated the following meeting, which brings the membership of this Parlor above the 200 mark.

April 30th, Piedmont Parlor, No. 87, N.D.G.W., and Piedmont Parlor, No. 120, N.S.G.W., held an entertainment and dance on the roofgarden of the new Woodmen building. A large crowd had assem-

Praise for Parlor's Work.

San Francisco—San Francisco Parlor, No. 174, received Grand President Alison F. Watt on her official visit the evening of March 24th. The hall was artistically decorated with huckleberry greens and callas, in keeping with the approaching Easter season. The Parlor was represented by an attendance of four-fifths of its membership, while among the other guests of the evening were Grand Outside Sentinel Dora Bloom, Sans Souci Parlor, No. 96, San Francisco; D.D.G.P. Adele Wentworth, Presidio Parlor, No. 148, San Francisco, and visitors from many local Parlors. The Parlor's exemplification of the work of the Order brought forth unstinted and merited praise from the Grand President. Although the Parlor is of the tender age of four years, it has already made a place for itself among the progressive Parlors of the Order, and is well known for its fraternity and hospitality. A large urn of imported ware was presented to the Grand Anniversary Celebrated.

Stockton—Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, celebrated the twenty-seventh anniversary of its institution with a splendid program and banquet, April 14th. Among those present were Grand President Alison Watt of Grass Valley, Grand Trustee Addie Mosher of Oakland, Grand Trustee Grace Willy and Past Grand Presidents Carrie R. Durham and Mamie G. Peyton of Stockton. There was a large attendance of members, as well as several visitors, the latter including a delegation of twenty from Ivy Parlor, Lodi. During the Parlor proceedings, the Grand President and Mrs. Mosher, president of Ivy Parlor, delivered interesting addresses. A class of sixteen candidates, each attired in white, with a yellow sash, were initiated, and following their initiation presented a handsome basket of red carnations to Mrs. Delia Garvin, the president of Joaquin Parlor. The Grand President was the recipient of a beautiful hand-painted fruit-dish, and each grand officer was presented with a bouquet of red carnations.

At the festive board, the tables were prettily decorated in the Parlor's colors—red, white and yellow. Here Miss Beth Gallagher presided as toastmistress, and the following toasts were responded to: "Joaquin Parlor," Mrs. Delia Garvin, president; "California," Miss Clara Steir; "Copa de Oro," Miss Catharine Tully; "Our Charter Members," Miss Belle Stockwell; "1915," Miss Myra Ellsworth; "Our New Members," Miss Nellie Grant. Interspersed with the addresses were the following musical numbers: Instrumental solo, Miss Dentoni; vocal solo, Miss Elsie Eichoff; instrumental duet, Misses Lois and Aloha Lea, known as the Parlor twins.

Yellow poplar, or tulip tree, the largest broad-leaf tree in America, has been known to reach nearly 200 feet in height and 10 feet in diameter.

TINGE OF SCOTLAND PLEASES GRAND PRESIDENT

San Francisco—The occasion of the official visit of Grand President Alison F. Watt to Oro Fino Parlor, No. 9, N.D.G.W., April 2nd, will long be remembered by the Grand President and all who attended the meeting, as one of the surprises of the year. In honor of the Order's head, whose husband and ancestors were born in the Highlands of Scotland, the hall was decorated completely, excepting altar flags and ritualistic banners, with Scottish colors and clan emblems, the very flowers used being wild crawberry, broom, lilac, crab-apple blossoms, oats and heather. From the electroliers waved long streamers of the gold and crimson of the Scottish flag, and with the white of the great globes, formed also the colors of the Native Daughters of the Golden West. The floral decorations were held in place by knotted and tasseled silken ropes of crimson and gold. At the pedestals of the various officers' stations, however, was displayed the unique feature of the decorative scheme, for here were draped, and fastened with shoulder brooch in correct manner, clan tartan plaids, that at the president's station being the simple, beautiful tartan of the historic and ancient Clan Alpine, or MacAlpin,—a tartan which Mrs. Watt is herself entitled to wear. The officers, in dainty evening costume, entered the lodge-room to the universally loved strains of "Auld Lang Syne." Throughout the evening the carefully selected and excellently rendered musical program was, whenever the work allowed, in keeping with the decorations, bringing smiles of keen enjoyment to all who were familiar with the words or music of the Scottish songs, the Grand President, especially, fully appreciating each graceful compliment or touch of humor. The lofty, gracious and generously hospitable spirit of the Scottish Highlander,—not unlike that of the Californian Pioneer,—permeated the very atmosphere, and the toast, "Here's to you and yours, and me and mine," was the parlor's cheery greeting to all. The marshal, when taking the password, presented to each guest, as a souvenir of the evening, an N.D.G.W. official postcard, on which were inscribed in crimson the toast of the evening and quotations from Scottish bards, the eards for the grand officers bearing, in the lower left-hand corner, tiny embossed thistles in gold, and those for the members, knots of ribbon in Scottish colors. Little souvenir Scotch flags, mounted on long slender pins, were presented to the Grand Officers as they were escorted to their seats of honor.

The ritualistic work of the Order was exemplified in a splendid manner, with the initiation of Miss Teresa Wallace, "a name," to quote the Grand President, "most honored and loved in Scotland." The work, in every detail, was well and carefully performed, and received the commendation it merited. The Grand President, touched by the Parlor's gracious tribute and welcome, spoke of her own happy visit to the land of her ancestry, calling attention to our national adoption of many things of Scottish origin, noticeably the blue field of our Star-Spangled Banner from the Flag of the Covenant. With deep feeling, she thanked the Parlor for the happiness of the evening and for the beautiful gift—a comport of rock crystal with a wreath of thistles exquisitely entwined below the scalloped rim. To the District Deputy Grand President, Miss Frances Edwards, and to the organist of the evening, Miss Annie Carson, were presented dainty cups of fine china. After the close of the evening's work, to the music of "A Wee Deoch-an-Doris," refreshments were served, among which were crisp Scotch oat cakes and short bread, and Scotch taffies. Representatives from seventeen Parlor and the following grand officers were the guests of the evening: Grand President Alison F.

Watt, Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Treasurer Susie K. Christ, Grand Inside Sentinel Mary Bell, Grand Outside Sentinel Dora Bloom, District Deputy Grand Presidents Frances Edwards, May Noble, Winnifred M. Byrne, May Barry and Mae Edwards, and Past Grand President Mary E. Tillman. The committee in charge were Louise M. Burridge, Edith Fredericks, Isabelle Ranchow, Mazie Roderick, Hannah Nolan and Bella Wirtner.

For the enjoyment of all who missed the evening's pleasures, the special musical program is given: Entrance march of officers, "Auld Lang Syne"; taking up password, "Afton Water"; escorting grand officers: Grand President Alison F. Watt, "Within a Mile of Edinburgh Town"; Grand Vice-President May Boldeman, "I Love a Lassie"; Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, "Wearing of the Green"; Grand Treasurer Susie K. Christ, "Believe Me if All Those Endearing Young Charms"; Grand Inside Sentinel Mary Bell, "Blue Bells of Scotland"; Grand Outside Sentinel Dora Bloom, "Bloom is on the Rye"; District Deputy Grand President Frances Edwards, "March of the Cameron Men"; Past Grand President Mae B. Wilkin, "Coming Thro' the Rye"; Past Grand President Mary E. Tillman, "Campbells Are Coming"; Past Grand President Eliza D. Keith, "She's Ma Daisy"; Initiation: Obligation, "Oh, Promise Me," from Robin Hood; to first vice-president, "Bonnie Doon"; charge of first vice-president, "Annie Laurie"; to second vice-president, "Coming Thro' the Rye"; charge of second vice-president, "Bonnie Sweet Bessie, the Maid of Dundee"; charge of third vice-president, "Blue Bells of Scotland"; to past president, "Scots Wa' Ilae"; charge of past president, "Auld Lang Syne"; to president, "Blue Bonnets Over the Border"; president's charge, "Loch Lomond"; re-entrance of new member, "I Love a Lassie"; re-entrance of marshal, "She's Ma Daisy"; march of auditing committee, "Bonnie Dundee"; closing ceremonies, "Wee Deoch-an-Doris."

Native Sons of the Golden West

Boosting Home Industry.

Crockett—Carquinez Parlor, No. 205, March 18th, passed the following resolutions, prepared by E. G. Giles and D. J. Lacey, press committee: Whereas, The development of the State of California depends largely upon the upbuilding of its manufacturing industries, and the creation of new industries, and Whereas, It is necessary to accomplish this end, that every resident, and every civic and commercial organization within the State shall foster such industries by the purchase, at all times, of California-made articles, price and quality being equal, and Whereas, It has been brought to the attention of this Parlor that in the purchase of supplies for the use of the county, both in the county offices and in the county hospital, California-made goods have not, in the past, been given the preference, and Whereas, The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West has, as one of its objects, the development of the State of California and the promoting of home industry; therefore he it

Resolved, By Carquinez Parlor, No. 205, N.S.G.W., that the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Contra Costa County be requested to see that preference is given California-made goods in the purchase of all future supplies for the county, and that when bids are called for the ensuing year, the specifications for the same shall state: "California-made goods must be furnished, price and quality being equal," or a clause to that effect.

Arbor Day at Old Adobe.

Petaluma—The day set aside for this "labor of love" was Sunday, March 22nd. Before the start, there were several delays, for, be it known, this was also the "go to church Sunday" in this city. Several autoloards of enthusiastic members of Petaluma Parlor, No. 27, were soon on their way to the scene of action, each auto looking like "the day after" a floral festival, but instead of roses or carnations, the decorations were trees of many varieties, such as cypress, blue gum and redwood, donated by generous residents. It was seen at a glance that it would require some hustling to get all the trees properly planted. Everyone turned to with a will, and by the time the dinner horn was sounded, every worker had a good appetite. A bunch of "live wires" from Santa Rosa Parlor came upon the scene about this hour, having scented the savory odor of the frioles, coffee and barbecued beef, which the chef, Frank Singley, had prepared for all. Strange as it may seem, this was the first time many of the Santa Rosa boys had seen the summer home of our first Governor. Many compliments were passed relative to the splendid work of restoration accomplished by Petaluma Parlor, as also the fine appearance of the lawn fronting the building. The Santa Rosa brothers gave assurance that the Petaluma Parlor members' enterprise, likewise their barbecued beef, was most commendable, and after planting a tree each and dedicating the same to Luther Burbank and pledging their word of honor to come next "Arbor Day" in larger numbers, each visitor to provide a tree, the county seat boys waved a parting "au revoir." With entertaining the many friends who called, planting a new plat of lawn and the many trees, seeds and vines, Petaluma Parlor's workers put in a most strenuous day, it being after 5 o'clock when the last auto was under way for the return trip. While at times the Parlor has felt that but little interest was taken in this work outside the membership of the Order, it is now assured of the assistance and co-operation of the Petaluma Woman's Club, it having, at a recent meeting, taken favorable action on a communication from Petaluma Parlor relative to the work in hand. Petaluma Parlor rejoices with its neighbor Parlor just over the ridge, Sonoma Parlor, in the rebuilding of the mission, and hopes the time is not far distant when Petaluma, too, shall receive some assistance from the great State of California in our work of restoration at General Vallejo's "Casa Grande."

Marysville Extends Welcome.

Sacramento—Fifty members of Sacramento Parlor, No. 3, and several members of the other local Parlors, journeyed to Marysville, March 28th, to witness the initiation of four of Marysville's candidates. The Sacramento Natives, upon their arrival, were received by the citizens of Marysville and escorted through the town, headed by a band of music. After the parade the visitors were accompanied to the Marysville Native Sons' headquarters, where the officers of Sacramento Parlor delivered the degree work. Toward the latter part of the evening, a banquet was extended to the excursion-

APRIL ISSUE A CREDIT TO ENTIRE ORDER.

Editor Grizzly Bear—Dear Sir: I beg to enclose you herewith my check for $1.00, covering one year's subscription to The Grizzly Bear, and assure you of my pleasure to aid the magazine to this extent.

The April issue, just received, is a credit not only to the company, but to the entire Order, and any Native Son in California may well feel proud that the Order has such an excellent method of expounding its benefits. Wishing you every success, I am,

Yours very truly,

ists from the Capital City. Grand President Thomas Monahan delivered a very interesting address concerning the benefits derived from being a Native Son. Other speakers were Ed Head, past president of Stanford Parlor, Adjutant-General E. A. Forbes of Marysville Parlor, Judge J. M. Morrissey of Marysville Parlor, and D.D.G.P. J. E. Lewis of Marysville Parlor. Past President Fred H. Greeley spoke interestingly about the early days of the Order.

Celebrates Anniversary.

Los Angeles—Corona Parlor, No. 196, celebrated its eighteenth institution anniversary, April 14th, with a banquet at a local cafe, more than half the membership and four invited guests—Grand Trustee W. I. Traeger, D.D.G.P. Josiah F. Lyon, D.D.G.P. Harry G. Folsom and Clarence M. Hunt. Arthur Polaski, president of the Parlor, presided, and at his suggestion a collection, in behalf of the Homeless Children's Agency, was taken up, $20 being secured for the cause. During the evening, addresses were made by Dr. D. W. Edelman and W. F. Peschke, charter members, Louis Nordlinger, Aubrey Austin, P. H. Muller, Cal W. Grayson, J. M. Regan, Dan Laubersheimer, and the invited guests.

Home Industry Night.

San Jose—March 25th, San Jose Parlor, No. 22, had a home industry night and banquet, at which John A. Corotto delivered a most interesting address in which he set forth reasons why the statewide prohibition constitutional amendment, which will be voted on at the coming election, should not carry. The occasion was also a getting together of the Santa Clara County delegates to the Los Angeles Grand Parlor.

Grand Trustee Visits.

Kelseyville—Grand Trustee J. J. McElroy, accompanied by H. M. Weber, president of Piedmont Parlor, motored up from Oakland, April 2nd, and paid an official visit to Kelseyville Parlor, No. 219. There was a large attendance of local members, as well as many visitors from Lakeport and Lower Lake Parlors. A sumptuous banquet was served late in the evening, and several interesting addresses listened to, among the speakers being the Grand Trustee and A. H. Spurr of Lakeport.

Past Presidents Form Ritual Team.

Oakland—The Claremont minstrels have postponed their performance to May 2nd, as several of the players journeyed to Los Angeles to attend the session of the Grand Parlor. There are about fifty in the troupe, and the rehearsals taken a fine show. They are booked for Richmond, and some local parties have spoken for a night. The Past Presidents of Claremont Parlor, No. 240, have organized themselves into a ritualistic team and challenged the regular officers to a contest; a preliminary tryout showed great proficiency and the "regulars" will have to go some to beat the "old boys." At a meeting of the committees from the several Parlors of Alameda County to arrange for a ritualistic contest for a trophy, it was resolved that the East Bay Counties Assembly, No. 3, Past Presidents' Association, be requested to take over the contest and conduct it along the lines of that in San Francisco. Nearly all the Parlors of the county are included, and a great time is expected. All are very enthusiastic in the matter. A change of instructor of the band promises good results; the band meets often and the members are certainly doing fine work.

Preparing for 1915.

Palo Alto—Palo Alto Parlor, No. 216, and Redwood Parlor, No. 66, had a ritualistic contest, April 6th, in which the former was victorious. At a previous contest, Redwood Parlor scored the highest number of votes. Following the exemplification of the ritual, Palo Alto Parlor entertained the large number of visiting and local members present at a banquet. Norman F. Malcolm was toastmaster, and responses were made by Dr. Charles W. Decker, Past Grand President; Joseph A. Belloli, Jr., of San Jose, H. W. Lampkin and Fred W. Lippman of Redwood City, C. H. Smith of Menlo Park, George W. Hall and Kenneth Green of San Mateo, George W. Tinney and E. A. Hettinger of Palo Alto.

Grizzly Bear Pub. Co.—Gentlemen: Herewith $1.00 for a year's subscription. TIMELY SUGGESTIONS FOR ORDER'S PROGRESS

(By WILLIAM F. TOOMEY, Grand Trustee, N.S.G.W., Fresno.)

One of the things that I noticed particularly during the past year, when I was making my visits, officially and unofficially, was the interest that was being taken in the Order by the different members all over the State in the initiatory or ritualistic work. And right here is the proper place, in my opinion, to give credit where credit is due, and, to all the members who compose the San Francisco Past Presidents' Association, I believe the Order, as a whole, owes a great big vote of thanks and gratitude, for it is to them, in my opinion, more than to anyone else, that the credit belongs for starting this great work two years ago and keeping at it when others did not think there was any use of trying to get the members to take an interest in the work. The splendid result among all the Parlor speaks for itself, and I hope that they will continue the good work, and I am satisfied that the members of the Order will back them up by continued interest.

Another thing: While we are striving all over the State to get new members in the different Parlor, we do not pay enough attention to the old members who are dropping by the wayside. In my opinion, we should put forth just as great an effort to keep the old members in, as to get the new ones, and it is incumbent upon all the members not to leave all the work to the financial secretary, but to get out and talk to these old members and see that they are not suspended. I have talked this in every Parlor that I have visited this year, and I hope what I have said will bring some results.

One thing more, and that is, we do not give enough publicity to our work. We should tell people the good our wonderful Order has done and is doing all over the State in taking care of the homeless children. I believe at stated intervals there should be a regular report of this work published, showing just what the committee is doing and educate the people who are living in our great State now, and those who are coming, that we are not a selfish Order, but one that is devoted to the greatest principles of humanity. Not only should we tell them what our Homeless Children's Committee is doing for the children, but also what we are doing to preserve the historic landmarks of the State.

I here want to call to the attention of the members of the Order, the same as I did in my last year's report, that we, as members of this great Order, should wear its emblem and let the people of this great State know that we are proud of being Native Sons.

On the 18th, Palo Alto Parlor gave a dance, at which music was furnished by the Native Sons' orchestra. The Parlor gave this dance to create a nucleus for a fund to provide for the observance of Admission Day in San Francisco in 1915. It is proposed to have an elaborate Palo Alto float in the parade on that occasion. The members of the Parlor will participate in uniform, and will have the Palo Alto Native Sons' band and a drum corps.

THE PIONEERS.

(Written by a Pioneer of '52 at the time of his Pioneer brother's passing.)

The old Pioneers are fast passing away. They did well their duty, served well their day. They blazed out the trails, for others to roam, Where many in late years built them a home. They founded cities of commerce, and stores, Sailed o'er seas, crossed plains, went through some wars.

With hostile bands they knew no defeat, Until the Almighty God sounded retreat. They dug in the mountains for treasures of gold, The valleys were tilled, and products were sold; In mountains and valleys built many a home, And opened the way for others to come.

Generosity and kindness were at their door, Always found open, with room for one more.

EIGHT Apr. 17 FORD
They built mountain roads for others to pass, And to this day those monuments last. But few yet remain; Gabriel sounded the blast.— Now most of them gone, to their long home at last.

RICHARD D. BARTON.

The following resolutions were adopted by a rising vote at the Grand Parlor, N.S.G.W., in session in Los Angeles, April 20th:

Whereas, Richard D. Barton, a delegate of Sequoia Parlor, No. 160, N.S.G.W., duly elected to this Grand Parlor, has been summoned to his Eternal Home since his election, and his fellow delegates desire a recognition of his worth to be inscribed upon the minutes of the Grand Parlor; be it

Resolved, That the following sentiment be adopted by a rising vote and be spread on the minutes of this Grand Parlor and a properly engrossed copy thereof, duly certified from our Order to Sequoia Parlor, No. 160, N.S.G.W., to be used as the Parlor may be advised in memory of our brother. In the full vigor of his manhood, Richard D. Barton has passed to the Heavenly Parlor on high.

His was a noble character, full of energy and charity. His last thoughts, as had been his constant care during the whole of his manhood, were the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. His crowning glory was that, shortly before, he had seen his son initiated into his beloved Order. He died, not old in years, but full of achievement; for twenty-three years he had been recording secretary of Sequoia Parlor. Nor did he confine his work to his Parlor; he served for many years as Deputy Grand President-at-Large. He had been a member of the Nineteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third, Twenty-seventh, Twenty-ninth, Thirtieth, Thirty-first, Thirty-second, Thirty-third, Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Grand Parlor, and was a duly elected delegate to the Thirty-seventh Grand Parlor now assembled. His good work as assistant secretary to the 1910 joint Ninth of September Committee contributed in no small measure to the success of that monster celebration; and he died bearing the burden of secretary to the joint 1915 Admission Day Committee. He practiced to the full the virtue of Friendship, and his friends are legion; he exemplified Loyalty in all things, both great and small; his Charity was boundless in both word and deed. He has gone, leaving a birthright and a legacy to his family and his friends, beyond the dreams of avarice, a good name and enduring memory.

MATTIE E. CASSERLY.

March 3rd, our beloved sister, Mattie E. Casserly, passed away at her home near Goodyear Bar, and on the 5th Naomi Parlor, No. 36, N.D.G.W., conducted the last sad services, when our departed sister was laid at rest in the old Goodyear Bar cemetery in a casket hidden by lovely spring flowers and floral pieces. Our beautiful funeral service was used, with Sister Latrelle as president, Sister Gould as past president, Sister Hughes as marshal, and Sister Ida Sinnott as senior past president. E. L. Case, an old family friend, gave an exhortation at the grave.

In the passing of Sister Casserly, Naomi Parlor has lost one of its most ardent and faithful members; one who was always present meeting night, when it was possible for her to come. She was always bright and cheerful, with a pleasant word and smile for everyone; she was very unselfish, and always ready to lend a hand for the good of the Order.

Sister Casserly, all through her terrible suffering, was so brave and cheerful that her last days were an example of nobility and bravery, in spite of terrible affliction. Our dear sister was but fifty years of age, and leaves a sorrowing husband, daughter and granddaughter.

Dear little sister, bow we shall miss thee everywhere; but we have precious memories that are left to us, her sorrowing sisters, which are priceless.

EDWARD RODERICK.

By this memorial, Observatory Parlor, No. 177, N.S.G.W. (San Jose), records and perpetuates its love and respect for its friend and brother, Edward Roderick, whose untimely death occurred Monday, March 2, 1914.

Brother Roderick, who was initiated into this Parlor January 22, 1901, was born in Forbestown, California, January 2, 1874, and his early days were spent in the town of his birth. As he grew to manhood, he removed to Irvington, Alameda County, where he secured employment; and later, as he became acquainted with business methods, he was able to enter the field for himself, in which he was most successful.

Brother Roderick was well known in his home town of Irvington, where he endeared himself to all whose privilege it was to know him, by his uniform courtesy and kindness of heart, and by his high and unswerving sense of honor and fidelity. He always had a kind word and a hand of helpfulness for those who sought his aid and assistance. Though yet a young man, at the age of 40 years and in the prime of his life, he suffered greatly, and the pain he endured during the past few weeks of his life was more than he could bear, and the Angel of Death came and he was borne unto eternal rest.

As a man, he was a kind husband and a loving father, and he will be greatly missed from the fire-side of the little family. As a business man, he was respectful and courteous, and his place will not be easily filled for many days in Irvington, in which town he was one of the leading factors. Therefore, be it

Resolved, By the members of Observatory Parlor, No. 177, that we lament the death of our good friend and brother; that in his death, this Parlor has lost a beloved member and the town of Irvington a true man and honored citizen, and be it further

Resolved, That this memorial be spread upon the minutes of this Parlor, and that a copy thereof be transmitted to the family of the deceased, and also a copy sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine, the official publication of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

Respectfully submitted, in Friendship, Loyalty and Charity,

OBSERVATORY PARLOR, NO. 177.

THE PIONEERS OF SURPRISE.

(The following was written by Mrs. Sarah A.
Wood, a Pioneer of Surprise Valley, Modoc County, now a resident of Los Angeles, and 50 years of age):

O'er desert sands and mountains steep,
Through perilous trails in canyons deep,
The Pioneers came with prophetic eyes,—
Saw the wonderful future of grand Surprise.

With undaunted courage and patience rare,
With food to provide and clothes to wear,
They plowed and planted in sun and rain,
Started orchards and garden and fields of grain.

A cabin of logs without a floor,
No windows, and port-holes surrounding the door,—
These were the homes where they dwelt in fear
Of the wily savage ever near.

The loss of stock and tracks the moccasin made
Told plainly there had been an Indian raid,
But no braver man on battle field
Than those that made the thieves their booty yield

No beat of drum or bugle sound,
Where armies meet on equal ground,—
But a stealthy, ambushed foe had made
The rocks and hills their barriade.

Nanght but whiz of arrow and rifle's song
Was seen or heard as they passed along
Through defiles dark and gorges deep,
Or climbed the mountain's craggy peak.

With rifles near, with shovel and spade,
They paved the way for the splendid grade,
Where now in safety one may ride
O'er hill and dale and mountain side.

Built churches and schools on every hand,
Made ranches and homes all over the land;
On their primitive road now autos glide,
And people in beautiful homes reside.

Nearly all have passed to the other shore,—
Privations, toils and tasks for them are o'er;
Some sleep on the desert 'neath the coyote's tread,
Some in the beautiful home for the dead.

LOW RAILROAD RATES FOR CALIFORNIA EXPOSITIONS.

Action by the Transcontinental Passenger Association assures one-way round-trip fares to California next year from all points west of Chicago. These fares apply to both the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco and the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego. The visitors will be routed through Los Angeles.

The rates agreed upon are the same as those allowed during the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle, and are practically the rates asked by the directors of the two California expositions. The destinations named on the tickets will be Oakland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. The rates will go into effect on March 1, 1915, and will end November 30th. The tickets will have a return limit of three months, with the proviso that no return will be good after December 31, 1915.

TO ELIMINATE DANGER.

The Department of Agriculture is trying to eliminate the danger to cattle from poisonous plants on National Forest ranges. Of these plants, larkspur, loco weed, death camas, and water hemlock are the most poisonous. Larkspur does the most harm, because it is so widely distributed and is particularly bad for cattle. Ordinarily, horses will not eat larkspur, and sheep can eat it without apparent injury.

Mistletoe thrives on the western coasts to an extent not approached in the east. In many places this parasitic growth is responsible, directly or indirectly, for a considerable loss of timber.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

URING THE LAST MONTH A great many new fashions have been launched—exquisite fabrics in the most wonderful colors. Serge, garbardine, taffeta, novelty woolens and silks are the materials favored. In one model shown, called the "Ivanhoe," the skirt, of red and dark-blue plaid in the large, distinct blocks, was made with a drapery suggestion through the hips, and with a narrow, closed seam. The coat was of dark-blue serge unadorned with plaid, save for a cravat completing the purposely ill-fitting collar of serge. The side seams were slashed over the hips, and a belt of blue, embroidered with red, passed across the back and under the front.

Everyone seems agreed that the little e-ton is to be immensely popular during the coming season. It is so youthful, and so chic in character, that its appeal is very wide. Moreover, it is particularly well adapted to the spring and summer, according with the demand for airy, light effects as distinguished from the suggestion of warmth and weight associated with the winter.

Return of Little Waist Line.

New models show the e-ton cut with a sacque back which is drawn into an informal plait at the center of the back of the waist, to give a hint of a snuggler waist line. It has been said that the revival of the pannier styles, 1830 effects, and other puffed, ruffled and slashed ideas, will be conducive to the return of the little waist line. Let us hope otherwise.

Not many women are interested in wool materials, unless they need a new traveling dress, or something of that sort. Taffeta comes first, of course, for the flaring tunic, for the draped skirts—of which there are many new and graceful versions of the spiral, pannier and bustle—and for draperies which form their own tunics.

The softer silks are better than taffeta for these skirts. Charmeuse, satin, crepe meteor, moire, the corded silks, crepe de chine, silk crepe, the figured silks, rapiers and foulards are all used and drape successfully.

In silk dresses, the waist is almost always made of the silk, unless the dress is part of a suit; in which case, the waist is lightened by a combination of the silk with chiffon net or lace; otherwise, the whole waist is of the silk, except the chemisette on the waistcoat.

Simple Materials Suitable.

The gathered chemisette of the tuxedo waist is usually made of fine batiste or tulle. The newer ones are made of organdy, fine lawn handkerchief linen, or chiffon, and are absolutely plain except for a picot edge or a narrow hemstitched hem.

For silk dresses, the smartest waist is the one with a front that crosses and ties in a sash in back. A new Japanese waist is gathered to a small yoke and has a stand-away Japanese hand. A pretty draped waist is gathered in on a cord at the neck, and has innumerable versions of the new raglan sleeves and yokes.

Evening waists amount to very little beyond a bib of some kind and a very simple kimono waist of lace, net or chiffon. The bib is of the skirt material, and for summer, taffeta will be used more than anything else.

Lace, net and chiffon are cool, and need not be expensive. The simpler materials are more suitable for the informality of most summer dinners and dances.

In design, there is no difference between the skirt of an afternoon and evening dress, except that the evening dress skirt occasionally has a train.

The Ripple Coat.

Among the cotton materials, embroidered flouncings will be used, with batiste and mull for tunic skirts. The fine crepes and voiles, printed or embroidered in the new block designs and pompadour patterns, are charming in the puff tunics and panniers.

The heavier cotton materials, such as the cotton duvetyn, velours, corduroys, broches, plushes, and ratines are very smart in wraperies or in the pouch or pocket peg-top skirts. For simpler skirts, the corded cottons, ratines and linens will be used.

The ripple coat will also be used for summer, over thin summer dresses and also as an outing coat. The ripple, in a less pronounced degree, is also found in the new habit coat, a very smart jacket that is used with peg-top skirts. The straight coat with a belt and patch pocket is worn with straight skirts for hacking, and an exaggerated version of the same coat, with raglan or kimono sleeves cut in one, with a yoke or set-in, is now the most popular type for outing wear.

Trousseau Vary.

This spring the styles are made fascinating by hip flounces, puffed flouncing, and all kinds of stand-out arrangements. With this in mind, the designers of undergarments have for some time past been studying as to what could possibly be left out, pared down, and pressed close. With the result, that a new line of underpinnings for the woman of fashion, with much in the way of our up-to-date features and novelties—snugginess in fit, sheerness in material, novel simplicity in cut, and flatness in trimming—sum up the general effect of the new lines. And the designers are still bringing out more novelties and further improving the styles of these new garments.

The trousseaux of the 1914 June bride will not at all resemble that provided for the bride of, say, two or three years ago. Those included frilly, fluffy things of lawn and muslin, encrusted with lace motifs, embroidery and fine hand tucking, and looped with rosettes, bows and ribbon. These will include glove silk combinations, "near corsets" of French tricot or netting, knickers of crepe de chine, shadow-lace camisoles, envelope chemises, chemi-pantaloon, and snug-fitting tango petticoats slashed at each side to allow the wearer to step.

Glove Silk for Undergarments.

Glove silk is the newest fabric pressed into use for the close-clinging combination. This, with a fine, soft quality of silk jersey, composes many styles and can be had in white, flesh color, pale pink, or blue tints. The upper part of the combination follows the usual lines of the old-time jersey vest.

The waist curves in, to fit the figure, and the trouser portion is often finished in the new knicker-knee style, which means that it is brought snug into a narrow band just below the knee; there the usual loose leg style is adhered to. The material is scanty in cut, and what ornamentation there is, is flatly applied. Often the leg is slashed at the side.

Some very pretty glove-silk combinations come in a lacy pattern which has a fancy design woven into the fabric of the silk. The corset materials are extremely soft and pliable in texture.

Silk and cotton tricots, suede cloth, fancy broches and netting give a maximum amount of softness and flexibility, while elastic is freely used as insets at the lower edge of the corset back to draw in the corset to the figure, and in the front, or over the hips, to make the corset more flexible.

Corsets Have Boning Eliminated.

Then, also, boning has been very much done away with, so that some of the newest corsets are very far indeed from the old, stiff affairs, which had bones every two inches and were like a piece of armor to get into. The few bones used are also much shorter than formerly, and so placed that they give the best possible lines.

Flowered nets in dainty pattern, flowered crepe de chine, silk and lace, are used in the construction of the modish under-bodice which is designed for wear under a sheer waist of net or lace. These little affairs are also often of softly-pleated chiffon, and come in all the delicate colorings of the season, flesh pink and pale yellow being the favorites. They are fancily trimmed in some flat way, such as lace insets or bandings, with no bunchiness about them, and are very soft and graceful in effect.

The stringent requirement of the forest service that all sheep be dipped before entering the National Forests has practically eradicated scabies on those areas.

A California firm is selling eucalyptus charcoal at $24 a ton, as against $20 a ton for oak charcoal. Since most of the California-grown eucalypts do not make good lumber, uses for other products of the tree are being sought.

SUPPORT URGED FOR HOMELESS CHILDREN

IN ITS REPORT TO THE GRAND Parlor, N.S.G.W., at Los Angeles, last month, the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Central Committee on Homeless Children says, among other things:

"The membership of the Central Committee during the past year has been as follows:

"Hon. C. M. Belshaw (chairman), Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, Edward F. Moran, representing the N.S.G.W.; Mrs. W. G. Hitchcock, representing the Catholic humane bureau and the Catholic children's institutions; C. A. Murdock, representing the Protestant children's organizations and institutions; Lucius Solomons, representing the Jewish children's organizations and institutions; and Fairfax H. Wheelan, representing the Associated Charities of California.

"The Central Committee is one of the two home-placing societies endorsed under the law by the State Board of Charities and Corrections. It maintains no home, receives no State aid, solicits no direct contributions from the public, and pays no commissions to collectors. It cannot but be a source of pride to every Native Son and Native Daughter that the work of their Central Committee costs per child placed less than one-third of the only other home-placing society in the State of California. The committee itself is proud to acknowledge that this most gratifying result is due, in a large measure, to the good offices of the loyal Native Sons and Native Daughters. It realizes full well the service rendered to it by hundreds and hundreds of tender-hearted, ready-handed brothers and sisters scattered far and wide throughout the Golden State. Preliminary investigation of homes costs money, yet it is an imperative necessity; continuous supervision costs money, yet it is no less imperative. To some societies there may be a temptation to slight or neglect the one or the other, even though the consequences might work an injury to the child. The work, however, carried on by the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West contains no temptation to slight or neglect investigation or supervision. The Homeless Children Committees of the local Parlor, animated by their zeal for their Order, for their State, and for humanity, conscious of their responsibilities, indirectly to the child and directly to their Parlor, gladly assume the work of investigation and supervision. Thus is the home-placing of the unfortunate little boys and girls of California increased in effectiveness and decreased in cost. In this connection, it is well to note that the work of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West, in bringing together the homeless child and the childless home, not only confers an inestimable benefit upon the child and upon the home, but is also saving to the State of California a vast sum of money per year. Were these children not placed in homes where they are given the love and care that beongs to every child, California would be compelled to grant them State aid. In consequence, it is not too much to say that the activities of the Native Sons and Native Daughters in behalf of the homeless children of the State have resulted at the present time in a saving to California of some $50,000 per year.

"The committee desires to lay great emphasis upon the fact that, while it is primarily a home-finding organization, with the wisdom of placing a child in a foster home, in many cases determined for it by the judge of the juvenile court, the humane society and the other agencies that assume the care of abandoned children, the committee nevertheless, often finds itself facing the problem of a mother who comes directly to it with a desire to relinquish her child, and the committee wants every Native Son and Native Daughter to understand that it places paramount importance upon parental responsibility, and that no mother is permitted to relinquish her child without most careful investigation by the secretary of the committee, as to the causes that impel the mother to part with her offspring; that no child is accepted without every conscientious effort being made to ascertain whether relatives or friends are available, whether temporary relief cannot be secured, whether the mentality, character and training of the mother fit her to care properly for her child, and whether the determination of the mother to dispose of her child is absolute and irrevocable. The secretary ever pursues the fixed policy of impressing upon the mind of the mother her supreme duty to her child, of giving her full time to reflect, and it is, indeed, gratifying to note that in at least seven out of thirty-seven mothers who came directly to our committee, the advice and help secured has been successful in preserving the blessed tie of mother and child, and that seven grateful mothers have not failed to express their heartfelt gratitude for the advice and assistance that had enabled them to retain possession of their little ones.

"The committee regrets sincerely that contributions from a number of Parlor were received too late to be included in this report of its fiscal year. The report was necessarily closed upon March 31, 1914, and was in the hands of the printer by April the 2nd. It is, however, a most encouraging and happy fact that many Parlor have contributed this year to the homeless children cause that have never contributed before; and it is no less pleasant to be able to state that the committee has received and welcomed many fervent words of encouragement and many warm expressions of interest sent to it during the year by various Parlor of both Orders.

The committee is now well assured that the time is not far distant when every member of the two great fraternal orders of California will take a personal interest in this work, and will feel the full personal responsibility that is rightly due to a cause that means so much to the State, to the nation, and to humanity."

During the year April 1, 1913 to April 1, 1914, Subordinate Parlor have sent contributions to the Central Agency as follows: Joint contributions, $573.45; N.S.G.W. Parlor, $1,970.08; N.D.G.W. Parlor, $637.08; San Francisco Parlor (jointly), $1,899.98. Total receipts for the year have been $5,836.41, and disbursements, $6,486.93. The Agency had a balance of cash on hand, April 1, 1914, of $9,500.72.

ENTERTAINMENT FEATURES OF N. S. G. W. GRAND PARLOR

(BY THE GRIZZLY.)

LOS ANGELES, THROUGH HER Native Sons and Native Daughters, maintained her nation-wide reputation for lavish hospitality during the Thirty-seventh Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West, the week of April 19th.

It was the unanimous opinion of the 2000 visiting members of the Order and their accompanying ladies, that, in the way of Grand Parlor entertainment features, the Los Angeles Native Sons and Native Daughters had excelled all past efforts and had set a pace which, in future, would be hard to equal and never surpassed.

When the steamer "Yale" docked at San Pedro, Sunday morning, April 19th, 200 local Native Sons and Native Daughters were on hand with a brass band to welcome the capacity-load of visitors on board. Upon arrival at Los Angeles, they were taken in special cars and automobiles to Hotel Alexandria, where a registration bureau was operated under the direction of Harry G. Folsom.

Being supplied with badges, entertainment tickets, etc., the visitors were shown to their several temporary abiding-places. In the afternoon, some went to the beaches, others to the ball game, others to various places of amusement and places of interest, and still others were taken for auto rides about the city.

At 9:30 in the evening, a special train brought more visitors, and these, also, were received by a large delegation of local members and brass band, and, in turn, were booked at the registration bureau. This bureau was maintained throughout the week, and was a popular place for those seeking information.

Public Reception.

Monday evening, a public reception was held at Temple Auditorium, which had been attractively decorated in American and Bear Flags for the week's festivities. During the course of the program, the assemblage joined in singing "I Love You, California," and "America." Previous to the speaking, Ray Hastings delighted the audience with a pipe-organ recital, rendering "Aux Flambeaux," "The Temple Chimes" and "Poet and Peasant."

W. J. Ford (Corona 196) was chairman of the evening. In the absence of his father, Mayor H. H. Rose, his son, A. H. Rose (Ramona 109), extended the city's welcome, which was responded to by Grand President Thomas Monahan. Other speakers, and their subjects, were: "The Pioneer," Congressman Joseph R. Knowland (Past Grand President); "California's Debt to Spain," Hon. James D. Phelan (Pacific 10); "Outside Activities of the Order," Judge John F. Davis (Grand Second Vice-president); "Significance of the Grand Parlor," Senator Charles M. Belshaw (Past Grand President).

The surprise of the evening was a whistling solo by Margaret McKee, a California native daughter and bird warbler, who rendered, to organ accompaniment, "The Invitation." Miss McKee received such an ovation that she was forced to respond to an encore, and delighted the audience with "The Mocking Bird." The youthful whistler's name was on every tongue at the close of the reception, and she was conceded to be a veritable human bird; in fact, many said her notes were even clearer than those of a bird. The Grand Parlor, at its Wednesday session, passed a resolution thanking Miss McKee for her appearance, and commending her wonderful ability. She was declared to be, indeed, the "Queen of Whistlers."

Tree Planting.

Monday afternoon at 1:30, three sycamore trees, dedicated to friendship, Loyalty and Charity, the Order's cardinal principles, were planted in Central Park. Frank G. Tyrrell (Ramona 109) beautifully expressed the purpose of planting the trees. At the conclusion of his address, Bismarck Bruck, Grand Third Vice-president, dedicated the first tree to Friendship. He was followed by John F. Davis, Grand Second Vice-president, who dedicated the second tree to Loyalty. The third tree, typifying Charity, was dedicated by Louis H. Mooser, Grand First Vice-president.

The silence following the impressive tree planting was broken by Grand President Thomas Monahan, who, in bringing the ceremonies to a close, said: "And now, having received into honest hearts these messages of the trees, we unite in an expression of gratitude to the heroes who gave us this goodly land, with its forests and vineyards, its fruits and flowers, and its manifold blessings of peace and happiness. To these fundamental virtues we pledge ourselves anew, and from this fair spot we take our way, resolving to be nobler exemplars of true friendship, unswerving loyalty and steadfast charity."

Beach Excursion.

Tuesday was given over to an excursion to the beaches, for the number and variety of which Los Angeles County is famous. Fourteen cars were required to accommodate the pleasure-seekers. The first stop was made at Long Beach, where, at noon, a basket lunch was served, to the accompaniment of music by the Long Beach municipal band.

The members of Grizzly Bear Parlor, N.S.G.W., and Long Beach Parlor, N.D.G.W., had charge of this feature of the day, and covered themselves with glory. Following the lunch, short addresses were made by Mayor Wheaton, who extended a welcome on behalf of Long Beach; Edgar McFadyen, who extended a welcome on behalf of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Long Beach; Grand President Thomas Monahan, who replied for the visitors, and Secretary Bisby of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Boarding the cars, the visitors were taken to Wilmington and San Pedro, where Los Angeles' water-front activities were inspected. The San Pedro band escorted the crowd to the City Hall, where Wm. Durr introduced Judge Steiglitz, who made an address of welcome.

After a short visit at the harbor, the visitors were taken back through Los Angeles to Venice, passing, en route, Hollywood, Sherman, Beverly Hills, the Palisades, Santa Monica and Ocean Park. At Venice, a band was in waiting and a procession was soon on its way to the water-front. There, deep in the sands of old Pacific, with due and impressive ceremonies, the whiskers of A. J. Turner (Stockton No. 7), encased in a handsome casket, were interred.

Following these ceremonies, the visitors invaded the many eating places, after which, until midnight, they visited the many amusement concessions and danced to their hearts' delight.

Native Daughters' Reception.

Wednesday afternoon, from 2 to 5 o'clock, the entire second floor of Hotel Clark was given over to a reception to the visiting women, the affair being under the supervision of the Los Angeles Native Daughters. Four hundred guests were in attendance. Heading the reception committee were Dr. Eva R. Bussenius (Past Grand President) and Mrs. Jennie Elliott (Los Angeles 124).

Bear and American flags were everywhere hung about the reception-rooms, while potted palms and flowers adorned every nook and corner. A dainty service of tea and iced refreshments was continued throughout the afternoon.

De Nubla's orchestra rendered selections at various intervals, and vocal numbers were given by Miss Daisy Prideaux (Ursula 1), Miss Hazel Buckius, and Mrs. Alta Smith (Los Angeles 124).

Grand Ball.

The ballroom of Hotel Alexandria had its natural beauty enhanced by a generous use of flowers for the grand ball the night of Wednesday. The affair was strictly formal, and was attended by 250 couples. Lon S. McCoy (Ramona 109) was the floor director.

The elaborate gowns of the women and the evening dress of the men made an attractive sight.

Excellent music was provided for the dancing, and punch was served throughout the evening.

"I Love You, California," furnished the music for the grand march, which was led by Grand President Thomas Monahan and Mrs. H. C. Lichtenberger. Following, in order, were these grand officers: Past Grand President H. C. Lichtenberger and Mrs. Thomas Monahan, Grand First Vice-president Louis H. Mooser and wife, Grand Second Vice-president John F. Davis and Past Grand President Eva R. Bussenius, Grand Third Vice-president Bismarck Bruck and wife, Grand Trustee Wm. F. Toomey and wife, Grand Trustee Wm. I. Traeger and wife, Grand Trustee Wm. P. Caubu and Miss Grace Stoerner.

Auto Excursion and Barbecue.

Thursday was given over to an all-day auto tour of Los Angeles County, and it was conceded the most pleasant and educational feature of the week's entertainment. The visitors assembled at Washington and Hill streets at 9:30 a.m., where they were placed in 250 autos and several automobile carryalls.

From here, a parade, led by a police auto and a band, wended its way through Broadway, past the city limits. Each machine was decorated with Bear and American flags, and the party was in a happy mood. Thanks of the local committee are due, and hereby extended to, the Savage tire agency, the Moreland truck company, and the several generous Angelenos who placed machines at the committee's disposal for the day.

The parade passed by San Gabriel Mission, El Monte, Alhambra, and on to Covina, from which place a return start was made. At noon, having arrived at the "Lucky" Baldwin ranch, a stop was made for a barbecue. Many local members made the trip to the barbecue grounds by special train over the Santa Fe.

Mrs. Anita Baldwin McClaughry had generously donated the use of a picturesque spot in the Baldwin acres for the serving of the barbecue, and there, under the spreading oak tree branches, 1500 hungry Natives enjoyed a splendid repast, to the accompaniment of music by a brass band.

Too much credit cannot be given Charles R. Thomas (Ramona 109), who had the barbecue under his direct supervision. The appointments were perfect, and the barbecued beef was declared the best ever served. In the preparation of the barbecue, Mr. Thomas, who was assisted by Don Romero and a large corps of assistants, used 1500 pounds of barbecued beef, 3400 loaves of bread, 1000 quarts of coffee, 100 gallons of pickles, 75 gallons of olives and 340 pounds of beans.

Having satisfied the innerman, the visitors strolled about the grounds, and listened to an original poem, "California As I See Her," by M. D. Chamberlain of Glendale, and an address of welcome by Antonio Orfilla (La Fiesta 236).

Taking their places in the autos, the visitors started toward Los Angeles, visiting, en route, the grounds of "Anokia," the handsome homeplace of Mrs. McClaughry, and the famous Busch's gardens at Pasadena. Los Angeles was reached about 6 p.m.

High Jinks.

The one entertainment feature that did not come up to the expectations of the committee was the "stag" high jinks at Turner Hall, Tuesday night. Plenty of refreshments were provided, but the program was worse than a failure—in fact, the least said the better. The committee having this in charge was simply imposed upon, as regards entertainers (?), by a booking agent.

Banquet.

The festivities were brought to a close Friday night with a banquet at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. The surroundings were ideal, and the menu and service excellent. As souvenirs, each guest was given a handsome menu-card, the cover of which bore a hand-painted poinsettia. The banquetters were bubbling over with patriotism, and each reference to the Stars and Stripes brought forth loud and prolonged cheers.

Edwin A. Meservé (Ramona 109) was the toastmaster, and upon arising to introduce the first speaker, called upon those present to stand and salute the flag. Cheer upon cheer followed compliance with this request. Each speaker was given close attention, and his remarks were frequently interrupted with applause. The list of toasts, and those who responded, follows:

"The President of the United States," Hon. Lewis F. Byington (Past Grand President); "California," Hon. James D. Phelan (Pacific 10); presentation of Past Grand President's jewel, Grand President Louis H. Mooser; response of acceptance, Junior Past Grand President Thomas Monahan; "Our Country," Congressman Joseph R. Knowland

ADMIRAL DEWEY

Incomparable American, stand forth,
Thy country would honor thee today;
Not Brooklyn bridge embowered in flowers,
Nor buildings decked in bunting gay;
Not acclamations loud and long,
Nor people hurrying to welcome thee;
Not boom of cannon, nor bursting shell,
The sound of which thou knowest well,—
But in our hearts, and in our tears,
The memory of a thousand years
To come. The people then will say:
We honor our great Dewey today.
'Twas he who in long years ago,
Did single-handed and alone,
Take that which to us is a crown,
Nay, not a crown, the eagle's wing,
Is spread abroad now shimmering
With Liberty that palpitates,
And stirs to love the one who hates
To see our nation's eagle soar
Beyond the confines of the rear
Of ocean, where the Pacific laves
Our western boundary, o'er the graves
In far Manila where our men
Were led by Dewey, and 'twas when
He sank the Spanish ships that day.
They heard our fathers' fathers say:
He sunk the world of pomp, and power,
And ever since that glorious hour,
When Freedom spread her wings far o'er
Those islands beyond the Pacific shore,
The world was shaken as a shock
Of earthquake causes sudden rock
To crack and tremble, like the leaf,
Storm shaken. Though the time was brief
To crush, to the power is gone
To oppress, and chain, and hold like one
In bondage. Now awake!
Let all the world in homage make
This day a Dewey Day, indeed.
Let men of every shade and creed
Lift up their hearts in reverence now.
A laurel crown is on the brow
Of him; the conquering hero comes
To sound of trumpet, blare of drums.
Deep in our hearts his image rests,—
Deep is the love within our breasts.
A Nation folds him in her arms.
For him, no more will war's alarms
Call forth his courage; lion hearted,
No more from home and kin be parted;
But rest in peace on this fair shore.
The cannon sleeps; no more its roar
Will call him hence to sail away;
For him, sweet peace prevails today.
And fair Columbia on her breast
Will soothe her bravest son to rest.
To rest? Ah no, he will not sleep
While mortals vainly mourn and weep
For sons who died so far away;

But to each mother he will say:
Another martyr soul was he
On the altar of our Liberty.
O parents, mothers, they are gone;
No more indeed will each brave son
Clasp her in arms she loved so well,
But mothers think how they all fell—
'Twas that the crushed might now be free.
In heaven they hold a jubilee
For those brave sons who, fighting, died,
That others might not be crucified
And held beneath the iron hand
Of Despotism. O, try to feel
The glory of their dying so,
And when our hero comes we know,
Mothers whose sons were with him there,—
From north, from south, from everywhere,—
Will welcome Dewey, brave and true.
The son who fills a hero's grave
Doth honor her who to him gave Birth and love until the hour
The Nation called upon the flower
Of Columbia's sons to arm and fight,
That those who suffered in the night
Of superstition and oppression
Should learn that Liberty and Progression
Alone are the true upward way
To peace, and God's eternal day.

EXPENDING MONEY

FOR LANDMARKS WORK

The Historic Landmarks Committee of the Grand Parlor, N.S.G.W.,—Congressman Joseph R. Knowl- and (chairman), Lewis F. Byington, II, C. Lichten- berger, Dr. C. W. Decker and John H. Grady, all Past Grand Presidents,—submitted the following report at the Los Angeles session, and the same was adopted:

"On Junipero Serra Day the members of your committee participated at the dedication of a tablet which was placed on the old Spanish barracks at the Presidio, San Francisco. This old building marked the headquarters of military government in California under Spanish, Mexican and American rule. Among those who delivered addresses were Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington and Grand Second Vice-president John F. Davis. Professor Morse Stephens of the University of California, who has taken such a deep interest in the historical research work of the Native Sons, was also one of the speakers. The ceremonies took place under the auspices of the California Historic Landmarks League. Much credit is due to the secretary of the League, Mrs. Laura Bride Powers, for the placing of the tablet.

"The Native Sons and Native Daughters of Alameda County have been very active during the past year in raising funds for the preservation of Mission San Jose, located in that county, which old landmark is among one of the very few remaining Franciscan missions in Northern California.

"Under the auspices of Niles Parlor, No. 250, N.S.G.W., and Laura Loma Parlor, N.D.G.W., a carnival was held at Niles beginning May 12th, of last year. The proceeds of this carnival, amounting to $950, have been placed in the Mission Restoration Fund.

"Your committee has adopted a policy of assisting those localities in which landmarks are located, where a disposition is shown by the surrounding community to provide part of the funds for the restoration work. The $500 in the hands of the chairman of this committee has been turned over to Mission San Jose Restoration Committee of Alameda County. The Joint Alameda County Ninth of September Committee has voted to donate to the Mission San Jose Restoration Committee $500 of the surplus from the Admission Day celebration held in Oakland. This will make a total on hand in the fund for the restoration of this mission of $3,268. As near as can be estimated the restoration of this old mission will cost $5,500, and it is expected that during the present year work will be under way. It is the earnest desire of those interested in the restoration of this old mission, as well as other California landmarks, that by 1915, when thousands of Easterners will visit our State, that we will be able to show that Californians appreciate the great historical value of these interesting reminders of California's early and romantic history.

"Your committee has signified its willingness to contribute $250 to defray the expenses incidental to the dedication of the Bear Flag Monument in the historic town of Sonoma on June 14th of this year, which will be under the auspices of this Order.

"During the coming year it is the intention of the committee to place several tablets in San Francisco, one of which will mark the spot where the waters of San Francisco Bay extended in the early days, now within the business section of San Francisco. It is believed that such a tablet will prove of great interest to the thousands of visitors during the Panama-Pacific International Exposition."

The newspapers don't print much of anything any more but pictures and trash. We've had to fall back on the Bible for something to read. We like it very well, Zekel and me. We do a little at a time, so it'll last. There's no advertisements in it, nor court news.

When we ust to have the Ladies' Sewing Circle we had plenty of news going round, but when the men took it over for the Gentlemen's Sewing Club they made a secret of everything. Times are dull that way, and the young people go to the city.

Zekel subscribed to the Pioneer Mother on a monument, but he says that if she isn't dressed like his mother ust to be, that he won't pay his dollar and a half.

Zekel's that stubborn, and when he gets too hard-headed I bake up a lot of things, and go over to Nancy's to help her with old Aunt Jane. When the pies are all gone Zekel shaves, and hitches up the old gray mare and comes after me. It seems like old times when he courted me. I'm wonderful fond of Zekel. His favorite kind of pie is custard with a high marang like a feather-down cushion.

I voted the way Zekel wanted me to, and let my man go. It was better than arguefying all night. Life wouldn't be worth living if I couldn't make Zekel think he knew it all.

Poor Mrs. Hathoway had twins, and they say the Ladies' Fire Arm Association is awful busy making little dresses and petticoats. They passed a resolution of joy and respect.

Bub, if your mother and me should die, don't stand in with somebody that advertises they like orphans. Get in with somebody that don't spread themselves that way.

If you want to find out about anybody, don't ask the preacher, find out from the grocer.

Zekel wants to know why the ladies wear fly brushes on their hats,—he's that ignorant.

THE GRATEFUL JEW

times I met this mysterious individual in the same place, and each time I met him, his salutation was the same, and he seemed pleased with the fact that I did not recognize him. I made inquiry of several people, but no one seemed to know him or what his business was. He was about five feet, four inches tall, of very attenuated frame, dark-complexioned, and with a sallow and sinister-looking countenance. As I looked at him I thought that if a painter wished to make a portrait of the devil, that sinister face, beaming with a fiendish intelligence, would exactly fulfill the requirements.

And thus the wheels of time ran along with me upon even ground. After one or two abortive attempts at stock speculation, I retired from the field, not badly wounded, but still badly enough scratched by Felis Leo to know that discretion was the better part of valor.

* * * * *

A storm was in the air. Not a rainstorm nor a snowstorm, but a storm far worse than the blizzards of Dakota or the cyclones of Nebraska. A financial storm had overtaken San Francisco. Ralston, the great financier of the Pacific Coast; Ralston the generous friend; the builder of the San Francisco woolen mills, the watch factory, and the car factory; the founder of the Bank of California; the builder of the Palace Hotel; the man whose name will be ever linked with generous deeds in the minds of the old Pioneers who knew him, was in financial distress. Excited citizens thronged the streets as they heard the news that the Bank of California, an institution whose destinies were guided by Ralston, had closed its doors. Runs upon other banks followed; bank after bank closed its doors; the stock market was demoralized, and ruin stared men in the face who but yesterday considered themselves rich and financially sound beyond all peradventure.

In the midst of all this excitement came the tragic death of Ralston, the man most admired and beloved by the inhabitants of San Francisco. As might be supposed, the next few weeks were a busy time for the lawyers, whose offices were thronged with clients. Men who had hitherto borne spotless reputations hastily sought their lawyers for the purpose of hiding, by legal legerdemain, some of their property as a means of subsistence for their families.

About the first client to visit my office after the closing of the doors of the Bank of California, was my old schoolmate, Tom McClish. With wild eyes and disheveled hair, he burst into my office and excitedly exclaimed, "Brent, I'm a beggar."

He began to walk the room, and pulling at his long, curly hair, bemoaned the fate, not of himself, but of his wife and children.

"Great God!" he exclaimed. "How can I go home and tell my family that they will have to give up their luxuries, and move into a tenement while I clerk for a stipend to keep us from starving? By heavens, I'll not do it!"

Then, lowering his voice and looking me calmly in the face, he said in a low tone, "Brent, you don't happen to have a revolver about you, do you?"

In an instant it flashed across my mind that my friend was contemplating suicide as a way out of his troubles. Knowing that the quickest way to deter a man from self-destruction is to give him a loaded weapon and tell him to kill himself, I went to a cabinet, took out a loaded revolver, and looking him squarely in the eye, handed it to him, saying, "This is the quickest way out of it."

To my surprise, he took the weapon, assured himself that it was loaded, thanked me, and put it into his pocket. Then, holding out his hand to me, in a choking voice he bade me good-by; but as he turned to leave the room, there came a timid knock at the office door. I opened the door, and standing in the hall-way was the individual that I had met so often upon the street without being able to recall who he was.

He looked even more attenuated and forlorn than when I had last seen him. Upon my invitation to enter, he came forward with a besitating step, removed his seedy tile, and advancing towards McClish, held out his hand, and to the astonishment of us both, called that gentleman by name.

Then, upon my invitation to be seated, he sat down, and glancing from McClish to me, remarked: "I witbed to thee Mr. McClish on bithneth, but I understand that you, Mr. Brent, are hith legal advither, so there need be no theerethy about the matter between utb." Then, turning to McClish, who stood gaping with astonishment, he remarked in an easy way: "I understand, Mr. McClith, that you are thomewhat embarratbed financially, and I called for the purpose of theeing if I could be of any pecuniary athithtenth to you."

"Yes," said McClish, "I should think I was embarrassed. It would take a hundred thousand dollars in hard gold coin to carry me over this crisis. When once this panic is passed, I would be worth a half-million dollars. But it is useless to talk of any assistance. The banks being closed, there is no large amount of specie to be had, and I'm a ruined man."

Our visitor sat contemplating McClish as he walked up and down the office, tearing his hair and uttering imprecations upon his ill-fortune. Then, going to the table, he drew from his pocket a paper, wrote some figures upon it, signed it, and handed it to McClish with the remark, "If you will take that pieth of paper to that numher, you can get the hundred thouthand dollarth in thpethe."

Then, turning to me, he asked, in a purring tone, if I were in any financial difficulty and would need pecuniary assistance. Upon my assuring him that I was not involved, he rose from his chair, replaced his seedy tile upon his head, and with a smile of mingled happiness, benevolence and triumph, shuffled down the hall and was lost to view.

Meanwhile McClish had been staring down at the paper which he held in his hands, trying to decipher the hieroglyphic signature. No sooner did he pass the paper to me than I was carried back many years to other scenes and other days; for signed to that hundred-thousand-dollar order was the hieroglyphic signature of "Ottostedt."

SONOMA PLANNING BIG JUNE CELEBRATION

Sonoma—The committee of Sonoma Parlor, No. 111, N.S.G.W., arranging for the Bear Flag monument dedication, had a meeting April 13th, and decided upon a two days' celebration of Saturday and Sunday, June 13th and 14th. The city will be uniquely decorated, and amusements will be provided for both young and old.

Saturday morning there will be a parade, followed by races for which large purses have been offered, and which promise to bring out the best horses from all over the State.

Dancing will hold sway in the afternoon, on a large dance-floor being erected in the old plaza. In the evening there will be a fireworks display at the ball park.

Sunday morning the old Sonoma Mission, restored by the State, will be formally dedicated with a mass which, in addition to the many Native Sons and Native Daughters who will participate in the festivities, will attract a thousand members of the Y.M.I. from all points.

The unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of the historic Bear Flag Party, will take place Sunday afternoon, with appropriate ceremonies.

STATE MINERAL NEWS

A large body of ore has been developed in the Keystone mine at Sutter Creek, Amador County, and twenty stamps will be put in operation.

A single pocket of high-grade ore recently discovered in the El Dorado mine at Alleghany, Sierra County, is said to have yielded $10,000.

The Pennsylvania mine, in the Grass Valley, Nevada County, district, is yielding heavily again, $500,000 worth of gold being the output the past two months.

The Guggenheims are reported to have secured a large area of placer holdings in the vicinity of Trinity Center, Trinity County.

Near Igo, Shasta County, Eastern capitalists have recently acquired 1,400 acres of gravel deposits.

Several rich gold discoveries are attracting attention to the Doyle District of Lassen County.

A jade mine near Happy Camp, San Diego County, has been acquired by a company which will develop it.

A cyanide plant is soon to be installed at the Bishop Creek mine near Bishop, Inyo County.

Report has it that changes in ownership, which will mean extensive developments, are about to take place in some of the Mother Lode gold mines of Amador County.

The Union Mining Company, at Saw Pit Flat, Sierra County, was cleaning up forty pounds of gold dust a week.

Hackett & Co., at Spanish Dry Diggings, El Dorado County, found a seam of decomposed quartz which yielded $6,000 in three days.

Three miners named Davis, Ross and Evans also struck a seam equally as rich in the same locality and were expected to dig a fortune from it.

First Japanese Arrive.

Pierce and Simpson, working a claim at Smartsville, Nevada County, cleaned up $44,000 after a fifteen days' run.

Antig & Company, mining on Woodpecker Gulch, Nevada County, found two quartz boulders that yielded $1,931.

The mining town of Michigan Bluff was burned May 30th. It was estimated to be a $75,000 loss and was the only mining town to become a heap of ashes during this month.

The first arrival of Japanese in San Francisco, of which mention has been made, was that recorded of seven Japanese sailors, who deserted from a ship and finally made port in the city jail on May 21st.

J. S. Campbell, at Red Bluff, while clearing away the ashes of the Pacific Brewery, which had burned a few weeks previous, uncovered a cache of $2,000 in $20 gold pieces. When and by whom the money was buried was not found out.

An Alpine County weekly published the fact that a woman in that county in 1863 married a miner, who was killed in his mine about a month after the marriage. Three weeks after his death, she married his partner and this second husband met an accidental death less than a month after their marriage. A month later, she married the brother of her first husband and she had just given birth to a child by her first husband.

An old pioneer keeping a stage station in an interior county had as a cook a Spanish woman. She, unfortunately, was taken sick and died. While she had few acquaintances, the "Colonel," as he was titled, had many friends and they came in goodly numbers to arrange and attend the funeral of his cook. There was neither minister nor priest to be found to conduct the service, so the "Colonel" officiated as best he could. At the end he concluded to express his appreciation and dismiss the gathering at the grave, which he did with the following words: "My dear Christian friends, this woman was a mighty good one of her kind, and for your kindness to her and to me on this sad occasion I hope it won't be long before I will be able to return you the same compliment."

A toll-gate keeper on the Washoe road reported that an equestrienne was stopped by him and requested to pay toll, but she demanded to be shown his authority to collect. He pointed to his sign-board of rates and showed her where it read, "Man and Horse 25 Cents." "Well," said she, as she whipped up and rode away, "We are a woman and a mare and don't have to pay a cent."

A Bank Where Personal Service is a Hobby

Such a Bank is one with which it is extremely desirable for you to do business. The big capitalist doesn't have to seek personal service in a bank. He doesn't have to seek the extra little courtesies and considerations which go to make up what we understand by Service. The very amount of his deposit, the size of his account, guarantees him such personal attention and courtesy. It is the small merchant, the savings depositor, the man who is trying hard to increase an account that to him seems inadequate, who needs that strong, personal, helpful element in banking service.

And he gets it here, invariably!

POLITICAL HISTORY OF SONOMA CITY

SONOMA VALLEY WAS FIRST settled by the fathers of the Mission San Francisco de Solano. About twelve years later, in 1835, the Mexican government secularized all the missions in Upper, or Alta California, and General Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo, who at that time lived at the big Adobe House in Petaluma Valley, was ordered to lay out and establish a pueblo (town) in Sonoma Valley. He accordingly laid out the present plaza of Sonoma City, and one block of lots around it. Not having the proper instruments, only a pocket-compass, and Indians to assist him, the sides of the plaza are, in consequence, not at right angles.

During the war with Mexico, United States troops occupied California, and in 1847 there were quartered in Sonoma, General Percifer Smith with his staff, Colonel Josepa Hooker with his regiment of dragoons, and Captain Frisbie with two companies of New York Volunteers. The year previous American settlers, who were not aware that war had broken out with Mexico, had raised the Bear Flag at Sonoma, on the place where the big flag-pole now stands, as an independent declaration of defiance to the Mexicans, who intended to drive all American settlers out of California. The old Bear Flag pole was only a single stick of redwood, the present staff being erected by United States soldiers.

At that time there were more people in Sonoma than in Yerba Buena, now San Francisco, and it was generally thought that Sonoma would, in time, be a big city, and in anticipation of this it would be necessary to enlarge the survey. But the people could not agree upon the mode of extending General Vallejo's survey, and M. W. Boggs, ex-Governor of Missouri, who had been appointed the first American Alcalde for the Northern District of California, applied to Colonel Mason, then the military governor of California, at Monterey, for instructions. Governor Mason appointed Jacob R. Snyder and a Mr. Murphy commissioners to investigate the matter and report to him. Upon the recommendation of these commissioners, Governor Mason instructed Alcalde Boggs to correct the old map and extend the survey of General Vallejo by leaving the plaza as it then was, and running new lines of streets north and south at right angles to the plaza, and the lines of streets east and west parallel with the plaza. Alcalde Boggs engaged Jasper O'Farrell and J. M. Hudspeth, surveyors, to resurvey the pueblo according to these instructions and make a map thereof. Accordingly Hudspeth did the field work and O'Farrell the platting, and the O'Farrell map is now the official map of Sonoma, and is deposited in the Recorder's office of Sonoma County. The survey was made in 1848.

At the first session of the Legislature of the State of California on April 4, 1850, Sonoma was incorporated as a city, the limits including all the "out lots." Sonoma was also made the county seat of the counties of Sonoma and Mendocino, combined, and remained such until 1855. The officers of the city were the mayor, fire commissioner, a marshal, assessor, clerk, city attorney and treasurer. The City of Sonoma became the successor of the former Pueblo of Sonoma, and as such succeeded to the right of not more than four leagues of land which the Mexican government had granted to every pueblo in California.

By the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, the United States Government agreed to recognize and approve all the valid grants of land in California made prior to said treaty, not only to the several pueblos, but also to private individuals by the Mexican government. In order to carry out this provision, it was found necessary by the United States Government to appoint three land commissioners, sitting in San Francisco, whose duty it was to examine all such grants, and either reject or approve them, the party aggrieved having the right to appeal to the United States District Court and Supreme Court.

In 1852 the City of Sonoma, through her attorney, Robert Hopkins, brought her claim before the Land Commissioners, claiming the land lying between, and bordered by, the hills north of town, Agua Caliente Creek, Sonoma Creek and the Arroyo Seco, comprising in all about one and three-quarter leagues. The claim was confirmed by the Land Commissioners January 22, 1856. They had previously confirmed M. G. Vallejo's grant of fifteen leagues of land between Petaluma Creek and Sonoma Creek.

In September, 1860, there appeared in Sonoma, A. A. Green, a San Francisco attorney, who at a meeting of citizens called at the old Union Hotel, told the people of Sonoma that the city was entitled to full four leagues of land; that the land west of Sonoma Creek, as far as the top of the hills, rightly belonged to, and was part of the pueblo. This created quite an excitement, and at the next meeting of the City Council it was resolved to dismiss Judge D. O. Shattuck as attorney for the city in the land case and engage A. A. Green and Judge McCabe instead. From the time that an appeal was taken from the decision of the Land Commissioners to the United States District Court, there were two hostile camps in Sonoma which, on several occasions, engaged in open brawls.

While this suit was pending in the United States District Court, the Board of Councilmen of Sonoma were informed by the clerk of said court that their attorney was neglecting the case. It was even suspected that he had sold out to the opposite party. Mr. Green was therefore promptly discharged, and J. D. Creigh appointed as attorney of record in the case. This occurred in March, 1861, and in order to raise the sinews of war, the City Council sold the hilly land situate west of the cemetery, in different lots.

The following year there came a great surprise to the City Council,—it was like a thunderclap from a clear sky. The opposition, headed by Gen. Vallejo and his attorney, George L. Wratten, had engineered a bill through the Legislature, unknown to the City Council, whereby the charter of the City of Sonoma was repealed. This gave great satisfaction to a majority of the people of Sonoma, inasmuch as there was now no plaintiff in the land case, and the settlers on the land west of Sonoma Creek, who had bought their land in good faith and made improvements thereon, would not be further disturbed.

Even if Sonoma had gained this additional land, and sold the same, the money so received would have been foolishly squandered in unnecessary lawsuits and in other unbusinesslike undertakings. For instance, when there happened to be a few hundred dollars in the city's treasury, the City Council would loan out this money to an applicant, upon giving his promissory note with two per cent interest per month. In most instances this would be the last ever seen of the money. When the old City Council was legislated out of office, they left nothing behind in the shape of public improvements, the streets of the city being in the same condition as nature had made them. In fact, there was nothing to show what had been done with the money received from the sale of lots and lands, or gathered from taxes collected, except an indebtedness of $1200.

By the act of the Legislature, approved April 26, 1862, disincorporating the City of Sonoma, it was provided that three trustees should be elected, whose duty it would be to carry out contracts entered into by the former City Council, to pay off and liquidate the indebtedness, to declare which of the city streets should remain public highways and county roads, and to sell those streets not so needed. The Legislature considered that residents of Sonoma would be better qualified to select the streets to be declared county roads than the Board of Supervisors of Sonoma County, whose duty it was, and is, to lay out county roads. The trustees elected were Judge D. O. Shattuck, Colonel John Walton and Dennis Beahan. They performed their duties faithfully, and without compensation, excepting expenses neces-

THE BEAR FLAG MONUMENT

(By LEWIS F. BYINGTON, Past Grand President, N. S. G. W.)

ON THE 14TH DAY OF JUNE, OF this year, a monument will be unveiled in the public square at Sonoma and on the very spot where, sixty-eight years before, the "Bear Flag" was raised on the soil of California.

This monument, which will stand to commemorate one of the most important events in the history of our State, was erected through the efforts of the zealous members of Sonoma Parlor, No. 111, Native Sons of the Golden West, who raised the funds to carry forward the work and secured an appropriation of $5,000 from the State Legislature. The monument is the work of sculptor John MacQuarrie, a native of California, and is a tribute to his artistic skill and taste.

The "Bear Flag" was first raised at Sonoma in June, 1846, by a band of thirty-three loyal Americans. This land had, prior to that, been under the rule of Mexico and was controlled by governors appointed from that country. News reached Sacramento that foreigners had been ordered, under pain of death, to leave this State, and great alarm was caused by the report that General Jose Castro, commander of the military forces of Mexico, with headquarters at Santa Clara, was on the march to attack the settlers.

A company of volunteers started for the Mexican fort at Sonoma, at which place was located the only town and military post of Mexico north of the Golden Gate. They were under the command of Ezekiel Merritt, as captain. They captured the post and nine cannon, and on June 14, 1846, then and there raised the "Bear Flag." It was designed by William Todd. It bore upon a piece of white cotton cloth the rude form of a grizzly bear and a star was set in one corner. It was the first flag unfurled in California after the country was declared independent of Mexico. The grizzly bear is typical of the courage of the West; the star represents California before she came into the Union.

That band of patriotic Americans would not abandon California, so they raised this flag and proclaimed her to be free. The flag stood for justice and liberty. These men could not raise the "Stars and Stripes," because they had no authority from Washington to do so. If they had had the authority, the American flag would have waved that day above the old barracks at Sonoma. However, in the following month, when they learned that Commodore Sloat had raised the American flag at Monterey and in the name of the United States took possession of this land, and that it floated over Portsmouth Square in San Francisco, the "Bear Flag" came down and the people of Sonoma, with hand and heart, on July 9, 1846, raised "Old Glory" to float there forever.

It is fitting that California, with its unique and interesting history, should have some symbol which should distinguish it from the other states of the Union, and as the story of the "Bear Flag" is one of the most romantic incidents connected with our State, the Legislature has adopted that flag as our State's flag and as symbolic of early pioneer days and patriotism.

It is with pride that the citizens of California can look upon the two flags unfurled above our schools, our homes, and public buildings—the "Bear Flag," which reminds us of the early days of this State and of the courage, the trials, the tribulations, and the patriotism of our Pioneer Fathers and Mothers; the "Stars and Stripes," which has floated in glory and honor over this Nation for more than a hundred years.

VITICULTURE IN CALIFORNIA

THE FRANCISCAN FATHERS, LONG before California became a state of the Union, planted the cutting of the mission grape, which was brought here from Spain about the year 1772.

Long before the citrus, the sugar, and the dairy business had been established in California, before oil or even gold had been discovered, before the first alfalfa seed had been brought here, or the iron rails had networked the Western Continent, the growing of grapes was an established industry, and the making of wine an honorable occupation in California.

The history of the vine in California began with Father Serra, as far back as 1772, who planted the first domestic grapes, and proved that California was the home of the vine. As those brave, gentle, hardy pioneers gradually extended their chain of schools or churches from San Diego to Sonoma, they carried the cultivation of the grape, fig and olive along with them.

In 1856, at the time when the old civilization of Spain was being crowded out by the new civilization of modern America, there were nearly two millions vines of the mission variety of grapes,

At a "Home Industry" banquet in San Jose, March 25th, under the auspices of San Jose Parlor, No. 22, N. S. G. W., John A. Corotto, a member of the Parlor, delivered an interesting address on the viticultural industry in California which, with slight omissions, is published herewith upon request.

Many people, appreciating the vast amount of money invested, under State and Federal encouragement, in the upbuilding of the viticultural industry of California, deplore any attempt to eliminate this valuable industry from California's assets.

The Grand Parlor, N. S. G. W., at its recent session in Los Angeles, passed a resolution favoring the upbuilding of the viticultural industry, and encouraging its members to co-operate with those interested in making California the leading grape-producing country of the world.—Editor.

producing wine for the State of California. This State owes its emergence from the cocoon stage into the beautiful, bright butterfly she has become today, to the object lesson taught by those original vineyards, which proved what California climate and soil could do.

California stands at the top of the ladder in the cultivation of the vine, and let me tell you that in Santa Barbara County the largest grape vine in the world is to be found, planted in 1842, and has a record of having produced ten tons of grapes in a single year. Just think of it, when in our (Santa Clara) county we don't get that much off of an acre, and on the average much less. I am satisfied that, if the viticultural industry is encouraged, in a few years the grape industry will have first place in California.

Commissions appointed by the State Legislature since 1862 have been distributing thousands of cuttings of European wine grapes, urging the farmers to plant them everywhere, and today there are in California 320,000 acres of vineyards. There is invested in the grape industry, $150,000,000, employing 75,000 people, and bringing into the State upwards of $26,875,000 annually. The total production of grapes in California, in 1912, was close to 1,000,000 tons, divided as follows:

Fresh Grapes dried in Rasins.....	392,000 tons
" " shipped East	88,000 "
" " used in State	10,000 "
" " used in making dry wines	160,000 "
" " " " sweet wines	225,000 "
" " " " champagne..	1,500 "
" " " " com'l brandy..	42,000 "
" " " " by individuals.....	35,000 "

Making a grand total of.....953,000 "

Unprejudiced observers are becoming convinced that radical legislation does not present an effective and permanent remedy for the evils of intemperance. Despite the increase in the dry area, brought about under the operation of local option laws in various States, the reports of the Government show an increase in the consumption of beer and wines. Investigators who have made comparisons of the conditions in European countries (especially those in which wine is largely consumed) and the United States, find that in America consumption of liquor is on the increase, while in the foreign nations intemperance is minimized among the inhabitants.

Many who have discovered this difference, also claim to have found the reason for it in the dissimilar methods used in training children in connection with the use of drinks. In Continental Europe, especially in Germany and the Mediterranean lands, children are taught to drink wine as they are taught to eat. The imbibing of liquor refreshments is not regarded in the light of an amusement, a recreation, or an unusual pleasure. Drinking of beer or wine is done with a proper purpose, and from the same demand of appetite as the partaking of solid food. Children are taught that drinking wine, to a certain degree, is as beneficial as is the taking of food at certain intervals and in specified quantities. And the result is that the major portion of the people of those countries would not drink too much with any more likelihood than they would overeat.

Different conditions exist in this country. Children are taught to look upon wine and other drinks as wholly evil; not that it is ever a good servant, but always the bad master. A ban is placed on all drinks classed as intoxicants. These are made to appear as forbidden fruits, and obviously from that very reason become greatly desirable to the young. Instead of being taught how to drink, and the healthful use of liquors, children are made to regard the matter as something which is denied them. And so wine imbibing, beer guzzling, becomes to them as amusement, more enjoyable because under ban of parents and, in some sections, the authorities. Then a step further to stronger drinks. Dissipation follows, until habits are fastened on the young which, under rightful conditions of training in youth, should be no more prevalent than gluttony. I left my home when only 17 years of age. But never did I forget the lesson that my mother taught me—how to drink and to eat.

At the St. Louis Fair, in competition with foreign wines, California wines carried off the grand prize, with foreign experts as judges, and, if you please, Santa Clara County carried away that prize. The time is not far distant when all the hillsides of our valley will be planted to grapes, especially the rolling hill land, that will not produce anything else, but will grow good wine and table grapes.

Our delegates, when they visit Los Angeles in April, I wish, if they possibly can spare the time, would go to the Cucamonga district and see for themselves the largest vineyard in the world, 4000 acres. This land was practically a desert, and could be bought for a few dollars per acre, and now the owners pay taxes on an assessed valuation at $250 per acre. The wealth of California is in what the land produces, and if you close the avenue of SONOMA CITY IS THE NUCLEUS about which Sonoma Valley is built, and is the natural center of the valley. It has all the advantages of a modern city, is lighted by electricity, and has good streets, excellent schools, substantial business structures, two newspapers, emburhes of all denominations, public library, and beautiful homes.

Two hanks look after the financial affairs of the valley and city, while the commercial life embraces every line of business endeavor. Because the businessmen of Sonoma City cater to the wants of their constituents, and supply those wants at metropolitan prices, the city is the supply station for the people of the valley and the clearing house for the valley's varied products.

Sonoma City is rich in historic lore, and it was here, through the action of the famous Bear Flag Party, that California shook off Mexican rule. This was the home of General M. G. Vallejo, than whom no kiudlier man ever lived. Within its boundaries are many landmarks, the history of each of which forms an important link in California's early history-chain.

Many of these old landmarks, sad to say, have fallen a victim to Time; but a few have withstood this element and the devastating influence of modern civilization, and, standing as sentinels of the past, attract the sightseer.

Among these historic places are the Vallejo bome, Laehryma Montis, and the Swiss chalet that he brought around the Horn; Mission San Francisco de Solano, built in 1827; the adobe barracks, where

Gen. Vallejo was made prisoner during the Bear Flag rebellion; the "Blue Wing," one of the earliest adobe hotels, where many lively scenes were enacted; the adobe jail, used by General Vallejo to imprison bad Indians.

The business portion of Sonoma City surrounds a spacious plaza, laid out by General Vallejo at the command of the Mexican government, whose representative he was. This plaza was later deeded to the city by the General, and the people have recently erected in the center a handsome stone city hall. The grounds are being gradually improved and the Woman's Improvement Club has erected on two sides attractive drinking fountains.

Sonoma boasts in Broadway the widest street of any city in the State, and this it is planned to improve by macadamizing and parking. The city, in common with the valley, has had its growth retarded by poor transportation facilities. Electric lines must of necessity soon invade this section, and just recently plans have been perfected for an improved highway that will bring the city fourteen miles nearer San Francisco.

The population of Sonoma is conservatively estimated at 1500, and is made up of a class of citizens who, appreciating the commanding position and wonderful possibilities of the city, are united in an endeavor to make it as attractive as any city in the State. In line with this intention, many public improvements have already been completed, and others are being arranged for.

The homes of the city he speak the progressive-ness of the people and the productiveness of the soil. Each residence place is adorned in front with a well-kept lawn and beds of blossoming flowers, while the rear is given over to fruit trees of all descriptions and vegetable gardens.

The city government of Sonoma is carried on by a Bord of Trustees, five in number, one of whom is chosen Mayor. This board at present is made up of Wm. Von Hacht (Mayor), C. E. Johnson, Chas. McDevitt, Geo. Breitenbach and Chas. Dal Poggetto.

The other city officers are: Robert A. Poppe, City Attorney; H. W. Gottenberg, City Clerk; Joe T. Ryan, Deputy Sheriff and Constable; James H. Albertson, Chief of Police; James Campbell, City Recorder and Justice of the Peace; Wm. F. Clewe, City Treasurer; Mike Topete, Humane Officer; Health Board—F. T. Duhring, L. H. Green, Dr. A. M. DAUGHTER STILL A RESIDENT.

Mrs. L. V. Empanan, the daughter of General M. G. Vallejo, continues, with her children, to make her home at the General's old homeplace in Sonoma. She has an interesting collection of early-day photographs, and to her The Grizzly Bear is indebted for some of the pictures from which illustrations were made for this issue, particularly that of the General in his later years, of the Sonoma Plaza in 1839, and the Vallejo homeplace.

HERE WERE A FEW SHOWERS of rain during the month of June, 1864, amounting to .10 of an inch, and with a total rainfall of 7.78 the season of 1863-4 may be said to have closed.

The season of 1850-1 had a total rainfall of 4.73 inches, which was the driest on record, while the present one came in a good second. Large herds of cattle and flocks of sheep were driven to the valleys in the Sierra Nevada range for pasture, and were now safe from starvation.

Monterey County was badly hurt by the drought, on account of its large flocks of sheep requiring pasture. Flint, Bixby & Co. had 40,000; W. W. Hollister owned 30,000, J. T. Thalkett 30,000, J. Sherwood 15,000, John Searls 8,000, J. B. Wynn 8,000, Judge Haight 4,000, and a score of others had several thousand each, all of which had to be driven northward for feed.

The mining industry, except on the river bars, was severely handicapped, and dullness was complained of as a condition in every county or the State.

In Contra Costa County, the lack of feed drove the jackrabbits to eating the bark from around young fruit trees. In one night a hundred trees in the orchard of Wm. Hook, near Pacheco, were girdled and killed by an influx of these animals, and many others had their trees injured or killed.

In Oakland, on June 13th, there was a mining excitement over the discovery of a gold-bearing ledge at the east end of Peralto street by a man named Priatt, and excited locators staked off a mile of ground. It soon fizzled, but over a thousand would-be miners from San Francisco visited the locality that day.

In San Francisco, on June 25th, a man digging a cellar on his lot on Russian Hill found a nugget worth $20 and two others of a smaller size, which caused a mining excitement of a few days' duration there.

In the interior, Seaton & Richtmyer, at Drytown, uncovered a rich ledge of quartz from which they obtained $2000 in two days.

Samuel Durbin, near Middletown, Shasta County, struck a seam that was paying $80 to the pan.

Simpson & Pierce, working a clam on the Blue Lead at Smartsville, cleaned up $27,000 for the month, which made a total of $70,000 from March 1st.

The Crescent Mill, in Plumas County, was paying $40,000 a week.

Stage Robberies Frequent.

An epidemic of stage robbing appears to have broken out. On June 7th, six men stopped the stage from Georgetown at 4 a. m. Five of them were armed with shotguns, and they compelled the stagedriver to wait until they had broken open the express box. It was fastened to the bed of the stage, and it took them nearly an hour to break it open. There was not a dollar in the box. They made a special request, through the driver, on the agent of Wells, Fargo & Co. at Georgetown to leave the box unlocked in future when it was empty and save unnecessary trouble.

On June 14th, the stage from Downieville to Marysville was stopped by three men near Camp-tonville and $2,000 was secured from the express box.

This robbery was followed, on June 25th, by three men stopping the stage from Bidwell's Bar to Oroville, near the Bar, and taking $1,800 from the express box. They did not molest the passengers.

The two robberies were believed to have been committed by the notorious Gassaway family. They had kept a road-house four miles from Auburn, in Placer County, and made a bad reputation there. Upton Gassaway, Sr., his wife, Upton Gassaway, Jr., Charles Gassaway and Nellie Gassaway, sons and daughter, with Jim Shuber and Jim Serras, were arrested and held to answer at Marysville for the crime.

On June 30th, the stage from Virginia City was stopped by seven men near the Thirteen Mile House, east of Placerville. They were supposed to be the same that stopped the Georgetown stage. They took eight sacks of bullion and $700 out of Wells, Fargo & Co.'s treasure box. They did not rob the passengers, but amused themselves by making a bluff at doing so and scaring several of them badly.

Deputy Sheriff Staples and a special officer named Ranney started from Placerville in pursuit, and found the gang at a mountain inn called the Somerset House. Staples opened the door of the room in which they were seated, and with a shotgun demanded their surrender. They fired on the officers, killing Staples and severely wounding Ranney. Staples discharged his gun as he was falling, and wounded one of the robbers. The other five quickly departed, leaving their wounded comrade behind.

What Was Doing IN CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

(THOMAS B. JONES, SACRAMENTO.)

He was taken into custody and claimed to be Tom Poole, an ex-sheriff of Monterey County; that he met the gang that morning at the Somerset House; did not know who they were, and was not a stage robber. His statement was not believed, and had not been verified at the last account.

Sheriff Rodgers of El Dorado County with a posse and also a large posse from Jackson, were in pursuit of the robbers on the first of July. Deputy Sheriff Staples was a very popular official and his tragic death caused great excitement and regret in El Dorado County with a corresponding intense desire for the vengeance of the law to be wreaked upon his murderers.

A man known as George Taylor, which was an alias, was tried in April at Jackson for robbing the Riddletown stage in November, 1863. On the evidence of Supervisor Riebson of El Dorado County, principally, who testified he had seen Taylor riding on a roan horse near the scene of the robbery before it was committed and it being positively known the robber used a roan horse to make his escape, Taylor was convicted and sent to the state prison.

This month, a man named Driscoll was arrested in Sacramento and confessed to having been the stage robber and stated Taylor was innocent. Supervisor Riebson went to Sacramento and, on looking at Driscoll, immediately declared that he was the man he saw riding the roan horse, and that his identification of Taylor was a mistake. It thus appeared that on strong circumstantial evidence an innocent man was convicted. At the same time, it was known Taylor was a "bad egg," and his not being at liberty was no loss to the people at large.

Sheriff Barland of Tuolumne County, through a novel circumstance, was enabled to locate the three men who robbed the Conlterville stage in May. He noticed a man losing heavily in a faro game in Sonora. When he had gambled away his money, a horse, saddle and bridle, he then "soaked" his pistol. It had a peculiarity about it that the sheriff, on examination, found to answer the description given him of a stolen pistol by the owner. He concluded to arrest the faro player on suspicion of having stolen the pistol. On being taken into custody, the individual, thinking he was arrested for the stage robbery, quickly turned state's evidence, to his advantage, by giving the names of his pals and showing the sheriff where $600 of the stolen money was buried.

Interest In Civil War Progress.

War news was of an exciting nature during the whole month. General Grant, with the Army of the Potomac, again flanked the Confederate Army southward to Petersburg, twenty miles from Richmond. Around these fortifications, several severe engagements were fought; also, some heavy engagements in Georgia. While the advantage was on the side of the Federal Armies, nothing decisive resulted.

It looked now like a siege at Petersburg and Atlanta. The moral effect in Europe of the successes in May of the Union Armies was having a tremendous influence against the Southern Confederacy.

The great naval battle between the "Kearsarge," commanded by Captain Winslow, and the pirate "Alabama," commanded by Admiral Semmes, was fought near Cherbourg, off the coast of France, on June 19th. The battle began at 10 a. m., about six miles from shore, and lasted an hour and fifteen minutes. It was viewed by thousands of people from places of vantage on the shore. The "Alabama" was sunk through the superior marksmanship of the "Kearsarge" gunners, and thus another severe blow was struck the Southern Confederacy.

The National Republican party convention met in Baltimore on June 7th. It was quickly organized and nominated Abraham Lincoln for President and Andrew Johnson for Vice-president. The nomination of Lincoln was unanimously approved by the Union men of California and salutes of one hundred guns were fired in every town of importance.

A convention calling itself the Radical party met in Cleveland, nominated John C. Fremont of California for President, and John Cochrane of New York for Vice-president; it caused a slight flurry in the political situation but soon faded away.

On June 9th, a great ratification meeting was held in San Francisco by the Union party. Governor Low and many other prominent Union men addressed it and Montgomery street was jammed for several blocks around Pratt's Hall.

F. F. Neagle of Santa Cruz County made a cheese press for Steele Bros., dairymen, of that county, to make a cheese measuring six feet in diameter, two and one half feet in thickness, and weighing about 4000 pounds, which they were going to give to the Sanitary Fund to be sold in San Francisco during a fair to be held in the future.

Mrs. W. H. Nichols of Sacramento baked a large cake, which she presented to the Sanitary Fund Committee. They, following the example of the Gridley sack of flour, auctioned the cake at Folsom and other places. It was sold many times and had a record of about $500 to its credit. It was sent to Stockton during the last week of this month, to be exhibited until July 4th, when it was to be again auctioned for the benefit of the Sanitary Fund.

The citizens of Trinity County had contributed gold dust to the amount of $5,409 to the Fund, and it was intended to melt it into a gold ingot and forward it East on July 4th.

Stage Coach Makes Record Run.

The newspapers now began to sound an alarm over the extravagant fishing of trout in Lake Tahoe and the Truckee River, with seines and gill nets. It was claimed two companies were fishing Lake Tahoe, one having a seine 1800 feet long and the other having gill nets covering several miles of the shallow waters of the lake. Their catch of trout was said to be seventy tons a year or nearly six tons a month. The trout were being sold to teamsters and stagedrivers for twenty-five cents a pound, and retailed along the stage road and in towns for fifty cents a pound. At the rate fish were being taken out of the lake and river, it was predicted the supply in a few years would be exhausted.

A close season for the winter and spawning months was demanded. A newspaper discussing the topic published the information that Lake Tahoe was discovered by Amie Bonpland, a Frenchman, who was a great traveler and of scientific attainments. He accompanied Baron Von Humboldt in exploring this region in 1803 and on a map, published by Von Humboldt in Paris shortly after his return, the lake is shown and named Lake Bonpland.

The first peaches of the season were placed on sale in San Francisco on June 16th. There were twenty-two of them, and they sold for $2.75.

Opposition steamers reduced fares from San Francisco to New York this month to $185 first cabin, $80 second cabin and $50 steerage. The steamboat "Washoe," in its opposition line to Sacramento, was carrying cabin passengers to and from San Francisco for $1.

A heavy gale on San Francisco Bay, June 10th, caused Meig's wharf to be washed away and destroyed.

On June 3rd, the Central Pacific Railroad completed its track to Newcastle. On the 4th, the directors, with about four hundred guests, went on an excursion to open that station. This was the first mining town that the road had been built to. Newcastle then consisted of several stores and saloons and a score or more of other buildings. It was thirty-one miles from Sacramento, and immediately experienced a boom. Property values quadrupled in less than a week. It at once became a terminus for stage lines from Virginia City, Nevada County towns, and other places, and freight teams commenced hauling freight from there instead of from Sacramento and Folsom.

On June 10th, a party composed of Captain Pearson, N. A. H. Ball, A. K. P. Harmon, D. Crittenden, John Arnold, A. K. Grim, W. W. West and Louis Fender, all prominent Pacific Coast business men, left Virginia City in a stage-coach and made a record trip to Sacramento in seventeen hours. The train time from Newcastle to Sacramento was fifty-five minutes. This was the beginning of a stage and train rivalry between the Central Pacific and the Sacramento Valley railroad routes which lasted until the extension of the Central Pacific, eastward, and left no chance for its rival to beat it in time. The best stage time from Virginia City to Folsom on record was then fourteen hours.

A Frenchwoman called upon a dentist named Dr. Park in Sacramento and had a set of false teeth, costing $60, made. When the teeth were adjusted on her gums she demurred to paying the price asked and proposed to visit another dentist and have the teeth appraised. To this, Dr. Park objected, and demanded the removal of the teeth from her mouth. As she had possession, she refused, and on the doctor making a move as though to forcibly take them, she let out a series of screams that brought a number of people to the room. The doctor then decided to have her arrested and, locking her in the room, went upon the street to find a policeman. There were only a few officers on the force then, and after some delay he returned with a policeman, only to find the woman gone with the teeth. She had found a window that opened over a small balcony,

SONOMA, THE "VALLEY OF THE MOON."

NUN'S CANYON, SONOMA VALLEY.

SONOMA VALLEY, THE "VALLEY of the Moon," in the southern part of Sonoma County and twenty miles from the coast, is a panorama of matchless beauty, with its verdure-covered hills, rippling streams, cultivated acres, and attractive home-places.

The valley, twenty-one miles long and five miles wide, is enclosed by hills of peculiar formation and watered by many picturesque streams which take their source in the mountains and wind in and out through the valley to San Pablo Bay, a few miles distant.

On the eastern side of the valley, the hills rise in seven minarets, giving the moon the appearance of rising seven times in a night. From this fantastic appearance, the valley derived its name, "Sonoma," from the original Indian inhabitants, "Sonoma" being an Indian word meaning "moon."

The population of the Sonoma Valley, approximately but 3000, is evidence that this part of California, embracing, as it does, perfect climate, fertile soil and scenic grandeur, has not been visited by those who are seeking ideal conditions for a homeplace. Were this not so, the Valley of the Moon would be densely populated.

Nature, has here, it would seem, set down her garden spot, and watered it with streams, springs of hot and cold water, and a never-failing underground river. Man has, to a slight extent, taken cognizance of these natural advantages, with the result that the hills are dotted with orchards and vineyards, resorts have sprung up around the springs, and artesian wells have been sunk to supply water for domestic and agricultural uses.

Many years ago the Indians discovered the curative properties of the spring-waters of Sonoma Valley, and today thousands seek these resorts in search both of health and pleasure. General M. G. Vallejo, in the early days, discovered on his rancho near his homeplace, a wonderful spring around which he built a reservoir. Today this furnishes the City of Sonoma with a bountiful supply of pure water.

Grape growing and wine making are the leading industries of the valley, and the wines produced have long been conceded to equal in quality those produced in any other section of the whole world. Here flourish, also, the apple, pear, peach, plum, cherry, prune, apricot, nectarine, fig, orange, lemon, olive and grape, as well as the cereals and all other

ORIGIN OF THE NAME "SONOMA."

'Tis sacred dust which now we tread,
The dust of those whose souls have fled.
Full seventy years since they are dead,
Those friars old who told their beads,
And prayers for Old Sonoma said.
Yonder in the mission going to decay
Were gathered those who in their simple way
The Indians told of Christ and that great Book,
And bade them from this earth toward Heaven to look.

The simple native looked above,
But seeing no great Power,
No concrete god, his faith began to lower,
When lo! above the hills,
So white and round and clear,
A summer moon arose, and down the Indians fell

In reverent fear,
Ashamed of doubts and filled with awe
At this great god, this wondrous deity,—
The moon, which now he saw,
Then through the vale the story strange was told

Alike to Indian young and Indian old,
And they believed, but in their native way
Longed for more than one great god
To worship and to pray.
And so it came to pass one still, clear night,
In spite of friars' prayers and Christian light,
The pagan Indian prayed his sacred moon
To send more gods to him, and soon,
Above the hills, the story goes,
With silvery radiance seven moons arose.
The white men say the hills do rise
Whose seven ridges skirt the skies,
And these do make the moon, so clear,
Seem seven times to rise, then disappear.
No matter what the cause, the fact has fame,
From it Sonoma gets her name.

soil products. Poultry-raising and dairying are, likewise being extensively and profitably developed.

The tiller of the soil, in Sonoma Valley, is blessed with two natural advantages—good soil and unfailing moisture—which, if intelligently utilized, will assure him a life competence amidst all the surroundings that appeal to man. The mission fathers first exemplified the agricultural value of Sonoma Valley, and unfailing crops, without irrigation, for three-quarters of a century bear witness to the more than ordinary fruitfulness of the soil.

Sonoma Valley is dotted with many little towns, including Schellville, Vineburg, El Verano, Boyes Station, Agua Caliente, Eldredge, where the State has erected a stately home for the feeble-minded, and Glen Ellen, the terminus of the railroad and the guardian of the northern portal of the valley. These two latter places are surrounded by magnificent scenery and nestle at the foot of hills covered with luxuriant foliage.

One other city, and that the metropolis and supply center of the valley, is Sonoma City, so closely linked with the early history of California and of which a more extended account is to be found elsewhere in this issue.

It can truthfully be said that words are inadequate to describe Sonoma Valley. Neither poet nor painter can adequately portray its grandeur.

SONOMA CREEK, SONOMA VALLEY.

To see it, should be the purpose of those in search of Nature's beauty-spot. And even then the beholder will be at a loss for words to describe what his vision rests upon, but must be profoundly impressed with how much of all that is grand and beautiful, yet not massive, has been confined in so small a space.

Suffice to say that, in fashioning the landscape of Sonoma Valley, the Divine Architect of the universe combined the bluest of blue skies, clear rippling streams, fern-clad canyons, wild flowers of every hue, and gently-sloping, verdure-covered bills. These are God's conspirators which have attracted His children to a land of plenty, and where the natural beauties have been enhanced by acres of purple grapes, golden fields of grain, roaming herds, and flower-embowered dwelling places. Surely, the Valley of the Moon is the land of honey, fruit and wine.

SONOMA CREEK, SONOMA VALLEY.

MAKE STATE'S WONDER SPOTS KNOWN

(By ANNA I. DEMPSEY, Los Angeles, Former Grand Trustee, N. D. G. W.)

ERY OFTEN, AS I FIND MYSELF bourne along our busy city streets, or rapidly whirling through beautiful cultivated fields and past pretty prosperous villages, I note the growth of prosperity along the way, and my thoughts turn to the olden days in California and to those heroic Franciscan friars who were the first to plant the seeds of Christianity on our Western slope.

Then, again, my thoughts turn to a later era, and in fancy I can see a long stretch of desolate plain, stuffy, canvas-covered wagons, worn-out oxen, tallow candles and rude camp-fires, or I can hear the howl of the coyote, the growl of the grizzly, or the wail of the panther.

With such thoughts, I would not be quite human, nor would I be a loyal Native Daughter of the Golden West, if every fibre of my being did not throb with gratitude for the men and women who made it possible for us to live here today, in peace and happiness, in this great, big, glorious State, surrounded, as we are, by the most magnificent species of God's handiwork. And I sometimes feel that, being constantly in touch with Nature and the great spaces of the West, we fail to appreciate the glorious gifts that have been given to us by our Creator.

We have many beautiful spots, in fact, little fairy-lands, which seem so trivial to us, in comparison with the greatest of God's handiwork,—Yosemite Valley, our groves of big trees, and Lake Tahoe,—that in speaking to the stranger within our gates, we neglect to mention them. For instance, we have numerous beautiful lakes in the high Sierras and beautiful views from many of our lower mountain tops which, if we extol as we should, will become as famous as the Alpine sunsets. Not to speak of our springs, among which are Arrowhead, with its wonderful mark, the arrow on the hillside; Caliente, with its historic hotel; and the geysers, termed by Wm. B. Elliott, who discovered them in 1847, as "the doorway to the infernal regions."

How little we boast of our mountains, among which are Mt. Whitney, the highest in the United States; San Jacinto, "Thunder Mountain"; Mt. Tamalpais, "Vanguard of the Gates"; Mt. Wilson and Mt. Hamilton, "Windows of the Soul," and Mt. Shasta, "The Beautiful."

Much has been said and written of Donner Lake and the Donner-Reed party, but how little we hear of that great wonder of the world, Death Valley, lying, as it does, 150 feet below the level of the sea and resting within the shade of Mt. Whitney, the highest peak in the United States. The tragedy of 1850 when, it is said, thirty immigrants perished there, made history for this spot, and hence the name, "Death Valley."

ANNA I. DEMPSEY.

The greatest good that we can do for our State is to make all of our wonder spots known. Make their attractiveness common knowledge, and we will see that travel will increase ten-fold. Instead of running away to France, Italy and Switzerland, let us see our own State first, and induce our friends to see it. California is replete with beautiful legends, with which it should be our duty to become familiar, as these prove most effective ways to interest strangers.

While we have done much toward retaining for the State the groves of big trees, we should still continue to work along these lines until every one of these groves are preserved to the people as national parks. I heartily approve of the erection of monuments, but this is a work that can be done at any time, whereas once God's handiwork has been destroyed, we can never bring it back. Getting away from sentiment, there is no doubt that one of the greatest financial gains to California lies in the preservation of her landmarks, both natural and artificial.

The splendid work accomplished in the near completion of the mission bell sign-posts along El Camino Real under the direction of Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes, deserves the highest commendation from the native-born children of California. This energetic little woman has restored to us the old historic trail which will be traveled for centuries to come, thus perpetuating in memory the unselfish deeds of the padres.

As I write of landmarks made by man, I cannot help but write of two very fond dreams which I hope some day may come true. The first is, that in the not-too-far-off future, I may see on the intersection of the busiest streets in Los Angeles, a monument in which will be shown all the staunchness, sturdiness and chivalry of the Pioneers of California. And the other is,—and this, I believe, is my fondest dream,—that some day, when ships from all over the world unload their human cargo within our ports, I may see at the entrance of one of our harbors,—and none more fitting than San Diego,—a statue of Junipero Serra, the most unselfish, staunchest, of all the padres. I hope to see such a monument at the entrance to the harbor, lighting the way to the hearts at sea, just as this holy man carried the light of christianity to the hearts on shore many years ago.

God, in His generosity, has been very kind to us. He has given us snow-capped mountains, fruitful valleys, broad seas, and desert sands. He has given us sunshine and roses, and has tempered the winds that we might live here in peace and plenty and happiness in this, truly the "land of heart's desire." In appreciation, let us mould our deeds to suit the gift. Let us regard ourselves as stewards here for a short time only, that when we each one, in turn, pass over the Great Divide, we can go forward to meet our maker and give Him a faithful and accurate account of our stewardship. It is necessary that we encourage progress and commerce, but in the meantime, let us not forget

"Fair California, with her days of gold,
Her tales bewitching and her missions old,
Her brown-robed padres of the distant past,—
Would that the romance of that age might last!
But romance passes like the winds away,
And revered memories verge to modern day.
Progress comes with hand swift, firm and clear,
Fit monument for priest and pioneer.
Aye, Progress needs must have her sway,
But let not God's handiwork be wiped away."

HISTORY AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS N. D. G. W. HOME

(By DR. MARIANA BERTOLA, President Board of Relief.)

N 1889, THE THREE NATIVE Daughter Parlors then existing in San Francisco—Minerva, No. 2, Alta, No. 3, and Oro Fino, No. 9,—sent delegates to a meeting for the incorporation of a Board of Relief. The representatives from Alta were Mrs. Jennie Greene, Miss Amy McDougal and Mrs. Louise Watson Morris; from Minerva, Mrs. Cockrill and Miss Hammill; from Oro Fino, Miss Radford and Miss Hanley.

They incorporated with the following officers: Louise Watson Morris, president; Mrs. Jennie Greene, secretary; directors—Mrs. Greene, Mrs. Cockrill, Mrs. Hanley, Miss Hammill and Miss Watson.

September 24, 1889, Miss McDougal and Miss Radford were appointed to draft a constitution. They received a bequest from Mr. Rodgers, a man of wealth, and charitably inclined, of $1000. By the time the bequest had traveled through the courts, when it reached the San Francisco Board of Relief it had diminished to $571. This sum the San Francisco Board of Relief of the N. D. G. W. held until 1892, when they made an offer to the Grand Parlor, N. D. G. W., to turn it over to it. Grand President Clara K. Wittenmyer appointed a committee to confer with the San Francisco Board of Relief. The result was that they disincorporated, and turned over the money to the Grand Parlor.

The Grand Parlor instructed the committee to become incorporated for the purpose of carrying out the relief plans. This they did at once, and articles of incorporation were filed in Sacramento,

In the maintenance of a home in San Francisco, the Native Daughters of the Golden West are doing "something different" than any other woman's fraternal organization.

The objects of this home are set forth in the accompanying article, but the half of the good work accomplished has never yet been told—and probably never will be.

To assist in this worthy project, both financially and morally, should be the delight of every Native Daughter. And to aid in all work the Order is prosecuting—of which this every Native Daughter. And to aid in the every eligible to the Native Daughters of the Golden West.—Editor.

where the Grand Parlor was held. The motion was then made and passed in the Grand Parlor that it defray the expense of incorporating the Board of Relief, which was accordingly done.

A very unjust and untruthful rumor has been circulated by a few grouchy ones, that the Board of Relief did not belong to the Grand Parlor. The above history tells the facts. The present Board of Relief is strictly a Native Daughter institution, begun by them at the Grand Parlor, was assisted by the Grand Parlor to incorporate, and has been assisted and upheld by the Native Daughters and conducted for their benefit.

The Grand Parlor passed a resolution that each Parlor should pay six dollars a year to the Board of Relief, for the maintenance of a fund for relief. Later the Grand Parlor reduced this sum to three dollars a year, at which figure it is now.

In 1899, the Board of Relief decided to establish a home on O'Farrell street, near Van Ness avenue. Mrs. W. S. Leake was appointed chairman of the Home Committee. No words can express the hard work accomplished by this committee.

The home was a safe resting place for Native Daughters visiting the city; it gave a home to two young Native Daughters while they were acquiring an education to be self-supporting; it gave a home at reduced rates to those whose salaries were limited; it gave a sanitarium to many sick ones, and was the last resting place of two Native Daughters who died there and were buried from there.

The Board bought their own property on Hyde street, acquiring a splendid house and lot near California street for $8750. A bank mortgage of $5000 remained upon it just before the fire in 1906. We suffered great loss in that fire—everything we had at the time.

After the fire, the Board of Relief sought to sell their lot. Here, again, the knockers hammered! They said the lot was worth little or nothing. Suffice to say that the financiers of the Board of Relief sold it finally for $7500, paid off their mortgage, and began with splendid enthusiasm to look about for another home.

After much careful consideration, the Board bought the house and lot at 555 Baker street, San Francisco. The Board have placed a mortgage of $1000 upon it. The Parlors have come forward generously, and enthusiasm is steadily growing. This magazine has given from time to time a list

TWENTY-EIGHTH GRAND PARLOR N. D. G. W.

MAY C. BOLDEMANN,
Who Will Be Chosen Grand President.

OBJECTS OF THE N. D. G. W.

"Its objects are social intercourse, mental improvement, and mutual benefit; the uniform administration of the rights, privileges, and benefits of the Order of the N. D. G. W.; perpetuating the memory of the founders of the State of California; the increase and diffusion of knowledge among its members; the improvement of the condition of its membership, socially and materially, by encouragement when in need, and providing for and comforting the sick and distressed members of the Order."—Constitution.

experience in fraternal work, she has gained the love and admiration of all those with whom she came in contact.

Order Shows Progress.

During the past year, the Order has shown a substantial increase in membership, over 1000 new members having been enrolled. Three new Parlors have been instituted—La Junta, No. 203 at St. Helena, Bay Side, No. 204 at West Oakland, and El Monte, No. 205 at Mountain View.

According to Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, the finances of the Grand Parlor are in fine condition, while the assets of the Subordinate Parlors show a considerable increase in the past year. The Order has collected, from Subordinate Parlor members, $2500 for the Pioneer Mothers' Monument in San Francisco.

AMY McAVOY, Grand Trustee.

THE TWENTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL session of the Grand Parlor, Native Daughters of the Golden West, will be called to order by Grand President Alison F. Watt of Grass Valley at Scottish Rite Cathedral, Oakland, Tuesday, June 9th, at 9:30 a. m.

Officers for the succeeding term will likely be nominated Thursday, June 11th, as according to the Constitution of the Grand Parlor, the election "shall be held on the last day of the session," and the last day, if the arrangements of the Oakland committee are carried out, will be Friday, June 12th.

Inquiry on the part of The Grizzly Bear has failed to bring forth any legislation of more than usual moment which will be proposed, and the session promises to be most harmonious.

Grand President Watt has just recently completed her official visit to each Subordinate Parlor, and reports the Order in a most flourishing condition. Mrs. Watt noted, with pleasure, the interest being taken by the Subordinate Parlors, not only in those things with which the Order is directly concerned, but in matters pertaining to a betterment of local conditions and civic affairs in general.

Wherever she has gone, the Grand President has been well received. She has outlined, to the members throughout the State, the work the Order is engaged in, has made suggestions for bettering conditions, and has given aid, both by deed and word, to individual Parlors.

According to reports from Subordinate Parlors, Grand President Watt's visits have been beneficial, both to the several Parlors and the Order as a whole, and through kindly advice, based upon years of

ALISON F. WATT, Grand President,
Who Will Preside During Session.

The idea of this monument originated with Mrs. Ella Stirling Mighels, a member of Haywards Parlor, N. D. G. W., whose parents were Pioneers. Much of the preliminary work was done by her, and to her is due the credit for getting the general public interested. It is probable that the Grand Parlor will take recognition of Mrs. Mighels' services, in commending her for inaugurating this commendable movement.

The report of the Grand Parlor's representatives on the Central Committee on Homeless Children will be practically the same as that to the N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor (published in the April and May issues of The Grizzly Bear), excepting that it will show that twenty-six children have been placed since April 21st.

Reports will show that the members of the Order have been very active in the cause of Home Industry, and that through their efforts the sale of California-manufactured articles has been largely increased. An exhibit of the products of California factories, under the direction of P. G. P. Mae B. Wilkin, will be maintained during the Grand Parlor session.

New Officers.

By virtue of her term of office as Grand President expiring at the close of the session, Alison F. Watt will succeed to the Junior Past Grand Presidency.

May C. Boldemann (La Estrella 89) of San Francisco, the president Grand Vice-president, will be elected Grand President without opposition.

Margaret Grote Hill (Alta 3) of San Francisco has, as far as The Grizzly Bear is informed, no opposition for the Grand Vice-presidency, and consequently will be unanimously chosen for that office.

Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Secretary, and Susie K. Christ, Grand Treasurer, will, apparently, be re-elected without opposition.

Mrs. Mamie P. Carmichael (Vendome 100) of San Jose is the only candidate so far mentioned for Grand Marshal. She will likely have opposition, however.

Offices Contested.

Reports to The Grizzly Bear from Subordinate Parlors furnish the following information as to candidates for the remaining Grand Parlor offices:

Grand Outside Sentinel—Dora Bloom (Sans Souci 96, incumbent), San Francisco; Carrie Hall (Berkeley 150), Berkeley; Anna L. Lange (Argonaut 166), Oakland.

Grand Organist—Edith A. Trabucco (Mariposa 63, incumbent), Mariposa; Julia Larkin (Aleli 102), Salinas; Mrs. Mae Edwards (Keith 137), San Francisco.

Grand Trustees (seven to be elected)—Emma Boarman Wright (Ursula 1, incumbent), Jackson; Mrs. Grace R. Willy (Joaquin 5, incumbent), Stockton; Miss Mary L. Woods (California 22), Sacramento; May L. Williamson (Grand Marshal, Santa Cruz 26), Santa Cruz; L. V. PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION

(By DR. MARIANA BERTOLA, Past Grand President, N. D. G. W., San Francisco.)

ON FEBRUARY 20, 1915, WILL OPEN at San Francisco one of the largest expositions ever held in the world—the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. From present indications, it will also be one of the most beautiful and interesting. The buildings already engage attention; they are cleverly and artistically grouped. Twenty million people are expected to visit the Exposition. Many from the East and elsewhere are already doing so, and the gate receipts are quite an item.

People of the East and of foreign countries have no conception of the resources of this Coast, nor any idea of the vast area of the country. This is our tremendous opportunity to exploit our resources in a practical way, and every Native Son and every Native Daughter should assist in making this Exposition a grand success, for the benefit of the State.

The Woman's Board of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition was organized to aid the Men's Board in as many ways as possible. They are assisting in entertaining prominent people who come here, in advertising the exposition, in creating interest, in supplying people especially fitted to carry on certain departments, and looking after the human welfare part of the exposition. This latter is of tremendous importance.

The officers and members of this Woman's Board are: Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst, honorary president; Mrs. F. G. Sanborn, president; Mrs. G. Stoney, secretary; Dr. Mariana Bertola, Mesdames E. F. Adams, F. B. Anderson, P. E. Bowles, F. L. Brown, F. Carolan, A. R. Cotton, E. R. Dimond, J. A. Donohoe, R. B. Hale, I. W. Hellman, J. Johns, J. W. Lilienthal, R. Oxnard, G. A. Pope, W. T. Sesnon, C. W. Slack, W. H. Taylor, L. White, L. I.

All those movements which tend for the betterment of humanity and the development of California, have no more loyal and active supporters than the Native Daughters of the Golden West.

The accompanying article, in a brief way, sets forth what the Order is doing to assist in various movements now prominently before the public.

Every native daughter of California is proud of her birthright, but she can best aid in the State's development by affiliating with the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West. All eligibles should be glad to obtain such membership, and become better Californians.—Editor.

fornia Building, and the other is the Traveler's Aid.

Mrs. P. A. Hearst has generously offered her beautiful tapestries for the furnishing of the California Building. An auxiliary has been formed, calling upon the women of the State to assist in making the California Building beautiful and interesting.

Mrs. E. C. Wright has been chairman of this large auxiliary, and has put it upon a firm foundation. Mrs. A. P. Black has just taken her place. The Native Daughters, in every part of the State, are helping.

The Woman's Board has also undertaken the erection of the Pioneer Mothers' Monument, to be placed at the Exposition, and later permanently fixed in the San Francisco Civic Center. The idea was original with Mrs. Ella Sterling Mighels, a member of Hayward Parlor, N. D. G. W.

Upon a motion by Dr. Bertola, the Grand President and the Grand Secretary of the Native Daughters were placed upon this committee, as were also Mrs. Genevieve Watson Baker and Mrs. Greene, members of the Order.

The Native Daughters voted a donation of $2500 toward this monument. About half of this amount has come in. All Parlors should endeavor to be represented in this fund, and send their remittance.

Chas. Grafly has been given the commission for the monument. It is to be one and a half times life size, of bronze, and will cost $25,000. The figures will be a mother with two children.

The Traveler's Aid has representation from every sect and every nation, from every commercial and patriotic organization, as well as from steamship and railroad lines. It is patterned after that of New York, and so well laid are its plans for protection and guidance of the travel which will come in 1915, that the Woman's Board feels assured that there will be an absolute minimum of lost girls after the final toll is taken at the exposition gates. Agents of the society will meet every train at every hour of the day or night. Mrs. Ariana Stirling, Past Grand President, N. D. G. W., was appointed a delegate to this Society by Grand President Alison F. Watt.

PLANT YOUR DOLLARS AT HOME

(By MAE B. WILKIN, Past Grand President, N. D. G. W., San Francisco.)

EVER IN THE HISTORY OF THE organization has the opportunity for service to the State by Native Daughters of the Golden West been as great as it is today. The age in which we live has brought out the salient features of conservation and efficiency, factors which Native Daughters, collectively and individually, have proven of great value.

This has been demonstrated by their effective work in behalf of the industries of California, in their splendid co-operation with the Home Industry League of California, in the undertakings of that association, in its endeavor to create a demand for that which is "Made in California."

Instantly did they catch the spirit, and even the exceptional individual who is to be found in the ranks of the Native Daughters as well as elsewhere, who cannot, or will not, recognize her duty to her neighbor, to her State, and to herself, as well as her own opportunity for prosperity, has in most instances come to the broader way of thinking and become one of the most ardent advocates of Home Industry principles.

At the session of the Native Daughters Grand Parlor last year, a collection of "Made in California" products was put on exhibition for the purpose of familiarizing those in attendance with what the State produces, and to furnish an object lesson on the needs of her people. As the results were more far reaching than was dreamed of, this year there will be another exhibit at the Grand Parlor session in Oakland, where an endeavor will be made to have a much more attractive and comprehensive display.

Recently a catalogue of California-made products, such as pertain to the household, has been issued. The response of the Sons and Daughters to the notices that this publication was ready for distribution, has been so spontaneous, more than ten thousand copies have been placed in the hands of the people of this State within thirty days, and so great has been the run on the first edition it was necessary to discontinue notices of the issue of what it is believed will prove to be one of the best things for Home Industry and State prosperity that has ever come off the press.

One Native Daughter wrote: "The little booklet-catalogue has been an eye-opener to me, and I want to put one in every member's hands." Another writes: "We will be glad to do anything in our power to further your laudable efforts. If you will mail us five hundred catalogues we will be glad to distribute them to our many interested fellow citizens." While another asks for one thousand copies and says: "I feel as if we have the movement started, and it is well to keep right on with the good work."

Native Daughters have made possible Home Industry Days before many clubs and other organizations of which they are members, thus increasing the efficiency in upbuilding California industries, and nowhere have their efforts been more appreciated than in the office of the Home Industry League of California, at 320 Market street, San Francisco.

The story of Home Industry, and the necessity for the "Buy Made in California" spirit, has been told in these columns before, so it seems hardly necessary to say, if the people of this State will buy that which is "Made in California" there will be more people at work here making things to buy. Not only that; there will be more people tilling the soil of the State, for the products of factory and soil go hand in hand and each will prosper the more for the existence of the other.

California offers an opportunity for industry which is unexcelled. In the equitable climate enjoyed by the greater part of the State and which makes for excellent working conditions, in the diversity of her production of raw materials, and in her natural resources for generating power for manufacturing purposes,—the State has assets which make for prosperous homes in great numbers; we will but make a determined effort to create a home market, for home made, by buying that which is "Made in California, when price and quality are satisfactory. There is but little used in our homes each day which may not be a home production, and if such goods are purchased there will be more work for more people in this State.

To Grand President Mrs. Alison F. Watt of the Native Daughters of the Golden West we are indebted for the discovery of the following unsigned plea for Home Industry:

"You don't plant oats upon a hill
A hundred miles away,
And somewhere else your corn to drill
You know would never pay.
You plant at home to get the yield
Whatever crops are grown,
For planting in some other field
Will never help your own.

And it's the same with dollars,
For dollars, too, are seed;
The cash today you send away
Tomorrow you will need.
Don't send your cash afar to roam,
But, wiser, learn to sow—
Just plant your dollars here at home,
And watch your dollars grow."

There will be no Woman's Building at the fair, this decision being the further carrying out of the idea of co-operation with the men.

There will be no building devoted exclusively to exhibits of women, but the California Building will be used by women as hostesses, in the same sense that men will be hosts to the world.

The Woman's Board has assumed two great obligations. One is the furnishing of the Cali-

OAKLAND SHOWING GREAT PROGRESS

BELL TOWER, MILLS COLLEGE.

OAKLAND, THE NATIVE DAUGHTERS of the Golden West's 1914 Grand Parlor city, is one of California's prettiest residence cities, and, at the same time, is making great strides toward becoming a great manufacturing city.

It possesses every attraction for the homeseeker—excellent school system, beautiful parks, attractive residence districts, and good streets. While the manufacturer has at his command favorable climatic conditions, cheap power, excellent shipping facilities, and an abundance of labor.

The shopping district of Oakland will compare favorably with any city of like population, and embraces some of the greatest emporiums in the West.

Recent estimates place the city's population well above the 205,000 mark, which is a considerable gain over the 1910 Government census figures—150,174. In 1913, the building permits amounted to $9,106,191.

During the past thirteen months, the city has built a handsome new City Hall and fourteen school buildings; has equipped several children's playgrounds, and done an immense amount of work on the water front.

Believing that the city is destined to enjoy a large increase in population during the next five years, real estate interests are preparing to subdivide contiguous territory, for within the city limits there is comparatively little unoccupied ground.

This condition has, naturally, caused an increased value, particularly in the residence sections, and as a result, the assessed valuation of Oakland property this year is $100,742,008.

Oakland lays claim to being the greatest railroad terminal on the Pacific Coast, and statistics bear out its contention. Eleven thousand railroad men have their homes there, and receive in wages, annually, $5,300,000.

Harbor improvements are now engaging the attention of the city and its shipping and manufacturing interests, and already $26,000,000 has been spent in that work. When contemplated plans are perfected, Oakland Harbor will be, it is claimed, a model of efficiency and convenience for the handling of both rail and water freight.

During the past four years, new factories at the rate of three a week have been established in Oakland, and indications are that 1914 will witness the establishment of 300 additional manufacturing plants. Many Eastern manufacturers, contemplating branch plants in California, have already selected Oakland for a site.

As an evidence of the city's growth as a manufacturing center, it is pointed out that, in 1914, Oakland had 323 factories, with a yearly output of $10,494,000, while today there are 1257 factories whose annual production amounts to a little more than $70,000,000.

As a home center, Oakland has long enjoyed an enviable reputation, and the residences of its citizens are not only noted for their attractiveness, but, more particularly, for the beauty of their surrounding grounds.

As an encouragement to the man of family to settle within its gates, the city maintains an excellent school system. The daily school attendance is reported as 22,000 pupils, and these are housed in buildings erected along up-to-date educational ideas.

Many beautiful parks, maintained at public expense, add to the city's attractiveness and its resibeen completed whereby the residents of Oakland will be transported direct to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition grounds without going through San Francisco. This fact will be extensively advertised in the East, with the hope of inducing fair visitors to make Oakland their stopping place.

Alameda County, especially contiguous to Oakland, is thickly populated, and from this source the city's merchants derive much revenue. This, together with the large local population, makes of Oakland a profitable field for investment for the retail merchant.

"Oakland is now but beginning to come into its birthright of business," says A. A. Dennison, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. "Its citizens, aroused to an appreciation of its opportunities, are devoting themselves to industrial and commercial development. The virile spirit of the new Oakland, conscious of its powers and possibilities, has replaced that of the suburban or dependent community."

"The Oakland of today is a vigorous, energetic city, imbued with a splendid civic spirit; a city beginning to realize its prodigal natural endowments; a city that is destined to play its part in the great drama of events now shaping themselves on the shores of the Pacific."

BEAR FLAG CELEBRATION AT SONOMA

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

BEAR FLAG CELEBRATION SONOMA, JUNE 13TH, 14TH.

SATURDAY, JUNE 13TH—

11 a. m., Grand Parade and Pageant.
2 p. m., Horse Races.
8 p. m., Fireworks, Dancing, Mardi Gras.

SUNDAY, JUNE 14TH—

10 a. m., Dedication Solano Mission.
2 p. m., Unveiling Bear Flag Monument.
8 p. m., Sacred Concert.

JUNE 13TH AND 14TH WILL BE red-letter days in the old City of Sonoma, and thousands will journey to the historic place to participate in the festivities incident to the unveiling of the Bear Flag monument and the dedication of the restored Mission San Francisco de Solano.

The State of California, through the efforts of the Native Sons of the Golden West and Assemblyman H. W. Slater of Sonoma County, at its last session appropriated $5,000, each, for the restoration of the mission—now state property—and the erection of the monument to mark the spot where the "California Republic" flag had its birth.

Sonoma Parlor, No. 111, N. S. G. W., has been very active in promoting these undertakings, and has full charge of the arrangements for a proper observance of the completion of both.

The Parlor has leveled, and will plant to grass, the corner of the plaza where the monument will rise, and has had hauled from the old Vallejo homestead a mammoth granite boulder which will form the base for the monument.

Every Accommodation for Big Crowd.

Mission San Francisco de Solano, which was acquired by the State some years ago, after it had been allowed to go to almost complete ruin, is the last, and the furthestest north, in the chain of missions begun at San Diego by the early-day padres. It was founded August 25, 1823. Under the supervision of Frederick T. Duhring, a member of Sonoma Parlor and one of the State's Sutter Fort Trustees—which have charge of landmarks owned by the State—the old mission has been completely restored, and Sonoma Parlor hopes to accumulate and install many of the old relics that have, from time to time, been removed from within its sacred walls.

The people of Sonoma City are making great preparations for the pleasure and accommodation of their guests, and hospitality will be unstintingly dispensed. Arrangements have been made for caring for a large crowd, automobiles will be stored free of charge, and special transportation facilities have been provided for. The streets and business houses will be attractively decorated in American and Bear flags, and electric lights.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOEBMER.

RIDES THERE ALWAYS HAVE been, and brides there always will be, as long as this old world continues to go around, for marrying and giving in marriage are part of the business, as well as the romance, of life.

And since brides and trousseau go hand in hand in all civilized countries and climes, the highly important question of clothes begins to be considered just as soon as the emblematical diamond ring encircles the third finger on the left hand of the newly affianced maid.

Unless the prospective bride has a firmly preconceived notion of what her wedding gown is to be like, she will meet with an embarrassment of suggestions from dressmakers, because of the greater latitude allowed the bride of today in the choice of fabric and of lines.

Once upon a time, even within the memory of the younger generation, the robe designed for the formal wedding was a stately affair of heavy ivory white satin. Its lines, of almost puritanical austerity, were relieved only by the frosty bretelle or flounce of rose point or d'Alencon lace, passed by the mother or grandmother to the daughter or grandchild to grace the most wonderful, most enchanting, most portentous gown of the girl's life. Always, the neck was high, the throat quite covered, and the sleeves long, and the train was another old-time symbol of the formal grown-up character of the wedding dress.

Many changes have been wrought by the years—even the seasons—for the spring bride of 1914 may, with all propriety, wear a decollete bodice, after the continental fashion. Her skirt may be trainless, her sleeves short. In place of the stiff satin, she may wear taffeta, charmeuse, silver brocade, foile or moire. For the informal wedding, any of the exquisite cotton voiles, French crepes, embroidered organdies and mousselines offer a charming selection. White satin is the material that offers a concession to old-time preferences. The lace strikes an ultra-modern note, and laces in abundance are used on the gowns.

Veils Have Changed.

Veils, by the way, have undergone all manner of transitions in the course of the past decade. Originally, the bride wore the veil over her face as an emblem of modesty; it was part of the duties of the maid of honor to throw it back from the bride's face, after the marriage ceremony. Frequently the face veil was a small one, arranged independent of the long back veil. This, the maid of honor withdrew and carried over her arm when the bridal party turned from the altar and passed out of the church, or, in the home, turned to receive the congratulations of friends and relatives.

The veils for the spring bride are interesting to note, in that in certain instances lace caps have been adopted, and to the edges thereof, the long veil has been attached. Real lace should be used whenever possible, and if a flavor of romance can be infused by the bride borrowing lace that has been used by a bride of other times, so much the better.

Rose point, d'Alencon, Brussels, mechin, limerick, and heavy laces like point de Venise or d'Artagan, having the flowing qualities needed for the bride's veil. Tulle is an excellent substitute for any of the above, since it forms a becoming, cloudy background, and is really, of its kind, a desirable thing always, and infinitely charming is the illusion lent by its misty, frosty folds.

GOING-AWAY DRESS.
—Design from Lane's, Los Angeles.

Neither is the bride of today bound by any conventional idea regarding what she shall carry in her hands. A bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley, if she wishes, or white lilacs, or roses, or white sweet peas will serve the purpose. Or the bouquet may be absolutely discarded in favor of the prayer book, exquisitely bound in white vellum. Or she may elect to carry an elegant fan of real lace, matching that of the veil or the gown flounces. At any rate, she may do pretty much as she pleases, so long as white is the color maintained. On that point, both fashion and custom are agreed.

Quite as much latitude is permitted the bride in the choice of fabrics and styles for the going-away gown. This important costume may be fussy or plain, or it may strike a happy medium in the selection of a demi-taille of supple cloth or silk, with some striking contrast in the way of a striped, checked or flounced waistcoat or girdle. The color is a matter of personal taste.

Blue is very fashionable. In fact, one of the most distinguished brides of the season, speaking in a national sense, has selected a tone of blue known as "true blue" for the many costumes, dresses, and etceteras of her trousseau.

To return to suits: One of the prettiest conceits of the day is to have the model of cloth trimmed with silk. Indeed, it is sometimes difficult to decide whether it is the silk fabric that is trimmed with cloth, or the other way round.

For instance, one costume of pistache-green ripple cloth has the pannier made entirely of green taffeta, the difference in the tone giving a distinct trimming note to the garment. Below the former there is a six-inch flounce of the silk, which gives a decorative finish.

The coat was one of those little affairs that evidently started out to be an eton, and eventually became a bob-tailed cutaway, the front of which does not extend below the waistline.

Plaids in Demand.

The kimono sleeves are characteristic of the general trend of fashion. They are cut very wide through the shoulders, and the seam, from neck to cuff, is defined by a row of ball buttons covered with green taffeta.

Silk also composes the narrow flaring collar, that effects a sort of cross between the Gladstone and Japanese band. An interesting feature is the ornamental hand of silk, with metal embroideries, that weights the postilion.

Plaids have made fashionable progress since the first day of their revival, several weeks ago. They attract those who love the hardy romance of the land o'cakes, and the somber color combinations that distinguish the clans thereof. The gown of such material is made of soft taffeta. Very quaint is the bunched bow of the plaid girdle tied directly in front, and a cool, fresh, summer note is presented in the collar, cuffs and vest of white silk.

Such a frock is an adaptation of a foreign model, and will be found practical for wear during the late spring, right through the summer, for cool days at the seashore or in the mountains.

Capes being of paramount importance just now, the shops are fairly revelling in the display of all manner of circular, semi-circular, and near-circular wraps. These denote various sources of inspiration, all the way from the classical garments worn by little Red Riding Hood to that which forms a part of the costume of the Italian army officers. In every instance, they suggest comfort, and they augment style and quality in the spring and summer.

Other capes of plain taffeta are to be had, principally in black lined with black and completed by a standing frill collar of the material or ribbon. The idea is, that the all-black cape will accommodate itself readily to association with gaily-colored frocks of silk or cotton.

"HANGTOWN" WILL BE PRESENTED AGAIN

Los Angeles—The local 1914 Grand Parlor Entertainment Committee had its final meeting May 18th, and after approving the financial report, which showed a balance on hand after the payment of all bills of $1343.86, adjourned sine die. The entire fund for the Grand Parlor entertainment was received from the proceeds of "Hangtown," not one cent coming as a contribution.

Following the final adjournment of the old committee, five representatives from each of the local Parlors—Los Angeles, No. 45, N. S. G. W., Ramona, No. 109, N. S. G. W., Corona, No. 196, N. S. G. W., La Fiesta, No. 236, N. S. G. W., La Esperanza, No. 24, N. D. G. W., and Los Angeles, No. 124, N. D. G. W.,—were called together for the purpose of organizing a new Hangtown Committee, which will reproduce the famous spectacle early in October. Organization was perfected by election of the following officers: H. G. Folsom (Ramona), chairman; J. D. Hunter (Los Angeles), vice-chairman; Dr. Eva R. Bussenius, P. G. P. (La Esperanza), secretary; J. T. Newell (Los Angeles), treasurer.

An Executive Committee, consisting of the chairman of the general committee and one representative from each Parlor, was selected to have charge of the arrangements for the second "Hangtown." This committee consists of H. G. Folsom (chairman general committee), J. D. Hunter (Los Angeles), Charles Thomas (Ramona), C. W. Grayson (Corona), Dave Bennett (La Fiesta), Dr. Eva R. Bussenius, P. G. P. (La Esperanza) and Mrs. Jennie Elliott (Los Angeles).

The Executive Committee later organized by electing the following officers: H. G. Folsom, chairman; J. D. Hunter, vice-chairman; Dr. Eva R. Bussenius, P. G. P., secretary; Mrs. Jennie Elliott, auditor. The treasurer of the general committee, J. T. Newell, will be the custodian of the funds.

Efforts will now be made to find a suitable place to house "Hangtown," after which the various details of arrangement will be undertaken. The chairman was empowered to set a time and place for the next meeting of the committee.

Grass Valley—An expert is arranging to put many acres of Nevada County land into tobacco.

Visalia—It is estimated that Tulare County's 25,000 acres of grain will produce 150,000 sacks this year.

Berkeley—There were 600 graduates in the fifty-first class to leave the University of California. Nine hundred degrees were conferred.

Los Angeles—Bonds in the sum of $6,500,000 have been voted for a municipal lighting system, power to be developed from the aqueduct water.

Los Angeles—A local company, capitalized at $100,000, is manufacturing moving pictures, depicting fairy tales, and will build five theaters here in which to show them.

Santa Barbara—Articles of incorporation of a $2,000,000 corporation to provide electric power for Santa Ynez Valley, have been filed here; Los Angeles will be the principal place of business.

At the present stage of the work of collecting data regarding the mineral production in California during the year 1913, by the State Mining Bureau, it is evident that the final total will exceed the most sanguine preliminary estimates that were made at the beginning of the year. The tabulation of ten mineral substances—cement chromite, coal, graphite, infusorial earth, iron ore, marble, pyrites, pumice and tungsten ore—already completed, shows an increased value of $1,819,610.

SONOMA CITY, CALIFORNIA

The trustees above named declared and ordered that all streets and parts of street at the time enclosed were not necessary for county roads, and should be sold, and quit-claim deeds be given to the purchasers, the owners of adjoining lots having the preference. Although said provision in the act of the Legislature is not strict law, the property holders acquiesced in the declaration and order of the Board of Trustees, and although said declaration amounted only to an abandonment of certain streets, the people generally approved of said order; as otherwise the money necessary for the payment of the ex-city's indebtedness would have to be raised by direct taxation, and thereby was saved the salary of an assessor and collector.

The trustees having finished the labor of their from said hill to the Agua Caliente Creek in a westerly direction.

This northern boundary line, so defined by the United States District Court, did cause a great deal of annoyance and delay in making the pueblo survey in later years. There are three "prominent hills" north of Sonoma,—the Vallejo Hill, Battery Hill, and the Jones Hill. It was always understood that Battery Hill, being the most prominent of the three hills and the nearest to the town, was one of the landmarks, and it was also the intention of the District Court to make it so. The hill is called Battery from the fact that General Vallejo had two old cannons placed there for the protection of the town. However, the District Court was misled by the map of the pueblo filed in the court as an exhibit.

trust, turned all books and papers over to the proper authority to receive them on November 23, 1864. About the same time the United District Court rendered its final decree, confirming the decision of the Land Commissioners and declaring the exterior boundaries of the pueblo grant to be about as follows: In the west, Sonoma and Agua Caliente Creek; in the east, the Arroyo Seco; in the south, a line from the Francas in Sonoma Creek to the high water mark in the Schele Creek, and in the north, a line extending from the apex of a "prominent hill" lying north from the northwest corner of lot 544, to the house on the Buena Vista ranch in an easterly direction, and by the shortest way

This map was a copy of the O'Farrell map made by John A. Brewster, at one time Surveyor-General of California, and was lithographed in New York. Brewster had made the mistake of sketching the hills north of Sonoma from memory, and had placed Battery Hill, instead of north from the northwest corner of lot 307, about six hundred yards farther east. Such a line does neither strike Battery Hill nor Jones Hill, nor any other prominent hill.

The Sonoma Pueblo grant had been finally confirmed by the United States District Court, but something more had to be done to settle the matter—the grant must be surveyed for its exterior boundaries and a patent from the United States applied for. In the absence of any municipal authority to perform such duties, the Legislature was petitioned to provide a remedy. In 1868 the Legislature, in response to such petition, appointed three pueblo commissioners, namely, Jacob R. Snyder, John Walton and George L. Wratten, whose duty it was declared to be to survey said boundary line according to the decree of the United States District Court; to procure a patent for the Sonoma Pueblo grant, and to sell any of its land then unsold, and if the proceeds from the sale of such land were not sufficient to pay the current expenses of the commission, to levy and collect a tax not exceeding $1000.

During the first year of their office, the Pueblo Commissioner experienced great difficulty in finding and establishing the northern boundary line as described in the decree of the United States District Court. The line running north from the northwest corner of lot 544, not striking one of those "prominent hills" heretofore mentioned, the commissioners thought that the hill nearest to said bearing was meant in said decree. This was the Jones Hill, and the commissioners, in accordance with their construction of said decree, had a line surveyed from the house on the Buena Vista ranch to Jones Hill, and from there to Agua Caliente Creek.

This line was protested by D. Jones and M. Nathanson, two of the settlers on the Government lands which adjoin the line. There was a contest before the Surveyor-General between the parties named, and the settlers came out first best. This disgusted the Pueblo Commissioners so much that they did not do anything further in the matter during their four-year term of office, nor was there anything done for six more years. Of course, this state of things could not go on, and the people of Sonoma, in 1878, asked the Legislature to appoint three new Pueblo Commissioners. This time the choice fell on Otto Schetter, John Tiynen and G. T. Tauli. The last-named commissioner having died during the term of office, E. E. Morse was appointed to fill the vacancy. Those new commissioners experienced as much annoyance as their predecessors, but in conformity with the new Constitution adopted in 1879, under and by which a territory in this State, having a sufficient population, might be incorporated as a municipal corporation.

Judge G. A. Johnson, at the time, represented Sonoma County in the Senate, and as soon as said act had been passed, he sent a copy of it to Henry Weyl. The late A. F. Haraszthy, H. Weyl and F. B. Breitenbach consulted together and it was decided that it was to the best interest of Sonoma to again form a municipal corporation; that the same should include only the small lots as far south as Germany street, and also the Mountain Cemetery. The "out lots," being made up of thirty-two acres of farming land, formerly included in the pueblo or they succeeded in having the boundary lines of the Pueblo surveyed to the satisfaction of the Surveyor-General, and in time a patent was issued to them in trust for the parties who had bought their lots or lands from the municipal authorities. It was signed by President R. B. Hayes on March 31, 1880, and released any and all claims of the United States to the lands embraced in the grant to the Pueblo of Sonoma. It was a great relief to the property owners, as now they felt sure of having a title to their lots and lands.

Ever since the city charter had been repealed, the town or village of Sonoma was a part of Sonoma road district, and although here was the center of population and most road taxes were paid here, the roads in and through Sonoma were neglected by the Board of Supervisors and roadmasters and the other roads were preferred. How to remedy this evil was the problem of that time. This opportunity came in 1883, when the Legislature passed a general act, city, were left out from the boundary for obvious reasons. Mr. Breitenbach then drew up a petition to the Board of Supervisors of Sonoma County to order an election in said territory, whether the electors thereof desired to have a municipal government or not. The election was held, and the affirmative of the question was carried by over a three-fourths majority of the vote cast.

The election returns were approved by the Supervisors of Sonoma County on September 3, 1883, and by them filed in the office of the Secretary of State, and from that time Sonoma became a municipal corporation of the sixth class under the name of City of Sonoma. The government consists of five trustees, who elect one of their number as president; a clerk, who also serves as assessor; a marshal and collector, and treasurer. Under such local government Sonoma has prospered, and ranks with any country town of its size in the State of California.

WILL RECOMMEND ERECTION

OF BETSY ROSS MEMORIAL.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Grand Parlor committee on Betsy Ross Memorial, of which Jennie E. Brown is chairman and Louise Russell-Burridge secretary, was held in the office of Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, San Francisco, May 6th, and was well attended by members from San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley Parlor.

At the session of the Grand Parlor to be held in Oakland this month, the committee will recommend that the Betsy Ross Memorial be erected in the Civic Center of San Francisco during the session of the Grand Parlor to be held there in June, 1915, on or near Flag Day.

It was decided that the memorial shall be a 150-foot iron flag pole, on a concrete and California granite base, suitably inscribed. A fifty-foot flag will float from the top of this mast.

The assessment for the Betsy Ross Memorial has been levied, and it is expected that by 1915 the memorial will be erected, the Native Daughters of the Golden West raising the entire amount.

SAN FRANCISCO RITUAL CONTEST WON BY NATIONAL

The Fourth Ritual Contest in San Francisco, promoted by the Past President's Association, for the magnificent trophy cup presented by the Past Presidents, came to an end on the afternoon of May 24th, and incidentally the series of contests was also terminated by National Parlor, No. 118, becoming a third-time winner and absolute owner of the cup. Eighteen Parlors entered the lists for the term's contest, the preliminary exemplifications taking place from March 18th to April 15th.

Fourteen of the Parlors were eliminated in the first series of exemplifications, leaving as contenders for the next series of contests Golden Gate, Rincon, National and Presidio Parlors, striving for a chance in the final contest, the second series taking place from May 4th to May 14th. The high average scores, entitling the makers to contend on the final day, were made by National Parlor, No. 118, already twice a winner of a contest, and Rincon Parlor, No. 72, winner of the first tournament.

Sunday afternoon, May 24th, Yosemite Hall, N.S. G.W. Building, was jammed with members from the various city Parlors and a liberal sprinkling of visitors from out of town. Among the prominent attendants were the majority of the Board of Grand Officers: Grand President Louis H. Mooser, Grand Second and Third Vice-presidents Bismarck Bruck and Jo V. Snyder, Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung, Grand Trustees W. F. Toomey, W. I. Traeger, Jos. Belloli, J. F. Hoey, Arthur Curtis and C. W. Heyer, and Historiographer D. Q. Troy.

The meeting was opened by Rincon Parlor with the following officers in the chairs officiating: Senior past president, Robt. W. Tucker; junior past president, Frederick S. Tucker; president, Lawrence P. Kling; vice-presidents, Mervyn J. Resing, Byron J. Slyter and Frank E. Shea; secretaries John A. Gilmour and John Hannan; treasurer, Thos. H. Vivian; marshal, John A. Mitchell; trustees, Henry Klein, Benj. A. Orengo and Homer Fouche, and sentinels, John Barrett and Chas. Valle, while John J. Carmody officiated as the piano.

After a splendid rendition of the initiation ceremony the officers yielded their chairs to the team from National Parlor, composed of R. H. Shea, officiating as senior past president; H. T. Unge-witter, junior past president; Frank M. Buckley, president; J. E. Kindelon, H. J. Gavert and Geo. V. Ellis, vice-presidents; M. M. Ratigan and D. E. Murden, secretaries; Geo. W. Koch, treasurer; R. D. Johnson, marshal; H. F. Likendy, W. Leonard and A. J. Falvey, trustees, and D. T. Ryan and W. E. Clarke, sentinels, with J. E. Deickman, Jr., at the piano, and they initiated Forrest Hill Young as a member of National Parlor.

After the rendition of the work by the second team the judges of the contest, Frank A. Bonivert, Fred A. Senk, A. D. Alvarez, W. P. Garfield and James F. Stanley, retired to compute the scores, and the meeting was addressed by the grand officers, and D. D. Gibbons as representative of the Past Presidents' Association. The contest judges having returned and announced the scores to be National 967 and Rincon 950, Grand President Mooser, on behalf of the Past President's Association, presented the trophy to President Buckley of National Parlor as the full property of the Parlor.

Edith A. Trubucco of Mariposa, Grand Organist, N. D. G. W., has been appointed county chairman of Mariposa County Auxiliary to the Woman's Board of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

Agnes Lee of Woodland Parlor, N. D. G. W., has announced her candidacy for Superintendent of Schools of Yolo County.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Sarah Matheson of San Francisco Parlor, N.D.G.W., and Frank M. Buckley, the wedding to take place June 2nd.

Mrs. Emma Humphrey, Past Grand President, N. D. G. W., will take up her summer residence in San Francisco, June 1st.

Frank A. Duggan, a Los Angeles attorney affiliated with Ramona Parlor, N. S. G. W., is a candidate for justice of the peace, Los Angeles Township.

Jesse C. Allau, representing the Grand Parlor on the San Francisco Hall Association, advised the Board that he would tender his resignation as a member of the Board of Directors, on account of press of business. Grand Trustee Arthur E. Curtis was chosen to fill the vacancy. Grand Trustee Curtis and Jos. B. Keenan, member of the Finance Committee, were nominated for directors of the association for the term commencing March, 1915, and were appointed to vote the Grand Parlor's stock at the stockholders' meeting.

The Board authorized the purchase for $146 of certain historical material and souvenirs gathered by Historiographer D. Q. Troy, and ordered that he loan the San Francisco Park Museum for exhibition the gold invitation sent by the Order to the late President William McKinley to attend the 1900 Admission Day celebration. The Historiographer was directed to procure estimates on providing suitable exhibition cases for historic material gathered by him.

The Grand Secretary was directed to make application for membership of the Grand Parlor in the Home Industry League, and Grand Trustee C. W. Heyer was designated to sit with the league as the representative of the Grand Parlor.

Grand Trustees William I. Traeger, John J. Van Nostrand and Joseph Belloli, Jr., were named a committee to present a revision of the Installation Ceremonies to the Board at the next meeting, which will be February 20, 1915.

The Grand President was empowered to send out, at the Grand Parlor's expense, Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung and a picked initiatory team, to such places as the Grand President may deem advisable. The Grand President was also empowered to have issued a booklet pertaining to the work of the Order for use by Subordinate Parlor in membership campaigns.

It was ordered, that for the purpose of enabling ascertainment of what members of the Grand Parlor are entitled to collect mileage as provided by the Constitution, the Grand Secretary be directed to keep a complete record of the attendance of the members of the Grand Parlor at its Thirty-eighth Session; and further, that the Grand Secretary notify the Subordinate Parlor, at the time he issues the customary notice prior to election of delegates, that such a record of attendance will be kept and furnished to the Subordinate Parlor as a part of the proceedings of the session.

Angelinos Thanked.

The Grand Secretary was directed to send suitable copies, to the persons or bodies interested, of the following: In recognition of the cordial welcome and splendid hospitality shown to the Officers and members of the Thirty-seventh Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West and to the friends and relatives accompanying them,

Be it resolved, That this Thirty-seventh Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West, in annual session assembled in the City of Los Angeles, hereby voices its appreciation of the welcome extended to the officers and members of the Grand Parlor and to the friends and relatives accompanying them, and of the many courtesies shown and entertainment tendered, and directs the Grand Secretary to send proper copies hereof, as an expression and conveyance of the thanks of the Grand Parlor on behalf of its officers and members and their accompanying friends and relatives to the Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West and of the Native Daughters of the Golden West of the City of Los Angeles, and to their various committees in charge of the functions incident to the session of the Grand Parlor, for the assistance and agreeable attentions and amusements provided; to the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Long Beach for their efforts in making the visit to that place so enjoyable; to the press of Los Angeles for the favorable publicity given to the session of the Grand Parlor; to the management of Clune's Theater, to Professor Ray Hastings, and to Miss Margaret McKee for their most enjoyable contributions to the musical part of the entertainments in honor of the Grand Parlor; and generally to all the citizens, official and public bodies, in the City of Los Angeles, and various cities in its vicinity visited during the course of the program laid out, for their part in making the Thirty-seventh Session of the Grand Parlor memorable in pleasures afforded the visitors.

GAVIN W. CRAIG

Candidate for
JUSTICE APPELLATE COURT.

Born at Scotia, in the State of Nebraska, he was reared to farm work and received his early education in the public schools of his native State, and later at Ukiah, where he came with his parents in 1890. His high school course was taken at Pomona, California. Then, by working in the fruit industry, on farms, etc., in that vicinity, he saved enough for his tuition and living while a student in the Law College of the University of Southern California. He graduated as a member of the first class from this school in 1901, receiving the degree of LL. B. Before this, he was admitted to the bar, and later while practicing, took the graduate course in the same college and was conferred upon him the degree of LL. M.

Judge Craig seems always to have done double work, and while in his last year at law school, also attended the Brownberger Home School, taking a course in stenography and receiving the diploma of that college in 1901. About July, 1901, after being admitted to the bar, he associated in the office of Byron Waters, and achieved a reputation as a lawyer of ability and thoroughness in the preparation of his cases.

January 1, 1902, he entered the office of District Attorney John D. Fredericks as deputy and stenographer, remaining there until August 1, 1904. At this time, a reorganization of his alma mater took place, and he resigned from the District Attorney's office to become its secretary and one of its faculty. He molded that institution, with its handful of students, into an institution ranking now not only as the fifth largest in the United States, but also as one of the foremost of all law schools. It now has over 600 enrolled students.

In May, 1908, the judges of the Superior Court of Los Angeles County appointed him Court Commissioner of that county, and he assumed the work of this office in addition to that of the law school. He remained Court Commissioner until January, 1911, and during all of the period from the time he took charge of the law school until going on the bench, he engaged in the general practice of his profession.

Having been elected by a large majority to the Superior Court of Los Angeles County, he assumed the duties of that office January 1st, 1911, at this time resigning as Court Commissioner, and Secretary of the Law School, but continuing to the present time as one of its faculty. Judge Craig has proved himself worthy of the confidence placed in him by the voters of the county, and has served in both the civil and criminal departments, showing such ability, integrity and fearlessness as fits him for the high office to which he now aspires and for which he has had such ample preparation.

He is known as a Judge who is kind and just, never swayed by foolish sentiment, but always sympathetic, and with the interest and welfare of the criminal, as well as of the State, at heart. He, with several others interested in such humane work, recently established the Southern California Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology, and Judge Craig was chosen its President. This organization has for its purposes reforms of a practical nature in criminal law, and the treatment of those convicted of crime.

Notwithstanding his strenuous career, he has found time to compile a book on "Water Rights and Irrigation Law in the Western States," and he is at present compiling a work on "Securities." In April, 1903, he was united in marriage to Berdena Brownberger, and two children, Florida Jean, aged 7, and Gavin Morse, aged 3, were born of the marriage. He is a Mason and Shriner, Forester, and Odd Fellow; a member of the Phi Delta Phi—a legal fraternity—and of the Sierra Madre and Gamut Clubs.

Thomas Lee Woolwine recently announced his candidacy for the office of District Attorney, Los Angeles County.

Since that time a committee of Five Hundred citizens of the county, among which are a great number of the foremost men in professional and business life, together with our most favorably-known women in club and political life, has been formed to further his candidacy.

This committee will support their candidate in a campaign to be waged upon a constructive basis, believing him to be the logical man for the position, and will, from time to time, impress upon you their belief. We take it that he needs no introduction at this time as his public record is familiar to you.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE HUNDRED.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' CHOICEST WORK

(By EMMA W. HUMPHREY, Past Grand President, N. D. G. W., Reno, Nevada.)

THE NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE Daughters Central Committee on Homeless Children is now in the fourth year of its existence, and many pages would be necessary to tell all about the hundreds of little children made happy by the efforts of this committee, combined with the efforts of the local committees of the various Parlors of both Orders.

When we consider how modestly the committee began its work, it is quite remarkable that, in so short a time, so much good could have been accomplished. Good men and women have made personal sacrifices to establish this work. It has grown in its sphere of influence until now it is known not only throughout the length and breadth of California, but in many other states as well.

Numerous have been the letters from societies of many years' experience in other states, asking for our system of dispensing aid to homeless children—in placing them in homes at small expense, and in looking after them after they are placed. Our plans for supervision, and the manner of carrying them out, seem particularly unique and splendid to other societies.

During the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, held in Seattle last year, your representative heard much comment upon our well-defined plan for bringing together the homeless child and the childless home, and was asked to write a paper covering our system, to be read in Spokane when the Eastern members of the conference would hold a meeting a few days later.

Here were hundreds of social workers, many of them of years' experience, representing as many societies and institutions, and yet, we of the West could tell them of the most unique society in the world—a society of Native Sons and Native Daughters handed together for the purpose of aiding, through organized effort, the most worthy cause that could possibly enlist the sympathy of men and women of any community—that of the homeless child. Their work is noble, their aims and ambitions are high, their achievements are tending to the advancement of the race and the amelioration of its sorrows.

Is it not worth while to be affiliated with such a society? Is not worth while to be interested in some little human being—to make it possible for him to enjoy advantages that never could have been his in an institution, and at last to have him know that it was you who made life worth while to him?

The Grizzly Bear, in the last two numbers, gave splendid outlines of the aims and objects of the Central Committee—of whom composed, and what it expects of the local committees. The annual report shows that the local committees have responded willingly and generously.

I note that the contributions from the Native Sons Parlors exceed those of the Native Daughters by many dollars. This is no doubt due to the fact that there are more Parlors of Native Sons than of Native Daughters. Both Orders are doing their best, and in the joint committee we find the splendid team work showing to good advantage. The Native Sons assume the responsibility of the financial department, that the good work may go on, while the

The work that the Native Daughters of the Golden West, in conjunction with the Native Sons of the Golden West, are doing in behalf of the California homeless child and childless home, has been fully set forth in these columns.

In prosecuting it, the Native Daughters are doing something different from any other women's organization, and something that will redound to the everlasting benefit of their State.

Every eligible native daughter should be anxious, through membership in the Order, to have her name enrolled among those daughters of California who are so unselfishly and willingly laboring for the betterment of the childless homes and homeless children of the State.
—Editor.

Native Daughters, with the true mother instinct, are unselfishly devoting their time in investigating homes where children are wanted and in visiting and looking after the welfare of the little ones after they are placed.

'Tis in this capacity that the Native Daughters are doing the choicest work of the twentieth century. For four years they have been willing students in that great school where the needs of humanity are taught, and have learned that love is the balance wheel of the world. They have learned that the baby, as well as his grown-up neighbor, needs love as he needs his daily food. They know that these children, lacking a mother's love and a father's support, can render homes sunny that are now clouded with the shadow of loss or lack of a lovable child.

Just visit some of the homes, notice the happy children, talk with those exercising care over some of the little ones that have been so necessary to the happiness of the home, and your duty will need no further suggestion or enlightenment. You will just lie awake nights trying to formulate some plan whereby you can place a homeless child in every childless home in California.

There can be no greater wealth in the world than that wealth of happiness which the love of a little child can bring. Those who are fortunate enough to be so endowed, know that when morning comes and the little form creeps over to mother and, laying his tiny hand on her face, whispers, "Mudder, dear, don't you want to love your little baby?" that here is a reason why the songs of the birds seem sweeter than they used to.

The big man who said that babies just "smear" love all over the world, was about as correct as the one who said, "Just love; love something, some one, and friends will flock as snow birds to the window ledge where lies the crumb."

VALLEJO TELLS OF THE BEAR FLAG UPRISING

SONOMA CITY WAS THE SCENE of the Bear Flag Party uprising, concerning which so much has been written. To perpetuate this historic event, and to mark the place where the Bear Flag, now California's State flag, was first flung to the breeze, the State appropriated $5000 for a monument which, on June 14th, will be formally dedicated on the spot where the flag was originally hoisted. The monument is pictured on page 2 of this issue.

The capture of Sonoma by the Bear Flag Party consisted, mainly, of the arrest of General M. G. Vallejo, in command of the pueblo. The General, in the course of an address delivered in 1876 on the occasion of the centennial celebration of America's independence, made the following reference to this episode in the State's early history:

"Thus far I have spoken only of events which occurred during the Spanish and Mexican occupation of our State. I have now to say something of the epoch which inaugurated a new era for this country. A little before dawn on June 14, 1846, a party of hunters and trappers, with some foreign settlers under command of Captain Merritt, Dr. Semple and Wm. B. Ide, surrounded my residence at Sonoma, and without firing a shot made prisoners of myself, then commander of the northern frontier, of Lieutenant-Colonel Victor Prudon, Captain Salvador Vallejo and Jacob P. Leese. I should here state that down to October, 1845, I had maintained at my expense a respectable garrison at Sonoma, which often, in union with the settlers, did good service in campaigns against the Indians, but at last, tired of spending money which the Mexican government never refunded me, I disbanded the force and most of the soldiers who had constituted it left Sonoma.

"Thus, in June, 1846, the Plaza was entirely unprotected, although there were ten pieces of artillery with other arms and munitions of war. The parties who unfurled the 'Bear Flag' were well aware that Sonoma was without defense, and lost no time in taking advantage of this fact in carrying out their plans. Years before I had urgently represented to the government of Mexico the necessity of stationing a sufficient force on the frontier, else Sonoma would be lost, with return impracticable. Under the circumstances not only I, but Commandante-General Castro, resolved to provide the immigrants with letters of security, that they might remain temporarily in the country. We always made a show of authority, but were convinced at the time that we had no power to resist the invasion which was coming in upon us. With the frankness of a soldier I can assure you that the American immigrants never had cause to complain of the treatment they received at the hands of either authorities or citizens. They carried us as prisoners to Sacramento and kept us in a calahouse for sixty days or more, until the authority of the United States made itself respected and the honorable and humane Commodore Stockton returned us to our hearths.

"During the rest of 1846 and a part of 1847 the Plaza of Sonoma was occupied by a force of marines under Lieutenant Revere and other officials, stationed there by Captain J. B. Montgomery, of the Portsmouth. On the arrival of Stevenson's regiment one of its companies under Captain Brackett, relieved the marines, and that company remained until the discovery of gold, at which time Captain John B. Frishie was in command.

"In 1848 one John Nash was acting as alcalde at Sonoma. He styled himself 'Chief Justice of California,' by virtue of a Bear Party appointment as justice of the peace. He refused to recognize the authority of Governor Mason, consequently Lieutenants W. T. Sherman and Louis Melaine made their appearance one evening in the plaza of Sonoma; disguised as peasants, arrested Nash and took him to Monterey. Nash was succeeded by the distinguished ex-Governor of Missouri, I. W. Boggs. During this gentleman's office there arrived a boat loaded with wheat belonging to John A. Sutter and sent to the representatives of the Russian company in payment of the Ross property. The cargo was attached for a debt here, and Sutter, to clear it, sent from New Helvetia a flask of gold dust.

"This was the first news we had here of the discovery of gold placers. Governor Boggs and I at once started for Sacramento to test the truth of the report, and found that Sutter, Marshall and others had been taking out gold for some time at Coloma, the place of its discovery in this part of California. We came back to Sonoma, and such was the enthusiasm of the people that the town was soon deserted; all went to the diggings in search of gold, and it was not long before they began to return with immense quantities of the yellow dust. To give an idea of the speculative spirit aroused in those days I may state that I was present when Benj. Kelsey lent to Mr. Griffith $25,000 at 25 per cent. compound interest per month. Captain Frisbie was also present and declared the borrower must be insane, but in the end Griffith paid principal and interest according to agreement.

"In those days of confusion and disorder a mass meeting was held and presided over by the magistrate of the district, Governor Boggs, in which it was resolved to adopt provisionally the Missouri code laws to serve as a basis of judicial proceedings. Commodore Thomas A. C. Jones was present to give the weight of his approval and authority to the resolution. In the same meeting Benj. Kelsey and myself were appointed Indian agents, an appointment afterwards approved by General Kearney. The measures adopted at Sonoma were approved with great enthusiasm in a mass meeting in Yerbe Buena, and soon General Riley issued his proclamation ordering the election of delegates to meet at Monterey and form a State Constitution. I had the honor to be chosen one of those delegates, and the Constitution adopted was that still in force.

"As soon as the Sonoma citizens began to come back from the mines laden with gold—some of them—new settlements were gradually made at Petaluma, Napa, Santa Rosa and Healdsburg, followed a little later by the foundation of Sebastopol, Windsor, Bodega Corners, Yocaya, Cloverdale and other well-known places.

"After the signing of the State Constitution an election was held for members of the Legislature, and I had the honor of being chosen as the first Senator from Sonoma. I was also a member of the General Committee of both Houses charged with the duty of dividing the State into counties. The result was the separation of Marin, Napa, Lake and other parts of the territory which before constituted the district of Sonoma. I am glad to say that I was careful to retain for Sonoma County the most fertile lands, and that the boundary lines recommended by me were adopted by the committee and later by the Legislature."

The entire history of the Mexican rule, of the Bear Flag party and the American occupancy centers around the characteristic square or plaza in the center of Sonoma. Here Vallejo ruled supreme and drilled his native armies; here the Bear Flag Party later struck the first blow of independence and hoisted the rude flag which has given California a place under the bright Stars and Stripes of our United States of America.

Such then is the place Sonoma holds in the history of California. She has a peculiarly fascinating background, and one which is ever emphasized by her quaint old adobe landmarks and the oft-told romantic traditions and legends.

FOREST FIRES HARM SOIL FERTILITY.

DEFINITE RELATION BETWEEN the amount of humus, or vegetable matter in the soil, and its crop-producing power as shown by yields of corn, is given in figures just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The department therefore advocates the use of various methods to introduce the required humus into the soil.

Experts of the Forest Service state that the soils of the whole country, and particularly of the South, have lost and are losing immense amounts of this source of soil fertility through forest fires which apparently do little immediate damage but rob the soil of accumulations of humus. In many parts of the Southeast, land is being cleared for farming, and where such forest land has not been burned there is a large percentage of vegetable matter which provides considerable fertility and a good texture. Moreover, this soil has a greater capacity to absorb and retain moisture, and thus is less likely to be washed and gullied under heavy rains. For these reasons, leaving out of account the damage to standing timber, the department's authorities are agreed that fire should be rigidly kept out of woodlands.

THE MAN WITH THE HOE.

A poem with the above title, written by an American poet, Edwin Markham, has attracted worldwide and favorable criticism. This poem inspired the famous painter, Millais, to produce an interpretation in oil. The fame of both author and artist has been greatly increased through their joint efforts.

Critics agree that "The Man with the Hoe" is the visible symbol of the effect of the "Adamic Curse" for disobedience, "Cursed is the ground for thy sake. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat of it." "The Man with the Hoe" typifies non-progress-living by main strength-plodding like a dumb brute without encouragement or hope for the future, using the methods of past generation, even back to Adam. Brute strength—no brain work. If, perchance, some brain evolves a bright idea, a great improvement, "The Man with the Hoe" is not willing to accept. To a certain extent, "The Man with the Hoe" is still in our midst. Westinghouse with his airbrake, Bell with the telephone, Kelley, the real inventor of the Bessemer steel process, and others found the public skeptical, even after tests.

"The Man with the Hoe" takes much hammering before he comes to time. "The first cast iron plow was not accepted by the farmers because they thought cast iron poisoned the ground and caused stones to grow." There is a good deal of "The Man with the Hoe" in many lines of human endeavor, even now. The experiment has been tried of offering for sale on the street a handful of gold twenty-dollar pieces at fifty cents each, and no takers. "Must be something wrong, offering such a good thing."

It sometimes appears to the writer that good things in this life come when they are absolutely needed, but not much before. The use of coal has been largely superseded by gas for cooking purposes, with a fair chance that electricity will soon supersede gas for the same purpose, when protected from waste by insulation, as applied to some so-called "fireless cookers." Gasoline power has made possible the perfection of automobiles, engines, aeroplanes, etc. We presume, that when the time is ripe and necessity presses, some lucky individual will solve the sun or wave power problem.

The United States Government is striving with all its power to discourage lax farming methods, and trying to induce tillers of the soil to use new and proven methods of producing successful crops and other farm products. Success is being attained, but so slowly as to be discouraging.

SUB-IRRIGATION.

(In Four Parts—Part Two.)

For annual crops of vegetables, there appears to be no particular difficulty in sub-irrigating, as the holes in pipes for allowing water to escape do not become filled with root growths as is the case with permanent growths such as orchards, berries, etc. The great difficulty in sub-irrigation plans thus far devised is that roots soon clog up the openings left for the water to escape and thus cause trouble. There is an opportunity for some one to devise such underground conduits for water as will allow the escape of water and at the same time prevent the roots from obstructing the flow. Many attempts have been made, but thus far they have not, for different reasons, proved attractive to users. This may be accounted for, to a great extent, to the reluctance among tillers of the soil to take up with new ideas—they stay in the "rut" made by their ancestors.

We will now give accounts of some systems coming under our observation and attention, that appear to have merit and otherwise, and comment on their good as well as poor features: Porous clay tiling has been laid through orchards, and also iron pipes, perforated so as to supply water along their length. In both cases the roots have found the openings and the insides of the pipes have been completely filled with roots, thus effectually stopping the flow of water.

One method that has come under our personal observation and which appears to have merit, is a cement pipe laid at little expense in a trench by a machine. For vegetable growths or annual crops this works very well, and also works for years in orchards, before the roots fill most of the feeding area of soil. When the roots reach the openings, then trouble begins. It may be possible to overcome the difficulty. We feel as though the trouble will be remedied by some lucky individual.

For annual or root crops, sub-irrigation has been successfully practiced by the use of small perforated pipes, which allow a small amount of water to escape at short intervals. These pipes are laid below the part to be plowed. As the crops are removed each year and the ground cultivated, the roots do not have the opportunity of entering the pipes and stopping them up. The roots rot each year and resolve into humus.

One system of sub-irrigation has been installed, for the purpose of raising annual crops, that has proved successful. Three-inch tiles were used, laid fifteen inches below the surface; these were placed in rows ten feet apart. The joints were cemented so as to leave a small opening of about an inch on the underside of the tile. The grade was such that the tiling acts as a drain, if at any time too much water is received from rainfall. The outlet, if used for drainage, is left open, but if the tile is used for sub-irrigating this opening is closed.

The success of sub-irrigation depends largely upon the character of the soil in reference to the transmission of water through its texture, but generally refractory soil is improved because the air penetrates the soil through the pipes and has an ameliorating effect. If the soil is extremely porous, water may sink or leech away without reaching the surface, but constant cultivation will remedy this to a great extent. Where the soil structure is such that the water is transmitted horizontally, these systems of sub-irrigation have been used to great advantage. A common mistake in construction consists in giving the pipe lines too much fall; so much, that water finds its way to the further or lower end so quickly that it does not saturate the soil uniformly along its length. The pipes should be laid nearly horizontal—little fall. Sometimes the pipes have been buried so deep in the clayey subsoil that the water would not spread laterally owing to soil texture being refractory beyond remedy.

SEASON'S OUTLOOK GOOD.

(From April Bulletin, California Development Board.)

The season of 1914, according to reports from various sources throughout the State, promises to be a record one. This is assured by ample water for irrigation and well-filled underground reservoirs, while in the mountains there is a good supply of snow to keep up the flow for all industrial and irrigation purposes.

Orchards, grain and all kinds of deciduous fruits, including some of the variable crops, are promising well. In both the Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys the grain and hay outlook has never been better. The estimate of the citrus fruits is 42,000 carloads, of which 25,760 carloads have already been shipped (April 20th), as against 11,757 carloads the same date last year. The celery crop of the southern counties and of the Antioch district numbers 3500 carloads. The crop of cotton of last season is now placed at 19,700 bales from 25,000 acres; the acreage to be planted for the 1914 crop is now estimated at 60,000. The acreage in cantaloupes for 1914 is estimated at 7800 acres, and the yield from 4000 to 5000 carloads. Beans, sugar beets, etc., have like increased acreage, and they are expected to give larger returns. From all quarters it is reported that the 1914 peach crop will be the largest on record. The prune crops in most localities are good, though they are reported to be dropping some in the Santa Clara orchards.

Land sales have been quite active. People have seemed to awaken to the desirability of getting small tracts while the prices are favorable. A new irrigation district consisting of 20,000 acres in Stanislaus and Tuolumne Counties is proposed, Southern California capitalists have purchased 13,433 acres of the Yolo Basin known as the Chapman tract. Berkeley parties have purchased the Albers tract near Biggs for the growing of rice. The purchase of 7,000 acres between Brawley and Niland, Imperial County, including the site of the new town of Calipatria, for the raising of cotton and like crops, is reported. San Bernardino and Banning parties have purchased the Big Bear Valley Baldwin holdings, which include 3884 acres of fine grazing land; will later subdivide. A marsh tract of 1114 acres near Suisun has been sold to San Francisco parties.

Having little fear of climatic dangers, the State Board of Horticulture is taking active steps to fight off any pests that may attack the fruits. From Sacramento, April 1st, it was reported that 75,000,000 ladybugs had been distributed to the growers of products likely to be attacked.

JUNE PLANTING CALENDAR.

VEGETABLE GARDEN—Sow beans and cabbage for late crop, sweet corn, cress, cucumbers, okra, muskmelons, peas, parsnips; plant eggplant, sweet potatoes, horseradish and rhubarb roots. Keep the soil well cultivated and hoed, in order that the crops will stand the heat of the coming summer.

FLOWER GARDEN—The last plants of chrysanthemums and asters are set out the first of this month in order to have the plants well established before the warm weather sets in. For summer beds and borders, plant vernal begonias, salvia, verbena, petunia, pentstemons, marguerites, geraniums and carnations. Roses established in pots since January are in bloom and can be transplanted with perfect safety. Do not use cans for potting or the roots will be injured in transplanting. The roses will keep right on blooming if transplanting is done with care, and will furnish flowers in the season of the year when they are very much in demand. Centaurea imperialis and centaurea margueritae sown this month will come in season when they are highly appreciated.

June is the last month of the garden year. Where irrigation is practiced or where soil is naturally moist, crops can be planted and raised successfully. Crops can be planted following previous crops. Moisture MUST be supplied if it does not exist in the soil. June is a month in which irrigationists will be kept busy if crops are to be given a healthy growth.

To secure the best results from irrigation, the soil must be well cultivated as soon after irrigating as it will work up in a mellow condition. The writer has seen water used and cultivation neglected until the soil was baked so hard that cultivation could not be done. Then more water is turned on, and so on. This is all wrong, but is practiced to an unusual degree in California. Soil must be stirred to admit air and sunheat. Plants must breathe and be kept warm, as well as given drink.

We are asked to condemn Father Serra for introducing the wine grape into California, and to put out of commission the second largest industry in this State, which has existed for nearly a century and a half. Also, to change that public policy which our State has assumed towards viticulture during half a century, and to discourage the efforts of the United States Department of Agriculture to make California the greatest grape-growing section of the world. We are asked to destroy the grape industry, and cause the State to lose the assessed valuation on the $150,000,000 that is invested in the industry, which, assessed at 2½ or 3 per

(By MRS. A. BASLEY.)

VIGOR.

NEVER ADVISE BEGINNERS TO commence by trying to make a new breed, because very few are capable of success, just as there are but few artists who can paint a magnificent picture when they first begin to paint. To beginners I say, choose the breed and the standard that you like best, and keep to that breed. Then go on improving your flock. The way to do this, is, first of all, look to the vigor of your flock. It is vigor, first, last and always that you want. "But," says the beginner, "how am I to get vigor, and how am I to keep it?"

A great deal depends upon the chick being properly hatched. For that reason I should advise beginners to commence hatching with hens. Biddy will teach beginners a great deal. Then when the chicks are hatched, feed for vigor. Consult Nature; feed the fluffy little fellows after you have allowed them the necessary rest of at least thirty-six hours before feeding them. All a chick needs is rest and warmth to go on growing for about two days or even three; after that time its digestive organs are ready for work; then they must have the proper kind of food.

The Crop.

Nature has given the chick a crop where the food is first received. In this crop is found a fluid, something like the saliva in human beings; this saliva acts upon the food, softening it and otherwise preparing it for digestion. The food then moves on to the proventriculus, or stomach, where it is still acted upon by a fluid, and it finally passes to the gizzard, where it is finally ground and again moistened by a fluid until it becomes almost creamy.

The dry chick feed, so universally used, composed of a great many fine grains, is admirably adapted to feeding the chick. There are some grains especially conducive to vigor, the chief of these being oats, in any form, and steel-cut, hulled, or rolled breakfast oats. There is another thing which Nature in the spring time gives the chicks: plenty of worms, bugs, insects. Often after an April shower I have seen the ground covered with worms, but here in California there are not enough insects to supply the chickens, therefore the chicks must have animal food as well as succulent green food. I used to buy two pounds of Hamburg steak three times a week, and nothing suited the chicks better, fed raw once a day.

Exercise; Don't Crowd.

Vigor comes from exercise as well as from the proper food. Scratching is by far the best exercise for chicks. It keeps the organs of digestion in a healthy condition; it gives the chick a good appetite; it broadens the back, giving plenty of room for, and developing the egg organs, and strengthens the muscles and enlarges the frame.

How shall we give them work? The best way, of course, is to give the mother hen range. Chicks on range with the mother hen rarely acquire bad habits. It is chicks in the brooder that get into mischief, that quarrel and scrap, peck each other's toes, and get to be cannibals. The best way of preventing mischief is by bedding the brooders, one or two inches deep, with alfalfa hay, cutting to half-inch lengths in a clover cutter. The little chicks will eat some of this, and they will scratch in it for seed of the chick feed all day long. This chaff, or finely-cut hay, hides the toes so they will not be tempted to peck each other's toes. Another method for exercise is, planting the runs with wheat or barley. The chicks will scratch up, or pull up, the green sprouts. Hanging a head of lettuce up in the brooder house will also afford both amusement and exercise.

Never let chicks be crowded at night. Many a chick that might have been a prize winner is disqualified, has off-colored feathers, simply from having been crowded or bruised by larger chicks treading on it. A bruise, even a slight one, will often result in a white feather on a colored fowl, or a black or red feather on a white fowl, and overcrowding has the same effect.

CHILDREN WILL CONTRIBUTE.

Sacramento—State Superintendent of Public Instruction Edward Hyatt has agreed to designate a certain day when California school children may contribute from one to five cents toward the Pioneer Mothers' Monument to be erected in San Francisco. This fund will be known as the "Children's penny subscription to the Motherhood Fund."

of donations, and also what has been done by the Board of Relief.

It is a proud record. The Board began with $571, encountered the devastating fire of 1906, and is again established with property worth at least $9000.

The Board of Relief were the first to be accosted by the Associate Charities in regard to the Children's Agency. They thought it a good thing, and Mrs. Emma Foley, then Grand President and also a member of the Board of Relief consented to take it up. Mrs. Emma Foley and Dr. M. Bertola were appointed later by Mrs. Anna Monroe, Grand President, to take part in the first committee that met in Judge Cook's office in regard to the Children's Agency. But more about this point some other time.

The Board of Relief has been fortunate to have upon it some women of great executive power, tremendous will power, and large outlook for human welfare. Two such women are Mrs. Jennie Greene and Miss Clara Wittenmyer. Mrs. Jennie Greene has worked steadily from the beginning, and the same may be said of Miss Wittenmyer.

Mrs. Genevieve Baker is chairman of the Home Committee, and is always ready to do any work that comes up in connection with the home.

The donations for March were: El Dorado Parlor, Board of Relief, $3; Piedmont Parlor, Board of Relief, $3. For the Home—Joaquin Parlor, $5; Calistoga Parlor, $5; Marysville Parlor, $5; Mrs. Dora Bloom, one sack of potatoes; George Culbert, one drop light. Donations for April were: El Carmelo Parlor, $5; Mission Bells Parlor, $2.50; Berkeley Parlor, $5; Joaquin Parlor, $5; San Sonei Parlor, $5; Mrs. Dora Bloom, $5; Laura Loma Parlor, $5; Argonaut Parlor, $5; Mrs. Jones, one load wood; Haywards Parlor, $5.

In 1912, the Board of Relief consented to fill one of its vacancies with the active Grand President of the Order, and accordingly, Mrs. Olive Bedford-Matlock and Mrs. Alison F. Watt have served during their terms of office on the Board of Relief.

The present Board of Relief consists of the following members of the N. D. G. W.: Mariana Bertola, M. D., president; E. A. Douglas, vice-president; Clara K. Wittenmyer, secretary; C. R. Durham, treasurer; Jennie Greene, assistant treasurer; J. A. Steinbach, assistant secretary; directors—K. McGough, L. W. Morris, J. A. Steinbach, M. Conlter, S. Finkeldey, A. Monroe, G. W. Baker, M. Leighton. Home Committee—Mrs. Baker, chairman; Miss Wittenmyer, secretary; Mrs. Steinbach, Mrs. A. Mosher, Mrs. J. Greene, Miss McGough, Miss Douglass and Dr. Bertola.

We hope to make this Home a help to the Traveler's Aid during the exposition year. We have a vision of a splendid future for the work of the Board of Relief. We see it accomplishing great good in helping members of our Order, in having a perfect home where any of us may go and rest with comfort.

Let our first and last thought be to unite in making our home a power for good in the State. Goldsmith says:

"Such is the patriot's boast, where'er we roam

His first, best country, ever is at home."

Although we are charitable enough to assist in all outside welfare work, let us not forget our own, our home.

CALIFORNIA BUILDING STARTED AT FAIR

San Francisco—A silver spade turned the first earth, beginning construction of the great California Counties Building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, May 7th. Governor Hiram Johnson handled the spade first, and then it was taken, in turn, by Mayor James Rolph, Jr., R. B. Hale, vice-president of the exposition company, and Fred J. V. Skiff, director-general. It was a great day for San Francisco, crowds from every county in the State being out on the exposition grounds. A big parade from the ferries building preceded the ceremony of ground breaking. Mrs. Geo. J. Bucknall, claimed to be the first child born in California of Anglo-American parents, unfurled the old "Bear" flag of California. She took part in the parade celebrating the admission of California as a State in 1850.

The California building, the second in size on the exposition grounds, will display samples of the immense fruit crops of the State. It will show the wonderful manufacturing development of the Pacific Coast. It will have models of the tremendous power-developing machinery harnessed to California waterways, manufacturing a power whose very principle was not known in the old days. It will represent billions of dollars of industrial profit, brought about since the gold mining days by the sturdy business forces of the State.

Work will be pushed rapidly on the new building. There is space for every county in the great structure, and there will be keen rivalry for the honor of having the best display at the exposition. California will welcome the world in 1915, and the most attractive exhibition of this welcome will be found in the exhibit of her own resources.

Native Sons of the Golden West

Unveils Handsome Banner.

San Francisco—Golden Gate Parlor, No. 29, celebrated its thirtieth anniversary May 2nd, in a very elaborate manner. The guests and members danced in the magnificently-decorated auditorium of the Native Sons Building until midnight, after which a sumptuous banquet was served at a local cafe. The grand march was led by the president of the Parlor, Herman Blohm, followed by the Good of the Order Committee and members. The ball-room presented a veritable fairyland, with many exquisite and magnificent gowns that adorned the beautiful fairer sex, and one glimpse at the vast assemblage was a feast for the human eye. The Parlor unveiled its beautiful $1200 banner on the stage of the ball-room at 11 p. m., and the sentiment of all was, that it was an honor to the artist and maker. About 200 members and guests partook of the tempting victuals that were served at the banquet. One and all were hand in hand with praise for the energetic committee of Golden Gate Parlor. Junior Past President H. C. J. Toomey was toastmaster at the banquet.

50,000 Visitors Expected.

San Jose—The greatest Independence Day celebration ever held in California is being arranged by a committee of 200 from San Jose Parlor, No. 22, Garden City Parlor, No. 82, and Observatory Parlor, No. 177, and will occupy three days—July 3rd, 4th and 5th. One of the big features will be the patriotic exercises at which a chorus of 1500 children will render the national songs to the accompaniment of a massed band of 100 pieces. Native Sons from all over the State will participate in the celebration, and conservative estimates place the number of visitors at 50,000.

Saturday, July 4th, ground will be broken for a handsome N. S. G. W. hall, to be erected on a lot recently acquired by the Parlor. Preceding this, there will be a Fourth of July parade, in which every social and fraternal society in the city will participate. The local committee has assurance that practically all of the San Francisco Parlors of Native Sons will join this parade, accompanied by their drum corps and bands.

At Luna Park, arrangements are being made for a big entertainment which will embrace every form of amusement for both young and old. This will be in operation throughout the three days of the celebration.

San Jose's streets will be attractively decorated, and every detail of arrangements for the pleasure and comfort of guests will be carefully looked after by the arrangements committee, which plans to make this a state-wide Independence Day celebration and an annual event.

Addicted to Good Habit.

Oakland—Claremont Parlor, No. 240, is seriously addicted to the habit of initiating new members, several having ridden the bear during the past month. The minstrels gave their first performance and exceeded expectations. Klinkner Hall was crowded to its capacity, and generous applause followed every number of an extensive program. Good jokes were cracked at the expense of several members, and were duly appreciated. Great credit is due the management for the success. The delegates to the Grand Parlor made satisfactory report and expressed themselves highly pleased with their reception and entertainment at Los Angeles. Claremont will take part in the reception to the Grand President and delegates to the Grand Parlor session of the N.D.G.W., with band and file, in conjunction with Argonaut Parlor, No. 166, N. D. G.W., in a street parade to take place on the night of Monday, June 8th.

Don't blame The Grizzly Bear, if your Parlor affairs are not mentioned in these columns.

If fault is to be found with anyone for such omission, it is yourself.

The space in The Grizzly Bear is at the disposal of the Subordinate Parlors.

But you must supply the news, if you would have it printed herein.

Our only restriction is that copy must be in the office of publication not later than the 20th of each month.

All Parlor news should be sent direct to The Grizzly Bear, 248 Wilcox Bldg., Los Angeles.

Boosts Home Industry.

Crockett—Carquinez Parlor, No. 205, is doing a most commendable work in behalf of Home Industry, and the people of this city are being urged to not only talk home-industry principles but to put them into practice by purchasing goods made in California. During the week of May 18th, the Parlor carried on a Home Industry crusade, and as the direct benefits from a similar crusade conducted a year ago, were many, it is believed every resident of this section will soon become an ardent advocate of the movement and will help to build up California by buying that which is produced in the State. May 21st, E. E. Butterfield of San Francisco delivered a public Home Industry lecture under the Parlor's auspices, and impressed upon his hearers the necessity for aiding the movement, so that a large part of the vast sum of money annually sent out of the State for foreign-made necessities may be left here to extend and increase the State's manufacturing industries.

Plans Big Things.

Merced—Yosemite Parlor, No. 24, has launched a campaign for members, and under the leadership of D. K. Stoddard hopes in the very near future to double the present membership. A roster giving the history of the older families of this city will be gotten up and placed in the public library. The Parlor also has under way the erection of a monument to mark the spot on the Turner ranch near Plainsburg where, in 1855, was held the first session of court in Merced County.

Would Preserve Old Name.

Oroville—Argonaut Parlor, No. 8, is endeavoring to have the railroad officials restore to Rich Bar, the famous Plumas County early-day mining town, its rightful name. Members of the 1913 Grand Parlor will recall their pleasant visit to that place, as the result of which several hundred dollars were subscribed for the erection of a monument to the Pioneers buried in the mountain cemetery there. This monument is to be erected this year, and hence Argonaut Parlor is anxious that the old town shall have assumed its proper title so that there may be no confusion of places.

Still on the Job.

Los Angeles—That the members of Los Angeles Parlor, No. 45, Ramona Parlor, No. 109, Corona Parlor, No. 196, and La Fiesta Parlor, No. 236, were not tired out from the labors attendant upon the entertainment of the recent Grand Parlor, and that enthusiasm for the Order did not wane with the departure of the visitors, are evident from the fact that, during the past month, largely-attended social functions have been held in all the Parlors, and several candidates have been initiated.

Saturday night, June 13th, Ramona Parlor, No. 109, will hold its annual banquet at the Merritt-Jones hotel, Ocean Park, and indications are that it will be attended by a record-breaking crowd of members of the Order. The committee of arrangements has mapped out an attractive list of toasts, and every detail will be given careful consideration.

Tenders Banquet.

San Jose—Observatory Parlor, No. 177, was the host May 12th to Joseph A. Belloli, Jr., just elected Grand Trustee, and a large delegation from Santa Clara Parlor, No. 100. Following the business session, all marched to the banquet hall, where the tables were arranged in horseshoe shape, symbolizing good luck and future success to the grand officer. Speeches were made by the many prominent members present, and previous to their departure at midnight all joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne."

JOSEPH CLAVO, Grand Marshal,
Who Will Have Charge Admission Day Parade.

Getting Ready.

Vallejo—Having secured the Admission Day celebration for this city, the Executive Committee of Vallejo Parlor, No. 77, having the arrangements in charge, has been increased to fifteen members, with Thomas J. O'Hara as secretary, as follows: S. J. McKnight, George Weniger, Albert Casper, G. G. Halliday, Robert Walker, C. L. Wiseearver, W. D. Pennycook, Leo. Cavanaugh, Werner Hallin, George E. Bangle, George Williams, W. J. Tormey and H. F. Stahl.

The committee has a vast amount of work in prospect, and sub-committees will shortly be announced to handle the several details. So great has the demand already become for halls and accommodations, that a committee consisting of C. L. Wiseearver, Joseph Clavo and W. D. Pennycook has been placed in charge of these matters and is giving attention to all inquirers.

Reports from all over the State indicate that many Parlors of both Native Sons and Native Daughters will participate in the Admission Day parade, and there is no doubt but that Vallejo will be filled to overflowing with visitors desirous of participating in the celebration of the State's natal day. Vallejo will give a royal welcome to all comers, and will feature a celebration that will compare favorably with past Admission Day festivities.

* Drum Corps to Picnie.

San Francisco—Precita, one of the largest and oldest drum corps organizations in San Francisco, affiliated with Precita Parlor, No. 187, will hold its fourteenth annual picnic at Schuetzen Park, San Rafael, Marin County, June 7th. The members and committee are working very hard to make this picnic the success they have enjoyed in past years. The advance sale of tickets has encouraged the organization, and they expect about 5000 in attendance. The committee has already secured several hundred gate and game prizes. The arrangements committee is as follows: Ed. Weber (chairman), G. A. Dudley (assistant chairman), Fred Weber (secretary), George Hooper (treasurer), W. French, Ed. O'Brien, C. King Cavanagh, Wm. Steiper, R. Kohode, H. Lauterwasser, W. Clement, R. R. Mitchell, Ed. Tietjen, Wm. Buhlinger, H. Tietjen, Jos. Healey, E. Gallagher, Dr. Hart, Arthur E. Curtis, Henry Spaulding, Wm. Jones, Dan Wren, Wm. Reeves, Dan Lynch, James J. Ryan, Geo. F. Welch, E. Lynch, E. Drew, Joe Clement.

Coming Events.

Oakland—Piedmont Parlor, No. 120, will give a picnic and boat ride to Glen Cove, Solano County, June 21st, for which a committee consisting of F. L. Rupert (chairman), H. Weber, H. Vandervoort, C. Morando, Al Weber, J. L. Thomas, J. J. Dignan and H. N. Oberg is making arrangements.

On July 4th, Bay View Parlor, No. 233, will give a picnic at Fernbrook.

The Alameda County Parlors will in all likelihood run an excursion to Sonoma for the Bear Flag Monument dedication celebration, leaving here the morning of June 14th.

Celebrates Birthday Anniversary.

Sacramento—Sutter Fort Parlor, No. 241, celebrated the sixth anniversary of its institution with a banquet, May 6th. The speakers included Frank M. Rutherford of Donner Parlor, Truckee, Hugh Bradford of Oak Park Parlor, President Walter Hicks of Sacramento Parlor, President Elmer Lovett of Sunset Parlor and Fred Trebilcock of Quartz Parlor, Grass Valley, all invited guests, and President M. F. Trebilcock and John C. March of Sutter Fort Parlor.

Will Erect Gateway.

San Bernardino—Arrowhead Parlor, No. 110, had a most successful meeting May 13th, two candidates being initiated and five elected. A strenuous campaign for new members is to be waged. Resolutions were passed, calling upon all citizens to display the Stars and Stripes and Bear Flag, May 20th, the one hundred and fourth anniversary of the founding of San Bernardino. A committee was appointed to act with the Chamber of Commerce in an effort to have gateways erected at the various entrances to the city; the Parlor will, in all probability, erect one itself. Following the business session, a banquet was served, Ralph E. Swing acting as toastmaster. Many members responded to toasts, and several vaudeville numbers were enjoyed.

Victory Celebrated.

Nevada City—Hydraulic Parlor, No. 56, on May 5th celebrated the victory won at the recent Los Angeles Grand Parlor in the election of Jo V. Snyder as Grand Third Vice-president, by tendering him an informal reception, which was attended by a large number of the members. After listening to the reports of the delegates, who recounted "how it happened," Mr. Snyder thanked the Parlor and all those who had aided his candidacy, and said he would use his best efforts to fulfill every duty imposed upon him. During the evening, a banquet was spread, speeches were made, and County Assessor Henry C. Schroeder, one of the Parlor's oldest members, presented to the Parlor an old daybook, kept at a store in Rough and Ready in 1855-56-57, which contains entries testifying to early-day prices. The justice of the peace kept his court records in the back of the book, and many amusing incidents are there set forth.

Good Investment Offered.

Sacramento—Plans and specifications for the $140,000 hall to be erected by the Native Sons' Hall Association of this city on Eleventh and K streets have been finished, and building operations will begin at an early date. The board of directors is now busy disposing of bonds, and is meeting with much encouragement. The investment is considered an excellent one, and there is no reason why the property should not be a dividend payer. The building will be four stories, of class A construction, and will be fitted with every modern convenience. Those desiring can procure bonds by addressing Secretary Percy G. West, 804 K street, and there should be a quick response.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

Enjoys Social Time.

Byron—At the close of the last regular meeting of Donner Parlor, No. 193, April 22nd, a social time was enjoyed, those present being favored with a piano solo by Mrs. Grace L. Boro, a recitation by Mrs. Estes, and a song by Miss Teresa Houston. Games were then played, in which the following received prizes: Mrs. Bertha Hoffman, Mrs. Elizabeth Plumley and Mrs. Mattie Zimmerman. The attendants then adjourned to the banquet-room, where a basket luncheon was served. All spent a very enjoyable time.

Observes Memorial Day.

Bakersfield—At the regular meeting of Tejon Parlor, No. 136, May 12th, Miss Anna Craig and Mrs. Eliza J. Baker were elected delegates to the Grand Parlor. Both are charter members of the Parlor. Georgia Badger and Eliza Dunlap were chosen as alternates. Sunday, May 10th, Tejon Parlor observed memorial day with the usual services. Many of the members were in attendance and brought many beautiful flowers to be placed upon the graves of the departed sisters.

Is Proud of Delegates.

Oakland—Argonaut Parlor, No. 166, is very proud of its delegates to the coming Grand Parlor. They are Anna Louise Lange, who is in the field for Grand Outside Sentinel, and Marie E. Brussie, secretary of the Central Committee for Homeless Children. The love and loyalty of the Parlor in this great work was shown by the spirit which prompted the little president, Eda Bauer, to decline the nomination in favor of Miss Brussie. Argonaut Parlor is very busy carrying out many little social affairs with the members of Claremont Parlor, N. S. G. W., and is also steadily increasing in membership.

Return to Childhood Days.

Modesto—The members of Morada Parlor, No. 199, entertained their "California-born," friends at a unique social in the form of a "kids' party," following their business meeting of April 20th. The social committee, consisting of Callie Logan (chairman), Irma Nelrey, Blanche Moorehead, Cora Schafer and Ethel Sorensen, notified the members to come dressed as children, bring their dolls, and he prepared to do some stunts,—sing, recite, dance or otherwise. The delivery of these caused much merriment among the "little folks." Sarah Campbell as "Fattie," in a French dress, made the hit of the evening, while the charter past president, Katherine Hunsucker, was the only "boy" allowed. Hazel Coffee was awarded the prize for being the "best little girl." After playing jump rope, drop the bandkerchief, and many other childish games, the committee served taffies, animal cookies, lemonade, peanuts, etc. It is not given out how some of these little ones felt next day, after performing such stunts; however, the committee was highly congratulated, and is now endeavoring to get the guests to join the Parlor. During the business session of the meeting, Cora Schafer was nominated as delegate to the Grand Parlor, with Ethel Sorensen as alternate.

and Mrs. Callie John were elected delegates to the Grand Parlor, Mrs. Annie Kluser and Mrs. Susie Orr being elected alternates. Miss Agnes Lee, Past Grand Trustee, will attend the Grand Parlor as a visitor. May 3rd was memorial day for the Native Daughters, and was duly observed by San Luisita Parlor, the graves of the late Miss Carrie Blake and Mrs. J. M. Dormer, deceased members, being covered with beautiful flowers.

Good Comes From Visit.

Weaverville—Grand President Alison F. Watt paid Eltapome Parlor, No. 55, an official visit May 9th, the N. S. G. W. hall, where the Parlor holds its meetings, being handsomely decorated for the occasion. Forty-one members were present. Two new members were initiated into the mysteries of the Order, Miss Vera Hutchins and Miss Helen Leonard. The Grand President complimented Eltapome on its work, and after instructing the members all sat down to a sumptuous banquet. The next day being Sunday, Grand President Watt spent the day with the members, much to their joy, and a delegation took her out to see the "La Grange," the largest hydraulic mine in the world, of which Trinity County is the proud possessor. It is situated about four miles from Weaverville. Eltapome Parlor's members all feel that much good was derived from Mrs. Watt's visit. Following are the officers of the Parlor for the term: Past president, Flora Noonan; president, Minnie E. Aldrich; first vice-president, Minnie Martin; second vice-president, Barbara Warren; third vice-president, Ann Vitzbun; financial secretary, Elizabetha Murphy; recording secretary, Lulu N. Wallace; marshal, Agnes Junkans; inside sentinel, Rose Mukel; outside sentinel, Christine Ryan; pianist, Clara Weinheimer; trustees—Ella Montague, Irene Singer and Phoebe Robinson.

Observes Arbor Day.

Berkeley—Bear Flag Parlor, No. 151, celebrated Burhank's Day, also Arbor Day, on the 7th of March last with appropriate exercises at St. Joseph's Church grounds. Two trees were planted there last year, and this year one was dedicated to the Mission Fathers. Following was the program rendered: Song, "Star Spangled Banner," convent school; address, Annie Berwick; response, Father Morrison; song, "California," school. Tree planting by members and friends was followed by a treat to three hundred and fifty children of the convent to ice cream cones.

Farewell to Departing Member.

Eureka—Mrs. Irene Barnett, who expects to depart soon for other parts, was tendered a farewell recently by the members of Occident Parlor, No. 28, of which she is an honored member. Several hours were spent with cards, and at the conclusion of the game Mrs. Barnett was awarded first prize and Mrs. Rose Washnuth second. Later a luncheon was served.

Present Bear Flag to School.

Pittsburg—The public schools of this city were recently presented with a large Bear flag by Stirling Parlor, No. 146, N. D. G. W., and Diamond Parlor, No. 246, N. S. G. W. The ceremonies were held in the open air in front of the large grammar school building, and were witnessed by a large number of members of both Parlor, friends and members of the grammar school and high school board of trustees. The children marched from their respective rooms, carrying bouquets of flowers, and when their positions were taken, Miss Flynn, a teacher, commenced the exercises by singing the "Star Spangled Banner." This was followed by addresses by Mrs. Amy McAvoy, Grand Trustee; Mrs. W. W. Barnes, president Woman's Improvement Club, and L. E. Vickers, principal of the schools. The presentation speech was made in an eloquent manner by W. G. H. Croxon, member of Diamond Parlor, who touched on the early history of California and the Bear Flag. As the flag was being raised, roses and other sweet-scented flowers were showered from the windows of the school building upon the crowd below. The singing of "I Love You, California," by the school children was a feature, and the exercises were closed by the singing of "America."

Will Initiate Large Class.

San Jose—San Jose Parlor, No. 81, is very active, holding enthusiastic meetings, which the members attend with pleasure, and where true sociability and harmony prevail. The Parlor has given a series of monthly dances with great success, the last one having been given on May 13th and a neat sum realized which will go towards the Pioneer Mothers' Monument fund. At the last meeting several applications were received, so that by the first meeting in July a large class of candidates will be initiated. On that date will be the twentieth anniversary of the Parlor and extensive preparations are being made, to fittingly celebrate the event.

Hostesses to Pioneers.

Oroville—The members of Gold of Ophir Parlor, No. 190, entertained the Pioneers of Oroville and vicinity, May 6th, a large number accepting of the Parlor's hospitality. The following program was rendered: Duet, Ruth Harris and Ruth Duun, accompanied by Melba Egan and Thelma Mitchell; solo, "The Songs My Mother Used to Sing," Mrs. George Braden; solo, "I Love You, California," Miss Alta Bowers; tableau, "Old Black Joe"; solo, "Last Rose of Summer," Miss Florence Danforth; solo, "Auld Lang Syne," assemblage. A sumptuous repast followed, at which Mrs. Woodall acted as toastmistress, and speeches were made by James Lafferty, Henry Vail, Robert Moore, Dr. Karsner, A. M. Smith, Mrs. Henry Vail, Mrs. Mooney, Mrs. E. J. Mooney, Mrs. Rachel Hengy, Mrs. L. Frischolz and Jacob Patterson.

Joint Memorial Exercises.

Berkeley—Under the joint auspices of Richmond Parlor, No. 147, Berkeley Parlor, No. 150, and Bear Flag Parlor, No. 151, services in memory of the departed sisters were held at Native Sons Hall, May 3rd, the program being: Song, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," assemblage; remarks, Mrs. May Jacobs, president; roll call, Mrs. Anna Luhr, secretary; solo, "He Leadeth Me," Mrs. Clara Farrell; memorial of Grand President Alison F. Watt, read by the secretary; address, Mrs. Carrie Hall; remarks, Miss M. Cunha, first vice-president; remarks, Miss Daisy Lingard, marshal; solo, "Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled," Miss Walsb; eulogy, Mrs. Lucy Mahoney; remarks, Mrs. Annie Berwick, junior past president; solo, "There Is a Green Hill Far Away," Miss Alyce Martyn; remarks, Mrs. Kate Hartley, past president; song, "Abide With Me," assemblage.

Grand President Visits.

San Francisco—May 12th, Grand President Alison F. Watt paid her official visit to Guadalupe Parlor, No. 153. The hall was artistically decorated in greens and flowers; the altar in red and white roses and blue corn flowers, and the officers' stations in yellow wild flowers. Grand Vice-president Mae Boldemann, Grand Inside Sentinel Mary Bell, Grand Outside Sentinel Dora Bloom, D. D. G. P. Josephine Cereghino and visitors from many San Francisco Parlor were present to greet the Grand President and share in the Parlor's hospitality. Upon her entrance into the hall the Grand President was presented with an "old fashioned" hoquet by D. D. G. P. Josephine Cereghino, a member of Guadalupe Parlor. The work of the Order was exemplified by an efficient corps of officers and four candidates were initiated. The beautiful strains rendered by the organist, Emma Litzius, called forth special praise from the visitors. The Grand President spoke at length upon "Our Order" and the work which it is accomplishing, and thanked the Parlor for the splendid reception tendered her. She was presented with a beautiful cut-glass fern dish and mirror. Dainty refreshments were served after the meeting, bringing to a close a most enjoyable evening.

Excelsior Parlor's Activities.

Stockton—The Home Products Luncheon given April 15th at the Y. M. C. A. by Excelsior Parlor, No. 202, was a great success. Everything served at the luncheon was cooked by the members of the Parlor, and over 200 people were served. Memorial services were held over the grave of the late Sister Aimee G. Arbios, the grave being literally banked with beautiful flowers.

Excelsior Parlor held its May meeting in I. O. O. F. Hall at Ripon on the 5th. A picnic had been planned to take place after the meeting, but owing to an unexpected visit from Past Grand President Mamie G. Peyton, D. D. G. P., of Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, the trip to the grove was postponed and a luncheon was held at the home of Mrs. Geo. Osborne with the district deputy as guest.

Excelsior Parlor opened the beautiful roof garden of Hotel Stockton for the summer with a pretty dancing party May 16th. This was another of those delightful affairs which have made Excelsior Parlor so popular among the younger set of Stockton. During the evening all of the latest society dances now in vogue were danced. Music was furnished by a seven-piece orchestra, and delicious refreshments were served. The place was a bower of palms, ferns, and growing plants laden with pink blossoms, and the splashing fountain, lighted with myriad of colored lights, seemed to vie with the mellow light of the moon which overhung the garden—the women in their beautiful gowns making a picture in harmony with this picturesque spot. The committee in charge of the dance consisted of Miss Elise Cavagnaro, Mrs. Edith Delmonte, Mrs. Lyda Schneider and Miss Gladys Dalesandro.

Whist for Good Causes.

Berkeley—Mission Bells Parlor, No. 175, elected as delegate to the Grand Parlor the organizer and past president, Louise Straub, who has been a very earnest and zealous member. The Parlor sends her to the Grand Parlor by a unanimous vote, and with the wish that every moment she spends there will be a source of pleasure, as well as profit to the Parlor by the reports she will bring back. Past President Emma Carter, treasurer of the Parlor for two and a half years, was chosen as alternate delegate. The Parlor is arranging for a whist party for the homeless children in the near future, and also one for the N. D. G. W. Home.

Action Commended.

Berkeley—With impressive ceremonies under the direction of Mrs. Anna Luhr, and consisting of a prayer by Mrs. C. C. Hall, a vocal selection, "Dear Old Hills of California," by Mrs. Clara Farrell, and addresses by Mesdames Anna Luhr and Elizabeth Smith, Berkeley Parlor, No. 150, observed Arbor Day by planting a sycamore tree, which will be inscribed "The Berkeley," at San Pablo Park. In celebration of the day, the Parlor has annually planted trees in the various school yards, and its action was commended in addresses by Mayor Charles D. Haywood, and Commissioners Turner, Hoff and Harris. The school children will, in the near future, plant a large number of trees in the school yards, and Berkeley Parlor has been invited by the officials to participate in the exercises.

Los Angeles Parlor's Doings.

Los Angeles—A very pleasant evening was spent by the members of Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124, May 4th, a large class of candidates being initiated. The visiting members were Katherine Hall of Portola Parlor, San Francisco, and Daisy Prideaux of Ursula Parlor, Jackson. President Grace Stoermer stated there had been a number of inquiries as to the significance of the California Bear Flag, and Annie L. Adair was asked to hunt up an authentic account of the Bear Flag Party; a very accurate and well-written account was found in The Grizzly Bear for March, 1913, and this article was read by Mary K. Corcoran for the edification of the members. Under good of the Order, two solos were beautifully rendered by Daisy Prideaux and thoroughly appreciated by the listeners. Refreshments were served by the Parlor, the committee in charge being Sisters Dixon, Prather and Culberts.

June 18th, two members were initiated into the Parlor. Jennie Elliott and Grace Stoermer were elected delegates to attend the Grand Parlor at Oakland. At the conclusion of the Parlor meeting, Annie L. Adair, acting as hostess, had the members of the Parlor as her guests and was assisted by Mary K. Corcoran and Mrs. Mary E. Aubury. The refreshment tables were artistically decorated with yellow gairdarias and asparagus ferns. All the members enjoyed Annie L. Adair's hospitality, and fun and merriment reigned supreme.

For several years past Los Angeles has been represented among the grand officers by Annie I. Dempsey, who is one of the brightest, ablest and most energetic members of the Order, and has always been proud of her splendid record as Grand Trustee. Miss Dempsey, who is possessed of fine literary ability, has decided not to be a candidate for any higher honors, so Los Angeles Parlor will put forward President Grace Stoermer as a candidate for a Grand Parlor office.

Want Grand Trustee Re-elected.

Oakland—Piedmont Parlor, No. 87, has elected the following delegates to the Grand Parlor which meets here this month: Miss Clara Wenner, Mrs. Emma Munson, Mrs. Jennie Jordan and Winifred Holter. The alternates are: Mesdames Annie Knabbe, Emma Swaney, Sarah Really, Greta Murden. All the delegates, joined by the members of this Parlor, will work zealously for the re-election of their present Grand Trustee, Addie E. Mosher. Two members were initiated at the meeting. May 21st, Piedmont Parlor held a successful whist, of which Mrs. Frances Rulfs was chairman; the proceeds will be turned over to the Native Daughter's Home in San Francisco.

prise 16,000 feet of trestle across the Yolo bypass, now impassible except for a few months of the year. Practically all of the structure will be of concrete, and it will give an approach to Sacramento which will connect at Davis with the highway along the western side of the Sacramento Valley and into Benicia. Bids for constructing this Yolo basin causeway will be opened by the Highway Commission on June 8th.

A scenic drive through Contra Costa County will form part of the State Highway route from Berkeley and Oakland and by ferry from San Francisco, and east of Sacramento the State road will connect to Lake Tahoe and the East.

A survey is to be made this month to determine the cost of a cutoff through Napa and Sonoma Counties for an airline road into Sausalito, thereby shortening the distance into San Francisco. This cutoff also serves to open the fertile Napa and Sonoma Valleys and forms a delightful "around-the-bay" scenic tour on which are possible visits to Napa and Sonoma resorts, the Petaluma poultry industry and the Russian River country. It will prove a factor in facilitating communication with the points along the northern California coast. Napa, Sonoma and Marin Counties agree to contribute cash bonuses totalling $175,000 to offset the extra cost of constructing the proposed cutoff.

to which she had dropped, and by a stairway down to the rear of the building, had departed by an alleyway to be seen no more.

Seven Chinamen were arrested at Vallecito, Calaveras County, for working a novel swindle upon the merchants who were buying gold dust. They filed silver coins with a very fine file and put the filings through a process, known only to them, that gave the stuff the appearance of being gold. They then mixed it with genuine gold dust in the proportion of one ounce of filings to three ounces of gold dust, and sold it for gold dust, thereby obtaining $17 for a dollar's worth of silver.

Leaves Wife for Security.

Teaming movements to and from Washoe were now at maximum proportions. A count of west-bound wagons made on one day of this month at Slippery Ford, near the Summit, on the Placerville route, showed twelve hundred vehicles in that direction and five hundred and eighty-seven loaded wagons bound to Washoe. There was almost a continuous procession all day long.

A Chinaman at Silver Mountain was sued by another Chinaman for a debt of $30 and judgment was given the plaintiff. The defendant asked for a stay of proceedings to enable him to get the money. He left his wife with the plaintiff as security for the debt and hiked off to Virginia City, where expected to make a raise. An editor commenting upon the incident stated he knew of a few white men who would like to pay their debts the same way.

On June 3rd, Santiago Sanchez was hung by the sheriff in Los Angeles for the murder of Manuel Gonzales in February. He came upon the gallows platform smoking a cigar and made a rambling speech, claiming he was justified in killing Gonzales, denying he had committed other murders of which he was accused, and concluding by asking for a glass of whiskey. On being handed this, he raised it above his head, shouted "Hurrah!" drank it, and then asked to see his coffin. With a request that he be not buried until 4 p. m. the next day, he announced his readiness to be hung. With an "Adios, Senors," from his lips, he was dropped into eternity.

Sawyer's bridge, over the South Fork of the Mokelumne River, near West Point, fell on June 13th while a herd of sixty head of cattle, belonging to a stockman named Miller, were upon it. The bridge was sixty feet high, and all of the cattle were killed by the fall.

Markleeville, in Alpine County, boasted of a telegraph office being opened, a stage line from Folsom being established, and a murder during the month. It was a lively town for a brief period.

The town of French Gulch, Shasta County, went the way of all mining towns on June 24th. Its business section of twenty houses was burned with a $75,000 loss.

Francis McConnell, a young and prominent attorney of Sacramento and a brother of Thomas McConnell, the pioneer settler on the Cosumnes River, was killed on June 18th in a tragic manner. He had joined his brother in El Dorado County for a recreation trip, in driving a flock of sheep to pasture in a valley near Lake Tahoe. He had a double-barreled shotgun in his hand, on the lookout for game, while riding in a spring wagon. A wheel struck a rock and gave such a severe jolt that, in some unaccountable manner, both barrels were discharged into his left side just below the heart, and he fell from his seat into the road a dead man. He was 31 years of age and considered to be a young man of great ability.

WAGE WAR ON BEETLES.

Five thousand dollars will be expended on the Sierra National Forest in Madera County this spring, in the extermination of beetles which are killing valuable timber. Nearly 3,000 big pines, worth $12,000, are reported killed by insects on the areas involved in this project, during the past year, and prompt measures are expected to save a body of timber worth many times the amount expended.

It is explained that the beetles do their work by tunneling horizontally beneath the bark in the outer layer of living wood which carries the food supply to the living portions of the tree. If the tree is completely girdled it dies; if only partly girdled its vitality is so weakened that it may fall a prey to other diseases. Control work consists in cutting the infested trees before the beetle emerges, peeling the bark and burning it.

Results from Western white pine plantations three seasons or more old show an average of 97 per cent success. On average white pine soil planting can be conducted for from $5 to $6 per acre.

ELMER R. McDOWELL

Candidate For

Superior Judge

Los Angeles County

Elmer R. McDowell, attorney and clubman, and candidate for the office of Superior Judge of Los Angeles County, is conspicuous for his advocacy of the Mother's Pension Bill and made the first formal appeal in California and later was instrumental in bringing the bill before the State Legislature in 1911. He presented the needs of mothers at the state convention of the Humane Societies for Children which was held at Santa Barbara and declared that the mothers of dependent children should be supported by the state, not as charity, but because the personal influence of mothers, rather than asylums and institutions, makes for good citizenship. Mr. McDowell is Vice-president of the State Humane Society for Children and Director and leading counsel of the Los Angeles Humane Society for Children.

Mr. McDowell was born in Freeport, Illinois, in 1869, but at heart is an ardent Californian. He has large interests scattered through the State, notably in the Sharon Farms Company. He is a graduate of the Law College of the University of Southern California with the degrees of L. L. B. and Master of Laws. In his law practice, beginning in 1906, Mr. McDowell has been associated with Deputy County Counsel Charles E. Haas, Deputy District Attorney Arthur L. Veitch, Kemper B. Campbell, William Hazlett and E. Earl Crandall. He is a member of the Bar Association, Chamber of Commerce, Sierra Madra and Union League Clubs and of the orders of Masons, Elks, Knights of Pythias and Odd Fellows.

Mr. McDowell has had a life of exceptional activity beginning from his eleventh year, when he became page in the Illinois State Senate, and his strong hand is outstretched to any lad who is ambitious and not ashamed nor afraid to work.

W. A. HAMMEL

Candidate for Re-election as

Sheriff, Los Angeles County

Sheriff Hammel has announced himself as a candidate to succeed himself. For a long time he had determined to step aside when his term was up, but his many friends from all over Los Angeles County have been besieging him to make the race for re-election, and he finally consented. Hammel occupies an enviable position in politics, in that his integrity or ability has never been questioned, and we feel that we need make no apology in recommending to our readers Billy Hammel, who has showed himself to be an official without fear and without reproach.

The office of Sheriff is one of the most important in the County. The amount of the people's money passing through the Sheriff's hands is simply enormous. There is no sane reason to remove Hammel from the office he has so ably filled, and it is unwise to take risks; therefore "well enough should be let alone."

ROADS AND THE COMMUNITY

"It has been demonstrated that 20 per cent of the roads carry 90 per cent of the traffic. To improve more than 20 per cent of roads, then, with hard surface and expensive construction, is uneconomical. This statement launches a body blow at those socialistic taxpayers who demand that no bond issue be authorized nor road money expended for any road system which is not laid out so that all the community gets an equal share in it. No community taxes only those whose houses burn to support a fire department. No community demands that only parents of children shall be taxed for schools. No community insists that only those who go to law shall be required to pay for the court-house. Consequently, for John Smith, living across the river, to object to paying a tax to improve the roads miles south of him, is, while a natural, not a good argument. The whole community benefits from a system of roads which are good, whether those roads pass the front doors of the whole community or not!"—Suburban Life.

The above article, which has been extensively published, and shows the impracticability and impropriety of undertaking to provide equally high-class improvements for all roads in all communities.

In California, the State Highway Commission, in constructing the State Highways for which the taxpayers are paying heavily, is doing this very thing. They contend that the $18,000,000 bond money should be spread over approximately 3,000 miles of road in substantially equal parts per mile.

SAN JOSE, THE HEART OF THE GREAT SANTA CLARA VALLEY

(By JOSEPH T. BROOKS, Secretary San Jose Chamber of Commerce.)

WE CANNOT SPEAK OF SAN JOSE without calling into prominence the Santa Clara Valley, which is the principal attraction and California's scenic garden. The one is inseparable from the other, for San Jose is located in the heart of this beautiful valley.

San Jose is a wideawake city. It does things with a vim; thought is father to the action. During the past few years about twenty miles of streets have been paved and are in course of construction. The banks alone assumed over $190,000 on State highway bonds, and the Supervisors about $250,000, assuring a complete State highway system from north to south and east to west through the state and valley.

Two years ago a bond issue for $300,000 was carried for civic improvements. Of this, $110,000 was for improvements in Alum Rock Park—the building of a bath house and cafe, which is the newest and latest on the Pacific Coast. Alum Rock Park is a beautiful natural park of about 1000 acres six miles from San Jose, connected by electric line, and is a city reservation free to all. Sixteen developed springs for curative purposes, free to the public for the asking, are located there.

The citizens of San Jose in ten days raised a fund of $147,000 and built a handsome Young Men's Christian Association building. It is one of the finest in the West. The San Jose Golf and Country Club was built recently by popular subscription of $75,000. From June 2 to 12, 1914, the citizens, by public subscription, raised a fund of $105,000 to build a handsome Young Women's Christian Association building. The Elks have just completed and furnished a home at a cost of $175,000. The Newman Club was likewise built by popular subscription at a cost of $50,000 for building and fixtures.

Everybody pulls together in a general movement for the betterment of the community, and now come the Native Sons in their effort to build a home. They own the lot and have started a fund with which to build, and that is "enough said" in San Jose. It will be built.

San Jose is a city of elegant buildings, good environments, and moral persuasion which invites the man of family to make it his home. The educational features are superb, and when you come to the Fourth of July celebration, see the State Normal School and the various public school buildings. One of the new features is the building of the latest type incinerator, where a banquet was served to the general public and invited guests, indicating clearly the removal of any objectionable features.

There is something doing in San Jose all the while. In fact, some of the "money bags" are inclined to whisper that we are too rapid, but this is due to the Native Sons and Native Daughters and the younger element, who are taking hold of situations and molding the new San Jose in conformity to progressive ideas and action.

In Way of Comparison.

San Jose was founded in 1777, and was the first capital of the State of California. It was one of the first settlements founded by the Franciscan friars, and the Mission established by them at Santa Clara, about three miles distant from San Jose, was a part of the chain of missions built along El Camino Real, or the King's Highway, which extended from San Diego on the south to Sonoma on the north.

By comparison, we call to mind just 100 years ago—in 1814. San Jose then had about twenty houses, no wheels with spokes, no sawed timber (it was hewn with axes by the Indians), no stoves or fireplaces until the Americans came in 1846, no flour mills. Grain was ground in stone mortars called metates. Boiled wheat, maize, beans, beef, and a few vegetables were the principal foods. Red peppers and beans appeared at every meal. The population of San Jose then was about 137. At this time, 1914, we have a metropolitan population of about 50,000. The equipment for a city beautiful is modern and praiseworthy.

San Jose is well situated, at an altitude of from 90 to 125 feet elevation. Beyond the city limits the rise continues gradual, until the foothills and mountains are reached, the latter, on either side, reaching an elevation of 3000 to 4000 feet. Buildings of steel and stone, class A, from two to nine stories, have been erected, modern in all appointments. There is a feeling of security in the investments, since the growth of the city has been gradual, and a "boom" is not the order of the controlling element.

Has Every Advantage.

San Jose is a cosmopolitan city, and a distributing point for railroads. A network of electric lines and steam railroads center in the city and diverge to every part of California. There are ninety-five trains in and out of San Jose daily.

The educational advantages of this section deserves special mention because of the delightful surroundings, climatic conditions, soil, pure water, abundance or scenic effects, and social opportunities. Many are making this section their home, to educate and raise their children.

During the year past, territory was annexed to the city of San Jose, extending its limits to deep water on San Francisco Bay, a distance ranging from five to ten miles along the Guadalupe River and the San Francisco Bay shore, where it is proposed to establish a Port San Jose.

San Jose is well supplied with hotel accommodations, ranging from the modest to the elaborate, and has become known as a convention city. The Auditorium has a seating capacity for 3000 people, while Luna Park, Congress Springs and Alum Rock Park give open-air freedom for outdoor amusement.

Our banks are very substantial in point of finance and structure. The average resources of the banking institutions, which extend into every section of the county, represent $28,000,000 and the ordinary cash and collaterals carried from day to day in every form are estimated at about $10,000,000. The bank clearings average, in the city of San Jose, $2,500,000 per month.

The surrounding country has a vast field of production, and the horticultural industry has reached enormous proportions. It is estimated that from 6000 to 8000 carloads of fruit are shipped out of this valley every year. The climate is delightful and the summer and winter both attract the visitors.

An Appreciation by a Globe Trotter.

E. Alexander Powell, F. R. G. S., world traveler and noted author, has thus vividly summed up the chief attractions and resources of the Santa Clara Valley:

"If you go to the Santa Clara Valley when I did, which was in March, you will find that the people of the valley are celebrating the Feast of the Blossoms. It is a very beautiful festival, in which every man, woman and child in this fifty-mile-long garden of fruit and flowers takes part, but you cannot appreciate its true significance until you have climbed to a point on the slopes of the mountains which form the garden wall, where the whole enchanting panorama lies before you. Did you ever see one hundred and twenty-five square miles of trees and vineyards in snow-white blossom at one time? No, of course not, for nowhere else in all the world can such a sight be seen. I, who have listened to the voice of spring on five continents and in more than five-score countries, assure you that it is worth the seeing.

"Personally, I shall always think of the Santa Clara as a sleeping maiden, fragrant with perfume and intoxicatingly beautiful, lying in a carved bed formed by the mountains of Santa Cruz, curtained by fleecy clouds, her coverlet of eiderdown, tinted with rose, quilted with green, edged with yellow; her pillow the sun-kissed water of San Francisco Bay. When you come closer, however, you find that the coverlet which conceals her gracious form is in reality an expanse of fragrant blossoms; that the

NATIVE DAUGHTERS ESTABLISH SCHOLARSHIP

Y THEIR DECISION, ON THE closing day of the session, to purchase a permanent scholarship in Mills College, Oakland, the members of the Twenty-eighth Grand Parlor of the Native Daughters of the Golden West inaugurated a movement which, it is believed, will awaken new interest in the Order and will establish the Order's interest in this woman's college, the only one of its kind in the West.

This is considered the greatest piece of legislation ever enacted by a Grand Parlor, and it came at a particularly pleasing time—the closing hours of the administration of Grand President Alison F. Watt, herself a graduate of Mills and one of its staunchest supporters.

Just prior to final adjournment, P.G.P. Mariana Bertola, M.D., submitted the following, which was unanimously adopted with prolonged handclapping:

"Worthy Grand President: In honor of Grand President Alison F. Watt, resolved that the Grand Parlor, Native Daughters of the Golden West, establish a fund to be known as the Mills College Scholarship Fund; for the education of Native Daughters to be selected as per plans hereinafter to be enacted, and said fund to be in the hands of the Grand Treasurer."

Dr. Bertola started the fund with $10, and within ten minutes nearly $600 was pledged. The delegates were urged to immediately take the matter up with their several Parlors of contributing to the fund, and the responses that are sure to come from this source, as well as the additional individual contributions assured, make certain the raising of the required $5000.

According to the plans outlined, it will not be necessary for the beneficiary of this fund to take a full course at Mills. She may attend any length of time necessary to accomplish her purpose, and may also take a special course in any branch. The working provisions of the fund will provide that any worthy Native Daughter, chosen by the Grand Parlor representatives, will be privileged to perfect her education along any desired line. Upon completion of her work, another beneficiary will be chosen, and so on. In this manner, Mills College will always harbor some Native Daughter whose education is being perfected by her sisters through the scholarship fund.

The administration of the Mills Scholarship Fund will be in the hands of a committee to be named by Grand President May C. Boldemann, in addition to three members named by the Grand Parlor—Past Grand Presidents Alison F. Watt (chairman), Clara K. Wittenmeyer and Mariana Bertola, M.D.

Newly-elected Officers.

At 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon, June 13th, the following newly-elected grand officers were installed, P.G.P. Mary E. Tillman acting as mistress of ceremonies, and P.G.P. Olive Bedford-Matlock, assisted by P.G.P. Ema Gett as acting grand marshal, presiding as installing grand officer:

Grand President—May C. Boldemann, La Estrella Parlor, No. 89, San Francisco.

Grand Vice-president—Margaret Grote Hill, Alta Parlor, No. 3, San Francisco.

Grand Secretary—Alicia H. Dougherty, Angelita Parlor, No. 32, Livermore (re-elected).

Grand Treasurer—Susie K. Christ, Yosemite Parlor, No. 83, San Francisco (re-elected).

Grand Marshal—Mamie Pierce Carmichael, Vendome Parlor, No. 100, San Jose.

Grand Inside Sentinel—Dora Bloom, Sans Souci Parlor, No. 96, San Francisco.

Grand Outside Sentinel—Anna L. Lange, Argonaut Parlor, No. 166, Oakland.

Grand Organist—Julia K. Larkin, Aleli Parlor, No. 102, Salinas.

Grand Trustees (in order of vote received)—Addie L. Mosher, Piedmont Parlor, No. 87, Oakland (re-elected); May L. Williamson, Santa Cruz Parlor, No. 26, Santa Cruz; Grace Stoermer, Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124, Los Angeles; Amy McAvoy, Stirling Parlor, No. 146, Pittsburg (re-elected); Bertha A. Briggs, Copa de Oro Parlor, No. 105, Hollister; Mary L. Woods, Califia Parlor, No. 22, Sacramento; Lizzie V. Holmes, Occident Parlor, No. 28, Eureka (re-elected).

By virtue of having retired from the Grand Presidency, Alison F. Watt was installed as Past Grand President, and in behalf of the Grand Parlor was presented by P.G.P. Carrie Roesch-Durham—who has attended every Grand Parlor session and is a close personal friend of Mrs. Watt—with the San Francisco's Civic Center. The fund for this work now contains $675.77, and Subordinate Parlors are urged to send in their contributions at once, so that the memorial can be ready for the 1915 Exposition.

Margaret Grote Hill, chairman Home Productions Committee, reported that, through the Order's efforts, members are showing more interest in home products. P.G.P. Mae Wilkin supplemented the report with an appeal to the members to give preference to home-made goods, price and quality being equal, and stated that as the result of agitation by the Home Industry League, whose efforts the Order are ably seconding, many Eastern factories are establishing branch factories in California. Throughout the session, Miss Wilkin maintained an excellent exhibit of goods manufactured in California, and the delegates showed much interest in the same.

P.G.P. Eva R. Bussenius, M.D., chairman Historic Landmarks Committee, submitted an excellent report in which special tribute was paid Miss Anna I. Dempsey of Los Angeles, a former Grand Trustee, for assistance in preparing the report. She called special attention to the presentation of Bear flags to the schools by Subordinate Parlors, and urged that Parlors make special efforts along this line, so that eventually the State flag will be flying from every schoolhouse under the Stars and Stripes. She also urged that Parlors make report to the chairman of this committee, so that a record of the efforts in behalf of historic landmarks can be preserved.

P.G.P. Genevieve Watson-Baker, as chairman of the Home Committee, reported the general conditions at the Home as most gratifying; the property is free from debt, excepting for a $1000 mortgage. She urged that during the year each member put aside one cent a week for the Home; individually, this means little, but collectively it will insure great financial benefit to the Home. Taking advantage of the suggestion and the enthusiasm aroused, P.G.P. Emma G. Foley started a penny subscription, and obtained about $25 from the delegates.

P.G.P. Clara K. Wittenmeyer, as secretary of the Board of Relief, reported the donations to the Home during the year. These have been published monthly in The Grizzly Bear.

P.G.P. Carrie Roesch-Durham, chairman State of the Order Committee, reported the Order's condition, both numerically and financially, was never better.

The Central Committee on Homeless Children, which operates in conjunction with a like committee from the Native Sons, submitted a detailed report of the year's work. This report was published in the April issue of The Grizzly Bear. Mary Brusie, secretary of the Agency, supplemented the report with an address on the Agency's work, and presented the delegates with a button bearing the likeness of a little baby, with the inscription, "Don't Forget the Homeless Children." These were eagerly sought.

Resolutions Adopted.

diamond and ruby ring given to all Grand Presidents upon retirement.

Immediately upon adjournment of the Grand Parlor, the Board of Grand Trustees met and elected May L. Williamson (Santa Cruz 26) chairman and Addie L. Mosher (Piedmont 87) clerk.

Reports of Grand Officers.

Grand President Alison F. Watt's report showed that during her term 1058 new members had been enrolled, and fifty had died; three new Parlors were instituted, and two applications for charters had been refused. During the year, she visited every one of the 143 Subordinate Parlors.

Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty submitted an exhaustive report of the voluminous business transacted by her office, and gave in detail the receipts and disbursements for the year.

Grand Treasurer Susie K. Christ's report showed the condition of the several funds, with receipts and disbursements for the year June 1, 1913, to June 1, 1914, as follows:

General Fund—Receipts $12,048.01, disbursements $13,096.03; balance $2,037.62.

Caminetti Grand Parlor Death Benefit Fund—Receipts $3,940.22, disbursements (including $2000 loan) $5,341; balance $1,521.96.

Pioneer Mothers' Monument Fund—Receipts $1,564.62, paid to monument committee, $1,400; balance $164.62.

Betsy Ross Memorial Fund—Receipts $675.77, with no expenditures.

Committee Reports.

P.G.P. Clara K. Wittenmeyer, chairman of the Donner Monument Committee, reported that progress is being made in the matter of erecting a monument to the Pioneers at Donner Lake, in conjunction with the N.S.G.W.

Jennie E. Brown, chairman of the Betsy Ross Memorial Committee, reported that about $3000 will be required to erect the memorial, which will be in the shape of a monster flag-pole flying the Stars and Stripes and Bear Flag, and will be placed in

MISS GRACE STOERMER, Grand Trustee-elect.

MRS. MAMIE P. CARMICHAEL, Grand Marshal-elect.

JULY, 1864, WAS A RAINLESS month. A severe hot spell, lasting ten day, prevailed during the latter part of the month, the temperature in the interior being higher than 100° each day. The drought that prevailed had caused the Calaveras and Bear Rivers to become dry over the western ends of those streams.

The ranchers who had cut for hay the crop of wild oats that grew on their land, were reaping a big profit, one in Sonoma County making $2000 from his crop. Wild oats, like the mustangs that fed upon them, seemed to do well under any and all conditions of weather.

Drought conditions caused an advance in prices that made the wholesale value of flour in San Francisco $10 a barrel; wheat and barley were 3½ cents a pound, while potatoes and beans were quoted at 3 cents a pound. Hay was $25 a ton; hutter 42 cents a pound, and eggs 40 cents a dozen. On the other hand, while the drought had caused large losses in livestock and heavy expense to stock-raisers, beef was only 4 cents and mutton 2 cents a pound. Hogs sold wholesale at 6 cents a pound.

The Fourth of July was celebrated in all the cities and large towns in an enthusiastic manner. The procession in San Francisco was over two miles long, with all the military and civic associations in line. The Rev. Dr. Bellows was the orator.

At Sacramento, a large procession marched. Governor F. F. Low was president of the day and Col. John Van Arman the orator. Three sisters, named McClellan, who kept a millinery store, appeared in their show window dressed as red, white and blue, and stood in statuesque pose while the procession passed. They attracted the favorable attention they deserved.

At Jackson, Miss Mary Brown, on behalf of the women, presented the Home Guards a beautiful flag. One hundred and fifty sons of Italy, members of the Garibaldi Society, appeared in the procession there, wearing the Garibaldi red shirt uniform and marshalled by A. Chicizola. Judge S. W. Brockway was the orator of the day.

There were the usual number of boys burned with powder, a number of small fires from fireworks, several homicides, and some exciting incidents due to sectional feeling. At Virginia City, Mrs. Laura D. Fair, a well-known Californian, had a disturbance over the placing of an American flag that caused considerable newspaper comment.

Stockton Raises Big Fund.

At Sacramento, there was a sensational row between two families, occupying apartments in the same house, from the placing of an American flag over the doorway used by both. It started between the women heads of the families, then involved the men, and finally extended to the neighbors, ending in the raising of a large flag on a pole over the house.

In many towns everything was done to aid the Sanitary Fund, and a large sum of money was contributed. Among the towns materially aiding this cause with their celebrations were Mokelumne Hill $1100, Jackson $1050, Lincoln $400, North San Juan $1000, Placerville $1600, Napa $6000, and Vallejo $1200.

Stockton had the largest Sanitary Fund celebration in the State. There were contributed, to be sold at auction by the committee, a Durbam bull, a load of hay, a sewing machine, a mammoth cake, half a dozen town lots by Captain Weber, and a silk quilt by Mrs. E. F. Hutchinson. The quilt is described as an article of great beauty and value. It was made in 1857 by the donor and exhibited at the State Fair, where it was given first premium and high praise as a sample of the best needlework. In the center was the American flag surrounded by the flags of all nations worked in their proper colors. It was proposed to present the quilt to President Lincoln, by the citizens of Stockton contributing $1 each to the Sanitary Fund, and the total amount subscribed to be its purchase price. The total amount realized for the Fund from all sources at Stockton was $10,858.

In addition to these funds, the Sanitary Commissioners received a donation of 200 barrels of molasses from a sugar planter named Makee, on the Hawaiian Islands. The auction sales of these barrels amounted to over $4000. The employees of the Gould & Curry mine sent to the Sanitary Fund a silver brick weighing over 200 pounds, and valued at $4,232.

Thos. Lardner, at Markleville, had his left arm, below the elbow, blown off by the premature discharge of a cannon.

Charles Plumb, a young printer, while dancing at a Fourth of July ball near Carson City, kissed his partner as the dance ended. The young woman's brother, named Ferguson, saw the act and plunged a knife into Plumb's side, killing him instantly.

What Was Doing IN CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

(THOMAS R. JONES, SACRAMENTO.)

Rivalry Between River Boats.

George Selby, a farmer living twelve miles from Sacramento, while asleep in bed with his wife on one side and a little son on the other, at 2 a. m. July 5th, was shot through the eye and killed. Although there were more than a dozen persons sleeping in the house and on the premises no one saw the murderer come or go. It was a very mysterious crime. Finally his brother-in-law, C. J. Farley, was arrested on circumstantial evidence and charged with the crime.

On July 26th two Irishmen, named Dalton and Morrissey, quarreled at Moore's Flat and decided to settle who was the best man according to the rules of the London prize ring. Around the ring gathered nearly the entire population, and with bare knuckles the men fought five rounds. Dalton won on a foul.

On July 1st there was a collision at Benicia wharf between the rival steamboats "Yosemite" and "Washoe." According to the statement of each captain, his boat was standing still when the other struck it. The "Washoe" received the most damage and was disabled several days. John Lehren, a passenger on the "Washoe," had a leg cut off and afterwards died from the injury. An investigation was under way to locate the blame, but was not ended during the month.

For several days, beginning on the 15th, there was a series of races between the "Chrysopolis" of the regular line and the "Washoe" of the opposition. One peculiar thing in this racing was the fact that neither boat could pass the other on the Sacramento River between Sacramento and Rio Vista, therefore, whatever could be gained in speed as an advantage had to be obtained between Benicia and San Francisco. In the first race, both left Sacramento at noon, the "Washoe" ahead, but it had to make a stop at Benicia and the "Chrysopolis" beat it sixteen minutes to San Francisco, making the run in 7 hours and 41 minutes. Subsequently, the "Chrysopolis" made the run in 7 hours and 17 minutes. Large crowds gathered at the wharves to see the steamers depart, but it soon developed that, while the public took a deep interest in the racing, they were afraid to ride on either boat. A falling off in travel caused peace to be declared and a change of time in the departure of each steamer that stopped the racing.

Iowa Hill had a number of dwellings burned on July 28th, and the business section of the town had a narrow escape from destruction.

Nothing Decisive in Civil War.

On July 25th, at a place fourteen miles from Aurora, near the California line, a clondburst occurred. A. W. Gleason with his son, wife and three children, P. H. Medley and his wife, and George Weston, enroute in a four-horse stage from Aurora to Bridgeport to attend a ball, were going up a canyon when a wall of water ten feet high suddenly struck them. The vehicle and the horses were carried over a half-mile, while the occupants of the stage were washed down the stream several miles. The two women and three children were drowned. All the men were found badly injured, but alive, at different places down the canyon, and recovered from their injuries.

There was a railroad war of stalwart proportions in Placer County for a few days. J. P. Robinson had purchased the rails and ties from Folsom to Auburn Junction, and proceeded to take them up to use in extending the Sacramento Valley railroad from Folsom to Latrobe. G. Griffith, who had opened a granite quarry near Auburn Junction, sued out an injunction at Auburn to prevent the railroad being taken up. The sheriff, on serving the injunction, was given the ha ha and no attention paid to it. Sheriff Sexton then called out the militia, and a detachment of the Auburn Grays, composed of fifteen or twenty men, marched to the field of action. They were met with derision and resistance by the seventy-five or more men employed by Robinson. There was a fight, resulting in one man being shot through the ear, another receiving a bayonet thrust in the thigh, and about thirty men being escorted to Auburn jail by the soldiers. The controversy then went into the courts for a settlement.

The San Francisco Pioneers, at their annual election this month, selected Joseph W. Winans as president; S. J. Field, J. E. De La Montanya, James Lick, James Anthony and P. B. Reading, vice-presidents. The society owned real estate valued at $35,000.

In the Civil War, the Army of the Potomac, under General U. S. Grant, was still facing the Army of Virginia in front of Petersburg and Richmond; General Sherman was surrounding Atlanta. There were several severe engagements during the month, but no decisive results that could give the California Union men an opportunity to fire salutes and fireworks, and parade. A Confederate raid through Northern Virginia and Maryland, and a guerilla raid in Kentucky, created some excitement, but no lasting effect.

General Irwin McDowell, of Bull Run fame, took charge as commander of the Pacific Coast Department, with headquarters in San Francisco. During the month, with Governor Low and other officials, he made an inspection of the harbor defenses of San Francisco. Much activity was manifested during the month in the arrest of editors and prominent citizens for treasonable utterances and a score of citizens were compelled on this account to make a visit and an undesired stay at Fort Alcatraz.

Work on the Monitor "Comanche," intended as a defense for San Francisco harbor, was actively begun this month, but as the pirate "Alabama" was at the bottom of the sea, the former anxiety for this defense had subsided.

Governor Low, P. H. Sibley and Joseph Johnson were named by President Lincoln as commissioners to inspect and accept the three miles of road built by the Central Pacific railroad, on which the United States Government was to pay a subsidy.

Calistoga Gains Prominence.

Lead, silver and copper deposits were found on the Catalina Islands, and mining interests on that isle were attracting attention.

The Packer Claim, at Smith Flat, Sierra County, found a quartz boulder weighing twenty-five pounds that yielded $4075 in gold.

A nugget, weighing nearly nine pounds and worth $1770, was found by the Hope & Despair Co. at Florida House, in Sierra County.

A coal vein was reported found at Santa Ana, then in Los Angeles County, and a supply of commercial coal was expected to be mined and marketed from it.

A man named Kellar, in Los Angeles County, was reported as having raised thirty-five acres of cotton and twelve acres of tobacco this season.

Calistoga was now a town of much prominence and a Saratoga reputation as a watering place. Several stage lines carried the people there through Napa Valley, and a daily list of arrivals was telegraphed to and published in the San Francisco dailies. Several hundred visitors were there daily during the month. San Francisco society people were largely in evidence at the springs. On July 4th a celebration was held. General John A. Sutter was president of the day and Jos. W. Winans the orator.

The Rev. Horatio Stebbins, of Portland, Maine, was selected to be the permanent pastor of the Unitarian Association of San Francisco, as the successor of the lamented Rev. T. Starr King. Dr. Bellows, temporarily filling the pulpit, had decided to return to New York.

James Collins, County Treasurer of Nevada County, Brigadier General of the California militia and a prominent public citizen, was found dead in his front yard from a stroke of apoplexy on July 18th. He had served with distinction through the Mexican War and his death was greatly deplored by the whole State.

An enterprising goat herder of Tuolumne County drove a flock of 130 nannie goats to Virginia City, where they were sold to people who preferred goat's milk to the dairy article they were being supplied with. He averaged a price of $12 a nannie.

A boy named Weber, in Rodeo Valley, Contra Costa County, was kicked on the chin by a horse. His mouth was partly open with his tongue between his teeth. The kick drove his lower jaw with such force against his upper jaw, he bit off the end of his tongue. A surgeon, quickly found, sewed the pieces together and they healed so that the tongue was not permanently injured.

Mysterious Sound Worries Indians.

A boy named Osio, while fishing from a wharf at Monterey, tied the end of his fishing line around his waist. A large shark seized his baited hook and pulled him off the wharf into the bay and was towing him out to sea when a Portuguese fisherman rescued him.

Two anglers in Indian Valley, Plumas County, on a fork of the Feather River, caught one hundred pounds of trout in two hours. Some of the trout weighed four pounds each.

A grizzly bear, weighing 1000 pounds, was killed on the Merced River, and another was killed in

OAKLAND PROVIDES FINE ENTERTAINMENT FOR DAUGHTERS

OAKLAND NATIVE DAUGHTERS were highly commended for the manner in which the Twenty-eighth Grand Parlor was entertained in that city, June 8th to 14th. Every one of the many features was well managed, and the arrangements committee was ever on the alert to see that the guests were well provided for.

Special praise was heard on all sides for the beautiful decorations in the hall at Scottish Rite Cathedral, where the sessions of the Grand Parlor were held. Flowers and greenery were used in abundance, and the American and Bear Flags were much in evidence.

A reception committee met every incoming train of June 8th, and escorted the visitors to headquarters in Hotel Oakland. Here they were assigned to quarters, after which each was presented with an envelope containing tickets of admission to all the entertainment features, and a neat badge. A pleasing novelty in this latter was a Bear Flag N.D.G.W. pin which the recipient can wear at all times.

Public Reception.

Monday evening a public reception was tendered the members of the Grand Parlor at the Chamber of Commerce. Sarah G. Sanborn called the assemblage to order, and after a selection by Fruitvale Parlor, N.S.G.W., band, introduced J. J. McElroy of Piedmont Parlor, N.S.G.W., as chairman of the evening. Addresses were made by Grand President Alison F. Watt, Louis H. Mooser, Grand President, N.S.G.W., P.G.P. Clara K. Wittenmyer, Congressman Joseph R. Knowland, P.G.P., N.S.G.W., and Mayor Frank K. Mott, member of Oakland Parlor, N.S.G.W.

Previous to the reception, there was a parade in which many of the Oakland Parlor of Native Sons and Native Daughters participated in uniform, and escorted by their own bands. Heading the parade were automobiles containing the Grand Officers, Past Grand Presidents, and speakers of the evening.

Grand Ball.

Tuesday evening a grand ball was held in the Oakland Hotel ballroom, and it proved a most delightful social function. The grand march was led by Mrs. Alison F. Watt and Louis H. Mooser, Grand Presidents, respectively, of the N.D.G.W. and N.S.G.W. Many members of the Oakland Parlor of Native Sons accepted the committee's invitation to come to the ball unattended, and saw to it that the Grand Parlor members did not lack dancing partners. Tillie Frick was the floor manager and was assisted by several local Native Sons and Native Daughters.

Mills College Visited.

Wednesday afternoon was spent at Mills College as guests of the faculty. The Grand Parlor members assembled in Lissner Hall, where P.G.P. Mariana Bertola, M.D. presided. Grand President Alison F. Watt, after extolling the life and character of Mrs. Susan Mills, presented an engrossed copy of resolutions adopted by the Grand Parlor.

Dr. Luella Clay Carson, retiring president of the RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED TO MILLS COLLEGE BY N.D.G.W.

"Happy are those whom the Master finds waiting for Him, and who, when He calls, pass gently away."

Whereas, To the hearts of many of California's women, there came a message of grief and sorrow when, on December 12, 1912, our dearly beloved teacher and friend, Mrs. Susan Lincoln Mills, passed into "that perfect presence of His face," and quietly and sweetly passed into Rest. And

Whereas, The number to whom she had ever been counselor and guide, is known only to Him in Whom she had unflinching trust;

Therefore, in loving memory of Mrs. Susan Lincoln Mills, founder of the only chartered college for women west of the Rocky Mountains, and whose name it is our privilege to have inscribed on our Roll of Honor, we tender these resolutions of respect.

Be it resolved, That in the loss of the personal and loving influence of this remarkable woman, who for nearly half a century conscientiously and devotedly gave heart and life to the cause of higher education, and character building of the young women of California, that in such loss, our State is deprived of its oldest pioneer woman educator, and her death we deeply deplore.

Resolved further, That, when this Twenty-seventh Session of the Grand Parlor, N.D.G.W., adjourn, we adjourn in memory of the late Mrs. Susan Lincoln Mills, President Emerita of Mills College, California.

Be it further resolved, That these resolutions be spread in full in the Records of this Grand Parlor, and a copy thereof be sent to President Luella C. Carson of Mills College.

Lovingly submitted in P. D. F. A., college, in accepting the resolutions for the college, thanked the Native Daughters for their interest in the institution, and invited them to inspect the buildings and grounds.

Grand Trustee Addie Mosher, in behalf of the Oakland Native Daughters, presented to the college a handsome Bear flag. Adjournment was then taken to the campus where, during the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner," the flag was hoisted to the breeze. Dr. Carson and Grand President Watt here made appropriate addresses, the latter closing her remarks with the following lines:

"Dear, dear to every patriot's pride,

Our country's colors are;

We love each stripe, by battle dyed,

We prize each shining star.

But blame us not if from its place,

A Specialty for Every Month.

"Sentimentally and commercially, it is fitting that the people of the Santa Clara Valley should celebrate the coming of the blossoms, for they are at once its chief beauty and its chief wealth. In a single season these white and fragrant blossoms have provided the breakfast tables of the world with 130,000,000 pounds of prunes, to say nothing of those luscious apricots, peaches, pears and cherries which beckon temptingly from grocer's windows and hotel buffets from Salt Lake City around to Shanghai. No other single fruit of any region, not even the fig of Smyrna, the date of Tunis, the olive of Spain, or the currant of Greece, is so widely distributed as the prune of the Santa Clara Valley. The people of the valley will tell you that there are something over one hundred square miles of land in the valley planted to prunes, and that there are more prune trees in that area than there are people in all the New England States put together.

"Ceres makes her annual appearance in February with artichokes, the ones that are priced at a dollar a portion on the menus of New York's fashionable hotels; in March, the people of the valley are having spring peas with their lamb chops; April brings strawberries; in May, the cherry-pickers are at work; the local churches hold peaches-and-cream sociables in June; by the ides of July the valley roads are alive with teams hauling cases of pears, plums and apricots to the railway stations; August, being the month of PRUNES, is marked with red on the Santa Clara calednars; September finds the presses working overtime turning grapes into wine; in October the men are at work in the orchards picking apples, and the women are at work in the kitchens baking apple pies; the huge English walnuts which wind up dinners half the world around are harvested in November; while in December and January the prodigal goddess interrupts her bounty just long enough to let the fortunate worshipers at her shrine observe the midwinter holidays. After such a recital it needs no saying that the valley boasts both the largest fruit drying houses and the largest fruit canneries in the world."

A beautiful tribute to a beautiful valley!

Many Attractions.

Some of the attractions for visitors, in and around San Jose, may be summed up as follows:

Lick Observatory, on Mount Hamilton, 4209 feet elevation, twenty-five miles from San Jose over a beautiful roadway built by James Lick, who also endowed the Observatory; daily stage or automobile; luncheon served at Smith's Creek.

A trip around the loop—Congress Springs, Saratoga, Los Gatos, Campbell and San Jose—a beautiful electric trip of thirty miles.

Site of Santa Clara Mission and original cross planted in 1777, located at Santa Clara, on car line from San Jose; easy of access.

Alum Rock Park and orchards, through the eastern foothills.

The Blossom Route includes a trip through the western part of the valley and through Los Altos, Monte Vista, Stanford University and Palo Alto.

San Jose Country Club and golf links, at Linda Vista. The new San Jose Golf and Country Club, built during 1912, located in the Linda Vista district among the eastern foothills, is considered one of the best in the West. Here golf or tennis may be enjoyed throughout the year. It occupies sixty acres, and is a leading feature of attraction to tourists, travelers, and the local citizens.

Almaden mines, the famous quicksilver mines of California.

Luna Park, for general amusement and baseball; on car line.

Lomas Asules and Evergreen, a beautiful trip to the eastern foothills.

Alviso, eight miles to the north, for boating, fishing and duck hunting.

Edenvale, place of beautiful homes and fine orchards; south of San Jose.

Berryessa drive to the northeast.

Santa Cruz Big Trees, twenty-seven miles from San Jose.

California Redwood Park, a State park about twenty-five miles from San Jose and at present visited by way of Boulder Creek; immense redwoods. The State has appropriated $70,000 to build a scenic roadway into the park from the summit.

St. James Park, located in the center of San Jose.

Gilroy Hot Springs, near Gilroy, on the mainline Monterey road, south from San Jose, is well worth the trip; stages meet the trains.

A trip to Uvas, on the Llagas, in the mountains back of Morgan Hill and Madrone, is a very pretty mountain drive.

Educational buildings—State normal school, high school, Carnegie library, Stanford University at Palo Alto, and many grammar schools.

Public buildings—County Court House, Hall of Records, Hall of Justice, City Hall, Post Office, and many bank buildings from the tops of which one may have a fine view of the valley. San Jose also has many beautiful and new school and church buildings which are a credit to the city.

Ideal Suburban Conditions.

The city is beautifully decorated with shade trees and palms, and there are miles of well-graded streets. The amusements in the city, theatres and otherwise, are equal to the requirements.

Throughout the county our roads are good, and this section has become a paradise for motorists. Six hundred miles of road are sprinkled during the summer months, and we have 1000 miles in all, some of which extend to the secluded recesses of the mountain wilds, and are weird, though picturesque, in every detail.

The area of Santa Clara County is 1355 square miles, or 867,200 acres. Acres assessed, 727,905; 8,000,000 fruit trees; 53,000 acres planted to prunes; 7,000 acres planted to seeds.

A visit to each of the cities and towns of the valley will prove interesting, as all have a distinctive feature, and a trip to every part will be enjoyed. Following is the list: Mountain View, Campbell, Sunnyvale, Morgan Hill, Mayfield, Saratoga, Los Altos, Cupertino, Monte Vista, Coyote, Alviso, Milpitas, Wrights, Alma, San Martin, Almaden, Edenvale, Madrone, Evergreen, Berryessa and Linda Vista District.

Many people are securing homes throughout the foothills and valley on small acreages which offer inducements for intensive cultivation. Imagine a little home amid the foothills, all surrounded by orchards, with telephone and electric light connections; in fact, all of the comforts of the city, away from the noise and strife of the larger cities. The air you breathe is not contaminated with ill-smelling odors, it is pure and wholesome, and the water you drink is clear and refreshing. The electric car line within a stone's throw of your house transports you to the great metropolis, San Francisco, or to San Jose and the many pretty towns and cities throughout the valley and the peninsula.

We hope soon to have the Key Route and the Southern Pacific electric extended to San Jose, so that Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley will be, in reality, close neighbors. The electric systems are fast bringing the city to the country and the country to the city, improving living conditions, all of which may be obtained in Santa Clara Valley. The San Jose Terminal Railway has secured a franchise and expects to finish building inside the San Jose city limits by January 1, 1915. This road will connect at Alviso with water transportation to San Francisco and Oakland.

A JOURNEY ACROSS THE PLAINS IN 1849

(By PROF. F. M. LANE, Vice-president Fresno Parlor, N.S.G.W., and one of the Moving Spirits in Fresno's Raisin Day Festival.)

Fresno, the home of the grape, celebrated "Raisin Day," April 30th, with an elaborate pageant at Roeding Park that drew thousands of people from all the surrounding country. There was a parade through the streets, Grand Trustee W. F. Toomey of Fresno Parlor, N.S.G.W., acting as marshal. The Native Sons and Native Daughters had four attractive floats—two prairie schooners, stage coach, and a settlers' wagon.

At Roeding Park, a pantomime, divided into two parts, historic and modern, depicted a distinct stage in the history of the San Joaquin Valley. The fourth epoch, American occupation (the forty-niners) was enacted in a realistic manner by the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Fresno.

The pageant was, in every respect, most successful, and was true to the great growth of the San Joaquin Valley and its metropolis, Fresno. As usual, the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the "Raisin City" were in the forefront, and their efforts contributed in no small measure to the success of the occasion.—Editor.

HILE, DURING THE YEARS JUST preceding the memorable "1849," the methods of circulating news in the western part of the United States were crude and irregular, yet the tales of the "Far West" that had been scattered throughout the settlements in the states on either side of the Mississippi River, had aroused the curiosity of the people and stimulated in them an intense yearning to see the unknown lands. A few people had traveled to the westward, and a few more were to follow. But, when the story of the finding of gold became known, the yearning became an unquenchable desire; and, when gold dust and gold nuggets were actually received, the fever of excitement knew no bounds.

California immediately became a huge magnet, irresistibly drawing men to itself from every quarter of the globe. "Hurrah for California!" was the cry that roused the restless spirit in thousands. Then followed the active preparations for the journey. Hither came that wondrous army of argonauts, containing much of the best spirit of the East and the flower of the West. They came—young, active, vigorous, brave and ambitious. Through the day they saw visions, and during the night dreamed rare and opalescent dreams—visions and dreams that were more extravagant than the fabulous tales of the "Arabian Nights."

The dangers and barriers that beset the travelers

FRESNO'S NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE DAUGHTERS ON ROEDING GREEN.

The above picture represents the fourth epoch in the history of the San Joaquin Valley—the American occupation—and was enacted by members of Fresno Parlor, No. 25, N. S. G. W. The synopsis of the pageant, referring to this epoch, said:

"Slowly along the road comes the prairie schooners, bringing the first of the Americans to California. Watch the figures skulking in the woods; they are Indians, who rush to attack the settlers. Help is near, for the cowboys come galloping across the open to the rescue; a fight ensues; victory is doubtful, but in the end the cowboys are the winners and the Indians are repulsed."

were numerous. There were rivers to ford, mountains to climb, deserts to cross, wild animals to meet, and Indians to fight. These dangers, coupled with the ordinary difficulties of procuring food and water for man and beast in a new country and traversing an unbeaten path, were surely obstacles without parallel, even for the bravest. To insure greater safety, it became necessary to travel together; sometimes as many as 150 persons with forty wagons and a requisite number of oxen, mules and horses would form a caravan or train.

On May 7, 1849, such a party left Fort Smith, Arkansas, bound for Sacramento, California. There were eighty-one persons in this group, fifty married men and women, eighteen unmarried men and women, and thirteen children. The equipage consisted of twenty-one prairie schooners, one hundred and eight oxen, twenty-two milch cows, twelve horses and mules, twenty dogs, one hundred chickens. A member of the party, held in esteem and admiration by everyone, was chosen leader; another person who had had experience in traveling across the plains and was familiar with the trails and routes, was made scout or pilot; and the famous Kit Carson accompanied the party as far as Santa Fe, New Mexico. The course to California was the old Santa Fe trail along the Red River to Northern Texas, through New Mexico, the western part of Colorado, into Utah, through Salt Lake City, over the alkali plains of Nevada.

The journey was not without incidents, disappointments and sorrows. There were also various phenomena which surprised the individuals and held the mind in awe and wonderment. The funeral ceremony of an advance train was plainly visible one day; but two days elapsed ere the lonely grave near the roadside was passed. To many of the party the mirage of the desert had previously been unknown. A drove of buffaloes crossed the path and the train was delayed one day while the countless bison of the plain moved on.

While the counsel of Kit Carson was heeded, the attacks of the Indians were successfully repelled. But on one occasion the usual precautions were neglected, and five of the party were killed in an engagement with the red men of the plains. As a solemn reminder of the fierceness of the Indians, the wagons of an unfortunate train were found. On the trail the bodies of the men who had been slain by the Indians were found, but the oxen, horses and all the loot that could be taken were gone.

At Salt Lake City, seven wagons and twenty-five people left the train. The dangers and uncertainties of the desert were the prevailing reasons for not proceeding further. As the train moved westward, each morning the members of the party looked with expectancy for some new scene, some exciting event, some phenomenon of nature. Each morning everything was loaded on wagons, chickens were fastened in their coops and fed, the cows were milked, the milk strained into vessels that jostled along, splashing and churning the milk within. At nightfall, when the train halted, each milk vessel contained a huge lump of butter.

While the train was crossing the alkali wastes of Nevada, the water supply was exhausted. Save for what little was carried in the limited number of water vessels, there was no water for three days. The rations of water were reduced to a pint a day for adults and a half-pint for children. Someone suggested leaving the children; but wiser counsel prevailed. On the morning of the fourth day, when

STAGE COACH THAT CROSSED THE PLAINS IN EARLY DAYS.

The above picture shows the Pioneers crossing the plains in the early days in an old stage coach, and the United States mail carrier who, on the occasion of Fresno's Raisin Day Festival, May 30th, in his wild dash across the plains to escape the Indians, met Governor Hiram W. Johnson on the way and presented him with two beautiful silk flags—American and Bear—which he waved to and fro and then planted in the lawn, where they remained throughout the program.

The stage coach pictured herein is one used in carrying mail and passengers over the old trails in early days, and is the property of Fresno Parlor, No. 25, N. S. G. W., having been generously donated to it by Brothers Grover and Tom Hill of the Parlor. The Parlor will introduce this as a feature in the Admission Day parade at San Francisco in 1915.

GRAND PRESIDENT N. D. G. W. EXPRESSES GREAT LOVE FOR NATIVE STATE

(Report of Grand President ALISON F. WATT, to the Twenty-eighth Grand Parlor, N.D.G.W., at Oakland, June 9, 1914.)

"Our father's God from out Whose hand
The centuries fall like grains of sand,
We meet today, united, free,
And loyal to our land and Thee
We thank Thee for the era done,
And trust Thee for the opening one."

OF THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS of the Grand Parlor, Native Daughters of the Golden West: Another page in the history of our Order has been written—another year of earnest effort and faithful work for the betterment and interests of our Fraternity has been granted. When last year, among the grandeur and wonders of the mountains, I assumed the chair of our beloved Order, if prayers and loving thoughts were all that were necessary to make the year a wonderful success, my official life would have been "one grand, sweet song."

Stevenson says, "To travel hopefully is better than to arrive." Not so with your Grand President. No matter under what conditions, no matter what the time and hour of arrival, there were ever the word of greeting, the hand-clasp of true friendship and good fellowship, and a hearty welcome from the members of our Fraternity. After ten months of official visiting and mingling with thousands of Native Daughters, I would share with you, if I could, the honors, the pleasures, and the happiness that have been mine as the representative of our Order. It has been a year of associations with our members—one full of happiness, and one that has taught me much of our State's history.

California's incomparable beauty has been impressed on me at every visit made. No part of our wonderful land but has beauties peculiarly its own. No Parlor exists but can find in its local history interesting records of pioneer days. As has been written of our California by one of the latest historians of our State: "All who love her, all who are tied to her by bonds of nativity or habitation, all who have seen her charms, should know her history—not tales of fairyland, but the truth, which is far more interesting."

Especially interesting to the Grand President during the visits to different Parlors were the curios and the unique features of different localities—an altar, a stump of wood cut from some forest monarch; a gavel of carved ivory from Alaska; a piece of old mahogany, a relic of Pioneer California days; the first log cabin built in Truckee, owned and remodeled by the Parlor of Native Sons, now used as a meeting place; the old Custom House at Monterey, used as Parlor hall, and regarded with pride by every Native Son and Native Daughter.

There has been no call on the contingent fund of $150, for special interests. The Grand President was much interested in the old St. Ann's Church at Columbia. While there, a proposition was made to the Native Daughters that if they would make a beginning toward a fund for the restoration or purchase of that old church, once the mecca of so many early Californians, the Grand President would try to do something to assist. Nothing has been reported so far, but it is the duty of our Fraternities to keep from further decay, if possible, these historic places of our pioneer days.

While I have not a long list of new Parlors to my credit, the three Parlors that have been instituted comprise a membership, the personnel of which our Order can welcome with pride and feel that they are established on a firm basis. They are Parlors that are constantly growing, and adding good material to their membership. I have visited every Parlor in good standing, making in all a total of 143 visits. The Order is constantly increasing in membership, and during the year 1058 candidates have been initiated.

Into many Parlors the Angel of Death has entered, and since our last Grand Parlor session, fifty members have answered the final roll-call. Many hearts have been saddened, many homes made desolate. Think ye, we can forget those, who a few short months ago were with us, but who now in peace, serenely sleep the "Sleep that knows no waking?" Ah! no. Tenderly, yes, lovingly, today we pay our tribute of remembrance. Heaven will be nearer and more beautiful, more to be desired, because of the entrance to its shining portals of our loved ones. As stays the odor of the fragrant and beautiful flowers after the exquisite bloom has departed, so with us will remain in memories sweet and associations never to be forgotten the interest and charm of our absent sisterhood.

I would suggest that more floor work be introduced into our Ritual. Other fraternities attract by their marches, drills and tableaux. Our Order should keep abreast of the times in all things, and seek and favor added improvements to our ritualistic work. Two applications for charters have been refused. One was from San Francisco, where application was made by phone. The other was received in regular form, signed by twenty-five applicants in Stockton.

Our real victories or our failures at this session will be determined not by the difficulties of the tasks that will come before us, but by the spirit with which we take hold—the spirit with which we meet the situation and set about the task.

Oakland, City Beautiful of the Emerald, has welcomed us with hearts and hands. She has extended to our Order the greeting. May our session be one that will reflect pride upon our Order—

"Where every thought and every deed,
May hold within itself the seed
Of future good and future need."

One that will go down in history, as did that of last year, a session of the Grand Parlor where "gently and without grief, the old shall glide into the new." Then Oakland, too, will speak with honor and commendation of our Order and its members.

THANKS.

Humbly do we express thanks to our Heavenly Father, in whose keeping and loving care we have been throughout the year; to Him Who gave us strength and health, and the will to meet all duties that were ours.

To those in the official offices of the Order—the Grand Secretary, Alice H. Dougherty, the Grand Treasurer, Susie K. Christ and Assistant Secretary, Louise M. Burridge—the Grand President, for many favors, kindly acts and courtesies that have made the associations of the year harmonious and a happy remembrance, is greatly indebted.

To my own "home county," Nevada—its Parlors, its people, my friends—whose name has been my "open sesame" throughout the year for their loyalty, support and unceasing interest, the Grand President lovingly and truly says to each one, "I thank you."

To all the Past Grand Presidents and those whose aid and counsel have been given freely and lovingly, where'er asked, and to those who have entertained and extended the hospitality of their homes so generously, the Grand President expresses her sincere appreciation.

For every loyal wish and message of affection, for letters of friendship and exquisite and beautiful gifts that have been showered on your Grand President, there is cherished and remembered not only the happiness and pleasure of receiving, but also the loving thoughts that prompted the gifts and expressions of good will, that in my memory will rest hidden away against the day when Time bids me cease wandering in the land of my heart's choice, my own beloved California.

To my successor, my loyalty and assistance are pledged and the benefit, if needed, of my year's experience. Dear Sister Boldemann:

"With love of home and friends to twine about you,
May your year start,
Blue skies to cheer and Peace of God to guide you,
Oh, faithful heart."

And now, dear sisters, my year as Grand President is over. The time has come when, "weighed in the balance" as a Native Daughter, I am judged by you, whether my term as Chief Executive of our Order has been productive of good or a failure. The promise made at last Grand Parlor has been fulfilled, and every effort for the Order has been loyal, faithful and sincere. Whatever the verdict may be, by your part in the year's experience, my life has been made happier and broader and your Grand President a stronger, better woman.

May our session be a pleasant one, conducted with Forbearance, Love and Charity. Thou Who has all in Thy keeping, be with us and grant us Thy blessing and

"Beneath our Western skies fulfill,
The Orient's message of Good Will,
And freighted with Love's Golden Fleece,
Send back the Argonauts of Peace."

WOULD HAVE CANAL EXHIBIT AT EXPOSITION

Grand First Vice-president John F. Davis is in receipt of a letter from a member of Excelsior Parlor, No. 31, N.S.G.W., who has been for several years in charge of a section in the work of building the Panama Canal, E. G. Turner, who is an enthusiastic Native Son, and has never lost his keen interest in the Order.

Mr. Turner makes the practical suggestion that some sort of a demonstration shall be made by Californians connected with the practical work of construction at the completion thereof. Mr. Davis is anxious to receive suggestions in connection with this letter, and we have prevailed upon him to allow The Grizzly Bear to publish the letter, and invite from members of the Order answers thereto, all of which should be addressed to John F. Davis, 1404 Humboldt Savings Bank Building, San Francisco, California.

The following is a copy of this most interesting letter:

"Cristobal, C. Z.,
"May 24, 1914.

"Hon. J. F. Davis,
"Dear Friend:

"It has been some time since I heard from you. We are fast completing the Canal. I am Captain of one of the big dredges in Culebra Cut. They are passing freight barges through the Canal now, and it will soon be open for commerce.

"In regard to the Californians who have worked here for years, like myself, to dig this big ditch, and as the Exposition will be held in San Francisco, let us make some proper demonstration. I am ready, with time and money, to help the thing along. And as you will be Grand President at that time, anything that you may recommend I will be willing to shove through from this end.

"Now, 'Old Sport,' get right in and whoop the thing up. Now, if you think it worth while, I will hunt up every N.S.G.W. on the Isthmus and drag him into line and we could bring quite an exhibit of old junk of all kinds.

"Hoping that yourself and family are well, I remain,

"Yours respectfully,
"E. G. TURNER.

RESEARCH WORKER SAVED.

Among the rescued passengers of the "Empress of Ireland," which recently met with disaster, was Gordon C. Davidson, Native Sons' Traveling Fellow in Pacific Coast History for the University of California.

Mr. Davidson was on his way to London to engage in historical research work in the archives at that city, in gathering data bearing on the early operations of the Hudson Bay Company in California.

There is a considerable amount of yew in California, and makers of bows are seeking material there for archery sets.

MAGNIFICENT N. S. G. W. HALL FOR SAN JOSE

Members of the Native Sons of the Golden West in San Jose are desirous of having their own home, and have purchased a lot upon which it is proposed to erect a magnificent structure.

While the building will be of benefit to the Parlor, it is to be erected as a memorial to the Pioneers, and the project has been endorsed by the Grand Parlor of both the N. S. G. W. and N. D. G. W.

This is a big undertaking, and to aid them in their laudable endeavors, the Native Sons of San Jose ask the assistance of all their brothers throughout the State.

To secure this assistance, they have arranged an elaborate Fourth of July celebration, on which occasion ground will be broken for another Native Sons' building—something which should be in every city of the State, and in the erection of which every Native Son should be glad to assist.

San Jose's Native Sons have always responded to every call of the Order, no matter whence it came, and their incentive for the coming celebration deserves, and surely will receive, reciprocal encouragement.

Let every Native Son who possibly can, be in San Jose on the 3rd, 4th and 5th of this month, to celebrate the Nation's birthday, and to give encouragement to their brothers in their efforts to erect a hall that will reflect credit on the entire Order.—Editor.

BUSINESS STREET IN SAN JOSE.
ARROW SHOWS WHERE NEW N.S.G.W. HALL WILL BE BUILT.

KEEPING IN LINE WITH THE progress of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, the San Jose Parlor has decided to erect a five-story and roof garden class A building on their recently-acquired North First street property.

The estimated cost of this building will be about $100,000. The directing of the work will be in the hands of the Native Sons' Hall Association. With the exception of one in San Francisco, this building will be the most-modern and best-furnished fraternal edifice owned by any Parlor of Native Sons.

According to the design submitted, the lower floor is to contain stores, the second floor offices for professional tenants, and the third and fourth floors will be used for lodge-room purposes. The fifth floor is to be the hall room, or assembly hall, and is to be fitted with maple floor, stage sufficiently large to carry on theatricals, cloak-rooms, and everything possible, to the most minute details, to make this floor one of the most-talked-of feature.

From this floor will extend a wide staircase leading to the roof garden or open air dance pavilion, which will have pergolas entirely around the four sides, and which are to be covered with twining vines and blooming hushes. It is also to be fitted with buffet kitchen where, in the summer, refreshments may be served without going downstairs.

To create enthusiasm among the members of the Order so that the erection of this building would be possible, the Hall Association decided to conduct a Fourth of July celebration and to extend invitations to every Parlor in the Native Sons to spend the 3rd, 4th and 5th with their San Jose brothers. For this purpose, a celebration committee was organized with a membership of two hundred and selected as their Director General, Howell D. Melvin.

This celebration was unanimously endorsed by the Native Sons Grand Parlor held in Los Angeles in April, and by the Native Daughters Grand Parlor which convened in Oakland on June 9th.

The officers of the Fourth of July Celebration Committee are: Howell D. Melvin, chairman; T. R. Dougherty, vice-chairman; Arthur B. Langford, treasurer; H. R. Tripp, secretary; W. H. McComas, assistant secretary. Members of the sub-committees in charge of the various details include:

VALLEJO GETTING READY FOR ADMISSION DAY

Vallejo—Arrangements for the Admission Day celebration, to be held here September 9th, are going on apace under the direction of a large and enthusiastic committee from Vallejo Parlor, No. 77, N.S.G.W.

The finance committee has been interviewing the merchants the past month, and from the ready and liberal responses met with, it is certain the coming celebration will be the greatest ever held.

Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters from all over the State have engaged headquarters for the occasion, and reports received by the local committee are to the effect that there will be thousands of visitors here to join in the celebration of the State's natal day.

Vallejo is capable of providing ample accommodations for a large crowd, so that those contemplating participating in the September 9th festivities need have no fear on this score.

The finance committee is expected to conclude its labors shortly, and then the committee will arrange the program, provide for the street decorations, and perfect other details.

ENTERTAINS NEWLYWEDS; PRESENTS FLAG TO SCHOOL.

Martinez—June 15th, Mount Diablo Parlor, No. 101, N.S.G.W., entertained Grand Trustee J. F. Hocy and the Parlor "newlyweds"—those who have been married during the past year—at a whist party and banquet. The affair was most successful and largely attended by members and guests. Mrs. A. J. Soto and G. O. Meese carried off the first prizes, and Mrs. R. B. Borland and G. A. Barkley the seconds. The newly-married couples present were: Mr. and Mrs. Martin W. Joost, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Bootbe and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kelly.

June 12th, the Parlor presented to the Martinez grammar school a handsome silk Bear flag, with appropriate ceremonies in the city park, which were witnessed by a large crowd. M. R. Jones, in behalf of the Parlor, presented the flag, which was accepted by T. B. Swift, for the school. During the exercises the municipal band rendered several selections, the school children sang, Ralph Downing gave a patriotic recitation, Maud Honneger delivered the valedictory, and Justice C. H. Hayden presented diplomas to the twenty-six grammar school graduates.

What is undoubtedly one of the largest Canyon live oaks in the State has just been measured by the forest officers at Santa Barbara. This tree was found in Boquet Canyon, on the Santa Barbara National Forest. It is eight feet in diameter at the base, with a large spreading top about eighty feet in diameter.

INDEPENDENCE DAY CELEBRATION IN SAN JOSE

SAN JOSE'S NATIVE SONS HAVE about completed arrangements for the monster Independence Day celebration to be held July 3rd, 4th and 5th, and 50,000 is not considered an overestimate of the number of visitors who will partake of the Garden City's hospitality on that occasion.

Through the efforts of the San Francisco Extension Committee, N.S. G.W., the Parlor of that city will be represented by large numbers, and will participate in the Fourth of July parade, which promises to be the largest and most spectacular ever held in California.

Reports received by the committee, indicate that practically all the Parlor of Native Sons within a radius of one hundred miles of San Jose will take part in the festivities, and excursions to accommodate these, and thousands of others, will be run from San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento, Stockton, and other points.

The San Jose committee has received liberal cessions will start running upon that evening. The Auditorium, in the center of the city, will be the scene of an informal ball, and has been especially decorated for the occasion.

The morning of Saturday, July 4th, upon arrival of further excursions, the Independence Day parade will start, and as all the civic and fraternal organizations in the county have been invited, it is expected that many beautiful floats will be entered, to vie with one another for the honor of being the most handsome or unique. Many of the Parlor of Native Sons and Daughters, in costumes, together with their bands and drum corps, will participate and make this a pageant both magnificent and spectacular. Grand Trustee Joseph Belloli, Jr., will be the grand marshal of the parade.

During the time of the parade, daylight fireworks will be displayed from the center of the city. In the afternoon, at Luna Park, daylight fireworks will also be featured.

Immediately following the parade, the ground breaking exercises will take place in front of the property upon which the proposed N. S. G. W.

support from the merchants, and all this fund will be spent for the entertainment of the visitors.

Twenty-five blocks of the business section of the city will be festooned with strings of flags and pennants. In addition to this, thirty-five specially hand-painted banners, symbolic of the early days of our Nation and emblematic of the pioneer days of the State, will be hung along the principal streets.

San Jose hopes to revive enthusiasm in the day that should be most dear to the hearts of every true American, and the program outlined will tend to create enthusiasm and love of country. It is hoped to make this an annual event, either to be held in San Jose, or some other city, and the idea should be given every encouragement, for we need more outward displays of patriotism to offset the encroachments of the red-flag followers.

The people of San Jose are giving every assistance to the committee of arrangements, and every visitor will be accorded a royal welcome and is assured of a pleasant time. There are plenty of accommodations of all kinds, and the restaurant and hotel men have agreed that their prices shall remain the same as for ordinary occasions.

Program of Amusements.

The program of entertainment will commence on the night of Friday, July 3rd, with a reception to the visitors who arrive upon excursions from San Francisco, Oakland and other points. At Luna Park, the pleasure ground of San Jose, all the con-building is to be erected. At 12:30, in Luna Park, an old-time Spanish barbecue will be served.

In the afternoon, in the Auditorium rink, patriotic services will be held and it has been arranged with the school department to have about fifteen hundred children form a chorus to sing patriotic songs under the personal direction of Prof. Jeffers, director of music of the school department. To accompany this singing, a very large orchestra will be used. Judge William A. Beasley will be the master of ceremonies, and one of California's most prominent speakers will deliver the oration of the day.

Upon the closing of this part of the program, dancing will begin, and be continuous until midnight.

From nine o'clock in the morning until twelve o'clock at night, Luna Park will be open to the public, and all the amusement features and concessions will be running full blast.

On Sunday morning, July 5th, a sacred concert will be given in St. James Park, and boating and swimming races will take place upon the Municipal Lake. At 11:30, another barbecue will be given at Luna Park.

In the evening, a wonderful display of pyrotechnics will take place.

There are many other amusements and forms of entertainment that have not been definitely decided upon, but there will be pleasure for all.

TELL OUR ADVERTISERS YOU SAW THEIR ANNOUNCEMENT IN THE GRIZZLY BEAR.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

ONE OF THE MOST INTERESTING notes of the early summer season is the transference of favor from black to dark blue, as noted in the vogue of the latter. In fact, the transition from one to the other appears to mark the return of other old-time favorites that have been reposing, and most forgotten, during the last seasons of bright, garish tones and fearsome color combinations.

All this is by way of saying that the hat of navy-blue straw, trimmed with navy-blue ribbons, wings or foliage is quite the smartest sort of headwear that the fashionable woman can adopt to wear with her light cloth or linen suit for the early days of the warm weather. The color of the suit or gown makes no particular difference with the adoption of the hat.

Cool Color Combination Appeals.

For those who like a touch of airiness, there are chapeaux of navy trimmed, with white gardenias or bunches of white wheat. Also the floral gariture, that looks as if it had been enameled or polished, is considered good style.

It is obvious that the cool combination of navy-blue and white will appeal to a vast majority of women, who will gladly accept it in conjunction with the white suit or dress.

The white and black effects are offered in charming little dinner frocks of striped, checked or flecked voiles, rodier cottons and soft silks. The liking is distinctly for all white, associated with all black, the sharp contrast being some times modified, as it were, by the introduction of a girdle of some other color, such as callot blue, poiret green or Egyptian yellow. Some of the combinations are truly refreshing.

Broadcloth in Favor.

Now that taffeta and charmeuse have had such a glorious run, the wise ones are looking about for a material a little less popular with which to fashion charming summer things. It is rumored that fine broadcloth may return to favor, particularly in relation to the new capes and other sort of wraps. It has the advantage of a comfortable degree of warmth for chilly evenings, and at the same time its color suggests appropriateness for the warm season.

It is a fad, just now, to trim the new white capes with collars of black velvet. But sometimes the fad is varied to include dark plum, yellow, brown or dark blue. The great exception, in renewed favor of color, is found in the little blouses. They are very fashionable in gay tones that are almost crude in their adherence to prismatic colors. Yellow is by far the most popular of all the blouse colors, and after that may be placed pink.

Roman Stripes Continue Popular.

For the most part, the summer blouses are constructed on rather plain lines, suitable for their complement of the tailored skirt of serge, gabardine or linen. In nearly every instance, they are completed by a flaring collar of pique or organdie, or Batiste. And smart fashion says they must not be fancy, but must, on the contrary, be simply finished with a hem-stitched hem or picot edge.

The rage for Roman striped fabrics continues unabated. The reason for this, is readily found in the need for a brightening touch on the suits and dresses of dark or monotone colors. Many women have found that the striped effects can be used more effectively than can the plain colors. At any rate, there is no gainsaying that the correct application of a bit of gay Roman ribbon or taffeta seems to give just the needful feminine note of frivolity to the summer apparel. There are many women who have preferred to use Scotch plaids for the trimmings on suits and dresses, and these are just as much in favor as the stripes.

The Russian Tunic.

There is a fashion which has been eagerly taken up by smartly-dressed people both in society and by those who make no pretensions of even being on the ragged edge of society. I refer to the Russian tunic, originated, of course, in Paris, and bidding fair to displace the short tunic which has been in great favor for several seasons. When properly cut and hung, no style is more attractive than the long, full overskirt, called the "Russian tunic," but, like every new effect, it is an eyesore when botched. Its very simplicity is, in a way, its chief stumbling block to amateurs. The long, full tunic is interpreted to mean that the wide

For the summer tub frocks, nothing can be prettier than the sheer organdie or batiste embroideries, having small pointed or square battlement edges worked out in blue, pink, rose or yellow. These are good for gingham, and linen floral patterns of small scattered blossoms and leaves of different colorings are attractive for afternoon frocks, and larger patterns in wider flouncing can be admirably worked up into tunics and waist designs when combined with white or plain-tone fabrics.

Handsome Oriental Costume.

Many of the newest colorings are entirely Chinese, and certainly are growing in favor. Buttons in Chinese design, jewelry and beads, as well as handsome Japanese cloisonne and satsuma in richly assorted colored enamels, embroidered and brocade Chinese shoes of silk for bouidior wear with robes, and Japanese kimono of imported floral dragon and bird designs in rich colorings, are used. Some are on black grounds, rich blue, all the pale tints, and white. Some of the lighter toned silks are especially dainty in self embroideries on the pink, pale blue, yellow and lavender grounds.

One of the handsomest silk mulls ever sent over from the Orient was received last week by one of our smart dressers. It is beautifully embroidered in pink and blue forget-me-nots, and made with a full overdress which has a border of the flowers. The bodice, most attractively made and embroidered, has round neck and adorable sleeves, and insets of shadow lace. The girdle, of shell pink charmeuse, is quite wide, and finished off by bringing the silk from the waist line in back under the Things Japanese in Demand.

The rage for things Japanese has invaded the blouse realm, and some new, bright, printed silk blouses are being shown. They are made of the Obi, which have odd Japanese or Chinese patterns and effects in vivid yellows, blues and colors in combinations with black or white ground. They look like hand-block prints, and are quite stunning in effect. The styles are simple, being intoned down the front with bright-colored buttons, and having sheer frill trimmings at neck and sleeves. These silks will wash.

Comfortable and cool for summer wear, are the straw slippers and the Japanese straw sandals. The sandals are woven by hand, of Japanese rice straw, and consist of a flat sole piece, which is held securely to the foot by gay-colored, cotton-covered cloth straps, crossed over the top of the fore part of the foot. They are excellent for the hot weather, lounge or bathroom wear.

Oriental Air in Shops.

Japanese correspondence and note papers can be had in several of the Broadway shops, where quaint and imported novelties are to be found. The designs are hand painted. Place cards for luncheons and porch parties can also be picked up at these shops. Some of them are on wood shaving paper, others on Chinese paper. The tiny designs are reproductions, in color, of famous old prints, landscape designs, birds, fish, figures and flowers. The paper comes in rolls, each sheet being 7 by 18 inches, with a Japanese design across the bottom part. The envelopes are long and narrow, and can also be had in the usual square note size. The designs used are, of course, hand painted, and suggest bits of slender flower stalks, quaint birds and little scenes. There is something most fascinating about the Oriental air in our shops, this side of the water.

tiful, presenting with fearlessness to the future her two children, symbolizing those who have, since the pioneer days, made the State of California. The pioneer days are depicted on the pedestal of the monument in a large bas-relief.

The journey across the plains is suggested by a decorative scheme in which the skulls of oxen form a part of an ornamental design in which pine cones, cactus and the flora of California are used. A special feature is a relief map of the old emigrant trail of Oregon and California. The early journey to California by water is also suggested by two panels, one showing a bark-rigged vessel under full sail and the other showing the Golden Gate as seen from the harbor.

EARLY DAY ARRIVAL PASSES AWAY IN OAKLAND.

Samuel Tuttle Pike died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. D. Collins, 3824 Marshall street, Oakland, on the 7th inst, of old age. He was born in Eastport, Maine, in 1825. He played an important part in the early history of the State, coming from Eastport, Maine, on the steamer "California," by way of Panama, in company with Judson H. Clark and others, and arriving in California early in 1849.

Mr. Pike was a member of the Vigilantes Committee, and assisted in the arrest of many an offender in early days. He was identified with the turning of the Tuolumne River, one of the engineering feats of pioneer days. The river was turned from its course, so that the sand might be washed for gold. He established the old Montezuma Hotel in Calaveras County, and with his brother, J. M. Pike, conducted the old United States Hotel and restaurant at Clay and Montgomery streets, San Francisco. Years later he conducted the Cosmopolitan Hotel at Tulare City.

Deceased is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jeanette Pike, a son, George Pike of Modesto, a daughter, Mrs. W. D. Collins, a sister, Mrs. Celia A. Paine, and a brother, J. M. Pike.

Mr. Pike had resided in Oakland for the past eleven years. J. H. Clark, referred to in the above notice, as coming to California with Mr. Pike (then a boy of sixteen years), was the father of the contributor. Mr. Clark was identified with pioneer days, being a member of the Vigilantes and afterwards following mining. Later he started the pioneer Boston Cracker Bakery in San Francisco.—Mrs. W. D. Collins.

Sculptor Charles Gaffly's sketch model for the Pioneer Mothers' Monument to be erected in San Francisco—originally planned by Mrs. Ella Sterling Mighels, a member of Haywards Parlor, N.D.G.W., and for which the Native Daughters and Native Sons of the Golden West have contributed generously—have been approved by the Pioneer Mothers' Monument Association of California.

TELL OUR ADVERTISERS YOU SAW THEIR ANNOUNCEMENT IN THE GRIZZLY BEAR.

PANAMA CANAL MEANS A NEW ERA FOR STATE

WE HAVE JUST COMPLETED ONE of the most remarkable events, of this eventful age, whose influence upon the future of our country, and upon human destiny, it would be difficult properly to measure; one of the greatest triumphs of American enterprise, engineering and construction skill, and energy, of which our history can boast.

It ushers in a new era in American progress, and while it is an event of world-wide significance, it is one of special importance to our own country, and our own State.

I recollect, some years ago, looking at a picture which many of you doubtless have seen, representing a family of Pioneers who had accomplished the tedious journey overland, and having reached the crest of the Sierras, stood gazing with enraptured vision upon the magnificent panorama which extended before their eyes in the Valley of the Sacramento.

The noble river in the distance seemed like a silver thread meandering through the great valley; the purple summits of the Coast Range rose in front to the westward, and far to the south stretched the fertile plains of the San Joaquin, until in the soft haze of the landscape, their limit was lost in the horizon.

In a metaphorical sense, we stand upon such an eminence today. Behind us is the rugged journey, with its desert sands, its savage tribes, its cooling springs making oases where, at times, we have rested from our toil. Around us is the pure air, and over us the blue sky; while within us our hearts beat high with hope and confidence, and before us lies, in its beauty, the rich prospect of our boundless future.

In looking back over a pioneer journey, did time permit, one would be tempted to extend the review beyond our own personal experience and the history of our own State and country, to note a few of the most memorable epochs which have marked human progress during the twenty centuries that are past.

To trace the history of civilization, however,

Some time ago, W. H. Staniels, past president and charter member of California Parlor, No. 1, N. S. G. W., San Francisco, was appointed to give due recognition to that greatest of modern events—the completion of the Panama Canal—and the accompanying article was, accordingly, prepared by him and read before the Parlor. Being of general interest, it was sent to The Grizzly Bear for publication.—Editor.

during this period, would require far more than the time now allotted, and is a subject which would task the loftiest powers. Otherwise, it might be interesting to dwell upon those prominent epochs which have signalized the progress of mankind, since the advent of Christianity marked an advance from paganism to theism, and from a religion of forms to one of spirit; from the time when the code of Justinian marked a memorable era in legislation to the period when Magna Charta developed a new and rational theory of government, and thence to the enlightenment of the present day.

This progress, it is true, has not been uniform or constant. The tide has had its ebb, as well as its flood. There have been temporary retrogressions in almost every department of human activity—in science, in government, and in religion. Nations have exchanged places in the scale; some have relinquished freedom for despotic rule, religious liberty for blind superstition, power for weakness, and science for ignorance; while others have risen from barbarism to the heights of knowledge, and from small beginnings have obtained greatness in the arts and sciences, and in freedom, wealth, and power.

The great nations of the present day are none of them ten centuries old. England's greatness dates from the revolution of 1640, before modern civilization had penetrated the domain of the Czar, before the Russian monarchy or the American Republic were known among the nations, when Spain was the leading power on land, and Holland was mistress of the seas. Human progress for the last two centuries has known little pause. Dynasties have risen and fallen; revolutions and civil wars have deluged portions of the world with blood; but heretofore good has been evolved out of evil, and during war and peace, political changes, and national vicissitudes, the minds of men have been, year by year, more emancipated from thralldom and more active in investigation and in useful invention and discovery.

In the history of human progress, it seems to us as if the chapter devoted to the present century would fill as large a space as the twenty centuries which have preceded it. It is now but little more than two-thirds gone, and yet what improvements and discoveries it has witnessed! When the last century closed, and for some years afterwards, no steamboat had been built. Nearly a fourth of the present century had passed before railway construction was inaugurated, and nearly half of it was gone before electricity was pressed into man's service, as his messenger, to annihilate distance and bring into instant intercourse the most remote islands and continents.

In all channels the minds of men have been busy and fruitful until the limit of invention seems to be almost reached, and human ingenuity exhausted.

Marshall's discovery of the particles of gold in the mill-race at Coloma, was the beginning of a great revolution in the commerce and business of the world, and in the nominal value of labor and property. It changed our geography and gave a new expansion to American ideas. What had before seemed hyperbole, became reality; the empty boasts of stump-orators seemed about to be verified by facts.

The treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo had secured us in possession of the fairest, the most genial and fruitful part of the American continent, and as we, in our partial judgment, think of the globe, we had almost realized the poet's dream of exchanging our "pent-up Utica" for "the whole boundless continent." We still lacked the British possessions and Mexico; but we were in the position of one gorged with food and incapacitated from further indulgence, until time was allowed for digestion, and assimilation.

A NATIVE SON

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: Honorable J. Vincent Hannon of the Los Angeles bar, has announced himself as a candidate for the position of Superior Court Judge of this county, and his name will come before the electors of the county at the next primary election for one of the ten positions that will be vacant in that office.

We, the undersigned members of the bar of this county, take great pleasure in indorsing Mr. Hannon's candidacy, and we sincerely trust that the electors of the county will see fit, in their wisdom, to select him for one of the ten judgeships in this county, to be filled at the coming election.

Some of us have known Mr. Hannon since his boyhood days; others of us have known him since he first began his career as a member of this bar; others have known him in the active practice as an attorney, but all of us take great pleasure in certifying to the fact that in Mr. Hannon we have always found not only a splendid gentleman, but an excellent, well equipped, competent lawyer, and one whom we not only believe but know from education, mental qualifications and practice will make a splendid judge, and we indorse him as being fully qualified in every respect for that position.

It is our purpose, without disparaging the candidacy of any other aspirant to that office, to do what we can toward the election of Mr. Hannon for one of these places. There are ten judges for the Superior bench to be elected in this county at the coming election and already the names of many men, fully qualified, have been suggested or announced, but with due respect to any and all of them, we believe that Mr. Hannon is as fully equipped and well qualified for that place as any man whose name has yet come before the people.

We take this means in making our position public in the hopes that those of our friends who have confidence in our knowledge of the fitness of men for the bench will do what they can to assist Mr. Hannon in this election.

Very truly yours: Edwin A. Meserve, John G. Mott, Joseph Scott, Oscar Lawler, Max Loewenthal, Isidore B. Dockweiler, Frank P. Flint, George J. Denis, Walter F. Haas, J. Wiseman Macdonald, Albert M. SUPERIOR COURT JUDGE
LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

George A. Boden, for twenty years a resident of Los Angeles County, and having an irreproachable record as an attorney and counselor-at-law, announces his candidacy for Judge of the Superior Court of Los Angeles County, and has many ardent supporters among his clients.

He has always been an advocate of woman's suffrage, and stands for the equality of rights for all. In his profession, he has made a careful study of probate law and law pertaining to real property, and has taken a deep interest at all times in juvenile work and the welfare of juvenile offenders.

Mr. Boden was born on his father's ranch near Tehachapi, Kern County, June 4, 1876, and obtained a public-school education by riding seven miles to school each day. He worked his way through the State Normal, and afterwards taught school for ten years, for six years being principal of a Pasadena public school. For two years he was a member of the Los Angeles County Board of Education. His knowledge, therefore, of school affairs, is based upon actual experience.

While engaged in school work, Mr. Boden studied law, attending law school at night, and was graduated with high honors from the Law School of the University of Southern California. For ten years he has been in active and successful practice of the profession, maintaining offices in the Union Oil building.

Mr. Boden is a member of Los Angeles Parlor, N.S.G.W., Los Angeles Bar Association, and the Masonic Fraternity.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction, HUGH J. BALDWIN.

Upon a thirty years' record of constructive educational work, believed by his friends to be the most remarkable in the educational history of California, Hugh J. Baldwin aspires to the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Mr. Baldwin has served in the Public Schools as teacher, principal, and superintendent. He has been President of the State Teachers' Association, is now a member of the Council of Education and is completing his fourth term as Superintendent of Schools of San Diego County. He has long been prominently identified with the State Humane Society, Juvenile Courts, Probation Committee, etc. In a word, he has always been active in the interests of child welfare and the cause of education.

There has not been a question of progressive legislation before the educational bodies of the State for over thirty years that has not engaged his active attention and support. He originated several of the most important statutes bearing on child welfare, and it is acknowledged that he is one of the few educators who have always taken an active part in school legislation at Sacramento.

It is well known that Mr. Baldwin advocated free text books long before the Free Text Act was passed, and that he was one of the foremost workers for the passage of that Act. His efforts in behalf of the flat rate pension for teachers, so that all might have a "square deal," won the approbation of thousands of teachers of the State. When that measure was debated at a meeting of the California Teachers' Association, quoting an educational journal of the State, "It was Hugh J. Baldwin who carried the day for the flat rate pension, and nailed the flag to the mast."

Among other things strongly advocated by Mr. Baldwin is the use of the schools as Civic Centers, conveyance of the educational advantages of the city to the country schools, the extension of evening schools, and a closer articulation of the State University and State Normal Schools with the common schools, to the end that their inspiration and wisdom may be brought more directly to the children and people of the State.

Mr. Baldwin is known as the father of the public school kindergarten in California. His open air schools, the first in the State, have attracted widespread attention. His scheme of giving credits to school children for industrial activities outside of school, has won the enthusiastic co-operation of the parents. He it was who had physical culture, morals and manners placed among the statutory school studies, for he believes that the physical and moral welfare of the child should have right of way.

He believes that since ninety-five per cent of the children never go beyond the elementary schools, justice demands that the State shall devote its energies to the highest possible efficiency of these schools.

Referring to Mr. Baldwin's sixteen years as Superintendent of Schools of San Diego County, "Truth," for April, 1914, says: "Supt. Baldwin has built a State-wide reputation as an educator and executive. He has brought the San Diego schools up to a degree of efficiency and practicability that has attracted the attention of educators all over the country."

Your support is respectfully solicited for HUGH J. BALDWIN for SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT

DEVOTED TO FARM, ORCHARD, GARDEN, POULTRY, DAIRYING, BEES, ETC.

Edited by GEORGE H. BANCROFT.

FARMERS' SHORT COURSES.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA Bulletin for May announces the farmers' short courses at the University Farm, Davis, Yolo County, from October 5th to November 14th. There are no entrance examinations and no restriction as to sex, but applicants must be at least 18 years of age.

The courses offered are agriculture, horticulture, poultry husbandry, and dairy manufactures. In the one course, agriculture, is included the three courses previously given of general agriculture, dairy production, and livestock production. Attendants upon these courses may secure a round-trip fare of one and one-third on all railroads.

THE STATE'S DEVELOPMENT.

(May Bulletin, California Development Board.)

From every fruit-growing valley, including the length of the Sacramento and San Joaquin, and Southern California, the reports of the fruit crop are most encouraging, and the conditions entirely favorable to the maturing thereof. Canneries will operate to capacity during the season.

The outlook for transportation demands is so great that the railroads have already begun to secure all the cars possible for the large crops which promise to break all records. Grain crops will be exceedingly heavy, especially in the vicinity of Stockton, and the deciduous fruits the largest we have ever had. Cherries are generally reported a good crop; apples also; and in some places almonds. While a few places report a good crop of prunes, the majority report the crop short, and the rate is now not over one-third of a crop. Peaches are generally reported as a good crop, especially in Tulare County. Grapes will be a heavy crop; the fresh grape crop of California this season is expected to reach 8,000 carloads—the largest ever produced in California. Cantaloupe shipments from Imperial Valley will be large, as will also those from Throck, where there is a largely increased acreage. In the Richvale district of Butte County, 25,000 acres have been planted to rice this year. Citrus shipments to May 11th were 30,041 carloads, against 13,057 carloads last year.

Industrial activities in all lines are being hurried along, especially in the matter of the State high ways. A large tract of land in Siskiyou County, just north of Gazelle, has been sold for a stock farm; 1500 acres in the northern part of that county have also been purchased. Two large land deals have been made in Yolo County, involving 11,000 acres. Near Newberry, in Paraiso Valley, a large tract is to be developed by a stock company. Permanent reclamation of land extending into the bed of Tulare Lake, covering 18,000 acres of land, is being made by one of the largest levees ever built in that part of the State. A British syndicate has acquired 5000 acres in the Imperial Valley and proposes to introduce Egyptian cotton and to construct new gins. San Francisco capitalists have purchased several large acreages near Orland, Glenn County, which will be placed on the market.

SUB-IRRIGATION.

(In Four Parts—Part Three.)

For the purposes of sub-irrigation, tile is preferred in many cases, especially when compared to sheet-iron, as it is more permanent. The galvanized sheet-iron pipe with open seam at the underside, when laid, has some value over cost. Sub-irrigating has, in a number of instances, brought increased crops that have more than paid the total cost of installing the first season.

L. H. Baily, an authority, is inclined to believe that sub-irrigation by artificial means can be practiced successfully, although he says it is only with great reluctance that the idea is abandoned. We believe, however, that under certain soil conditions, sub-irrigation can be successfully and profitably practiced, specially for annual crops. Tile manufacturers claim that by laying tile as for drainage, but with little or no fall in the lines, and a method whereby the outlet can be closed, sub-irrigation can be made to work profitably.

We believe that a combination of methods should be employed, making the sub-irrigation idea the foundation for operators. While trees are young, the orchard can be cheaply watered (the first two years) by hauling water and pouring into basins, which could be profitably mulched with stable manure or straw. Most trees will require ten gallons the first year per watering, and thirty gallons the second year. The third year the furrow system surface irrigation can be employed cheaper, but at this time in the growth of the trees, a good sized standpipe, say eight inches in diameter and sixteen inches long imbedded in the soil about six feet away from the trees and uphill from it (no matter how slight the slope of the surface); let the top of the pipe extend a few inches above the surface of the soil, and fill with water frequently, either by hauling, or by means of a pipe system.

If a pipe, a service should be located at each tree and water allowed to drip into the upright pipe. Through this method it will be found that a small amount of water is required as little or no evaporation will occur. This will in most soils keep the roots of trees well moistened for several years. As the soil becomes well filled with roots, use a deep tilling machine and plow a deep furrow between each row of trees, but not below the first hard or impervious strata. Then by hand use a shovel to clean out the loose dirt at bottom of furrow, and lay the drain tile, bell end down hill, and cover without cementing the joints. Should the roots destroy the system or render it less effectual than desirable, the tile can be uncovered and immediately relaid and covered again at a not exorbitant cost. Any roots pruned will not hurt, as by this time there will be plenty to spare. If small rocks are plentiful, the trenches may be laid with them and this will answer for several years and prove economical. In all cases the system should be laid below the part to be plowed or cultivated.

In connection, an impervious strata should be shattered by using dynamite—from half a stick to a stick every three to six feet and three feet deep. Many seasons where ornards are well plowed during the fall or winter, and then well tilled throughout the summer, it will not be necessary to irrigate at all.

KAFIR, MILO OR FETERITA.

A recent inquirer has written to the University of Arizona Agricultural Experiment Station for information concerning the comparative merits of kafir corn, milo maize and feterita under irrigation. Answering this inquiry, Prof. Stanley F. Morse, Superintendent of Agricultural Extension Service, replies as follows:

The principal advantages of feterita over the other two crops is that it will mature in less time (about 90 days) and hence may be fitted into the rotation where milo maize or kafir would not do because of insufficient time for maturity before frost. Milo matures in about 100 days and kafir in 120 days. Feterita requires the least water, milo more, and kafir the most. In feeding value the grain of feterita is about equal to that of milo or kafir, but it is softer and easier for animals to masticate.

Feterita yields the least grain per acre (30 to 50 bushels or 1700 to 2800 pounds), milo more heavily (40 to 60 bushels or 2200 to 3300 pounds), and kafir (50 to 75 bushels or 2800 to 4000 pounds), the most of all. Feterita resembles kafir corn more than it does milo. For silage, kafir will yield more tons per acre than either milo or feterita. Kafir yields the best forage, feterita next and milo the poorest; feterita is frequently planted very early in the season to give an early crop of green feed. You will see from the foregoing discussion that feterita has a different place in the cropping system from either milo or kafir.

JULY GARDEN CALENDAR.

VEGETABLE GARDEN—Sow casaba melons, squash, cabbage, lima and green beans, cauliflower and tomato for winter crops. Lettuce, radishes, onions, beets and other small truck for the home garden can be successfully sown this month, providing the seeds are covered very lightly with old burlap or mulch-manure. This prevents the soil from forming a hard crust in the middle of the day. Quantities of seed are lost every summer by neglecting to mulch the ground after seeding. These small seedlings are very tender. When just sprouting they buru very quickly when they strike the hard burning crust that is over them. This is a matter of great importance, and with a little extra care one is able to have nice, crisp lettuce and other vegetables in the heat of summer, when they are greatly appreciated.

FLOWER GARDEN—Sow pansies and stocks for winter blooming. Chrysanthemums have to be watched very closely from now on. All suckers should be cut off as soon as they appear, large side branches removed and only a limited number of buds left on each plant so as to throw all the strength of the plant on the few remaining buds. Green aphids and other insects will appear, but can be easily removed by the use of tobacco dust. Cut back rose bushes and keep them pretty dry. This will give them a rest and enable them to bloom heavily next winter. Encalyptus, acacia and other ornamental stock may be sown this month.

LEVEL CULTURE VS. HILLING AND RIDGING.

In California, level culture of farm crops is best because it maintains a higher soil temperature—also retains moisture better. In humid climates, such as the climates of Georgia, Alabama, Western Oregon and Northwestern California, ridge or hill culture is better where land is not drain-tiled. In semi-arid regions soil will have less moisture where hills or ridges are used, and then harrowing the entire surface of corn, potato and other fields to break crusts early in the season would be impossible without damage.

Listing corn is of no advantage to up-to-date farmers. It probably had some advantage before scientific farming was understood in conserving moisture, as there would naturally be moisture deep in the soil, when surface was dried out. A very slight depression would not hurt. This can be leveled after the corn is up by harrowing cross-wise. Therefore, our conclusions are that level culture is better than hill or ridge culture.

BOOKLET ON SCHOOLS.

"School Architecture in California," a helpful book for trustees and others interested in the building of schoolhouses, is now being sent out to the superintendents and other school officers of the State by Superintendent of Public Instruction Edward Hyatt at Sacramento. It contains a large number of illustrations and many interesting hints and suggestions. The object of the booklet is to show, in graphic form some excellent examples of the different types of school buildings that are being constructed today in California, so as to build up in the minds of the people a distinct ideal of what modern schoolhouses ought to be. Its tendency is toward better conditions for the boys and girls and finer landscapes for the Golden State.

Redwood sawdust is being used by vineyardists in California for packing fresh table grapes. It takes the place of the ground cork used for imported Spanish grapes.

30 YEARS EXPERIENCE

POULTRY

(By MRS. A. BASLEY.)

GUINEA FOWLS ARE BECOMING popular in this country and will be more so every year, as their excellent table qualities are more known. Guineas are used to replace pheasants at banquets and at the closed season. They are sometimes passed off as grouse or pheasants, although at some of the large restaurants they are often given their own name on the bill of fare.

They lay a small egg, brown in color with dots or little spots of darker brown, and quite pointed at one end. The eggs are considered a great delicacy in Europe, for they are very rich in the color of the yolk. The Guinea hen lays a great number of eggs, but she is wild and hides her nest, and two or three eggs should be left in the nest as nest-eggs. I have kept Guineas nearly all my life, and after being well acquainted with their habits I never touch the eggs in the nest with my hand, as they so dislike the smell of a human hand that they will desert the nest and it is often a trouble to find it. I always use an iron spoon to collect the eggs.

The male and female Guinea are identical in color and can only be distinguished by the wattles of the male being a little larger and the "song" different. The female has a harsh voice which calls "come back," "come back," whilst the male only seems to say "quit," "quit." This is when they are both comfortable and happy; but let a hawk appear on the scene, and the scream of anger, defiance or warning will cause every chicken, turkey or Guinea on the place to run to shelter. Guineas are as good as a watch dog; night or day they will give notice if a stranger comes on the place. I have had male guineas that would fly into the air to meet a hawk and give fight.

Guineas can be hatched under common hens, and, indeed, that is the best way to start with them, as they are very "conservative" in their habits. They can be raised exactly as chickens, with one exception: they need food as soon as ever they are hatched. The eggs take 28 days to incubate and the little ones are exceedingly wild and will run away and get lost as soon as they are hatched if not closely watched. They should be confined in a tight pen with sides at least fifteen inches high until they have learned to follow the mother hen, which will be in a few days. The Guineas soon learn to love their mother and will never leave her; in fact, they will stay with her and roost with her even after they are laying eggs and are a year old.

They are very peculiar in another thing: what one Guinea does they will all do. If one flies over the fence, all will follow—a sort of follow-my-leader game is going on all the time. The mother hen is followed by the young; even after she begins to lay, they will all go on the nest with her, no matter how she may peck them. I have had them effectually break up a sitting hen. They will often, if brought up with or by hens, lay in the same nest with the mother hen, although if at liberty, as on a farm, she will usually hide her nest.

Guineas are gradually becoming polygamous and the male will take as many as three or even four wives. The female makes a poor sitter and not a good mother. The wild nature is the cause of this, and if left to hatch her eggs and raise the young she rarely brings more than four or five to maturity; at least, this has been my experience. In the West, Guineas begin to lay about April and continue until August. They weigh about three to three and a half pounds, and there is a growing market for them.

PIGEONS.

Great numbers of fancy pigeons are raised in California, for this is a climate that most admirably suits these beautiful birds. Squab raising for the market is also a profitable industry and brings in good returns where the pigeons are properly cared for. The biggest pigeon ranch in the world, containing over a hundred thousand pigeons, so it is said, is situated on the Los Angeles River.

Smaller ranches or lofts, properly cared for, bring in, pro rata, much better returns. The prices range from $2.50 to $6 a dozen. The pigeons best adapted to the work of squab raising are the homers or a cross of the homer. It is the most prolific of the pigeons, and a carefully selected loft will give the owner a return of from six to eight pair (I have known of ten pair) of squabs for each pair of breeders. It costs about a dollar a year to feed a pair of breeders. As the squabs are ready for market at four weeks of age, the profits can easily be figured.

Pigeons, unlike other birds or chickens, feed their young without the assistance of the caretaker, thus saving a great deal of time and care to the owner. The pigeons, both male and female, feed the young for the first week with what pigeon breeders call "pigeon milk," a milky liquid secreted in the glands of the crop and provided by Nature at the time of the hatching of the young. This wonderful milk gradually ceases as the squabs grow and the parents feed them with grain until they are old enough to leave the nest. The birds in California breed all the year except during the moult, which occurs in September and October.

There are about eighty varieties of fancy pigeons, all of which do well in California. The feed for this climate is wheat, kafir corn, Spanish corn, occasionally hempseed and Canada peas. Grit and rock salt should be before them all the time and plenty of good fresh water both for drinking and bathing. Pigeons have very few diseases here.

DUCKS.

Duck raising is one of the most profitable branches of the poultry business. For market purposes, the Pekin is best. For eggs, the Indian Runner takes the lead. Indian Runners are good foragers and light eaters. Ducks are never troubled with lice, neither do they have cholera or roup.

The Indian Runners grow very rapidly and begin laying early. They lay a large white egg. These eggs have a very fine flavor. You will find the eggs not as fertile if you let the ducks grow thin.

Give the ducklings plenty of air and stuff them with feed. Sprinkle sand over their feed, as this will be a sure way of them getting as much as they need. Watch that the ducks have suitable attention and regular feed. A few, well cared for, pays better than too many that are slighted.

Keep a good cat or two around the poultry plant, as it will save you lots of trouble with mice and rats. Good house, good feed, good tools, and cleanliness, are four essentials of poultry keeping.

In preparation for the coming fire season in California, 110 miles of fire lines have been built on the Sierra National Forest.

PIONEER CALIFORNIA PHYSICIAN

AT A MEETING OF THE LOS ANGELES Historical Society, H. D. Barrows read a paper on "The Pioneer Physicians of Los Angeles." Of them, he said:

"The first educated physician of whom we have any record, who practiced in Los Angeles, was Dr. John Marsh, who came here in January, 1836. Dr. Marsh was a native of Massachusetts, and a graduate of Harvard. He came to Los Angeles by way of Santa Fe.

"In the record of the city archives for the session of the Ayuntamiento of February 18, 1836, the following is found: 'A petition from a foreigner, Don Juan Marchet (Marsh), a native of the United States of the North, was read. He asks that this illustrious Ayuntamiento consider him as having appeared, he declaring his intention of locating in this city, and also that he is a physician and surgeon.'

"The Ayuntamiento would not grant the permission until they had examined Dr. Marsh's dip-

An early writer gives the following description of California, as it was in those early pastoral days when Dr. Marsh first settled here. This writer started from Missouri in 1846, came out across the plains, and stopped at the rancho of Dr. Marsh. He says:

"While pursuing our journey, we frequently saw large droves of wild horses and elk, grazing quietly upon the plains. The herds of elk were very numerous, some numbering at least two thousand, and very tame.

"We arrived at the rancho of Dr. Marsh about 5 o'clock p. m. His dwelling was a small, one-story house, rudely constructed of adobes, and divided into two or three apartments. The flooring was of earth, like the walls. A table or two, some benches, and a bed, were all the furniture it contained. Such are the privations to which those who settle in new countries must submit.

"Dr. Marsh is a native of New England, a college graduate, and a gentleman of fine natural abilities and extensive scientific and literary acquirements. He emigrated to California some seven or eight years since, after having traveled through most of the Mexican states. He speaks the Spanish language fluently and correctly, and his knowledge of Mexican institutions, laws and customs, was fully displayed in his conversation in regard to them.

"He obtained the grant of land, on which he now resides, four or five years ago, and although he has been constantly harrassed by wild Indians, who have several times stolen all his horses and sometimes numbers of his cattle, he has succeeded in permanently establishing himself.

"I noticed near the house, a vegetable garden, with the usual variety of vegetables. In another enclosure was the commencement of an extensive vineyard, the fruit of which exceeds in delicacy of flavor any grapes which I have ever tasted. This grape is not indigenous, but was introduced by the padres. Dr. Marsh had this year made several casks of wine, which are now in a state of fermentation. I tasted here, for the first time, a guardiente, or brandy, distilled from the grape.

"The house of Dr. Marsh being fully occupied, we made our beds in a shed. The temperature of the morning is most agreeable and every other phenomenon accompanying it is correspondingly delightful to the senses. Our breakfast consisted of warm bread made of unholted flour, stewed beef seasoned with chili colorado (a species of red pepper), frijoles (a dark colored red bean), and coffee.

"After breakfast, I walked with Dr. Marsh to the summit of a conical hill, about a mile distant from his house, from which the view of the plain on the north, south and east is very extensive and highly picturesque. The herds of cattle are scattered over the plain, some of them grazing upon the brown, but nutritious, grass; others sheltering themselves from the sun under the wide-spreading branches of the oaks. The toute ensemble of the landscape is charming."

Forest botanists recognize only one cypress in the United States. Its range extends from Delaware southward around the coast into Texas and up the Mississippi valley to Illinois and Indiana. It is one of the few cone-bearing trees which drop their leaves in winter. The heartwood of cypress is noted for its decay-resistant properties.

loma, and this proved a hard task to the illustrious body. His diploma being in Latin, no one could be found in Los Angeles who understood that language, and the document had to be sent to San Gabriel for the mission priest to translate. It was found to be satisfactory, and permission to practice was granted.

"Dr. Marsh, however, only remained in Los Angeles about a year, when, in 1837, he went north and settled on the Rancho Los Meganos, near Monte Diablo. Here he lived until murdered by natives in 1856. He became a naturalized Mexican citizen before his death."

OAKLAND'S ENTERTAINMENT

We steal today one star to grace
The Banner of the Bear.

"So lovingly today we've brought
To mingle by the sea
The white flag of the Argonaut
The star flag of the Free;
Long may they flutter side by side,
Twin monarchs of the air:
Our Coast's flag and our Country's flag,
The Eagle and the Bear."

The visitors then enjoyed the freedom of the grounds and buildings, and were served with refreshments. The affair was arranged and directly in charge of P.G.P.s Mariana Bertola, M.D. and Clara K. Wittenmyer, both members of the college faculty, and proved a most pleasant day's outing.

Theater Party.

Wednesday evening the Grand Parlor members were guests of the Oakland entertainment committee at a theater party at the Orpheum. A good hill was enjoyed, and during the intermission the excellent hand of Piedmont Parlor, N.S.G.W., rendered several selections.

Ritual Exemplification.

Thursday evening a picked team from the Oakland Parlors exemplified the Order's ritual for the pleasure and instruction of the Grand Parlor at-

NEVADA COUNTY.

In the lap of the Sierras
There is a county green,
The fairest, rarest, dearest
Of all this State, I ween.
Oh, its silver, laughing streamlets,
Hedged with their flowers gay
And hoary pine—woods stately,
Have won my love for aye.

In its softly heaving bosom
A golden glory lies;
Methinks the sunshine's glory
Hath strayed down from the skies
And within the breast of Nature
Hath hid itself apart;
So men call this golden treasure
Nevada County's heart!

But o'er this county lovely
A blessed spirit thrills,
It breathes in fields so sunny,
And o'er the verdant hills.

It breathes from the ripening orchards,
'Tis free beyond control,
The glad spirit of the harvest—
Nevada County's soul!

SONOMA CELEBRATION A GRAND SUCCESS

Sonoma—The two-day celebration, June 13th and 14th, in honor of the restoration of Mission San Francisco del Solano and the unveiling of the Bear Flag monument, arranged by Sonoma Parlor, No. 111, N.S.G.W., drew more than 5000 people to this city. The arrangements were carried out in such perfect detail as to warrant praise from all quarters for the committee in charge.

Sonoma was in holiday garb, the streets being attractively decorated with flags and streamers of electric lights. Many show windows in business houses had displays of early-day scenes and relics. Hospitality was lavishly dispensed, and the visitors went away pleased with their experiences.

Miss Florence Green, daughter of L. H. Green, secretary of Sonoma Parlor, presided as queen over the festival features, and had as maids of honor the Misses Zoletta Bates, Valeria Melberg, Virginia Picetti and Belana Mamorri. Among the noted visitors was "Uncle" Jim McChristian who, as a youngster, saw the original Bear Flag raised on the Sonoma Plaza.

The festivities opened at 10 a.m., June 13th, with a parade marshaled by J. L. Keiser, the main feature of which was the appearance of Sonoma Parlor's sixteen-piece drum corps and a large number of the members in attractive new uniforms. The parade was headed by a detachment of San Francisco police, followed by the queen and her maids, Native Sons Parlor from the county, fraternal societies, and historical and decorative floats.

Horse races were held under the auspices of the Sonoma Driving Club at 2 p.m., and there was an elaborate display of fireworks on the plaza at 8 p.m. Following this was a ball, at which the grand march was led by Queen Florence and Louis H. Mooser, Grand President, N.S.G.W. Mardi gras features prevailed throughout the night.

At 11 a.m., June 14th, the mission was formally dedicated by Bishop Hanna, following a parade of the League of the Cross with band, Native Sons, and members of the Young Men's and Young Ladies' Institutes.

At 2 p.m. the thousands of visitors assembled in the old Sonoma Plaza to witness the unveiling of the Bear Flag monument. The program for this occasion included an invocation by Bishop Hanna, benediction by Rev. Father T. Comerford, several excellent selections by a double quartet, a vocal solo by A. T. Jansen, and addresses by Governor Hiram W. Johnson (Sunset 26); Assemblyman H. W. Slater; M. E. Cummings, president Sonoma Parlor Entertainment Committee; F. T. Duhring (Sonoma 111), member of the Sutter Fort Commission; Lewis F. Byington (P.G.P.), vice chairman N.S.G.W. Historic Landmarks Committee; J. F. Prestwood, president Sonoma Parlor; Congressman Joseph R. Knowland (P.G.P.), chairman N.S.G.W. Landmarks Committee; Louis H. Mooser, Grand President, N.S.G.W., and Wm. Von Hacht (Sonoma 111), Mayor of Sonoma.

TRIP ACROSS THE PLAINS

conditions were most disheartening, and the weary and nearly famished animals were trudging slowly on, suddenly the oxen raised their heads, sniffed the air, and simultaneously these starved, thirsty and fatigued cattle, drawing heavy burdens, increased their pace to a fast walk, then to a trot, and lastly, taking the new vigor, began to gallop. The drivers could not restrain them. The oxen, jaded as they were, ran on and on for several miles, until they came to a river. The famished animals plunged into the river, and drank and drank as only thirsty cattle can drink.

There were many hairbreadth escapes in fording rivers and going up and down steep mountain slopes. On several occasions, it became necessary to let wagons down or draw them up hillsides by means of chains and ropes. The course was always westward till, on August 22, 1849, this train reached Sutter's Fort, having been 107 days on the road.

Such is the tale of the journey "across the plains" in 1849. A journey fraught with dangers, privations, and sufferings. The Native Sons and Native Daughters in the parade of the "California Rasin Day Festival" at Fresno on April 30th, had an exact reproduction of an immigrant train crossing the plains in '49—prairie schooners, milch cows and all, even to the chickens in their coops!

On Roeding Green there was a mock battle with the red men of the desert, a rescue by cowboys, and other features of the trip across the continent. A "pony express" rider, dashing across the green, delivered to Governor Hiram W. Johnson, who was present, two flags which he unfurled—the Stars and Stripes and the Bear Flag, the flag that was unfurled at Sonoma in 1846, when California was declared a republic by a few hardy pioneers.

It is said that the best times of day to see forest fires from lookout stations are just after daylight and just before sunset.

LAST OF BEAR FLAG PARTY PASSES AWAY

Henry Beeson, the last surviving member of the Bear Flag Party,—the last link in the chain that bound California to some of the most heroic days of early pioneer life,—is no more. He passed away May 14th—just one month prior to the dedication of the Bear Flag monument at Sonoma, that commemorates the historic deeds of the party of which he was a member—at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. N. Ornbaum, at Orinda, Mendocino County, where he had made his home since the death of his youngest child, Maude, five years ago.

Henry Beeson was born in Kentucky, November 3, 1829, and in 1845 came across the plains to California with his stepfather, Walter Anderson, and family. He himself drove the ox-team in which his mother was a passenger. They were the first white settlers in Anderson Valley, Mendocino County, and that valley was named after his stepfather.

Beeson often stated that San Francisco was only a scattering settlement of block-houses, when he first came to California. When Mexico claimed the territory, he, a boy of sixteen years, joined the little band of men known as the Bear Flag Party who, at Sonoma, in June, 1846, raised the Bear Flag and held California for the Union until the Stars and Stripes could be substituted. The original Bear Flag was destroyed in the fire of San Francisco in 1906.

Beeson was married in 1860 to Molinda Beebe of Point Arena, and they made that place their home for a good many years. His wife has been dead thirty years. Six children survive—Mrs. J. R. Burger of Boonville, W. I. Beeson of Healdsburg, Mrs. J. N. Lowrey of Gualala, Mrs. H. N. Ornbaum of Orinda, Mrs. G. T. Brown of Philo, and Mrs. David Miller of Stewart's Point.

At the time of his death, Beeson owned his home in Anderson Valley, and on May 16th was laid to rest in the little family burial ground in Anderson Valley on the original Anderson homestead. At the head of the funeral procession was carried the Bear Flag, in the birth of which he participated.

Fletcher Ford of Ramona Parlor, N. S. G. W., Los Angeles, and wife were visitors to Vancouver, B. C., last month.

Congressman Joseph R. Knowland of Alameda, Past Grand President, N.S.G.W., was a Los Angeles visitor last month.

Miss Sara E. Matheson became the bride of Frank M. Buckley, president of National Parlor, N.S.G.W., at San Francisco, June 2nd.

Thomas Monahan, Mayor of San Jose and Junior Past Grand President of the N. S. G. W., has announced his candidacy for State Treasurer.

Mrs. Wm. M. Wells (nee Miss Hazel Darby) prior to her departure for her future home in Alaska, was given a shower of handkerchiefs by the members of Gold of Ophir Parlor, N.D.G.W., Oroville, May 20th.

Angora goats have been used with profit to keep fire lines clear of inflammable vegetation on National Forests in California.

MILLIONS INVESTED IN VITICULTURE IN STATE

California is the most important factor in viticulture in the United States, as is shown by the annual report of the California Development Board. It has over 90,000,000 vines, more than all the other States. It represents an investment of $150,000,000, which returns an annual income to the grower of over $20,000,000. Over 100,000 people are dependent upon California's viticultural industry. This includes 15,000 heads of families that own vineyards, 700 wine makers, and the laborers who do the picking and hauling, besides those employed in the wineries and those engaged in cultivating and handling our raisin and table grapes.

According to an earlier report of the State Board of Equalization, about one-tenth of the bearing acreage is devoted to table grapes, about two-fifths to raisin grapes and about one-half to wine grapes. The shipments of table grapes out of the State by rail for 1913 amounted to 6,363 carloads.

Of the fifty-eight counties in California, less than a dozen produce raisins in commercial quantities. Fresno County produces 94,000,000 pounds, or about 60 per cent of the California raisin crop, and nearly twice the quantity produced by Spain, which produces from 15,000 to 30,000 tons and has held the lead for centuries. It was in 1892 that the California raisin crop first equaled that of Spain, and it has been increasing the difference ever since. Tulare County produces 25,000,000 pounds, and Kings County nearly as much.

Wine Making Great Industry.

During the past ten years the manufacture of California wines has increased at the rate of more than a million gallons a year, as shown by the annual report of the California Development Board. The yield for 1911 was about 49,280,000 gallons. The production of sweet wines that year was the greatest in the history of the industry, viz.: 23,280,044.48 gallons, while the dry wine output totaled 26,000,000 gallons. The production in 1913 was less, but some 4,702,219 gallons more than in 1912.

During the year nearly 13,000,000 gallons of wine, valued at $4,605,724, were shipped by sea alone, going to twenty-four different countries. The commercial brandy production of California during 1913 was 1,695,406 gallons, while the brandy manufactured for the fortification of sweet wines was 4,674,350.

The shipments of wine out of California by rail (mainly to Eastern points) during 1913 were about 11,154,400 gallons. To this must be added the brandy exported, which amounted to 38,047 gallons, valued at $66,473. The output of champagne naturally fermented in bottles for 1913 was about 950,000 bottles. This new industry will be greatly extended the coming season. Three manufactories are at present engaged in making this champagne.

BIG HOME INDUSTRY EXHIBIT IN BAY CITY

San Francisco—Preparations for the great home industry exhibit to be held under the auspices of the Home Industry League, beginning September 24th at the Auditorium, proceed with enthusiastic progress, according to the committee in charge of the affair. Already nearly half of the immense space available has been engaged and the wide range of industries and enterprises that will find representation on the floor will be a revelation to most San Franciscans, who little realize the growth of industrial prosperity and the extent of her enterprises that San Francisco enjoys.

The various manufacturers of San Francisco are entering heartily in the forthcoming exhibit and will show their interest in the undertaking and announce their concern in its success in a striking, if somewhat noisy, manner on the day of the opening. Every factory whistle, siren of manufacture, and even the shrieking of the donkey engines that stand at almost every corner where building operations are in progress, will open their brazen throats for a five-minute serenade, and if San Francisco doesn't wake up to the fact that the day of the local producer, creator of fabric, and manufacturer of articles of necessity and luxury is at hand, it will not be the fault of the shrill siren or solemn voices of her prosperous factories.

From September 24th to October 5th will be the term of the exhibit, and to the industrial attractions that will invite attention will be added many novelties now being arranged for, not the least interesting features of which will be the splendid music which will be heard. Special nights will be observed with special ceremonies, and there will be a tempting parade of "samples," wherewith the attention of the "fair" is always conserved.

The Corsaw family upon arrival, pitched their tent upon the site of the present State Capitol. Deceased was a native of Indiana, aged 65 years, and is survived by a widow.

Ramon Ortega, a native of Santa Barbara, aged 86 years, died June 1st at Potrero Seco, Ventura County, where he had resided for many years. He was a noted mountaineer, and is said to have killed more bears than any man in the State, his record including some 200 bears taken with the lasso, fifteen in one day. Surviving are five sons.

Mrs. Elizabeth Richardson, who came across the plains to California in 1849, and had lived almost continuously in Sacramento, died there June 1st. She was a native of England, aged 97 years.

Ed Boehme, who came to California via the Horn in 1849, and was in the present city of Stockton before the first house was built, died in that city June 3rd. For many years he was engaged in steamboating between San Francisco and Stockton. John F. Hook, who came across the plains to California in 1852 and had continuously resided in Nevada County, died recently at Nevada City where, for fifty-six years, he had been a member of the fire department. He was born in Frankfort-on-the-Main in 1829, and when a youth came to the United States. At his funeral obsequies a tribute was paid to his honesty and to his great service to the community as a public servant. While crossing the plains, deceased composed the following lines, which were sung around the camp-fire at evening:

ONWARD TO CALIFORNIA.

Onward to California, we're bound for that promised land,
And every time we strike the pick, down rolls the golden sand;

But the dangers there are many, and fearful is the way,
The scalping of the red men, and the howling beasts of prey;

After hardships and privation, there's a brighter day to come,
When we all may be returning, to our happy land at home.

Then comrades come, I say, we will close our march today,
We will sing tonight, by the bright star light, to our loved ones far away;
We will sing tonight, by the bright star light, to our loved ones far away.

In Memoriam

JOHN C. GRANT.

To the President, Officers and Members of Quartz Parlor, No. 58, N.S.G.W.: Your committee to whom was referred the matter of framing appropriate resolutions, on the loss suffered by our Parlor in the death of our beloved past president and trustee, Brother John C. Grant, respectfully report as follows:

Whereas, "He Who doeth all things wisely and well" hath, in His infinite wisdom, called our beloved officer and brother, John C. Grant, to a membership in the "Heavenly Parlor on High"; and

Whereas, He was ever a most devoted son and brother in his own home; and

Whereas, During the entire twenty-three years of his membership in this Parlor our late brother was always a faithful attendant at all our meetings, an active worker in all the affairs of our Parlor and our Order, and ever responded to the calls of "Friendship, Loyalty and Charity"; and

Whereas, The passing of our brother has left a vacancy and shadow, and a sorrow in the hearts of his bereaved family and of all our membership; still:

"If there was no cross of sorrow,
There could be no crown of gold";

Therefore, be it Resolved, That his death has bereft Quartz Parlor of one of its most esteemed and honored members and officers; and his family of an affectionate, true and loyal son and brother.

Resolved, That our Order tender our heartfelt sympathy to the family of our departed brother, in this, their sad bereavement; and that a page of our records be dedicated to his memory, on which these resolutions he inserted; and further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be given the family of our deceased brother, and that a copy be given The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

"Once again our ranks are broken
By the hand no power can stay,
And we mourn a faithful brother
Who from earth has passed away.

As we gather at our meeting
His dear face we see no more;
He has crossed the mystic river
And has gained the heavenly shore."
FRED C. PETERSON,
GEO. E. STEWART,
JOHN M. HAMMILL,
Grass Valley, California. Committee.

T. W. DOOLING.

Galt Parlor, No. 243, N.S.G.W., has adopted the following resolutions, prepared by a committee composed of F. M. Harms, L. Holmes and S. H. T. May:

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, to summon to His eternal home our beloved brother, T. W. Dooling; and

Whereas, it is becoming that fit recognition of our esteemed brother should be recorded; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Brother Dooling, Galt Parlor, No. 243, Native Sons of the Golden West, has lost a loyal member, the community an honorable citizen, and the bereaved family a devoted husband, son and brother; and be it further

Resolved, That the charter of this Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread in full on the minutes of this Parlor, a copy be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to The Grizzly Bear Magazine, the official publication of the Native Sons of the Golden West, and a copy to the "Galt Herald" for publication.

CHARLES N. POST.

Charles N. Post, Superior Judge of Sacramento County, and one of the oldest and most beloved members of Sacramento Parlor, No. 3, N.S.G.W., died at the Capital City, May 22nd, after many months of suffering. His wife passed away a little over a year ago, and from that time his decline began.

Judge Post was a man of great ability, and as an orator had few equals in the State. He was possessed of a sunny disposition, and always had a word of good-cheer for those in trouble. He had held many public offices of trust and responsibility, and in all acquitted himself in a manner that won him many admirers for his fearlessness and loyalty to duty. In his leisure hours, he devoted a great deal of time to dogs and flowers, of both of which he was a great lover.

Judge Post was a native of Rolling Hills House, El Dorado County, aged 51 years, his father, A. V. Post, being a Pioneer of 1849. A sister, Mrs. J. M. Costigan of San Francisco, and thousands of loving friends mourn the passing of a good man whose earthly work was well done, and whose existence shed a radiance of happiness over the lives of those with whom he came in contact.—C.M.H.

JOHN W. McAFEE.

Whereas, The Good Lord, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to remove from our midst, to the great beyond, Brother John W. McAfee; and

Whereas, Lodi Parlor, No. 18, N.S.G.W., has lost a loyal member, and the State of California an ardent Native Son; therefore be it

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be handed to the bereaved family, a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Parlor and a third copy mailed for publication in the official organ of the Native Sons of the Golden West, The Grizzly Bear Magazine, and that our charter be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days.

JOSEPH CINOLLO.

May 24th, Joseph Cinollo, junior past president of Diamond Parlor, No. 246, N.S.G.W., answered the call of the Father Eternal, and departed this life for his seat in the Heavenly Parlor on High. Deceased was born in Pittsburg (then called Black Diamond), on the 5th of April, 1892, and had resided there nearly all his life; he became a member of Diamond Parlor on April 20, 1910, and from the night of his initiation to the time of his death, Native Sonism in all its ramifications held an absorbing interest for Brother Cinollo. Serving as treasurer from July 1, 1910, to June 30, 1912, during which period 107 meetings were held, Brother Cinollo missed but four, a record of which any other may feel justly proud. Elected second vice-president in July, 1912, he arrived at the presidency of the Parlor July 1st of last year, which office he filled with credit to himself and to his Parlor.

Brother Cinollo, as president, will be remembered by those who attended the exemplification of the ritual in Stockton on November 9th last year, when Diamond Parlor competed with National Parlor of San Francisco for the Grand Parlor trophy, attaining a score of 900 points against National Parlor's 961½. He was one of the organizers, and the principal member of the Parlor drum corps, into which body he endeavored to inculcate his own principles of serving the Order and the Parlor faithfully and well. He had been employed by the Redwood Manufacturers Co. of this city for many years, and was highly esteemed by that firm. He was taken sick the latter end of January of this year, and was finally taken to a sanatorium in Colfax, California, for treatment. For a little while he felt some improvement, but on May 24th was removed by his parents to their home in Pittsburg, where he died the next day.

Decedent was a member of Contra Costa Lodge No. 18, K. of P., which society, at the request of the parents, conducted its funeral services at the meeting hall. The parade of the two Orders was most impressive, recalling, as it did, the activities of him they were following. Behind the hearse marched two little girls, carrying Bro. Cinollo's drum draped in black, followed by the Parlor drum corps with drums muffled. Many beautiful floral pieces were in evidence, not the least of which was the Parlor's offering—a very nice piece in the form of a drum. The interment was in Odd Fellows' Cemetery in Antioch, where the entire burial service of the Order was rendered by the officers of the Parlor, assisted by a choir of Native Daughters from Stirling Parlor, who rendered sweet music and soft-voiced hymns at the proper time.—F. A. Irving.

DOINGS AMONG THE NATIVE DAUGHTERS

Laughable Farce Pleases Mothers.

San Francisco—Presidio Parlor, No. 148, entertained the mothers of members, our annual entertainment, in the banquet-room of N. S. G. W. Hall, May 18th. The guests numbered twelve, and were entertained with singing, dancing and a very laughable farce, entitled "A Native Daughter Meeting." Professor Dinkelspiel (Mae Schmitz) asked permission to show his (her) skill as a mesmerist; the president (Adele Wentworth) declared a recess to prove to the officers and members the wondrous power of this very remarkable professor; the assistant, a remarkable boy (Emilie Clifford), proved a very susceptible victim, but unfortunately forgot a pocket handkerchief; each officer was willing to permit herself to be put to sleep by the professor, resumed, to close in regular form. Where the professor had proved his skill, retired, and the meeting resumed, to close in regular form. When the costumes worn by these officers came from none can tell, but the mothers laughed and enjoyed themselves, allowing these famous actresses to know they were greatly pleased. At the supper table each mother received a living plant. When eating became troublesome, speeches were made by members and mothers. Following these, dancing was resumed, both midnight and home-time coming too soon. Every credit is due the hard-worked committee for the success of mothers' night.

The following officers of the Parlor have been elected for the ensuing term: Past president, Mae Kane; president, Emma Miller; first vice-president, Nellie Kane, second vice-president, Argentine Koopman; third vice-president, Mollie Murphy; recording secretary, Annie C. Henly; financial secretary, Agnes Dougherty; treasurer, Minnie Burfeind; marshal, Emilie Clifford; organist, Edith Belden; inside sentinel, Mae Keating; outside sentinel, Alma Anderson; trustees—Mary Otten, Claire S. Clark, Emma McDonald; physicians, Drs. E. C. Lafontaine and M. Bertola.

Pleased at Member's Success.

Los Angeles—A very pleasant meeting was held by Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124, June 15th, the first vice-president, Miss Margaret Molony, presiding, as the president, Miss Grace Stoermer, had not returned from the Grand Parlor at Oakland. The members were all enthusiastic and delighted over the election of Miss Stoermer as Grand Trustee. She was the third biggest in the final count, and Los Angeles Parlor is justly proud of her, as she is one of the brightest members in the Parlor. Miss Katherine Baker and Mrs. Eugene Biscailuz will have charge of the banquet to be given on the evening of the first meeting in July to welcome back our returning delegates, Grand Trustee Stoermer and Mrs. Jennie Elliott.

Miss Grace Culberts will have charge of the party to be arranged for the second meeting in July, and will be assisted by Sisters Baker, Prather, Robinson and Adair. Mrs. Annie L. Adair made her report as chairman of the Central Committee on Homeless Children, and also as chairman of the press committee for the Los Angeles daily newspapers. A vote of thanks was given her by the Parlor for the efficient way in which she had performed her duties.

Will Give Whist Parties Regularly.

San Francisco—Gabrielle Parlor, No. 139, held a very successful prize whist party last month, and the members are so elated over the success of the affair, that they have decided to hold the parties regularly. The committee in charge was: Lucy Johnson (chairman), Rita Normile, Nellie Hester, Girtie Hester, Alice Collius, and Mabel Ayscough. June 3rd, the Parlor elected the following officers for the ensuing term: Bessie Roche, past president; Nellie Hester, president; Elin Machris, first vice-president; Girtie Hester, second vice-president; Edna Hansen, third vice-president; Martha Weigel, marshal; Mabel Ayscough, inside sentinel; Esther Carlson, outside sentinel; Rita Normile, Mollie Mack, Alice McLeod, trustees; Alice Collins, organist; Lucy Johnson, recording secretary; Mary Vivian, financial secretary; Josephine McQuade, treasurer.

Portola Parlor Holds Banquet.

San Francisco—Portola Parlor, No. 172, held its fifth annual banquet June 3rd. The table was tastefully decorated in pink sweet peas and pink ribbon, and each member received a wooden favor, it being the wooden anniversary of the Parlor. About thirty members attended, and a very enjoyable evening was spent, dancing being indulged in after the banquet. Ethel A. Davis, toastmistress, gave the following toast:

In nineteen hundred and nine,
We assembled at the hall;
To pledge ourselves to secrecy,
Was the motto for us all.

We called our Parlor "Portola,"
As you well understand.
Here's may we live in happiness,
In this, our Native Land.

We've had many pleasant evenings
Together, one and all;
Since then we have the woman's vote,
We also have recall.

We have gathered here this evening
To celebrate with cheers,
Our Wooden Anniversary,—
"May we live a Thousand Years."

"WE LOVE YOU, SAN FRANCISCO."

Walter J. Way of Los Angeles has written the words for a new California song, "We Love You, San Francisco,"—the music for which is by Homer Tourjee,—that promises to gain much popularity, as it is full of the California spirit of get up and do. The chorus runs:

"We love you, San Francisco,
We love your nerve and grit.
You've set a great example—
The world will follow it.
You're the pride of this great Nation,
You're the first-born of the State,—
We love you, San Francisco,
And the dear old Golden Gate."

A London syndicate has purchased $15,000,000 of the treasury stock of the Union Oil Co., a Los Angeles oil producing company.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

EVERY ELIGIBLE SHOULD

AFFILIATE WITH ORDER

(By Request of Our Beloved Retiring Grand President, MRS. ALISON WATT.)

Greeting to the Native Daughters of California: Undaunted determination and tireless energy, supplemented by fraternal concordance, have resurrected from the ashes of time a home for the Native Daughters of this Golden State in San Francisco. A refuge for the aged and indigent women of California's earlier years, a retreat for the weary and homesick sister, its portals guarding alike the youthful guest and the helpless or infirm inmate. Its hospitality extends to the officers and representatives of the various Parlors, establishing a bond of sisterhood and friendly intercourse throughout the years.

The repulses and struggles of the women who brought about this work of benevolence and sisterhood are eliminated—unrevealed—save as they pass like a vaporous cloud over the horizon of practical detail. Let it become the object of the numerous Parlors to bring into the Order new members, to inculcate the spirit of loyalty to their native State, emulate the example already established, and assist in every possible manner the interests of the Order.

There are various methods of obtaining sums of money to assist in defraying the expenses and improvements of the institution—musical entertainments, flower and fancy work sales, the selling of useful domestic articles contributed by admiring friends, a grand opportunity for earnest workers to exercise their ingenuity. Another pleasing suggestion would be for the more prosperous Parlors to accept, as a charge, one room hearing the name of that particular Parlor, and maintain the expenses of same. Once furnished, the cost of maintenance would be trifling, and that individual room would become an honor to the Parlor it represented. This suggestion has been followed, to some extent, but there is probably still room for additional improvement.

A little more enthusiasm may be expended in endeavoring to initiate new members. Pride in their native State and in the beautiful Order of Native Daughters, should encourage every California girl to wish to enter the ranks of noble women now united in the glorious effort to proclaim the new innovations of this golden land and preserve the old and dear associations of those who opened to the world the wonderful resources of a strange and wild country.

No grander hero ever faced a battlefield than the Pioneer Father, and the bravery and self-reliance of the Pioneer Mother bred a race of sons and daughters worthy of comparison with the Romans of ancient years. Bestow a laurel wreath upon the Native Sons of California for the praiseworthy restoration of the old landmarks.

A note of grateful commendation must be sounded for the philanthropy demonstrated by the placing of homeless children. The deep and abiding good of such endeavor cannot be estimated by days nor years. The writer recalls an incident of a few weeks ago, when a mother laid a loving hand, with kindly expression of affection, upon her own child's head. A little girl of the same age noticed the caress and affectionate words, and stretching both hands longingly toward the other child, said, sadly and sincerely, "Oh, don't I wish I had a mother." Tenderly a soft hand rested on the brown head and the lonely child was gathered close to a warm heart.

There are hundreds of mother hearts in our noble State, longing for the clasp of tiny fingers and the music of childish voices. Fill them from the ranks of the orphan corps. Let Golden California throb and ring with the impulses and accomplished deeds of her native born sons and daughters of the Golden West.

Party Given for Los Angeles Parlor.

Los Angeles—A delightful party was given June 4th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Molony, 348 Virgil avenue, by their daughters, Misses Margaret, Frances, and Johanna, to the members of Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124. The beautiful rooms of this capacious home were brightened with ferns and flowers, the color scheme in decoration being green and yellow. Mr. and Mrs. Molony are pioneer residents of Los Angeles, and the happy guests were received with true California hospitality. The musical numbers rendered were excellent, the instrumental players being: Miss Johanna Molony and Dr. Allan Prather, piano; F. Regali, violin, with Miss Johanna Molony as accompanist on the piano. The vocalists were Miss Mercedes Ciecelski, Mrs. Daisy Prideaux and Mrs. Alta Seazighini-Smith.

Much fun and laughter resulted when the trip in the airship was taken by the blindfolded passengers. Paul Robinson as pilot, with an able assistant at the other end, managed the craft; F. Regali acted as guide and Dr. J. G. Smith controlled the propeller. Refreshments were served at 11 o'clock. Those who enjoyed the Molony hospitality were: Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Adair, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Robinson, Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Smith, Mrs. F. J. Cunningham, Mrs. F. Prather, Mrs. E. Grese, Mrs. E. Biscailuz, Mrs. Daisy Prideaux, Mrs. G. Haven, Mrs. J. Jones; the Misses Grace Culberts, Katherine Baker, Julia Baker, Freida Comport, M. Barclay, M. Rowan, N. Rowan, Grace Stoermer, Mercedes Ciecelski; Messrs. Maehl, Canfield, Muller, Girhart, Regali, Vincent, Cunningham, Dr. Lynch, Dr. Allan Prather.

Flowers Banked High.

Jamestown—May 3rd, the Order's memorial day, was observed by Anona Parlor, No. 164, by services in the lodge-room in tribute to the memory of Mary Amelia Bristol, an honored member of the Parlor who recently passed away. Following the carrying out of the ritual, together with music and short addresses, the members marched to the cemetery, where the departed's grave was banked high with flowers.

District School Creates Fun.

Redding—One hundred and twenty guests, mostly mothers, saw the rollicking fun of a district school with Miss Ida Southern as teacher and the worst lot of urchins under the sun as pupils, conducted by Hiawatha Parlor, No. 140, May 25th, in observance of Mothers' Day. The school was in session behind locked doors and curtained windows, the members wishing to keep their "boyhood" identity a secret. When school was dismissed, a bounteous luncheon was served. Mrs. Etta Breslauer has been chosen president for the next term.

Towel Shower for Home.

Hollister—May 25th, Copa de Oro Parlor, No. 105, had one of the best attended meetings in its history, six candidates being initiated. The towel shower, for the benefit of the Native Daughters' Home in San Francisco, was prolific of results in numerous towels of all sizes and textures. A banquet, with the table loaded with a varied assortment of substantial and delicate edibles, brought the enjoyable occasion to a close.

Getting Ready.

Stockton—Joaquin Parlor, No. 5, is already making plans for the Admission Day celebration in San Francisco next year, and hopes to have the finest display in the parade. To carry out its plans, entertainments are being given to raise the necessary funds, and much success has been met with. On June 6th, a ball was given at Hotel Stockton, which proved both a social and financial success.

Funds for Monument.

Nevada City—Laurel Parlor, No. 6, conducted a sale, June 3rd, which netted $60 for the Pioneer Mothers' Monument Fund. There was a large number present, and during the evening a short literary and musical program was rendered. Among the articles placed on sale were millinery and household necessities, the product of skilled members of the Parlor.

Officers Perfect in Work.

Napa—At the meeting of Eschol Parlor, No. 16, June 1st, officers were elected and one candidate initiated, the initiatory work being exemplified in a perfect manner by all the officers. A banquet was served at the conclusion of the meeting. The Parlor will have a float in the Fourth of July parade.

Observes Mothers' Day.

Ferndale—Ononta Parlor, No. 71, observed Mothers' Day, June 2nd, by entertaining thirty of the pioneer mothers of the valley. The following program was rendered: Instrumental duet, Misses Ella Jacobsen and Matilda Petersen; vocal solo, Miss P. Duckworth; reading, Mrs. D. A. Francis; piano solo, Miss Lucille Roberts; vocal solo, Miss Edna Lund; character sketch in Dutch costume, Mrs. E. C. Mills; vocal solo, Miss May Johnson. Following this, adjournment was had to the dining-room, where delicious refreshments were served from tables decorated with the California poppy.

Officers Elected.

Nevada City—Grand President Alison F. Watt paid an informal visit to her home Parlor, Manzanita, No. 29, June 2nd, and delivered an interesting address. During the evening the following officers were elected: President, Edna Twitchell; first vice-president, Vera Hansen; second vice-president, Maria Gale; third vice-president, Lizzie Peterson; recording secretary, Hazel Hyde; financial secretary, Naomi Shoemaker; treasurer, Julia Brownell; marshal, Camille Bennetts; trustees—Lottie Phillips, Elizabeth Freeman and Margaret Scandling; organist, Emily Jeffrey; outside sentinel, Mary W. Trehicox; inside sentinel, Jennie Sampson.

Talks on Early California.

Los Angeles—At a recent meeting of La Esperanza Parlor, No. 24, the visiting members were: Miss Anna I. Dempsey, Mrs. J. A. Adair and Mrs. J. H. Corcoran of Los Angeles Parlor. One of the pleasant features of the evening was the lecture delivered by Miss Anna I. Dempsey. She told the ever-fascinating story of Father Junipero Serra and the chain of twenty-one missions established along El Camino Real with their adobe churches built by the native California Indians under supervision of the Franciscan friars, and also told of the many

The noon adjournment of the opening day was taken out of respect to P.G.P. Anna F. Lacey, recently deceased.

Vallejo was endorsed as the place for holding this year's Admission Day celebration.

Greetings were sent to Washington to Lilly O. Reichling-Dyer, founder of the Order.

The Grand President's refusal to grant a charter to another Subordinate Parlor in Stockton was sustained, and any further action in the matter will have to be taken by the new Grand President.

Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty was highly commended for her efficiency, and for the economical conduct of her office.

The Grizzly Bear Magazine was unanimously re-endorsed as the official organ of the Order, and financial provision made for continuing the publication therein of the Directory of Subordinate Parlors.

The names of Miss Kathrin Hilke and Lillian Nordica were ordered placed on the Order's roll of honor.

Maggie Wyne of Alta Parlor, No. 3, the Order's first Grand Secretary, was made a permanent member of the Grand Parlor.

Provision was made for the printing on leaflets of all amendments to the Constitution since 1910, and to be inserted in the 1910 printed Constitution.

The salary of the Grand Treasurer was increased to $25 per month, the same to be paid monthly.

In honor of the Grand Parlor meeting in Oakland, $32.50 was placed in the hands of Grand President May C. Boldemann for the erection of El Camino Real mission bell signpost at Eighth and Broadway, Oakland.

The sum of $50 was donated toward the restoration of Mission San Jose, which work is now under way by the Native Daughters and Native Sons of Alameda County.

Letters of greeting were ordered sent to all permanent members of the Grand Parlor not in attendance upon the session.

Letters and telegrams of greetings were received from various sources and ordered filed.

P.G.P. Mariana Bertola, M.D., known as the Flag Grand President of the Order, delivered an inspiring eulogy on the flag, which aroused the delegates to great enthusiasm.

At the close of the session, James J. Dignan of Piedmont Parlor, N.S.G.W., who acted as assistant secretary to the Oakland Grand Parlor Arrangements Committee, was hailed before the Grand Parlor and presented with a beautiful gold bear stick pin. P.G.P. Mae B. Wilkin made the presentation in behalf of the Grand Parlor, and expressed appreciation for Mr. Dignan's many courtesies, and for his careful attention to all the little details of arrangements that helped to make the session pleasant.

Flowers and other remembrance gifts were presented to the old and new grand officers, Past Grand Presidents, and many other Grand Parlor attendants. Among those received by Grand President Alison F. Watt was a handsome gold lavallier from her District Deputy Grand Presidents in San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Napa County by two hunters named Raney and Swope.

The editor of the Amador "Ledger" published the following article: "At the foot of the first summit of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, on the line of the Amador and Alpine wagon road, is one of the most beautiful sheets of pure crystal water in California. Surrounded by snow-capped peaks it rests in a bed hewn out of solid granite. It is appropriately named Silver Lake. A strange phenomenon frequently occurs there. On a calm morning about 10 o'clock, a noise disturbs the quiet stillness of the air and passes over the lake. At times it resembles that made by the flight of a flock of teal ducks, as they whirr through the air; at other times it is like the swish of a bar of iron; then again like the cracking sound of the unbending of sheet iron. The sound appears to come from the east, moving to the west, then switching from north to south. It is a strange and awe-inspiring sound. The Indians avoid the lake, believing, from this cause, it is haunted by the spirits of the departed."

This month highwaymen and stage robbers occupied the public mind to an exciting degree. As the drought had driven blackbirds to foraging on growing grain and jack rabbits to girdling fruit trees for food, so, apparently, lack of employment was sending men to prey upon the pockets of travelers for the necessities of life.

On July 3rd, a number of men stopped the stage from Washoe, near the Glenbrook House, and finding no Wells, Fargo & Co. treasure aboard, robbed the driver of $140.

The stage from San Jose to Los Angeles was stopped near Natividad by four or five men and about $2000 taken from the passengers and express.

On July 5th three highwaymen robbed a chicken peddler near Goodyear Bar of $240.

On July 8th, two highwaymen robbed two teamsters near Lake Tahoe of $650.

Edward Brandon of Placerville went in pursuit of a man who had robbed his saloon of money and a shot gun. The robber saw him coming, and got the drop on him before he was aware and made him give up a revolver and his horse.

Rob Stage to Help Confederates.

Many other robberies, where small amounts were obtained, were reported from the mountain towns, showing this form of lawlessness had broken loose. There were some disasters to the gentry that made it a period of bad luck to quite a number.

On July 23rd, two miles east of Strawberry, an Irishman, trudging westward from Washoe with several hundred dollars in his pocket, was stopped by a highwayman, who, presenting a cocked revolver at his head, demanded his money. The Irishman carried a large shillelah in his hand, which he quickly raised and brought down upon the arm of the would-be robber, breaking it and causing him to drop his gun. He then delivered a forcible blow with the stick upon the robber's head, knocking him senseless. Leaving him lying by the side of the road, he walked to Strawberry and reported the occurrence to the people living there. They sent out and brought the disabled robber in, and he was considered to be in a very precarious condition.

A stage robber who was connected with the Gassaway gang, named Isaac McCullum, died at Spanish Bar, El Dorado County. He was with the gang when they stopped the Georgetown stage in June, and was accidentally shot by Thad. Gassaway. In mounting his horse, Gassaway's shotgun was discharged and the charge hit McCullum's thigh. He died from the effects of the wound. He was, a few years before, a hard-working miner, educated and intelligent. He went to the southern mines with a partner and bought a mule from a Mexican. The animal had been stolen, and McCullum was arrested as the thief. He was convicted on circumstantial evidence and sent to the state prison. He served out his term, and then declared his intention, as his character had been destroyed, of being an outlaw the rest of his life.

When the Washoe stage was robbed on June 30th by seven men, fifteen miles above Placerville, the leader handed the stage driver a receipt reading as follows: "June, 1864. This is to certify that I have received from Wells, Fargo & Co. the sum of — dollars, said amount to be used in securing enlistments in the state for the Confederate service. Henry M. Ingraham, Captain, Com. C. S. A." The men also declared, while holding up the stage, that they were acting in behalf of the Confederate states army.

It was at first looked upon as a joke, but later developments showed that the robbers were really in earnest with their statements. The leader proved to be a man named Ingraham, who had come to California from Missouri with the crazy idea that he could organize a force, appropriate the treasure shipments from Washoe, and aid the Confederate cause. He had a captain's commission in the C.S.A., and had quite a number of deluded followers who were induced to enlist in his aid. Two of the stage robbers, named Thomas Finney and Wm. J. Belcher, were captured on July 1st near the place of robbery, and with Poole, who was wounded at the Somerset House when Deputy Sheriff Staples was killed, made three in custody, and from whom it was ascertained the gang came from Santa Clara County, also what their intentions were.

San Joseans Implicated in Robbery.

The five men that escaped from the Somerset House made a quick ride across Amador County into Calaveras County and camped on a high mountain about twelve miles from Mokelumne Hill. From here they had a view of a large extent of country and their location was unknown to the fifty or more officers and deputies in pursuit. One evening they noticed approaching the mountain what appeared to be a posse on twenty or more horses. Concluding it was too large a number for them to successfully fight, they decided on flight and, leaving their horses, equipment and part of the stolen treasure they had with them, departed afoot. They made their way across the San Joaquin Valley and finally rendezvoused on the premises of a man named Hill, a mile and a half from San Jose on the Amador road.

Hill gave the sheriff of Santa Clara County information that, on July 15th, caused Sheriff Adams, with Marshal Potter and eight men, to surround the house and demand the surrender of the stage robbers. A big fight ensued, in which Sheriff Adams was struck in the breast by a bullet. It was deflected by his watch and made only a flesh wound. Marshal Potter was wounded twice. Of the stage robbers, John Creal, aged 24 years, was killed; John Clendenning, aged 30 years, was mortally wounded and died a few days afterward; A. Glasby, aged 19 years, was captured, while two others escaped.

Glasby was taken to Placerville, where he made a confession that resulted in Deputy Sheriffs Hume and Van Eton finding their temporary camp in Calaveras County, recovering the treasure hid there and finding their horses and equipment. It turned out that the party they saw approaching the mountain was a gang of horse thieves with a drove of stolen horses making for a camp they had at the foot of the mountain and the precipitate flight of the robbers was from a false alarm. Glasby's confession implicated a large number of citizens of San Jose as accessories before and after the fact, and during the latter part of the month eleven citizens of that place were arrested and taken to Placerville to answer to the charge.

Capt. Ingraham was known in guerilla warfare in Missouri as the "Red Fox" and was a fanatic in the Southern cause. It also transpired that when the stage was allowed to proceed after the hold-up, and was moving off, a policeman from San Francisco named McDougall, seated inside of the stage, shot at Poole from a stage window. The ball would have hit him in the breast, had he not been holding his revolver in front of him and the ball hit the chamber of the revolver, knocking that weapon out of commission. The result of this foolhardy proposition was now one deputy sheriff and two stage robbers dead; twelve men in jail charged with crime and several others at large; an expenditure of $10,000 in rewards and expense to the express company and thousands by El Dorado County, without any financial or moral benefit to the cause these men tried to serve.

STATE ACCIDENT COMMISSION

DOING BIG BUSINESS.

For the information of the public, the State Industrial Accident Commission gives the following information of interest: During the first four and one-half months of its operations, the State Compensation Insurance Fund has written premiums aggregating $350,000. In view of the fact that on January 1st the estimate of probable business for the entire first year was $250,000, it is to be noted that the estimate has been exceeded by $100,000 during the first four and one-half months, with seven and one-half months of the year still remaining.

These premiums of $350,000 represent an estimated annual payroll of $50,000,000, and about 55,000 workers thus affected by insurance in the State fund. During the period referred to, the number of accidents reported and covered by State Compensation Insurance Fund policies was 980.

More than 858,000 young trees are being set out this spring on National Forests in Utah and Southern Idaho, and the season is reported as particularly favorable to their successful growth.

INCIDENTS AND PEOPLE OF EARLY SAN FRANCISCO

(By KATHERINE COOPER, Past President Santa Cruz Parlor, N. D. G. W.)

SOCIETY IN SAN FRANCISCO, IN the '60s and '70s, was very different from what it is today. Now it is most cosmopolitan; then, the classes were more distinctly drawn. The aristocratic Southern set and the professional people mingled together; the trades people, with few exceptions, had a class of their own, and the rest formed the balance of society. Thus three distinct classes existed at that period.

When the Civil War broke out, San Francisco, though remote from the trouble, was no exception to the universal disturbance, for feeling ran very high. Even the churches were involved in the dispute, especially Calvary Presbyterian Church, of which Dr. W. A. Scott was the minister. On the morning of September 22, 1861, an effigy, designed to represent Dr. Scott, was found hanging from a signboard between two houses on Bush street, opposite Calvary Church. A placard with the words, "Death to Traitors," was appended. The figure was composed of a full suit of black, stuffed with straw. It was removed by the police.

During the night two small American flags had been raised on the roof of the church, and a number of persons remained in the neighborhood to watch the result. Afterwards, a full-sized regulation flag was adjusted to the parapet by a man named Norris, a Union sympathizer, and was as promptly torn down by Mrs. Duprey, then Mrs. Nelson, a member of the church, whose sympathy was with the South. She was afterwards the mother of Eugene Duprey, a well-known attorney, now deceased. The crowd rushed in to preserve the flag. Norris then returned, and supposing the crowd was pulling it down, claimed it as his own property. The crowd mistook his intentions, and he was severely beaten, and thrown over the parapet, a distance of twelve feet. He said he did not mind the injuries so much as the fact that the crowd mistook him for a secessionist.

From this moment the crowd increased rapidly, and an hour before service commenced fully three thousand men were assembled in front of the church yard. The entire police force was there, and five hundred men of the secret Union organization were present, distributed around a pile of bricks, anticipating that these bricks would be used in an assault on the church. Inside the church, galleries were packed with men. Many women were alarmed, and did not attempt to go into the church, but a number, braver than the rest, entered and found seats. Dr. Scott was not seen to enter the church, but at the usual time he appeared in the pulpit, entering from his studio. In his opening prayer he besought protection for all in authority, and urged that justice might prevail, but uttered no exceptionable words. The subject of his discourse was "Ministers of the Gospel Are God's Ambassadors." He was listened to with respectful attention throughout the service.

The police were drawn up in the vestibule, under orders to arrest the first sign of disorder of any sort. Everything had passed quietly so far that the volunteer police disorganized and went home, but the crowd in the street was augmented, rather than decreased. As the congregation passed out of the church, the crowd opened a passageway, but closed up again on the appearance of Dr. Scott on the threshold of the main entrance. At this moment a man took hold of one corner of the flag and stretched it across the steps, so that Dr. Scott would have to pass under the flag to reach his carriage. After a moment's pause to survey the crowd, Dr. Scott descended to the street with Mrs. S. H. Selby on his arm. They were completely surrounded by the police. Mrs. Scott was escorted by Mr. Selby and her son, a lad of eighteen years. It required all the exertions of the police to get Dr. Scott and his companions into the carriage. The chief and captain of police mounted the footboard of the carriage, while the rest of the police fought the crowd.

DR. W. A. SCOTT.
Prominent in Civil War Times.

During the struggle young Scott struck a man who was particularly active in obstructing the passage of Dr. Scott. Immediately someone proposed to hang young Scott, and there was another rush, but the young man was saved by the police. He had drawn a pistol, but it was taken from him before he had time to use it. At the police station a charge of misdemeanor was entered against young Scott, but he was released on his own recognizance. To the determined bravery of the regular police is alone due the prevention of bloodshed, as a pistol shot would have precipitated a terrible fight, there being many friends of Dr. Scott present, armed to the teeth. George Lark and Edward Gillespie were arrested for striking Officers Baker and Conway. The affair was very much regretted. Not a single well-known citizen was recognized as taking part in the riot.

The women of San Francisco, not to be outdone by their Eastern sisters during the war, organized a branch Christian Commission, which we would now call the Red Cross, and, to raise funds for sanitary and hospital purposes, gave a large fair at Union Hall, through which they raised a large sum of money. It was, as usual, a fair by day and an entertainment by night, the entertainment consisting of tableau and statuary, under the direction of Mrs. Mariner (Campbell) and Mrs. M. E. Wakeman. Thus the San Francisco people, though not active participants in the war, shared somewhat in its actual trials and tribulations, and gave what help they could to both sides.

The Mercantile Library of San Francisco is well known to all San Franciscans, but its struggle to maintain itself may have passed into history, and an incident in the year 1869 only remains in the memory of the early inhabitants. It was then realized that something must be done to put this institution upon a financial basis, and that right speedily. Therefore, W. H. L. Barnes offered his services to play "Rosedale" for its benefit, and thereby hangs another tale. Larnence Barrett had recently successfully portrayed Elliot Grey in that popular piece, and Mr. Barnes, a friend of the popular actor, or some of his friends, I have forgotten which, made a wager for the benefit of the library fund that he, too, could play Elliot Grey in "Rosedale," and he surely did it to perfection.

A large and fashionable audience attended, paying $5, $2.50 and $1 for seats, thus realizing $5,000. Mr. Barnes also made a speech, and said that he always thought acting was play, but he now realized his mistake; it was the hardest work he had ever done, and he saw before him at least one hundred men who could give $1,000 each with less effort or sacrifice than this effort had cost him. It is needless to say that in those days there was ready response. Of the presentation of the play itself, it was said by all who saw it that professionals could do no better, and the various songs were received with great applause. Gifted with oratorical powers given to few and a pleasing personality, General Barnes was more than equal to the occasion, and the cause for which he labored added greater strength to his efforts.

An interesting personage in the '60 and '70s was "Emperor Norton," who walked the streets of the city dressed in a peculiar uniform, and possessed of an hallucination instead of dollars. He was perfectly harmless, and everybody respected and humored him. I remember at Platt's Hall, when a cantata was being presented for the benefit of the Episcopal Church, "Emperor Norton" came forward and threw a buttonhole bouquet to Miss Gerie Garrett, the leading woman, and a very beautiful girl. With quick and characteristic intuition she received it, and threw the "Emperor" a kiss of acceptance. High and low thus humored and tolerated his majesty, "Emperor Ist."

There were then strange characters who walked the streets, such as "Guttersnipe," who was always picking cigar stumps out of the gutter; the "Great Unknown," whose cognomen designates his distinction, and "Topsy Turvey," a weird looking individual. The decline and fall of the hills of San Francisco, and the obliteration of its cemeteries, carry much of its history to oblivion, and a few more years will wipe out its picturesqueness. When it becomes a modern city, it will lose its attractiveness, but to the unthinking commercial age it will acquire a new distinction of dollars and cents.

SPEAK OF A REVOLUTION IN the commerce and business of the world, and in the value of labor and property. Two substances alone, gold and silver, are accepted standards of value and universal mediums of exchange. Like all other articles, the intrinsic value of these metals is regulated by the quantity produced, the cost of production, and the demand for their use. The demand has increased with the expansion of commerce, but its increase bears no ratio to the increased supply. The value of the whole amount of gold and silver in the Old World, at the discovery of America, was estimated to be $170,000,000, and the total annual production of gold in the world, for some years previous to 1848, was valued at but $20,000,000. At this rate, it would have required a century to produce $2,000,000,000.

Within the past twenty years, there has been added to the stock of precious metals more than this latter sum. The obvious result would be, as it has been, to diminish the exchangeable value of gold and silver, so that, to procure many of the necessities and comforts of life, requires about three times as much money as it did twenty years ago. This, however, is not the time to weary you, but the time for largeness of view, for largeness of sympathy, for the emergence of men of calibre, integrity and disinterestedness into the light of our today's success.

We may reasonably rejoice and be glad, but in the light of the responsibility it brings to us as a community, we may reasonably be sober of wine. It really, though, is a great day for California. Through long years the Pioneers and their sons have waited in patient faith for the world to realize the meaning for mankind of this sun-blessed strip of land pent up and hidden between the thousand upon thousand miles of ocean. And now, at last, the day has come when that isolated strip is to be brought into its world place and its world mission.

All through the long years it brooded here alone, and then through sixty-three years of national connection. Now, it comes to its own, being recognized as the goal and purpose of that great work on the Isthmus which constitutes, in all history, man's most drastic act of subjugating Nature. It comes to its own not only as the most perfect place upon the globe for man to live in, and to grow in, but as the Nation's facade through which it looks out into the great areas of waters and faces its duty for ages.

The Oregon and Mexican treaties gave us a new geography, but neither Oregon with its majestic river, its productive soil and its continuous woods, nor California with its healthful and equable climate, was accessible to immigration by any except the roving trapper and frontiersman. Ranges intervened between the states of the Union and the newly acquired territory along the Pacific. The thirst for gold in 1849 and the few following years stimulated a multitude to defy all dangers and difficulties in the effort to reach the new El Dorado. An almost continuous line of immigrants crossed the plains and reached the Pacific, way-worn with travel and decimated by famine, pestilence and massacre. Another army crowded steamers and sailing vessels for the Isthmus of Panama, and encountered the miasma of the tropics and the discomforts of a voyage in overcrowded and ill-supplied vessels.

Thus, by sea and land, the stream of adventurers poured into the region of gold. Europe added its contribution, and the penal colonies of Great Britain also, some of which latter were of indifferent quality. So they came, in 1849 and 1850, a vast throng, mostly men in the prime of life, full of adventurous energy, the elite of the enterprise of older elements.

The early immigration was composed of heterogeneous elements. All forms of vice and dissipation were indulged in unblushingly by men and women set loose from the restraint of settled society, and freed from the control of a sound public sentiment. There were many noble spirits who labored to lay broad and deep the foundation of religious, educational and charitable institutions, and to organize republican government on these shores. Some of them have rested from their labors, leaving behind movements more enduring than marble; and some are still pursuing their careers of usefulness among us. In looking back at the past, how chequered is the prospect.

Conflagrations have swept over cities and towns with the besom of destruction. The commercial metropolis of the State has more than once been almost wholly destroyed by fire, with no insurance to repair the broken fortunes of its citizens. And the present Capital has suffered not only from fire, but from the most appalling of disasters, flood. Mercantile embarrassments and disaster, extreme depreciation of property values, superadded to the ruin wrought by flood and fire. There are shadows in the picture, like all of this world's experience, but in disaster and distress, energy vindicated its claim to supremacy over all obstacles of accident, and of nature.

The winter of our discontent has been exchanged for glorious summer, and a stable edifice of prosperity has been reared upon the ruins of our shattered fortune. No more invincible perseverance has ever been manifested by any community under disheartening circumstances, than by that which is termed one of the great cities of the United States—San Francisco—and her citizens are, at last, sharing with those of other cities a prosperity beyond that of any former period, and rejoicing in the certainty of a bright future.

For this first year of the California experience, those who were here felt many longings for the old homes and friends they had left beyond the mountains. An intense desire for some rapid and direct communication with the Eastern states pervaded the mass of the population, and was never absent from their thoughts by day or from their dreams by night. The lack of it induced many to bid a reluctant farewell to the sunny skies and attractive scenes of California, and seek their former homes east of the mountains.

In the winter of 1849-50 the streets of San Francisco were thronged with miners driven there for shelter from the inclemency of the seasons. The prevailing style of dress was a flannel shirt, in lieu of a coat, and in addition to the ordinary nether garment a pair of long boots, purchased at the moderate price of six ounces in gold dust, or ninety-six dollars. Most of the large rooms in the city were used as gambling saloons, with the accessories of bands of music and well-stocked bars. Here, day after day, were to be seen dense crowds of men of all nationalities and races, bending in absorbed attention over the gaming table, ignoring all distinctions of race or color in the excitement of play. Comparatively few were without weapons, and yet the number of homicides was relatively small. The sight of a woman passing was sufficiently rare to cause a street full of men to stop and turn to look at her. The advent of spring dispersed the crowds of miners throughout the mountains, and produced a stagnation of business, for the time, in San Francisco. But I must not weary your patience by dwelling upon the scenes of the past, so familiar in memory to a few of you. Suffice to say the public gaming-house was soon succeeded by the schoolhouse, the hospital, and the sanctuary. The common law, and a code of well-considered statutes, superseded the vague, uncertain, and strange rules of Mexican civil law, and courts, organized in accordance with American usages, took the place of the unfamiliar and irregular judicial administration of courts of first instance.

One thing must be said in honor of our people, and it is but justice to say it: No more liberal, even lavish, charities ever characterized any community than those dispersed by the people of this State. The direction then given to benevolent impulses will never cease to be felt. Those charities conferred lasting honor upon our State, and reflected credit upon human nature. They were the offspring of circumstances. Men came here strangers, without families and homes. There was present a feeling of mutual dependence. Wealth, too, was easily acquired, and, as a consequence, lightly esteemed. Open-handed charity was the custom, and the people were educated to give at any time to any worthy object. Hence, the benefactions of which California has been prolific and which are known to the world, and hence the facility with which money can be obtained among us for any worthy or laudable purpose.

California, in the early days, was known to possess mineral wealth, and this was thought to be her only attraction, aside from climate. The general judgment was that the country was worthless for agriculture. The long drought of summers was thought to render profitable husbandry impossible. On approaching her shores, we were told that the earth became so parched with drought in the dry season, that it was rent with fissures, which, in some districts, rendered journeying unsafe. Trees, it was thought, would perish in summer, from lack of moisture.

Such was California in the past, with neither schools, hospitals nor churches; with few public journals, with no agriculture, no firesides or children, no settled public sentiment, no railways or telegraphs, no ships, yards, wharves or docks, no public buildings, no manufactures, and no communication with the East except by three small steamships, the nucleus of our present steam marine.

The country, however, was here, with its cloudless sky and its healthful air, its fruitful soil, its noble harbor and bays, and its watercourses opening access to the two great inland valleys. And the Pioneers were here, with faith in its future, with fixedness of purpose, with large hearts and stalwart arms. This was their past. What is our present?

But little more than sixty years have gone, and what has been accomplished? Look around you, and see the numberless philanthropic and benevolent institutions which now constitute your highest praise.

Agriculture, not mining, is now the basis of our prosperity, the sinew of our commerce, and the source of our wealth. The fame of our gold is eclipsed by that of our wheat. Agriculture is daily becoming of greater interest, and gold mining, relatively, if not absolutely, less. Breadstuffs, wool, wine and silk seem now developing into the great industries of our State, but our agriculture will naturally be diversified and profitable, beyond what would be possible elsewhere, owing to the peculiarities of our climate.

The other feature of our present is the great canal of the Pacific, the completion of which we are jubilating today. If any one had asserted, some years ago, that today would find us rejoicing over a completed canal from ocean to ocean, he would have been ridiculed as an idle dreamer. It is due to candor and truth to say that, even after the large appropriation by Congress, the number of those who regarded this great enterprise as a failure exceeded the number of those who expected to witness its completion.

It is unnecessary to give a history of a work with which you are all so familiar. Many of you have read and know more than I could tell you of the work. I am not here to court the praises of individuals or of communities, but it is simple justice to say that the men who projected, and successfully executed, this gigantic undertaking have exhibited a degree of foresight, of industry, sagacity and business capability which merit high praise.

I have thus, in these discursive remarks, glanced briefly at the past and present of California. What shall be said of her future? Lift your eyes and expand your conceptions to take in the magnitude of her destiny. An empire in area, presenting advantages and attractions to the people of the Eastern States and Europe far beyond those presented by any other states or territory, who will set limit to her progress, or paint in fitting colors the splendor of her future?

When we reflect upon what has transpired during the sixty years that have past, isolated as the State has been, what will be her progress during the sixty years that are to come. Extrinsic causes, of course, may influence our destiny for good or evil. Mismanagement at home or at Washington, profligate public expenditure, foreign war, and unwise legislation, famine or pestilence, may, at times, retard our progress; but if the people of California are true to themselves, this State is destined to a high position, not only among her sister states, but among the commonwealths of the world.

What is to be her future in the useful arts, with the popular intellect trained and developed by a complete system of general education? In the fine arts, when the exquisite tints of her landscapes and sky and the stupendous scenery of her mountains are transferred in glowing colors to the canvas, and the sculptor's genius chisels into forms of beauty the marble of her quarries? In commerce, when trade is freed from its shackles, when her ships visit every shore and her merchant princes control the commerce of this great ocean? In agriculture, when our wine and wheat are as eagerly sought after as our gold and silver? In science and literature, when institutions of learning of the first order afford every facility, and accumulated wealth secures leisure for scientific and literary pursuit?

In the answer to these questions, we might be charged by our Eastern brethren with blind partiality and exaggeration. We are content to leave the answer to them. The day is at hand when a more splendid civilization than any which has preceded will arise upon these distant shores.

A vast population will pour into this Canaan of the New World. Already we have heard the hum of preparation in every quarter; already we listen to the tread of the advancing hosts. From the north, east, and south, from the lakes to the gulf, the swelling tide of population will gather volume,

HOW CALIFORNIA'S HOMELESS CHILDREN ARE AIDED

WE ALL KNOW THAT OUR WORTHY Grand President (Alison F. Watt)—has not missed an opportunity during the past year to speak in behalf of the Homeless Children, and there is no doubt in the minds of the members of the Central Committee that our Grand President has done much to stimulate and renew interest in this good work. This renewed interest manifests itself, I think, in the increased number of letters which come to our office almost every day, asking further details of the work, offering words of encouragement and enthusiasm, and also in the attention that is being given to the sending in of the names of the members of the newly appointed Homeless Children's Committees of the local Parlor.

Less than a year ago, two friends of mine, one of them a Native Daughter and the other a Canadian girl, had occasion to go to a small grocery store in their neighborhood owned by an Italian man and wife. While waiting for their packages to be wrapped, they talked with the little Italian woman, complimenting her on the neatness of her store and home, and the completeness and quality of their stock; she looked up at them with great, wistful, brown eyes, such as only the Italian women have, and said: "Ya, I got a fina store, gooda man, nice house, but I can no get baby."

My friends agreed that it was a pity that no child had been born to them to gladden their home and enjoy the wealth of affection and benefit of their thrift, and when they got outside my Canadian friend, who is interested in this work as it is being carried on by the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West, said to my California friend: "Aren't you a Native Daughter? Why under the sun didn't you tell that poor child-hungry woman about the Homeless Children's Committee? I am sure that is a splendid home for a foreign child." The Native Daughter came to a sudden stop and then exclaimed: "Pon my word, I never thought about it! Let's go back," which they did, with the result that a fine four-months-old Italian boy was placed in that good home very soon afterwards.

Now, by renewed interest. I mean that there would not now be a repetition of that sort of thing. I do not believe that it would be possible for any woman to mention in the presence of a Native Daughter that she contemplated, even as a remote possibility, taking a child for adoption but that that Native Daughter would immediately say: "Here is a chance for one of our homeless children." She might not so remark to the applicant, preferring first to convince herself that the home would be in every way satisfactory, but she would not forget the homeless children, I am sure of that.

Work Affords Unity of Purpose.

Two Native Sons very enthusiastic about the children's work came into our office about two weeks ago and after looking over our yearly report one of them said, "Do you know, it's a queer thing to me, but the women,—the mothers, the Native Daughters,—do not seem as interested in this work as the Native Sons." I did not wait for the other Native Son to reply before saying: "You are judging entirely from a financial standpoint; the work done by the Native Daughters does not loom up in dollars and cents, but you are failing to consider the difference in the number of Parlors and members; you are failing to take into consideration the inestimable value of their investigations of the homes; the work, with its disagreeable features, sometimes, of accepting the children from the courts; the long drives over rough roads to visit the children; the teachers who go, after a day's work, or give their Saturdays to the cause of the children; the sending in of lengthy communications concerning the progress of a child, and the interviews with parents when things go wrong. But why, as a matter of fact, make comparisons at all. Here is a work—the welfare of a child—which demands the very best there is in every man and woman. Here is a work in which there can be absolute unity of purpose and the very closest of co-operation between the Native Sons and the Native Daughters of the Golden West."

It is disappointing, at times, to the members of the Central Committee, that there should be one Parlor of Native Sons or Native Daughters not identified with this work. I am just suffragette enough, militant enough, with confidence enough in my sex, to believe that there isn't anything a woman cannot do if she really, truly wants to do it—if she, way down deep, wants to do it. And

At the meeting of the Grand Parlor, Native Daughters of the Golden West, in Oakland in June, Miss Mary E. Brusie, secretary of the Native Sons and Native Daughters Central Committee for Homeless Children, supplemented the printed statistical report of the year's work with a most interesting account of the Agency and the methods pursued in carrying on the work.

That the Native Sons and Native Daughters, as well as the public generally, may be correctly informed as to the great work these Orders, through their Central Committee, are doing in behalf of the homeless child, this supplemental report is herewith published.

During the meeting, Mrs. Emma Lillie-Humphrey, Past Grand President and former secretary of the Agency, and Miss Brusie distributed little buttons, of which the illustration is a likeness, prepared at their own expense, as mementos, saying, "We want everyone of you Native Daughters to wear it where the little homeless head would rest—here, on your breast." The button is a reproduction of a photograph of one of the Agency's homeless children, now happily placed in a good home.

Doesn't he look sweet and contented? That's the way all California's homeless children should look. And they will, if the Native Sons and Native Daughters are given your moral and financial aid in their efforts to find homes for the homeless and children for the childless.—Editor.

if a woman does not want to do for a child, needing love and affection and home and parents,—if her heart hath never within her burned with longing to do something, whatever she can, for some poor child less fortunate than her own,—something is the matter.

In my four and one-half years of social work before my delightful two years under your first secretary, Mrs. Lillie-Humphrey, I used to find that whenever we wanted anything done our women always did it. If we wanted milk for our malnutrition babies, the good women of the Collegiate Alumnae saw to it that we got it; if we wanted eggs and milk and fruit for our sick and convalescent children, the young women of the fashionable boarding schools and the King's Daughters saw that we had it; if we wanted clothes, our mothers' elms and sewing guilds made them for us.

Any Children's Clothes?

And right here I want to say that if any of you mothers or sisters or aunts have, tucked away in chest or drawer, any children's outgrown clothes in good condition, that you parcel post them to 855 Phelan Building, San Francisco. There is no doubt in our minds that we were fortunate in securing an exceptionally fine home for a little girl of five, whom we had previously sent several persons to see, just because we dressed her up a bit in a pretty little frock that one of our foster-mothers had sent in to us. The child was to meet her prospective parents in our offices and when she came in the door in her muddy brown-and-green-plaid worsted dress, with a brickish red bow in her reddish hair, she was not prepossessing, you may be sure. So we whisked her into a little white pique dress, trimmed in blue embroidery, a little low in the neck,—showing her fine, white skin,—and short sleeves,—which displayed the dimpled elbows,—and put a perky bow the color of her eyes in her hair, and you may be sure she was a very attractive looking little girl.

It is quite possible if you were to happen into our office some of these days you would find all sorts of things going on. You might find a small boy perched on the table swathed in a great towel, sputtering and rebelling at a home hair cut, just prior to his trip to his new parents. You would find bottles and nipples boiling perhaps, and spread out on two chairs an animated shawl,—from the depths of which there might arise an unmistakable squall. Everywhere you would find preparations for a journey which would end in some good home for a child. I am glad that you do not have the sleepless nights on the train, with the early morning solace of overhearing some crusty old man complaining to the porter about the squalling kid that kept him awake all night. And the funniest thing about these crusty old men is that the one who grumbles the hardest is usually the one from whose berth there has emanated, the entire night, the loudest, and the deepest, and the most prolonged snore. I am glad you miss the long stage rides, the getting up early in the morning, the uncertain train schedules, uncomfortable hotels, unclean beds, wretched eating places, the long walks through plowed fields sometimes, the getting home at midnight.

I am glad that you miss all this, but I am sorry that you must miss the smile of the waiting mother at the train, the glad tears in her eyes, as she snuggles the baby to her heart and presses its face against her own; that you miss the awkward tenderness of the father as he awaits his turn for a peek at the bit of humanity, trying all the time to appear to the onlookers that he isn't wild about it. I am sorry that you must miss the great open-eyed wonderment in the small boy's eyes, as he looks across the fields of waving grain and the distant wooded hills and watches the fat old farm horses disappearing into the fine big barn; that you miss seeing him throw back his head and inflate his chest, as he cries, "This, sure, is good enough for me." But you do not need to miss watching these children develop; you have the opportunity to watch the puny, delicate-looking little baby grow into a strong, healthy child; you have the opportunity to see the backward, shrinking, institutional boy or girl blossom into a self-confident, spontaneous, normal child.

Every Detail Carefully Investigated.

We find that applicants often come to our office expecting to find our children hanging up like the lanterns and tin pails in the country stores, as in my home town in Amador County, where they may look about and say: "Well, I think I'll take that one." Instead, they find that the babies are boarded out by the different societies in private homes in different parts of the city and in the care of some good, motherly woman. Sometimes they are a little discouraged to find that, in order to see the children, they must travel about from place to place, but realizing that nothing was ever worth while that didn't require some effort, they go cheerfully to visit the children and come back convinced that the individual care is infinitely better than attempting to care for them in a home or institution.

Many times our applicants do not understand why the investigations are so necessary; why they must fill out an application telling their life history. They feel that the very fact that they are willing to take some waif into their heart and home is sufficient proof of their motives and good intentions, and their respectability. We tell them sometimes of a well-dressed, distinguished-looking physician who came into our office with his pretty, stylish, sweet-appearing young wife, to get a little girl a year and a half or two years old. After an hour of questioning on the part of the doctor as to the antecedents of the children we had placed from

NEED EDUCATION, NOT POLICE

The "chemicals" employed in making Los Angeles "pure" either were adulterated or have lost their effectiveness, if one is to believe the "John Darger" articles that have been daily appearing in the "Record" of that city the past month, and in which are presented to the public, vice conditions that, as Shakespeare says, "stink and shine, and shine and stink, like a dead mackerel rotting in the moonlight."

The chief of police, on the first day of the exposure series, denied that the ordinances by which the city of Los Angeles was made "chemically pure" were being disobeyed. But, when the articles continued, direct breaches of the law were pointed out, and the City Council increased the "chemical" fund to $900 per month, the chief put out an additional "purity" squad, and arrests have been made by the hundreds every day since.

These statements are simply preliminary to asserting that, if the "Record's" articles concerning vice conditions in Los Angeles are true,—and credence is given them from the fact that the police have been overworked apprehending the violators of the city's numerous ordinances to stamp out all social evils and the lowest forms of vice,—the oft-repeated assertion that these conditions can even be regulated, much less eliminated, by law, is not borne out.

Los Angeles has no prescribed "redlight" district, but prostitution, with its attendant horde of male and female degenerates, flourishes in practically every section of the city, the residence as well as the business districts. And we believe we are safe in saying that more cases of "contributing to the delinquency of a female minor" are recorded in the City of Angels, in comparison with population, than in any other city in California.

God Almighty's laws have not succeeded in keeping social evils and vice out of the world; neither will man-made laws. And Los Angeles is no worse, nor better, than any other large city in this regard. Where the laws against such conditions are strictly enforced—which is seldom, or, at best, spasmodic,—the evil is decreased, or temporarily lessened, but never exterminated.

The police of Los Angeles, and every other city, no doubt do the best they can, but it would bankrupt the taxpayers to maintain in any large community a sufficient force to completely purify that community of social evils, or any other form of crime. And the tendency of the Courts to extend parole to white-slavers, outragers of girls, and other social degenerates, has a decided tendency to not only discourage the law-enforcers, but to increase the evils.

Education is the only means of successfully combatting with this world-old question. It is a vicious custom that has established two codes of morals, one for men and the other for women, and it is that custom, and Society, its sponsor, which are largely responsible for present conditions.

There is every reason why man should keep himself as morally pure as woman, and it is the duty of Society to as readily declare an outcast the male consort of the prostitute as to so brand the prostitute herself. In the eyes of God, the one is as morally unclean as the other, but Society, by custom, has decreed otherwise, and it is because of this custom that we are confronted with increasing social evils.

Education, along proper lines, will, eventually, largely eradicate these evils. They can, without the performance of a miracle, never be exterminated, so long as beasts in human form—commonly referred to as white-slavers, maegueraux and outragers of girls—roam about in civilized communities, seeking whom they might devour.

Let Society enter upon and relentlessly wage such an educational campaign, and it will then be doing something of material benefit to mankind and womankind. And let our Courts and in the campaign by, without exception on account of influence, refusing probation to any of these convicted beasts. In short, let The People unite to combat the social evils. The People and Education can accomplish a world of good, whereas the police and laws are powerless.

"The Zone?" Why, that's the name given the main avenue in the amusement section of San Francisco's Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

When the press makes references to early California history that are not only ludicrous, but denote absolute ignorance on the subject, who can argue that California history should not be taught in our public schools?

For instance, in referring to the Bear Flag Monument unveiling at Sonoma in June several papers said the monument marked "the spot where the American flag was first raised in Sonoma by General F. M. Winn."

And again, when publishing an account of the death of James McChristian (referred to elsewhere in this issue), practically every paper in the State, including the "big" dailies, alluded to him as "the last survivor of the Bear Flag Party."

The Sonoma monument marks the spot where the "California Republic" flag (commonly known as the Bear flag) was hoisted by the Bear Flag Party, June 14, 1846, of which party Mr. McChristian was not a member.

The National Woman Suffrage Association has appealed to the President to establish the first Saturday in May of each year as "Woman's Independence Day." Women ought to be, and generally are, independent every day in the year.

CALIFORNIA'S FIRST FLOWER
SCIENTIFICALLY NAMED

(By ANNA GEIL ANDRESEN, Salinas.)

SAND VERBENA
(ABRONIA UMBELLATA.)

"The seeds of this plant were sent to France by the botanist of the first scientific expedition to Monterey Bay, under La Perouse, the great French explorer and scientist, in 1786.

"This is the first flower from California to receive scientific name,"—Pacific Grove Museum's Accounts of La Perouse.

It was very lowly and very humble. It was just a modest and meek little flower that, in its little way, helped to relieve the monotony of the white sand along the seashore by its delicate hues and slender trailing form.

So many years, yes, for centuries, it had looked out upon beautiful Monterey Bay and watched the natives of the forest gather their food from the bosom of the blue waters. Indeed, it had, on occasions, ventured a sweet smile, almost half-afraid, as these children of nature, in artless fashion, made merry on the eireling shore.

In all these centuries no one had ever taken a personal interest in this frail and unobtrusive little dweller by the sea. But one day, Fate brought a "big canoe" to the harbor of Monterey. It was terrifying in its bigness; and full of strange men, so different from the natives of the adjoining forest.

The books say this strange happening was in the remote year of 1786; that the "big canoe" had sailed over many seas and under many skies from a far-away land called France; that the men aboard her had come to seek nature's beauties and to explore these unfrequented parts, and that their leader's name was La Perouse.

When the little flower learned of their mission, she thought immediately that the tall, stately pine and the towering mountains would arrest and claim the attention of the visitors. But, imagine her surprise and pleasure when they singled her out, and claimed her as their first and special prize. They were so polite and so kind and gracious that she was completely overcome.

When they sailed away, they took with them some seeds that she had so generously offered them—the only return that she could make for their distinguished attention. These seeds were made to grow in far-away France, and the little "sand verbena" was thus made to flower and grow in a strange, new land.

The botanists thought so well of it, that they concluded to give it a name that should be known the whole world over. The result was that the little "sand verbena" was properly enrolled in the mysterious book of science, and in this way became, and was, the first flower of California to receive a scientific classification.

And henceforth the unpretentious little flower that had waited these many centuries in patient obscurity became known by the imposing and euphonious name of "Abronia umbellata."

GHOST WALKS

The state-division ghost recently stalked o'er California again. This time, some members of the Venice (California) Chamber of Commerce injected new life, and flooded the State with resolutions advocating division on the ground that it would save time and money to Southern Californians. But the real meat in the state-division lemon was found in that part of the Venice resolution which said that, by making two states out of California, we can have increased representation at Washington.

The matter was given wide publicity by the State press, but, so far as we can ascertain, Venice's proposed division has received no encouragement from any source, not even from a very large part of the membership of its own Chamber of Commerce. We are of the opinion that this was simply a clever ruse on the part of Venice to get considerable free advertising. For everyone must know that the hope of state-division does not now exist in the heart of any loyal Californian—only in the imagination of a few pinheads.

But, in case there is to be any serious attempt made to divide California, let those promoting the idea be fully advised that the Native Sons and Native Daughters, who have successfully combatted this project heretofore, are still on the job, are just as firmly as ever united against division, and will use every means at their command to defeat any such proposition.

California's bank clearings for June, as recorded on another page of this issue, indicate that business conditions are not as bad as many claim. Every large city, with the exception of San Diego and Fresno, shows a substantial gain in clearings over a year ago.

Mt. Lassen, in the northern part of the State, has been sporting for some time past, and shows no indication of letting up. Wise old mountain, that. It knows this is a political year, and hence the proper time to unload its bot air.

SHOULD GO ELSEWHERE

An Oakland manufacturer named Vandergrift stirred up a whole lot of righteous indignation because of the following statement, attributed to him:

"California girls are high in mental and physical characteristics, but as employees they are lazy. We try to employ native sons, but they, too, are lazy; notoriously so. There is no desire among them to work to anything like their capacity.

"Fathers make too much money in California. Their daughters feel they don't have to work. The girls seem to have no sense of money value in relation to service. Our great trouble is to weed out the girls who want to work just long enough to buy a dress or hat."

Mr. Vandergrift has been repeatedly called upon to explain his statements but, so far as we have any information, has not seen fit to offer an explanation, or submit any proof to verify his statement.

The definition of "lazy" is, sluggish, slothful, idle and indolent, and it is incumbent upon every Native Son and Native Daughter to defend himself or herself against this man's charge, which is not founded upon fact.

The Native Sons and Native Daughters are self-reliant, independent, determined, broad-minded. Can as much be said for the Oakland manufacturer and those who hold to his expressed opinion? Unkind remarks against the Natives is not a paying investment.

A Stockton woman sued her husband for divorce because he let his toe nails run wild. There are many grounds, most of them trivial, upon which divorce is sought, but this is a new one. The husband might also be criminally prosecuted for carrying concealed deadly weapons.

It is reported that a letter carrier, formerly a subject of Germany, having a suburban route that embraces Inglewood, near Los Angeles, doffs his hat whenever he sees the American flag. His is a good example that might well be emulated by all American citizens.

THE PASSING OF AUGUST, 1864, the meteorological season of '63-'64 came to a close. It was the most disastrous dry season California had yet experienced. While '50-'51 was the season of the greatest drought, yet the increase of industries since that time had made the demand for an ample supply of water more necessary to carry on the great business interests of mining, farming and navigation than ever before.

Never had streams, springs and wells been so completely dried up all over the State as they were up to the 20th of this month. The Sacramento River then reached its lowest mark on record.

On the 20th, a storm that lasted three days made its appearance. There was such a heavy rainfall in the Sierra Nevada Mountains that it caused a rise of six feet in the American, Yuba and other rivers, and nearly two feet in the Sacramento.

River mining had, up to now, had its most successful season. Without winter and spring floods to contend with, the mining operations on the river bars were extensive and of a greater magnitude than ever before. The sudden storm and rise of the water in the rivers were unexpected and, consequently, unprepared for. They caused much damage to mining property, and put some of the large claims out of commission for the season.

The rainfall in '50-'51, the driest season on record, was 4.71. The season of '63-'64 was the next driest, having 7.87 to its credit. The season of '61-'62, with 36 inches, was the heaviest.

The showery weather of August 22nd was followed by a hot spell in which San Andreas appears to have taken the honors, the thermometer standing at 109° in the shade at that place one afternoon, but, so near to the same degree was the entire interior of the State, there may have been hotter places.

Cuts Telegraph to Repair Wheel.

In the progress of the Civil War, the news was almost a repetition of the previous month. General Grant, with the Army of the Potomac, held General Lee, with the Confederate Army of Virginia, at bay around Petersburg and Richmond, while General Sherman was surrounding Atlanta.

A number of severe engagements were fought, with advantage to the Union side, but nothing decisive. General Sheridan and General Early were chasing each other up and down the Shenandoah Valley, and Admiral Farragut had Mobile about tucked away under his arm. The pirate "Tallahassee" was doing havoc with the fishing vessels off the coast of Maine.

The overland telegraph wire was sputtering in an aggravating manner during the entire month, and went out of service entirely for several days at a time just when news of the greatest importance from the seat of war was expected. Most of the trouble was attributed to depredations of Indians, but in one case they were not to blame.

A line repairer found a pole chopped down and a large section of wire missing. Following a clue, he overtook the supposed vandal and found him to be an emigrant from one of the Western states, bound for California. His tires had become loose on the wheels of his wagon crossing the hot sands of the desert and, as necessity was paramount to any law, he appropriated enough of the telegraph line to bind his tires securely around the rims of his wheels. On being taken to task by the line-man, the emigrant said he had "heered tell of the telegraph toting letters, but didn't know before that they skippeder over a wire."

Frank M. Pixley had just returned from a trip East, where he had visited the Army of the Potomac, Washington, D. C. and other points of interest and was delivering lectures in the different cities for the benefit of the Sanitary Fund. The lecture at Sacramento was followed by a gift entertainment during which a large number of valuable articles, donated to the fund, were awarded to the holders of lucky tickets. The gift enterprise was under the management of a committee of prominent citizens.

Yosemite's First White Native.

The monitor "Comanche" was being put into fighting shape in a shipyard in San Francisco. Three hundred men were working on it. It was placed on Sundays in charge of a Sanitary Fund committee, who charged an admission fee for visitors to look it over, and $270 was taken in for the Fund on the first Sunday it was visited.

Mrs. Hutchings, the wife of the pioneer tavern-keeper in the Valley, this month gave birth to the first white child born in Yosemite Valley.

On August 30th, another collision occurred between the steamers "Yosemite" and "Washoe." It occurred near Rio Vista and the "Washoe" again got the worst of it. A good deal of ill feeling grew out of this accident, the public believing that the "Washoe" was purposely ran into so as to disable it and stop its opposition to the regular line.

In Plumas County during the month 892 foreign miners' licenses were issued. This showed that nearly that number of Chinamen were mining in that county.

A Santa Cruz paper published an item announcing the marriage in that town of Miss C. A. Twitchell, who was born in Sacramento in July, 1849, was now 15 years old, and claimed for her that she was the first white child of American parents born in Sacramento. This statement was at once disputed, and pioneers came to the fore with recollections that caused an active discussion in the newspapers in an effort to decide the dispute.

It was claimed that a marriage ceremony performed by the Rev. I. E. Dwinell in the Sacramento Congregational Church on May 15, 1864, marrying C. H. Marvin to Miss Hattie McDowell, had changed the name of the first white girl born in that city. Miss McDowell was the daughter of James McDowell and wife, and was born at Sutter's Fort on February 26, 1847. A brother, named William, was born on December 7, 1848. Next came forward a Mrs. Lee, who proved that a son was born to her at Sutter's Fort in January, 1847, and was the first white child born in Sacramento.

Miss Mary E. Parker, a beautiful girl who would have been eighteen years old and was to have been married on her birthday, the 18th of August, while visiting friends in Green Valley, Solano County, on August 5th, went to Dingley's flour mill to see it in operation. While standing near the hopper, talking to the miller, her dress caught in the revolving shaft and she was suddenly drawn toward it. She laughingly said to the miller, "my dress is caught." He sprang to her aid, and shouted an order to stop the machinery, but the next moment she lost her balance and was thrown down with great force. Her head struck a cast iron boxing on the millstone and her skull was crushed, causing almost instant death. Her mother, a few yards away, became frantic with grief.

Federal Office Holders Strike.

A death this month that caused many to mourn was that of S. W. Langton at Downieville from the effects of an accident. He was the pioneer expressman of that mining region, commencing in 1850, when hardly twenty-one years of age, and was known and esteemed by everybody in Yuba, Nevada and Sierra Counties.

C. J. Sullivan, a Pioneer of California, died in Virginia City on August 10th. He accompanied Sir John Ross in the ship "Erebus" in 1839 on the celebrated Antarctic expedition, and was four years in the South Pole region. He was an expert worker in iron, and made an iron gate of such ingenious pattern and exquisite workmanship that it attracted unusual attention at a California State Fair and gave him a State reputation as a skilled mechanic.

The annual State Turn Verein song and schutzenfest was held at Marysville, August 20th to 22nd. It was largely attended by Germans from all over the State. The San Francisco Turners took Chris Andre's band, considered the best in the State, with them, and the parade of Turners on the 21st was the largest thus far seen in California.

At Robert's Ferry, on the Tuolumne River in Mariposa County, a camp meeting held by the Methodists was broken up by a bloody row. Some Union men began singing "John Brown's Body," when a forcible objection was raised by Southern sympathizers. A fight of large proportions developed, in which one man was shot, another had his scalp laid open with a blow from the butt end of a revolver, and numerous contusions left their marks on the countenances of the belligerents. None of the preachers participated in the row.

In San Francisco, the novel situation of a strike on the part of Federal office holders became a fact, thus disproving the axiom that "few die and none resign," as applied to these politicians. Thirty-six employees of the Custom House and a dozen in the Internal Revenue service quit on account of receiving their pay in greenbacks, worth 45 cents on the dollar. They claimed their expenses exceeded their income, and they could not live on patriotism alone.

The El Dorado County annual fair opened at Coloma on August 30th, and was to be continued for a week. James W. Marshall, the discoverer of gold, was an exhibitor of grapes, having over a dozen different varieties displayed, culled from the vines he had planted and cultivated at Coloma.

The first locomotive built in California was turned out by the Vulcan Iron Works, in San Francisco, for the Alameda Valley Railroad. It was named the "E. B. Mastick," and was for use on a little local railway enterprise in Alameda County.

Rival Railroads Race.

August 22nd, the Sacramento Valley Railroad opened its line from Freeport, eight miles below Sacramento, to Latrobe, and inaugurated a competition against the Central Pacific, now with a terminus at Newcastle, for the Washoe passenger travel. The citizens of Sacramento viewed the movement to Freeport with a jealous eye and looked upon the diversion of the travel from San Francisco to Washoe from their city as an effort to build a rival river port. A great race against time between train and stage was run on the date of this opening.

The delivery of the San Francisco daily newspapers at Virginia City was the goal, and each route did its best to win. The S. V. started its special from Freeport at 11:15 p.m. on the arrival of the steamer from San Francisco. The C. P. had a courier bring the newspapers from Freeport to Sacramento and started its special at 12:04 a.m. Charles Crocker personally bossed the train and stage service over the C. P. route and was accompanied by N. L. Drew, E. A. Rockwell, Justus Hovey and Horace Adams, representing the citizens of Sacramento.

This party made the trip from Sacramento to Virginia City in 13 hours and 1 minute, and the newspapers from San Francisco were delivered in 21 hours and 5 minutes. The stage was met on its arrival in Virginia City by the whole populace and a hilarious time was had. The S. V. route via Placerville met with unexpected trouble and was 29 hours and 15 minutes from San Francisco to Virginia City. L. L. Robinson headed the S. V. party and claimed a delay from "heavy rain, heavy road and a heavy load" that made several hours' difference in their time.

There was a shock of earthquake on August 18th, felt in Yuba, Nevada and Sierra Counties. It was most severe at Downieville.

The Virginia claim at Downieville, owned by Flint & Co., was yielding $400 a day.

The Melones mine, in Calaveras County, was again a heavy producer—$40,000 coming out of it this month.

The American Bar Company, mining on the North Fork of the American River near Michigan Bluff, found a nugget weighing 16½ pounds and valued at $3,500.

Wire Tapping Added to Crimes.

Wm. Watt & Co., operating the Rocky Bar claim near Grass Valley, were employing three hundred men. They cleaned up 125 pounds of gold, valued at $27,000, from a few weeks' run.

Stable fires appeared to be epidemic in California. At Folsom, August 19th, a large stable with twenty-two horses was destroyed. In Sacramento, August 4th, a big livery stable with twenty horses was burned, and in Brown's Valley the stable of Isaac Green, with ten horses, was consumed. The residence of Jefferson Wilcoxson, a prominent citizen of Yolo County, was burned August 13th, causing him a heavy loss.

Wire tapping, a new offense to our people, came into prominence by the arrest of a telegraph operator named Williams for copying messages sent from Virginia City to San Francisco brokers and mine owners. He had been a broker in San Francisco, got broke, and then developed a scheme to prosper from obtaining inside information. He went to Sportsman Hall, east of Placerville, where there was a telegraph office, and professing to be a team owner and waiting for the arrival of his teams, listened to the messages passing over the wire and copied those he could use. James Gamble, superintendent of the telegraph line, getting information of him, caused his arrest. The officers were somewhat at a loss to know what to do with him.

Stage robbers and highwaymen continued to depredate and hold the attention of the public during the month. On August 5th, the stage from Visalia to San Jose was stopped by two men near Pacheco Pass. The passengers were robbed of several hundred dollars, but, contrary to the usual procedure, the express treasure box was not taken.

On August 25th, the stage from Sonora to Coulterville was stopped by three men near Don Pedro's Bar. The robbers took the express treasure box, but did not molest the passengers. It was said the box contained only $75.

Four teamsters were robbed August 3rd on the Downieville road by two highwaymen, and many

ROAM OVER 4500-ACRE RANCH

(BY ONE OF THE HERD.)

Los Angeles—June 21st, a jolly bunch of fellows were the guests of J. B. Amestoy of La Fiesta Parlor, No. 236, N.S.G.W., at his ranch, Encino. Eighteen La Fiesta boys, some good scouts from Los Angeles, Ramona and Corona Parlors, and a few prospects made up the band. The trip was made by auto to the 4500-acre Encino ranch, some twenty miles from the city, landing them in one of the many pretty canyons to be found on the place. The Good of the Order Committee, under the leadership of Chairman R. M. Dunsmoor, M.D., carried the grub and preceded the rest, and were prepared to give them an Indian welcome. They were assisted in this by "Napoleon," an old Indian who has lived in this canyon for over thirty years.

Upon arrival, the bunch had to register, receive and wear their badges—all different, with such complimentary (?) titles as "Boob," "Coward," "Simp," etc. The large oaks were bespattered with various humorous signs, as "No bathing here with suits on," etc. The morning was spent with indoor baseball, and when "Chef" Claridge announced dinner at 12:30, there was a mad rush for the tables. And such a feed! Barbecued meat, Spanish beans, tamales, olives, cheese, pickles, onions, radishes and coffee in plenty, for the preparation of which "Chef" Claridge has graduated into the professional class. Here, Alie S. Hamilton amused himself by placing all the coffee cups in circuit with his wireless outfit, with the usual result—some high stepping and seasoned words.

After dinner, there were smokes and other good cheer for about an hour, when the program began, prizes being given to the following winners: Nigger baby, E. Vincent lost, and had to go through the spanking machine; shot put, Wm. I. Traeger first, E. R. Furrer second; target shot, Wm. I. Traeger first, Chas. Bennett second; broad jump, Geo. Hunter first, H. A. Reif second; 75 yards, Geo. Hunter; running broad jump, Ernest Furrer; 3 rounds with the gloves, Chas. Bennett referee (crooked), Furrer vs. Reif, draw; Traeger vs. Hunter (burlesque), both given decision.

The out-door court came next, with Judge Traeger, Sheriff Biscailuz, and "Deestriet" Attorney Orphila in charge, and a number of the fellows were brought to justice on various charges, among them being that of arson—Chef Claridge being tried for burning the meat and also leaving a fire in the La Fiesta Parlor has something on the calendar for each month. Sometimes the details are given out in advance, and sometimes the boys are led into a trap, not knowing just what they are up against. The July number was just such a trap, the details of which were given out only on the four miles from the city, is quite alive. Lined up like convicts, the boys were compelled to "hop-foot" into a cafe, where special tables were prepared and a light steak supper served. They sat down at 10:30 and left the table at 11:45, which afforded a rest from the auto ride. By midnight the party were well on the way back home, each one telling the committee to set more traps, as they were glad to get caught in such. The guests were: J. F. Lyon, Los Angeles Parlor; C. M. Hunt, Sacramento Parlor; J. A. Schweitzer, Mt. Diablo Parlor; S. Busch, prospective member of La Fiesta Parlor.

HANGTOWN BANK WILL OPEN OCTOBER 5th

Los Angeles—The joint committee of the local Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters that is to have charge of the reproduction of "Hangtown" in this city early in October, met at Native Sons' Hall, July 13th, and discussed several matters pertaining to preliminary details.

The production of "Hangtown" last year was the greatest success recorded in the local amusement world, and there have been such persistent demands from all quarters for another opportunity to see a California mining town in full operation, that the success of this year's production is assured. Proceeds from the affair will be devoted to a dual purpose—the finding of homes for homeless children (a work in which the Orders are jointly engaged), and to aid in making a creditable Southern California showing at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco next year.

A Printing and Supplies Committee, consisting of J. D. Hunter (chairman), Miss Grace Stoermer and Peter H. Muller has been appointed, and the following designated to take charge of the various "Hangtown" features: "First Chance Saloon," Wm. Durham; "Red Light Saloon," D. F. Taggart; "Last Chance Saloon," Bernard Lee; Bank of Hangtown, H. C. Liechtenberger; Country Store, L. Duni; Dance Hall, Lon McCoy; Coroner, Dr. Dunsmoor; Cigar Stand, Chas. Bennett; Marshal, Eugene Biscailuz; Chinese Laundry, Cal Grayson; Vaudeville, Grove Vail; Boarding House, All Native Daughters; Games, Chas. Thomas; Hangtown Hotel, Henry Brodek; collection of tickets, Clarence M. Hunt; charge of tickets, Chas. W. Clark.

mountains. He was given a suspended sentence upon the promise to repeat the offense at the next opportunity, provided the judge was to be invited; and, by the way, the judge ate about five pounds of the "burned" meat.

As the party broke up to go over the ranch, the commissary was raided and only crumbs left. At the ranch proper, they inspected the large seven-room adobe home, of many years' standing, and also the big combined harvester out in the grain fields. From here, the party started for home, after signing up the prospects, and arrived in the city about 6:30, agreeing this was the best day's outing in years.

THE TRAP SPRUNG.

July 14th, La Fiesta Parlor met early and held a short meeting, after which all present were taken in charge by Dr. R. M. Dunsmoor and his Good of the Order Committee and whisked away in autos toward the ocean. The boys were not told the destination, but were instructed to follow the leader. This they did until the doctor turned into a side beach town; part followed him, and part thought he had lost his bearings. But he didn't; he showed them the thriving little beach town of Hermosa, and proceeded on to Redondo, where the others had arrived. Redondo, for a small place twenty-

EXAMINATIONS TO SUPPLY MANY CALIFORNIA POSTOFFICES.

An executive order issued by President Woodrow Wilson requires competitive examinations by the United States Civil Service Commission for the position of postmaster at all fourth-class postoffices at which the annual compensation is $180 or more, and at which the present incumbent was not appointed under civil service regulations.

Postmasters for many California places will be supplied from these examinations. Full information regarding the places coming under this order, and pertaining to the examinations, will be supplied by the United States Civil Service Commission at Washington or the postmaster at any place at which the examination is to be held.

To fill these California positions, examinations will be held at the following places. Where not otherwise noted, the places are in this State:

August 14th—Mariposa.

August 15th—Alturas, Amadee, Barstow, Bodie, Campo, Crescent City, Death Valley, Downieville, Fall River Mills, Hoopa, Independence, Jackson, Johannesburg, Manchester, North Fork, Quincy, San Andreas, Santa Ysabel, Sisson, Upper Lake, Weaverville.

August 22nd—Bakersfield, Carson City (Nevada), Chico, Coalinga, Colusa, Corning, Corona, El Centro-Escudido, Eureka, Fresno, Gilroy, Grass Valley, Hanford, Hayward, Healdsburg, Hollister, Lodi, Los Angeles, Madera, Martinez, Marysville, Merced, Modesto, Napa, Needles, Nevada City, Newcastle, Oroville, Oxnard, Paso Robles, Petaluma, Placerville, Porterville, Red Bluff, Redding, Reno (Nevada), Riverside, Sacramento, St. Helena, Salinas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Francisco, San Jose, San Luis Obispo, San Mateo, San Rafael, Santa Ana, Santa Barbara, Santa Cruz, Santa Maria, Santa Paula, Santa Rosa, Sonoma, Stockton, Tulare, Turlock.

Stockton—The members of Joaquin Parlor No. 5, N.D.G.W., and Stockton Parlor No. 7, N.S.G.W., acquitted themselves most creditably in the Fourth of July parade which was a feature of the Independence Day celebration in this city. The Native Daughters had three large anto floats decorated in red, white and blue, respectively. They were filled with members of the Parlor and were driven three abreast. Mrs. Caddie Salix, chairman of the Parlor's 1915 committee, occupied the prominent place in the machine pictured above. Joaquin Parlor captured a large cash prize. Miss Lydia Aileen Williams, the youngest member of the Parlor, rode a handsome coal black charger, as an escort to the Natives' division. Stockton Parlor turned out 200 strong in their white flannel suits and headed by the Parlor drum corps.

During June, Joaquin Parlor gave two very successful dancing parties, the proceeds of which went to its 1915 Admission Day fund. Flag Day was recently observed after the regular business meeting, during which the Oakland Grand Parlor delegates reported. Mrs. Emma Barney read an interesting paper on the origin of the Bear flag; Mrs. Mary F. Merrill, "The Jenny Lind Salute to the Flag" and also an original poem on the same subject, and Mrs. May Parker "The Flag and the Cross." All joined in singing the "Star Spangled Banner." Refreshments and a social time followed.

Ukiah, Vacaville, Visalia, Willow, Woodland, Yreka, Yuma (Arizona).

GROW WALNUTS ON LIVE OAKS.

Experiments recently completed near Sonoma, California, show that English walnuts may be successfully grafted upon live oaks. The experiment first made by the late E. W. Price near his home in West Point was successful from every standpoint, and extensive plans are being made to graft the live oak forests in Calaveras County. Hundreds of trees are to be grafted, and even the unirrigated trees in the forests will be made to pay a dividend in the shape of marketable nuts.—Exchange.

VALLEJO ADMISSION DAY CELEBRATION TAKING SHAPE

VALLEJO'S ADMISSION DAY COMMITTEE is getting things well in shape for the three-day celebration of the State's natal day to be held in the navy-yard city September 7th, 8th and 9th.

Arrangements have been made to properly care for 50,000 visitors, and every one of them is assured not only good accommodations, but an exceptionally good program of amusements.

Vallejo Parlor No. 77, N.S.G.W., stands sponsor for the celebration, the details of which are in the hands of a committee composed of Grand Marshal Joseph Clavo (chairman), Mayor W. J. Tormey (vice-chairman), Thomas J. O'Hara (secretary), Albert Casper (treasurer), George E. Bangle, H. F. Stahl, Leo I. Cavanagh, Robert W. Walker, George H. Williams, G. G. Halliday, S. J. McKnight, Claudius L. Wisecarver, George Weniger, Werner B. Hallin, W. D. Pennycook. Vallejo Parlor No. 195, N.D.G.W., is represented on the committee by Mrs. Verna Berry, Mrs. Winnie Cassady and Miss Hilma Lundberg.

The festivities will begin the evening of Monday, September 7th, with a decorated automobile parade in which 1000 machines will participate. Handsome prizes will be awarded the best decorated turns.

Tuesday, September 8th, will be devoted to special amusement features, concerts and dancing.

Wednesday morning, September 9th, will be devoted to the Admission Day parade, in which thousands of Native Sons and Native Daughters will take part. Literary exercises will follow.

Joseph Clavo of Vallejo, Grand Marshal, N.S.G.W., desires The Grizzly Bear to impress upon the several Subordinate Parlor of Native Sons of the Golden West the necessity of promptly answering his communication seeking information as to the part the Parlor will take in the approaching Admission Day celebration at Vallejo.

Mr. Clavo will be in charge of the September 9th parade, and desires to make up his list of marshals and aides from the membership of the Parlor that will participate.—Editor.

In the afternoon will be aquatic sports, during which Miss Nell Schmidt of Alameda, the champion woman swimmer, will endeavor to break her record and will give a diving exhibition. There will also be automobile and motorcycle races. Those who desire to dance, will be accommodated in six balls and on a 70x130-foot outdoor dancing platform.

The evening will witness a grand fireworks display, followed by an electrical parade and carnival features.

Inquiries from Native Sons Parlor throughout the State indicate that a large number will go to Vallejo to celebrate Admission Day. Many of these will maintain headquarters at which refreshments will be dispensed and amusement features and dancing provided. Several of these Parlor will be accompanied by their own band or drum corps, and will introduce historical floats in the parade.

The Parlor that have so far made arrangements for headquarters, together with location of same, include: Athens No. 195, Oakland, Telegraph Club;

Twin Peaks No. 214, San Francisco, Golden State Hall; Stanford No. 76, San Francisco, Elks Hall; Piedmont No. 120, Oakland, lower Samoset Hall and banquet-room; El Dorado No. 52, San Francisco, Eagles Hall; Rincon No. 72, San Francisco.

CHARLES M. BELSHAW

CANDIDATE FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR GOVERNOR

FOURTEEN CONSECUTIVE
CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE.

Native of Amador County, California.

Educated in San Francisco schools.

Graduate of Harvard University, class of 1883.

Elected to Assembly from Contra Costa County in 1894, and served three consecutive terms.

Elected to Senate from Contra Costa and Marin Counties in 1900, and served two consecutive terms.

Served as Chairman of Election Laws and Finance committees of Senate.

Served as member of State Board of Prison Directors.

Ex-President of California Miners' Association.

Residence: Antioch, Contra Costa County, California.

I am a candidate for the nomination for Governor of the State of California, subject to the will of the Republican voters to be expressed at the primary election to be held August 25, 1914.

I still believe in the principles of the Republican party under which this nation has always prospered.

I believe that it is time to call a halt to all such legislation and regulation as are fast undermining the business of this country and are directly responsible for our present business depression.

I am for sane laws and for an economical administration of the affairs of state.

EFFICIENCY FIRST should be the slogan in governmental affairs as well as in business, and the people should get value received for every dollar expended from public funds.

I stand for a maximum of BUSINESS EFFICIENCY as against the present POLITICAL INEFFICIENCY.

I am now presenting my candidacy to the Republicans of this State as fully as possible and shall at all times endeavor to bring about a unification of the Republican party in the State of California—to the end that the golden days of business activities may be with us again under the banner of the Republican party—the party of PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY.

I stand for equal rights for all and special privileges for none.

Other Parlors that have made headquarters reservation are: Pacific No. 10, San Francisco; Guadalupe No. 231, San Francisco; Fruitvale No. 252, Oakland; two Parlors from Sacramento, and California No. 1, San Francisco. Negotiations with numerous other Parlors are now pending.

The Native Daughters will also be well represented in the Admission Day parade, turning out jointly with the Native Sons Parlors from their various localities. The Native Daughters always form an attractive part in each Admission Day parade, and the one to be held in Vallejo next month will prove no exception, as far as they are concerned.

Will Go by Special Train.

Stockton—The Native Sons of this city plan to attend the Admission Day celebration in Vallejo in large numbers. Stockton Parlor No. 7 has appointed a committee consisting of James W. Fitzgerald (chairman), Martin O. Schneider, H. W. Dunlap, George J. Fox and James H. Ford to make all arrangements, and they have chartered a special train to leave this city the morning of September 9th, arriving in Vallejo in plenty of time for the big parade, and to return late that evening. Messrs. Fox and Dunlap visited Vallejo recently and secured splendid headquarters. The committee gave a largely attended dance on the roof garden of the Hotel Stockton, July 18th, for the purpose of raising funds.

CALIFORNIA, THE GOLDEN.

California, California, bright star of the West,
In all ages and nations by thee shall be blest
That pioneer band who so hardy and brave
Confronted thy dangers, some there found a grave.

By the placid Pacific, wild and lovely she stands,
Who would e'er leave thee to seek other lands,
That once on thy fair shores in peace found a home,
Free from strife and oppression no longer to roam!

When first thou wast traversed o'ergrown with tall trees,
That lifted their proud tops to each gentle breeze,
No sound but their sighing the calm stillness broke,
And animals wild that had ne'er known a yoke.

Bnt e'en as the ages crept slowly along,
An emigrant band, both hardy and strong,
Left the homes of their birth and the ones loved so dear,
To raise in the lone wilds, a settlement here.

And long did they struggle, wild days lone and drear,
With no home to cheer them and no loved ones near.
They delved in the earth and found riches untold,— California is famed far and wide for her gold.

Some, weary of struggling with fortune, false god,
And lonely, heartbroken, returned to the sod,
Left homes sad and vacant, their fate all untold,—
In vain was the search for the bright, glittering gold.

To thee, Pioneers of our State, much is due!
All honor and gratitude boundless to you.
You laid the foundation, a firm, solid frame,
And onward she moves, still firmly the same.

Till none in our Union more honored and free,
From Atlantic's cold breast to Pacific's calm sea,
Than our own California, our bright Golden State,
Her arms wide outspread at the calm Golden Gate.

To welcome the weary, oppressed, of all lands,
To peace, love and plenty, as a sentinel she stands
At the Gate, bidding enter all good men and true
To this garden of blossoms of every bright hue.

When our honor is threatened and grim war seems near,
Thy sons, California, leave those they hold dear;
Are willing, yea, eager and anxious to go.
To avenge and protect from a treacherous foe.

California, my home, poor the words that I write.
Would my pen were inspired, lines to thee I'd indite.

May thy fame never lessen as the long years unfold,
And time has away to Eternity rolled.

JUDGE WARREN L. WILLIAMS

(Police Judge)

Candidate for JUDGE SUPERIOR COURT
LOS ANGELES COUNTY.
FOR SIX YEARS JUDGE OF THE POLICE COURT OF LOS ANGELES CITY.

Among the formidable candidates for the State Legislature from Los Angeles County is Harry A. Chamberlain, member of Ramona Parlor, N.S.G.W. Mr. Chamberlain is a candidate for the Republican nomination from the Seventy-second Assembly District. He is essentially a self-made man, having worked his way through the University of Southern California law school while reporting on the local newspapers. Since quitting the newspaper profession, he has been engaged in the active practice of law, and he is now striving to represent his district in the State Legislature at Sacramento, and asking his many friends and acquaintances to help him in his fight.

Mr. Chamberlain bears the reputation of having been unusually successful in the practice of law, and is known to be aggressive, fearless, honest and upright. He has many friends and acquaintances in Los Angeles who are taking a personal interest in his candidacy, believing that he will make good if given the opportunity. He was born in Fresno, California, where he lived until about twelve years ago, when he moved to Los Angeles. Chamberlain bears the distinction of being the only candidate in Los Angeles County, out of 800, who is not using the billboards to further his candidacy. He is making his campaign from house to house, meeting the voters personally. He doubts the value of billboard campaigning, but believes that the voters want to meet the candidates personally, not their cards or placards.

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

IDSUMMER FASHIONS PRESENT many delightful, airy creations, calculated to defy the proverbial heat of August days and, indeed, to make welcome a tropical temperature that makes imperative the donning of gowns of organdie and batiste and the little suit of linen or the new cotton fabrics that may be worn time and again without the visible and outward signs of their service.

These cottons have been talked about and written about since the first importations, way back in January. Many worthy domestic imitations have appeared during the spring and summer, and the wise woman has availed herself of the opportunity offered by these to acquire materials at relatively little price for tub dresses that take on a real Frenchy air, by the clever addition of a wide, low-set girdle and the proper finish of the neck.

Right Models and Materials a Necessity.

As a matter of fact, the summer dress depends upon the details. There are narrow skirts, and skirts a little wider; flounces and tunics, tucks, and furbelow tunics; long and short plaitings, and ruchings. But the individual note of exclusiveness must be apparent.

Much depends, to an astounding degree, on the application of any of these to the figure lines of the wearer, and on her ability to select the right model and the right material for her own individual requirements. If women would observe this rule, there would be less caricature in the fashion realm, and more dignity and joy would result from the designing and the wearing of new fashions.

White and Black Combination Fills Requirement.

However, it must be confessed that the midsummer styles offer so wide a selection, that even the woman who dresses in accordance with the ideas of her neighbor instead of through cultivation of her own ideas, cannot go far astray during the next few weeks. If she be tall and slim, there are checked patterns in cotton voiles, chambrays, silk and cotton tissues, silks and satins.

Nothing could be in better keeping with warm-weather needs and appearances than the white and black combinations. They are effectually made up with the narrow foundation skirt and the long Russian tunic arranged in side or box plaits, a kimono blouse with the V-neck outlined with a frill of lace or fine embroidery, and the sleeves showing a corresponding treatment.

Girdle and Parasol Should Match.

In nearly every instance, the girdle is broad and low, and of a contrasting color. All tones of yellow are immensely popular for the girdle accessory, and any one of them accord well with the black and white combinations. Green, of a jade rather than a grass tone, is likewise a very fashionable girdle color, and of course there are red shades, and blues, and rose tints. The parasol should match the girdle.

Modified Old-fashioned Basque.

Another new note, is the use of a wide belt, yoke-like in character, which gives the long and low waistline which is now the latest idea in fashion's realm. The low waistline is the very latest fashion idea, and is a modification of the old-fashioned hasque. It is very prettily shown in our shops, made of soft satins and silks, in one-piece dresses for the seaside and dance.

This style is made with darts or seams over the bust; sometimes in back, also. The waist is not fitted in with any snugness, but is rather large at the waistline and there wrinkles in folds, which are obtained either by shirring in a little fullness at the under-arm seams or by making the bodice loosely over a fitted lining.

Long and Simple Lines Youthful in Effect.

This basque extends down over the hips, where it can be joined to the skirt, and a loosely swathed sash often accentuates the low line. The skirt portion is usually full. Being plaited in Russian tunic form, or draped back some way, this style could be very prettily developed in girlish modes, for the long and simple lines of the waist are always youthful in effect and ought to be becoming. This new low waist buttons closely down the front; the sleeves are long, set in at the arm holes, and not too full.

Blue Will Predominate.

It would seem, from present indications, that the dark solid colorings would have first place in the fall and winter suitings, instead of fancy mixtures.

NEW FALL SUITS.

—Designs from Ville de Paris, Los Angeles.

while bright colors will be used for trimming reliefs. Color combinations in one material will principally take the form of plaids, cheeks and Roman stripes, referred to before in these columns.

Blue bids fair to have the largest vogue of any one color, and besides the ever popular navy-blue, there are some novelty blue shades. One, called the ocean blue, is a beautiful green-blue tint.

New Shades of Yellow.

The browns and reddish, or rust brown, effects are being given considerable attention by the dyers, while the rage for yellow, taking on a darker aspect, has developed such new shades as adobe, Panama and new orange. Tobacco brown will be a good, staple color.

Hints for the Future.

On all sides, it is said that the reign of taffetas is nearing its end, and the close of summer will signal its retirement in favor of liberty and charmeuse for silken fabrics. In woolen stuffs, fine, soft-woven serge, and fine cloth, are in the lead. It is predicted that little colored embroidery will be seen on the first autumn suits, and it is likely an attempt will be made to force the return of braid trimming. However, these are but hints for the future.

Judge J. W. Summerfield

is a candidate for re-election to the office of JUSTICE OF THE PEACE OF LOS ANGELES TOWNSHIP. Judge Summerfield has been a resident of Los Angeles County for the past thirty-one years, is a graduate of the University of Southern California College of Law; was admitted to practice in the Superior and Supreme Courts of the State and the District and Circuit Courts of the United States. He is serving his second term upon the bench, having in the past seven years passed on more than 20,000 cases, civil and criminal. His qualifications, therefore, have been proven in his length of service, no candidate having had greater experience in this particular capacity.

One of the most important considerations by the people of this city at the coming Primaries is the selection of competent, impartial, honest and fearless judges to administer the law; and believing his proven qualifications commend him to the people for re-election at this time, we again urge his nomination on August 25th for the office of Justice of the Peace of Los Angeles Township. Judge Summerfield belongs to the Los Angeles County Pioneer Association.

POPPY DAY, MARCH 30

OS. T. BROOKS, THE AMBITIOUS secretary of the San Jose Chamber of Commerce, has presented a dual plan to organize a California State Poppy League for the perpetuation, preservation and appreciation of the State flower.

A convention was held at San Jose, July 4th, at which a large and enthusiastic number of delegates assembled from every part of California to organize the league. In the meantime, a committee of six was appointed by the San Jose Chamber of Commerce on Poppy Carnival Committee for Santa Clara Valley, composed of Jos. T. Brooks, James B. Bullitt, John F. O'Keefe, J. J. McDonald, G. Lester Tarleton and A. G. DuBrutz, which committee launched a Poppy Festival for Santa Clara County to be held April 1, 2, and 3, 1915.

The State League officers elected were: Dr. James B. Bullitt, permanent president; Jos. T. Brooks, secretary-treasurer. These, with James Rolph, Jr., San Francisco, Miss Anna Lange, Alameda, and F. L. Ekswold of San Mateo, compose the Executive Committee. Vice-presidents have thus far been appointed as follows: Dr. Eva Busenius, Los Angeles; Mrs. Mamie Carmichael, San Jose; Victor H. de Bana, San Francisco; E. E. Westergreen, Vallejo; Mrs. A. McAvoy, Pittsburg; Glen Andrus, Sacramento; William Tompkins, San Diego; Mrs. Olive Matlock, Redding; John Lupken, Lone Pine; Peter Engle, Marysville; George McCabe, Modesto; Duncan McPherson, Santa Cruz; Ord. Chenoweth, Redding; Laura J. Frakes, Sutter Creek; John E. Childs, Del Norte; Judge Murphy, Bridgeport; Ben Blow, Napa, and H. C. Tuchsien, Redwood City.

Reservation has been granted by the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco, and the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego, and the Mission Play at San Gabriel, setting aside March 30th as Poppy Day, which will be celebrated under the auspices of the State League. A very fine program will be arranged, and it is proposed that every county exhibiting will, on that day, display the native California poppies.

The purpose of the League is to urge the planting of poppy seed along the railroad tracks and highways, and to encourage as many counties as possible to hold a poppy festival sometime in the spring. The local festivals are entirely independent of the State League.

At the convention in San Jose, representatives from the Native Sons and Native Daughters Parlor were deeply interested in the efforts of the League, and purpose to make it a success.

Banquets Order's Head.

San Francisco—A banquet was tendered to Grand President May C. Boldemann by her home Parlor, La Estrella, No. 89, July 1st, at one of the downtown hotels. The tables were beautifully decorated with tiny baskets of red and white carnations and blue bachelor buttons, entwined with asparagus fern, and red, white and blue ribbon from which were suspended bunches of candy firecrackers. The following program was rendered during the evening: Welcome to Grand President and others, Hannah Barry, president of La Estrella Parlor; song, Alice Boldemann; recitation, May Barry; song, Anna Roethel. The recitation (which is printed herewith) was composed by Birdie Hartman and dedicated to the occasion. Sister Hartman is one of La Estrella's talented members, and holds the office of recording secretary. She has on many occasions furnished amusement for the members with witty, snappy little poems and remarks. Dancing followed the banquet, and all declared they had spent a most delightful evening which would be remembered for some time to come.

We of La Estrella have assembled tonight,
To greet our Order's new starry light, She's our Parlor's first Grand President, and of her we are proud.
Three hearty cheers for May Boldemann, may her praises ring long and loud.

They'll find her a jewel most pure and rare,
With her no previous Grand President is to compare.
May her term of office be one of much pleasure,
And bring to her success and good luck without measure.

We have with us Hannah Barry, our own Parlor President,
Of the best city on earth she's a most contented resident,
Who at the German House on Tuesday night
Conducts Parlor affairs to our utmost delight.

Then comes Anna Roethel, the present First Vice,
Who is going to have public installation, and it is to be real nice.
The tango with her has become a terrible fad,
Let's hope over that, she will never go mad.

Among us there is a great theatrical star,
Whose talent and cleverness are seen from afar.
In vaudeville and drama she takes all parts well,
And what May Barry will do next, no one can tell.

Mattie Smith, who occupies one of the other chairs,
Is an efficient officer capable of managing Parlor affairs.
And Dr. Boldemann, who cures many ills,
By prescribing castor oil and homeopathic pills.

Another young lady who wears a slit skirt,
Is considered by all a most terrible flirt;
Alas, for fair Pauline Buhb; this breaker of hearts
Cupid aimed at and struck with one of his darts.

There is still another maid who has charge of the hooks,
She uses fine clothes and brown eyes as sort of grappling hooks;
On catching a rich young man, Dora Wehr is bent,
And with him she'll clope without father's consent.

Another fair damsel pursued by the mischievous Cupid,
Thinks him much too observing and awfully stupid;
In Alice Boldemann's parlor each evening, where the spooning takes place,
Cupid records each little smack with a smile on his face.

Don't blame The Grizzly Bear, if your Parlor affairs are not mentioned in these columns.

If fault is to be found with anyone for such omission, it is with yourself.

The space in The Grizzly Bear is at the disposal of the Subordinate Parlors.

But you must supply the news, if you would have it printed herein.

Our only restriction is that copy must be in the office of publication not later than the 20th of each month.

All Parlor news should be sent direct to The Grizzly Bear, 248 Wilcox Bldg., Los Angeles.

Then there is Alma, who will soon look after our cash,
She's very fond of the boys, but spurns a real mash;
Every Tuesday after meeting at Larkin and Eddy streets,
She stands at the corner and a whole dozen of dough-nuts eats.

There is a sweet maid by the name of Phoebe Theall,
At her feet dozens of young men have been known to kneel;
Oh, lucky Billy, who now worships at her shrine,
Phoebe loves you, and promises she will be thine.

Here is Ann Sollman, who tells jokes sometimes shocking,
Has most shapely limbs when they're encased in white stockings;
She and Nettie Feldhusch have great times together,
And can be seen on the street in all kinds of weather.

One more is observed, she is always so still,
But her brain and her hands work like a spinning mill;
If more were like Margaret Theall, who is always so quiet,
The Grand Parlor would be most harmonious and never in riot.

Still another fair maiden whose surname is Roemer and her other Florine,
Is in line for President of our Parlor, it is plain to be seen;
She is very pleasant and at all times the same,
Even when she has no umbrella and is caught in the rain.

There's Annie Aigeltinger, one of our first Presidents, who's been absent for years
And whose recent appearance has been greeted with cheers;
Mary McCarthy, who never from her fireside far does roam,
On account of the three little totties she has at home;

Sister Hanell, who lives quite a distance away,
Came to the banquet this evening from across the bay;
And May Nolan, who has come back to the West,
To our glorious California, the land we all love best.

Hurrah for our Grand President, Parlor and Fair,
And hope at the next Grand Parlor we all will be there,
To see our beloved Grand President wield her gavel,
And the tangles and wrangles of the Native Daughters unravel.

Return to Childish Days.

Los Angeles—La Esperanza Parlor, No. 24, passed one of the jolliest evenings of its history, June 27th, the occasion being a "Children's Party," the members themselves being the children and each dressing and acting the part of a child under ten years. Old-time children's games were played, and refreshments dear to their hearts were served, such as popcorn crisps, all-day suckers and chewing gum. The frozen dainty court was there, and the "children" patronized it most liberally. Prizes were won as follows: Best dressed child, Mrs. Hazel Sullivan first, Miss Rose Iberson second; best sustained character, Mrs. Franc Simpson first, Mrs. Jos. Lyons second. Mrs. E. A. Hall, Miss Celia Katze and several others received prizes for eccentricity in dress. Two of the members insisted upon being chaperons, for which they were fined. At a late hour the "children" very unwillingly went home, all declaring it the very best party they ever attended.

Reception for Honored Member.

Salinas—Grand Organist Julia Larkin was the guest of honor at a reception given July 7th by her home Parlor, Aleli No. 102. Native Sons Hall, where the affair took place, was prettily decorated, as was also the banquet-room, where a sumptuous repast was served. Mrs. Larkin was presented with a half-dozen solid silver butter spreaders. There was a large attendance, among the guests being the members of Santa Lucia Parlor, N.S.G.W. Whist was indulged in during the evening.

Grand Trustee Surprised.

Hollister—Grand Trustee Bertha Briggs was completely surprised when, following the meeting of Copa de Oro Parlor No. 105, June 22nd, the members joined with the members of Fremont Parlor, N.S.G.W., in a reception in her honor. In behalf of both Parlors, W. J. Cagney, president of Fremont Parlor, presented Mrs. Briggs with a beautiful lavallier. Addresses were made by George H. Moore, W. R. Flint, Mrs. Moore and the recipient of the honor. Mrs. J. F. Etcheverry favored with a recitation, and Mrs. Austin Jarvis and S. R. Crosby with vocal solos. Refreshments were served.

Santa Clara County Honors Member.

San Jose—Representatives from every Parlor in Santa Clara County were in attendance at the meeting of Vendome Parlor No. 100, July 13th, to participate in a reception to Grand Marshal Mamie P. Carmichael of that Parlor, and all expressed their delight at her advancement in the Order. Congratulatory addresses were delivered by Arthur M. Free, district attorney of Santa Clara County; Emma De Carl, president of San Jose Parlor; Josie Barboni, San Jose Parlor; Agnes Quinn, president of El Camino Parlor, Palo Alto; Mrs. McDonald, Mountain View Parlor, and Mary F. Mitchell, first vice-president of Vendome Parlor. In her response, Mrs. Carmichael refused to believe her own personality had anything to do with the testimonial accorded her, and accredited the pleasure of the local Parlors in her advancement to the fact that she is a Santa Clara County member of the Order. In behalf of Vendome Parlor, Beldon M. Gallagher, past president, presented the Grand Marshal with a beautiful cut-glass vase, as a token of love and appreciation. During the serving of refreshments, Alice Miles, accompanied by Tillie Brohaska, rendered a violin solo, and William Rogers gave a recitation.

Has a Busy Month.

Los Angeles—The members of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124, enjoyed a most interesting session July 6th, when a welcome was given the delegates returning from the Oakland Grand Parlor—Grand Trustee Grace Stoermer and Mrs. Jennie Elliott. The Parlor also welcomed into the Order Mrs. D. Joseph Coyne and Mrs. Mary Adair Aubury. Among the visiting members were Mrs. Frances Maynard Looney of Piedmont Parlor No. 87, Miss Louise Roberts of Marysville No. 162, and Dr. Eva R. Busenius, P.G.P., of La Esperanza No. 24. The lodge-room was decorated with Shasta daisies and ferns, while upon the banquet tables were placed clusters of exquisite pink dahlias, the flowers coming from the garden of Mrs. Grace Haven, treasurer of the Parlor. This occasion happened to be the birthday of Miss Grace Culberts, and a pleasant surprise was given to her by Miss Katherine Baker, in the form of a pink-and-white frosted birthday cake, trimmed with sixteen lighted tapers and the words, "Sweet Sixteen." Miss Katherine Baker was in charge of the banquet and was assisted by Miss Julia Baker, Mrs. Paul Robinson and Mrs. Eugene Biscailuz. The members of Los Angeles Parlor are delighted over the fact that Mrs. Kate McFadyen of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 has been appointed District Deputy Grand President-at-Large.

At the meeting July 20th the installation of the newly elected officers was held. Members of the Long Beach Parlor were invited to be the guests of Los Angeles Parlor for the occasion.

Miss Grace Culberts, Miss Katherine Baker and Mrs. J. A. Adair met with the Pioneers of Los Angeles County on the evening of July 7th, and invited the Pioneers to come to Native Sons' Hall, July 31st, and be the guests of the members of Los Angeles Parlor. The committee in charge of this entertainment was made up of Miss Grace Culberts, Miss Katherine Baker, Mrs. J. A. Adair, Mrs. A. K. Prather and Mrs. Paul Robinson.

Celebrates Victory.

Oakland—The victory attendant upon the reelection of Grand Trustee Addie Mosher by the highest vote, was celebrated by Piedmont Parlor No. 87, July 2nd, when there was a large attendance of Alameda County members of the Order and the following grand officers: P.G.P. Mae B. Wilkin, Grand Outside Sentinel Anna Lange and D.D.G.P. Sarah G. Sanborn. Following the initiation of two candidates, a banquet was enjoyed, during the course of which Mrs. Mosher was the recipient of many useful gifts from her many admirers.

Twentieth Anniversary Observed.

San Jose—The twentieth anniversary of San Jose Parlor No. 81 was observed June 30th by the initiation of fifteen candidates. Eighty members of the Order were in attendance, including Mrs. M. Johns and Mrs. M. Moak, charter members of the Parlor, and Grand Marshal Mamie P. Carmichael. The hall was beautifully decorated with Shasta daisies and clumps of bamboo, while the banquet-room, where a delightful repast was served, was lighted with Chinese lanterns amid bamboo branches, and softly-shaded candelabra of red and yellow adorned the tables. Josie Barboni acted as toastmistress, and responses were made by the charter members and the Grand Marshal. The Parlor's first minutes, written June 29, 1894, were read, and Miss de Carli read an original toast. A birthday cake, adorned with twenty candles, was cut by Mrs. Johns while the assemblage sang "I Love You, California." During the evening, a beautiful china cake plate was presented to Grand Marshal Carmichael by Miss Erminie di Carli, president, in behalf of San Jose Parlor. Mrs. Carmichael accepting with graciously worded thanks, and as a token of the esteem in which she holds the Parlor she presented it with a beautiful set of punch glasses, in acknowledgment of which Miss di Carli gave the thanks of the Parlor. Grand Marshal Carmichael also presented Josie Barboni with a pearl-set wish-bone brooch, in token of their long association together at numerous Grand Parlor, and the strong friendship that has grown between them.

Officers Well Remembered.

San Francisco—Gahrielle Parlor No. 139, installed the following officers July 15th: Bessie Roche, past president; Nellie Hester, president; Elin Machris, first vice-president; Gertie Hester, second vice-president; Edna Hansen, third vice-president; Martha Weigel, marshal; Mahel Ayscough, inside sentinel; Esther Carlson, outside sentinel; Rita Normile, Alice McLeod, Mollie Mack, trustees; Alice Collins, organist; Lucy Johnson, recording secretary; Mary Vivian, financial secretary. D.D.G.P. Mazie Roderick of Oro Fino Parlor was presented with some beautiful china as a small expression of appreciation for her good work, and of the love her friends in the Parlor bear her. Miss Bessie Roche, the retiring president, received her past president's emblem, together with a general expression of gratitude and respect for her very successful term. Mrs. Evelyn Albrecht, junior past president, received a pretty remembrance also, and many congratulations were showered on her for the four strenuous years she has devoted so faithfully to the Parlor. After the installation, refreshments were served, and the new officers held an informal reception of their many friends. Several songs were rendered by the members, and the evening closed with a grand finale of members and guests singing "I Love You, California."

Officers Installed.

Jamestown—D.D.G.P. Melissa Trask of Golden Era Parlor No. 99, assisted by Lillian Brody acting as grand marshal and Louise Napoleon as past grand presidents, installed the following officers of Anona Parlor No. 164, in the presence of many members and visitors from nearby Parlor: Past president, Alta Ruoff; president, Laura Acker; first vice-president, Linda Keagy; second vice-president, Sarah McCool; third vice-president, Grace Rickard; recording secretary, Anna A. Preston; financial secretary, Nellie Leland; marshal, Hannah Hoskins; organist, Annetta Morris; outside sentinel, Mary McArdle; inside sentinel, Alice Hopkinson; trustees—Margaret Durgan, Rosa Beckwith, Sadie Newcomb. Following installation, there was an enjoyable literary program, after which refreshments were served.

Small Gift Expresses Large Appreciation.

Oakland—July 15th, Bahia Vista Parlor No. 167 had a public installation of officers. After the ceremonies a short program was rendered, the chairman of the occasion being the retiring president of the Parlor, D.D.G.P. Mary E. Wright. A few presentations were made by Sister Chuhh, one of the trustees of the Parlor: To the junior past president, Ann Connor, a gold pin; to the newly-installed president, Kittie Ward, a hand-painted cup and saucer; and to the D.D.G.P. for the Parlor, Sarah G. Sanborn, a small hand-painted plate, which was the subject of much pleasantry in the presentation speech and in many of the remarks that followed. This gift was not large, but it would not be possible to present one large enough to show the respect and esteem in which Sister Sanborn is held, not only by the members of Bahia Vista Parlor, but by the members of the Order in general. Those present were Congressman Joseph Knowland, Past Grand President, N.S.G.W., and Mrs. Knowland, Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Secretary, D.D.G.P. Jen-

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT

DEVOTED TO FARM, ORCHARD, GARDEN, POULTRY, DAIRYING, BEES, ETC.

Edited by GEORGE H. BANCROFT.

LOSS OF STOCK ENORMOUS.

HAT AT LEAST ONE-TWENTIETH of all the stock bred on the open range of the West dies before it reaches market age, and that much of this loss can be stopped, is shown by results reported from the National Forests. This waste is said to add millions of dollars to the people's meat bill, and gives one more cause of the high cost of living.

Winter storms and summer droughts strew the range with the bones of cattle and sheep; predatory animals take a heavy toll; poisonous plants sometimes kill half the animals in a herd almost over night. Cattle contract anthrax, blackleg, and other diseases; get stuck in bog holes; slip off icy hillsides; and sheep pile up and die of suffocation. Insects which madden and kill swell the total losses, as do a multitude of other minor causes of death and injury. The Government Forest Service labors to correct all such conditions.

SUB-IRRIGATION.

(In Four Parts; Part Four.)

(Note—The "open bottom cement basins," referred to below, are like basins, boxes or tubs used upside down so that the bottoms are used as roofs. When made where they belong permanently these basins constitute covered underground reservoirs with the soil for bottoms. Pipes for conducting water to these receptacles complete the system.)

In the course of our investigations we learned of a sub-irrigation system installed years ago by F. M. Chapman in five acres of the Chapman famous citrus fruit ranch at Covina, known as "Palmetto Grove." The United States Soil Survey of 1901 gives the following account of the system: "Because of the imperfection of surface irrigation, various methods of sub-irrigation have been tried with scant success, until Mr. Chapman devised and installed a system which has so far given perfect satisfaction.

"The system consists of a series of open bottom cement basins with communicating pipes, the whole buried at least a foot below the surface. In the center of each triangular space in the orchard a two-foot section of large cement pipe is buried on end, the lower end left open, and the top, one foot below the surface, securely capped. Cement pipes from the top of one basin to the top of the next basin below connect the basins in each row of the system, and a pipe coming to the surface at the last basin tells when all the basins have been filled. For this system the water is brought into the field as for the others (systems), in a cement main, and is under slight pressure.

"The main is two to three feet underground. Small stand pipes are put in at each row to be irrigated, or in this case for each row of basins. The advantages are minimum amount of cultivation, which is only necessary for destroying weed growth. Another advantage is that water is saved. Cost to install was $125 per acre, but as many experiments were made that added to the cost, it is thought that $100 per acre would cover all cost."

Answering a communication, Grant Chapman says: "This system was used for a short time only. It was expected to irrigate with very little water, and was well adapted for the dry years, during which it was designed and installed on about five acres of this ranch. With more water now available, all our irrigating is from the surface. The old pipes, etc., of the sub-irrigation system are still in place."

The conclusions of the writer are that the "Chapman" system, modified somewhat and used in combination with the machine for laying a continuous cement pipe, will result in an ideal sub-irrigation system both for vegetables and for permanent growths, such as orchard trees, and we do not expect to go to anything like $100 per acre in expense.

In a future issue we will give our readers a more detailed description of the combination referred to. The exact sizes of pipe, the amount of fall in the pipe line, etc., will require some engineering work and experiment that can not be done on short notice.

HINTS FOR AUGUST POULTRY.

The old rooster can crow well, but better sell him or get him away from the hens some other way. He pesters them so they do not do their best.

If there are chicks hatched this month, they will make better roasters than if kept for layers.

Shade, green stuff, plenty of water, are essential in August.

Good feed, cleanliness, good tools, and proper houses, are four primary essentials for poultry keeping.

Begin to market the old hens as they stop laying. Be sure they are good and fat.

A layer is a hen or pullet devoted to market eggs, and should not be used in breeding pens.

Don't be too flattered if the growing chicks run after you whenever you appear. The truth of the matter is that they are hungry. Keep growing feed before them all of the time.

Keep the house as cool as possible.

All poultry enjoy a shady nook.

One bad egg will put a question mark on the whole dozen, and may lose a good customer.

Look for lice in the new house as well as the old.

AUGUST PLANTING CALENDAR.

VEGETABLE GARDEN—The first sowing of tomatoes for winter crops is done this month. It is also the month for planting the second crop of potatoes. Cabbage, cauliflower, celery and onions are sown for main crop. Green peas are sown by market gardeners this month.

FLOWER GARDEN—Sow pansies and stocks in well prepared seed beds out of doors. Carnations, salvia, Chinese pinks, verbena, petunia, etc., may be sown in the same way. Primula and cineraria seeds have to be sown in a box filled with very fine screened leafmold and sand, the seeds themselves being barely covered.

POLLINATION—AN IMPORTANT FACTOR.

Within the flower are usually two organs, the stamen and the pistil; the former contains the pollen, and the latter the eggs or ovules, which, when coming in contact with the pollen, becomes fertilized and produces the seed. The stamen and pistil are the reproductive organs of flowering plants.

Staminate flowers are those which have stamens only, and are called male flowers. Pistillate flowers are those which have pistils only and are called female flowers. Bi-sexual flowers are those which have both stamens and pistils, and these are called perfect flowers.

When the flower is ripe and ready to form fruit, the anther containing the pollen opens or bursts, releasing the pollen, which, coming in contact with the stigmas of the pistil, lodges there. Then it finds its way down to the ovary, where it unites with the ovules to produce seed. This process is called pollination.

Cross pollination is the process whereby pollen from one plant reaches the ovary of another plant of the same kind. The agencies for accomplishing this are winds, which blow the pollen from one plant to another. Bees, insects, bumblebees and humming birds, which come in contact with pollen while gathering pollen and nectar, carry pollen from one plant to another and thus aid in cross-pollinating, as some of the pollen sticks to their bodies and heads, and is rubbed off when the next flower is visited, and thus mixes with the next plant's flower.

Rain or water affects pollination, but adversely—it does not promote pollination, as pollen becomes wet and heavy. Wind affects pollination by blowing pollen from one plant to another. Rain affects it by wetting pollen so it will not blow through the air, and also renders it unfit for in-

W. S. BAIRD

Candidate for

JUDGE SUPERIOR COURT LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

Attorney W. S. Baird of the firm of Baird & Gerecht, has announced his candidacy for Judge of the Superior Court. Mr. Baird is a native of Scotland, being a graduate of the University of Glasgow, and his travels, which have extended through nearly every country on the globe, have given him a keen insight into the methods and customs of the different peoples.

Mr. Baird has made his home in Los Angeles for the past fourteen years, and when called to fill the unexpired term of former Judge Ling, handled the cases before him in a way that pronounced him an able jurist.

The power vested in a Judge of the Superior Court is of such importance to the commonwealth that men of broad experience and wide knowledge of the public needs should be chosen to fill this office, and Judge Baird's term on the bench, no less than his general practice of law, has qualified him for the office which he seeks.

seeds to carry from one bloom to another. Besides, insects do not work in wet weather. The inducements to the insect, bee or humming bird are the nectar and also pollen supplied to the bee, which uses it to feed the bee larvae.

Pollination is important, because it is necessary in the reproductive process. There would be no seed matured, consequently no perpetuation of many plants, unless this necessary fertilization of the ovules or eggs was made.

Red clover is pollinated by means of a mechanical device called a bumble-bee. This takes the place of the real bumble-bee, about the only insect which can reach the nectar contained in the bloom. The use of the artificial bumble-bee is brought about for the reason that the insect has become scarce.

Plant breeders often pollenate by removing pollen from one plant with a toothpick and then transferring this pollen to the stigma of another flower.

Hot house growers of flowers and vegetables also find it necessary to pollenate by hand. Bees do not work well under glass, hence a tedious process is necessary.

A seed is the result of a union between a cell of protoplasm and a cell of pollen in an ovule or egg; this union fecundates or fertilizes the egg so that it contains, when mature, an embryonic plant.

THE STATE'S DEVELOPMENT (California Development Board Bulletin.)

From all over the State reports come, "Everybody happy; conditions never more gratifying; crops large, good prices, employment for all; money abundant; prosperity abounding as never before."

Two new irrigation projects are placing water on 20,000 acres of land in Shasta Valley, near Montague, and a power company is extending its lines in the same territory for light and water.

Plans for the subdivision and marketing of the 17,000-acre Santa Rosa ranch, Santa Barbara County, are completed, and the land will soon be on the market.

A tract of 1,400 acres in Yolo County has been purchased by an English syndicate, which will devote the entire ranch to raising fine-bred stock.

Practically the entire stretch between Lone Tree and Honcutt, comprising 3,000 acres, has been brought under irrigation with water secured from wells, none of which require a greater depth than fifty feet.

Stockmen are bringing feeders into the State by thousands, owing to abundant pasture.

The first 'chul wheat has just been harvested in California, near Waterford, in Stanislaus County.

Kings County is shipping a record crop of barley, which is a bumper crop this year all over the State. It is estimated by one of the best authorities in the trade at 1,000,000 tons.

The pack of canned fruits in California promises to make a new large record. Good authorities place it at 25 or 30 per cent larger than last season. A number of new canneries are in operation, all running to capacity.

Green fruit shipments have not been interfered with, there having been 1,026 cars shipped up to the 17th inst., against 477 last year.

Citrus fruit shipments to the 15th inst. were 38,503 carloads (of which 6,417 were lemons), against 15,100 carloads (oranges and lemons) same date last year.

From results obtained at Folsom and Bakersfield, as well as in Tulare County, the growing of Turkish tobacco promises to become a general industry in several counties.

FRANK E. WRIGHT of Sacramento is announcing his candidacy for the position of State Surveyor-General on the Republican ticket, and is the ONLY CANDIDATE seeking this position who is affiliated with the Republican party and who is registered as a Republican. He is well qualified to fill the responsible position, having served eight years as Chief Deputy in that office under his late father, M. J. Wright, who was State Surveyor-General from 1895 to 1903. Prior to that time Mr. Wright was Chief Clerk in the United States Land Office at Visalia for five years when his father was registrar of that office. Thirteen years of continuous service in the State's land offices is a record he may well be proud of and alone stands as a recommendation for his integrity and ability. Mr. Wright is a native son, having been born in Vallejo in 1871. He is a young man of family and is well and favorably known throughout the State. He is asking the endorsement and support of the people at the coming election, relying upon his past record as to his efficiency, and promising to serve them to the best of his knowledge and ability if he has the honor of being elected Surveyor-General of the State of California.

HOMELESS CHILDREN AIDED

time to time, and a lengthy dissertation on "blue blood" and value of heredity, etc., they concluded they would fill out an application blank.

When they came to the question: "Where is your marriage certificate recorded?", the wife, who was writing, looked up at her husband and said, "Where is our marriage license recorded?" "Seattle, Washington," snapped the doctor. They left good references—brother fraternal man, a prominent clergyman, a banker—and all replied that, while they had known the doctor and his wife only six months, they were favorably impressed and would not hesitate to recommend them, feeling reasonably sure that a child would have the best of care and would receive the advantages which money makes possible. Their home was attractive, but there was that intangible something that made us hesitate; so, whenever a little girl of the age that the doctor and his wife wanted came to us, we always managed to find some good, whole-souled, frugal, earnest applicants, not so wealthy perhaps, not so cultivated, not so well-educated, but with a genuineness about them and a frankness of manner, and we'd say, "Let's let the doctor wait awhile."

Four months after the doctor and his wife applied to us, a young woman in our office who has no intention of being an old maid like myself and who is interested in all matters pertaining to matrimony, spied a small notice in the newspaper of a marriage license having been issued upon that date to this same doctor and Miss —, the full name tallying exactly with the names on the application. Three months later the paper told of the doctor's cruelty, later the divorce, and finally there appeared an article telling of the physician's confinement in an institution as an incompetent.

Just last month a woman who was most persistent in wanting a twelve-year-old girl was arrested for illicit dealing in children. We had rejected her application because there was a doubt in our minds as to the proper atmosphere of the home and the location in San Francisco.

Home Must Be Right.

When we stop to consider that we have voluntarily assumed the responsibility for the comfort and well-being of a child, when we undertake to determine who shall be the father, and who shall be the mother, where shall he the home, what shall be his intellectual training,—his physical, religious and moral training,—and, in this decision, the child has no voice, we are taking upon ourselves a grave responsibility, and it surely is necessary that we Native Daughters give our greatest care and thought to the selection of a home. We must know the environment of a home, what sort of reading matter and pictures, the distance from school, whether its sanitary conditions are good, whether the mother is neat, and cheerful, and refined, whether the father is clean-minded and not profane, sober, industrious, able to hold a job and provide for his family, and whether he is kind to his animals—in short, what is his standing in the community.

In accepting children for adoption our hearts get many a wrench. Where the parents are thoroughly bad and neglectful, there seems but one wise thing to do, and the solution usually rests with the judge of the juvenile court. There is no question what is best for the foundlings left on the doorsteps with no means of identification, no word telling even the date of their birth. Then we have the babies brought to some woman to hoard by the supposed parents, who pay a small amount for the child's care, promising to return and either take the child away or make another payment, who, nine times out of ten, never do return. After a few months of waiting, the little woman with whom the child was left, finding the burden more than she can cope with, appeals to the juvenile court, and the child is declared abandoned and committed to a home-placing society for placement in a permanent home.

Then we have mothers who deliberately and seemingly unreluctantly give their children to us. A very neat appearing woman came to our office one day with a beautiful, fair-haired, fine-skinned, blue-eyed baby boy of sixteen months. She said she must give her baby away. We questioned her. She said she was married, that her husband was out on Buchanan street, San Francisco, and that she intended to return to Minnesota to her people. When we asked her if she realized that she would never see her little son again, not hear of him only through the letters from the parents, that she could never know what part of the country he had gone to, nor the names of the people who would take him,—as the parents (with two exceptions out of our 526 homes) never are willing that the child's natural parents shall know where the child is placed,—she did (in justice to her) wince a little.

Then we urged her to go home and think it over, telling her that in a week or ten days we would come and see her. In two weeks I called at their home. There was the dear baby on the floor, the woman busying herself about a very tidy, though haseament room, and the man, looking glum, sat on an old trunk. I asked him if he was out of a job; he said he was. I found he was a waiter, so I told him I'd get work for him at once. I knew I could get work for him, even though I might need to buy him a job, if only to prove whether poverty was his reason for giving up the child. I explained that I could get provisions for him until he received his first pay. After waxing eloquent on the subject and using every argument in favor of their keeping this boy, I asked him if he didn't think it possible to keep his baby,—as we think parents should certainly he made to feel their obligation to their own children and to be made to care for them if morally fit. He shuffled his feet, shifted his eyes, shrugged his shoulders, and said, with a sneer, "I hadn't thought about it."

"Come to 855 Phelan Building tomorrow at 9 o'clock," I said, "and sign the relinquishment, you and your wife, giving this baby into the care of the Native Sons and Native Daughters Central Committee on Homeless Children. You don't deserve such a blessing, and I know of any number of homes open and ready to welcome him." Next morning they were both at our office and signed the relinquishment, and now this young man belongs to a father and mother who love him with their whole hearts. This same little boy came into our office with his mother and father the day he was legally adopted, and when a neighbor asked her if she thought as much of the boy as she could her own, she said: "Well, if I could think any more of a child than I do this one, I shouldn't want to do it, as 'twould be too painful."

Supervisory Methods Superior.

We very often are asked how long is a child placed before adoption is allowed. Six months, preferably one year. During that time it is possible for the parents to be sure that we have made no mistake, and it is possible for us to be sure that we have made no mistake. When the time is up, the foster parents select their own attorney, who gets from our office the necessary data, we signing the consent for adoption, or seeing to it that the one who is responsible for the child signs the consent.

There is a certain judge in Alameda County who pretends not to sign an order for adoption until the home of the petitioners has been visited by an agent whom he appoints. Some irregularities have come to his notice which prompted this ruling, and of course no exceptions can be made to this rule, so our homes are visited also. And I want to say that all of the homes selected by the Native Sons and Native Daughters Central Committee on Homeless Children (and we have a number in Alameda County) have received the highest recommendations from this visiting agent, with never a hitch in adoption proceedings.

Not long ago a home in Livermore was visited at the solicitation of his honor, by his appointed agent, and while the worker was thoroughly convinced, in her own mind, that the home was in every way satisfactory, she wanted to be most conscientious in her investigation, and asked a big six-footer of Livermore if this certain home was a good one and if the child was loved and cared for properly. "Loved and cared for properly," he fairly belted, the worker told me afterwards, "well, if he wasn't loved and cared for, what do you suppose I'd be doing? I'm a Native Son."

This illustrates, I think, the superiority of the methods now employed by the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West. It stands to reason that when 300 to 400 children must be supervised by a few workers from a central office, and when those workers must devote some of their time and energy to securing funds to maintain their institution and organization, and those few workers must spend some of their time in investigating and in taking the children to their homes, that a great deal of time is not left for frequent visits to the children placed. Our Native Sons and Native Daughters live in the community where a child is placed, and see the child many times in a week, oftentimes; this being true, there is no chance for the child to be misused, as you will readily see. But I urge that you report these visits to the central office that we may, in turn, report to the societies from which we took the children.

"To help a boy or girl is the greatest thing in the world. At one and the same time, you are helping not only the child, but the man, the woman, the community, the whole world, and yourself."

"MINERALS OF CALIFORNIA."

State Mineralogist F. McN. Hamilton announces the publication of "Minerals of California," a cloth-bound book of 250 pages, written by A. S. Eakle, Ph. D., professor of mineralogy in the University of California. Each chemical group of minerals constitutes a chapter in the book, and the work is the result of many years of research and study of California's minerals.

In accordance with the policy of the State Mining Bureau to distribute its publications at actual cost, the book will be sent, prepaid, to any address upon receipt of one dollar. The treatise is of value both to the man interested in the presence of minerals from a purely economic viewpoint, and to the student of natural history.

Native Sons of the Golden West

Taking Time by the Forelock.

San Francisco—The Ways and Means Committee of the Extension Committee, which will have charge of the Grand Parlor meeting and Admission Day celebration in this city next year, met in the Grizzly Bear Club, July 10th, Harry I. Mulerevy, chairman, presiding. Many plans were suggested for raising the $50,000 required fund, and these were referred to special committees which will look into their feasibility and report at a later meeting. During the evening addresses were made by Grand President Louis H. Mooser, James D. Phelan, Grand Treasurer John E. McDougald, Past Grand President Thomas Monahan, Grand Trustees Arthur E. Curtis and Charles W. Heyer, and others.

Past Grand Visits.

Los Angeles—The newly-elected officers of Los Angeles Parlor, No. 45, were duly installed by D.D. G.P. Peter H. Muller, July 17th, following the initiation of one candidate. The district deputy was assisted by Harry G. Folsom as acting grand marshal, and D.D.G.P. Josiah F. Lyon as past grand president. During the evening, John T. Newell, on behalf of the Parlor, presented Charles Blumeuthal, the retiring junior past president, with a handsome emblematic watch fob. P.G.P. John H. Grady of San Francisco was a guest of the evening, and made an interesting address. Refreshments were served.

Indoor Picnic.

Richmond—Committees have been appointed by Richmond Parlor, No. 217, to arrange for an indoor picnic to be held at East Shore Park, Saturday, August 15th. Special concessions will be provided, and the affair is expected to draw a large crowd from San Francisco and Alameda County.

Fosters Kindly Feeling.

Elk Grove—The annual social evening of Elk Grove Parlor, No. 41, June 26th, was a notable success in every particular. These affairs are given to foster a kindly feeling between the residents, irrespective of their birthplace. Dancing was the evening's attraction, for which excellent music was provided. At midnight, refreshments were served.

Wins First Prize.

Suisun—Solano Parlor, No. 39, is again in the limelight, having won first prize for the most original float in the Fourth of July parade. It consisted of a trail wagon of the pioneer days, drawn by a horse seventeen hands high and a mule so small that it was almost hidden by its running-mate. The outfit was gotten up as if embarked on a long trip; the driver wore a pair of boots fifty-one years old and carried an old flintlock rifle ninety-four years old. Another feature was an American flag with thirteen stars, sixty-nine years old, which had seen service and was loaned to the Parlor by a Civil War veteran. The float, with its thirteen-star flag, made a hit with everybody. The drum and fife corps of Twin Peaks Parlor, San Francisco, led the Native Sons' division. The boys of Solano Parlor worked hard to make a showing, and are elated over the fact that the Parlor captured first prize.

July 17th, the Parlor had initiation, installation, and a general "big" time. Keep your eyes on old Solano, which is "always on the job."

Novelty High Jinks.

San Francisco—July 16th, D.D.G.P. Albert Picard installed the following officers of Precita Parlor, No. 187, after which those in attendance enjoyed a novelty high jinks prepared by the Good of the Order Committee: Junior past president, Wm. S. Reeves; president, Edward J. Lynch; first vice-president, Walter L. Clement; second vice-president, Reuben W. Rhode; third vice-president, George R. Hooper; marshal, Fred W. Newman; inside sentinel, Paul Roche; outside sentinel, Al. French; recording secretary, Edward Tietjen; financial secretary and treasurer, Daniel J. Wren; trustees—Wm. H. Hanes, Chas. H. Cavanagh, W. F. Buhlinger. The Parlor's delegates to the Extension of the Order Committee are George A. Duddy, Henry Spaulding, Fred Webber and Grand Trustee Arthur E. Curtis.

On July 23rd, the Parlor held its first monthly whist party, when valuable prizes were awarded.

Officers Installed.

Los Angeles—The newly-elected officers of Ramona Parlor, No. 109, were installed by D.D.G.P. Josiah F. Lyon, July 10th. The district deputy was highly complimented upon the fact that he rendered the 2474-word installation ceremony with but seven errors. Many visitors were in attendance, and these, together with several members of Ramona Parlor, made interesting remarks. Refreshments were served following the Parlor adjournment. During the evening, Irving Baxter, retiring president, was presented with a handsome emblematic ring. Candidates continue to be initiated at every meeting, and the Parlor is in an excellent condition, with enthusiasm at the high ebb.

Retiring Officer Highly Honored.

Sacramento—D.D.G.P. Darold De Coe installed the following officers of Sacramento Parlor, No. 3, July 2nd: Junior past president, W. J. Hicks; president, W. J. Flynn; first vice-president, Chas. Hartmeyer; second vice-president, Erle Henderson; third vice-president, Otto J. Futterer; marshal, Archie J. Kolitzke; inside sentinel, Emil Schmid; outside sentinel, Robert Johnson; trustees, F. E. Michael, Jr., Thos. McAuliffe, C. A. Root; historian, Eu Kraus; financial secretary, A. J. Delano; recording secretary, F. J. Didiou; treasurer, R. D. Finnie; pianist, R. C. Bryce. On behalf of the Parlor, R. C. Cothrin presented outgoing past president Fred Schmidt with a beautiful engraved gold watch, as a token for faithful services. After the installation, the members indulged in refreshments.

Twenty-four Past Presidents Rewarded.

Placerville—The meeting of Placerville Parlor, No. 9, was exceptionally well attended, and was a memorable one in that twenty-four past presidents were presented with emblematic jewels, Abe Darlington presiding over this function. The recipients were Richard Alderson, George Hofmeister, George Rolleri, Fred T. Hale, Fred Irwin, Max Mierion, George Schiff, J. F. Limpinsel, Bernard Mierion, Lewis A. Reeg, C. B. Wakefield, William Wilkinson, John B. Alderson, Dan G. Carr, James Mierion, Perry S. Tracy, S. H. Rantz, Joseph F. McKee, O. P. Fitch, Ted C. Atwood and Joseph Skinner. Alderson was the first president of the Parlor, instituted in 1881, and the others held the office from that year until 1898, with the exception of Skinner, who has just retired. As soon as possible, the remaining twenty-four past presidents will be similarly rewarded. The jewel design was executed by Miss Lulu Weatherwax; on one side is an enameled replica of the Bear flag and opposite is the American flag; in the center is a view of Marshall's monument in relief, while surmounting the pin is a small diamond; each jewel is appropriately engraved with the name of the particular past president and the date of his office. Following the initiation of one candidate, D.D.G.P. Arthur J. Koletzke installed the newly-elected officers, after which a banquet and social session were enjoyed. The report of Recording Secretary Don H. Goodrich shows Placerville to be one of the wealthiest Parlors in the Order, the assets amounting to $20,000. The membership is 270.

Getting Big 1915 Fund Ready.

Stockton—The newly-elected officers of Stockton Parlor, No. 7, were installed July 13th, by D.D.G.P. Joseph Axelrod of Oakdale, who had his work letter-perfect, and was greeted by prolonged applause at the conclusion of the ceremonies. This is the first time in several years that Stockton has seen a district deputy who had all of his work committed to memory. Following are the newly installed officers: John W. Kerriek, junior past president; G. E. Reynolds, president; Walter P. Rothenbush, first vice-president; Cyril Kenyon, second vice-president; George J. Fox, third vice-president; Harry W. Dunlap, marshal; A. J. Turner, recording secretary; W. C. Neumiller, financial secretary; George E. Catts, treasurer; Martin O. Schneider, trustee; George Butheuth, inside sentinel; Will Whipple, outside sentinel. Quite a delegation from Oakdale accompanied the district deputy.

Stockton Parlor's Admission Day 1915 Booster Committee is steadily increasing its funds. It hopes to have several thousand dollars available for the expenses of participation in the big celebration at the exposition. The committee had charge of the Stockton Mineral Baths on the 3rd, 4th and 5th of July, receiving a liberal percentage of the receipts of all the regular amusement devices. Special concessions were also introduced. Five band concerts and other open-air entertainment features were given. The committee cleared $570 for the 1915 fund. The committee consists of Ben F. Cooper (chairman), A. J. Turner, A. W. Atwood, Cyril MacDonald, Walter P. Rothenbush and G. E. Reynolds. The drum corps boys of the Parlor, by the way, continue to hold weekly rehearsals, and are now probably second to none in the State.

other robberies of small amounts were reported from the interior counties.

Mistakes Bear for Mule.

On August 8th, the Sheriff of Santa Clara County received information where Jim Grant, a man connected with the Ingraham gang that robbed the Placerville stage on June 30th, could be found. He was captured in a house about eight miles from San Jose, where he was found asleep in a bed. After being handcuffed, he made an attempt to escape. He secured a loaded shotgun but was unable to fire it with his handcuffed hands. He was knocked out by a charge of buckshot a deputy sheriff fired into his body and was considered fatally wounded.

The ten men arrested in San Jose for complicity in the robbery by the Ingraham gang on June 30th were safely delivered to the Placerville jail on August 3rd, and were awaiting trial. The first trial was held during the last week in August, when Tom Poole was tried on a charge of murder, for killing Deputy Sheriff Staples at the Somerset House on July 1st. There was quite an array of experienced criminal lawyers aiding the prosecution, including N. Greene Curtis and J. C. Goods, while there were three lawyers defending Poole. The jury was out only fifteen minutes, and brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, which meant hanging.

Three hundred men were employed constructing the wagon road from Sonora to Mono County, and it was expected to be completed within sixty days.

An Irishman, accompanying a pack train from Sonora to Aurora, let a mule get away from him when unpacking at the camp about dusk. He was sent back over the trail to bring the mule back. About a mile from the camp he suddenly came upon an animal in a clump of brush by the side of the road and, thinking it was the mule, approached to halter it. He was just in the act of leading it back to camp when it turned on him and proved to be a grizzly bear. The Irishman made a home run, and was speechless from being out of breath when he reached the camp.

SACRAMENTO GIVEN BOOST IN MUSICAL COMPOSITION.

"The Heart of California" is the title given to a new song dedicated to the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West. The words are by Lillian H. Shuey-Bailey and the music by Anita L. Weidemann, authors of "Wonderful Eyes," "The Fair Californian," "Sunshine After Showers," etc.

The composition is one of merit, and aside from its musical qualities, is a good "boost" for Sacramento. The cover is adorned with a map of the State, a large red heart designating Sacramento's position. The refrain runs:

"So we'll stand for Sacramento,
The city of our sires,
Who crossed the white Sierras
To build their altar fires.
Let envy's sword be shattered!
Her fame we'll not resign,—
The Heart of California,
Since the days of forty-nine."

CANAL MEANS NEW ERA

and pour in in a mighty tide across the mighty ocean, bringing to us the youth, the enterprise, and the energy of the older countries in search of adventure, of freedom, and of riches on the shores of the Pacific.

Tourists will be attracted by the most sublime scenery on the Panama Isthmus, and thousands will come to repair physical constitutions, racked by the extremes of climate, and the miasma of the states east of the mountains. These words may seem boastful to our brethren at the East, but we know whereof we speak, and, in simple truthfulness, can say no less.

One reminiscence more before I close: Nearly a century and a half ago the first settlement of white men was made within the borders of California. A party of immigrants then arrived, not in a luxurious passenger car whirled along the dizzy heights and profound gulfs of the Sierras by a ponderous engine waking the echoes of the mountains with its roar and rattle, but led by a Franciscan friar, not in quest of gold, or office, or of a more comfortable home, but stimulated by religious zeal, and bearing the standard of the cross.

After a laborious and painful journey through Mexico, Father Juan Crespe arrived at San Diego on the 14th day of May, 1769. Father Junipero Serra followed, arriving on the 1st day of July of the same year. It seems singularly appropriate to signalize the centennial anniversary of the settlement of California by the completion of this crowning work of Saxon civilization which links together, in iron bonds, the two great oceans of the world and carries California, at one bound, into the center of the great family of nations.

If, after the lapse of these hundred and forty-six years, the good friar could awake from his slumber and revisit the scenes of his self-denying labors, with what speechless amazement would he gaze upon the transformation wrought on these shores since his day? It is doubtful, however, if the changes of the past hundred and forty-six years, amazing as they have been, are more wonderful than will be those that will occur within the hundred and forty-six years to come. Where is the fancy, adventurous enough to conceive the changes to occur before the ceaseless course of time brings the second centennial anniversary of the settlement of California?

In conclusion, however, some things must be borne in mind, if we expect that prosperity which seems to gild with its canal of promise the horizon of our future. Shipping and telegraph are potent civilizers, but these, alone, will not constitute or conserve any state, much less a free state. Corruption and vice can travel in ships with as much ease as in stagecoaches. California may have all the facilities of travel and intercourse, and its people accumulate wealth beyond the dream of avarice, and yet be miserably poor in all the higher elements of solid and enduring happiness.

What the moral character of the future population of the State is to be, depends largely upon the generation which is living today. When we contemplate the magnitude of the destiny in store for our noble State, let us realize that we must, ourselves, furnish to those who are to come after us, that lofty example which we wish them to follow.

We must set our faces, like a flint, against corruption in high places and in low ones—in legislative halls, and in primary conventions. We must make no compromise with gilded dishonesty. We must refuse to recognize two codes of morals—one for private, and a lower one for political, affairs. Above all, we must recollect that the only basis of morality is religion, and that no people who are unmindful of their obligations to their Creator can permanently prosper.

No amount of material wealth can compensate for the decay of public and private virtue, and whatever our religious convictions may be, or whatever form of worship or tenets of faith our judgments approve, while we obey the call of patriotism and render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, let us be careful to render unto God the things that are God's.

INSCRIPTION FOR MONUMENT.

Dr. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, has composed the following inscription for the Pioneer Mothers' Monument to be erected in San Francisco, and it has been formally selected by the committee:

"Over rude paths beset with hunger and risk she pressed on toward the vision of a better country; to an assemblage of men busied with the perishable rewards of the day she brought the threefold leaven of enduring society: faith, gentleness and home with the nurture of children."

(AUTHORIZED BY EDITORIAL BUREAU.)

San Francisco—Emperor William of Germany has announced that he will give a cup to the winner of the Sonder class event in the yacht regatta of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. President Woodrow Wilson and King George V have offered cups for two other events of the regatta. The races will be held in San Francisco harbor in April.

The amount of money in cash premiums that will be awarded for livestock exhibits has reached the sum of $352,950. In purses for harness races, almost $230,000 additional will be awarded.

The United States Government exhibit will include exhibits by the State, Treasury, War, Post-office, Navy, Interior, Agricultural, Commerce and Labor Departments, and the Civil Service Commission, the Isthmian Canal Commission, the Library of Congress, the Smithsonian Institution, the Commission of Fine Arts, the Government Printing Office and the American National Red Cross.

A suffragette, 90 feet tall and with a name of equal proportions, stands at the center of "The Zone." Her name is Miss Panama Pankaline Imogene Equalrights, and she is clad in the latest style. More than 500 yards of cloth are required for this style. She carries a drum and a flag labeled "Votes for Women."

Contracts have been let for the construction of the ferry and the press buildings. The ferry building is to cost $42,000, and the press building, which is for the publicity department of the exposition and for visiting newspapermen from all parts of the world, will cost $22,000.

The smallest convention to meet in San Francisco in 1915 among the 235 already listed, will be the Baronial Order of Runnymede. This order is composed of the direct descendants of the twenty-five barons who wrested the Magna Charta from King John in 1215. There are in the United States less than 100 members. June 15th will be Magna Charta Day.

"Pannie," a dog that played in luck, is the mascot of the exposition. She is a coach dog that arrived from the army of unemployed very hungry, very tired, and yet dirtier. She was given refuge by the gatemen who were as Cerebus to all humans without the price of admission; a collar was added and later a blanket, and now she carries the honors of mascot with a haughty air and a sparkling, colorful regalia.

Arnold Kruckman, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, is now in Liverpool, on his way round the world, choosing the chain of control and supply stations for the around-the-world aviation race. From England he will go to Iceland and Greenland, then to France, Germany, Russia, across Siberia to Japan, and across the Bering Straits to Alaska and then to San Francisco.

In orders just sent to Japan, Australia, England, Holland and Belgium, more than 500,000 flowering plants are ordered for the exposition grounds. The long list includes rhododendrons of hybrid varieties, daffodil bulbs, May-flowering tulips, early tulips, anemones, ranunculas, hyacinths, Spanish iris, Japanese iris, English Iris, narcissus, red azaleas, tree peonies and lilies.

BIG DEMAND FOR MALESTENOGRAPHERS AND TYPEWRITERS.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces that while it has no difficulty in securing sufficient female stenographers and typewriters to meet the needs of the departments at Washington, the supply of male eligibles has not been equal to the demand.

Young men who are at least 18 years of age and who are willing to accept the usual entrance salaries, which are $840 and $900 a year, have excellent opportunities for appointment. While the entrance salaries are low, advancement is reasonably rapid to those meriting it.

The examinations, which any competent stenographer should be able to pass, are held each month in the year, except December, at the principal cities of the United States. Full information in regard to the examination may be secured by addressing the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., or the District Secretary, Postoffice, San Francisco.

ED. L. HEAD

OF SAN DIEGO

CANDIDATE FOR THE NOMINATION FOR

STATE TREASURER

ON THE REPUBLICAN TICKET.

Ed L. Head, keeper of the State Archives, has officially announced his candidacy for nomination for State Treasurer on the Republican ticket. He was born in Washington, Yolo County, California, January 24, 1863, his parents being '49ers.

Mr. Head was for many years Cashier and Treasurer of the Spring Valley Water Company, and President of the California Mutual Fund Building. He was elected and served two terms as a member of the Board of Education of San Francisco.

Mr. Head is a well-known lodge man, having been Grand Treasurer of the Grand Aerie, F.O.E. for five years. He is a Past President and charter member of Stanford Parlor, N.S.G.W.; Past President of San Francisco Aerie, No. 5, F.O.E.; Past Grand of Alta Lodge, No. 205, I.O.O.F.; member of Anna Rehekah Lodge, No. 137, of San Diego, Sacramento Lodge, No. 1020, Loyal Order of Moose, and of San Diego Lodge, No. 168, of Elks. Previous to his becoming a State official, Mr. Head was a well-known business man of San Diego.

the first six months of 1914 has just been made. It shows some startling figures relative to the extraordinary heavy toll of industry in terms of human lives and bodily injuries.

A total of over 26,000 accidents have been reported to the commission during the first half-year ending June 30th. Of these, 25,475 resulted in temporary disability, approximately 600 caused permanent disability, while 223 resulted in death. During the month of June alone over 7,500 accidents were reported, ten of which were death cases, while 184 caused permanent disability.

To the Electors of Los Angeles County

It is a pleasure to feel that in the community in which one has been reared from infancy, to find that when one aspires to great honor he holds the respect and confidence of his friends and acquaintances and of people with whom it had not heretofore been his pleasure to come into social or business contact.

I claim allegiance to the great State of California as my birthright and heritage! I love her history from the day when the flag of freedom was first flown to the breeze at Monterey!

I love her people, native or adopted! But as much as I love all these, more do I love her institutions of government, and one more sacred than the rest,—one the honor and integrity of which should be guarded by every loyal citizen, as he or she would guard the honor and purity of his or her own residence,—and that institution is the Judiciary. For the very security of the inalienable rights of man lies in the preservation of the integrity and honor of the Judiciary, and to aspire to become a member of this branch of government is a noble ambition, and it is gratifying to feel that the citizens of this community in which I have spent a quarter of a century in the active practice of the law manifest their friendship and confidence in my capability and integrity to fill such a position.

But in presenting my name before the people of this county as a candidate for Judge of the Superior Court of the State of California in and for the County of Los Angeles, I do not ask the support of my friends, based on the support of any political, religious or fraternal affiliation or based solely on friendship, for I hold that it is every citizen's first duty to investigate the qualifications and integrity of the candidates for office, and particularly candidates for judicial office.

There are ten Judges of the Superior Court to be elected on November 3rd, and I hold the State has a right to a majority expression of opinion on ten candidates, and no voter does his full duty as a citizen of the State unless he, after intelligent and unbiased investigation, votes for ten candidates. And I would be unworthy of the position to which I aspire if I should advocate, or permit my friends to advocate, voting for me alone.

Thanking you for your attention, I remain,
Yours truly,

J. VINCENT HANNON.

A TRIBUTE TO CALIFORNIA AND CALIFORNIANS

(C. K. McCLATCHY, Editor, in the Sacramento Evening Bee, June 29th.)

HERE IS SOMETHING SO CHARMING and so potent about California that it puts a loving chain about all her sons and daughters as they depart for other scenes—a chain constantly reminding that California ever is ready to welcome them back—California, the favorite daughter of the universal Mother; California, whose marvels bear testimony that blind Chance did not preside at such a birth, but that Beauty's empire must have sprung from the womb of Chaos at the wand of the Everlasting.

What departing Californian can feast upon her splendors of gorge; her wonders of hills that were before man was; her wealth of sky and her placidity of temperature that wed Italy and Switzerland; her sculptured glories chiseled by the hand of Divinity; her castellated canyons where of old the Titans fought the Gods; her carpeted lands that "need only to be tickled with a hoe to laugh with a harvest"—and not thank God he is a Californian; once and forever a Californian?

As your departing Californian is swirled away by the black, iron-horse cavalry of commerce and travel, he looks upon his visits as but the spice that adds zest to his homecoming; he feels, as he bids his State good-bye, that every leaf, every rill, every tree, every sough of the pines, and every Aeolian harp of the mountain winds upon which the Almighty plays the Te Deum of the universe—all, all will be waiting to welcome him home with a breezy Californian welcome.

The heart that has truly loved California can never forget.

Years but add intensity to the affection, and absence multiplies the devotion in direct proportion to the distance.

Other scenes interest and amaze; but they pall. Other climates invite; they cannot hold. Other peoples share our affections; the heart of a Californian, no matter where he may be, as irresistibly turns to this West as the sunflower to the god of day.

Once a Californian, always a Californian.

Nor time, nor distance, nor foreign scenes, nor domestic; appealing opportunity elsewhere or inviting wealth abroad, can sever that golden cord of affection.

Death alone can proclaim divorce between man and State, between woman and that glorious California she holds dearest in her inmost heart of hearts.

And when the Californian is homeward bound, what a thrill the thought evokes!

How the impulse stirs; how the eyes sparkle; how the blood bounds as the traveler rushes on the way back to California—the Republic's best jewel, lending her glories to the sunset sea!

How your returning sons and daughters long to greet you once again. California—land of fair women and brave men; land of fruit, and flower, and vine, and fig tree; land of balmy clime and radiant sky; of days that feel the immediate presence of a bountiful and beneficent Creator—of nights delicious, aromatic, exhilarating—nights when you can sit in the great out-of-doors and wonder as you watch God's vesper lamps swinging in the eternal heavens.

How your arriving children ache to clasp you to their hearts, you dear old California—California, wedded to all the beauties of earth; in whose domain can be found all that is rarest and best in Humanity and in Nature to feast the eye, tickle the palate, or satisfy the heart.

Beloved California! Your sons are not prodigals, nor have your daughters forsaken you.

They go away loving you. They return with that love increased. They long again to embrace you; to feel your dear breath upon their cheeks; to regale themselves with your air that is like wine in the veins; to feast their eyes—aye, their souls as well—upon your matchless mountains—your sentinel pines—your redwoods that sang to the Pacific ere Moses visioned the Promised Land from Pisgah's heights—your valleys that nestle lovingly between the bosoms of your hills—your streams that go laughing to their marriage with the sea—your fruits that rival those of the fabled Hesperides—your flowers that would entice the courting bees of Hybla—your rosy-cheeked apples and your still rosier-cheeked girls—and around, and about, and wedded to it all that air of comradeship, that atmosphere of cordiality, that electrical human ozone peculiarly Californian.

Your wandering ones, California, always come back to throw themselves contented and happy into your lap; to whisper how delightful it was to be away for a spell, but how infinitely sweeter it is to be at home again and in your loving arms once again.

In the country far to westward, in the land of golden fame,
Where the warm hearts melt the ice and the snows are but a name,
There arose a wondrous power, and it lighted all the world,
Till the banners of the Union, in its honor, were unfurled.
From the east, and north, and southward, poured the eager, young and old,
To bow down before this power—for this monarch's name was Gold.
Hand in hand, the man of labor and the man to manor born,
Men whose suns were almost setting, youth in freshest hope of morn,
Husbands, fathers, brothers, lovers, sought that far-off "Sunset Land,"
Where the whispering Pacific kissed the burning golden sands.
Went with hearts elate with promise, brains with visions great aflame,
Sure of gaining untold riches in this golden land of fame.
Farewell kisses on the faces that to part with left a pain
In the heart, and moistened lashes; but the fever in the veins
Dried the tears, and burned the brighter for the dear ones left behind, While, through hearded lips there fluttered half-formed prayers upon the wind.
But they found that infant country overgrown with forests bold;

THE LAND BY THE SUNSET SEA

Found that wealth meant honest labor, for the eager young and old.
Found no sceptred monarch ruling all the country miles around;
Found that but to kneel before him, they must dig beneath the ground.
But, unconquered and undaunted, fell they to with lusty will—Stroke of ax and sound of sawing in the forest grand—until
All those giants who for ages had withstood the tempest's blast,
With a crash of parting branches, at their feet lay prone at last.
Then they built their rough log cabins from the fallen giant's limbs.
Faces tanned and weather-beaten, seen 'neath broad sombrero brims,
"Hearts of oak and nerves of sinew," purpose firm and ready hand
Ever to a brother offered in this golden "Sunset Land."
But, when work of day was ended, and around their rude hearth fires, Groups of tired men were clustered—husbands, brother, lovers, sires—race that many ran;

Rough the ways, and rough the people; rough, alas! the morals, too;
Rough the voices, rough the language of this pioneering crew—
Then, amid a sacred silence, men who had not wept for years,
Pulled their hats low down to cover manly eyes bedimmed with tears;
And the distant dear ones, waiting, watching, hoping, praying there,
Might have felt, across the ocean, a low-spoken, fervent prayer;
Might have felt that, though between them rolled an ocean wild and wide,
Love could span the weary distance, love could laugh at wind and tide.
Some with life and hope refulgent, sought this land of promise fair,
But, away from home and kindred, to lay down their burden there.
With no soothing hand of woman on the aching forehead lain,
When the heart was tired and homesick and the head was hot with pain.
Only hearded faces gathered round their weary, dying mate
Till he passed away, in silence, through an unseen "Golden Gate."
Rough the times, and rough the justice meted out to erring man;
Rough the life, and rough the country, rough the

VALLEJO HAS GREAT INDUSTRIAL FUTURE

(By E. E. WESTERGREEN, Secretary Vallejo Chamber of Commerce.)

VALLEJO, CALIFORNIA, MAY BE said to be a city of vision. Its people, in spirit and deed, represent the very antonym of the significant phrase, "where there is no vision the people perish." That spirit during the past few months has found expression in the doing of things which have started the re-making of a city. This future city will be as intimately related to progress and prosperity as the "city that was" is related to romance.

Essentially, Vallejo of the future must be an industrial city. Many factors contribute to this condition, chief of which, at this time, is the presence there of the largest United States naval base on the Pacific Coast, representing an investment of the United States Government which approximates $20,000,000. Running a close second to this, from the standpoint of importance in the development of the future Vallejo, is its magnificent water front. The latter consists of a deep channel, which separates the navy yard from the city of Vallejo, fully three miles in length.

The United States Government for the past seven months has been continuously engaged in dredging this channel to a depth of thirty feet at mean low tide. More than $420,000 will be expended in these operations by the Government before the job is completed. In addition to this, the channel will be widened at its narrowest points to 600 feet, the other channel widths running from the former figure to 1,500 feet, giving the future Vallejo a waterway that may be navigated by any vessel that can enter the Golden Gate at low tide.

The significance of Vallejo's strategic location is further emphasized by the fact that within a of a city which for many decades has been dependent solely upon the income from the United States Navy. She is now developing into a community which presents every aspect of becoming, in the very near future, one of many industries. In the beginning of this transformation, a new spirit has come into being, the contagion of which is manifest in the business, social and educational life of Vallejo. And Vallejo is proud of herself.

Unhesitatingly, Vallejo invites the closest investigation of her numerous advantages as they exist today, and as they will exist in their augmented state within the next few months. For Vallejo knows—and she is explaining this fact in no uncertain terms through her chief promotion body, the Vallejo Chamber of Commerce,—that few cities can boast of such a water frontage as owned by Vallejo, and that certainly none has so long a line of deep-water dockage sites.

Nor should it be assumed that Vallejo believes her deep-water frontage alone will attract the industries of the future. She does not. Already, two railroads have their termini in Vallejo. In another year a third road will be completed to Vallejo. The latter road is now under construction between Vallejo and Sacramento, and when completed will maintain shops and deep-water terminal at the former city.

It is generally believed, and not without good reason, that this road is early destined to become the terminus of another trans-continental line. As this is being written, tentative plans are being made by outside capital for the construction of an electric line of the most modern equipment between Vallejo and Benicia, eight miles east.

Vallejo is also a prosperous city. While there are no extremely wealthy residents there, there are, on the other hand, no poor. The prosperity of the buildings, the valuation of which runs well up into the six figures.

Vallejo's water supply is municipally owned. There is none finer in the entire State of California, it being pure mountain spring water having its source in mountains north of Green Valley falls, a distance of twenty miles from Vallejo by air line. This supply is stored in two enormous reservoirs with a combined capacity of more than 1,000,000,000 gallons.

After leaving the lakes the water flows through a natural channel for a distance of two miles to the intake pipe, a drop of more than seven hundred feet. Thus the water is thoroughly aerated before entering the city's pipes. The section of Solano County in which the Vallejo water supply finds its source is exceedingly beautiful, so much so that every week the country becomes the mecca of hundreds of tourists seeking outdoor beauty and recreation. The locality is at the head of one of the richest portions in the county, Green Valley, famous the world over for its early and choice fruits.

Space does not permit the proper description of Vallejo's many superior advantages. Suffice to say that her natural resources, together with the extensive development work going on, make it one of the most strategic points on the Upper San Francisco Bay region, inviting industries and capital seeking manufacturing sites, and it is only a question of time until the vision of her people—a great industrial city—becomes a reality.

CALIFORNIA HISTORY

TEACHING INAUGURATED.

The romantic and significant story of California's past is to be taught in the University of California this year, for the first time as a full separate course.

VIEW OF VALLEJO FROM THE UNITED STATES NAVY YARD SIDE OF THE VALLEJO CHANNEL, SHOWING A PORTION OF THE CITY'S MAGNIFICENT WATERFRONT, AND THE SCENE WHERE WILL BE STAGED A WONDERFUL FIREWORKS DISPLAY DURING THE ADMISION DAY CELEBRATION ON SEPTEMBER 7TH, 8TH AND 9TH.

radius of less than five miles fully a score of the principal institutions of the Upper San Francisco Bay maintain their Pacific Coast deep-water terminals.

It was to make available this multiplicity of industries, all of which may be credited with being either in Vallejo's industrial zone or immediately contiguous thereto, that the United States Government recently spent $1,250,000 in dredging and deepening the San Pablo shoals to a depth of thirty feet at mean low tide and to subsequently authorize the expenditure of $420,000 for the dredging and deepening of the Vallejo channel.

No sooner did the citizens of Vallejo sight the dredger turning into the channel, after the completion of the work on the San Pablo shoals, than they decided it would be "good business" to make use of the silt which would be removed from Vallejo's waterway. Forthwith, Vallejo's progressive citizenry set in motion the "bright idea." Today, only a few months later, that brilliant thought is finding expression in the rapid reclamation of nearly 160 acres of Vallejo's tide lands.

So it may be said that Vallejo is being made over. She is being made over in a manner in which very few cities of California can be made over. And in the re-making, Vallejo is passing out of the stage community, as a whole, is absolutely proven by the homes of her inhabitants. There is hardly an instance in Vallejo in which the home does not represent individuality. The charm of these homes is materially added to by the fact that Vallejo is situated on a group of hills which accentuate the beauty of the residence section.

The area of Vallejo proper is approximately two square miles. But within that area the city boasts of more than twelve and one-half miles of paved streets. The paving was accomplished through direct taxation, completed in less than two years, and represents in the total an investment of more than $1,000,000. The streets are broad and inviting, and no one can pass through Vallejo without getting an impression which is most favorable and lasting. Indeed, Vallejo is proud of her appearance. She has good cause to be so.

A commission form of government is shaping the destinies of the city. Vallejo's schools, of which she has five grammar and one new high school, are her especial pride. Churches of all the representative religious denominations have edifices there, and resident ministers. Furthermore, fraternal orders have a large following in Vallejo, nearly every organization having a good-sized local membership, and many of the lodges own their own

It is through the generosity of the Native Sons of the Golden West, in supporting liberally for years past University Fellowships in California and Pacific Coast history, that this has come about.

Charles E. Chapman, for several years past in Europe as one of these Fellows, there exploring in the Spanish archives for lost treasures of California history, has returned to Berkeley to offer this new instruction.

CHINESE PISTACHE FOR CALIFORNIA.

The United States Forest Service, in connection with the Bureau of Plant Industry, has been carrying on an experiment on the Angeles, Santa Barbara, Cleveland and Monterey National Forests to determine the suitability of Chinese pistache to Southern California. This tree closely resembles the pepper tree and has possibilities for ornamental planting or as a stock tree for grafting the pistachio nut of commerce.

The experiment has demonstrated that Chinese pistache can be grown successfully in the foothills of Southern California, and that it will endure considerable drought and frost. With proper care for the first few years the growth is fairly rapid.

THE ONLY CITY THAT HAD A celebration of the fourteenth anniversary of the admission of California into the Union was San Francisco, where the Pioneer Society met at their hall and marched to the Academy of Music.

There an oration by Dr. Bellows, and an original poem by Bret Harte were listened to, followed by a collation and a good time generally.

The territory of Nevada was preparing for statehood by adopting a constitution, and these people were congratulated by the Pioneers.

September 5th, one of those appalling disasters that were too frequently happening to the steamboats transporting people on our rivers occurred five miles above Rio Vista, on the Sacramento River.

The steamboat "Washoe," on an opposition line between San Francisco and Sacramento, owned and commanded by Captain Kidd, while en route from San Francisco, at 9 p.m., blew up and caused one of the greatest steamboat catastrophes that had occurred in the State.

There were 153 passengers and 29 employees on the steamboat. Over fifty persons were known to have been killed or died from injuries received, and seventy-five were injured, while quite a number were missing. Whether the latter were blown into eternity, drowned and their bodies never found, or were uninjured and amid the confusion following the explosion disappeared, was never known.

The steamboat "Antelope," carrying freight to Sacramento, came to the scene an hour or so after the disaster and, taking on all the dead, injured and surviving from the partially sunken steamboat, conveyed them to Sacramento, where, upon its arrival in the early morning of the 6th, it announced its mournful tidings by the tolling of its bell. This quickly brought many of the people of the city to the river front, and as soon as it became known that a great disaster had occurred, all the bells in the city were tolled and the whole populace became a relief committee.

A coroner's jury at Sacramento, after a couple of weeks of investigation, rendered a verdict blaming the explosion to the carelessness of the engineers in allowing the water to get too low in the boilers. The chief engineer was killed in the explosion, but the second engineer was charged with manslaughter.

The steamboat "Chrysopolis" was snagged near Freepoint on the morning of September 30th, and sunk in three feet of water, the low stage of the river saving much damage. Its passengers and mail were transferred to other steamboats, causing an annoying delay, but it was repaired in a few days and resumed its trips.

Highwaymen Active.

The ocean steamer "Sacramento," built in the East for service between San Francisco and Panama, arrived at San Francisco on its initial voyage around Cape Horn on September 7th. It is described as being a palatial boat and a great improvement upon everything that had heretofore been in service on the steamer lines.

On September 14th the stage from Marysville to Sacramento upset near Lincoln and Mrs. Patter of Shasta had her arm broken.

The Grass Valley stage upset near that town on September 15th. There were seventeen passengers aboard, and all were injured. Bob Scott, the driver, hung to the lines and was dragged several hundred feet and seriously injured. James Spear and N. B. Donahey both suffered broken legs; Mrs. Dobson had a severe gash cut on her head; her little son had a knee-pan crushed, and Mrs. Miller had her head cut open.

Hodges, accused of being an accessory to the stage robbery near Placerville on June 30th, was tried at Placerville and convicted. He was sentenced to twenty years in the State prison.

Judge Brockway sentenced Tom Poole, one of the stage robbers who was convicted of murder, to be hung on October 28th.

Highway robberies continued to be reported from all the mountain counties in unusual numbers. September 1st, Ira Ladd and another teamster were robbed by two Mexicans who came along the road on horseback near Knights Ferry. They obtained $400 from the two teamsters and departed. Ladd, obtaining a revolver; unhitched a wheel horse and started after the robbers and, overhauling them, a pistol duel on horseback took place. Ladd wounded one of the robbers, but he managed to keep in his saddle and after a pursuit of six miles Ladd's horse became winded, so he had to give up the chase. The next day the Mexican was found dead in a clump of bushes near the road and his horse tied to a tree. His companion had departed with the money and left him to his fate. The horse was found to be one stolen from a Chinese peddler the day before.

Three highwaymen stopped the Coulterville stage near Don Pedro's Bar on September 6th, at the early hour of 3 a.m. There were four passengers in the stage, and they were compelled to get out, have their arms tied behind their backs, and then stand in line while the robbers broke open the express box. They secured $600 from it and then, without robbing the passengers, departed.

A teamster named James Glenn, on Chalk Hill, on the Washoe road, was stopped by two highwaymen on September 10th and robbed of $310.

On September 23rd, Sol. Crown, deputy tax collector of Nevada County, while en route from Allison Ranch to Grass Valley, met two highwaymen on the road, was relieved of $80, and given a severe blow upon the head to make him stand still.

Ranchers and Mexicans Clash.

Three highwaymen stopped a teamster named Van Kellogg on the Weaverville road on September 10th and robbed him of a purse containing $50. He had two purses in his pocket, each containing about the same amount, and the robbers, being satisfied with the one he handed over, did not search for any more, so he considered himself lucky after all.

Four Mexicans, on September 11th, robbed some Chinese mining camps on the Calaveras River, obtaining $60 in money and about $100 worth of boots, blankets and other things, and escaped into Amador County with their booty.

Henry Ames, a German, mining near Downieville, on September 11th was held up and robbed of $650 while going from his claim to the town.

Near Georgetown, on September 11th, P. G. Ryan, a merchant of Georgia Slide, was stopped by two highwaymen and upon Ryan refusing to give up his money, they beat him over the head with the butt of a revolver. They found $50 in his pocket, but overlooked $800 more he had concealed on his person, and they left him seriously hurt from their assault.

At Snelling, on September 19th, a posse of ranchers shot and wounded one and captured another Mexican charged with horse stealing. They hung the captured Mexican to a tree. This act incensed a number of other Mexicans, who decided to avenge the death of their countryman and, fully armed, they started after the ranchers. They found them at a camp meeting, and a fight ensued in which one of the ranchers was killed and two were wounded. The Sheriff and his deputies were reported as having the leaders on both sides in custody, but future hostilities were expected.

There was an unfortunate occurrence at Grass Valley on September 8th. A little boy named Edward Horan, six years old, annoyed a teamster named Frank Hodges, by climbing up and hanging on to the tailboard of his wagon while he was driving down Main street. He struck at the little boy with the butt end of a blacksnake whip, and unfortunately hit him on the temple. The boy fell to the street and was picked up unconscious, dying two days afterward from a fractured skull. It was claimed he was injured by the fall, but Hodges was arrested and charged with manslaughter.

Charles Mortimer, who became one of the most noted criminals in this State, induced the San Francisco officers to send him with an officer to Santa Clara where he would disclose the place he had cached some stolen valuables. An officer named Rose was sent with him, and when a short distance from Santa Clara, Mortimer diverted the officer's attention, picked up a large rock, and knocked him insensible with a blow on the head. He then took officer Rose's knife, pistol and money, stabbed him in the neck and left him for dead, making his escape. Rose, badly injured, was taken back to San Francisco and officers gave chase to Mortimer. He was caught sight of near Spanishtown, but succeeded in escaping capture by shooting and wounding two of his pursuers.

Some Rich Finds.

Findley, Young & Co. of Grass Valley struck a ledge of gold-bearing quartz eighteen inches wide and were sinking a shaft. It was now fifty-five feet deep and their mine was named the Idaho.

The Tiger claim, near Sonora, paid nine pounds of gold in a twelve days' run, and Shine, Griffin & Co., in the same gulch, took out six pounds, worth over $1200, in one week.

Two miners named Sharp and Smith, being out of employment and short of funds, took up and began developing a quartz ledge on Little Deer Creek, near Canada Hill, in Nevada County, in July. During this month they had about two hundred tons of rock crushed which they had dug from the ledge, and they obtained $18,000 from the crushing.

J. C. Syme of Campo Seco made a rich strike in finding a buried channel of auriferous gravel in Ragtown Hill, adjacent to that camp.

Goodyear's Bar was burned on September 4th. It was a town of some importance then. Twenty-five buildings were reduced to ashes, with a $50,000 loss.

Colusa came in on the 13th with the burning of its Chinatown, consisting of twenty buildings. The loss was $15,000.

On September 27th a big fire at Stockton destroyed sixteen buildings on Center street and caused a $25,000 loss.

Pearson's "Mirror of the War," with a diorama of the battle between the "Kearsarge" and the "Alabama," followed by a gift distribution of jewelry, etc., was entertaining the people.

Mrs. Emily Jordan, with an excellent troupe of stock actors, started on a tour of the interior playing "Aurora Floyd," "Leah, the Forsaken," and other dramas, without financial success, so, having the shape, she began starring in "Mazeppa" and drawing crowded houses.

A miner from San Andreas visited the Metropolitan theater in San Francisco with a friend. It was the first time in his life he had ever been in a city theater. Looking at the private boxes on each side of the stage he nudged his friend with his elbow and remarked: "Geel! Those are gay old bedrooms the actresses have, ain't they?"

The Democratic party held a State convention in San Francisco on September 7th. About four hundred delegates were in attendance and the nominees of the Chicago convention, McClellan and Pendleton for President and Vice-president, respectively, were indorsed.

A vigorous campaign was arranged for and political meetings were very numerous by the end of the month all over the State.

Indians Visit Pioneer.

The Democrats organized their political clubs into Broom Rangers and armed with brooms the members went through military evolutions, burlesquing the Home Guards, of which almost every town had one or more companies. It is doubtful if this move made any votes, as the people who believed in preserving the Union were in dead earnest and could not be ridiculed out of their sentiments.

The war news was of a very enthusiastic character to the Union cause. General Sherman captured Atlanta on September 2nd and General Sheridan had a series of victories in the Shenandoah Valley that caused numerous jollifications and salutations during the month.

There was a great Union meeting at Placerville on September 24th, when Henry Edgerton was the principal speaker, and Grand Marshal Hume of the torchlight procession took the head of the parade over the line of march and reached the end before the last delegation had begun to march. There were over 1400 torches in line, and delegations so numerous from all the El Dorado County towns, the town of Placerville was not large enough to accommodate them.

The Yachicumnes, a tribe of Indians that occupied the tule lands between the Mokelumne River and Mt. Diablo, paid a visit to Captain C. M. Weber at Stockton during this month.

In 1846 they were very numerous and made a treaty with the Captain and were to receive yearly a distribution of presents from him. Smallpox and the vices introduced by the white men had destroyed them, so that only about ten families now remained. They came in their aboriginal canoes made of tules lashed together with small, pliable willow limbs. The canoes were very light and buoyant. They also had a large supply of bone-headed spears with which they caught their supply of fish.

In direct contrast to their peaceful mission, came the details of Indians being on the warpath in Shasta County. Mrs. Wm. Allen and three children, living eight miles from Millville, in Shasta County, were killed. She was shot and her children clubbed to death. A man named Van Berry had three arrows shot into his body and was seriously wounded on September 8th.

Then a man named "Arkansas" Jones, living about five miles from Copper City, received a visit.

MONUMENT FOR NOTED PIONEER

The following was recently sent to Lassen Parlor, No. 99, N.S.G.W., at Susanville, by A. M. Fairfield, who has been engaged in writing the history of Lassen County, and has collected a mass of interesting data.

The letter was written to interest the Parlor in the erection of a monument to Isaac N. Roop, a noted pioneer of that section.

The Parlor, together with the Masonic lodge at Susanville, has raised the necessary funds, the monument is nearing completion, and its dedication will be made the feature of a fitting celebration.—Editor.

R PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN of Lassen Parlor, No. 99, N.S.G.W.: A movement is on foot to do tardy justice to the memory of Governor Isaac N. Roop by erecting a monument over his grave. A few years ago the Masons of Susanville raised a small fund for this purpose, but the matter was carried no further. It will now be taken up by them again and, it is hoped, carried to completion.

All over the State the Native Sons are preserving old buildings, and other relics of pioneer days. In this county, there is very little left of the pioneer days, excepting the log cabin built in Susanville by Governor Roop, so there is no work of that kind to be done here; and for that reason, it was thought that the Native Sons would help in the work of honoring the pioneer of this county.

Governor Roop was, in almost every respect, the pioneer of this valley and county. He was the first man to claim land here, and it was the land on which he afterwards laid out the town of Susanville. He built the first cabin, dug the first ditch, raised the first vegetables, and kept the first store in the county. He also built the first sawmill.

When a few men here in this valley organized a territory almost as large as the state of Nevada, and elected two officers to run it, he was elected to the more important office of the two. Afterwards the people of this valley joined those living further south in an attempt to get the United States Government to create the new territory of Nevada.

Failing in this, they organized a provisional territorial government and Mr. Roop was elected Governor, and served in this capacity until the territory of Nevada was created. He then represented this valley in the upper house of the Legislature of that territory. That Legislature named this section Roop County, and that name should have been kept when this section was found to be a part of California.

From the time he came into this valley in 1853, to at least until Lassen County was created in 1864—and, perhaps, until his death,—Governor Roop was the most prominent man in this part of the country and was so considered. He spared no pains in furthering the interests of this county. For many years he gave a lot in Susanville to anyone who would build on it; gave the public the land where the cemetery is; gave the M. E. Church land on which to erect a house of worship, and some say he gave the land where the grammar schoolhouse now stands.

When this county was organized and had very little money to buy anything, Governor Roop gave it the Court House square. He was the first postmaster in the county, and held the office until his death. He was twice elected District Attorney of this county.

Governor Roop was a man of generous disposition, and many a poor emigrant, passing through this valley, had good reasons for remembering his kindness. It is said that the first officers of this county collected taxes from emigrants passing through Susanville, and he used his influence to stop it, saying that poor men, coming into the country, should be helped instead of being robbed.

Scant justice has been done to Governor Roop's memory. Even the county he helped create and braced up was named in honor of a man who did not come into it to live until almost two years after Governor Roop, and who did comparatively little for the county. A street in Susanville and a post-office in the wilds of Northwestern Nevada are all that bear his name.

The intention is to erect a simple, substantial monument—nothing elaborate or costly—something that will, in a fitting manner, mark the grave of a deserving pioneer. If Lassen Parlor sees fit to contribute even a small sum toward the erection of this monument, it will be thankfully received.

STATE FAIR AT SACRAMENTO

REPARATIONS ARE WELL UNDER way for the California State Fair, which is to be held this year at Sacramento from Saturday, September 12th, until midnight of the following Saturday, September 19th. Judging from the number of applications for exhibit space received so far, this year's fair will be the largest ever held under the auspices of the State.

Besides the agricultural, livestock and industrial exhibits, the directors have arranged a program for the entire week, of spectacular and novel entertainment features. Many counties, private industrial firms and individuals are arranging for exhibit space.

Particular interest is being shown by farmers and breeders of livestock, as $40,000 in premiums will be awarded. The list of prizes total several thousand dollars more than in previous years, and offers quite an innovation in the schedule presented. Several new departments have been arranged, and radical changes made in others.

One of the most important changes has been the advancing of the educational department, where samples of school and college work, both in the classroom and on practical lines, are to be shown. In this department has been included the judging for the young men and boys for whom prizes are offered consisting mainly of scholarships to the University of California Farm School, at Davis, Yolo County. These contests will show the practicable ability of the competitors to judge horses, cattle, swine and sheep, dairy products and poultry. A second prize is given to boys of the California High School Agricultural Clubs raising the best pigs this year. There are approximately fifty of these boys' clubs throughout the State, and the competition will undoubtedly bring excellent results.

The livestock schedule has been revised and brought up to date, complying with the policy to be followed by the Panama-Pacific Exposition next year, and now used in the national livestock shows. There has been a re-adjustment in the poultry list. Larger and better premiums are offered, and the conditions have been changed to meet the best practices of the largest poultry shows in the United States.

Many of California's fastest horses are in training for the races to be held in conjunction with the Fair. These horses raced at Salinas, and went direct to Sacramento to train, on account of the excellent condition of the track at the fair grounds. The track is unusually fast this year, and horsemen generally are looking forward to a number of new records being established.

The special program for fair week, which includes both afternoons and evenings, ranges, in nature of entertainment, from a head-on collision of locomotives traveling at full speed, to spectacular fireworks, wild west features and a brass band contest for $3,000 in prizes. There will be a horse show, with many saddle horse events, automobile exhibits by manufacturers and agents, and many other forms of entertainment.

Although the horse show has been a marked success since it was inaugurated in 1912, it promises to be far more of a society event this year than it has been during the last two seasons. Judging from the number of entries by society women throughout the State, there is a decided revival of interest in horses, and riding is becoming extremely popular among those fond of out-of-door sports.

The program contains, besides the saddle horse performances, interesting coach horse features. There will be fancy driving, novelty races and hurdling, and different forms of entertainment will be provided every night for the entire week.

A special feature will be the annual futurity of three-year-olds of the Pacific Coast Gaited Saddle Horse Association, which held its first futurity at the horse show last year, and proved to be one of the most elaborate saddle horse features ever staged in California. It will bring together the best five-gaited three-year-old saddle horses on the Coast.

ECHOES OF THE LONG AGO

(MARGUERITE BOVEE, Alleghany, California.)

WHISPERS OF THE WESTERN WIND

HE STOOD ALONE ON THE wooden bridge, dreaming of life and its manifold fortunes. Once, in a vanished age, the blood of a dark race had tintured the crimson current of her white ancestors, tracing a creamy tint in the round cheek of the girl who stood watching the golden sunset.

High cliffs and rocky cliffs, dotted with giant trees, reared their massive walls toward the firmament. Beneath her ran a crystal stream, the waters foaming and leaping over the smooth stones. Wild honeysuckles, overhanging the curved banks, spread fragrance like incense on the summer wind. Great clusters of plummy ferns spread their graceful fronds in the shady fissures of the cliff, and over all this floated a veil of golden tissue never woven by any earthly loom. The radiance of day, softened by the curtain of night, faded slowly, and the still figure on the bridge gazed in fancy on a drama of the past.

An Indian village nestled beside the murmuring river, its gray wigwams crouching at the foot of the high peaks. She sees, in fancy, the thin blue smoke wreaths curling upwards. The dogs are asleep in the noonday sun, the women at work plaiting their willow baskets, or pounding acorns for flour and bread. The children, with sun-browned limbs and dusky faces, play on the banks Mishekenee had ever claimed the Indian princess as his future bride, though his proud bearing and handsome face had been the love-dream of the dusky maidens along the Yuba. He remained true to his boyish love, and many a lusty battle he fought in her behalf. All had promised well until one summer day a white man traveled past the Indian village, penetrating farther into the mountains. There he would build a cabin and dig for gold in the deep and hollow hills.

One day Owononie wandered far with her companions in search of wild birds' nests and berries. By chance, they stumbled upon the white man's cabin nestled in a ravine. The tiny stove, the dishes, the various utensils of the cabin were novel sights to the primitive Indian girl. The fair skin and curling hair of the white man ensnared the heart of the forest maiden. Numerous were the visits to the little cabin, thereafter. Gifts of beads and gay ribbons and cloth soon won her allegiance from the unsuspecting Mishekenee.

Wahanee, the White Beaver, was the name conferred upon the white brother by the Indians. The name was derived from his occupation of digging in the streams and banks of the river, for mining was new to the red man.

When Mishekenee returned in autumn, laden with furs, dried meats and wild honey for the winter provender, his heart sank. Fierce jealousy crept into his breast. The Moaning Dove had gone to the lodge of the white brother. Wahanee had won the little We-o-none. She thought of all these things as she gazed into the depths of the Yuba, rippling beneath her. A dry twig crackled near her. Turning, she looked into the gleaming eyes of Mishekenee. He stood beside her, with his arms folded and a wicked smile upon his lips.

"Owononie has wandered far from the wigwam of her white lover," he said. "Has the Moaning Dove so soon forgotten the young brave who fashioned for her the birch canoe, who climbed the tallest tree to rob the yellow-hammer's nest, whose arrow sped swiftly to the heart of the eagle soaring in the blue sky, whose youth was like a long summer day, when he could bring a smile to the lips of Owononie?"

"Once the Indian maiden turned her face to the bosom of Mishekenee, but the white skin of the stranger won her love. The King of Eagles is left alone, and Owononie sleeps in the lodge of the pale-face. The child of the pale-face now murmurs in the home of Moaning Dove, but she can never hear its voice again. Mishekenee must be revenged, and the life of Owononie must pay the price of her inconsistency."

He drew nearer the frightened girl, his eyes glittering with the light of awful vengeance. Like a startled deer, she fled down the steep declivity and around the slippery crags overhanging the stream below. Relentlessly her pursuer followed, leaping from rock to rock, like a panther as it springs upon its prey.

Soon she stumbled in her mad flight, and he sprang upon her. Crushing her in his pitiless embrace, he dragged her to the edge of the cliff. Then, lifting her high in his powerful arms, he flung her into the current below. The waters of the Yuba received, within their depths, the broken form of the gentle Owononie.

Winding roads and little villages now rest on the banks of the Yuba. The rugged cliffs stand unchanged, and soft winds chant mournfully the legend of Owononie. The dreamer on the wooden bridge listens to its whispers, and her heart thrills. The dark eyes flash with the same light that shone in the dusky orbs of the Indian girl, in the golden days of long ago. The spirit of Owononie whispers a tale of love and sorrow to the last descendant of her race, the great-granddaughter of We-o-none.

THE GRIZZLY BEAR.

On the poppled hills in the golden light
He guards the Golden Gate so bright,
And he looks afar o'er a golden sea—
Faithful, loyal, old Grizzly!

He hath seen the Spaniard's prosperous day,
He saw it wane and pass away,
And he saw afar a bright day to be—Patient, brave, old Grizzly!

From his past he watched the great living streams
Sweep through this land of golden dreams,
And he held this land then for you and me—
California's Grizzly!

Oh, here's to the dear old Grizzly Bear
Who guards this land so bright and fair.
Let us pledge our true love and loyalty—
Evermore to Grizzly!

YORK BRIDGE, DOWNIEVILLE.

of the Yuba, or swing on the tendrils of the wild grape vine, a plant from which the river gained its name.

The braves are gone on a hunting expedition to the region of the lakes. There, trout and salmon flash in the silvery waters, and the great rocks bear pictured legends of doughty deeds performed with bow and arrow. There, a cunning hand has portrayed the battle of the tribes, the joy of the victors, the mournful retreat of the vanquished, and the valor of a young chief who had met and captured a buffalo bull. Legends innumerable are engraven with dextrous hand, easily translated by one skilled in the lore of the red brother.

Mishekenee, King of Eagles, went from his lodge on the banks of the Yuba to seek big game for the winter provender. He hoped to return when the leaves drifted from the oaks, and place within his wigwam the beautiful Owononie, Moaning Dove.

The form of Owononie was like the swaying corn-stalk, her eyes were pools of darkness. The inky locks hung in masses over her slender shoulders, bound and filleted by a beaded strip of soft buckskin dyed a vivid scarlet. Her dress was of crimson cloth, a sort of tunic edged with bands of fur, tanned to softest velvet by her own brown fingers. Owononie was the daughter of a chief, and the pride and beauty of her tribe.

from him the dusky sweetheart, and his wigwam was cold and lonely.

All the long winter Mishekenee sulked within his lodge, and bitter grew his hate for Wahanee. The White Beaver must give up the Indian girl. The heart of the King of Eagles was sad, and his hearth desolate. Thus he pleaded with Owononie, but she refused to listen. The White Beaver was kind, and soon a little child would murmur in the cabin home. Then, in truth, did the spirit of Mishekenee grow fierce and wild within him.

Spring came, and the little one slept on the bosom of Owononie. Flowers bloomed, and wild bees hummed above the blossoms. The mother sang to the music of the melting snows and rippling streams. The time came to travel again to the north. The braves were preparing their bows and arrows for the spring hunt.

Owononie set forth one afternoon to search for wild strawberries that grew on the sunny slopes of the high crags. Soon her baskets were filled, and she stood musing on the top of the cliff. She could look far over the ridges, and down into the crystal stream below. Life was full of promise. Wahanee had found gold in plenty, and would some day take his bride far from the sullen face and wicked glances of Mishekenee.

Fear dwelt within her heart when the Indian lover glowered his hate at the White Beaver and

LASSEN, ANOTHER CALIFORNIA WONDER

(By MAY C. LASSEN, San Francisco.)

NE OF THE MOST WONDERFUL things that has happened on the North American Continent recently, is the eruption of Mt. Lassen, in California, a volcano which has been extinct for over a hundred years.

According to the great geologist, Whitney, after whom Mt. Whitney was named, Mt. Lassen was the mountain that was responsible, by its tremendous and violent outburst two thousand years ago, for the present formation of California, and which changed the course of the Sacramento River, separated the peninsula from the mainland, and plowed up the Golden Gate. This violent eruption and earthquake is supposed to have been of such a tremendous and active character as to have literally shaken everything from Klamath Falls, Oregon, down to the San Bernardino Mountains of Southern California.

Mt. Lassen was one of a group of four peaks, but is at present the commanding one of the four. Evidence shows that one of the peaks has towered at least 2,000 feet above Mt. Lassen, and that the entire top of the mountain had been blown off in some former volcanic outburst. Some day, Mt. Lassen may yet do the same.

There is a cave in Mt. Lassen which was at one time inhabited, but no one dare enter it on account of the volcano. Mt. Lassen is situated on the edge of Shasta County, with Lassen, Plumas and Tehama Counties all around it. Since the first eruption, which took place May 30th, Mt. Lassen has had twenty-four eruptions in all. Following is the correct record of the first ten:

First, May 30th, 5 a.m.; second, June 1st, 8 a.m.; third, June 8th, 5:30 p.m.; fourth, June 9th, 11 a.m.; fifth, June 12th, 10:45 a.m.; sixth, June 13th, 6 a.m. and 3:45 p.m.; seventh, June 14th, 10 a.m. and 6:45 p.m. (man injured on June 14th); eighth, June 22nd, 7:30 p.m.; ninth, June 30th, 11 a.m.; tenth, July 1st, 5:30 a.m.

The crater was greatly enlarged, and the ashes around the same were six inches in depth; these spoken of as the most recent volcano in the United States, until Mt. Lassen attained the distinction on May 30th, when its eruption first took place. There are hot springs and sulphur springs, beautiful lakes, wonderful timber lands, wild flowers in profusion, hunting, fishing and camping in the vicinity.

Mt. Lassen was known for sixty years as Lassen Peak, but most every one now calls it Mt. Lassen. It took its name from a peculiar experience of Peter Lassen, a hardy Dane and a pioneer of the early fifties, who owned in those days a valuable rancho on Deer Creek, well stocked, principally with horses.

Being of a roving disposition and loving the wild frontier, he left it to the care of others. He was never happier than when alone, with his two pack horses, in an unexplored wilderness. On one occasion he was caught in a violent snowstorm on Lassen Peak, or on one of the group of peaks near it. The snow came on so rapidly and fell so deeply that he could not get his horses out. Always full of expedients, he built shelter for himself and horses out of fir boughs. The only feed that he had for his horses was the long pea-green moss hanging from the trees in that region. He was kept there for weeks, so the name of Lassen Peak was well earned by him.

Peter Lassen not only owned part of what is now the Stanford vineyard, one of the largest vineries in the world, at Vina, but also a mine in the vicinity of Mt. Lassen. Once a year he would make a trip to this mine, now lost to heredity, for which $20,000 has recently been offered to any person or persons who can locate it, and it was while on one of these excursions that he was killed by white explorers and not by the Indians, as many historians have repeatedly recorded. It is a well-known fact by those who were intimately acquainted with Peter Lassen that he was on the most friendly terms with the Indians, and it was an aged Pit River Indian who told Lassen that Mt. Lassen was an active peak.

A monument has been erected in memory of Peter Lassen at Susanville, Lassen County. Peter Lassen sleeps beneath a monster sugar pine tree six miles from Susanville. Lassen was a Mason and an Odd Fellow, strong and hardy, and beloved by all who knew him. As Mt. Lassen is to become a park, California will soon boast of having another national park. Provision has been made for roads and leases for hotel purposes.

While he was working a short distance from his home they killed his wife and ransacked the house. He heard the shot but did not become alarmed as he thought some neighbor had fired it and did not discover their diabolical work until some time after the tribe had departed.

Drought Causes Disasters.

Large posses of men started from Millville and Copper City to chastise the renegades. They were found to be part of a Tehama County tribe that had a rancharia on Antelope Creek. They killed a young man named John Hessig, September 13th, on Trinity River, and frightfully mutilated his body. The hand was overtaken by one of the posses and thirteen of the Indians killed.

It was claimed, though, that the posses were killing many friendly Indians who had committed no depredations, but apparently all Indians looked alike to those out for revenge, and there was troublous times for both the reds and whites during the month in that vicinity.

Reliable advices from Santa Barbara County gave information of great distress and suffering among the residents of that section. The long-continued drought had destroyed all vegetation, and their livestock had nearly all died. Bishop Amati wrote to San Francisco, asking for help to relieve the destitute, and the appeal received a prompt response. A relief committee was quickly organized and on September 30th a large supply of food and clothing was sent down on the steamer "Senator." A relief fund was started, and before the end of the month was mounting into the thousands.

Jerome Rice, a prominent real estate man in San Francisco, with his secretary, named Gardiner, driving with a team to Warm Springs, Alameda County, lost their way on the evening of September 8th and drove off a high bank into Vallejo Creek. Rice had his skull fractured, Gardiner had his leg broken and other injuries, and one of the horses was killed by the fall. They lay in the bed of the creek four days and nights before found, although within a mile of some residences. Rice died from his injuries, deeply mourned by his many friends in San Francisco.

Judge Joseph G. Baldwin, lawyer, author and wit, formerly a Justice of the Supreme Court and one of the most prominent members of the San Francisco bar, died on September 27th. He was 49 years of age. An operation for relief from a varicose vein brought on an attack of lockjaw and caused his death.

A. M. Heslep, the attorney who was shot by Captain C. M. Weber at Stockton in July, 1863, over a legal dispute, sued the captain for $50,000 damages and a San Francisco jury awarded him a verdict of $30,000 on September 1st.

Have Hard Time Marrying.

James Jackson, a colored chirpologist in San Francisco, created a merriment sensation by suing a white man named Cline for $10 for his services as a corn doctor. The doctor made an exhibit of corns he had removed from Cline's foot, and seemed to have a good case until Cline exhibited his foot and showed that either a new crop that needed shelling had grown or the old ones still had a foothold. The case was dismissed.

Benjamin Jones, a young man living on the Cosumnes River, desired to marry Mary Short. Jones was a Republican, while old man Short was a Democrat, and would not consent to have a Republican in his family. Jones obtained a license to marry Mary in San Joaquin County, and after arranging with his friends for the wedding, started off to bring his bride.

Soon after their departure Short got wind of what was going to be done, and with the aid of some of his neighbors, gave chase. They overtook Jones, shot him in the arm, unhitched his horses, and departed with Mary, leaving him bruised and alone with his vehicle in the road.

Jones, on September 22nd, applied in Sacramento for a writ of habeas corpus, claiming Mary was deprived of her liberty and, with an under sheriff, went away to serve the writ. As there was no wedding announcement in the papers during the month and no return of the officer, the outcome of the affair cannot be recorded.

Another matrimonial difficulty, though with a happier ending, was reported from Sutter County. A young woman not over sixteen appeared at the county clerk's office in Yuba City with her husband-to-be, asking for a marriage license. On answering truthfully the inquiry as to her age made by the clerk, the license was refused.

The next day the young miss prevailed upon her sister, who was twenty, to go to the county clerk of Yuba County, in Marysville, with her future husband, and apply for a license. It was asked for by the groom, in the name of the young lady at home, and when the clerk asked the sister her age he received a satisfactory reply so the license was issued and the wedding took place.

Early and Wet Winter Predicted.

A cavalry company numbering ninety men, commanded by Captain A. M. De La Guerra, left Santa Barbara for San Pedro on September 7th. Their leavetaking was a big event in Santa Barbara, where the company was recruited and the members all had friends and relatives.

A large number of cows died in Napa Valley, and an epidemic was believed to have appeared there. A veterinary decided it was due to the cattle eating the dry feed on the hills and, owing to the drought, having no water convenient to drink, the feed caked and hardened in the stomach, afterwards causing a fatal inflammation.

A rattlesnake in captivity at Nevada City, on September 8th, was noticed to have the skin burst across his head and soon began to distend his jaws with hideous gasps and go into violent contortions with his body. With each severe movement the skin peeled off backward from his head, and it was seen he was shedding his skin. The operation consumed an hour and a half, and was witnessed by a large crowd of people.

Two dead whales drifted ashore upon the beach below the Cliff House, San Francisco, during the month and became objects of curiosity to thousands of people who journeyed from the city to see them before they were cut up and boiled for their oil.

A fisherman reported that on September 5th there was an immense gathering of swallows on the banks of the San Joaquin River, several miles below Stockton. The flocks kept up a continual darting about and chattering until early in the afternoon, when, in an enormous flock, they took wing to the southward and departed for the southern summer. The first flock of wild geese was reported as being seen arriving from the north on the same date, and weather prophets began to predict an early and a wet winter coming to the State.

afterwards, from the snow, turned into a musty mud. Red Bluff, a town of about five thousand inhabitants, is the shortest and most direct route to the mountain, and will be put on the map as one of the sights of the road of a thousand wonders.

The volcano will doubtless prove of great interest to all tourists, and especially those contemplating a visit to the expositions of 1915, and will do marvels toward opening up that beautiful part of California, hitherto unknown and rarely traversed. Here will be seen the wonders of wonderful nature undreamed of,—the devil's kitchen, where the water is constantly at a boiling point, and where eggs can be cooked at short notice; where the earth is so hot that a pot of beans, put down into it, comes out thoroughly baked in a few hours.

Cinder Cone is also one of the wonders. This is several miles from Mt. Lassen, and has been

CALIFORNIA'S FIRST HOTEL IS NO MORE

(By ANNA GEIL ANDRESEN, Past President Aleli Parlor, N.D.G.W., Salinas.)

CALIFORNIA'S FIRST HOTEL IS gone, the immediate victim of the wrecker. Nothing is left of it now, not even a vestige. Its bare site, on the southwest corner of Washington and Pearl streets, in the city of Monterey, looks up to the sun for the first time in eighty-two years.

Monterey, at one time, was proud of the possession of the Washington hotel. It was an imposing and intimate figure in the city's daily life; it was the Del Monte of "Old Monterey." In its prime and vigor, it was the center of the life of the capital of California.

But time conspired its ruin. The commercial activity of the city drifted away from it, and finally it stood a solitary sentinel. Neglect soon robbed it of its former stately appearance, and it was left alone, with memory its sole asset. Condemnation resulted, the wrecker soon came, and then—the end.

It was built in 1832, and for a few years was the private residence of Don Eugenio Montenegro, who married one of the well-known Soberanes family,—after which it was used as a hotel. Following the American conquest, additions were made from time to time to the original structure to accommodate the increasing demands brought about by the new era.

In 1849 it was owned by Don Alberto Tresconi, a worker in tin who arrived in California in 1841. Mr. Tresconi was of Italian birth and parentage, but had left his native land in his young manhood to come to America, and had settled in Memphis, Tennessee. From there he went to Mexico, and, in 1841, came to California on horseback, establishing himself at Monterey. He later acquired a large fortune through judicious investments in lands, and is now remembered as one of the most capable pioneers of Monterey County.

During the "First Constitutional Convention" held in the State of California (the convention that time. He also wrote a few ballads and poems on California, but he is better known and lovingly remembered as the author of the following lines from his "Crimean War Song":

"They lay along the battery's side,
Below the smoking cannon:
Brave hearts from Severn and from Clyde,
And from the banks of Shannon.

"They sang of love and not of fame;
Forgot was Britain's glory:
Each heart recalled a different name,
But all sang 'Annie Laurie'."

For many years the Washington hotel remained the city's chief hostelry, and was the scene of many fashionable gatherings. Notable among the features of its social life were the "cascarone" balls that brought back again the spirit and color of a departed era.

In the early seventies, the county seat of Monterey County, which had formerly been at the city of Monterey, was, by a popular vote, transferred to Salinas. This event cast a shadow over the old peninsula, and withdrew the official life of the county government to the neighboring town.

There was no recovery from this loss, and at the time of the coming of the queenly Del Monte, the old Washington hotel had passed the stage of competition. Its career was practically ended at that time, and it rapidly took on evidences of decay, and degenerated into an ill-kept tenement—a shelter for a few descendants of the California Indians.

From that time on, to the fatal appearance of the wrecker, its course was consistently downward. Yet it went the way of all material efforts of man, with the satisfying distinction that it was fortunate in its association with a historical event that will make its name permanent in the history of our Golden State.

MINSTREL SHOW BRINGS OUT NEW STATE SONG

Palo Alto—July 20th and 21st, Palo Alto Parlor, No. 216, N.S.G.W., gave a minstrel show, under the direction of George T. Wilson, which proved not only an exceptionally good entertainment but a financial success. The purpose of the show was to raise funds for a suitable float to represent Palo Alto Parlor at the observance of Admission Day in San Francisco next year, during the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and $260 was added thereto by the minstrels.

In writing of the show to The Grizzly Bear, Geo. W. Tinney, president of the Parlor, says: "I feel that scarcely enough can be said of the business-like and gentlemanly way in which Mr. Wilson, who furnished the scenery and costumes, and wrote the words and music of several of the best songs, handled the entertainment for us.

"We think his new song, 'Beautiful California,' the best state song we have heard, and that the members of the Order over the entire State may know how it breathes the spirit of the Golden West. I am sending to you, with his permission, the words. They have not as yet been published, and The Grizzly Bear will be the first periodical to publish them."

A TOAST TO THE GOLDEN WEST: "BEAUTIFUL CALIFORNIA."

(Words and Music by Geo. T. Wilson.)

You may speak of the land where magnolia blooms,
Of Dixie in song and in rhyme;
You may talk of bright days in Italian haze,
And the vineyards of Spain's sunny clime;
You may dream of bright eyes 'neath the Orient skies,
Where the lute and the mandolin chime,
But here is my toast: California coast;
Land of poppies and roses and wine!

Dear land that good Father Serra kissed
And blessed with a heart-felt prayer;
Land of the free by the sunset sea,
With its Golden Gate ajar,
From Shasta's pine to Ramona's shrine,
Her flocks graze a thousand hills,
A bounteous yield bless plain and field,
Fed by rivers, lakes and rills.

From the Colorado to the Klamath's flow,
Sierra Nevadas between,
From Yosemite to Francisco Bay,
Lying fair in the sunlight's sheen,
From the fields of green by the San Joaquin
To the San Fernando's wold;
In fruit of the vine, plant and tree and mine,
Her wealth cannot be told.

So, here is my love to thee, Golden West,
And thy sons who are brave and true;
May thy destiny bring the world to thee
To honor the Red, White and Blue;
May thy guiding star in peace or war
Shine clear thro' the stripes that gleam,
To lead thee through from the deeds ye do
To the greater deeds ye dream.

CHORUS.

Then, here's to the State of the Golden West: Old California, grandest, best!
Here's to the oil that she bolder in store; here's to her gold and her silver ore;
Here's to her redwood, and orange groves; here's to her hills where the grizzly roves;
Here's to her Daughters and Sons so true! Beautiful California!

ENCOURAGING STATE HISTORY STUDY.

As an encouragement to the study of California history, and more particularly the history of the early mission period, the alumni council of the Newman Club—the association of Catholic students of the University of California, with headquarters at Newmann Hall, Berkeley,—is offering to students of the University and graduates since 1909, the prize of $100 for the best essay on the influence of the Spanish missions on present-day life in California.

The essay is to be submitted to a committee appointed by the president of the University of California, consisting of Professor Martin C. Flaherty, Professor H. Morse Stephens and a third member to be selected by them.

gave us the constitution of 1849), the hotel was leased by Mr. Tresconi for $1,200 a month to a former private in the regiment of Col. Stevenson. At that time the Washington hotel entertained and sheltered the delegates.

It was here that our first organic law, in its making, was discussed over rich and rare vintages, to be finally put into shape at Colton Hall. It was a place to be sought by the bon-ton alone, for its rates then were two hundred dollars a month for rooms without board.

Bayard Taylor, the poet, who visited Monterey during the convention, was able to obtain a special rate of twelve dollars a week for his board. Rooms were at a premium, and the poet accepted the hospitality of Major Smith, then paymaster for the stations of Monterey and San Diego, who had his lodgings in the old Spanish "Cuartel."

Bayard Taylor had walked from San Francisco to Monterey, much the same as he had tramped Europe before, and while at the old capital wrote a truthful and pleasing sketch of the Californians of that day, and the customs and manners of that

VALLEJO ARRANGES ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM FOR THREE-DAY CELEBRATION

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.)

AFTER HAVING MADE THE MOST elaborate preparations that have ever been made by any city in the State of California for the entertainment and care of the State's Native Sons and Daughters, Vallejo is ready to receive her guests for the Admission Day celebration.

Vallejo's preparations have, in no sense of the word, been spasmodic. Ever since the first of last November these arrangements have been under way. Up until the time of the meeting of the N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor in Los Angeles last April, these plans were tentative ones only, but since then they have been taking concrete form rapidly. Today, Vallejo is ready to again make good her reputation for hospitality, and to set an example of co-operation which exemplifies the highest efficiency of committee work.

One Big Celebration.

While the chief events of the celebration will occur on September Ninth, California's natal day, Vallejo has taken advantage of the fact that the observance of Labor Day occurs on September 7th and combined the two holidays and the intervening date into one big celebration of Admission Day.

It is the opinion of those who have had the affair in charge, that not one feature which will contribute in any sense to the success of the festival has been overlooked. One thing is certain, and that, as the committee in charge explains, is the fact that every resource which will add to the merriment of the occasion has been exhausted. And the aim, from the very beginning of the committee's plans, has been to seek out not only all of the best carnival features which have made other Admission Day celebrations successful, but to seek out as many new, unique and original features as possible.

Hospitality the Keynote.

The keynote to the entire celebration is hospitality. It is Vallejo's deep-rooted desire to play the part of a royal host and in regal style. If one feature of any kind is overlooked which would contribute in any way to the fun and the success of the event, it will not be because the local committee did not seek to find that feature. A number of events that have been arranged for are of the old, tried-and-true variety, such as always appeal to a festival crowd. A large portion of the features are to be decidedly original, and in many instances are possible only where the natural conditions are similar to those of Vallejo.

Every whim and fancy of every Native Son and Daughter of the Golden West, and of the tourists on pleasure bent, have been given consideration. The contractors who have the installation of the various features in charge, in each instance were given instructions to prepare something that has more than an ordinary "punch" to it.

Water Display at Night.

One of the principal features which the local committee has planned for is a parade of United States cruisers of the first, second and third classes in Vallejo Channel. And it is the further plan of the committee, in this connection, to have the cruiser "California" lead this naval parade.

With the battleships in the channel, Vallejo's Admission Day guests will have, as an added attraction at night, the signaling of the warships' electric searchlights, a night display that will surpass anything of a similar nature ever seen on San Francisco Bay, with the possible exception of similar events during fleet week in 1908.

Besides the display on the water, which will be furnished both day and night by the battleships, the local committee has arranged for water fireworks of a very elaborate order. The set pieces include a monster reproduction of the U.S.S. "California." The spectacle gives every promise of being one of the most beautiful that has ever been conceived.

The daylight stunts on the water will include motor boat and yacht races, swimming and diving events, and hydroplane stunts, under the auspices of the Vallejo Yachting and Rowing Club. Among the motor boats which have been entered for the racing events are three of the fastest crafts of the Sacramento Boat Club, including the "Seamp," the "Fawn," and "Rosie B." Besides the hydroplane stunts there will be other aeroplane flights by one of the most daring aviators on the Pacific Coast.

Admission Day Parade Big Feature.

If the most conservative predictions of the local

Parlor of Native Sons are correct,—and there is every reason to believe that they are,—the main feature of the celebration which always in the past has been the Admission Day parade, that event in Vallejo this year will probably surpass anything of its kind that has ever been held in the history of the State Order.

From the standpoint of numbers participating, there will be more people in the parade than in any similar parade that has preceded it. Furthermore, it is stated upon good authority that more Parlors will be represented than ever were represented in any preceding Admission Day parade.

Floats Will Be Most Interesting.

A number of very fine floats depicting features of California's history and historical events will take part in the parade. There will be a "California poppy" float, a float entitled "California" and another "Minerva," but the most interesting of all, according to the claims of the committee, will be the float entitled "Dreadnaught."

The latter was built by the United States Navy Yard employees here, and is modeled according to a scale after the cruiser U.S.S. "California." The most attractive feature of this float will be the crew of small children, dressed as bluejackets and marines, who will man the ship. Even the uniforms of the varying official ranks will be carried out in detail.

It is the intention of those in charge of this float to provide many interesting features during participation in the parade. One of these will be a stripping of the ship for action, and going through all the maneuvers which would take place at sea were the ship suddenly called upon to defend its country's honor and rights.

Can Care for All Visitors.

Ever since the local Parlor of the Native Sons Order decided to campaign for Vallejo as the city in which to celebrate Admission Day this year, the problem of how to properly care for and feed the thousands of visitors at first gave the Parlor considerable concern. Then came the "bright idea" and the following simple solution: During the entire period of the celebration there will be a continuous street barbecue conducted under an immense tent which will accommodate 500 persons at one sitting; co-incidental with this will be a score of canteens co-operating in catering to the needs of the inner man by specializing on home-cooked breakfasts, lunches and dinners. In addition to this, is a battery of hotels and restaurants. Through this arrangement every man, woman and child will be amply provided for during their entire stay in the city and without the usual serimmages attendant upon carnival gatherings.

Great Attractions for Final Night.

Admission Day in Vallejo, both figuratively and literally, will wind up in a blaze of glory. The downtown section of the city will be a whirlpool of revelry. While the city, during the entire celebration, will be magnificently illuminated at night, the display on the night of the last day of the festival will even surpass the two preceding evenings. There will be a parade of illuminated floats, the burning of several tons of green and red fire, and a parade of "horribles," which is to be as thrilling, greswome and frightful as it is possible to make it. In order to insure real nerve-curdling features in the "horribles," advertisements with that object in view have been placed in all the big dailies of the Bay region.

Costumers have been notified of the possibilities of the "horribles" features, and to spur interest, substantial prizes from $100 downward have been offered. Following this the city will resign itself to a carnival of revelry which will last the entire night, punctuated in the earlier part of the evening by water fireworks on the Vallejo Channel of a highly spectacular order.

Will Make Good.

Preparations for this year's Admission Day celebration were never before preceded by such systematic committee work. From the very inception of the work Vallejo's fifteen thousand citizens have been vitally concerned in the success of the affair. Financial contributions have been more than generous. The entire community thoroughly realizes that the reputation of the city is at stake now, more than it ever was before. And back of it all there is a real down-in-your-heart determination on the part of the entire citizenry to "make good."

A FAIR CALIFORNIENNE. (To Mabel.)

You're a dainty maiden Mabel,
With your wealth of sunny hair;
And your eyes brimfull of mischief,
So let the girls beware,
Lest you make a jest about them.
But your heart is true as gold,
And all your fun, and joy means naught,
Or merry laughter even.
Such bright souls are sent to earth
To make of it a Heaven.
There's not a girl in all the School
But loves you Mab, because
The love of truth shines in your eyes,
And seldom, if at all
A soul more pure is found on earth.
Blessings on your bead Queen Mab,
And may His glorious light,
Illumine all thy path through life,
And never set at night
But glowing like a heavenly Star,
Outshine the Suns of earth,
And set at last, as one of old,
Who was of heavenly birth.

NAMING THE REDWOOD TREE.

The giant redwood tree, which now grows only in California, is called the sequoia—and this is the reason why: In the very long ago there once lived a Cherokee Indian named Sequo Yab, who invented an Indian alphabet. He not only invented it, but he taught it to the other Cherokees by writing it out on leaves, and this peculiar form of literature was in general use in that tribe long before the white men knew of it. In 1828 the missionaries adopted it, and utilized it in a magazine which they published for the red men.

Sequo Yab was banished from Alabama with the other members of his tribe, and settled in New Mexico, where he died in 1843. In 1846, when Endlicber was preparing his synopsis of the cone-bearing trees, he heard of the Indian literary genius, Sequo Yab, and decided to dedicate to his memory the great redwood tree of California. Thus he called it sequoia.

A peculiarity about this tree is that in former years it was found all over the world, but now grows only in California.—Exchange.

ADAPTABILITY OF SOIL AND CLIMATE.

AMONG THE IMPORTANT MATTERS for an agriculturist to decide when farming in a new locality or cropping new or unfamiliar soil is, to what marketable crops the soil and climate is best adapted.

We are familiar with several localities in California, each suitable for special crops; among them the peat lands of Orange County, near Westminster, where celery is grown to perfection and shipped to profitable markets in carload lots. When areas are sufficiently large the chances for successful marketing are greatly increased; for instance, the Anaheim-Fullerton district of Southern California crops an area of 1200 acres each year to tomatoes for fall shipments East in carload lots.

The writer of this article was recently much pleased to meet I. N. Sparks, the originator of Sparks' earliana tomato; Mr. Sparks originated this variety of tomato while living at St. Joseph, Missouri. He marketed his famous tomato earlier and in greater abundance than his competitors did theirs. Seedsmen everywhere, almost invariably, quote Sparks' earliana tomato as the best early tomato. As with so many others, the time came when Mr. Sparks was attracted to our glorious State, especially on account of the climate, which he hoped would benefit his health.

Being descended from a line of gardeners, and himself an expert gardener, he was not in California long before he began to look up a suitable location for market gardening. The location finally selected is about four and a half miles east of Riverside postoffice, close to Box Springs road. Here, gentle slopes of good soil extend to the almost perpendicular contours of Box Springs Mountains, whose highest elevation is 3060 feet. Mr. Sparks' land has an elevation somewhere between 1700 and 1800 feet, while the business district in Riverside is about 900 feet.

Mr. Sparks' supply of water is limited, so he raises winter and early spring crops or vegetables without irrigation. The only exceptions are cucumbers and plants in beds, such as tomatoes, etc., which he sets out in permanent plats and also sells to others for planting. He specializes on his earliana tomato and green onions, but also crops good areas to green corn, squash, watermelons, etc. His young peach trees are remarkably thrifty and early fruiting, having the advantage of the sheltering and warming influence of Box Springs Mountains, to the east.

We now come to the point we wish to make: That Mr. Sparks, with his life experience, could not fully understand just what crops his soil and location were best adapted to until well into his third year's experience with this particular land. He now has his land all mapped out in his mind, and each plat grows rotating crops to which it is best adapted. The "know how," the "when," and the "where," are exemplified in results obtained by him.

Right here we wish to say that we have constantly contended that results can be obtained in many localities of California in raising crops that pay with little or no irrigation, but depending upon natural rainfall only. Up-to-date, scientific manipulation of the soil, including proper tillage and cultivating methods,—which conserve moisture,—does the trick. We refer to winter and spring crops in the vegetable line, especially. Mr. Sparks' work as a market gardener, and the results he has obtained, substantiate our statement.

Through experience and methods referred to, he has made himself independent in a few years' time, here in California. He has several months' leisure time each year, owing to his practice of winter and spring cropping only. Up to date, he has been making daily trips, marketing products, but will now almost suspend operations until the fall or winter rains set in. He uses twelve acres in his operations, but could not manage so large an area if he irrigated.

Mr. Sparks has the opportunity and the means for enjoying his leisure months, and with a congenial wife, comfortable home, and a good motor car, he has reason to be well satisfied. We are certainly glad to find the originator of Sparks' earliana tomato prospering. Luther Burbank, in giving to the world his Burbank potato, and Mr. Sparks, his earliana tomato, have certainly benefited the world at large more than many pretentious, self-lauding philanthropists.

TERMS THAT SHOULD BE UNDERSTOOD.

An understanding of the terms "seed-bed," "root bed," "surface," "subsurface," and "subsoil," is desirable. In accordance with modern scientific manipulation of the soil, it should, in most cases, be plowed seven inches in depth. The lower four and a half inches of this is made firm with a subsurface packer, and the remaining two and a half to three inches of upper soil is cultivated or harrowed and kept in a coarsely pulverized, loose condition. With this preliminary, we will proceed with the definitions:

The "seed bed" is just enough of the packed subsurface to imbue the seed, and from this point upwards to the surface of the soil. The "root bed" is the packed subsurface where the most soil is in condition to supply plant food. The upper or cultivated part serves as a mulch to preserve the moisture beneath, and affords but little plant food, as it is usually in too dry a state.

The "surface" is the upper two and a half or three inches of the tilled soil, or the part that is kept loose by harrowing or cultivation. The "subsurface" is the lower part of the tilled or plowed soil. The "subsoil" is the soil directly below the subsurface or below the seven (or other) inch depth of plowed soil.

The subsurface being packed, establishes capillary attraction between the subsoil, and through the packed part up to the cultivated, loose surface soil. This brings the moisture up to the point where most needed—to the seed and the plant roots. The cultivated surface or seed bed is now in ideal shape, having a good root bed to assist in supplying the plant food in solution, and is also in condition to receive all the benefits derived from sunlight, heat, air and moisture.

THE USELESS CAT.

In most instances, the cat is a mistake. All cats are not rat or mice catchers. Traps and poison should take the place of many cats. Cats have many diseases that the human family are subject to. They have diptheria and tuberculosis, and are suspected of having fleas whose bites cause infantile paralysis. Cats visit the neighbor where diptheria is prevalent, and bring back the disease to where they live.

The cat destroys many birds whose services in exterminating insect pests are invaluable. Insects cause a loss of many hundreds of millions annually in the United States. Birds eat the insects and cats eat the birds. Cats probably destroy 20,000,000 birds annually in the United States. Cats kill on an average of fifty birds each in a year. Birds consume on an average at least 100 insects each per day, and some birds consume up to 500 insects, and sometimes as many as 4,000 eggs and worms of injurious insects in addition.

Cats destroy more birds than all other agencies combined—owls, snakes, foxes, hawks, etc. It seems unreasonable to allow the cat to kill so many birds, and entomologists show that the above figures are very conservative. No matter how well a cat is fed, it will keep on killing birds. In this respect they are very much like the trespassing gunner—they kill just for the fun of the thing; not for the fun of the birds, but for the fun of themselves. After a consideration of the above, can anyone offer any excuse for the existence of so many cats. Don't all speak at once.

POULTRY HINTS FOR SEPTEMBER.

Pullets are worthy of one's best attention. Get the early ones into winter quarters. March pullets should be laying now.

Yard the cockerels by themselves.

Keep the hens happy and healthy. The contented hen fills the egg basket.

Prepare the hens now for fall and winter laying.

The cities are growing rapidly and the people appreciate the value of fresh eggs. Eggs are getting scarcer and higher.

Get the fall cleaning done and by the last of the month be ready to make a quick change if necessary.

Keep clean—disinfect.

Keep track of the different birds by banding and keeping a correct record.

Clean the incubator and brooder and put them away carefully for next year.

Begin to prepare the turkeys for market. They are nearly full grown now, so spread them out. Do not crowd them.

GOOD PLACE FOR FARM LABORERS.

California pays the highest wages for farm labor of any state in the Union, and her farm laborers work on an average of 9 hours and 42 minutes per day, according to a report which has just been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The monthly compensation is $35.10 with board, and $50.70 if the laborer boards himself. These figures relate to the year 1913. The average wage for farm labor in continental United States is $13.85 per month with board, and $19.97 without board. Eighty-five thousand laborers are employed on the California farms.

THE STATE'S DEVELOPMENT

(California Development Board Bulletin.)

When most desired and on the eve of its greatest opportunity, California finds that it has had a record year. Most of its crops have been abundant, with no widespread failures of any one crop. The State finances are in fine shape, and there are few pessimists to be found.

The grain harvest has given heavy yields, barley being a record crop. The yield of alfalfa hay has been very large, and feed on the ranges has been unusually good. We have more forage than we need.

Sugar beets are doing well and will make up somewhat for the menacing tariff handicap. The bean crop will probably be a record one.

In spite of some shortages, the aggregate tonnage of deciduous fruits, nuts and raisins will probably be as large as ever, and the aggregate values larger.

Canneries have been generally running to capacity; the pack of can goods (fruits and vegetables) will be as large, if not larger, than ever before.

Citrus men are having a good year. Of citrus fruit, 41,548 carloads were shipped East up to July 20th, against 16,388 at the same time last year. Of deciduous fruits, 3,940 carloads were shipped East up to July 20th, against 2,937 same time last year.

The prune crop of Santa Clara Valley is estimated at from 50,000,000 to 65,000,000 pounds dried. The walnut crop of the State is estimated at 10;

California's Leading Mill and Mine Supply Industry

Among the big institutions of the West today stands the Pacific Mill and Mine Supply Company. The growth and advancement which this company has enjoyed is to be attributed in a large degree to the fact that two of the officers of the company are among the pioneer belting men on the Pacific Coast. During the early days of mechanical and transmission development F. M. Steers and J. B. Coffey were wrestling with the problem of providing suitable leather belting to meet the increasing demands of power driven equipment.

J. B. COFFEY, VICE-PRESIDENT.

Mr. Steers has had a continuous experience of over 25 years, and Mr. Coffey one of more than 30 years in the belting business. As a consequence there are few men who know their own business more thoroughly than do these two officers of this company. It is this wide knowledge of belting and the supply business that has brought the Pacific Mill and Mine Supply to the fore in its particular line on the Pacific Coast.

The Pacific Mill and Mine Supply Co., 508-510 Mission street, San Francisco, are the sole agents for the Valqua Products Company, a California concern manufacturing a full line of belt dressings in bar, paste, and liquid form. These various dressings are for use on rubber, leather, canvas and balata belting, and the fact of these lines being handled by this well known local firm insures their good quality.

This concern manufactures special belting for special duties, and also carries one of the largest and most complete stocks of leather, rubber, balata, canvas and cotton belting on the coast, and is in a position to successfully compete with the largest eastern factories on any size job in the belt line.

Carry Protective Paint.

In addition to the above special features this firm also handles the Valqua protective paints for general use in manufacturing plants, and while it is a somewhat novel line for a mill supply house to take up, its unprecedented success proves the good judgment of the promoters and also the old adage that there is room for a good article.

Valqua protective paints are the highest grade paints for protective purposes and are made in several attractive colors. On account of their strong adhesive qualities and great elasticity, Valqua Protective Paints are particularly useful on galvanized iron in all forms, tin roofs, steel structures of all kinds, exteriors of buildings and all places where a protective paint is required.

The success of this concern caused them to early establish a branch store at Los Angeles and on May 1st they opened a store in Portland, Oregon, carrying the same general lines as are carried in their other stores.

STATE MINERAL NEWS

Asbestos mining is claiming much attention in Trinity County.

Pay gravel has been struck in the Excelsior mine near Forest Hill, Placer County.

In oil developments, the Royal Dutch-Shell combine will spend $7,500,000 in California.

Near Gold Run, Placer County, gold dredging interests are preparing for extensive operations.

The Guggenheims are preparing to dredge for gold large areas of land near Marysville.

The European war is said to have affected those mines in which foreign capital is largely interested.

California was, in 1913, the United States' largest producer of quicksilver—15,591 flasks, valued at $627,228.

Sacramento Valley mines are contributing minerals that insure a fine exhibit at the San Francisco exposition.

The European war has given a tremendous impetus to gold mining, and temporarily demoralized copper mining.

Near Quincy, Plumas County, preparations have been made for resumption of work at the Plumas Bonanza property.

Plans are being perfected for an early resumption of work at the Channel Peak mines near Spanish Peak, Plumas County.

Good profits are, it is reported, commencing to be earned by the Champion mine, near Nevada City, Nevada County.

For the fourth time in twenty years, stamps began dropping at the Plymouth Consolidated, near Plymouth, Amador County.

At the South Eureka mine near Jackson, Amador County, twenty additional stamps have been put in operation, making sixty in all.

Eastern capitalists are said to be arranging for extensive operation of the Royal Consolidated gold mines in eastern Calaveras County.

The White Lily mine, near Seneca, Plumas County, a good gold producer, has resumed operations after several years of idleness.

A plan is on foot to induce the mining companies owning the dredged land about Oroville, Butte County, to plant the tailing piles to eucalyptus.

For some time it has been reported that the lessees of the Cerro Gordo mine near Keeler, Inyo County, have been making good in a very substantial way. From 1860 to 1908 the mine had paid in the neighborhood of $20,000,000.

July's oil production amounted to 8,969,695 barrels, valued at about $5,000,000. The total shipments amounted to 8,263,172 barrels.

The Union Hill mine, one of the largest in the Grass Valley, Nevada County, district, which has produced a fortune during its half century of life, has been sold.

The United States Treasury Department announces that it has made the purchase of 1,175,000 ounces of silver at 52 cents an ounce, with the double end in view—first, to enable the mines and smelters to continue working, and, second, to take advantage of the low price that followed the check in the export movement.

At the present time, just one year after the work was undertaken by State Mineralogist F. McN. Hamilton, the more important field work of a report which will cover all phases of the mineral industry in California has been all but completed and the manuscript for the finished report will be in the hands of the printer in the near future.

"A direct benefit to the United States from the European war will be its effect in making the people of this country realize to a greater extent the value of mineral resources," said Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, in a recent interview. "It is entirely possible to so utilize these resources and expand our industries that the label 'Made in America' will become familiar in our own foreign markets."

ADMISSION DAY PARADE TO HAVE MANY FEATURES

THE BIG THREE-DAY CELEBRATION of Admission Day at Vallejo, September 7th, 8th and 9th, promises to be one of the greatest successes ever pulled off by the Native Sons.

Over sixty Parlors have already signified their intention of participating in the Admission Day parade, September 9th, which will include sixteen bands of music and twenty-five drum corps.

ADMISSION DAY SHOULD BE OBSERVED

(GRAND PRESIDENT, N.S.G.W., PROCLAMATION.)

San Francisco, August 5, 1914.

To the Officers and Members of All Subordinate Parlors of the N.S.G.W.—Dear Sirs and Brothers: As the sixty-fourth anniversary of California's entry into the Union approaches, I send to the Parlors of the Order official greeting, and urge them to fittingly celebrate and commemorate the Ninth of September, "Admission Day."

Mainly through the efforts of our Order, did the State of California declare the anniversary of the day on which it was admitted into the "Sisterhood of States" a legal holiday—upon the Order then devolves the duty of stimulating a general observance of the day.

For the Parlors and members of the Order near the Bay of San Francisco, the Grand Parlor has designated Vallejo Parlor, No. 77, as the host of the Natives who are to gather in the city of Vallejo for the annual celebration of Admission Day. Vallejo Parlor has cheerfully assumed the duties, and invites all to accept its hospitality. As Grand President I urge all within convenient traveling distance to join in the official celebration there to be held.

To the Parlors and members too remote from Vallejo to join the multitudes there gathered I urge local observance of the day. If daytime parades or outings are impossible, at least the Parlors should hold some "open meeting" or public exercise on the eve or night of Admission Day to which the public may be invited—the day should not be permitted to pass unobserved. Be the exercises you can promote of great magnitude or small, let not our State's birthday be ignored—do your best, observe it in some manner yourself and ask your neighbors to join you. Make a practical exhibition of the "Loyalty to the State of California" which we proclaim.

Yours in Friendship, Loyalty and Charity,

Louis H. Moore
Grand President.

TO PARADE IN SAN FRANCISCO BEFORE GOING TO VALLEJO.

San Francisco—Led by Judge James G. Conlan as Grand Marshal, there will be a parade in this city, the night of September 8th, by a majority of the Parlors of Native Sons of the Golden West, prior to their departure for Vallejo to participate in the Admission Day celebration.

The parade will form at Native Sons' Hall, 414 Mason street, and proceed to the ferry, where the marchers will entrain for the celebration city. Arrangements have been made for special boats and trains the night of September 8th and morning of the 9th, to accommodate the throngs who will go to the navy yard city.

A tour of all the leading retail stores of this city by a committee headed by Colonel Frank W. Marston, revealed the fact that all will remain closed on Admission Day.

STOCKTON HAS SPECIAL TO VALLEJO FOR CELEBRATION.

Stockton—The Admission Day Committee of Stockton Parlor, No. 7, N. S. G. W.—J. W. Fitzgerald (chairman), M. O. Schneider, Harry Dunlap, James Ford and George Fox—has arranged for a special train to leave this city at 6:45 a. m., September 9th, and to arrive in Vallejo at 9:30 a. m. A round-trip fare of $2 has been secured, tickets being good for seven days.

Many members of the Parlor will participate in the Admission Day parade at Vallejo, clad in their showy white uniforms. The sale of excursion tickets is open to anyone, whether affiliated with the Order or not, desiring to make the trip and participate in the festivities.

CAPITAL CITY WILL BE WELL REPRESENTED.

Sacramento—Indications are that a large number of residents of this city will go to Vallejo, September 9th, to participate in the Admission Day festivities. The local Native Sons have made arrangements for a special train over the Southern Pacific, leaving here at 7 a. m., and a round-trip fare of $1.90 has been secured.

Sacramento Parlor, No. 3, N.S.G.W., and Sunset Parlor, No. 26, N.S.G.W., will join forces on this occasion, and will maintain headquarters. A band has been provided to head the delegation in the Admission Day parade, and an orchestra for dancing at headquarters. Refreshments aplenty will be served.

Oak Park Parlor, No. 213, N.S.G.W., will be represented by a select delegation in a decorated auto.

Sutter Parlor, No. 111, N.D.G.W., will appear in the big parade on the 9th in a decorated auto bus, and have been assigned a position immediately following the Sacramento Native Sons.

Walter J. Hicks has been appointed an aide to the Grand Marshal, for the Sacramento division, which is expected to be among the largest and most attractive in the Admission Day parade.

ADMISSION DAY POSTER CREDIT TO DESIGNER.

On the outside back cover of this issue is reproduced the Vallejo Admission Day poster, sent broadcast throughout the State to advertise the three-day celebration of the State's natal day.

Although issued for the purpose of advertising, the poster reflects much credit upon the designer, Martin R. Aden, a resident of Vallejo. The original is executed in four colors—yellow, red, green and black—and has attracted much favorable comment wherever displayed.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

Enthusiastic for Vallejo.

San Francisco—Gabrielle Parlor, No. 139, held another of its popular whist parties July 29th, the committee in charge being: Lucy Johnson (chairman), Edna Hansen, Alice Collins, Esther Carlson, Martha Weigel and Mabel Ayscough. The continued success of these affairs has inspired the members to plan a sort of jubilee whist party, at which will be presented a very generous list of prizes. This will be held September 30th, in Native Sons' Hall. That Gabrielle Parlor is a favorite in San Francisco, is evidenced by the number of applications for membership which are received. August 19th, ten candidates were initiated.

The Parlor is making extensive preparations for the celebration in Vallejo. Over half the members have indicated their intention of taking part in the parade, and plans for attractive costuming are being made enthusiastically. Rincon Parlor, No. 72, N.S.G.W., has invited Gabrielle to share its headquarters in Masonic Temple during the celebration. The two Parlors will also parade together.

Successful Entertainment.

Los Angeles—A dancing party was given by the members of La Esperanza Parlor, No. 24, at Native Sons' Hall, July 24th. Excellent punch was served, and much enjoyment was had throughout the evening. All attending voted the entertainment a success. During the evening the presence of Deputy District Attorney W. J. Ford and wife, and Congressman Joseph R. Knowland and wife was noted. The committee in charge was Hazel I. Perdue (chairman), Dr. Eva R. Bussenius, P.G.P., Maude I. Franklin, Estelle Campbell and Rose Iberson.

Many Notables Present.

Oakland—Piedmont Parlor, No. 87, was host at a banquet given Grand President May C. Boldemann on her official visit, July 30th, at Woodman Hall. The Grand President was presented with a cut-glass jelly howl, as a testimonial of the Parlor's appreciation. Over one hundred Native Daughters from the bay counties sat down to a splendid repast provided by the Parlor. The Grand President complimented Piedmont Parlor on its fine corps of officers, and on being the largest Parlor in Alameda County, it having on its roll over two hundred members. Financially, Piedmont Parlor is one of the richest, and its hospitality is known throughout the State; the hand of fraternity and goodfellowship is extended to all who enter its lodge-room. The Parlor members are preparing to visit Vallejo the Ninth of September, and expect to make a good showing. September 28th there will be a class initiation. The Parlor has as its president this term one of the hard workers of the Order, Mrs. Winnie Halter, whose aim is to build up the membership.

The following Grand Officers were present at the official visit: May C. Boldemann, Grand President; May B. Wilkin, Past Grand President; Emma G. Foley, Past Grand President; Margaret Grote Hill, Grand Vice-president; Dora Bloom, Grand Inside Sentinel, all of San Francisco; Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Secretary, Livermore; Anna F. Lange, Grand Outside Sentinel, Oakland; Addie Mosher, Grand Trustee, Oakland. The following district deputies were present: May Barry and Kate Tietjen of Berkeley—The installation ceremonies of Berkeley Parlor, No. 150, were held July 31st at Native Sons' Hall. The hall was beautifully decorated with the National colors and Bear flags. The impressive ceremonies were conducted by D.D.G.P. Jennie Brown of Piedmont Parlor, who was presented with a handsome souvenir silver fork. The retiring president, Eloise Hall, was the recipient of a valuable pearl ring, as a mark of esteem. Beautiful potted ferns were presented to Past President May Jacobs and President Lettie Dixon, and a bouquet to each of the other officers, all responding in well-chosen remarks. There were many visitors from San Francisco and Alameda County Parlors, also Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty. At the conclusion of the ceremonies all repaired to the banquet hall and did ample justice to a collation, after which dancing was in order. The officers installed for the ensuing term are as follows: Past president, May Jacobs; president, Lettie Dixon; first vice-president, Ethel A. Walsh; second vice-president, Lillian Crew; third vice-president, Elizabeth Smith; recording secretary, Helen M. Wehe; financial secretary, Mabelle Edwards; treasurer, Carrie Hall; marshal, Anna Jackson; inside sentinel, Carrie Edgar; outside sentinel, Anna J. Bear Flag Presented to School.

Etna Mills—An enjoyable time was spent the evening of July 29th, Eschscholtzia Parlor entertaining the Fort Jones girls. D.D.G.P. Flora Piscantor of Ottittewa Parlor, No. 97, installed the following officers for the ensuing term: Past president, Mary Barry; president, Edith Grant; first vice-president, Bird Freitag; second vice-president, Anna Calloway; third vice-president, Katherine Dowling; recording secretary, Marguerite Geney; financial secretary, Mary Parker; treasurer, Carry Bradley; marshal, Elisabeth Stephens; inside sentinel, Emma Wagner Herzog; outside sentinel, Atlanta Adams; organist, Laura Green; trustees—Margaret Weston, Clara Kapplar and Agnes Calloway; physicians, Drs. Nuttings, Bathurst and Haines. Grand President May Boldemann was scheduled to visit the Parlors in Siskiyou County the last week in August. On the 26th she was in Etna, and Eschscholtzia Parlor girls presented the Etna grammar school with a Bear flag, Grand President Boldemann making the presentation speech. An interesting program was arranged, and the neighboring Parlors of N.D.G.W. and N.S.G.W. were present at the exercises. The committee in charge was composed of Sisters Weston, Parker, Geney and Grant, who made every endeavor to have the affair a success. The Grizzly Bear is a welcome visitor to the Parlor. The members appreciate the interest taken in N.D.G.W. affairs, and extend best wishes for its continued success.

Greeted by Many Members.

St. Helena—Grand President May C. Boldemann made her official visit to La Junta Parlor, No. 203, July 17th, when newly-elected officers were installed by D.D.G.P. Lillius A. Kelley. Four candidates were initiated, and after the meeting were guests of honor, with the visiting officers and fifteen members of Calistoga Parlor, at a banquet. The banquet-room was prettily decorated with Shasta daisies and ferns, and a most enjoyable time was had. The visiting officers were presented with cut flowers by Miss Ruth Long on behalf of the Parlor.

Many Attend Installation.

San Francisco—San Francisco Parlor, No. 174, held a public installation, July 14th, which was well attended by many members from the various local Parlors and also many friends. In the absence of D.D.G.P. Phelita Reagan of Yosemite Parlor, Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, assisted by Grand Treasurer Susie K. Christ, acting as grand marshal, Grand Inside Sentinel Dora Bloom as past president, Mae Edwards as organist, and Grace Smith as grand secretary, installed the following officers-elect: Past president, Claire Weber; president, Agnes Pinkham; first vice-president, Emma Dieckhoff; second vice-president, Margaret Merriek; third vice-president, Elizabeth Hegarty; marshal, Mae Barrett; recording secretary, Abbie Buttle; financial secretary, May O'Brien; treasurer, Anne Breslin; trustees—Nora Foley, Etta Price, Edna Smith; inside sentinel, Anna Galvin; outside sentinel, Margaret Tosney; organist, Edna Gibson. A hand-painted cup and saucer were presented to Alice H. Dougherty, San Francisco souvenir spoons to Susie K. Christ and Mae Edwards, and a hand-painted plate to Dora Bloom. Floral offerings were presented to President Agnes Pinkham, to the retiring financial secretary, Mae Agnes Smith, and to the past president, Irene O'Connor. At the close East Oakland—Grand President May C. Boldemann made her official visit to Brooklyn Parlor, No. 157, July 29th, visitors being present from Aloha, Bahia Vista, Bay Side, Piedmont, Encinal, Manzanita, Argonaut, Berkeley and Bear Flag Parlor. The officers put on the ritualistic work beautifully, and the floor work was perfect. The members of the Parlor presented the Grand President with a token of one dozen fancy sherbet glasses, which were appreciated very much. Members of Brooklyn Parlor, N.S.G.W., accompanied the visiting grand officers to the banquet-room, where the tables were very nicely decorated. Refreshments were served, after which the evening was spent in remarks from the grand officers and Brooklyn Parlor visiting Native Sons.

Brooklyn Parlor held a barn dance, July 31st, at Lakeside hall. Brooklyn Parlor, No. 151, N.S.G.W., presented its band, which is considered to be an excellent organization. The evening was spent in dancing, and refreshments were served. Both Parlor are making elaborate preparations for the Ninth of September.

During the evening the retiring past-president, Mrs. Clara Wenger, was presented with an emblematic pin.

Busy Times in San Jose.

San Jose—Forty members of San Jose Parlor, No. 81, gave a royal welcome to Grand President May C. Boldemann on the occasion of her official visit, July 22nd. Shasta daisies and green bamboo transformed the meeting-place into an artistic shaded bower. The grand officers present included Grand Marshal Mamie P. Carmichael and D.D.G.P. Lizette Faber of Vendome Parlor, and D.D.G.P. Rena Medici of San Jose Parlor. The session was presided over by President Ermine de Carli, who paid the following original tribute to California:

Lashed by the waves of the mighty Pacific
That break, then subside with a voice so terrific,
With mountains that tower above her so high,
Snow-capped and rugged a-scraping the sky,
Udaunted and mighty protectors they seem,
Those stern hills and that murmuring stream.

Apart from the world is this haven of rest,
Renowned near and far for things that are best;
Abounding with resources unmatched by the best,
'Neath skies of the bluest, beat hearts of the truest,

Ye sons and ye daughters consider thee blest.

The ritualistic work was perfectly exemplified for the benefit of one candidate, and the Grand President highly complimented the officers. During the meeting, Mrs. Boldemann was, on behalf of the Parlor, presented with a beautifully-framed picture, while Grand Marshal Carmichael was the recipient of a bouquet. Following the meeting, a

THE LUCKY STAR

(By MAY STANISLAS CORCORAN.)

THE FOURTH-OF-JULY SUN slanted its last beams over a broad stretch of meadow that served as recreation grounds for a number of small towns on a large mining estate in the Sierras.

Red and white uniformed baseball men, with loud cheers, climbed into their big coach. A carriage containing the speakers of the day, sped out of sight in a cloud of dust. Laughing people, heedless of incongruity, filled the floats that had been so heautiful in the morning parade. Under a spreading oak the hand played its last selection, "Dixie Land," and around a huge poppy that had served as a throne for the dainty goddess, a circle of men, mostly in white duck and straw hats, lingered as though loath to leave the pleasant spot.

"Yes, Tony, I should like just one little row on the river before resuming my robes of royalty," Lyndle Howard said to a handsome, dark-eyed young fellow beside her.

"Look out, Lyndle," one of the men laughingly remarked. "Manager Lawrence rode down that way a hit ago, perhaps to quench the fire that has burned in his eyes all day. He won't soon forget your triumph. A goddess from the Lucky Star to reign over his celebration! Our one little mine against his four big ones. Gee, but it was great, to see him marshaling our queen's guard! And it wasn't money that did it, either. The boys on the estate, as well as off, like Lyndle."

"I believe you, Fred, and I like them," she answered heartily. Then with a little sigh, "I wish Manager Lawrence liked me, too."

"Gee, him! And why, when you have us?"

"O, for no reason. Come on, Tony. We will be back in a half hour, mother. No father, I don't need a wrap. Yes, Mr. Britton, I am sure Tony can manage the boat and you may have two dances tonight, instead of one, if that will recompense. O, it has been such a happy day. I thank you all."

"Why do you care about Lawrence, Lyndle?" Tony Nevis asked wistfully. "I know, though. You want girl friends and those daughters of his hurt you."

"Yes, Tony, they are nice girls and I watch them often on their tennis court and wonder why they never invite me. Indeed, none of the women here ever come near us."

"Take my word for it, Lyndle, you don't miss much. We fellows know because we used to be invited there before we left the estate for the Lucky Star. They are all right, but they don't think and act for themselves, as you do. Why, instead of being proud of being goddess, they pretended that they didn't want their names up. But we knew very well it was because they knew they would lose against you."

Lyndle laughed softly, pressing her lips to a wild-rose growing in her way. The trail sloped steeply, just a foot below the road, near enough to reach a hand from one to the other, but so screened by the thick vines and trees as to be quite invisible from it.

"Ah, I was glad," she said sweetly. "You see, Tony, mother and father were quite prominent people in the South before all that trouble, and they still want society, as I, who have seen the hard side of life, do not. So it was fine, just for one day, to see them first again, to have the speakers with us and people all friendly as they used to be. Even Manager Lawrence spoke kindly. But, Tony, there was a mockery I could not understand, in his eyes, and, as Fred said, they fairly blazed when Mr. Robertson, one of the stockholders, asked if, as a representative of the estate, he might lead the grand march with me."

"Robertson! Why, he worked hardest to defeat you."

"Yes, and then I determined to make him repent."

"Listen, Lyndle, those voices under the big oak on the road just above us are Robertson's and Lawrence's. I heard the name 'Lucky Star'."

Distinct through the screen of wild roses and alders, came the sneering voice of Manager Lawrence.

"I don't see, Robertson, why you want to lower yourself before the whole community by opening the ball with that Howard girl."

The color flamed in Lyndle's face, her lips quivered, but she stood like a soldier at attention.

"She is today the queen of our celebration and any man may feel honored by her acceptance," Robertson's cultured voice answered with a ring of amusement that deepened Lyndle's color.

"Today!" Lawrence laughed cruelly. "And tomorrow the whole crowd may pack; the 'Lucky Star' will be ours."

"You mean?"

"Yes, the secret survey is completed and proves that their mill is built on our land. I thought as much when they began construction, and had my attorney look up the decision before I put the surveyors to work. That is why I never wasted attention on the Howards or let my girls call on Lyndle. I knew I had them all the time."

Lyndle shivered, involuntarily crushing a wild rose.

"Are you certain about the validity of that decision?"

"Absolutely. It has been tried time and again in the higher courts and always confirmed. It is the outgrowth of those old Spanish grants that invested one party with the mineral, and another with the agricultural title to the same land. The United States Supreme Court has decided beyond controversy that the owner of land owns from the heavens above to the center of the earth below, and all therein or thereon. Consequently, since Howard has made us a present of an eighty thousand dollar mill, by putting it on our property, the least we can do is to promptly accept the gift."

Color flamed no longer in Lyndle's cheeks; her trembling lips set in a hard, cold line; one hand reached to quiet Tony, whose face had darkened ominously; the other pressed against her heart.

"Wait, Tony," she whispered. "Let us hear every word."

"Now, do you think it necessary to dance with the queen? I have looked into their record and found that Howard lost everything he had on horses, and some old people are hacking him in the mine. They say he has sunk their last cent."

"Then the poor old people will be the losers," Robertson commented coldly. "Say, Lawrence, got another cigar?"

"Here. And Howard, himself, isn't the only one. His wife, too, played the races, and, as long as they had money, up to the time Lyndle was twelve years of age, she used to sit in the grand stand with the race followers. Nice folks to mix with, aren't they? Why, I wouldn't let my girls speak to them."

"A pity," sententiously. "Just now, when settlement work is such a fad. By the way, Lawrence, you are a regular magician at unearthing shady things. Ever delved into my past? I once owned a horse or two in the South. And my sister— But, perhaps I had better not mention it, as I should like her to meet your daughters."

"I don't see any reason for dragging your sister's name into a conversation about the Howards."

"Nor I, since Minnie is married to one of the wealthiest men in San Francisco, and Lyndle Howard hasn't a dime."

"If that is sarcasm, Robertson, it is employed in a mighty poor cause. The question is: Do you intend to keep tonight's engagement?"

During the long pause that followed, Lyndle clung tighter to Tony's hand.

"Even at the price of your highly esteemed friendship, Lawrence," a slow, drawing voice answered, as though between puffs of smoke, "I do."

Lyndle's hand relaxed, a sigh parted her lips, a light of triumph came back to her eyes, to quickly give place to pain, as Manager Lawrence said:

"Then the ladies of the estate will dance in their own parlor."

"O, a terribly bad floor. I have tried it."

Parting the vines, Tony saw Lawrence stride rapidly toward the town and Robertson, slowly rising from his seat on a rock below the great oak tree, turned lazily in the same direction.

"O, Tony, don't let mother and father, or anyone, know tonight," Lyndle gasped. "Let them enjoy it to the end. We must hurry now, as there is not too much time for dinner and to dress. O, Tony, Tony, think. We must not lose the mill. Gold was struck on the 'Lucky Star' yesterday. They look to a big crushing soon, and now, tomorrow, the injunction will be filed. Do you suppose it is true?"

"Lyndle, will you trust me?" The dark eyes glowed with sudden manliness. "Our lucky star has risen and we cannot lose. Only make the hall a success. You will, won't you, Lyndle?" a new, wonderful music breaking over the name.

Promptly at nine, as the orchestra sounded the grand march, Lyndle, radiantly happy, and Donald Robertson, for him, strangely animated, took their places at the head of the long line of expectant dancers. Very gracefully, very harmoniously they led through the mazes of the march and glided off into the waltz.

Ralph Howard and his handsome wife smiled as they had not for years. The ball was a success, for, after vainly trying to enjoy the exclusiveness of the manager's house, the speakers of the day, the officers of the estate, the Misses Lawrence and their girl friends, and even Manager Lawrence himself, thronged into the hall.

"Well, Robertson, so you took the queen away from her tribe," Manager Lawrence, who had come to realize that a break with a stockholder was not desirable, remarked to Robertson some time after midnight. "Of the one hundred and twenty-five men at the 'Lucky Star,' not over a half-dozen are here. They are a worthless lot, but, when I saw how few attended, I didn't mind letting the girls come."

"It certainly is a delightful dance," Robertson answered carelessly. "Miss Howard says we must keep it up until full day, and has made me agree to a waltz just as the first sunbeam touches the 'Lucky Star.' Actually, I am excited, knowing of tomorrow's tragedy. It is like the night before Waterloo."

ELECTION—NOVEMBER 3rd.

"Hark—did ye not hear it?" Lyndle laughed, close to his elbow.

"I heard something," he answered, catching her animation. "It sounded like heavy machinery being moved."

"It is! It is!" Lyndle whispered joyously, turning to an eastern window through which daylight dimmed the artificial lights.

"Ah, the first sunbeam! Miss Howard, our waltz."

"Wait—does it touch the 'Lucky Star?' I cannot see. Will you look, Mr. Lawrence?"

Long they looked in stupefied silence. Where yesterday shown the steel roofs of the "Lucky Star," the sky line was a blank.

"Gone! They have stolen the mill while we danced!" Lawrence exclaimed in fury.

"Not stolen," Lyndle answered sweetly. "Only during the night, removed it to our own property."

Above the music of the orchestra sounded rapid hoofbeats, and, springing lightly from the foaming animal, Tony Neves, still in corduroy and negligee, hurried up the steps straight to the window where Lyndle and her companions waited.

"Saved, Lyndle!" he exclaimed triumphantly. "How the fellows worked! And you, Lyndle? Was the dancing work without us?"

But Lyndle, generous even to her foes, only smiled as she placed her hand on Tony's arm.

"You will excuse me, Mr. Robertson? Since the sunbeam did not strike the 'Lucky Star,' the waltz must be Tony's."

"A queen to the end," Robertson murmured, with something like a sigh.

BIG AUTO MELON CUT BETWEEN COUNTIES.

Sacramento—The first apportionment of auto tax revenues collected by the State has been made to the several counties, and $582,282.87, one-half the amount received, will be divided according to the number of automobiles in each county.

Los Angeles County leads, with 35,132 machines, and gets the biggest slice, $181,747.90. San Francisco comes next, with 9,955, and will receive $55,758.88.

Other counties that will come in for a goodly share of the fund, include, in order of number of motor vehicles: Alameda, $36,526.29; San Diego, $24,578.19; Fresno, $19,495.25; Santa Clara, $17, 386.51; Orange, $15,758.56; Sacramento, $14,658.90; San Bernardino, $13,669.65; San Joaquin, $11,931.06; Tulare, $10,430.78; Kern, $10,080.45.

According to law, the counties are required to use this money for county road maintenance and improvements.

WILL GO BEFORE THE PEOPLE IN NOVEMBER

San Francisco—At this writing (August 27th) it is impossible to say positively who were successful in winning nominations at the State-wide primaries, August 25th, but it appears reasonably certain that, in the three leading parties—Democratic, Progressive, Republican—the nominees for State offices in the November election will be:

Governor—J. D. Curtin (D.), Hiram W. Johnson (P.), incumbent, J. D. Fredericks (R.).

Lieutenant-Governor—Jo V. Snyder (D.), J. M. Eshelman (P., R.).

Secretary of State—F. C. Jordan (D., R.), F. J. O'Brien (P.).

Treasurer—Thos. Monahan (D.), F. W. Richardson (P., R.).

Comptroller—J. S. Chambers (D., P., R.).

Attorney-General—U. S. Webb (D., P., R.).

Surveyor-General—W. S. Kingsbury (D., P., R.).

For United States Senator, indications are that the line-up will be: J. D. Phelan (D.), F. J. Heney (P.), J. R. Knowland (R.).

There is a rumor to the effect that the courts will be appealed to to declare it impossible for a partisan office-seeker to be a primary candidate in more than one party, and if the courts give a decision favorable to the contestants, additional candidates will be in the November field.

For Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court, it will likely require the official count to determine who will go on the November ballot, the race being very close between Justice F. M. Angellotti, Judge W. M. Conley and Judge W. Bordwell.

REQUEST FOR MORE GRANTED.

Los Angeles—A dance at Native Sons' Hall, August 28th, under the auspices of the Associated Parlors, N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W., drew out a large crowd. The proceeds will be devoted to the Admission Day picnic at Eagle Rock Park, September 9th.

These affairs are so greatly enjoyed that, at the suggestion of those who attend,—and who voted the request unanimously,—another dance will be held by the Associated Parlors, Friday, September 25th, in Native Sons' Hall.

WHY NOT?

San Diego—The first tea saplings to take root in American soil have just been set out in the Panama-California Exposition grounds, and are attracting considerable attention from nurserymen.

In addition to forming an attractive display at the fair, the plants will serve as an experiment to determine whether tea can be successfully grown in California.

ENTERTAINS PIONEERS

Los Angeles—Thoroughly interesting and delightful,—linking the days of the past when men and women conquered the wilderness and sifted California's sands for gold with the present hour of wireless and radium,—was the recent evening when Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124, N.D.G.W., entertained members of the Los Angeles County Pioneer Society. As one declared: "This is an echo of the distant past; the air is filled with true California hospitality, the same that made our State famous in song and story in the dashing days of the dons."

The heartiest of welcome was accorded each Pioneer guest by members of the Parlor's reception committee—Miss Grace Culberts, Miss Grace Stoerner, Miss Katherine Baker, Mrs. J. A. Adair, Mrs. A. K. Prather, Mrs. Paul Robinson, Miss Mattie Labory, Mrs. J. T. Curtin and Mrs. D. Joseph Coyne. Pink and yellow blossoms were used for the decorations.

Miss Grace Culberts was in charge of the program, cleverly introducing each participant. Mrs. Daisy Prideaux of Ursula Parlor No. 1, Jackson, sang a beautiful solo and in response to an encore rendered the sweet old ballad, "Ben Bolt." Miss Hazel Buckius sang "Absent," and as an encore, "I Love You, California," amid the enthusiastic applause of both Pioneers and native Californians.

Miss Anna I. Dempsey, a member of Los Angeles Parlor, was the speaker of the evening, delivering her lecture, "California, the Beautiful," and putting into her talk the charm of her own enthusiastic personality. Clearly and well did she tell of El Camino Real and its twenty-one wonderful adobe missions; she visualized the coming of the intrepid Pioneers of '49, who took either the perilous trip by ox team across the plains, the lengthy sail around the Horn, or the tedious trip across the Isthmus of Panama. In conclusion, Miss Dempsey recited an original poem written and dedicated to the California Pioneers, entitled, "Days of the Past."

Mrs. Alta Seazighni-Smith, a recent recruit to Los Angeles Parlor, sang "A Toast to the Pioneers," the words of which were written by Mrs. Auhury, also of the Parlor. She was heartily applauded, and in response sang the old Scotch ballad, "Annie Laurie." Miss Mae Horgan gave two clever recitations in "down East" dialect, which elicited much laughter from the pleased audience.

At the request of Los Angeles Parlor, Herman Lichtenherger, Past Grand President, N.S.G.W., gave a short, interesting talk on both the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Orders. John T. Newell of Los Angeles Parlor, N.S.G.W., also by request, delivered a short eulogy on the Pioneer Mothers and Fathers, thanking them for braving the perilous journey to California, and thus giving to their children their wonderful hitherto, nativity in California, and paving the way for the formation of both the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West. W. H. Workman of the Pioneers responded in a splendid talk.

This concluded the program, when the committee of introduction became very busy, and soon the room was filled with the murmur of conversation. The committee of introduction was Mrs. Jennie Elliott, Mrs. Alice Hamilton, Mrs. Grace Haven, Miss Julia Baker, Miss Susie Donahue, Miss Viona Nolte, Miss Margaret Molony, Miss Rose Lee, Miss Olga Lazarovitch, Miss Grace Ducasse, Miss Orland Hubbard, Miss Mattie Labory, Mrs. Hugh Dixon, Mrs. Alberta Hays, Mrs. Josephine Jones, Mrs. M. E. Aubury and Mrs. Willette Biscailuz.

Refreshments were served, and later there was dancing, the orchestra playing the inspiring music of the Virginia reel and the old-fashioned lancers. Again one's thoughts flew to the distant past, and old scenes were brought to memory as the Pioneers and native Californians joined in the graceful steps of these old-fashioned dances.

Important Committees Named.

When D.D.G.P. Kate McFadyen of Long Beach Parlor recently installed the officers of Los Angeles Parlor, she was assisted by Miss Rose Orelli acting as grand marshal and Mrs. Harper acting as past grand president, both being of Long Beach Parlor. Other visitors present were Mrs. E. E. Leake of Woodland Parlor, No. 90, and Mrs. Ord of La Esperanza Parlor, No. 24. Miss Grace Stoerner, who had just closed a successful term as president of Los Angeles Parlor, was the recipient of a handsome leather traveling bag, the gift of the Parlor. After the meeting, the members and visitors enjoyed a banquet, the fair hostess being Miss Grace Stoerner. The flowers that adorned the table came from the garden of Mrs. Grace Haven.

At the regular meeting of Los Angeles Parlor August 3rd, the president, Miss Margaret Molony, appointed the following committees: Press—Mrs. J. A. Adair. Homeless Children—Miss Grace Culberts, Miss Grace Stoerner, Mrs. Grace Haven. Good of the Order—Miss Grace Ducasse, Miss Julia Baker, Miss Susie Donahue. Associated Parlor—Miss Grace Stoerner, Miss Grace Culberts, Miss Margaret Molony. Mrs. Genevieve Moore was welcomed into the Order. The report of the outgoing trustees, Mrs. Alberta Hays, Miss Mattie Labory and Mrs. J. A. Adair, pro tem, was read, and Los Angeles Parlor was congratulated on its splendid book officers—Miss Katherine Baker, recording secretary, Mrs. Jennie Elliott, financial secretary, and Mrs. Grace Haven, treasurer.—J.A.A.

In Memoriam

LORETTA MEEHAN.

July 16th, at her home in Jackson, gently passed from life Loretta Grace Meehan, beloved daughter of the late James Meehan and Mary Meehan, a Native Daughter of the Golden West, and past president of Ursula Parlor, No. 1.

Loretta Meehan was one of the best-known and most-widely-loved of Ursula Parlor's daughters, and her death comes as a sad shock to her large circle of warm friends throughout the State. During her years of health and activity, her sunny disposition and merry wit were the life and inspiration of every gathering, while even on her final bed of suffering she faced the inevitable end with patience, fortitude and sweet resignation. The greater part of her life was spent in Jackson, where she held many positions of confidence and responsibility, acting most efficiently in clerical capacities with public and private services. Surviving her are her mother, one sister, Mrs. M. E. Pontenrose, and two nephews. She was laid to rest July 18th, with the rites of the Catholic Church. A large attendance of Native Daughters, from all Parlor of the county, followed her remains to their last resting place.

The following resolutions of respect were adopted by Ursula Parlor, No. 1, in tribute to her memory:

Silently and peacefully our late beloved past president, Loretta G. Meehan, has fallen into that deep sleep that knoweth no waking.

"She is not dead—the child of our affection—
But gone unto that school
Where she no longer needs our poor protection,
And Christ Himself doth rule."

Whereas, In the passing away of Sister Loretta G. Meehan, Ursula Parlor No. 1, N.D.G.W., and also her people, have sustained the loss of a loyal and devoted co-worker and companion, a true Californian, and a type of high nobility of character; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we offer to the bereaved family our sincere condolence, and extend to them our comfort and protection; and be it further

Resolved, That the patient and never-complaining little sister was indeed an example of courage and fortitude to each and everyone of us, and her loss is an irreparable loss to our membership.

"Thus do we walk with her and keep unhroken
The bond which nature gives,
Thinking that our remembrance, though unspoken,
May reach her where she lives."

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of Ursula Parlor No. 1, N.D.G.W., a copy sent to her sister, and an "In Memoriam" be engrossed and sent to her sorrowing mother, in testimony of the high esteem in which the memory of our late Sister Loretta G. Meehan was held.

Your committee on resolutions appointed by the president of Georgetown Parlor, No. 91, N.S.G.W., begs leave to submit the following:

Whereas, It has pleased All Wise Providence to call Brother John B. Farnsworth from his family and friends to the Grand Parlor on High; and

Whereas, In the death of Brother John B. Farnsworth our Parlor has lost a good and loyal member, the county a useful and respected citizen, and his wife and children a kind, and loving husband and father, be it

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in their great affliction and commend them to the loving care of our Heavenly Father.

Resolved, That the charter of this Parlor be draped in mourning for thirty days, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, also spread upon the minutes, and published in The Grizzly Bear Magazine.

HANGTOWN AND ADMISSION DAY CLAIMING ATTENTION

Los Angeles—Admission Day, September 9th, will be celebrated by the local Native Sons and Daughters with a picnic at Eagle Rock Park, under the auspices of the Associated Parlors, N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W.

A short literary program will be rendered, to be followed by a basket luncheon. In the afternoon there will be athletic sports for male and female, young and old, for which valuable prizes will be awarded. A splendid orchestra will provide dancing for the evening.

It is not possible that many of the local members of the Orders will participate in the State Admission Day celebration at Vallejo, owing to the distance, hence all members, their families, and friends, are urged to join in making the Eagle Rock picnic a grand success.

GETTING READY FOR HANGTOWN.

Hangtown, it has been definitely determined, will be repeated at Shrine Auditorium, the week of October 5th. Tickets are now being distributed to all Native Sons and Native Daughters, and the advance sales indicate greater interest than was aroused last year.

Committees to look after the various details have been appointed and organized, and by the first part of the month will be in good working order.

The production of Hangtown involves a great deal of hard work, but the splendid response of the Native Sons and Native Daughters last year will no doubt be equaled, and possibly surpassed, for the coming event.

Many new features will be added to this year's production, and accommodations will be provided for those who prefer to watch the fun, rather than participate in it.

The purpose of Hangtown, this year, is twofold—to raise money for the homeless children's work being carried on jointly by both Orders, and to make possible a creditable showing, by both the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles, at the big Admission Day festivities at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco next year.

The word has gone forth. Hangtown is to be repeated! So govern your time and energy accordingly, Los Angeles Native Sons and Native Daughters.

Native Sons of the Golden West

To Celebrate at Fair Grounds.

San Francisco—Preliminary to the Admission Day celebration in Vallejo, September 9th, the local Native Sons and Native Daughters will have a celebration at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition grounds, September 7th, under the auspices of the Extension Committee, N.S.G.W. The exposition officials set aside this day to the two Orders, with the idea of giving the people of this city and vicinity an opportunity to see bow far the work for the great exposition has progressed. Special rates have been arranged with transportation lines for near-by places.

The occasion will be known as "San Francisco Day," and thirty Parlors of the Bay section will march at 11 a.m. from Market and Van Ness to the Van Ness entrance to the fair grounds. Arriving at the exposition, the following program will be carried out: Overture, San Francisco Municipal Band; contralto solo, "I Love You, California," Miss Claribel L. Green; address, "San Francisco," Mayor James Rolph, Jr. (137); address, "California," Louis H. Mosser, Grand President, N.S.G.W.; address, "Our Municipal Railway," Supervisor J. Emmet Hayden (64); address, "Labor Day," Edward F. Moran (76); exhibition drill, land and water forces exposition fire department. Following these, dancing will take place on an open-air platform.

Joint Installation.

Oakland—July 23rd, Bay View Parlor, No. 238, and Bay Side Parlor, No. 204, N.D.G.W., held a joint installation in Alcatraz Hall. The ceremonies were exceptionally well attended, and at the conclusion the visitors were entertained with dancing and refreshments. D.D.G.P. Ada Spillman was the installing officer for Bay Side Parlor, while D.D.G.P. Chas. Naylor installed Bay View Parlor. Grand Outside Sentinel Anna Lange was presented with a beautiful plate, as a token for excellent services rendered as the past D.D.G.P. of Bay Side Parlor. Junior Past President Susie Hnffschmidt was presented with a gold pin, and D.D.G.P. Ada Spillman with a hand-painted plate. The presentations were made by Marshal Anne McNally. A jewel was presented to Junior Past President Leo Rappold, the presentation being made by Joseph Kenney of Piedmont Parlor. Bay Side Parlor, which is one of the newest in the Order, is progressing rapidly.

Two Successful Events.

San Francisco—The friends and members of Sequoia Parlor, No. 160, were entertained with two functions during the week of July 26th. On this day the annual private picnic of the Parlor took place at Idylwood Park, in Niles Canyon. Leaving San Francisco at 9:10 a.m., the excursionists were met with a special train which conveyed them to what was verily "a land of sunshine, fruit and flowers." To the music of a celebrated band, the afternoon was passed in dancing, and great were the regrets when the whistle of the train announced that it was time to return to the city. The one sad incident of the day was the loss of a rabbit which had been captured by D. D. Gibbons. The brotber was told to leave his card with the park management and it would be returned to him when found, but up to date he is still mourning the loss. The committee in charge of the festivities was composed of R. Zecher, president (chairman), A. Spindler (treasurer), J. Lacombe, T. T. Richardson, and D. D. Carr.

The members and their friends gathered again

Don't blame The Grizzly Bear, if your Parlor affairs are not mentioned in these columns.

If fault is to be found with anyone for such omission, it is with yourself.

The space in The Grizzly Bear is at the disposal of the Subordinate Parlors.

But you must supply the news, if you would have it printed herein.

Our only restriction is that copy must be in the office of publication not later than the 20th of each month.

R. ZECHE, PRES. SEQUOIA PARLOR.

on July 31st, to celebrate the twenty-fourth anniversary of the Parlor with a ball at Native Sons' auditorium. The hall was appropriately decorated for the occasion, and with the excellent dance music furnished, the evening passed altogether too quickly, and the strains of "Aloha Oe," the closing waltz, found the crowd still clamoring, like Oliver Twist, "for more." The grand march was led by President and Mrs. R. Zecher, followed by over 200 couples. To the untiring efforts of the following committee was due much of the success of the evening: A. I. Hoskins (chairman), A. Spindler, R. W. Smith, A. Costello and A. Gudehus. The members of the Parlor are very much flattered at the success of these two affairs, and promise that the coming season will see more activity in social affairs than heretofore.

Officers Complimented.

Pittsburg—August 5th, the officers of Diamond Parlor, No. 246, were installed by D.D.G.P. John T. Belshaw of General Winn Parlor, No. 32, Antioch, as follows: Junior past president, Frank E. Fonda; president, John E. Rough; first vice-president, John L. Buffo; second vice-president, Joe Buffo; third vice-president, David R. Leckie; recording secretary, Lorenzo F. Buffo; financial secretary, Clarence H. Brown; treasurer, A. E. Mc-Cormick; marshal, Angelo Buffo; trustee (18 months), William Latimer, Sr.; trustee (12 months), Francis A. Irving; inside sentinel, Frank B. Gatto; outside sentinel, Thomas A. Feighery. Grand Third Vice-president Jo V. Snyder, who was present, complimented the officers on the manner in which they exemplified the ritual, and told about the accomplishments of the Order in the past and what it plans to do in the future. Many visitors were present, including D. J. Hall (87), Sheriff R. R. Veale (32), Grand Trustee James F. Hoey (101), W. R. Sharkey (101), Geo. P. Upham (101), Dennis J. Luey (205) and O. S. Ormsby (245). Refreshments, which were enjoyed by everyone, were served at the close of the meeting.

Banquets Friends.

Palo Alto—At one of the most enthusiastic meetings of Palo Alto Parlor, No. 216, D.D.G.P. Johns of Santa Clara Parlor, No. 100, assisted by Sheriff Arthur Langford as acting grand marshal, installed the following officers: G. W. Tinney, past president; James Orr, president; James Farmin, first vice-president; Ed Hansen, second vice-president; W. R. Garcelon, third vice-president; E. A. Hettinger, treasurer; W. D. Morris, marshal; G. E. Beall, financial secretary; P. A. Crowley, recording secretary; L. Bracebi, inside sentinel; Roy Madigan, outside sentinel; A. A. Quinn, organist; N. E. Malcolm, trustee. Those friends who assisted in making the minstrel show a success were guests at a banquet recently.

Good Sum for Building.

San Jose—As the result of the Fourth of July celebration, $6,000 has been added to the building fund. The announcement was made at an enthusiastic meeting August 5th, when addresses were made by Howell D. Melvin, director-general of the festival, Frank H. Benson, Judge W. A. Beasley, District Attorney Arthur M. Free, Will J. Benson, Sheriff Arthur B. Langford, Judge P. F. Gosby and Charles Pitts. It is proposed to erect a structure that will be a credit to the city and the Order.

Speechfest Follows Foodfest.

Byron—Grand Third Vice-president Jo V. Snyder of Nevada City paid an official visit to Byron Parlor, No. 170, August 5th, and was greeted by a large attendance of the membership. A banquet followed the business session, at which J. L. Kennedy was the toastmaster. Responses were made by Sheriff R. R. Veale, Leo F. Tormey, Grand Trustee James F. Hoey, A. S. Ormsby and W. R. Sharkey, all of Martinez, and Charles Cople, Al Chiem, Al Bovo and Tobey Le Grande, of the local Parlor, and the visitor.

Entertains Many Guests.

Fresno—Ed Burke of Fresno Parlor, No. 25, gave his annual barbecue, August 9th, to the members of the local Native Sons and Native Daughters and their friends, his shop being appropriately decorated and good music provided. The guests began arriving about noon, and were given a royal welcome by the host and his good wife, and shortly afterward were liberally supplied with delicious grilled steak, Spanish beans, and all the necessary accessories. Fifty members of Fresno Parlor took part in the afternoon's festivities, which Mr. Burke provides annually for the Native Sons, Native Daughters, and their friends. Among the large number present were: J. W. Cappleman, J. B. Daly, W. O. Bean, M. S. Hutchison, Fred T. Pratt, W. F. Toomey, Ed Victor, Frank Lane, J. T. Campbell, O. V. Cobb, Sam Harkelroad, George Haines, Ed Burke, G. C. Freeman, Ed Bradley, Ray W. Baker, A. Drew, Cochran, R. S. Clark, J. Tenry, L. Rosenberg, W. Compton, Bernhard, W. L. Crockett and Concord. D. J. Lacey, D.D.G.P., installed the following officers during the evening: William Welch, past president; George Barkley, first vice-president; H. J. Wilson, second vice-president; Marvin Brewen, third vice-president; Joe Robrecht, marshal; E. W. Hunt, financial secretary; F. R. Jones, treasurer; W. R. Sharkey, recording secretary; J. H. Wells, trustee; Raymond Ludden, inside sentinel. George P. Upham assisted as grand marshal. A banquet followed the meeting, at which Grand Trustee James F. Hoey presided as toastmaster, and Mr. Snyder made an enthusiastic address. During the evening William Welch, retiring president, was the recipient of a handsome emblematic jewel.

Rapidly Forging Ahead.

Suisun—August 4th was another link added to the chain of interesting meetings of Solano Parlor, No. 39, which is rapidly forging ahead. Several candidates will be initiated in September. The Parlor has a committee working hard to put a good float in the parade in Vallejo, Admission Day.

August 11th, quite a large delegation from Solano Parlor went to Vallejo and witnessed the joint installation of N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. The ceremonies were very impressive, and everyone tripped the light fantastic until early morn. The Native Sons ceremonies were conducted by D.D.G.P. John J. McCarron of Solano Parlor, while those of the Native Daughters were in charge of D.D.G.P. Ella Ingram of Eschol Parlor, Napa. The Suisun boys thought for awhile that they would have to send for help, as their chauffeur, "Painless Parker," came close to being kidnapped by those wily Native Daughters from Napa. Bro. Parker, by some hard pleading and after promising to extract their teeth free of charge (for demonstrating purposes), managed to break loose from their tight grasp. How popular Parker arrived home, and how fortunate the Solano Parlor delegation were, will be told in the next issue of The Grizzly Bear.

Third Annual Dove Stew.

Williams—August 5th, the newly-elected officers of Williams Parlor, No. 164, were installed by D.D. G. P. R. W. Camper, as follows: Ben Peters, president; H. Crutcher, first vice-president; Paul Franke, second vice-president; Otto Miller, third vice-president; B. L. Touch, financial secretary; Elmer Holdson, treasurer; Frank Wallace, marshal; Hubert Vann, inside sentinel; Max Vann, outside sentinel; Carl Franke, junior past president; A. B. Levy, trustee. Following these ceremonies, refreshments were served.

Half a hundred members of the Parlor and their friends celebrated the opening of the dove season with a dove stew on the Charley King ranch. This was the third annual event of this nature, and was even more successful than its predecessors. Automobile loads of the boys arrived early in the morning and hied to the hills; and long before cooking time, the doves began pouring into camp. B. L. Fouch, Ward Wallace and Frank Wallace, as a committee of arrangements, pitched the camp under the big oak trees in front of the King place, and soon had everything in readiness. Alfred Woods and Otto Miller, officiated as a committee to invite the Pioneers, many of whom responded and passed the time before dinner in sociability.

The dinner signal was sounded at a little after half past one, and the entire company seated themselves at a table, improvised from planks and hayracks, and the feed was on. Clay Welch, who has the reputation of being able to make a better dove stew than any other man in California—and sustained his reputation upon this occasion—presided as chef. Frank Wallace as assistant cook, and Alfred Woods and Ward Wallace as flunkies were kept exceedingly busy serving the crowd. Serving? Why, it didn't take those men more than about five minutes to clear off a plate and come back for more. There were an even 200 doves in that stew to start with, but you could count on your fingers all there were left when the crowd got to the watermelon stage in their operations. But they had enough. Some of them had more than they ought to have eaten, but no reports have been received of any evil effects of the feed. Yes, it was a success. Everybody had a good time, and those who went as guests of the Sons feel that they owe a vote of thanks for a specially good time.

Those present were: From Williams Parlor—Ben Peters, Alfred Woods, Ward Wallace, Carl Franke, Robert Hoy, Harry Crutcher, Jean Myers, Otto Rippon, Fremont Retterath, Warren Tallman, L. Pearson, Max Vann, Herbert Vann, H. W. Manor, P. Franke, R. W. Camper, B. Davis, B. L. Fouch, George Simmons, Ed Giblin, Elmer Holdson, W. F. Wallace, C. C. Welch, W. O. Pearson, H. C. Stovall and Sanford Duncan. Guests—Joe Hoskins, J. T. Levy, Louis Levy, T. Charles, H. D. Lynch, Henry Holdson, Joe Partain, Tim Vann, L. Manor, A.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

CHANGE OF STYLE IN fashion development calls for a fabric suited to its expression, and so we find that, where there is variation in one branch of the sartorial world, a corresponding alteration is pretty sure to take place in the others.

Sometimes a fabric vogue is the cause of the revival of some particular and appropriate fashion suited to its special manipulation; again, and this more often the case, the fashion calls out the expression of its characteristics, or which has been associated with its use in some former fashion period.

With the crinoline styles of this spring, we saw a revival of those quaint, old-fashioned, sprigged and striped taffeta designs taken from the 1860 styles when, in the heyday of hoop skirts, women attained enormous dimensions but were restricted to small and dainty fabric patterns.

Fashions to be More European.

It would seem, from the fashion changes now taking place, that inspiration was about to turn from the Persian, East Indian and other Oriental forms of dress to the more European types, and that the quaint costume of the nineteenth century, as exemplified in the full-skirted polonaise and redingote, is to be adapted for modern usage.

The Russian influence is still strong, and such types as the long Russian tunic will certainly continue into the late fall, if not through the entire winter.

To conform with these tendencies in fashion, we would expect the fall to show a lessening interest in the gay figured and colored textile patterns of the East, and a return to the plain tones and solid colors of such materials as cashmere, gaherdine, broadcloth and corded silk.

Increased Yardage Required.

This expectation is confirmed by the new fall colors, which show a strong inclination toward dark hues in subdued tones; plain fabrics rather than mixtures with bright tones, and fancy effects used as embellishments rather than for entire garments.

Another reason for the use of plain fabrics will be the increased yardage, many of the dresses now being sent over from the other side requiring as much as ten yards of double-width silk. In those models, besides silk, such fabrics are used as silk serge, chiffon, broadcloth, gaherdine, and various fancy weaves in woolen and worsted fabrics.

A new idea noted is the use of black satin in combination with a colored cloth. An imported model shows a dark green worsted fabric used for the skirt and coat of a three-piece costume for fall.

Combination Shows Style Tendency.

The skirt is made with a very long Russian tunic of the cloth, showing a narrow underskirt of the black satin. The bodice, of black satin, is long in line and of a surplice cut, tying in back in a low bow. The sleeves are long and of black satin, tightly fitted, and finished with a gauntlet cuff.

Still another combination which shows the style tendency for fall is that of heavy-weight silk cashmere with velvet. The use of cashmere for dressy afternoon toilettes is assured.

Silk velours, as well as wool velours of fine qualities in solid colors, will be leading fabrics for the fall costume, and in heavier weights for outer garments and street wear.

Black Will Be in Vogue.

Tailored coat suits and cape suits of black velvet are being shown for fall wearing, and point toward the coming vogue of both black and of pile fabrics. These suits are somewhat full in style, and are made with long tunics and coat skirts which fall in heavy folds, with deep, sash-like belts that wrap the figure like the high girdles of redingote. The velvet edges are finished with a binding of black silk braid.

Still another very stunning velvet costume shows the continued interest in black and white. In this, white silk velvet was used for the short-skirted costume, made on simple, long-waisted lines, while with it was to be worn a surplice cape of black caracul, with high rolling collar and muff of the same.

Printed Plushes and Velvets to Be Used.

White velour is combined with a colored moire or satin fabric in some very stunning costumes. The velvety velour is used as a fancy jacket and tunic, with the colored moire forming a narrow underskirt and used as huttons or pipings on the velour.

A most striking costume of this sort was one of white velour, green moire and black fur, the latter forming a high collar and high cuffs, with a large muff to match.

Some lovely printed velvets and plushes are also seen, where the colors are printed below the long nap, giving a silvery appearance when the foundation color is white or of a pale tint. These printed plushes and velvets will also be largely used for hat crowns in the early fall millinery.

Velveteens and Corduroys on Fashionable List.

Many fur fabrics, which are very good imitations of expensive short-haired furs, such as baby lamb, astrachan and caracul, are offered and will undoubtedly find a ready market.

Velveteens and corduroys are also on the fashionable list of fabrics for 1915. The newest designs in these materials include not only the plain color, but those which have an unobtrusive stripe in contrasting color and are designed for tailor suits and coats as well as for trimming purposes.

Some Early Novelties.

Among the first novelties we notice this month are the new high Spanish back combs, which have come into favor following the vogue of the high hairdressing. These combs are suggestive, in shape and size, of those old-fashioned combs of real tortoise shell worn by our stately ancestors in quaint old daguerreotypes, and are of shell, real or otherwise, celluloid, or of a transparent composition, with jewel settings or plain.

Some are very high, and are worn upright at the back of the hair. Others are of fancy shape, and are being placed at a smart angle at one side of the knot of hair. Prettiest among this variety are those of fan shaped shell, with an open filigree work which gives a decided Japanese charm to the new high coiffure.

Colored Hair Ornaments Popular.

Colored hair combs, pins and hair ornaments, set with jewels in contrasting colors, are seen in many varieties, and are meeting with marked success this season. The newest is the pale shade, called demi-blonde. These affairs are lovely with a blonde head, but should not be worn by a dark lassie. For her, are some equally charming combs of the high Spanish type of lattice open work design, in imitation silver, set in brilliants.

Black and white jewelry has been introduced the past month, to keep pace with the great fad of white and black, and white. Some lovely lavallieres and necklaces are formed from a combination of jet and crystal, as well as onyx and crystal.

Bright Colors in Hosiery.

The liking for bright touches of color in the summer wardrobe is brought out by the many styles of fine silk and lisle hosiery on display. Silk hose, ranging from fifty cents to a dollar and a half, and in all colorings known to the eye of man, are being freely purchased.

Green silk hose, worn with an otherwise all-white costume, with the addition of a bright parasol of the same shade, is a favorite. Purple of a deep and royal hue is also very much liked, while such colors as cerise, mulberry, Copenhagen and gray are selected.

With these gay colored hose are worn white colonial pumps of the new style patent-leather slippers. Black-and-white has been spoken of before as much favored this season in footwear, both in shoes and hosiery.

Handkerchiefs Partake of Brightness.

Some new stockings of Italian silk are printed in diamond-like checks, and are designed for sports and for those who have a leaning toward the gay and hizarre in dress.

White silk and fine white lislethread stockings or an open-work, lacy stripe, similar to those worn some years ago, are being revived this season. They come in the soft, light, evening shades.

Handkerchiefs, too, partake of the general air of brightness. Roman stripes have invaded this realm. Not only the borders, but the entire handkerchief, is in similar colorings. The up-to-date girl, you know, has mannish vest pockets in her vest, and in her pique girdle.

Headgear in White.

All-white hats, on the narrow sailor order, have become the rage. These hats are of fine straw, or of satin, with crowns of velvet or plush, and are worn slanted, very much to one side, and have for trimming all-white satin or silk flowers, such as the puppy or the rose, with leaves of the same material.

White wings, white feathers, or white ribbons, are also used. A close favorite with the all-white sailor is the plain black, and it is trimmed with windy feathers and ribbon.

Old-Fashion Frills Return.

Some very dainty and tiny little French bouquets for summer evening wear have old-fashioned lace or paper frills around them, the paper frills being in lacy patterns and standing out stiffly around the small cluster of posies.

Silver and gold lace are similarly used, as well as fine valenciennes lace. These laces are shirred around the small bouquet as a center.

FALL FASHION SHOW.

Los Angeles' United Fashion Show for Fall will open September 24th, according to the secretary of the Retail Dry Goods Association. Members of the Fashion Show committee have purposely made the date of the show late in the month, so that there may be an assured stability about the styles to be shown. Recognizing the importance of this fact, buyers from neighboring towns will, many of them, come to Los Angeles to complete their stocks, it is believed.

While the European war has brought about unsettled conditions in the fashion world, it is believed it will force upon American artisans and manufacturers the necessity of producing fabrics, in colors and qualities, fit for the most exquisite purposes.

REVIVING THE OLD DAYS

TO RAISE GRAND PARLOR FUNDS.

San Francisco—The local committee of Native Sons of the Golden West having in charge the arrangements for the proper entertainment of the delegates to the Grand Parlor which will meet here next April, have engaged Pavilion Rink for the latter part of November.

For a week there will be a revival of the pioneer mining days in the form of a mining camp in the days of '49. There will be shown placer mining with pan and rocker, washing pay dirt in primitive sluice boxes, a country store, postoffice, and all the features that marked the old-time habitations, customs and attire. More than 200 members of the Order will take part in the affair.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT THE STATE'S DEVELOPMENT.

529 tons, according to the report of the California Walnut Growers' Association. The quality of the nuts is reported excellent and there will be an early harvest.

The fresh table-grape crop of California vineyards is estimated this year at 8,000 carloads, or 1,600 earloads greater than that of 1913.

The world's record raisin shipment, sixty earloads, comprising one train of 1,250 tons net weight, valued at a sum approximated at $150,000, left Fresno recently. The shipment totals 3,000,000 packages of the fruit. Most of it is seeded and is the residue of the 1913 crop.

With the year a little more than half gone, in deciduous fruits and vegetables an increase of more than 4,000 cars has been set, and the citrus shipments for the year ending June 30th were 40,000 cars, a gain of fully 5,000 over those of 1913.

A train of freight cars containing "perishables" left the State this month with twenty-eight cars of oranges holding 11,200 boxes—one and three-quarter million pieces of fruit. Eight cars of lemons held over 2,700 boxes—more than a million pieces of fruit. The citrus shipments, therefore, totaled more than two and three-quarter millions of oranges and lemons, and they weighed a million and a quarter pounds packed.

Imperial Valley has this year ginned at Calexico the earliest bale of cotton ever produced in the United States. The cotton was grown as the third crop on the same stalks. The bale weighed 535 pounds, lint, and the grower refused a bid of 35 cents a pound for it. The cotton acreage is much larger than in 1913, being 35,000 acres in 1914, against 14,000 acres in 1913. The California cotton crop condition was given as perfect, or 100, in the United States Government reports for June.

The harvesting of the first crop of tobacco ever grown in Northern California on a commercial scale has started on a plantation of sixteen acres directly across the Feather River from Oroville. Over 150,000 plants of the Arabian variety, set out only last May, have now reached maturity, and the leaves are ready to be cured. It is expected that over 100,000 pounds will be harvested, and that the little plantation will net its owners between $10,000 and $12,000.

California wine was served for the first time in history recently at the banquet given to the King and Queen of England by the corporation of Glasgow.

Seventy-three thousand dollars was paid to dairymen of Fresno County for June butter fat. This amount is slightly in advance of that for May, the price per pound remaining the same, however. Increased production is the cause for a larger check.

Marking the inception of another new industry, the San Joaquin Valley Date Association has been organized. The movement has for its purpose the control by lease or purchase of the several thousand acres of light sand and alkali soils in Fresno, Tulare, Kings and Kern Counties, now undeveloped and well adapted for the production of dates. It is confidently predicted that the new industry will add materially to the productive wealth of the counties in which it is proposed to operate.

WORLD'S BEST FRUIT TREE.

According to the "Pacific Coast Packer," the most valuable fruit tree in the world is on a ranch owned by H. A. Woodworth of Whittier, California. It is a six-year-old alligator pear tree and last year made its owner $3,206. Fifteen hundred dollars of the money came from the sale of the pears at $6 a dozen, and the remainder from the sale of budwood. The sale of buds at 10 cents apiece last year was so great that Mr. Woodworth raised his price to 22 cents in order to avoid having to ruin the tree to satisfy budwood hunters. The tree is insured against wind and fire with Lloyd's of London for $30,000 and has a fence thirty feet high built around it to keep out miscreants.

SULPHURING GOOD FOR GRAPES.

Experienced vineyardists are beginning to sulphur their grape vines. Records show that the men who get the largest returns each year from their grapes are those who sulphur annually, whether any mildew shows in their vineyards or not. Power machines have been introduced here and apparently give much better results and at a saving in labor and sulphur over the old way of sulphuring by hand.—Kerman News.

LAND BY THE SUNSET SEA

Yet this land of golden promise grew and prospered, till where stood

Huts and cabins in the clearings made through forest land and wood

Cities rose, in size and power, soon to take their stand beside Elder sisters o'er the ocean, over on the eastern side.

Now, throughout our glorious nation she can claim an honored place;

Sister states, throughout the Union, know and recognize her face.

She can call each elder "sister," claim a younger kindred's stand,

In the Union, proud and happy, can this glorious "Sunset Land."

We, her sons, are proud to call her "Mother"—proud to muster here,

On her wedding day. Oh, Mother! turn to us thy listening ear;

Hear the praises that thy children o'er thy head will grateful sing.

Tutu thy loving eyes upon us, while thy wedding bells shall ring.

Though the ocean wild shall part us, though the wide world lay between,
Still our hearts shall mock at distance; still we'll keep thy memory green.
Still thy love will be our mentor, though the ceaseless ages roll, Mother, sacred, sacred Mother! Alma Mater of our soul!

—ELLA FERRE ("Hannah B. Gage").

(The above was recited many years ago in San Francisco at an Admission Day celebration, and was published, with other of the authoress' works, in San Francisco over sixteen years ago by Philip I. Figel, member of Bay City Parlor, N. S. G. W., and reprinted here by his permission.—Editor.)

SUNDAY SERMONS.

Go to the fields and rocky hills
And listen to the preaching rills
Resound in the ambient air
Devoid of sorrow, grief and care.

Go to the flowers and forest trees
And hear the fitting birds and bees
Sounding their songs of mystic glee
Unvarnished by hypocrisy.

Go to the rivers and the sea
That splash and wave eternally
Above the mortals who have fled
Singing a requiem to their dead.

Go to the lofty mounts of snow
At vespers in the sunset glow
And hear the glaciers crack and roar
Reverberating evermore.

Go kneel beneath the rising sun
Or magic moon when day is gone
And hear the singing of the stars
In chorus round the fields of Mars.

In these celestial isles of joy
We find the truth without alloy
Where sordid man though wise and fine
Cannot interpret the Divine!

OLD AND NEW CALIFORNIA IN CAPITOL.

The old fresco work on the walls of the rotunda of the State Capitol at Sacramento has been scraped in preparation for the work of the noted artist, Matthews, who will paint landscapes of typical California scenes on the walls of the ground floor.

The artistry will depict the California of early days and the California of today. There will be plain scenes with "prairie schooners," and perhaps near by will be pictures of modern ranches and street scenes of the principal cities.

How do you like State Highway Construction?

Cheap roads!

Enormous cost of maintenance!

Inadequate to carry the heavy traffic through farming communities and not suitable for heavy trucks!

Built for light touring cars.

In addition, the Commission issues, at State expense, a 20-page monthly "Bulletin," at a cost of approximately $5,000 per year, using good money that should go into GOOD ROADS rather than to boost the Commissioners, and containing:

Pictures of beautiful scenery, prosaic bridges, toiling men and manipulating concrete machinery!

Reconnoitering Commissioners photographed on a rock in the middle of a stream!

Concrete slabs!

Workmen's camps!

All these things may be beautiful, but do they build roads?

No, Messrs. Commissioners!

Cut out your press agent "stuff," at the expense of the people.

Your roads, if they were properly built, would be your monuments, and you cannot bolster up poor roads by issuing expensive literature commending them.

CALIFORNIA ROMANTIC AND RESOURCEFUL

(A Review by the Editor, CLARENCE M. HUNT, of a Splendid Book That Seeks to Create Interest in California History.)

UNDER THE TITLE, "CALIFORNIA Romantic and Resourceful," Judge John F. Davis of San Francisco, Grand First Vice-president of the Native Sons of the Golden West, makes, in book form, an eloquent plea for the collection of early California historical data, so that authentic works pertaining to our State's history may be published, both to forever preserve that history and to aid in its teaching in our public schools.

Judge Davis has long been an enthusiastic advocate for the collection, preservation and diffusion of information relating to Pacific Coast History, and it was mainly through his efforts that the Native Sons of the Golden West, in 1910, decided to yearly appropriate $3,000 for the maintenance of Traveling Fellowships in Pacific Coast History at the University of California.

In the preface to "California Romantic and Resourceful" the author says: "This plea is an arrow shot into the air." It is the result of addresses delivered at Colton Hall, Monterey, on Admission Day, 1908, and before the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco on April 12, 1913, which have been amplified and revised, and certain statistics contained in them have been brought down to the end of 1913.

"In this form, they go forth to a larger audience, in the earnest hope that they may meet a kind reception, and somewhere find a generous friend"—a citizen looking for an opportunity to do something worth while, who would endow fellowships in Pacific Coast history at the State's University. "The fruit of such an endowment," says Judge Davis, later on in his book, "may not be as enduring as a noble campanile, or an incomparable Greek theater, yet, in a sense, it will be more lasting than either, for facts become history, and history survives, when campaniles fall and Greek theaters are ground to powder."

"California Romantic and Resourceful" calls attention to three incidents in California's history, "ignoring all the rest, to enforce the point of its uniqueness, its variety, its novelty, its importance, as entitling it to its proper proportionate place in the history of the Nation." These are the mission period, the gold-mining era, and the unique method California devised of getting into the Union. After listening to Judge Davis, who is thoroughly conversant with California history, the reader will be impressed with two facts—how little he (in most cases) knows of California's history, and the necessity for having the knowledge of that history widely diffused.

The Missions.

"Fortunately," says the author, referring to the mission period, "the annals of these missions, which ultimately extended from San Diego to beyond Sonoma—stepping stones of civilization on this coast—are complete, and their simple disinterestedness and directness sound like a tale from Acready."

"And in a sense, the work of these missions is not dead—their very ruins still preach the lessons of service and of sacrifice. As the fishermen off the coast of Brittany tell the legend that at the evening hour, as their boats pass over the vanished

We are now about to land on the territory of Mexico with whom the U. States is at war. To strike their flag and hoist our own in place of it, is our duty. It is not only our duty to take California, but to preserve it afterwards as a part of the U. States, at all hazards, to accomplish this it is of the first importance to cultivate the good opinion of the inhabitants, and reconcile them to the change.

We know how to take care of those who oppose us, but it is the peaceful and unoffending inhabitants whom we must reconcile. I scarcely consider it necessary for me to caution American Seamen and Marines against the detestable crime of plundering and maltreating unoffending inhabitants.

That no one may misunderstand his duty, the following Regulations must be strictly adhered to, as no violation can hope to escape the severest punishment:

1st On landing no man is to leave the shore until the Commanding Officer gives the order to March.

2nd No gun is to be fired, or other act of hostility committed without express orders from the Officer commanding the party.

3rd The Officers and Boat Keepers will keep their respective Boats as close to the shore as they will safely float taking care they do not lay aground and remain in them prepared to defend themselves against attack, and attentively watch for signals from the ships as well as from the party on shore.

4th No man is to quit the ranks, or to enter any house for any pretence whatever, without express orders from an Officer. Let every man avoid insult or offence to any unoffending inhabitant, and especially avoid that eternal disgrace which would be attached to our names and our country's name, by indignity offered to a single female, even let her standing be however low it may.

5th Plunder of every kind is strictly forbidden, not only does the plundering of the smallest article from a prize forfeit all claim to prize money, but the offender must expect to be severely punished.

6th Finally, let me entreat you, one and all, not to tarnish our hope of bright success by any act that we shall be ashamed to acknowledge before God and our Country.

JOHN D. SLOAT,
Commander-in-Chief of the U. S. Naval Force in the Pacific Ocean.

(Note—The original Proclamation of Commodore Sloat is preserved in Golden Gate Park Museum, San Francisco, and an illustration of it appears in "California Romantic and Resourceful." This is the proclamation which Judge Davis well says should be "committed to memory, as a part of his education, by every schoolboy in California." We would go even further, and suggest that it should be committed to memory by every male resident, young and old, of the State.—Editor.)

Atlantis, they can still hear the sounds of its activity at the bottom of the sea, so every Californian, as he turns the pages of the early history of his State, feels at times that he can hear the echo of the Angelus bells of the missions, and amid the din of the money-madness of these later days, can find a response in 'the better angels of his nature'."

The Mining Period.

"In swift contrast to this idyllic scene (the mission period), which is shared with us by few other sections of this country, stands the history of a period where for nearly two years this State was without authority of American civil law, and where, in practice, the only authority was such as sprang from the instinct of self-preservation. * * * All the energetic and daring, all the physically sound of all ages, seemed bent on reaching the new El Dorado. * * * And the camps and gulches and mines of California witnessed a social and political phenomenon unique in the history of the world—the spirit and romance of which have been immortalized in the pages of Bret Harte."

Then follows an exhaustive account of the lack of adequate laws regarding the acquirement of public lands in California, following the taking over of the country by the United States from Mexico.

California's Admission Into the Union.

Speaking of the debates in Congress anent the admission of California, Judge Davis says: "The contest was an inspiring one, and a reading of the Congressional Record covering the period makes a Californian's blood tingle with the intensity of it all."

Referring to the convention which met at Colton Hall, Monterey, September 1, 1849, to form a government for California (prior to her admission as a State by the Federal Government), we are told that "The debates of that convention should be familiar to every citizen of this State. No Californian should be unfamiliar with the great debate on what was to constitute the eastern boundary of the State of California, a debate accompanied by an intensity of feeling which in the end almost wrecked the convention. The dramatic scenes wrought by the patriotism that saved the wrecking of the convention stand out in bold relief."

Following an account of the foundation of the State Government, election of officers (including two United States Senators), and the resignation of General Bennett Riley as the Military Governor of California, we are advised that "The brilliant audacity of California's method of admission into the Union stands without parallel in the history of the Nation. Outside of the original thirteen colonies, she was the only state carved out of the national domain which was admitted into the Union without a previous enabling act or territorial apprenticeship. * * *

"With full right, then, did California, by express resolution spreading the explanation upon the minutes of her constitutional convention, avowedly place upon her great seal her Minerva—her 'robed goddess-in-arms'—not as the goddess of wisdom, not as the goddess of war, but to signify that as Minerva was not horn, but sprang full-armed from the brain of Jupiter, so California, without territorial childhood, sprang full-grown into the sisterhood of states."

ESTABLISHMENT SISTERS CHARITY IN LOS ANGELES

Miss Petra Palanconi, a native of California, born of Pioneer parents, in 1912 made a painting in oil, from an old photograph, of the Puehlo de Nuestra Senora La Reina de Los Angeles, as it appeared in 1840. The puehlo was founded in September, 1781. San Gahriel Mission was then the capital of the state of Alta California. The order to create the puehlo was signed by Hon. Felipe de Neve, governor from 1774 to 1782 under Spanish rule.

Miss Palanconi graduated from the Sisters of Charity Convent, where she first attended school, with high honors, receiving special credits in four languages—American, Spanish, French and Italian—as well as in drawing and painting. To the latter she was more than devout, and in time gained her ambition as an artist. In 1897, completing her studies at the Los Angeles High School, she traveled in foreign countries, where she visited the great museums, giving special attention to the works of ancient artists. Thus she accomplished her desire to gain knowledge in art.

Miss Palanconi has kindly supplied The Grizzly Bear with the original photograph, furnished details regarding the establishment of the Sisters of Charity, who were her first teachers, in Los Angeles, and also an account of her antecedents, who were among the earliest California Pioneers. The first published history of the Sisters of Charity in Los Angeles appeared in a Spanish paper, "El Clamor Publico," edited by Hon. F. P. Ramirez, under date of December 22, 1855, and to Charles J. Prudhomme, The Grizzly Bear is indebted for the translation of this information into English.

It is really through the efforts of Mr. Prudhomme, who has devoted much time to collecting early California historical data and relics for the museum of Ramona Parlor, N.S.G.W., that The Grizzly Bear is enabled, herewith, to present this old-time picture and the accompanying historical data, for, in the course of his never-ceasing labors in behalf of the Ramona collection (which is now housed in the county museum at Exposition Park, Los Angeles), he secured these from Miss Palanconi.—Editor.

LOS ANGELES, AS IT APPEARED IN 1840.

N ASSEMBLAGE OF CITIZENS OF Los Angeles was held at the Parochial Church in that city in December, 1855, in conformity with a call issued by Rt. Rev. Bishop Tadeo Amat, Bishop of Monterey, with the object of considering the possibility of establishing in Los Angeles the Sisters of Charity. The citizens responded.

After the Bishop had manifested the object of said meeting, Abel Stearns was chosen president, and John G. Downey secretary. A committee was authorized to prepare resolutions having for their object the carrying out of the purpose of the meeting, and the following were selected: Hon. Benjamin Hayes, Hon. Thomas Foster, Hon. E. Drown, Ahel Stearns, Luis Vignes, John G. Downey, Don Ygnacio del Valle, Don Antonio F. Coronel and Don M. Requena.

Having resolved to open a subscription list to guarantee funds, and to place them at the disposition of the Sisters of Charity, the same to be applied to the sustenance of their institute, Don Manuel Requena was named as treasurer and collector, and was directed to co-operate with Bishop Amat in everything relating to the establishment of said Sisters of Charity.

A commission was soon formed to procure a house and land, conveniently located for the permanent establishment of the Sisters of Charity. A report published in "El Clamor Publico," January 12, 1856, under the heading, "Sisters of Charity Arrived," says:

"Six Sisters of Charity arrived in this city last Saturday, January 5, 1856. Their names are as follows: Sisters Maria Scholastica, Maria Corzina, Ana, Clara, Francisca, and Angela. Three are from the United States, and three from Spain, consequently several languages will be taught attentively in the school.

"The Sisters were received by a committee named at the meeting organized under the protection of the Appellation Rt. Rev. Tadeo Amat. Said committee will proceed as soon as possible to adopt a place as their residence.

"It was decided to purchase the house and orchard owned by B. D. Wilson for $8,000. This place was found most convenient, being close to the church and city, where there was the greatest number of children. Furthermore, the place contained a grand orchard, that will contribute to the support of the school.

"Within a few days this establishment will be opened with the denomination: 'Charitable Institution of Los Angeles.' Though in this city it has been commenced, it is expected that all neighboring people who are able will, proportionally, help this institution. It will serve as an example to the people, in future, to establish similar institutions in the jurisdiction of other puehlos, such as San Diego and Santa Barbara."

On Saturday, June 7, 1856, Hon. F. P. Ramirez, editor of "El Clamor Publico," visited the Sisters of Charity school, and found it in excellent condition, there being 120 children in attendance.

Y GREAT GRANDFATHER, SR. Cornelio Ahila, was born in 1740 at La Villa del Fuerte, Sonora, Mexico. He received his education with the padre missionaries. As he grew to manhood, he was one who was to be trusted.

In 1775 he received his appointment as Majordomo General, and placed in charge of quite a large party of men. In his care were large hands of cattle and horses, to be distributed—so many of each—at every mission in Alta California. The journey was tedious, on account of slow traveling. To save the stock, the vacqueros took turns about, some looking ahead for the watering places, others caring for the stock, and the remainder protecting them from the hostile Indians.

MISS PETRA PALANCONI.

MRS. ISABELLE TONINI,
Born in Los Angeles in 1841.

They eventually arrived safe at Alta California. Their first stop was at San Diego Mission, and then followed a visit to each of the several missions as far north as Sonoma. Sr. Don Cornelio Abila having fulfilled his errand, returned to his headquarters.

In 1784 he again left the place of his nativity, with the title of captain of a small party of emigrants who purposed to colonize at Alta California. Taking a vessel at Topolobampo Bay en route to Mulege, on the Gulf of California, he proceeded on the journey with packed mules and burros, going due north, and traveling by trails over valleys and mountains.

Arriving at the Mission of San Ygnacio, here his son, Francisco Abila, was born, in 1785. Again proceeding on his journey, he went due north, passing by the missions San Borje, San Telmo, San Vicente, Santo Tomas, Guadalupe, and arrived at San Diego Mission the first part of 1786. On this trip, he also was fulfilling another errand entrusted to him by the padres: It was a cargo of young trees, such as fig, pomegranate, pear, grape cuttings, etc., to be delivered at the Mission San Gabriel.

Having fulfilled his errand, he located at the Pueblo de Los Angeles, where he built the first adobe mansion on a site bounded on the west by North Broadway, on the north by College street, on the east by San Fernando street, and on the south by Alpine street. It was erected on the bluff of the Rio de La Prosuncula, now known as Los Angeles River. In those old days, the river was where Alameda street now is. When this adobe mansion was built, in 1786, there were small adobe and tule houses, not exceeding fifteen in all. Sr. Cornelio Abila, soon after he was settled, followed stockraising and farming, and was one of the leading caballeros of the county.

My great-grandfather on Ramirez' side, Sr. Don Francisco Ramirez, was born in 1759 at Tepic, Mexico. By trade, he was a carpenter. In his youth, he left his home, went to Sonora, and for several years resided at the Pueblo de Banamiche, on the Sonora River. Here he married Senorita Rosa Quijada, one of the belles of a prominent family, and whose father was an officer under the Spanish crown.

In 1794 he joined an emigrant party for Alta California. The party having no mishaps on the road, they arrived safe, and he, with his family, settled at Santa Barbara Mission. His family consisted of one boy and four girls. This son is my grandfather, Senor Juan M. Ramirez, born in 1801 at Santa Barbara Mission. His grandparents, Sra. and Sr. Antonio Ygnacio Abila, adopted him, and he was looked upon as one of their children. He remained in their care until twenty years of age, when he went into business for himself as a stock-raiser, agriculturist and winemaker.

In 1828 he built his adobe residence, which, in 1912, was in fairly good condition for its age. In 1830 he married Senorita Petra Abila, daughter of Sr. Francisco and Sra. Margarita Verduga de Abila. A sketch of his children can be found on page 612, Native Sons' Records, at Exposition Park Museum, Los Angeles. My grandfather, Juan M. Ramirez, died in 1866, and my grandmother, Sra. Petra Abila de Ramirez, in 1876.

My father, Antonio Palanconi, is a native of Italy. He came to this coast on an Italian man-of-war, arriving at San Pedro in 1857, when he was twenty years of age. Landing on strange soil, he was befriended by A. M. Hazard, who came to Los Angeles in 1852. With my father were three other countrymen, one, Miguel Micaroli. The other two departed soon after arrival here. Mr. Micaroli, desiring to adventure in the wilds of Arizona, started, and arrived at Campo Peral. There he engaged in mining, but made a failure. So, being discouraged, he started on foot for California, in July, 1862. On the second day, traveling through the hot sun, he died of thirst, and his body was found by the side of the road.

My mother, then Miss Isabel Ramirez, was born April 5, 1841, at Los Angeles. On March 4, 1866, she married Antonio Palanconi. Of this wedding, eight children were born, the living being: Lorenzo A. Palanconi, born December 25, 1866; Mrs. Honorene S. Palanconi-Valla, born April 8, 1870; Miss Petra E. A. Palanconi, born May 5, 1876.

My father dealt in brandy and wines, and he died May 14, 1879. My mother remained a widow until June 13, 1881, when she was married to G. Tononi. Of this wedding, two children were born, Mrs. Isabel J. Tonini-Hanifan, born September 18, 1883, being the surviving one. Mr. Tonini died January 2, 1892.

The niftiest California souvenir ever offered is a reproduction, in metal, of El Camino Real signpost. You'll want one; so will your friends, especially in the East. How can you get one? See back cover, this issue.—(Advertisement.)

WHAT WORK MORE GLORIOUS?

(By DR. EVA R. BUSSENIUS, Secretary Los Angeles N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Joint Committee on Homeless Children.)

HEY SERVE GOD WELL WHO serve His creatures."

Those splendid men and women who launched the noble craft "Home-Finder" have safely borne many a little storm-tossed life into a harbor of protection and rest, where love and peace reign, and where tender arms enfold.

Those big, generous minds which conceived so wonderful a work for the Native Sons and Native Daughters to do, felt deeply the sacredness of the care of the little one—the baby, than whom there is nothing more helpless; of the child—the boy, for whose delight were intended the fields and the mountains with their hidden wonders, with a "real daddy" to show the way; and the girl, who does so need "mother" to help bear dolly's ills, and to further smooth the path for the little feet along the great highway; and then of the young man and the young woman, ready and prepared to future well-being of the parentless child and the childless "parent," with whom the committee be comes associated.

To date, ninety-six children have been placed in homes; forty-four have been relinquished to the committee, and twenty-one have been adopted. The work of investigating is carried on with much zeal, that the error of placing a child in the wrong home may not occur. Supervision of these homes meets, also, with the approval of the head secretary, Miss Mary E. Brusie, who, to the children, is "friend, indeed, with all a friend's best virtues shining bright." And this part of the general routine in the care of the little ones is attended to by the Daughters of the committee, though the Sons are, at all times, delighted to call upon "the babies," especially J. F. Lyon, the kindly chairman of the Los Angeles committee.

This Joint Committee, recently appointed, promises much on behalf of the homeless children's work, and is made up as follows: N.S.G.W.—Los Angeles Parlor, No. 45: Geo. A. Boden, A. L. Crontake his and her place and bear a just share of responsibility in the whole wonderful scheme of existence.

What more glorious work than this? What more noble, dignified and compensating than for these allied Orders to thus provide for "the least of all these?"

Who would forego the profound, abiding happiness that comes with the privilege of placing a child in the eager arms of a child-hungry man or woman, whose smiles of thanks are as a benediction, and whose words of gratitude sound like "a grand amen!"

As a small factor in the sum total of the magnificent achievements of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Central Committee on Homeless Children, the work of the Los Angeles Joint Committee has proceeded with a sureness that augurs well for the

If but half of the good accomplished were told, the doubt in the mind of the skeptic which questions the wisdom of these State organizations carrying on such a work would be dissipated; and it would be overwhelmingly conceded that children are the best investment that can be made for the progress of any city, state or nation—or, fraternal society.

CALIFORNIANS IN WASHINGTON CELEBRATE ADMISSION DAY.

The sixty-fourth anniversary of the admission of California into the Federal Union was celebrated the night of September 9th at Washington, D.C., by the Californians in that section at the Chamber of Commerce. The celebration was held under the auspices of the California State Association.

The proceedings opened with a stirring address by President M. F. O'Donoghue, in which the meaning of Admission Day was discussed. He was followed by Joseph J. O'Brien, the secretary of the association, who delivered an address on the spirit and plan of the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Frank H. Poston delivered an address on the railroad situation, expressing the belief held by railroad people that the European war would induce a larger volume of American travel, from the states and from South America, and larger Oriental travel, owing to the closing down of foreign resorts. Mrs. C. L. Macauley recited Byron's "Waterloo" and an amusing sketch. Congressman John I. Nolan of San Francisco closed with an elaborate and vigorous address on the meaning of Admission Day and the work of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

MY CREED.

My living creed from hour to hour
Is to be kind in sun and shower
And help the weak in field or bower,
Still standing like a granite tower.

My soul-lit creed is doing good
In vale or mount or tangled wood,
And cheering everyone I could
That helps my human brotherhood.

My creed upon this sinning sod,
While I remain to plan and plod
And pass beneath the chastening rod,
Is to believe in truth and God.

HANGTOWN OF HISTORIC FAME

(Prepared Expressly for The Grizzly Bear by FRANCES FAIRCHILD, Placerville, California.)

AMONG THE MINING TOWNS OF California in 1848, "Hangtown," above all others, presented the most striking illustration of vicissitudes and evolution; it was the first to adopt the lynch-law tribunal for the speedy punishment of murderers and thieves. Its history marked an epoch which began in El Dorado County—one of the original, largest and richest of the twenty-seven counties into which the State was divided. Stirring events and scenes were enacted that not only made an impress on the minds of its inhabitants but upon the history of the world.

In the autumn of the same year, two men who had farmed on the Cosumnes River and later worked on Sutter's saw-mill at Coloma under the direction of James W. Marshall, conceived the idea of "lighting out" to try their "luck" in the gold fields further on. These men had lived in Salt Lake City, but left there several years before, during the Mexican War, with the Mormon battalion. While living in Coloma they had noted the cosy homes of the Wimmer family and others. The joys and delights of these people stirred up past memories of the sweethearts they had left far to the east—beyond the blue hills and the high peaks glistening with snow. Their ultimate object was to work their way back to Salt Lake, marry and return.

They had acquired quite a sum of money, as well as knowledge of obtaining gold dust by the crude method then in vogue. Among their effects, which were packed upon a mule, were a pick, shovel, pan, and a large iron spoon for "crevicing," as the miners called it. Toward nightfall of the first day they found themselves in a grassy flat among the hills which bordered on a ravine affording water for camping purposes. The first part of the journey was considered the most laborious, so they concluded to camp for the night, though they had gone but ten miles.

tent than panning. In their excitement and with fortunes in sight, they abandoned their proposed trip and began digging out the auriferous earth from the shallow spots and placing it on high ground in order to work it later by other methods when the heavy rains came. While engaged in doing this a number of valuable nuggets were found.

Being short of "grub," they were forced to return to Coloma and "lay in" a new supply. The large specimens and the quantity of gold dust exhibited "gave them away," and when they returned they were followed.

Times Were Flush.

Early in '49 the valleys were thronged with miners—tents and log cabins soon "cluster'd o'er the vale" and the place was known as "Dry Diggings." Claims were staked out all through the ravines and the men imagined the ground was "Thick inlaid with patines of fine gold," to be had almost for the picking up. "Dry Diggings" became the mecca for a great variety of mankind. Excitement was intense, and the population of the place increased so rapidly that it contained almost as many inhabitants as San Francisco; this gave El Dorado the distinction of being the banner county.

Situated as it was, not many miles from the dividing line of the Golden and the Silver States, it was a stage well placed upon which the thrilling pageant could take place. During an incredibly short period of time, hotels, dance-houses, saloons, bunk-houses, stores and every presumed necessity of a frontier mining "camp" had taken their respective places to complete the whole. The town, which had sprung up almost like a mushroom over night, passed through every grade of gambling and "hull-and-beer-baiting" notoriety.

Being on the great, main, immigrant trail leading into California through Fremont's Pass from the plains, via Carson Valley and the terminus of the "one-horse zigzagging roads" from the valley of the Sacramento, it became a place of large trade in immigrant stock and the principal mart of trade the little ditches leading from it were converted into "long toms"—the hose reminding one of immense, long, slimy sea-serpents.

"Times were flush." The ground was full of glittering dust and each one expected to "make his pile"—if not mining, then by other methods. There were gamblers galore, who considered themselves the aristocracy of the camp; they ran their monte and faro tables at the "Boomerang," "Trio Hall" and similar resorts, paying a good round sum per month for the privilege. Gambling being the most profitable, it was considered the most respectable business one could follow. These gaming tables were always filled by men who were willing to play with the fickle goddess and stake their last ounce of dust on the "hazard of the die." Sometimes pyramids of nuggets were placed on the table to excite the greed of the unwary. Straggling musicians were hired to play songs that were best known at home, but alas! they were songs of the siren. All had their "ups and downs." The sky at times would be overcast by lowering clouds, but even these were fringed with golden sunshine.

A Peep Inside the Miner's Home.

Gradually, tents gave way to log cabins that were built in the hollows and on the hillsides; some had floors—many had none, and furnishings were scanty. The surrounding hills were covered with bare stumps of gigantic pine trees, showing how freely the ax had been used, and to what extent and purpose was apparent in the town itself—the numerous log cabins scattered over the hills, the situation selected at the will and caprice of the owners and with a view to be near their "diggings," which were exceedingly rich.

After working hard all day the miners would go to their tents and cabins to prepare their evening meal. Let us take a peek and satisfy our curiosity. There stands Ned — by the side of a box, wetting up bread for supper. Up goes his hand, all covered with soft dough, a part of which, in his confusion, stuck in his long, black beard, a lump on his proboscis, and the rest fell back into the pan. Just as he put his hand into the bag to get some dry flour to rub off the dough from his hands, he stammeringly articulated, "Good gracious!" and over went the bread pan, bake kettle and box. On the hob over the campfire a kettle of pork and beans was steaming. Visitors were discomposing. Sometimes Ned would make "dampers," which was the New South Wales fashion of making bread, and afforded a change, besides.

"Perhaps the recipe would prove of interest," said Ned. "Mix a quantity of flour and water and work in a pinch or two of salt into the dough. Rake down the embers of a good hardwood fire. Place the dough in the hot ashes and smother in two or three inches of hot ashes. On top of this place a quantity of burning embers. A little practice will enable one to judge from the feel of the crust if the bread is done. This is as good when a week old as when fresh, as it contains sufficient moisture to be able to eat it. Bread made this way needs no small amount of recommendation; it is solid and heavy and a little of it goes a great way." The usual way of baking it was to place the dough in a frying pan and place it on end before the fire to roast. Steaks were plentiful and these were fried on a shovel, or broiled on an old iron hoop twisted in a serpentine form and laid on the coals. It was usually "off color," but it was nevertheless toothsome.

At bedtime they turned into their rough bunks on the side of the wall or rolled up in a blanket on the ground with their overalls for a pillow. At daybreak operations began once more. If one were lucky enough to possess a pillow or mattress, it was made of straw. The lodging-houses were fitted with bunks or boards fastened to the wall—one above another—in such fashion as to hold one fellow sleeper up from off the other. Gray blankets were used for covering, and although the house possessed but few, they served to cover a great many. No sooner did a lodger "turn in" and begin to snore, than his blanket was carefully removed and appropriated by the latest arrival. Some of the tents were furnished with home-made cots, which were made by driving forked sticks into the ground and placing on them two long poles to which a piece of heavy canvas had been nailed. The tents being but four feet high, it was not an uncommon sight, of mornings, to see the fellows crawl out either head or feet foremost.

Sunday, the Week's Busy Day.

Taking a stroll through town one could meet men from every walk of life—doctors, lawyers, judges, mechanics and bummers. Most of them had been accustomed to broadcloth and fine linen and the center of social life; but scenes had changed with

HANGTOWN IN 1849.

Taken from a daguerreotype owned by the late Mrs. Fowler, the first white woman in the town. This is the only known picture of '49. To the left, among the buildings and near the flag pole, is the gullows tree.

While one was preparing something to eat, curiosity impelled the other to do some prospecting along the banks of the stream. This he did by taking his sheath knife (a common implement carried by all at that time) and digging the "dirt" from the crevices of the rocks which had been washed clean by high water during the early rains. He had "gouged" but a short time when he found several pieces of gold as large as peas, and further explorations disclosed many more crevices "lousy with gold." The more they prospected the more they found, but owing to scarcity of water it was impossible to carry the work on to any greater exin every species of merchandise required by the increasing population.

On the banks of the main creek and the streams which emptied into it, men were engaged in digging the dirt from out the crevices of the rocks with their bowie-knives. There were men of all nationalities—the camp was alive. Amazing things were transpiring. The wrinkles on the face of the hillsides—the beds of the creeks and the fertile flats of the valleys showed confused heaps of dirt—were innumerable holes and piles of rock. The original course of "Hangtown Creek," so named by Captain C. M. Webber, became obliterated, and their mode of living and environment, and they presented a most striking picture in their mountain stronghold. Some were heavily bearded and fierce looking, armed with bowie-knives and pistols; they wore coarse check shirts—gray or red flannel—trousers fastened with a leather girdle and clucked into coarse boots that reached to the knees. Others were garbed in ornamental hunting shirts and gartered leggings, their long hair floating to the breeze, turbaned with an "Alabama silk" kerchief. Still others wore plug hats, either black or white, and long capes. So much for one turn of the kaleidoscope of Time.

Home comforts, with their softening and refining influences had been substituted by California excitement—the burning fever of gold and gain; "happy hits and large stakes"; "big lumps and rich diggings"; fortunes made and lost in a day and the dominating lure of the King of Gold. Sunday was the busiest day of the week, and was observed as a day for a grand "bust up" and uproar. Fiddling, dancing, singing, drinking, feasting and playing cards were some of the amusements. Miners came from every direction to lay in a stock of grub for the week, get long-expected letters from mothers, wives and sweethearts, try the game of chance, and appease their appetites with beer, champagne, good old port, "whiskey punch," "brandy smashes," or a hot Tom and Jerry. A week of hard work gave zest and excitement to the occasion. The "almighty dollar"—and the efforts for its procurement—was the mainspring of their action, and impelled them as with an electric speed and power.

The street, in places, was knee-deep with mud, plentifully strewn with old boots, clothing of all sorts and descriptions, oyster and sardine cans, empty bottles of many varieties, worn-out kettles and frying pans, ham bones, broken picks and shovels—in fact, every kind of rubbish known to a life on the frontier. In the holes in the middle of the street a miner was digging, another was at the edge bailing the water from the bottom, and still a third was sitting on a pile of "dirt," industriously washing it in his rocker.

At the doors of the various stores, assorted cargoes were being distributed from wagons drawn by six or eight mules or oxen, the drivers with bronzed faces, long beards and dress typical of the times, forming a picture unique and picturesque, which gave them a California air and which would have made them remarkable had they been suddenly transplanted in any other part of the world. This was true of every nationality represented at the mines, with the striking exception of the Jews. There was no change whatsoever in their appearance suggestive of California or the "wild and woolly West."

High Cost of Living.

Gambling houses were the largest and most prominent buildings in evidence throughout the mining districts, and "Hangtown" was not exempt. The interior decorations, such as mirrors, prisms, chandeliers, costly furniture, hangings, etc., revealed a style of life entirely different from that outside. The price of drinks during the years of '49 and '50 was three-fourths of a pennyweight, or fifty cents, for a single drink, and one pennyweight heavy for two drinks. Fancy drinks were extra. Talk about the cost of living these days! Say, just listen to this: The Chilean bean was one of the chief articles of the staff of life and sometimes it became so scarce and its value so great that a miner would sit on a nugget of gold and offer the paltry sum of $25,000 for a full dish of pork and beans (?). And, that is not all, as the menu of the "El Dorado Hotel" will prove:

Gold Scales on the End of Bar.

Self-defense Given Utmost Latitude.

Places of amusement were not only visited by men, but later by female gamblers, and many a sad story has been revealed by pioneer doctors who administered a sleeping potion in hours of pain and delirium, before the great White Angel appeared. This was so of Mary Johnson, who always wore male attire and whose identity was never known until she was recognized by the attending physician as the sweetheart he left in Vermont when he was stricken with the gold fever and came to California to make a "stake." She had amassed a fortune, and in the will which was found in a little box under her pillow when she died, she had left him the sum of $20,000. These open gambling orgies of the mountain towns, make one of the wonderful pages of the golden age of California. And, writing of this doctor, reminds me of the fees sweets, were interspersed with hottles of champagne and pickles, which gave variety of taste, and all were arranged with no small degree of the artistic. Flour, pork and beans, and fresh meat were the staples. The counter served as a bar, back of which, on the first shelf, was an array of glasses and decanters. In the middle of the store was the indispensable small table, with bench, boxes and barrels, drawn close, so customers who bought brandy and oysters could play cards and entertain themselves.

Temperance Society Short-lived.

Boarding houses served their bill of fare "table d'hôte" style, serving from thirty to forty miners three times a day with pork and beans, greasy steaks, pickles and tea, from an oilcloth-covered table. Hotels served the same bill of fare on a tablecloth, and with better quality of knives and forks.

There was in "Hangtown" but one church, which belonged to the Methodists, and one newspaper, which was published two or three times a week, keeping the miners "posted up" on what was going on outside their own world. The number of books was limited to a few Bibles which came he charged. An ounce a visit was all. Sticking out your tongue and listening to a few unintelligible medical phrases, served to extract an ounce from the buckskin purse in your jeans.

Gamblers reaped a rich harvest; betting was eager, fights free; many an unfortunate spent Sunday after Sunday at the gaming table and lost every cent he had dug out during the week, being obliged to ask credit for the "grub" he must have during the coming week. The lure and glint of the precious metal were the means of his destruction.

Although each man was armed with a knife and pistol, they were seldom used indiscriminately or wantonly on slight occasion. There was always the utmost latitude allowed in self-defense. If a miner raised his pistol and leveled it at the head of his victim, or if he simply made a motion towards drawing his weapon, it was perfectly justifiable of the other fellow to shoot first, if possible. Weapons were never drawn out of bravado, for if they were, the man must be prepared to use it quickly, or be laid low by the ball of his adversary. On the other hand, if he shot a man without just provocation, the liberal and prompt administration of lynch-law checked further crime.

Storekeepers were busier Sunday than all the rest of the week. Their costume was similar to that of the miner, and, on entering his place of business, ten to one, you would find him sitting on an empty keg, at a rickety table, playing "seven-up" for liquor. These stores were curious places, carrying general merchandise—most everything was to be found. On the shelves, ornamental displays of bright-hued cans, containing meats, vegetables and around the Horu, and an occasional old "Farmer's Almanac." The latter was sold for $1.00. After reading it through and through, it would be turned and read from every point of the compass. By the time the pages had been thumbed to shreds, the readers had become scientific astronomers, weather prophets and farmers, and it is said they could "locate the signs of the Zodiac blindfolded, and stand on their head and calculate an eclipse."

Due credit must be given one occurrence happening in the town, although it was short lived. A temperance society was formed. It was the first in the mining camps, and perhaps the first in the State. A tent was built, large enough to accommodate two hundred persons. A lawyer by the name of Mr. Quereau was chosen president, and A. W. Bee, vice-president. Two meetings were held each week, at which the older members of the association would present the evils of intemperance from every viewpoint. G. Wheeler, F. A. Bee and three others composed the executive committee. The society died out in the winter of '50 for want of active members and patronage.

Getting mail was most difficult and expensive; when the mines first opened the men sent to San Francisco by persons going that way and paid them from $1.00 to $3.00 to get one letter. After a stage line had been established, the mail never failed to appear. The men would gather about the street and watch for the stage to come over the brow of "Hangtown Hill," and a hundred or more voices would shout, "There she comes!" After the letters were distributed the boys would sit around on boxes, barrels and the stumps of trees and discuss the news from home. Tom Nugent was the first postmaster.

The principal "diggings" in "Hangtown" were surface, or placer, diggings, the richest deposits being found in the beds and on the banks of the creeks and ravines, in beds of streams, and in flats and hollows of the mountains. The gold was to be found at various depths from the surface, but the dirt on the bedrock was richest. Sometimes the "diggings" would be four, six or seven feet deep before the layer of "pay dirt," as the miners called it, would be reached. "Dirt" was the universal word designating earth, clay, gravel, slate, etc. They spoke of "rich or poor dirt," "top dirt," "stripping off," and "pay dirt."

Mining Laws Self-made.

The methods used for extracting gold from the "dirt" those days were crude ones. Marshall's discovery of gold in the tail-race should have suggested the "ground sluice," as it was simple; but it was not thought of. The Mexicans used a wooden bowl, which they called a batea, and a horn spoon; then pans and Indian baskets followed, as they were near the same shape. Soon after, a Georgian named Isaac Humphrey improvised a rocker, or cradle, such as was used in mining in his state. After that the "long tom" was introduced; it was primitive, but proved effective in the hands of a company of from three to six miners. Ground sluicing and hydraulic mining followed. With the above methods and crude implements, fortunes were amassed, and millions of dollars were circulated over the world.

The extent of ground allowed each individual varied in different diggings; from ten to thirty feet square was the usual allotment, and it was settled by the miners themselves. They also made their own laws defining the rights and duties of those holding claims. All that was requisite to establish a claim was to leave upon it a pick, shovel or mining tool, and a notice would be put up to read as follows:

"We, the undersigned, claim fifteen feet square [or any quantity mentioned] commencing at this stake and running up this ravine to the oak tree with a notch in it.

"JOSIAH SNODGRASS, DAVID BILLIKINS."

An incident is told by a '49er illustrative of this rule among miners in "Hangtown": An Irishman was prospecting in "Log Cabin Ravine," now called Bedford avenue, and, getting a dollar to the pan, which he thought good pay, he concluded to take up a claim there. He was chukking over his good fortune when he espied a notice upon a stump with the ominous words written thereon, "We, the undersigned," etc.

"Ow the devil," he exclaimed, "how came ye there now?"

No answer coming from the notice, he went to some men working a few yards below and said: "I say, misther, who ouns thim claims?"

"We do," was the reply.

"Be gorrah, thin, ye hev no right to thim."

"Oh, yes we have, we took them up, recorded them, and have worked them all summer."

"Recorded thim! Ow the devil recard ye's! Sure there's not an ould stoomp within five miles of this place but what has plastered all over it as big as a winder, with 'Recorded' in mighty foin letters all over the paper from the top to the bottom. To the devil with ye's an' the recarder, too—the baest!" Still muttering, "The devil recard ye's," he walked away.

Thousands Bound for Hangtown.

J. M. Studebaker, "Wheelbarrow John" he was called, had a mine 25x25 in size and did well. He was but nineteen years of age when he came to "Hangtown" in an emigrant wagon, his sole possession a 50-cent piece. He made his "stake" there by making wheelbarrows at $10 apiece and by mining. When visiting his old haunts in 1912 he told of having in his possession $700 worth of coarse gold that was taken from the vicinity of "Hangtown."

Hon. Steven Gage owned a placer claim 16x16; at one time he took out $50 a day for six weeks. If one should ask him today about his mines in "Hangtown," he would tell you many an interesting story of miners and their "supreme laws." He would tell you that 100,000 people crossed the Missouri River in '48-9, their objective point being "Hangtown"—that being the only place they had heard of. Their slogan was, "To Old Hangtown or Bust." People were so honest in those days, they would go to their meals and leave their gold dust in the pans or buckets. He would tell you of the many who came into camp Saturday night with pints of gold dust and nuggets, and when Monday morning came, he loaned them enough to buy "grub" for the coming week.

Near the old historie "Round Tent," in the center of the main street of "Hangtown," $16,000 was taken from a placer claim 16x16 by N. Kohn. Gold was found in every conceivable shape and size, and nuggets weighing several ounces were mined out. The "Round Tent" was a gambling place where all who visited could "buck" at monte and other popular games. One of its habitués had been remarkably lucky. This "pile" was most alluring to three strangers of Latin extraction who had drifted into town. They planned to rob their foreign friend; all being foreigners, they thought the Americans would not care as long as they were not involved.

Thieving was akin to murder in those days, and was punished as such. The host made such a noise when being robbed, it brought hundreds to the rescue. The miscreants were caught, and a court was soon improvised. They were tried and sentenced to hang. During their speedy trial, some officers from a lower county recognized them as men who were guilty of a horrible murder. This settled any hesitancy on the part of the mob, and justice was soon meted out to the poor wretches.

How Place Acquired Its Name.

Nor was this all. A young chap by the name of Richard Coone, but known as "Irish Dick," came into Dry Diggings in 1850, to try his fortune at monte; he was plucky, skillful and nimble-fingered. Although gambling was a hazardous business in the early history of the town, he, like many others,

Let not its branches fall.
Here let it always be,
A warning to us all.

For it was in forty-nine,
When our good town yet was young,
Three men for murder vile
Upon that tree were hung.

Yes, on this same old tree
These miscreants met their doom;
Keep it, for all to see—
As a grave-tree o'er their tomb.

This tree let always stand!
For 'tis of great renown;
Then, Herrick, stay thy hand—
Spare this relic of our town.

State's First Bank Organized There.

There was more of this gory work in those early, reckless, feverish times, when there was no established law, yet "Hangtown" was no worse than other towns throughout the State.

The earliest El Dorado bar included Thomas Robinson, S. W. Sanderson, S. Garfield, Judge Van Cleaf, Thomas H. Williams, D. K. Newell, John Hume, S. B. Farwell, Thos. H. Hewes, William Ross, took a chance. He was well known in all the mining camps, but Dry Diggings was his favorite haunt. One night while in the El Dorado saloon and under the influence of liquor, he stabbed and almost instantly killed an emigrant who had just arrived, mistaking him for an old pal of his against whom he had a grudge. The murdered man had a brother in town who said, "Dick must die." Others said the same thing. He was given a short trial by the Vigilantes, pronounced "guilty," hurried to an oak tree, and hanged.

Throughout the ordeal his nerve never left him. Even when the Sheriff, Bill Rodgers, and the two Constables, Alex Hunter and John Clark, tried to rescue him from the mob, he remained remarkably cool and showed no nervousness. After being placed under the tree with the noose about his neck, he begged to be allowed to climb the tree and jump from the limb. This privilege was denied, and he was swung into eternity by strong and willing hands.

These occurrences gave Dry Diggings the grew-some name, "Hangtown." The name served to strike the keynote of justice, and as a warning to desperadoes. One of the gallows' trees stood at the corner of Main and Coloma streets, but was cut down when a theater was built. Mr. Studebaker helped to fell the tree, and afterward to place brick and mortar during the construction of the building. When the tree was about to be cut, Joe Fisher made a plea, through the medium of a poem, for its preservation. It reads as follows:

Herrick, spare that tree!

Judge Cope, J. A. Patterson, James S. Anthony, G. D. Hall, J. A. Richart, James Johnson, Col. Ed Baker, C. J. Reckleff. All have answered the roll call in a higher court.

The District Judges for the years 1850-1-2-3 were J. H. Thomas, Tod Robinson, S. B. Farwell and J. M. Howell. A return on an execution made by Sheriff Sayward in December, 1849, reads: "The following goods were seized and sold and brought the following prices, viz: One-half keg butter, $62.63; half barrel peaches, $121.13; two sacks flour, 300 pounds, $205; half cheese, ten and one-half pounds, $8.50; two bottles cherry brandy, $5; two bunches cigars, $5; can lard, $48."

Statistics of 1850 give the population as 20,000. Home manufactures were valued at $7,000. El Dorado was the only county that manufactured anything to sell in 1852. In 1854 the heaviest census was taken, but was lost on the steamer "Brother Jonathan," bound for Washington, D. C., via the Isthmus of Panama.

Legend has it that Joaquin Murietta and his gang had their rendezvous at the head of "Log Cabin Ravine" at the time they robbed the Darlington store, which was two miles from town.

The town became the great central depot for the "Overland Pony Express" from St. Joseph, Missouri, and all stage lines radiated from that point. The first express and banking companies in the State were organized and began business there. It was the home of many pioneer stage drivers, among them Hank Monk, who landed Horace Greely safe

REMINISCENCES OF AN 1846 ARRIVAL

The Grizzly Bear considers itself extremely fortunate in being enabled, through the kindness of R. R. Rannells of Lower Lake, to present herewith some of the reminiscences of Mrs. Josephine Miles, one of California's earliest Pioneer Women, prepared by herself.

Mrs. Miles also sent The Grizzly Bear a copy of a paper dated February 5, 1893, containing a story by Mrs. Benjamin Kelsey, to whom she refers in the accompanying article, and which will be republished in a future issue of this magazine.

It is these reminiscences, from the Pioneers themselves, that will make up a TRUE HISTORY of California, hence we delight to receive and publish them, feeling that our mass of readers, who are concerned with the State's early history, will be pleased, benefited, and correctly informed, thereby.—Editor.

RS. BENJAMIN KELSEY WAS THE first white woman who crossed the Sierra Nevada Mountains into California, and the incidents of her life make up the most remarkable history of any pioneer woman," says Mrs. J. Miles, herself a Pioneer of 1846. "She justly deserves a monument.

"It is doubtful if she is living now, as she would be 91 years of age. I remember her very well as the first white, or American, woman we met after we got into Napa Valley, at George Yount's. He had lived for thirteen years where Yountville now is, and his place was the headquarters for all the immigrants, until they could rest up and find homes for themselves.

"My father, James Harbin, was allied with the early history of California, and was the founder of Harbin Springs, the most famous in the State fifty years ago. He built the first ferryboat to operate across the Sacramento River, in 1849. Sacramento City was mostly tents then. The first wooden building was erected in 1849, the man left in charge of it levanting by steamer with $32,000, the tolls of a few months.

"We started from Missouri for California the first of April, 1846, and arrived in October at Mr. Yount's. I was then just six years old. Some of the Donner-Reed Party arrived late in the winter, among them the Reed and some of the Donner family. I remember Patty and Virginia Reed, and George Donner I knew well.

"We were fortunate to get in so early; they took the ill-fated Hastings route. Major Stephen Cooper and my father were the captains of our train, which consisted of some ninety wagons. We were well armed with guns. I remember incidents of the plains, and although being only five and a half years old when my parents started, I have some vivid recollections, even at that age.

"We had no trouble with the Indians, although we saw a great many. We passed through some Pawnee villages. My mother and I went into a wigwam and saw the squaws boiling buffalo tongues. There seemed to be only squaws and children.

"After we had traveled a few days further, there came some five hundred warriors, all on ponies, over some rising ground near us. The chief was splendidly mounted, had on war paint, and was covered with feathers of all colors from his head almost to his feet. I remember the horse was spotted.

"He waved his warriors back, and rode up and down our lines. There were a man and his wife in the train that he recognized. He jumped off his horse, and threw his arms around them. They knew him, too. He had been to some mission where they had lived, and they could talk his language some.

"They made him understand we were traveling to a far-off country. We gave him a cow for his warriors to feast on. That made peace; our guns, they were afraid of. We passed on without trouble. It would have been a striking scene for a moving picture.

"My brother, Matt Harbin, came to California in 1844. His train,—for he was the guide,—was the first wagon-train that ever got their wagons across the Sierras. They built the cabin where some members of the Donner-Reed Party, two years afterwards, perished.

"He joined the forces under Commodore Stockton, in 1846, and was with the army until peace was established, when he was honorably discharged from service. General Fremont signed his discharge in the Bell Building, Los Angeles, about March or April, 1847.

MRS. JOSEPHINE MILES,
Who Arrived in California in 1846.

"Then he came north, and brought with him 4,650 head of cattle and 700 head of horses.

"He bought the Hardy Mexican land-grant that touched the Sacramento River, was seventeen miles in length and four miles in width, and in the limits of which the city of Woodland is now located. The Yolo Power Company is building a dam here on Cache Creek, to store the waters of Clear Lake to irrigate Yolo County. I hope our lost heritage will always be kept green.

"Mr. Yount's place and my father's place were the headquarters of all the mountaineers and trappers those early days. I remember a great many of them, especially 'Peg-leg' Smith. Like that of his comrades, his life was full of those heroic exploits that made the settlement of our Western wilds. He was the man who cut his own leg off.

"Our emigrant women, in 1847, cooked the first Fourth of July dinner in California, at Mr. Yount's place. All the men who had gone, had returned from the war, as peace had been declared. Everybody, from far and near, was at the dinner, including General Sutter, Commodore Stockton and his men, and a great many others.

"I saw the first person buried in the Yountville graveyard, in 1847,—Captain Gaunt, the companion of Kit Carson and other pathfinders and trappers. When the steamer brought the news of California's admission into the Union, I was in San Francisco."

MAKE FINE DISPLAY AT VINTAGE FESTIVAL

St. Helena—La Junta Parlor, No. 203, N.D.G.W., and St. Helena Parlor, No. 53, N.S.G.W., joined hands in making an exhibit and float for the annual Vintage Festival, held in this city last month.

The state seal was worked out in colors, the materials used being beans, peas, and grains. It was enclosed with a wide frame of prunes and raisins, and when placed on an easel in the exhibit tent, had the appearance of a large painting. The committee felt fully repaid for its efforts when it took first prize for the best and most artistic fraternal design.

Four decorated automobiles acted as an escort to the float, which was a thing of beauty. It represented the State Capitol, with six of California's fairest daughters standing at the entrance, representing California. Ceres, Pomona, Wealth, Grapes and Flora. The float took the first prize for the best fraternal order float in the Labor Day parade.

The St. Helena Native Sons and Native Daughters took the float to Vallejo to participate in celebrating California's natal day, and proudly brought back the second prize, $75.

La Junta Parlor, N.D.G.W., is just a year old, and harmony and prosperity prevail; the hand of fraternity and goodfellowship is extended to all who enter the door of its lodgeroom.

CALIFORNIA'S NATIONAL FORESTS.

Timber to the amount of 57,607,000 board feet, valued at $121,012.58, was cut from the National Forests in California during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914.

THE STATE DURING OCTOBER, 1864, was alive with political excitement. The presidential campaign was at feverish temperature, and every night big political demonstrations, by both political parties, were held in the cities and towns. The torchlight processions beat all former records as to length and enthusiasm.

The torches then used were made with a stick about a yard long and an inch square, with a piece of wire driven into one end and having a ball of wicking attached. This ball was soaked in camphene and, when lighted, would burn with a flame about a foot high for an hour or more. Candle illumination of the principal streets of the towns was also frequently seen.

At Stockton, October 18th, a Union demonstration had 4,000 torches in line, and San Francisco, on the same evening, had a torchlight procession of Union men over two miles long. Big meetings were reported from every county.

October 19th, General Sheridan won a great victory for the Union army, in the Shenandoah Valley, and made his famous ride from Winchester, "Twenty Miles Away," which added more zest to the enthused state of the Union men.

Great preparations were being made for immense demonstrations in San Francisco, Sacramento and other cities during the last week before election, and money was being spent as if it were as free as water.

Sam Brannon offered to bet $10,000 against $500 that Lincoln, for re-election as President, would carry the State, and up in Yreka, C. H. Pyle made a freak bet with Ed. Schwatka to saw a cord of four-foot wood into stovewood and sell it for the benefit of the Sanitary Fund if Siskiyou County went Democratic. Schwatka was to do the sawing if the county went Republican, and the townspeople, knowing the physical fitness of the two citizens to perform the task, were much amused.

The women of Sacramento had a Sanitary Fund fair at the time of the State Fair, and realized $9,800 for the cause.

Incendiaries at Stockton.

A talented young woman named Miss Hardinge arrived from the East and was delivering a patriotic lecture on "The Great Republic," which was given an enthusiastic reception by the Unionists. At Auburn, after her lecture, the privilege of escorting the speaker to Placerville was auctioned for the benefit of the Sanitary Fund, and the highest bidder paid $50 for the privilege.

The big two-ton cheese that was given the Sanitary Fund in San Francisco by Steele Bros. of Pescadero, was to be sent by steamer to New York this month, there to be exhibited and finally sold for the benefit of the fund.

October 7th, at Chico, there was a beautiful flag presented by the citizens to the Chico Light Infantry. Mrs. J. C. Mandeville made the presentation address, and Captain Eddy responded.

A society of "anti-wife-beaters" was formed in San Francisco. It was composed of prominent men and women, for the purpose of prosecuting to the full extent of the law the wife-beaters, who appeared to be quite numerous in that city.

An Irish woman, with her two children, applied to the chief of police of San Francisco for protection from her husband, who proved to be a Chinaman. They had been married in New York City ten years before. She was a washerwoman and supported the family while John loafed and lived as a tin-horn sport.

October 2nd, a fire broke out in the house occupied by Jacob Knopf, in Red Bluff. He was burned to death and several houses destroyed, with a loss of $30,000.

October 4th, an incendiary started a blaze on El Dorado street, Stockton, that burned eleven buildings and caused a $20,000 loss. On the same evening the Eureka Hotel in that city was destroyed and James Stewart, a lodger, lost his life. Several other incendiary fires were set during the month and the citizens of Stockton were greatly alarmed over the repeated attempts made to burn their city.

October 17th, the Buckeye flour mill, at Marysville, then owned by A. D. Starr, was burned, causing a $20,000 loss.

October 14th, the town of Auburn was partly destroyed. Its Chinese section was all reduced to ashes, with a part of the business end. Forty buildings were destroyed and a $40,000 loss was totaled.

Horsetown, then a lively mining town in Shasta County, went up in smoke and ashes on October 30th, with a $30,000 loss.

Indian Renegades Pursued.

There was a lull in stage and highway robbing,

What Was Doing IN CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

probably due to most of the highway professionals being in jail.

October 1st, a Mexican and a mulatto robbed a Chinese mining camp near Comanche, Calaveras County. They were pursued by Daniel Childs and John Murray, and a pistol fight ensued. Childs was wounded twice and died on the 11th. The robbers escaped.

W. W. Nichols and Arthur Thornton, teamsters, were stopped at Antelope Springs, Amador County, on October 9th, and robbed of all their money by a lone highwayman.

Three members of the notorious Gassaway family were convicted at Oroville of stage robbing, and sent to San Quentin.

At Sonora, October 7th, a Mexican named Ramon Velasquez was hung for the murder of a Chinaman in the previous spring near Columbia. He belonged to a gang of Mexicans who were robbing Chinese mining camps, and while engaged in this occupation he killed a Chinaman who resisted. He claimed to be innocent on the scaffold and died like a stoic.

"Arkansas" Jones, whose wife was killed and house plundered by Indians in September, near Copper City, Shasta County, was in pursuit of the renegades with a posse of about thirty avengers. October 3rd, they found a rancheria of the tribe and killed eight bucks in the fight.

Thomas Smith, with a hunting party on the Salinas River, heard in the brush a noise he believed was made by a deer, and plunged through a thicket of willows to get a shot. He was suddenly confronted by a grizzly bear. He took a shot at it, and then rushed to a tree which he endeavored to climb. The grizzly grabbed him by a foot and pulled him down to the ground, where it chewed and clawed an arm and shoulder, inflicting dangerous injuries. Hearing the hallooing of Smith's companions, the grizzly fled before inflicting fatal injury.

On Stony Creek, then in Colusa County, three ranchers named McClane, St. John and Brisco, killed a grizzly that had come down the creek from the Coast Range.

Early Description of Mt. Whitney.

October 2nd, on the Mokelumne River, above Woodbridge, a boat upset and Chris Curran, John Cruse and John Morrow, farm hands, were drowned. Morrow, who had been drinking California wine, insisted on rocking the boat to scare his companions until it was finally filled with water and sank.

Steamboat catastrophes, from exploding boilers, continued to happen. The little steamboat "Amelia," on the Napa route, blew up October 17th, killing a fireman named John Bagley and seriously scalding a Chinaman.

The steamer "Sophie McLane," while being loaded with freight just before taking on its passengers at Suisun wharf, October 26th, blew up and caused a bad disaster. Ten men were killed and five seriously injured. Captain Hurlbut was among the latter, and came very near being drowned before he could be rescued. He died the next day from his injuries. Chas. Johnson, a passenger, was blown 150 feet and fell into the water unhurt. The steamboat was a total wreck, as it had two boilers, both of which exploded.

Smelting works were being erected at Silver City, Shasta County, to work silver ore found there.

Six hundred acres of farming land in Napa Valley sold for $28 an acre. This was considered a high price.

The Blue Gravel Mining Company, at Smartsville, cleaned up, after a three-weeks' run, $25,500.

Prof. Brewer, of the California Geological Survey, made a report which contained the following description of Mt. Whitney and the region about it, then unknown and unnamed by the people of California: "The Alpine region of California, occupying the upper part of the Sierra Nevada Range, from Castle Peak to the Kern River, a distance of two hundred miles, surpasses Switzerland in mountain grandeur. Throughout this district all the main peaks rise to 13,000 feet or more in height. The highest mountain is in latitude 36° 30'. Its exact height is unknown. C. R. King, the first white man known to have ascended it, reached an elevation of 14,730 feet and was here stopped by a precipice. He thinks the summit is about 400 feet higher.

"Two forks of the Kern River rise on the slopes of the mountain. The main fork runs southward for thirty miles through a tremendous canyon, in the upper part of which the river falls two miles within a distance of six. Another canyon of great size is on the North Fork. A party of prospectors tried for three weeks to get down into it, without finding a way. No name has as yet been given to this highest peak in the State." Prof. Brewer, who headed the party, decided to wait and find the Indian name and intended to apply it.

An Early-day Strike.

The Toland Medical College, in San Francisco, was dedicated October 24th. Dr. H. H. Toland, its founder, was the first president.

Wm. Galloway took a prescription to a druggist in San Francisco to be filled. One of the ingredients was the extract of Peruvian bark, which was written with the medical name and abbreviation of "Chinch." The druggist read it as "Conth," and put tincture of contharides instead of chinchona in the mixture. The result of the action of tincture of Spanish fly, instead of Peruvian bark, was the painful histering of his tongue and throat and Galloway commenced suit for damages, placing the amount at $10,000. The druggist's main defense was that he asked the plaintiff before putting up the prescription if it was intended to be given to a horse, and did not receive a negative reply.

The fishermen of San Francisco, to the number of 600, mostly Italians, went on a strike October 6th and there was a famine in the fish markets on Friday, the 7th. The Board of Supervisors had passed an ordinance requiring the Chinese fish peddlers to pay a license of $25 a month, which was prohibitive, and put these vendors out of the business. The middlemen, who controlled the fish markets, thinking they had a cinch on the business, made a price of about two cents a pound for the fishermen and about twelve cents a pound for the consumer. It was against this action of the middlemen the strike was aimed, and the fishermen refused to fish.

In a few days the wharves in San Francisco Bay and on the Alameda shore were crowded with amateur fishermen, who, with hook and line, were making good catches and readily selling them at their own prices. One result of the dispute was the establishment of a free fish market on Jackson street, which enabled the fishermen to sell at retail their own fish.

Indians in Movies.

An exodus of servant girls from Boston and New York by steamer to San Francisco was reported by a newspaper correspondent. On one steamer, two hundred girls had taken passage, and over two thousand were preparing to go. Wages of $30 in gold, paid in San Francisco, as against $12 and $16 a month paid in greenbacks in the East, was the incentive.

Winnemucca, chief of the Piute tribe of Indians occupying Washoe and the eastern slope of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, created a sensation on Montgomery street, San Francisco, October 20th, driving in a carriage with his two daughters, followed by another vehicle occupied by six braves who were gorgeous in vermilion stripes, bear skin, and an abundance of eagle feathers.

A couple of amusement promoters had induced the chief to come to the metropolis and give exhibitions of Indian life. He and his daughters and braves appeared in tableaux on the stage of the Metropolitan theater, and showed Pocahontas saving Captain John Smith and other tableaux depicting scenes in Indian life. After making a success in San Francisco, they started on a tour of the interior towns, but the promoters left them at Stockton without "wampum" and in debt and they became objects of interest for those charitably inclined to assist in returning them to their Nevada happy hunting grounds.

The annual State Fair opened at Sacramento, October 17th, and closed the 23rd. The late date of holding it was apparently set so as not to interfere with the Mechanics' Institute Fair in San Francisco, which occupied the month of September, and also, to follow the various district and county fairs and thereby secure, from them, their most meritorious and interesting exhibits.

A Great Horse Fair.

A newspaper man summed up the events of the fair in the following words of glow: "The display of stock was not so large as in previous years. The high prices of hay and grain, consequent to the drouth, prevented many from bringing horses to compete for premiums. Six thousand dollars were given in purses for speed contests, and these made a successful feature. It made the event really a horse fair. Six thousand dollars is a great deal of money to let go these hard times, but it obtained results. * * *

HANGTOWN OF LOS ANGELES

(In Which are Given, by THE GRIZZLY, Some Suggestions as to What It Will Be.)

WHEN THE doors to Shrine Auditorium, Los Angeles, open October 5th, there will be presented to the public a revival of California's most noted mining town, "Hangtown."

—that ceased to exist more than a half-century ago,—together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging.

The spectacle will continue for a week, and during that time those who have never seen a California mining town in active operation, will be enabled to witness a temporary revival of the "days of old, the days of gold, the days of forty-nine."

"Hangtown" will be presented by the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles for two commendable purposes—the raising of funds for the Homeless Children's Agency, and to make an adequate display at the Admission Day celebration at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco next year.

The Homeless Children's Agency is conducted jointly by both Orders, and is doing a great work in finding homes for the homeless, and children for the childless, without regard to race, color, or creed, or whether or not they are natives of California.

Officers and directors of the committee that has the arrangements for "Hangtown" in charge are: Harry G. Folsom, chairman; Cal W. Grayson, J. D. Hunter, J. B. Coffey, vice-chairmen; John T. Newell, treasurer; Dr. Eva R. Busenius, secretary; Jennie G. Elliott, auditor. Charles W. Clark is handling the tickets, and reports a large advance sale.

"Hangtown" of old, with all its thrills, was no more attractive to the Pioneers of '49 than will be the 1914 "Hangtown" to the present residents of Los Angeles. It will be peopled with Native Sons and Native Daughters, appropriately garbed in the costumes that made their fathers and mothers conspicuous characters in the history-making days of the State.

As marshal, Eugene Biscailuz will see that the games and amusement places are run open-handed, while William I. Traeger will dispense justice, blindfolded. A coroner, in the person of Dr. Robert M. Dunsmoor has been provided, probably to legalize the administration of Judge Lynch.

Saloons, history tells us, made up the quantity and quality of the old "Hangtown's" business enterprises, and so they will perform a like service in the coming reproduction—but with the substitution of "soft" for "hard" drinks. These liquid emporiums will be known as the "First Chance Saloon," "Red Light Saloon" and "Last Chance Saloon," and will be guarded and guided, respectively, by William Durm, Deacon F. Taggart and Bernard Lee. The fact that a "Deacon" will run a "Redlight" saloon, simply exemplifies the queerness of "Hangtown" days—nothing more.

But "poor" whisky isn't the only thing that will be found in the saloons, not by a jugful. There, also, will be the rendezvous of the gamblers and gamesters, with Charles R. Thomas keeping the limit up,—for only the blue sky will be recognized as a lawful limit. And experience has proven that both gamblers and gamesters are as plentiful now as they were in 1849.

A "General Store," equipped with all the necessities, and many of the unnecessary, of life, will be conducted by the firm of Duni & Lelande. They announce that, despite the European war, prices will be no higher than they were at "Hangtown" in 1849. They have proclaimed an "opening" sale—but don't say what they'll open—commencement night, August 5th. There won't be any need for a "closing out" sale.

George Vail, manager of the "Opera House," will present a bill of top-liners. He has gathered his bevy of artists from all parts of the world, many of them having been in hiding since they were given an egg-and-cabbage banquet upon their departure from the original "Hangtown." As fillers-in, of course, some of the best later-day talent will be seen and heard before the footlights.

For those who so desire, and can find the time and money, Henry Brodek will operate the "Palace Hotel." He will also operate some games of chance in the lobby, for the convenience of the guests who are crowded out of the saloons. He has also let out a cigar stand privilege to Chas. Bennett, and "Hank Monk's" stage line and wells-Fargo express will have quarters there.

"Hangtownites" must eat, even though gold is a little scarcer than it was in 1849, hence "Mother Grady's Boarding House" has been taken over by Fannie L. Prather, who has laid in a supply of pork and beans, sauer kraut, and other pioneer delicacies. Some of the mines' fairest daughters will be found there, and will pass out their sweetest smiles when the "Hangtown" money is passed in.

The public washing of dirty linen will not be tolerated, but must be delegated to Cal

Grayson's "Chinese Laundry" and the offending pieces (including human) run through the "mill-race." This cleaning establishment will handle nothing but "union" suits, and for those having but one suit, will provide such fascinating pastimes as Chinese lottery, fan-tan, chuck-a-luck, etc., where one can pass his time, likewise his money, while waiting for the cleaning process.

Who doesn't like to dance with the girls of the West? Lon McCoy knows how attractive they are, and so will conduct "Riley's Dance Hall" that, for class, will be an eye-opener. The marshal of "Hangtown" has not, as yet, posted a notice telling what class—of dances, of course,—will come under his ban, but "Riley" says "you should worry."

There'll be plenty of work, at good pay, for all, in "Hangtown," for "Bud" Rose will have a mine in operation, where those who get "busted" can work in the "pay dirt" for a "grub stake." Sight-seers will be welcomed, but the management will not be responsible for lost or broken "bones."

Of course, there'll be a bank in "Hangtown"—in addition to numerous faro banks—which will be known as the "Bank of Hangtown," with Herman C. Lichtenberger as president, and Alonzo F. Soto behind the cashier's window. "Hangtown" will be the only place in the world where exchange isn't at a premium now. This bank has so much surplus, that it will give a "bone" for every measly ten-cent piece.

All American gold being now collected for shipment to Europe, "Hangtown" will, of necessity, issue its own money, which will be designated as "bones," and sold at 10 cents on the dollar. This is neither a "fire," "hankrupt" nor "clean sweep" sale, but purely an "expansion" sale, to create "flush" times by furnishing an abundance of circulating medium, and also to assist in the endeavor to get all of Uncle Sam's gold corralled for the Homeless Children of California.

These "bones"—and, remember, nothing else,—will be the only accepted money in "Hangtown," and will go for anything in the place. And you've got to be on the "inside" to get them, just as you have to spend them. Here's where the outsiders won't even get a chance to look in.

These are not the only things featured for "Hangtown." Nightly there will be "pulled off" realistic "stunts" of the days of '49, when such pastimes as murder, stage robbery, lynching, bank robbery, etc., were of daily occurrence. Several will also try to "bust" the games, just as they did in the old "Hangtown," and with just as much chance of success.

Forty thousand people saw the Los Angeles Native Sons' and Native Daughters' reproduction of "Hangtown" last year, and more would have gotten in had there been room. Founded upon something that existed other than in the imagination, it is the best amusement feature ever offered. If you don't believe this, spend 25 cents and see the show for yourself.

WILL GIVE FAIR FOR

BENEFIT OF OLD MISSION.

San Luis Obispo—October 22nd to 24th, inclusive, the women of the Catholic Church will give a fair, the proceeds of which will be used to make much-needed repairs, and to pay for necessary improvements at San Luis Obispo Mission.

This city owes its very existence to the mission, and its preservation is of vital importance. It is believed that the people, knowing the value of the mission to the city as a landmark, will respond liberally to the call for aid in its behalf.

ADMISSION DAY APPROPRIATELY OBSERVED

ALLEJO'S ADMISSION DAY CELEBRATION, occupying three days, has gone down into history as one of the most successful ever held under the auspices of the Native Sons of the Golden West, and the success of the occasion reflects much credit upon the committee from Vallejo Parlor, No. 77, N.S.G.W., and Vallejo Parlor, No. 195, N.D.G.W., which had the celebration in charge.

The three-day festival opened Monday, September 7th, with an automobile parade in which 200 gaily-decorated autos participated. Tuesday was devoted to welcoming delegations of Native Sons and Native Daughters.

Wednesday, the 9th, Admission Day, was, of course, the banner day, and 20,000 people crowded Vallejo's handsomely decorated streets to view the Admission Day parade in the forenoon. The afternoon was given over to receptions at the various Parlor headquarters, and in the evening was witnessed one of the finest displays of fireworks ever offered in California, consisting of seventy-seven set pieces.

LITERARY EXERCISES.

Literary exercises were held in the open air on Virginia street in the afternoon. Mayor W. J. Tormey delivered an address of welcome, following which G. G. Halliday introduced Congressman J. R. Knowland, who delivered an oration on "California." Miss Madeline Carlin sang "California, Where the Golden Poppies Grow," after which F. Emerson Brooks recited an original poem, and F. G. Harrison sang "California, the Gem of the Nation's Crown," composed by Miss Roxana Weihe of Oakland.

Louis H. Mooser, Grand President, N.S.G.W., as well as nearly all the Grand Officers of that Order, were unable to attend the celebration, on account of attendance upon the funeral of Grand Trustee Belloli in San Jose, but he detailed as his official representative at the Admission Day festivities, Grand Second Vice-president Bismarek Bruck.

AT STATE UNIVERSITY

Berkeley—Admission Day was celebrated at the University of California with appropriate exercises in Harmon Gymnasium, under the auspices of the Native Sons of the Golden West. The gymnasium was crowded to overflowing. Music was furnished by the University orchestra and a male quartet.

President Benjamin Ide Wheeler opened the exercises, saying: "There is only one California, and Californians are not sure that all creation does not end at its periphery. How proud California is of its state, certain that it is a distinct part of the world. I am similarly convinced that California is almost a nation by itself with problems of its own which it wants to settle without outside interference." Dr. Wheeler then introduced Judge John F. Davis, Grand First Vice-president, N.S.G.W., declaring him to be "the representative of an organization which has consecrated its strength in an endeavor to explain California to itself and the outside world."

Judge Davis outlined the establishment by the Native Sons of the Golden West at the University of California of the Traveling Fellowships in Pacific Coast History, detailed the need for analyzing California's unique history, and concluded by saying: "The Native Sons do not hold a copy-right on the celebration of Admission Day. want to assist, to co-operate, to direct if asked. To every organization we send the message that we want them all to remember September 9th as they see fit."

Charles E. Chapman, who spent several years studying California history, as one of the Native Sons Fellows, told of the wealth of material found in his researches, and made this appeal to the Native Daughters to aid in the investigation:

"There is still much work to do. As I see before me so many young women, most of whom were born in California, I want to ask if the Native Daughters won't do their part in this State's investigation. Won't they create perhaps another fellowship, so badly needed, to bear their name?"

Concluding, Mr. Chapman said: "Today we appropriately celebrate the fact that California is American, but while we are proud that this is so, let us not be too cavalier in our treatment of the Spaniards, who won and held this territory for us. We owe them much. Let us study and know them."

WOULD AID MINERS

The United States Bureau of Mines "Rescue Car" (No. 5) has been visiting California mining districts the past month, the attendants giving training in mine rescue and first-aid work. The itinerary for October, which will probably be adhered to fairly closely, follows: 6th to 13th, Melones; 13th to 20th, Jamestown; 22nd to 31st, Kennett.

This car is equipped with ten 1910 type Draegers, one Finess "Proto," and one Westphalia artificial breathing apparatus for use in poisonous or irrespirable atmospheres, with pump and supplies for recharging the apparatus, also with two pulmotors for reviving those overcome by gas or smoke. In addition, there are supplies of first-aid materials, stretchers, fire hose, hand fire-extinguishers, rope, crow bars, and other materials and supplies which may be needed at mine disasters. The car can be turned into an emergency hospital, if necessary.

The United States Bureau of Mines now has eight of these cars equipped for mine-rescue and first-aid service. While not actually busy at mine fires or disasters, they are kept going from mine to mine in their respective districts, stops of sufficient length being made so that squads of men can be organized and trained, by the car crews, in the use of mine-rescue apparatus and in first-aid to the injured methods. H. M. Wolfen is the mining engineer delegated by the Bureau of Mines to the California field. He is directing the work successfully.

This first visit of the mine "Rescue Car" to California is an important event in the co-operative safety work of the United States Bureau of Mines and the Industrial Accident Commission of the State of California. Very generous support has been received from the railroads of California, they carrying the car all over the State without cost to either the Federal or State Governments. W. R. Scott, general manager of the Southern Pacific Company, personally interested himself in making this splendid contribution to the "Safety First" movement.

LATEST OFFICIAL DATA FROM THE P. P. I. E.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The following is from the official letter of Chas. C. Moore, President of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition: "There have been reports that the exposition, because of the war in Europe, would be postponed. It will not be postponed. * * * The exposition will open on its scheduled date—February 20, 1915. It will be completely ready when open. It is more than 90 per cent completed today. * * * Not one of the nations at war has notified us of an intention to withdraw her participation; France and Italy have, in fact, notified us that their plans remain unchanged. * * * We consider it our duty alike to our nation, to the participating nations, to our exhibitors and to ourselves to carry out the plans as originally laid down and which, now nearly at fruition, promise the most important, the most beautiful and the most successful exposition in history."

Forty foreign nations and forty-two states and territories are getting ready for the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco. Work on the entire 635 acres is rushing ahead.

Cochin and Indo China with an appropriation of $150,000, will make an elaborate display of mining industries, particularly of the products of the tin mines, at the exposition. Java and the Dutch East Indies will expend $250,000 on an especially comprehensive display and pavilion.

Siam will make a unique exhibit at the exposition, one of the features being some of the sacred white elephants, which will be sent to America by King Chulalong Korn, in charge of his brother, Prince Rajani, who has been appointed exposition commissioner, directing the expenditure of Siam's appropriation of a quarter of a million dollars.

China has been granted 2,000 square feet in the Palace of Machinery. This is the first time in its history that China will have machinery exhibits at a world exposition.

COUNTIES CONVENTION.

The twentieth Counties Convention of the California Development Board will be held in Santa Rosa, October 23rd, 24th and 25th, when vital questions dealing with legislative measures now under consideration in the State will be ably discussed. The entertainment plans are in charge of the Santa Rosa Chamber of Commerce.

Passing of the California Pioneer

W. H. VALENTINE.

W. H. Valentine, of Anaheim, Orange County, passed away August 15th, in his eighty-fourth year. He was one of California's pioneer gold-seekers.

Born near Oyster Bay, Long Island, December 19, 1830, Mr. Valentine was not 19 years of age when the news of Marshall's discovery of gold at Coloma reached the East. With thirty others, he purchased and equipped a sailing vessel for the trip "around the Horn" to the land of gold, their idea being to remain in the gold fields until each had acquired all of the precious metal he desired, then to return in the ship.

They sailed from New York in September, 1849, and arrived in San Francisco January 10, 1850—just ten days too late to be '49ers, a fact always regretted by Mr. Valentine. Upon arriving at San Francisco and finding conditions not such as they had imagined, the party concluded to and did sell the vessel and separated to various "diggings."

Mr. Valentine first went to Yankee Jims, in Placer County, mining in that camp about a year, when he went to Sutter Mill (now Coloma), El Dorado County. There he met and became a partner of Jack McDougal, father of the Grand Treasurer, N.S.G.W., in mining and building a ditch for supplying water to the miners. He continued to engage in mining near Coloma until the early '60s, when he filed upon a piece of Government land about two miles south of Coloma, on the American River, and developed it into a deciduous fruit ranch.

December 9, 1857, Mr. Valentine was married to Miss Laura J. Cromwell, also an early pioneer, who had come across the plains to Coloma with her father's family in 1850. Four children were born to the marriage, Layton W. (now deceased), formerly superintendent of schools, also assessor, of Tehama County; Louis H., practicing law in Los Angeles and formerly United States Attorney for the Southern District of California; Jennie, who died at the age of 6 years, and C. O., of the firm of Putnam & Valentine, Los Angeles photographers. The surviving sons are members of Ramona Parlor, N.S.G.W.

Mr. Valentine and wife continued to live on the ranch developed by him until July, 1905, when it was traded for a home at Anaheim, Orange County, where they continued to reside until his death. He always took an active part in civic and political affairs, and was solicited at various times to accept party nomination for different offices, but steadfastly refused, preferring, as he said, to be a "fighter in the ranks."

Mr. Valentine was a genial man, considerate always of others, and devoted, kind and indulgent as a husband and father. The last three months of his life were spent in a visit to his old neighbors and friends at Coloma and Placerville, where he was greeted with a heartiness inspired by the friendships of over fifty years' standing.

Charles N. Felton, who came to California in 1849, died at San Mateo, September 13th. He was a native of New York, aged 82 years, and is survived by two children. Deceased first engaged in packing by mule-train between Marysville and Downieville, and later became, respectively, sheriff and tax collector of Yuba County. Going to San Mateo County, he was twice elected to the State Assembly, and in the early '80s was twice chosen Congressman from the old Fifth District; in 1891 he was elected to fill the unexpired term of George Hearst, deceased, as United States Senator.

Mrs. Emily J. Dodson, who, as a child, came across the plains in 1849 with her parents and first settled in "Hangtown," later residing in Sacramento, Kelseyville and Red Bluff, passed away at the latter place, September 1st. She was a native of North Carolina, aged 84 years, and is survived by three children.

Geo. S. Morton, who came to California in 1851, and for many years mined around Placerville, died at Riverbank, September 5th, aged 81 years, and survived by a widow and five children.

James B. Haggin, who came to California in 1849 and engaged in mining, later becoming extensively identified with farming interests throughout the State, died September 8th at Newport, R. I. He was a native of Kentucky, aged 87 years, and left an immense estate. Deceased at one time was famous as a California horse breeder, and owned the Rancho del Paso, an immense tract of land adjoining Sacramento.

Maria Guadalupe Dalton, born at Monterey in 1832, passed away at Azusa, September 1st, survived by five children. Deceased's maiden name was Zamorano, and her father is said to have been one of the early Spanish governors.

Antone Marcovich, who came to California in 1849 and immediately went to the gold "diggings," died at Saw Mill Flat, Tuolumne County, August 21st. He was a native of Austria, aged 94 years, and is survived by a widow and nine children. A delegation from Dardanelle Parlor, No. 66, N. D. G. W., Sonora, attended his obsequies. Deceased was a man of high ideals, and was respected and esteemed by all who knew him.

Robert Jerry Hazzard, who came around the Horn in 1851, and since 1867 had been a resident of San Louis Obispo County, died at Paso Robles, August 16th. He was a native of Rhode Island, aged 88 years, and is survived by four children.

Philip Doerr, who came to California in 1852, and the following year took up his residence in Santa Clara Valley, died at San Jose, August 26th. He was a native of Germany, aged 86 years, and is survived by four children.

Joshua A. Knowles, who came to California in a sailing vessel in 1849, and for a time engaged in mining, died August 21st at El Cajon, San Diego County, where he had resided the past twelve years. He was a native of New York, aged 94 years, and is survived by a widow and three children.

August G. Weidekind, who went to Tuolumne County in the early '50s and followed mining until the infirmities of age forced him to desist, died August 26th, and was buried at Columbia, a dedication from Golden Era Parlor, No. 99, N.D.G.W., preceding his remains to the grave. Deceased was a native of Germany, aged 82 years, and is survived by a widow. He was a man of strong likes and dislikes and of pronounced opinions, but was respected for his known honesty and integrity.

Lutheria Hodges Stange, who crossed the plains in 1851 with her parents at the age of 13, passed away August 10th at Berkeley. She was an old-time resident of Contra Costa County, having gone to Lafayette to reside in 1858, following her marriage to the late Hiram Stange. Deceased was a native of Wisconsin, aged 76 years, and is survived by four children.

J. H. Townsend, born in San Francisco in 1848, died in that city August 27th, survived by a widow and four children. He was a keen business man, honest in all his dealings, and was honored and loved for his unique personality and strength of character. Deceased's father, Dr. John Townsend, was one of the earliest Pioneers, and it was after him that Townsend street, San Francisco, was named.

Colonel Sherman Otis Houghton, who came around the Horn in 1846 with his regiment, the First New York Volunteers, and engaged in the Mexican War, died at Hynes, Los Angeles County, August 31st. Returning to California, after the war, in 1848, deceased mined at Sonora, Tuolumne County, until the latter part of 1849, when he settled in San Jose, where he resided until 1886, when he took up his home in Los Angeles County. In San Jose, Colonel Houghton became active in public affairs, was elected clerk of a Senate committee in the first Legislature, was a deputy clerk of the State Supreme Court in 1854, and Mayor of San Jose in 1855-56. In 1857 he was admitted to the practice of law, and took an active part in the Civil War. He represented the First District of California in the Forty-second Congress, and the Fourth District in the Forty-third Congress. In Los Angeles, deceased was active in transportation matters, and to him is given credit for inducing the Southern Pacific to place Los Angeles on its main line, and for originating the project to make a deep-water harbor at San Pedro. Colonel Houghton was a native of New York, aged 86 years. He was twice married, his first wife being Mary Martha Donner, whom he married in 1859, and to which union one child was born, Mary M.

SHERMAN OTIS HOUGHTON, DECEASED.

Houghton; Mrs. Houghton died in 1860. The following year he married Eliza Poor, a daughter of George and Tamsen Donner, a cousin of his first wife. Both of his wives were members of the famous Donner Party. Surviving are the widow and four children—Eliza P. Houghton, Charles Donner Houghton, Stanley Houghton and Clara Houghton. Deceased was a member of the California Pioneer Society.

Caroline Weiss, who crossed the plains, arriving in Nevada City in 1852, died in San Mateo, August 10th. Mrs. Weiss was the first white woman married in Nevada City, and gave birth to the second white child. She was 82 years of age, and was buried in the family plot, with her husband and six deceased children. Mrs. Carrie Ligon (68), Mrs. A. J. Turner (5), T. J. Weiss (160), Mrs. W. Urquhart (56), and Mrs. S. Urquhart remain to mourn her loss.

Engraver and Jewelry Designer of Rare Skill.

I, Miller of 529 Twelfth street, Oakland, may truthfully be termed the most skillful and artistic jewelry designer and engraver in the whole State of California. His work is such as to elicit only praise and genuine admiration, and his prices are decidedly reasonable.

Of particular interest to Native Sons and Daughters, is the fact that he makes a specialty of badges, medals, emblems and pins for fraternities, lodges, clubs, schools and colleges, and will cheerfully submit designs and estimates. Special monograms for fobs, etc., of distinctive originality have alone made quite a reputation for Mr. Miller, whose modeling colored designs for crests, coats of arms and general heraldic ornamentation are true works of art.

The mastery of every branch of the jeweler's and silversmith's art is his, coupled with unequalled skill and originality in designing for all requirements. In fact, the most exacting connoisseur of the jeweler's art need no longer depend on Tiffany, but will be amply repaid by calling on Mr. Miller and ascertaining the truth of these statements.—(Advertisement.)

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOEHRER.

THE RETURN OF THE FALL season has brought with it many new fashions that are, on the whole, less startling and uncertain than rumor and vague reports had led one to anticipate. We are now convinced, however, The Fashion Show, just closed, has settled all doubt.

Many of the models shown are from Lucile's. One of the handsomest was made of panne velvet, which is soft as chamoise and drapes in a wonderful clinging, appealing way. The color is of old parchment.

The panne is draped around the model in an indescribably graceful fashion—around her body, and around her legs,—and a piece is dropped slightly on the ground at the back.

The approved waist-line of the moment on the hips—I wonder where it will be next season?—is accentuated by two furry creatures whose heads are meeting in a bite at one side and who seem to be holding the drapery together.

These fur animals—the size of a sable—are of parchment color, with dark brown points, such as paws and head. I do not know just what kind of an animal it is, and perhaps it is wiser not to ask, but it is the very latest.

Charming Opera Costume.

I saw stoles and great muffs of the same fur, so, of course, it was chosen to trim this gown. The fur is again used for a great upstanding, turned back collar, but there is none on the sleeves, which come to the elbow, and are evolved from the drapery of the bodice.

They are finished off by ruffles of real alençon lace, and more of the priceless heirloom cobweb is used in the front of the low-cut "V." The bodice has a jabot.

Wearing long gloves to match, and shoes of parchment suede with amber buckles, and stockings of silk so fine that they look as if they were made of tulle, this costume was attractively set off.

A charming opera costume is made of gold metallic lace over corn-colored satin, the lace making the lower of the three-flounced skirt. Two shaped flounces of lace, covered with iridescent heads, and forming the drapery of the deep-shaped girdle, is of the same headed lace.

The train falls in a cascade effect, ending in a long, slender strip with a tassel of gold beads, at the slightly gathered point. The bodice shows a transparent upper portion. The hat worn with this costume is a wonderful creation of black velvet, with slightly-curved paradise plumes outlining the brim.

Many Glove Novelties Offered.

Another fashionable and still-favored tunic dress is entirely in white crepe royale. The skirt, with long full tunic, and bodice were of the crepe, with a very wide, clumsy (with meaning) sash wound around the waist twice and knotted at the side. This was shown with white shoes and stockings.

With the fashion of the season has come the revival of gloves, and never have so many charming novelties been offered. The bracelet effect is woven into many of the gloves.

There is a new flare wrist, which has a band of seed pearls woven about it and is caught with a pearl clasp from which hangs a little tassel.

For morning wear, gunmetal color is popular, and these have a gore of white kid set inside the wrist, and are finished in white stitching.

Many of the dark-toned gloves are finished with a set-on hem of brilliantly contrasting color, stitched in the same tone. White kid gloves come all of one tone, but quite often inset with brilliant about the wrist and heavily embroidered to correspond.

Not alone do the kid gloves show these bracelet effects, but the newest silk gloves are similarly developed. Prices on gloves have not yet greatly increased.

High Collar Appears.

What shall we wear about our necks this winter? That's an engrossing question, for collars play a more important role in costumes than they have since the age of Queen Elizabeth.

The high collar has at last made its appearance. It is made of pique or starched linen. One shape is on the same form as a mannish standing collar, except that the long points roll over in an exaggerated fashion and the straight cravat of black satin ties in a stiff little bow in front.

AFTERNOON COSTUME.

—Design from Hamburger's, Los Angeles.

Rolled pique collars that are attached to vest fronts of the same can be added to any coat front, or will go with the one-piece dress that is always opened with a deep "V" at the neck.

This season the pique in all these models is either stiff or limp. It has to be wired, if it is to stand up about the neck.

The Russian models are still with us. The heavy, wonderfully rich materials, the masses of furs, the rich, glowing colors, and the wealth of gold and silver used all bring touches of the barbaric beauty which is so noticeable in the costumes of high-class Russians, and is particularly well known to Americans through the stage.

Season's Girlish Conception.

A very lovely boudoir gown, quite sumptuous enough to be worn as a wrap or an informal dinner costume, is cleverly cut in lines suggesting pliable pale rose mauve satin brocade with large, quaint figures in shaded blue velvet over its surface.

The robe is somewhat of a kimono effect, yet the sleeves fall away into a long, pointed cape, tipped with a massive golden tassel and emphasizing still more the extreme tiny but long, eel-like train.

Bands of sable outline the neck and sleeves, and a cluster of deep-toned velvet roses, nestling in foliage, catches over the drapery folds. A pretty underslip of deep apricot chamoise finishes the costume.

Nothing more charmingly girlish has been conceived this season than the little net frocks mounted over the softest of taffeta foundations. Straight and full from the waistline falls the net tunic, caught at one side by a cluster of wild flowers and at the other rippled in a cascade effect to the bottom of the lace underskirt. The drappings of the little corsage are drawn together by a length of ribbon with flower clusters.

Another charming frock, decidedly more dashing, but which appeals tremendously to youth and seems to gather in its folds and frills the very essence of joy and springtime, is of deep orange-colored chiffon cloth.

Schoolgirl Unhindered.

Upon this are mounted fine, graduated ruffles of tulle in the same tone, each bound with a narrow piping of satin. A belt of satin encircles the waist, falling in long sash ends. The bodice is of shadow lace, over the orange chiffon.

The kilted skirts and the box-plaited ones are particularly jaunty and becoming for the school girl who, all too long, has been hampered and hobbled by fashion's whims.

Then there must be coats. One should be loose, big pocketed, high collared, and probably with a belt reaching to the knees.

The other, perhaps a voluminous cape which may be tossed over one's shoulder, in true cavalier fashion. The useful, comfortable sweater must not be omitted; in fact, it is absolutely essential for the young girl going to school.

A variety of shoes, a light weight kimono, and a heavy bath robe, must all, of course, be added to the outfit. They may be found in variety in the shops, so that the choosing and purchasing should be a thoroughly delightful task.

ENTHUSIASTIC FOR "HANGTOWN."

Los Angeles—Great enthusiasm was manifested at the meeting of Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124, N.D.G.W., September 21st, as this was the last meeting of the Parlor before the reproduction of "Hangtown," which is to be given at Shrine Auditorium for a week beginning October 5th. The Hangtown Committee from the Parlor is Mrs. A. K. Prather, Mrs. Jennie Elliott, Miss Margaret Malony, Miss Grace Stoermer and Miss Grace Culberts. Mrs. Jennie Elliott is on the Executive Committee, and will have charge of the finances. Mrs. A. K. Prather will have entire charge of "Mother Grady's Boarding House," and many of the Parlor's members will be her assistants. The members of La Esperanza Parlor will be co-workers, also. The Parlor welcomed into the Order Miss Frances Massey, a sister of Mrs. Alice Hamilton, a recent member. Miss Anna Lang, Grand Outside Sentinel, a member of Argonaut Parlor, No. 166, Oakland, was a welcome visitor, as were also Mrs. Daisy Prideaux of Ursula Parlor, No. 1, Jackson, and Mrs. Orr of La Esperanza Parlor, No. 24. Under "good of the Order," Miss Anna Lang gave a splendid talk on the Order, and Miss Grace Culberts reported on the Children's Agency Committee and Mrs. J. A. Adair on the Membership Committee. A banquet followed the meeting.

LATEST OFFICIAL DATA FROM THE P. C. E. SAN DIEGO.

Installation is progressing at the Southern Counties building at the Panama-California Exposition. The outdoor exhibit is one of the most interesting agricultural displays on the grounds, including the model citrus orchard with its growing oranges, lemons, kumquat and other citrus fruits, and the intensive farm, modeled after the best small-area farms of the West.

The mural work now proceeding in the San Joaquin Valley building is entirely of the farm products of that section,—wisps of golden grain in symmetrical design clamped to a background of black cloth. Festoons of the best fruits of the valley will hide the steel girders from sight.

Construction records have been broken by the rapidity of work on the Sacramento Valley building, which stands at the north end of the Plaza de Panama. It required only two weeks and two days to do the excavating and the wooden construction work. Immediately afterward the start was made in the placing of staff and plaster, and the entire structure should be completed shortly after the smaller edifice of Alameda and Santa Clara Counties, just off the other end of the Plaza. The wooden work of the latter building required exactly a week.

Speed nearly as great was made with the state buildings of Washington, Utah and Montana, on which the surface is now going. All three buildings are on the state plateau lying between the completed building of New Mexico, one of the most interesting structures on the grounds, and the big music pavilion on which, by reason of its permanent character, work is moving more slowly.

Much of the tile work on the imposing tower of the California State building, just within the west gate and overlooking the Canyon Cabrillo, is complete and the scaffolding will be down within a short time.

Ralph Appeman, the young aviator who contracted to fly from New York to San Diego in seven days, one-sixth the time required by the only cross-country flight yet made, has gone to New York to get his Morane-Saulnier monoplane (120 horsepower) ready for the start of the flight on December 15th, planning, with allowance for bad weather, to arrive at the exposition grounds about Christmas Day.

The "Isthmus," the amusement street, is living considerably with the start of construction on several more concessions, and the full equipment of some already up. The "Isthmus" has 5,000 feet frontage and will have a rather remarkable assembly of "thrills."

CEREMONY OF FLAG PRESENTATION.

San Francisco—Orinda Parlor, No. 56, N.D.G.W., held a ceremony of presentation of a Bear Flag, September 11th, the presentation being made by Past Grand President Mamie G. Peyton, who happened to be visiting that evening. The president, Edna J. Bishop, accepted the flag in appropriate terms and referred to the Parlor's work in securing the fund for the Bear Flag and said she was sure its possession would be a source of great pride to each member. The pleasure of the evening was lessened by the report of the Visiting Committee that Alma Reimers was very sick. She is suffering with heart asthma; latest report from the sick chamber is that she is improving. Orinda celebrated with the N.S.G.W. at Vallejo on Admission Day. About twenty members paraded, and looked their best in white with red trimmings. The Parlor is looking forward to the official visit of Grand President May C. Boldemann on December 11th, and extends a cordial invitation to all members to attend the meeting at B'nai B'rith Hall, 149 Eddy street.

22 Years a Practicing Attorney

California's Reputation at Stake

(BY THOMAS L. MONROE)

A GOOD NAME is as dear to a state as to an individual, and like the gourd of the prophet, it may perish in a night. Through the years California has enjoyed the reputation of being one of the sanest states in the Union. This reputation has served the State well. It is one of our most precious assets. So when the people of California are asked to change the character of their State it is important for them to consider whether the change may impair their reputation for good judgment; whether it may indicate that California is subject to spasms of hysteria, or indifferent to the principle of personal liberty, or incapable of appreciating the things that are most vital. Now it appears that the question of the future character of this State is to be determined at the election in November. We are asked to commit California to the costly experiment of prohibition. We are asked to enlist under the banner of prohibition.

In these days of high education, noble ideals and cheerful aphorisms it seems strange that serious consideration should have to be given to the Prohibitionist. He is a zealot whose presence in our midst is an impeachment of our civilization. He casts a gloom over the brightest expectations of human progress. He is one of the most discouraging signs of the times, since it is clear that in a country boasting of its civilization he wields a tremendous influence over a broad stretch of territory. What progress can have been made toward the refinements of civilization in a country where the makers of government yield to the persuasions of a third-rate mind in preference to the authority of learning, the teaching of science and the counsel of experience and common sense? The question is asked in no querulous spirit. There is here no disposition to quarrel. The truth is that prohibition has never received the sanction of any intellect of the first rank. Wise men and sensible moralists of all ages have deplored drunkenness and advocated temperance, but no statesman of the first rank, no clergyman, physician, writer or scholar of the first rank ever urged compulsory abstinence or ever discussed prohibition without affirming the folly and irrationality of it. It is unthinkable that any person of high intelligence should ever be found advocating the rash, intemperate innovations of plodding stupidity. The well-ordered mind reckons with "the mighty trunk and hard husk of nature and habit," and is able to perceive the inevitable mischief of striving for a larger measure of reform than the human animal is capable of assimilating. Further, there is nothing more repugnant to the well-ordered mind than intolerance, which is the principle of prohibition, a demon that "moves in wrath and pauses amid ruin," a spirit whose decalogue is written in the blood of martyrs, whose handiwork was the Inquisition of Spain, the fires of Smithfield and the Blue Laws of Connecticut. Californians have never done anything to justify the hope that this particular spirit might flourish in their midst. Yet we are called upon to give it due consideration, and I must attempt to combat a fanaticism with reason, which is like trying to spread quicksilver with a fork.

But all Prohibitionists are not fanatics. Many persons of average intelligence have been misled by gratuitous assertions and fabricated statistics. On their account it is worth while discussing here the questions involved in the great American controversy. Assuredly it is of some importance that the minds of the misled should be disabused of the fallacies that have been accepted as truths on the authority of men highly deficient in intellectual honesty. The mass of misinformation which these men have disseminated in support of their "holy cause" is appalling, and to reflect on it is to cease to wonder that they should have made so many converts. The very first of their postulates is perhaps the most glaring of all their untruths—that prohibition solves the problem of drunkenness. Drunkenness is the "curse of liquor," and all persons of benevolent nature would be glad to see it wiped out. But it is the paradox of prohibition that it is conducive to drunkenness; not only to drunkenness but to evils that are even worse, as we shall presently see. Notwithstanding the claims of Prohibitionists there is but one state to which they point by way of proof that prohibition is a success. This is Kansas, which has had a prohibition law for thirty-four years, and in which no attempt to enforce the law was made until within the last four years. John Ingalls used to say that there was happiness in Kansas because the Prohibitionist had his law and the non-Prohibitionist his whisky. Of late we have been told that the law was being enforced in Kansas. The glad tidings have been spread, but the editor of the "Vindicator," one of the leading organs of the propaganda, has this to say: "I protest that when, even now, under what is called an enforcement administration in Kansas, liquor is shipped into the state in large quantities, and is known to be sold in almost all parts of the state, Kansas cannot be pointed to as an illustration of what real prohibition will do." Clearly it is a sign of carelessness to assume that prohibition is a success in Kansas.

What "real prohibition will do," it is my aim to disclose. If prohibition were merely futile and negligible there would be no cause to complain, but that what it does is not inconsiderable we may infer from the fact that after an experience of it in Vermont, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Michigan, Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska and Pennsylvania, it was abandoned. Knowing as we do that it is not easy to get a law repealed in this country, it is not unreasonable to conclude that the states that tried and abrogated prohibition must have found it to be a positive evil. But of course affirmative testimony on this point would be more satisfactory. There is an abundance of it; not the testimony of perfervid partisans who have a bias that is a means of livelihood, but the testimony of dispassionate investigators who embraced the down-to-earth truth without having to sacrifice a profitable delusion. Prominent among these investigators is Dr. Edward Huntington Williams, formerly professor of pathology of the University of Ohio, a gentleman who has gained distinction in his profession for the light he has thrown on many important questions. "I have recently made an extensive investigation," says Dr. Williams, "the results of which are soon to be published, which has fully convinced me that the net effect of prohibitory legislation is to increase the prevalence of crime (including homicide), insanity and pauperism. Liquor of the worst quality is everywhere dispensed, and the easily transported drugs, morphine and cocaine, supplement the effect of bad whisky." Dr. Williams, by the way, in his recently published work, "The question of Alcohol," which presents the results of an investigation undertaken for the Medical Record, asserts that the police and hospital records of the prohibition states of the South show that "drug habituation" is increasing rapidly. "The South," he says, "in trying to correct a bad condition has created one infinitely worse, and one absolutely beyond the power of the authorities to suppress or even control. The drug-users," he says, "are practically a unit in declaring that they began taking the drug because it was more easily obtained than their accustomed beverages." From the same authority we learn that in Kansas insanity has been on the increase during the years that efforts have been made to enforce prohibition. "The facts," he says, "seem to substantiate the claims of the license advocates that in prohibition states the relative consumption of spirituous liquors increases, and the amount of malt beverages diminishes." He adds: "For whiskey, not beer, is the cause of most alcoholic psychoses." In perfect accord with the claims of the license advocates alluded to by Dr. Williams is the Rev. Dr. Parkhurst of New York, who says: "The more beer and wine there is produced in this country, and the more freely they are transported from state to state the less whisky will be used and the smaller will be the amount of drunkenness." By all disinterested authority the testimony is the same—that prohibition is a positive evil. Some years ago former President Eliot of Harvard, the late Bishop Potter, Seth Low, Dr. Felix Adler and Professor Atwater reported that prohibition had "schooled a generation of lawbreakers in evasion and shamelessness," and they added that it was a "cause with a moral end which had made immoralities conspicuous."

The famous Bishop Horne once observed how often "strange work" had been done in the world under the name and pretense of reformation; how often "it had turned out to be, in reality, deformation." This appears to be the case with prohibition. Ostensibly the purpose of the dogmatist of the dry cause is to legislate a virtue into the human family; but until his conception of virtue is generally accepted it will be possible for him to accomplish nothing but mischief. A man of third-rate mind, he represents him to be an apostle of human progress, but he can appeal neither to God, history nor human science for his commission. Let him consult the source of all the principles of Christian morality, and he will find Christ converting water into wine at a wedding feast. Let him consult history and he will find that man through all the stages of his evolution upward has been indulging in alcoholic beverages. The only notable hiatus in the procession of progress across the centuries is to be found in the lands of the Mohammedans where the peoples who are total abstainers are dwelling in the dark backward and abyss of time. Contrast the Arabs and Turks with the beer-drinking Germans, with the Latin lovers of the juice of the grape, and with the high-ball drinkers of England, and it will afford no argument in support of prohibition. When it comes to science we may find a few obscure charlatans supplying fabricated statistics to the cause of prohibition, but the International Psychological Congress, the great British Medical Association, the Galton Laboratory, all well-recognized authorities, are to be found combatting the errors of teetotalers. Nowhere is there a more eminent authority in psychology than Professor Muensterberg of Harvard, who has made a study of some of the points under discussion and who does not regard total abstinence as a desirable virtue. Emphatically he asserts that a nation of total abstainers would rapidly deteriorate. So sure is he that stimulants are as essential as the other things that man has been taking since the earth and its products were given him to enjoy that he affirms that total abstinence would destroy the power of great achievement.

It would seem that we may look in vain for material out of which to fashion an honest argument in support of the principle of prohibition. Has any new light been thrown on the question to justify the present agitation in this State? Not a bit. Every ray of light shed on the subject serves but to make clearer the irrationality of total abstinence. As result of the scientific study induced by the persistence of the fanaticism we have come to learn that without exception the postulates of prohibition formerly accepted by its opponents are unwarrantable. Astonishing are the results of recent research and inquiry. Formerly it was assumed that all alcoholic beverages were in a measure injurious even to the temperate drinker. No good at all, it was supposed, ever came of drinking. A somewhat different view now obtains. As we have seen, a noted psychologist holds that total abstinence is in restraint of the things that make for human progress. Now there are many physiologists who hold that alcohol is more or less essential to all of us. Prohibitionists say it is a poison. They had pull enough with the smug Book Trust to have the assertion inserted in many school books. However, the International Physiological Congress tells us it is an error to describe alcohol as a poison, and adds: "It supplies energy like common articles of food." Formerly we were led to believe that alcohol was the cause of many diseases. Paresis was attributed to alcoholic excess. Every medical student is now aware that paresis is caused by a specific germ that comes from a certain disease. It was once thought that alcoholic excess led to tuberculosis. The British Medical Association is authority for the statement that it stays the development of disease. Dr. Edward Huntington Williams informs us that whereas it was once supposed that chronic nephritis, arterio-sclerosis and cirrhosis of the liver resulted chiefly from alcoholic excess, it is now known that these maladies are more frequently found in the bodies of non-alcoholics than in the bodies of drinkers. Along with these authorities comes the famous Dr. Osler to proclaim the advantages of alcohol in the treatment of twenty different classes of disease. But Prohibitionists are not dismayed. Even now they are asserting that it is the practice of insurance companies to offer total abstainers advantages in the shape of reduced premiums. This is one of the few instances in which the dry propagandists approximate the truth half way. The whole truth is that some insurance companies recognize the fact that total abstinence is not an aid to long life. As a matter of fact the knowledge has been spreading of late that total abstinence is no better for the body than for the mind. This knowledge first emanated from the Collective Investigating Committee of the British Medical Association, which had made the question the special object of inquiry. According to the findings of the committee the average age of temperate drinkers, men who drink at their meals, is 62.13 years; that of decidedly intemperate drinkers, that is, hard drinkers and drunkards, 52.03 years, while that of total abstainers is but 51.22 years. These figures are not greatly at variance with the findings of Dr. Isenhart, the Swiss scientist, who says that the teetotaler reaches his fiftieth year with difficulty. From all of which it would seem that the logical substitute for the present barbarous modes of capital punishment would be condemnation to total abstinence. Now in this instance there is nothing in the findings of science to marvel at. In an age when the human machine is under forced draught it is in need of the relaxation that is enjoyed by the moderate drinker. To deprive oneself of it is to invite collapse. Further, alcohol is an aid to digestion, and the man who drinks wine or beer at his meals is more likely to be a leisurely eater than the one who gravely applies himself to the business of eating as though it were a task. Dyspepsia, we are inclined to fancy, is sometimes at once a consequence of total abstinence and a cause of the prohibition temperament. For so strong is the spirit of envy that doubtless it makes a dyspeptic angry to see a man enjoying himself at his meals. Peasoup being his favorite tippie, he would have all the world on the pea-soup diet.

The question of health is not the only question involved in the prohibition agitation. A very important question is the economic one. Aside from the vast destruction of industries which the Prohibitionists propose, they would also increase the general burden of taxation; for, as everybody knows, the most generous of all contributors to the Federal, State and municipal treasuries are the brewery, wine and liquor interests. Prohibitionists tell us our taxes would not be increased by prohibition, since as a result of it the cost of government is reduced. To give color to this argument, they say it is the liquor traffic that fills our prisons and asylums and keeps our police and our courts busy. But if we are to believe Dr. Williams, who has made an extensive investigation, it is not the liquor traffic but prohibition that keeps up the high cost of government, increasing as it does crime, pauperism and insanity. If prohibition reduced the cost of government it should be easy to produce the proof. Where is it? Has anybody ever seen a comparison of the cost of government before and after? Where has the police force of a city been reduced; or the number of courts; or the number of asylums; or the number of prisons? Where in all this paradise of pampered politicians, this parade ground of the colossal army of taxeaters, has it ever come to public notice that the payroll was shortening by reason of a diminution of jobs, a contraction of patronage? The only reports we have ever seen of the economic effects of prohibition appeared some time ago in the North American Review and the New York Sun. According to the Review, "the states of the Union without exception which have adopted prohibitory laws either in whole or in part, have either experienced a material decrease in population or have fallen far behind in their growth." Further, the Review found on an investigation in thirty-three states that in dry towns the average tax rate on each $100 of valuation was $2.43, while in wet towns the average was $1.59. Similar were the results as to rents and real estate values. This is what the Sun said: "In Georgia and Alabama, more particularly in Savannah and Atlanta, as in Birmingham and Huntville, it now appears that prohibition has stimulated the criminal record and at the same time crimped the treasury." If the consequence of the prohibitory law in Georgia and Alabama was the crimping of the treasury, consider what the effect would be in California, where there is $150,000,000 invested in the wine industry, $50,000,000 in breweries and $10,000,000 in the business of distributing beers, wines and liquors. It would be hard to conceive a greater economic disaster than the one planned by the ruthless zealots of the Middle West now preaching the dry gospel in our midst.

It would seem that instead of merely defending ourselves against a crusade so fraught with mischief, we ought to be back-firing its professional promoters. These men who are fanning the flame of a highly remunerative and malignant fanaticism are certainly deserving of attention. Are we to be tolerant of them upon the theory that they are merely laboring under a delusion? And is it possible to justify a destructive scourge, fatal at once to health, morality and all the most vital interests of the State, merely by a profession of philanthropic motives and a flourish of broad phylacteries? If we were to act on the principle that Prohibitionists would sanctify, a principle somewhat inconsistent with personal liberty, we should seek to avert the enormities their activities entail by muzzling them. I submit that I have taken no extravagant view of the significance and portent of prohibition. Indisputable records, unimpeachable testimony corroborate all that has been said herein respecting the moral cause that has made "immoralities conspicuous."

BEAR FLAG PARTY'S

ACTIONS ABLY DEFENDED

(By HON. JAMES D. PHELAN, Pacific Parlor, N.S.G.W., San Francisco.)

WAS PRESENT IN SANTA CRUZ last July when a local company of amateur players gave an excellent performance, in the River Theater, of an original play called, I believe, "The Pioneers," in which General John C. Fremont was the principal character. In one scene, he rides in on horseback, and observing the Bear Flag, gave a stern and peremptory order, "Tear that rag down!" Running through the entire play, was ridicule of the Bear Flag Party. I think that the official organ of the Native Sons of the Golden West should take cognizance of such matters as this.

It may be that the Bear Flag Party was rough and discourteous in its treatment of General Vallejo, but it must be borne in mind that General Vallejo represented, in Central California, the authority which ordered all Americans to leave the territory within two weeks, on pain of death. The Bear Flag Party raised the flag of revolution over the barracks at Sonoma, and took the commandant prisoner to Sutter's Fort, near Sacramento. In doing so, they took their lives in their hands, and struck in defense of what they believed to be their rights, and paved the way for the occupation of this country by the United States.

This was on June 14, 1846. France and England were then considering the acquisition of California, and the Bear Flag Party doubtless were inspired to raise the flag of revolt in order that this territory, if it was destined to pass into foreign hands, should become the possession of the United States. Under the folds of the American Flag, there would be equal rights for all, so the Bear Flag stood for a principle, and was not, by any means, the wanton act of border ruffians, as some would have us believe.

Shortly after, war having broken out between Mexico and the United States, the American Flag was raised in Monterey, and the Bear Flag was hauled down to give way to the Stars and Stripes. Events are measured in history by their results. When Commodore Sloat in the "Savannah," arrived in Monterey on July 2nd, he was closely followed by the British sloop of war "Collingwood," commanded by Sir George Seamore. What would have been the consequences had Sloat longer delayed, we can only surmise, but he did hesitate for five days before raising the flag, during which time he made diligent inquiry as to the conditions in the country. He learned that the Bear Flag had been raised by a body of Americans in revolt against Mexican rule, and when he learned this, it hastened his own action. If he had waited a few days longer, he might have had England to count with; so the Bear Flag raising at a most critical time in the history of California and of the United States (for it was an event of Nation-wide importance), doubtless saved a difficult situation and averted a possible conflict.

Again, the great war in Europe today was brought about by the desire of Serbia and Russia to obtain a warm water port for the accommodation of their commerce. The continental destiny of the United States required that she should possess the Pacific Coast. If England had gained a foothold (and the Mexicans preferred England, as revealed in diplomatic correspondence at the time between the British Vice-Consul and the Foreign Office in London), the United States would have had a bitter struggle to gain this territory, if indeed, she ever could have gained it against the land-hunger and tenacity of England.

Therefore, I conclude that the Bear Flag Party, having forced the hand of Commodore Sloat, caused the raising of the American Flag at Monterey before the arrival of the British warship, and thus enabled the United States to possess, without conflict, the fairest and most coveted of her possessions.

HANGTOWN OF HISTORY

and sound, and on time, after unmercifully bumping him in the mad drive over the corded bed of the old immigrant road, called the "Oglesby Grade."

On the hills surrounding the town, Snowshoe Thompson tried out the first snowshoes he made from oak in Sacramento Valley, weighing twenty-five pounds, and on which he traveled back and forth over the Sierra Nevada Mountains, carrying the United States mail to Carson and Genoa, in Nevada.

The One Remaining Fragment.

How the old '49er, bovering on the uncertain brink of the gap between, would love to revisit the town once more and renew the scenes of "long ago!" But he would find it so changed he would need a guide—the cabins are gone, the tall pines have been felled, the mule trails that were superseded by dug-ways for stages and great teams that thundered down the mountain sides have become highways over which the speeding automobile spins. The doleful wail of the Indian woman lamenting the slain of her tribe, the pensive note of the mourning dove so rarely heard, the roar of the mining camp that drowned the feeble voices of nature and her children—not only the sounds of the past, but the sights, have changed. "Hangtown" that was, lives only in memory.

The only fragment of that mining town of the past is a pane of glass from the first log cabin, built by Benjamin F. Post in 1848. It is owned by F. F. Barss, a pioneer jeweler. On the day of President Lincoln's funeral, April 19, 1865, William Frank Stewart wrote the following lines on a piece of paper and pasted it on the pane, where it still remains:

"Touch me gently, friend of mine;
I'm all that's left of '49.
Many a long-forgotten face
Hath watched me in my good old place;
Many a heart, once true and warm,
Hath watched through me the threatened storm.
A moral on my face is cast
Which all must truly learn at last:
Man's hopes and fears are all, alas!
Like me, a fractured pane of glass."

The former "Hangtown" is now an incorporated city—Placerville. The hills and valleys re-echo the bells and whistles of the hissing steam engine, and the streets resound with the honk of the automobile. There are telegraph and telephone lines, the best of educational facilities, churches, etc. There is a wide variety of money-making occupations, and the man who chances Placerville need fear nothing if he has intelligence and adaptability; he is master of the situation and his future is assured.

The Central Eureka mine near Sutter Creek, Amador County, has opened up an excellent vein of good milling ore, and expects to have all the forty stamps in operation the end of this month.

The Chamber of Mines and Oil of Los Angeles has petitioned the Congress of the United States to pass an act, as an emergency measure, suspending the operation of the mining laws requiring annual labor for the year 1914.

A. A. Krogdahl of the United States Bureau of Mines, conducted a very successful first-aid field meet at Jackson, Amador County, on Labor Day. A large number of teams from the Mother Lode district competed for prizes offered by the American Mine Safety Association and the operators and miners of the district.

HAS NO INTENTION OF CREATING A MONOPOLY.

An impression prevails that it is the intention of the State Industrial Accident Commission, at the next session of the Legislature, to recommend certain amendments to the existing law providing for State monopoly of compensation insurance. The Commission has sent out notice that it has no such intention.

It is of the opinion that the highest good will be conserved, and the best public service rendered, by a free and fair competition between the State and the private stock insurance companies, under the jurisdiction of the State Insurance Commissioner, in order that there may be certainty that injured workers will receive their compensation.

SOUTHERN LAW COLLEGE OPENS WITH LARGE ENROLLMENT.

The College of Law, University of Southern California, opened the fall semester on September 15th with the largest enrollment in its history. A student body of 700 is expected for the year. This school, which now ranks as the fifth largest law school in America, has just completed the tenth year of its affiliation with the University of Southern California, with an enrollment of 610.

The remarkable growth of the school may be attributed to the fact that wherever known, its system of instruction is meeting with the approval of those who contemplate the study of law. This method of instruction is a combination of the best features of the text book and case systems. Text books are used as the basis of instruction, with special reference to cases which will bring clearly to the mind of the student the particular application of a given rule to the law of California. By this method, a student becomes fitted to practice law in California, and also in those states where the common law is still followed. The faculty has been chosen from men of experience and particular learning in the subject for which they are chosen to teach. Thirty-eight of our leading judges and lawyers of the Los Angeles bar hold places on the faculty.

A special feature of the course of instruction is the practice court work. Fourteen prominent attorneys in the city preside over this department. A visit to the College of Law any Tuesday night during the school year will show fifteen departments of the Superior Court of the College of Law in session. The procedure is patterned exactly after the courts of Los Angeles County. In addition to these, the Supreme Court and District Court of Appeals may be found in session, which are presided over by judges of the Superior Court of Los Angeles County.

The hours of recitation are so arranged that men in business may study law and attend all classes without taking time from their work. Classes recite at 8 a.m., 10:15 a.m., 12:15 p.m., 5:15 p.m. during the day, and the night classes are held at 7 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. The school occupies two floors of the Tajo Building, First and Broadway, an ideal location because of its being so near the courts and county law library. This College of Law confers three degrees, LL.B. to those who have finished the three-year undergraduate course, LL.M. for a fourth year of work, and J.D. to those already holding an A.B. degree.—(Advertisement.)

A LESSON IN PLOWING

NOTE STRENGTH OF PLANT, WITH NUMBER OF HEADS, ON DEEP PLOWING.

Diagram No. 1, Extension Department North Dakota Agricultural College, W. C. Palmer, Agricultural Editor.

WHY THE BIG PLANT AND WHY the small plant? Notice the difference in root development in the deep and shallow plowing. The surface two inches will dry out. In the case of four-inch plowing, that will leave only two inches of moist plowed soil to feed the plant, while in the case of eight-inch plowing there will be six inches of moist plowed soil, or three times as much to feed the plant. Then again the lower four inches of the deep plowing will contain more than twice as much moisture as the lower two inches of the shallow plowing. Study the statements following very carefully:

WHY PLOW DEEP? 1. Plants feed in the soil turned by the plow—the seed bed. 2. Deep plowing takes in more moisture when it rains. 3. Holds moisture better. 4. The crop does not suffer as much from hot winds.

HOW TO PLOW DEEP. Follow binder with disc. This, in loosening up the surface soil, cuts off evaporation and also kills weeds that take lots of water. This will hold enough moisture so the soil will pulverize thoroughly, which is the main purpose of plowing. Plowing the soil dry, is a good deal like kneading the dry flour instead of the dough.

WHEN TO PLOW DEEP. In the fall—the earlier the better—or when summer fallowing.

The moisture moves through the compact soil, so to get moisture to move from subsoil into plowed soil, pack it with a subsurface packer the same day as plowed. The point is to pack the lower part of the plowed soil and not to pack the surface, which breaks up soil granules and makes it easier for the soil to drift. And then again the surface soil is wanted loose.

HOW TO KEEP SOIL FROM DRIFTING. Keep it full of grass or alfalfa roots and manure. Plow under green plants. These all hold soil grains together in granules just as a band holds a bunch of shingles together. Harrow soil when moist on surface. The disc causes less drifting than the harrow. Do not use roller or planker—they break up the little lumps on the surface into fine soil which can be blown away and they pack the surface soil, which is wanted loose.

In case the soil is already drifting, spread straw thinly over the field. Better yet, manure; spread thin with a manure spreader.

HOW TO KEEP MOISTURE FROM EVAPORATING. Loosen surface soil with disc, harrow or weeder, as the moisture cannot move up through loose soil. In the fall use the disc; it makes a mulch and also leaves soil rough.

CAUTION. In case the land has been plowed shallow and it is desired to plow several inches deeper than formerly, it is often well to bare fallow the land, as that gives more time for the turned up subsoil to be acted upon by the weathering agencies which make its plant food available. If a great deal of subsoil is brought at once the plant will necessarily have to do much of its growing in this subsoil; if it has not been up for some time the crop may not do so well on it. In case of fall plowing it is best to go only one or two inches deeper each time; however, if the land is not disced after the binder it will not, as a rule, be possible to go any deeper than the land was plowed before.

SUMMARY: To make a good seed bed, rotate the crops, follow binder with disc, plow early and deep, pack the same day, and harrow or disc early in spring.

Editor's Note.—The above matter is furnished by the North Dakota Extension-Agricultural College. If the bay and grain farmers of California would accept and use the advice given, it would result in added value to the yearly production in this State of several million dollars. I can convince anyone of the truth of this statement. Send for "How to Increase the Yield of Wheat in California," Bulletin No. 211, read the summary on the last page, and then read the body of the publication—State Agricultural Experiment Station, Berkeley, California. The same principles apply to raising any agricultural crop.

FERTILITY SNAPSHOTS.

It is said that "Nitrogen promotes growth, phosphorus produces fruitfulness and early maturity, and potash increases quality."

Most sandy, clay or heavy soils contain sufficient potash and phosphorus, but are wholly lacking in humus, organic matter and nitrogen. Worn-out soils are lacking in these three ingredients.

For a soil to be in its highest state of fertility it must contain germ life and bacteria. These are always found in their greater abundance within the first six inches of soil, and they get their food from organic matter.

Plowing under those crops that are the best for green manuring brings better results than derived from the use of ordinary barnyard manure. A few loads of barnyard manure fresh from the stable scattered over the green manuring crop before plowing helps the decomposing process, and lime also assists greatly.

Soil is never soured by plowing under green crops if it is well drained, and is thoroughly harrowed or cultivated and thus well fined and pulverized.

Vetch is a good remedy for cloversick soil and it is the most valuable fertilizing plant yet discovered.

POULTRY HINTS FOR OCTOBER.

Begin now to get things in good condition for winter. Be careful that young stock is not taken from airy coops and shut into winter quarters that are warm and tight. Let them have plenty of fresh air, but no draughts. Do not have too many windows, as they make the houses hot during the day and cold at night. Remember the birds have on their new coats and are not in need of so much warmth. Damp and wet are far worse for fowls than cold, and hens are often kept from laying on account of poor houses. This time of the year a change to damp and cold will often give colds that will perhaps lead to a case of roup during the winter. Keep the house clean, warm and dry, disinfect often, and much will be done to prevent disease. Warm and dry quarters are necessary for the birds that are not through with moult.

Do not keep the cockerels intended for market too long; the price is going down as it nears November, and the turkey has the right of way.

The cockerels to be sold for breeding purposes are being culled rapidly. Get the orders in early.

Early hatched pullets, or yearling hens that have moulted in season; airy houses without too many glass windows and no draughts; plenty of litter to keep the fowls busy scratching; a good supply of fresh air; clean water, shell and grit; and all mixed well with a whole lot of human kindness is a simple rule for getting eggs this winter.

Bank the houses to keep them free from draughts and keep enough litter on the floor to keep their feet warm and to give them plenty of exercise scratching for their morning feed. The circulation of blood is very active through a hen's foot, and she cannot make her food into eggs if it takes too much of it to keep herself warm.

OCTOBER PLANTING CALENDAR.

VEGETABLE GARDEN.—Seeds of peas may be planted now, and if the winter is not too severe will bring very nice crops in January. Vetches and field peas are sown this month and turned under for green fertilizer in the spring. Sow the seeds of lettuce, spinach, radishes and onions, and if a light frame can be used for covering, tomatoes and peppers may be sown in beds so as to furnish plants as soon as the cold weather dispels.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Plant bulbs of hyacinths, tulips, narcissus, Easter lilies, St. Joseph lily, ranunculus, anemones, tritoma, sparaxis and freesias. More pansies and stocks may be sown this month. Violet, stock and pansy plants are put in the places where they are expected to bloom.

FARMERS OPPOSE.

Representatives of thirty county branches of the Farmers' Protective League of California met in Sacramento and adopted plans to oppose the proposed universal eight-hour law, the home rule in taxation proposal, the water commission act, and several other measures that were declared to be detrimental to the interests of agriculture in California.

PREPARE FOR CORN CROP.

Autumn is the time to prepare for a profitable corn crop the following season. At this time the seed is most abundant, and the very best can be obtained before it has been in any way reduced in vitality. Many let the opportunity pass, expecting to purchase their seed corn in the spring, but the United States Agricultural Department's specialist in charge of corn investigations advises that the autumn is the best time to obtain good seed.

THE STATE'S DEVELOPMENT

(California Development Board Bulletin.)

Inquiry among those engaged in the most important lines of production and trade in this State indicates general opinion that, with the exception of petroleum and copper, and to a less extent lumber and dried apricots, no California industry will be injuriously affected by the European war and most will be benefited. Trade with all Oriental nations, and probably with Australia, is expected to increase. In fact, while the cost of such a war must ultimately be distributed over the world and be a loss to all civilization, temporary profit cannot but come to neutral nations and especially to this country with its great areas, self-sustaining character, and varied production, and moreover with the power to protect its rights as a neutral.

According to figures furnished by the Citrus Protective League of California, it is estimated that the total shipments of citrus fruits from the State up to November 1st will be approximately 48,182 cars of oranges and lemons, about 3,000 of which will be lemons. It is estimated that the net returns to the State will amount to over $32,000,000. This will be the highest shipment on record and compares with the season of 1910-11, when a total of 46,399 cars were shipped.

Word comes from the Lima Bean Growers' Association that the lima bean crop of California never looked better at this time of the year than it does at the present. From present indications there will be more bags of beans harvested this year than last year. The growers in the lima bean districts are happy. They are able to contract their beans at very high prices, notwithstanding a good crop in view.

Two carloads of apricot pits were sold by a Pomona, Los Angeles County, cannery. These kernels were exported to Germany, where they are used in the making of imitation almond oil, which is greatly in demand abroad.

It is predicted that the value of the rice crop in Butte County this year will reach a million dollars. It is expected there will be fully 500,000 sacks harvested.

It is reported that Count Paul von Neindorff, acting for the German army, recently purchased ten carloads of garlic from the Southern California counties.

Word comes from the Sebastopol Berry Growers' Association that a conservative estimate of the total tonnage of the season's output for that section is 2,515 tons, viz.: 75 tons of strawberries, 90 tons of raspberries, 550 tons of loganberries, 700 tons of Mammoth blackberries and 1,100 tons of Lawton blackberries.

Sixteen thousand young wood oil trees were recently shipped out from the United States Plant Introduction Garden at Chico, Butte County, to points in Florida and Georgia. The tree, an importation from China, bears a nut which yields an oil highly valued in varnish production.

The Blythe Chamber of Commerce reports that the cotton crop in that locality will amount to 500 bales. The Cotton Growers' Association is advertising for cotton pickers to harvest 3,000 acres in the Palo Verde Valley, beginning September 15th and continuing until February. Wages, $1 per hundred pounds.

El Dorado County has sent to the Board some apples which are so large that there are no cylinder jars will contain them. One of them weighs twenty-seven and one-half ounces and five of them, side by side, cover a two-foot rule.

PIONEER MOTHER MONUMENT

READY JANUARY FIRST.

San Francisco—California's 501,000 school children, and grown-ups, too, are responding to the Pioneer Mother monument financial campaign in a way that makes it certain the West will show Panama-Pacific International Exposition visitors a worthy monument to the women of '49. The monument, to be in bronze, will show a typical Pioneer Mother, simply but worthily clad, with two children at her knees. It will be installed January 1st.

Various organizations, including the Native Sons and Native Daughters, who have been the heaviest contributors, have taken a keen interest in the project, as have countless individuals, and the fund has been constantly growing.

The niftiest California souvenir ever offered is a reproduction, in metal, of El Camino Real signpost. You'll want one; so will your friends, especially in the East. How can you get one? See back cover, this issue.—(Advertisement.)

Admission Day Dance.

Santa Barbara—Admission Day was celebrated in this city by a dance at Elks' Hall under the auspices of Reina del Mar Parlor, No. 126. About 250 dancers occupied the floor, and the affair was a pronounced success. At midnight, dainty refreshments were served on the stage, which was beautifully draped with fish nets, decorated with California poppies and asparagus fern.

Spreading Home Industry Doctrine.

Sacramento—The lecture given in the Sequoia Theater, August 27th, under the auspices of Sutter Parlor, No. 111, was attended by a large and appreciative audience. The success of the affair was largely due to the efforts of the organization's president, Miss Holmes, and Mrs. L. E. Moose, secretary. This lecture on "California Industries" is one of a series being given in the principal cities of the State in the interest of the Home Industry League of California. The facts and figures presented were in the nature of a revelation to many in the audience. It was demonstrated that this State must develop her manufacturing industries if she is to reap the benefit expected from the opening of the Panama Canal. One of the big problems confronting us as a result of that event will be the question of how to furnish employment for the multitudes now coming to California. "There is but one solution," said the speaker. "We must have factories." The lecture was made more entertaining by motion pictures of California factories in operation. Those who heard the lecture were doubtless impressed with the importance of patronizing California industries, thus keeping money in circulation here, which would otherwise go to make prosperity elsewhere. Mr. Butterfield is an able speaker, and held the closest attention of his auditors to the end of the lecture. He has a pleasing voice and an easy address, which put him at once in favor with his audience.

Many Greet Order's Head.

San Rafael—August 31st, Grand President May C. Boldemann made her official visit to Marinita Parlor, No. 198, forty members being present. She complimented the officers on the way the ritualistic work was rendered, and the deep interest all the members had in the welfare of the Parlor. District Deputy Anna Daly, in a few well-chosen remarks, told the visiting grand officer how the Parlor was rapidly progressing. Grand Inside Sentinel Dora Bloom, Past Grand President Emma Gruber Foley and Past President of Sea Point Parlor Jennie Swanson were called on for a few remarks, and responded in a very becoming manner. Immediately after the meeting, all retired to the banquet-room, where light refreshments were served. The following grand officers were present: Grand President May C. Boldemann, who was presented with a dainty sugar-bowl and creamer; Grand Inside Sentinel Dora Bloom, a bouquet of flowers of the season, and Emma Gruber Foley, former District Deputy Grand President of Marinita Parlor and Past Grand President, a nut bowl. There were also present delegations from Fremont Parlor, No. 59, La Estrella Parlor, No. 89, Orinda Parlor, No. 56, Los Angeles Parlor, No. 124, Copa de Oro Parlor, No. 105, and Sea Point Parlor, No. 196.

Pioneers Entertained.

Hollister—The members of Copa de Oro Parlor, No. 105, assisted by the members of Fremont Parlor, No. 44, N.S.G.W., entertained the Pioneers the afternoon of September 12th at their hall, which was beautifully decorated with yellow poppies and coryopsis interwoven in greens and streamers of yellow satin ribbons festooned from the pillars. There was a short program, interspersed with short talks by some of the old Pioneers, who gave their experiences in crossing the plains and after landing in this State. The program included: Short address of welcome; duet, piano and violin; vocal solo, "Welcome, Pioneer"; vocal solo, "N. S. and N. D. California," by a little girl in costume; vocal solo, "The Song That Reached My Heart"; duet, mandolin and guitar; solo, "The Perfect Day"; solo, "Take Me Back to Babyland"; solo, "Apple Blossom Time in Normandy." Following this, the Pioneers were invited to the dining-room, where a banquet was spread. The room was beautifully decorated in festoons of crepe ribbon with yellow blossoms, and the table decorations were huge bunches of helianthus.

Grand President at Home Parlor.

San Francisco—The hall of La Estrella Parlor, No. 89, was the scene of a very happy occasion September 1st, when Grand President May C. Boldemann made her official visit to her home Parlor. Over a hundred Native Daughters were in attendance, representing twenty-two Parlors. The following grand officers were present: Grand President May C. Boldemann, Grand Vice-president Margaret G. Hill, Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Inside Sentinel Dora Bloom, Grand Outside Sentinel Anna F. Lange, Grand Trustee Addie Mosher, and Past Grand President Emma G. Foley. The grand officers complimented La Estrella Parlor on its ritualistic work, and also on its fine corps of officers. The Grand President was presented with a silver salad fork and spoon, as a token of her Parlor's affection, and also received a beautiful bouquet of red dahlias from D.D.G.P. May Noble and a handkerchief case from D.D.G.P. Dr. Winifred Byrne. Past Grand President Emma G. Foley was the recipient of a picture from D.D.G.P. May Barry.

Most Enjoyable Reunion.

Georgetown—El Dorado Parlor, No. 186, observed Admission Day after their meeting, September 9th, by entertaining the Pioneers of this vicinity. The affair was successful beyond expectations, and will be repeated next September. It was a sort of get-together dinner, with only Pioneers, Native Daughters, and the Parlor physician present. During the dinner, Lizzie Murdock, now of Reno, Nevada, sweetly sang some of the old-time songs, and later many of the guests joined in singing melodies of long ago. One dear old woman, past 84, who has not been out of her home for ten years, was brought to the hall in an auto, and invalid as she was, enjoyed the reunion of old friends to the utmost; she also enjoyed her first auto ride. This Pioneer Mother, Mrs. M. A. Robson, crossed the plains in 1853, and gave birth to a daughter en route; this daughter came with her mother to the hall, but did not remain. At the head of the table sat John Pedrini, 97 years of age, and still hale and hearty. The youngest of the guests was Supervisor Peter F. Morgan, who came here in 1862, but who does not remember the trip. Those unable to be present, on account of infirmities or sickness, were remembered with a plate laden with good things. A visiting member, Mrs. Susanna Dow of Keith Parlor, No. 137, San Francisco, made a neat little speech. A. J. Macy of Georgetown Parlor, No. 91, N.S.G.W., kindly carried many of the older guests in his auto. Following are the names of the Pioneers present, and the date of their arrival in California: Mrs. Melissa J. Handy, 1850; B. W. Hartless, 1850; George Handy, 1852; James F. Walk, 1852; Mrs. Clara E. Jerrett, 1852; Mrs. Emma Bingham, 1852; Mrs. Margaret A. Robson, 1853; John F. Farnsworth, 1853; Daniel Heindel, 1853; Mrs. Elizabeth Buchler, 1854; Mrs. Georgia Knox, 1852; Mrs. Blanche C. Ward, 1854; William H. Vaughn, 1854; Basil Scolari, 1856; John C. Day, 1855; John Pedrini, 1855; Mrs. Julia Jonsson, 1857; Mrs. N. B. Benjamin, 1857; Mrs. L. F. Ralston, 1857; Mrs. Sallie B. Armstrong, 1860; Godfrey Smeder, 1859; Isaac G. Swift, 1859; John Chesrown, 1860; Mrs. Amanda E. Russell, 1864; Peter F. Morgan, 1862; Joseph Swift, 1862; Mrs. Jean H. Sornberger, 1866; Mrs. Florinda Francis, 1869; Charles P. Barbee, 1869. El Dorado Parlor is four years old, and has forty members. Mrs. Clara W. Rupley is the president of the Parlor.

Correction Requested.

Vallejo—In the official program of the Admission Day celebration recently held in this city, the privilege for which was authorized by the General Celebration Committee, the photograph of Verna E. Berry was marked, "Pres. Vallejo Parlor, No. 195, N.D.G.W." This was a mistake, as she is at present the Parlor's recording secretary. She was the first president of the Parlor, but there have been several presidents since. Miss Cornelia Ferrea is at present the Parlor's president.

(While not concerned with the many errors that always appear in so-called "official programs," gotten out by individuals not sufficiently interested, and not well enough informed, to publish facts, The Grizzly Bear publishes the above upon urgent solicitation. The utter worthlessness of such publications as "official programs," etc., to the Orders of N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. is evidenced in this case—they cannot correct their own errors, being but temporary affairs, and the errors must, necessarily, be of permanent record, so far as those publications are concerned.—Editor.)

extended the following welcome: "Beloved Pioneers: It is a pleasure to be here today, as I have been selected by San Jose Parlor, No. 81, N.D.G.W., to say a few words of welcome to the Pioneers of Santa Clara County. When we think of the long ago, and see you Pioneers today who blazed the trail to the Golden State of California, we are proud of you—proud that we, the N.D.G.W., have the pleasure of greeting you this day, Admission Day, which was made possible by your daring and perseverance. We can never realize what you Pioneer Fathers and Mothers went through—the Isthmus, with its deadly swamps and fevers; the desert, with its awful thirst; the high mountains, with the bitter cold and snow, and hunger. Yet you are here today, with the frost of many winters on your heads, with a smile and a warm hand-clasp. We do not have to go to ancient history to find the heroes. They are with us today, and in behalf of San Jose Parlor, No. 81, N.D.G.W., we welcome you. I propose this toast:

"Here's to your childhood, with its gold and its gray,

The star of its winter, the dew of its May;
When you are done with life's lasting joys,
Father, receive them, the girls and the boys."

Response to this welcome was given by A. P. Murgotten. Other speakers were: Judge P. F. Gosbey, J. Z. Anderson, A. P. Hill, Mrs. Phil Herold, Mrs. Laura Watkins and Colonel Berry. The entire assemblage then sang "The Star Spangled Banner." The following farewell address was given by Mrs. Gilleran, preceding the benediction, which she also pronounced: "Beloved Pioneers: The time has come for me to say a few words to you Pioneer Fathers and Mothers before we part. We trust you have had a perfect day, and we hope that when old age overtakes you and you stand at the west gate and see the sun of life as it slowly sinks to rest, that all the good things of the beautiful world beyond will come to you all.

"Not for myself I ask thy care, nor hid thy choicest gifts descend; Thy blessing and Thy love bestow, my God, I pray thee, on these friends'."

Dedicates Relics Cabinet.

Oroville—Following the meeting of Gold of Ophir Parlor, No. 190, August 16th, the members adjourned to the Public Library, where the relics cabinet, arranged for and purchased by a committee consisting of Mrs. D. C. McCallum, Mrs. A. F. Jones and Miss Florence Danforth, was appropriately dedicated. Mrs. J. H. Bowers, the Parlor's president, made an appropriate address, closing with the following verses written by Miss Florence Danforth and Mrs. Alta B. Baldwin:

TO THE PIONEERS:

These simple relics to their memory since they held them dear,
Perchance as finding here unconsciously some image of themselves,
We dedicate, we dedicate, we consecrate these to our Pioneers.

And indeed they seem to us more dear as time goes on.
We shall always cherish the memory of our beloved Pioneers.

Many have gone to their last Home,
Crowned with the glories of their wondrous works.

Only humbly can we dedicate this home for the memorials of their day;
The love of loyal sons and daughters
Will ever be for the mighty builders of our State.
May these simple relics long tell the story of their wondrous deeds,
And keep their memory ever bright in the eyes of the world.

Wants Grand President to Visit.

Oakland—Mission Bells Parlor, No. 175, is forging ahead, applications being presented regularly. Preparations are being made for the visit of the Grand President which, the members hope, will be during the current term, as they want her to witness the work of President Edna Wallburg, the youngest member. September 30th, the Parlor gave an entertainment and dance under the management of Past President Strauh, assisted by a corps of workers, which was a great success.

Surprises Native Sons.

Santa Cruz—Santa Cruz Parlor, No. 26, gave an enjoyable surprise to the members of Santa Cruz Parlor, No. 90, N.S.G.W., September 15th. While the Native Sons were in session, the Native Daughters took possession of the clubroom, and laden tables, beautifully decorated with coryopsis and asparagus fern, with good things to eat. Following disposition of the "goodies," Neil Reid

Look over this directory, when in need, and purchase the products of these California manufacturers. Don't accept Eastern substitutes. Demand, and get from your dealer goods produced in Los Angeles, thereby helping yourself and aiding in the State's development.

CALIFORNIA ROMANTIC

"When it is remembered that California was not admitted into the Union till September 9, 1850, and yet that the first session of the State Legislature had met, legislated, and adjourned by April 22, 1850, some appreciation may be had of the speed limit—if there was a limit. The record of the naive self-sufficiency of that Legislature is little short of amazing."

Californians' Ignorance Indefensible.

"It is indefensible," writes Judge Davis, "that in the face of incidents of our history such as these, Californians should be ignorant of the lives and experiences of those who preceded them on this coast. The history of their experiences is a part of the history of the Nation, and the record of the achievement of the empire-builders of this coast is one that inspires civic pride and a reverence for their memories. Why should the story remain practically unknown? * * *

"The thoughtful magnanimity of Captain Philip of the 'Texas' in the moment of victory, in the sea-fight at Santiago, when he checked his men—'Don't cheer, boys; the poor fellows are drowning.'—is enshrined in the hearts of Americans that never thrilled with pride at Commodore Sloat's solemn and patriotic proclamation upon landing his sailors to hoist the colors at Monterey,—a proclamation as fine and dignified as a ritual, that should be committed to memory, as a part of his education, by every schoolboy in California * * * Why herald the ridiculous attempt of Rhode Island to keep out of the Union, and not acclaim the splendid efforts of California to break into it?"

A Beautiful Love Story.

As appendices to "California Romantic and Resourceful," Judge Davis gives us "The Love Story of Concha Arguello," and "Concepcion Arguello," a Bret Harte poem, both dealing with the beautiful early-day California love-story of Concepcion de Arguello and the Russian Count Rezanov. Referring to this sweet story, he says:

"When we think of the love stories that have survived the ages * * *—some of them narratives unfit to handle with tongs—shall we let this local story die? Shall not America furnish a newer and purer standard? If to such a standard Massachusetts is to contribute the 'Courtship of Miles Standish,' may not California contribute the 'Courtship of Rezanov'?"

There is not one page in "California Romantic and Resourceful," as a matter of fact, that is devoid of interest to a Californian, and the book should readily find a place in every California library. Aside from containing valuable historical information, set forth in beautiful language that can be easily understood by the schoolchild, the book breathes a love of State that should be implanted in the heart of every citizen of the State, whether native or adopted.

If Judge Davis' book is as extensively read as it deserves to be, his "arrow" must pierce the patriotic hearts of all lovers of California and induce them to acquaint themselves with the State's beginnings. And let us hope that some generous friends of California history will be so influenced by his inspiring book that they will assist, by the establishment of fellowships in history at the State university, in the preservation and dissemination of California's history—a history worth knowing. "California Romantic and Resourceful" is well printed in large type, attractively bound, and handsomely illustrated. A. M. Robertson, 222 Stockton street, San Francisco, is the publisher.

It is a work that should not only be purchased by every Californian, but its contents thoroughly digested. Every parent should be particularly interested in getting this book into the hands of his children.

N. S. G. W. GRAND OFFICERS MEET.

Successor Elected to Deceased Grand Trustee—Travelers' Aid Society Given Endorsement.

San Francisco—The Board of Grand Officers, N.S.G.W., met in the office of Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung, September 13th, all members being present, and Grand President Louis H. Mooser presiding.

The Grand President announced the death of Grand Trustee Joseph Belloli, Jr., whereupon a motion was passed directing a committee composed of Grand President Mooser, Grand First Vice-president John F. Davis and Grand Second Vice-president Bismarck Bruck, to forthwith prepare suitable resolutions expressive of the regret of the Board on the death of the Grand Trustee.

A letter was received from a joint committee appointed by the San Jose Parlor, to act on their behalf, recommending Walter L. Chrisman of Garden City Parlor, No. 82, San Jose, for the vacancy caused by the death of Grand Trustee Belloli. Being nominated by Junior Past Grand President

WALTER L. CHRISMAN,
Newly-elected Grand Trustee.

Thomas Monahan, Mr. Chrisman was unanimously elected.

The Junior Past Grand President was delegated to install the Grand Trustee-elect in San Jose at some time convenient to all concerned, and it was ordered that the visiting district heretofore assigned to the deceased Grand Trustee be assigned to Grand Trustee Chrisman.

Grand First Vice-president John F. Davis reported that he had been sitting with the Board of Directors of the Travelers' Aid Society, an organization to assist unprotected women and children on their travels by directing them and seeing to it that they reach their proper destination and are kept out of the clutches of designing persons, which board was about to apply to the Subordinate Parlor of the Order with request that they become members of the society, and it was declared the sense of the Board of Grand Officers that it is in hearty accord with the purposes of the Travelers' Aid Society.

The Board then adjourned to the call of the Grand President.

"Live Ones."

Oakland—There are no better words which will so fully describe the officers and members of Claremont Parlor, No. 240, than those above. If ever a Parlor was composed of good, live, energetic workers, it is Claremont. In the past few years, it has continued to forge ahead in membership and finances, and at the end of last term again transferred $200 to its savings account. This is getting to be a habit with the Parlor, and shows a steady advancement. All of this improvement is due to a set of officers who live up to their obligations, and to the members of committees, who perform their duties in an earnest, unselfish and conscientious manner. At the meeting of September 4th, two candidates were initiated, after which a banquet was enjoyed by the members. It is predicted that the coming year will be the most successful one in the history of Claremont. A special committee, known as the Carnival Committee, has been appointed by President Wm. O'Connor to lay the foundation for a gigantic carnival to be held in Golden Gate Park, in the near future. Judging from past performances, the members appointed on this committee will overcome any or all obstacles that may arise. If this committee decides to hold a carnival, the members can rest assured that it will be the most successful one ever held on the east side of the bay. As at past celebrations, the members of Argonaut Parlor, No. 166, N.D.G.W., were the invited guests of Claremont and shared its headquarters at Vallejo, where both Parlors had an enjoyable time on Admission Day. The Claremont band, which is now under the management of the Parlor's treasurer, Dr. Diddle, led the Parlor in the parade on that day.

To Encourage Membership Building.

Weaverville—August 3rd, Mt. Bally Parlor, No. 87, ordered that the member receiving and presenting during each semi-annual term the greatest number of candidates for membership (not less, however, than five,) be awarded an emblematic medal, pin or button of a value of $5, the same to become the personal property of the winner.

In conjunction with Eltapome Parlor, No. 55, N.D.G.W., the Parlor entertained the Pioneer Mothers and Fathers of Trinity County the night of Admission Day.

Enjoys Dove Dinner.

Selma—September 13th, Selma Parlor, No. 107, gave its first annual dove dinner on Kings River, for which a quantity of birds was supplied. Fishing, shooting, swimming and other sports served to make a pleasant day quickly pass for those present and all declared that good cooks had been selected and that they had enjoyed the outing. Many invited members of the Order, and friends, from Fresno were present, including Mr. and Mrs. Ed Victor, Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe, J. B. Daly, Mike Sullivan, Ed Burke, Crooks Mayfield, Frank Victor, Misses Grace and Ethel Burns, Emma Albright. September 30th, the Parlor entertained its friends at a social dance.

Social Season Inaugurated.

San Jose—Observatory Parlor, No. 177, inaugurated the winter social season September 15th with a complimentary dance, tendered to members and friends, that proved a most delightful occasion. During the arrival of the guests, among whom was Walter L. Chrisman of Garden City Parlor, recently elected Grand Trustee, an orchestra rendered concert numbers. Under the direction of Wm. Snook and Chas. Dietz, the hall had been tastefully decorated with the Order's and the national colors, and a thoughtful manipulation of the lights produced a beautiful picture throughout the grand march, which was led by Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Lee. Exhibitions were given of the hesitation and three-step waltz during the evening. The Parlor has chosen one of its members as a dancing master, and will conduct classes, free, for members only, in all the new dances. During the evening, under the direction of J. M. Waterman and A. Fatjo, refreshments were served from a cosy little booth in one corner of the ballroom. The Parlor's Good of the Order Committee has planned many social affairs for the season, and these are keenly looked forward to by those who know Observatory's reputation as an entertainer.

GOOD FELLOWS

Fresno—August 23rd will long be remembered by the members of Fresno Parlor, No. 25, N.S.G.W., and Fresno Parlor, No. 187, N.D.G.W., for on that day Phil Wolfe and wife, both members of the Orders, gave their third anniversary watermelon feed and turkey dinner, but instead of having it at their ranch, as they have in the past two years, it was held at the celebrated Riverview Park, located on the banks of the San Joaquin River, about ten miles from Fresno. Besides the members of the above-mentioned Parlors, there were members of the Order from all parts of the Valley, including Visalia, Dinuba, Selma, and Merced, as well as the different members' wives, and a host of friends. During the day there were at least 400 people present, who enjoyed themselves with boating, swimming, foot-racing, and all kinds of sports. Noon-time was the occasion of a good, old-fashioned basket picnic. Of course, every basket had to be raffled, and the bidding was very spirited. After the baskets were raffled,—and every fellow had bought his best girl's basket,—the tables were spread under the shade of the magnificent trees, for which the park is justly celebrated, and one can imagine what a good time was spent.

Among other things provided by Mr. Wolfe and his better half were three hundred watermelons, which were partaken of during the day. During the afternoon, all kinds of racing was competed in by the different members, also the women. But the fifty-yard dash between the president of Fresno Parlor, Sol. Peiser, Harry Say, one of the original charter members of Selma Parlor, John Hutchison (who while being a native son, has not joined the Order up to the present time, but expects to inside of the next sixty days), and Grand Trustee Wm. F. Toomey, was the event of the day. All these men weigh in the neighborhood of 200 pounds and heavier, and it was a comical sight. Of course, after several of the contestants had fallen down and gotten up again, Toomey won the race, and prize.

At 5:30 the tables were spread for the elegant turkey feed which the host and hostess had provided. There were over twenty turkeys, and all the accessories, and it was a beautiful sight to see those well-laden tables. After everybody had satisfied the inner man, Grand Trustee Toomey, who was toastmaster of the occasion, called on about twenty-five of the visiting friends and members of the Order, which resulted in some very good talks. After the dinner, all present rose to their feet and joined in singing to Phil Wolfe and wife the good old song, "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." Dancing was then indulged in until a late hour and everybody returned home tired and happy, but you can rest assured that Mr. and Mrs. Phil Wolfe were voted the prince and princess of good fellows.

WRITER WHO SPREAD

PATRIOTISM PASSES BEYOND.

There recently passed away in San Francisco Anna D. Phillips who, from time to time, contributed many choice hits of verse to The Grizzly Bear. She was possessed of an unquenchable love of country due, it is said, to the fact that her brothers served in the Civil War as members of Illinois regiments, and this love was expressed in many of her writings.

During the days before the San Francisco fire, Mrs. Phillips was widely known as a writer of note, and as Ralph Waldo she contributed many poems, notably verses dedicated to children, to the country's leading publications. Since the fire, she had lived in comparative obscurity, wrote but little, and then under her own name. Some of her recent works, such as "Tribute to John Boyle O'Reilly," "The American Press" and "Alfred Tennyson," were widely published. Perhaps the best known of deceased's writings is her tribute to the dead poet laureate, Alfred Tennyson: "The pen he wielded with a master hand

No more shall feel the magic of his touch;
Poet-laureate he was by right divine,
And all the world acknowledged him as such.
No more this famous bard shall strike the lyre;
His soul has been attuned to higher things;
Now angels bend to catch his words of fire,
And seraphs listen while he sings."

Mrs. Phillips was a native of Massachusetts, and she is survived by her husband, Thomas K. Phillips, Mabel Elinor Phillips of San Francisco,—herself a writer of note who has frequently contributed both prose and poetry to The Grizzly Bear,—Randall P. Phillips of Los Angeles, and Blaine Phillips of New Mexico.

TO CALIFORNIA.

(Written by LEONA HODGES, Long Beach, an eighth grade schoolgirl.)

Here's to the state of states,
The State of California.
With her snow-crowned peaks,
And thousand miles of gently rolling shore,
With her groves of tiny halls of green and gold,
She's like a fairy clothed in gold,
Clothed in the riches of her earnings.
How she sits like a queen,
Guarding her gate, the Golden Gate,
Beside the beautiful sunset sea.
She has been the home of thousands,
Since the days of old, the days of gold, the days of forty-nine,
And she's the home for you and me.

GRAND TRUSTEE, N. S. G. W., PASSES

Joseph A. Belloli, Jr., Grand Trustee of the Native Sons of the Golden West, died at his San Jose home, September 7th, from the effects of an accident six weeks previous. He was a native of San Jose, aged just 37 years (having passed away on the anniversary of his birth), and had spent all his life in his native city, where he was well and favorably known in fraternal, business and political circles. He had served one term as City Clerk.

Surviving deceased are his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Belloli, Sr.; his widow, Mrs. Iva Van Doren-Belloli; four children, William, Joseph, Rosaline and Gene, and these brothers and sisters: Emile, Theodore and August Belloli and Mrs. George Donovan of Niles, Mrs. H. Koppitz of Oakland, Mrs. W. Steele of Oakland and Mrs. Captain J. Munfrey of San Francisco.

Funeral services were arranged for Admission Day, September 9th, at which the hosts of friends of "Joe" Belloli assembled at an undertaking chapel, among the number being the following Grand Officers, N.S.G.W.: Louis H. Mooser, Grand President; Thomas Monahan, Past Grand President; Fred H. Jung, Grand Secretary; John E. McDougald, Grand Treasurer; D. Q. Troy, Historiographer; William Farrell, Grand Inside Sentinel; W. S. Wright, Grand Outside Sentinel; William F. Toomey, James, F. Hoey, Arthur E. Curtis and Charles W. Heyer, Grand Trustees. From here, the funeral cortege proceeded to St. Patrick's Church, where services were conducted by Rev. John A. Lally.

Heading the solemn procession was the drum corps of San Jose Parlor, No. 22, N. S. G. W. with muffled drums. Then followed, in order, Grand Officers, N.S.G.W.; officers and members of San Jose Parlor, No. 22, N.S.G.W.; officers and members of Garden City Parlor, No. 82, N.S.G.W.; officers and members of Observatory Parlor, No. 177, N.S.G.W.; officers and members of Court Garden City, No. 7752, A.O.E.; officers and members of San Jose Aerie, No. 8, F.O.E.; officers and members of San Jose Lodge, No. 47, Knights of Pythias; and a long line of carriages containing the mourners and friends.

Following the church services, the Native Sons and hundreds of friends proceeded by electric cars to Oak Hill cemetery, where interment was made. Here the impressive commitment services of the Native Sons were conducted by the Grand Officers, Grand Trustee Wm. F. Toomey acting as Grand First Vice-president in the absence of John F. Davis who, by previous engagement, was compelled to be in Berkeley, and Grand Trustee Artaur Curtis acting as Grand Marshal in the absence of Joseph Clavo, who was unavoidably absent in Vallejo. Harry I. Mulerevy delivered the eulogy. The active pallbearers were Charles J. Ritts, J. W. Borchers, John Rossich, Walter L. Chrisman, Roy E. Walter and Frank Hogan. Joseph Ganong and Jesse Waterman acted as honorary pallbearers. The display of floral tributes was one of the most beautiful ever seen in San Jose. Flowers, in bouquets and set pieces, filled every part of the lower floor at the undertaking chapel and covered the grave and several adjoining plots at the cemetery.

Deceased, for several years past, had been a delegate to the Grand Parlor, where he took an active part in the Order's deliberations. At Los Angeles, last April, during the session of the Grand Parlor, he achieved an honor which he had long sought, that of Grand Trustee, to which he was elected by a large vote, attesting to his recognized worth to and interest in the organization.

"Joe" Belloli, like all humans, no doubt had his faults, but they were so few, and so greatly outweighed by his many good qualities, that they were practically unknown. Kind, considerate, and unselfish, he always found time to tender his services in any cause when called upon, and many times to the sacrifice of his own interests. He had lived his life well, was ripe for the harvest, and has left a record of love, devotion to duty, and faithfulness of service, that will ever adorn the memory-tablets of those who knew him.—C.M.H.

CALIFORNIA 50 YEARS AGO

"Let any man review the record. Until this fair, no horse foaled in California ever trotted a heat under 2:40. Until this fair, no four-year-old, bred in California or elsewhere, ever turned a mile on a California track inside of 2:40. Prior to this fair, scores of ten-mile races have been trotted by horses brought from other states, but the honor of being the first to trot ten miles inside of twenty-nine minutes was obtained by the game and beautiful 'Chestnut,' namesake of our Nation's Secretary of State, Seward. San Joaquin has good reason to be proud of the horse. Therefore, when we claim that the late event under the auspices of the Board of Agriculture has revolutionized running and trotting races in this State and placed California upon the time record, firm and sure in the foremost rank of the great horse-producing states of the Union, we only assert what must be evident to every intelligent observer.

"In other ways the fair was a success. The display of horses exhibited, for style and beauty without regard to speed, has never been excelled in quality. The awarding of premiums and the adjudication of racing prizes pleased everybody, for the best horse won in every instance. Then, good order was everywhere maintained. The broad basis of equity was the 'Backstone' of our managers and judges, who were men of that refined nature that regard a stain on their honor like a wound in the heart. The bright eyes and sweet faces of our State's loveliest daughters were everywhere, and their presence was a spur to true manhood and a rebuke to anything approaching rufianism."

SISTERS OF CHARITY

The Sisters of Charity remained at the old site for many years, until they purchased the property on Boyle Heights. A monument stone is placed on the northeast corner of the foundation, the same being marked, "Los Angeles Orphan Asylum and School, February 9, 1890." In 1891, they moved into their new, permanent home. The good Sisters of Charity have done worlds of good in care of orphan children, as well as provided schooling in all branches for their education.

The Sisters, also, in 1857, founded the first hospital in the Pueblo of Los Angeles, located on the west side of Eternity street, later changed to Buena Vista, and now known as North Broadway. The property was bought from Senora Maria Ygnacia Elisalde de Aguilar and her husband, Sr. Jose Maria Aguilar. Their only son was Christobal Aguilar, who was mayor of Los Angeles in 1866, 1867, 1868, 1869, 1871, and 1872.

In 1858 or '59 the Sisters of Charity purchased the property of Sr. Don Luis Arenas, bound on the north by Ramon Ybarra, on the east by Chavez Lane (now North Main street), on the south by Don Jose Sepulveda, and on the west by Ybarra's Lane (now San Fernando street). Here they enlarged the hospital. This was also known as the County Hospital. They remained here for a number of years, until, in September, 1884, they built an elegant hospital on Sunset boulevard and Beaudry avenue.

"Joe" Belloli, as he was familiarly known in Native Sons circles, was one of the most loyal and

THE ABOVE half-tone presents a photographic view of a vineyard of wine grapes in Sonoma County in the foothill section.

The property may not be yours; but it supports many families, and there are thousands of people in California dependent for a living on the existence of these vineyards.

You are asked by the Prohibitionists to destroy these vineyards, planted in many localities where nothing but vines would thrive and produce returns. You are asked to forget the destruction and efface them from the landscape.

Are you going to do it?

Are you going to vote for Prohibition in California?

In the name of Temperance, what argument is there which calls for such a punishment for this State and her people?

There are 85,000,000 wine-grape vines in our State. There are 85,000,000 more vines bearing table and raisin grapes. One-third of the tonnage of these table and raisin varieties goes to the wineries instead of being worthless and wasted.

Men and women speakers, knowing nothing of California, are coming into our State from National Prohibition Headquarters, telling Californians what to do to be well off.

Isn't California now the land of plenty in all these great States of our country?

A spirit of righteousness should prompt every man and woman who is not fanatical to repudiate the prohibition measure.
